30 APRIL 2008

First Sitting

The Speaker: I will ask Pastor Winston Rose to offer Prayers.

PRAYERS

Pastor Winston Rose: Let us pray: Blessed is the nation whose God is the Lord.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

THE THRONE SPEECH Delivered by His Excellency the Governor Mr. Stuart D. M. Jack, CVO

His Excellency the Governor: Madam Speaker, Members of the Legislative Assembly:

The past year has reminded us of the many challenges that can face us—whether Hurricane Dean, issues affecting the public service or, recently, question marks about the economy. But if we look around at other countries which struggle with even greater challenges, we realise that these Islands remain blessed.

We must not, however, be complacent as we look forward to the year ahead. In view of international economic developments, in particular the state of the US economy and high commodity prices, Government must be especially prudent in its budgetary plans. Political and social developments in other countries that can impact the Cayman Islands must also be monitored carefully, and we must not neglect efforts to build our relationships with the United Kingdom and with our neighbours, nor with emerging powerful economies further afield.

Nor must we be complacent about developments in our own country. The Cayman Islands have many strengths, but we must work to maintain and indeed reinforce them. In some cases, that means we must be prepared to adapt to change. I would highlight a few key areas.

Law and order are fundamental to our well-being. Despite recent problems affecting the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service, I am determined that we will police these Islands effectively and with integrity. I am keen to work with the Government and the Judiciary across the criminal justice agenda, particularly on better ways of tackling the problems of youth at risk, of preventing re-offending, and of rehabilitating offenders through the courts, the prisons and the parole system.

Another foundation of this country is good governance. Many positive changes are already in hand, such as Freedom of Information, public meetings of the Public Accounts Committee, and an Anti-Corruption Bill shortly to come before you. I will soon be taking forward other proposals in the wake of the recent Commission of Enquiry. And the efforts to improve the skills and customer service ethos of the civil service will continue. The ongoing Constitutional review process is also very much about good governance and enshrining our well-established respect for human rights.

We must not take for granted either our economy or our beautiful environment, nor see them as somehow rivals for our attention.

To ensure that the pillars of our economy continue to flourish, a good dialogue between government and industry is vital, notably in the area of financial services where we must respond to both market developments and international regulatory demands. But we must not forget the consumer, the ordinary members of our community, who are concerned about high prices and want to see the benefits of competition and better job opportunities.

We must do more to protect our natural heritage, our mangroves, forests, plants and wildlife, while also as far as possible taking care over property rights which are so valued by many Caymanians. Sometimes that will require difficult decisions and imaginative solutions.

We need to think longer term about the future of these Islands. The Government is already planning for the future in many areas—in education, infrastructure, social policies. One area that needs more attention, and now, is climate change—both to reduce our emissions (as I am trying to do at Government House) and to devise adaptation strategies. In part related to that are our continuous efforts to learn from experience to improve these Islands' resilience to disasters. With this in mind we will be carrying out more exercises, including in the Sister Islands.

I am also hopeful that we will soon launch an important project to put together what is called sustainable development strategy or, put more simply, a joined-up effort across Government and the community to chart the future of these Islands so as to maintain our prosperity, our social fabric and values, and our environment for future generations.

And, as we also enter the month of the child, we must not neglect today the needs of our children and youth. Good work is in hand, particularly on education, a new Children's Law, the Youth Assembly, and the treatment of juveniles in trouble. But more needs to be done in other areas affecting our youth. And that is a challenge not just for Government or this Legislature but, above all, for the community as a whole and parents in particular.

I now turn to the plans of various Departments, Portfolios and Ministries.

I. The Audit Office

Primary objectives for the Cayman Islands Audit Office are to: conduct three new value-for-money audits. These will centre on construction projects; Customs' waivers and duties; and building issues faced in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman; and to complete work on five ongoing projects, which deal with project management within government and government administration.

II. The Cabinet Office

In support of its strategic objectives, Cabinet Office priorities for 08/09 include: the coordination of the National Poverty Reduction Strategy and Action Plan, which will follow from the National Assessment of Living Conditions; and the establishment of a national identification system.

By October 2008 the Fol Unit will complete necessary preparations to ensure successful implementation of the Freedom of Information Law in January 2009.

Another element in that success will be Computer Services Department's Fol tracking system, and enhancement of the gov.ky website.

The Protocol Office will identify and adopt regional best practices to augment protocol procedures in the Cayman Islands.

And, once the referendum is held, the Constitutional Modernisation Secretariat will prepare for negotiations with the UK, and provide technical support for the negotiating team.

III. The Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs

For the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, 2008/09 objectives are clear-cut. They are to enhance public safety and security through improved facilities and equipment; innovative uses of resources; and improved monitoring of the delivery of key services. These objectives will be facilitated by: completing the Bodden Town Emergency Response Centre; constructing a new prison, reducing costs by using inmates' skills; and introducing the administrative granting of certain categories of work permits.

The Royal Cayman Islands Police Service remains firmly committed to ensuring the security of the Cayman Islands. The service's Marine Unit will be greatly strengthened by the completion of secure berthing facilities and the acquisition of additional patrol and interception units, both of which are now underway.

Hazard Management Cayman Islands will complete the design of the National Emergency Operations Centre, to be sited on an elevated parcel of land in George Town.

IV. The Portfolio of the Civil Service

During fiscal year 2008/09, the Portfolio of the Civil Service will promote and facilitate management and HR best practice, centered on key initiatives such as succession planning, performance management, and preparations to introduce performance-related pay. Two staffing-related initiatives are also central to the portfolio's objectives: The HR Audit Programme will expand to target compliance across a broader range of areas, and to introduce theme investigations across all civil service entities, as well as support for self-evaluation.

The Portfolio will also introduce and maintain a registry of retired civil servants, as a resource for short-term employment opportunities within government.

The Civil Service College will expand with the spearheading of a regional initiative to develop the college as a shared resource among the Overseas Territories.

V. The Portfolio of Legal Affairs

The Portfolio of Legal Affairs will work with other agencies on a comprehensive, coordinated criminal justice strategy. This strategy will include alternative sentencing, post-incarceration initiatives, and prison reforms, as well as early intervention programmes for at-risk youth.

The Attorney General's Chambers will also present amendments to laws relating to children, so that they will be better protected in the area of child pornography and in relation to witness protection.

VI. The Portfolio of Finance & Economics

In line with the objectives for the Portfolio of Finance & Economics, the Treasury Department will: assist ministries and portfolios with completing annual reports for the 05-06, 06-07, and 07-08 financial years; and launch a website on which government tenders can be advertised and documents downloaded.

The priorities of the Economics and Statistics Office will be to: develop a new consumer price index basket; develop the Cayman Islands' first system of national accounts; and prepare for the 2010 Census.

Due to economic and environmental factors, the Customs Department will focus on: risk-based enforcement activities, especially pertaining to containerised cargo; and upgrading the automated declaration processing system.

Finally, the General Registry will implement its electronic filing and storage system.

VII. The Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing

Objectives for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing include strategies and programmes to more effectively plan Cayman's growth, while also improving public safety. Key aspects include: the release of the 2008 Development Plan, a long-range comprehensive document that will guide land use and development on Grand Cayman; the Planning Department's implementation of the Builders Bill, which is designed to protect homeowners and construction personnel by regulating the construction industry; and, in the Sister Islands, expansion plans for the District Administration Building, and a new building for the Mosquito Research and Control Unit.

MRCU will also gain a custom-built hangar on Grand Cayman. Further, given regional and worldwide increases in the incidence of mosquito-transmitted diseases, MRCU will launch an expanded disease prevention programme.

Lastly, several large capital projects will be directed by the ministry, including the new government office building, which is the country's largest civic project to date; and an improved courts building.

VIII. The Ministry of Health and Human Services

The Ministry of Health and Human Services has a twofold objective: to analyse and explain the status of human wellbeing in Cayman and, subsequently, to restructure its responses to the challenges that are revealed. In support of human wellbeing, the Ministry intends to strengthen the connections between social and economic development, in line with its vision of Optimal Wellbeing for All.

The following initiatives will therefore be taken, for the genuinely vulnerable. The drafting of a new Mental Health Law and the start of purpose-built residential facilities for persons with mental health needs. Provision of a purpose-built youth therapeutic facility for children in trouble. And the expansion of homes and programmes for the elderly.

The ministry will also oversee a new governance model for the Health Services Authority, and restructure Public Health as a full-fledged department. Correcting shortcomings in the Health Insurance Law will be another primary goal.

The Department of Children and Family Services will be restructured as well, creating a dedicated Department of Children's Services. In addition, a Community Empowerment and Development Agency will be created to foster community-based initiatives.

An officer of gender affairs will also be appointed in 08/09 to review and update the draft National Gender Policy, and to spearhead the establishment of an Office of Gender Affairs.

Standards of professional practice will be enhanced by making the Health Insurance Commission and the Health Practice Commission a single health services regulatory agency. An updated Pharmacy Law will also be drafted.

IX. The Ministry of Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture

In the next fiscal year, the Ministry of Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture will focus on expanding secondary education, and on professional development for educators. Both are in preparation for the transition to three new secondary campuses on Grand Cayman in September 2010. In Cayman Brac, land will be acquired for a new secondary school. Also: educational services for persons with disabilities—from early years to adulthood—will be aligned, with more programmes and services offered; and the Education Law, and employment legislation, will be updated.

X. The Ministry of Communications, Works and Infrastructure

Objectives for the Ministry of Communications, Works and Infrastructure will centre upon infrastructure support. This will entail: the National Roads Authority's completion of major roads, including the east-west arterial, and the Esterley Tibbetts and Queen's highways; and Water Authority improvements to the water-supply infrastructure. This will include pipeline-extension work in eastern districts, where a reverse-osmosis plant and a pumping station are scheduled.

Piped-water supplies will also start in the Brac. In addition, the Department of Environmental Health will begin its new recycling efforts which will reduce the amount of waste in our landfills.

Both the NRA and the Department of Vehicle and Driver's Licensing will be relocated out of the central business district, and Radio Cayman will replace analog instruments with digital equipment.

The Ministry also will revise the Traffic and National Roads Authority laws; as well as sections of the cinematograph; postal; public health; water (production and supply); and the information and communications technology laws.

XI. The Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Investment and Commerce

The Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Investment and Commerce will diversify our tourism product, particularly by expanding the Go East policy. An additional focus will be the strengthening of Cayman's environmental protection efforts. Accordingly: the Go East policy will be fully realised, with the tabling of the policy framework; establishment of an integrated council; and the creation of specially designed facilities within the eastern districts, beginning in Bodden Town.

Furthermore, at the Department of Environment, staff will implement a project titled Enhancing Capacity for Adaptation to Climate Change. In consultation with other agencies, it also will develop a national climate-change adaptation strategy.

The Go East policy and the new National Tourism Management Plan will be presented in the House shortly. In addition, the ministry will present key legislation for environmental conservation, public transport, and liquor licensing.

Conclusion

Madam Speaker, Members of the Legislative Assembly, in conclusion I would like to recognise firstly the many civil servants who have helped to devise these plans and who will be tasked to implement them, and secondly the members of the community who play a vital role on statutory boards and consultative groups.

I pray that God will guide your work in the Legislative Assembly, and the work of everyone involved in the government of these Islands; and that He will continue to watch over and protect us.

BUDGET ADDRESS

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, on behalf of the Government of the Cayman Islands, I rise to present the Budget for the 2008/9 financial year that encompasses the 12-month period from 1 July 2008 to 30 June 2009. This year is referred to throughout this Address as 2008/9.

The 2008/9 Budget is the fifth budget being presented under the accrual system of accounting and in accordance with the Public Management and Finance Law (2005 Revision), (the "PMFL"). I am pleased to report that, as in the four previous Budgets under this system, the 2008/9 Budget is fully compliant with all the principles of responsible financial management as set out in the PMFL.

It features the milestone accomplishment of a 90-day executive expenditure cash reserve at the end of the 2008/9 financial year. This means that at 30 June 2009, the Government is expected to have a level of cash that will be sufficient to pay for a quarter of a year of Government's expenditure and, it ("it" being the Government) is legally required to maintain such a minimum level of cash at the end of each financial year subsequent to 2008/9.

Madam Speaker, these accomplishments are significant given the considerable global economic challenges that exist currently and which will undoubtedly continue to impact the Cayman Islands. The accomplishments were only possible by making some difficult decisions in the preparation of the 2008/9 Budget. It is with this difficult economic setting in mind that I have entitled my address, "Maintaining Fiscal Prudence in Challenging Economic Times".

The Global Economic Outlook

The world is undergoing tremendous economic change and experiencing a high degree of economic uncertainty. Developed countries are finding it difficult to maintain positive economic growth amid significant changes in the world's financial markets, the seemingly ever increasing price of oil, rising commodity prices, increasing food prices and ever increasing competition from developing economies.

In its April 2008 World Economic Outlook, the International Monetary Fund emphasized that significant changes in the global economic outlook have occurred since the second half of 2007. Lower growth rates in 2008 and 2009 are now forecasted for the United States of America (the "US"), resulting mainly from its profound housing market crisis.

Difficulties in financial markets are not restricted to the US; they have spread to other advanced economies and have affected global growth prospects. At the same time, a general increase in commodity prices is expected to push inflationary pressures worldwide.

The US real Gross Domestic Product (GDP) growth forecast for the 2008 calendar year has been downscaled to 0.5% from 1.9% as of September 2007. Notwithstanding the reduction in rates by the US Federal Reserve Board and the implementation of the US Federal Government's economic stimulus package, a quick recovery is not expected. Thus, US real GDP growth in calendar year 2009 is forecast to remain at a low rate of 0.6%. Due to the large share of the US and other advanced countries in the world's economy, the forecasted growth of global output for 2008 has been reduced to 3.7% compared to 5.2% as of September 2007; and for 2009, at 3.8% compared to 4.8% as of September 2007.

Sharp increases in commodity prices including those of oil and grain are expected to cause increases in consumer price indices globally and will undoubtedly impact the Cayman Islands. The inflation rates for the US and other advanced economies are forecasted at 3.0% and 2.6%, respectively, in 2008, and at 2.0% in 2009.

The Cayman Islands' Economic Forecasts

In view of the changes in the economic prospects for the world's major economies which are key markets for the Cayman Islands, the forecasts of real GDP growth for the Cayman Islands have been lowered to 1.7% for the 2008 calendar year and 1.4% in 2009. It may be noted that while these growth rates are lower when compared to those in 2005, 2006 and 2007, they are slightly higher when compared to the economic performance between 2000 and 2003 when GDP growth occurred at an estimated average rate of 1.3%.

The key assumptions for the forecasts in 2008 and 2009 are that the financial services sector will remain resilient and that the high-end stay over tourism market will remain relatively buoyant. Given the GDP growth expectations, unemployment<sup>1</sup> rates in the Cayman Islands are forecast at 4.1% in 2008 and 4.5% in 2009.

For the Cayman Islands, the forecast inflation rates are 3.1% in 2008, and 3.0% in 2009. The actual inflation rate in 2007 was 3.2%.

Fundamentals of the Cayman Islands' Economy

Madam Speaker, the fundamentals of the Cayman Islands economy remain strong. The Cayman Islands has maintained its "Aa3" credit rating from Moody's Investors Service. This standard provides potential investors in the Cayman Islands with the confidence that our economy is sound and is being managed prudently.

The Financial Services Sector—Performance and Outlook

The Cayman Islands continues to be recognised as one of the world's leading offshore financial centres. Our financial services industry experienced steady growth over the past year and this trend is expected to continue into the next financial year.

Evidence of the strength of this industry can be found in a number of areas. For the 12-month period ended 31 March 2008 the General Registry recorded a 5% growth in total company registrations.

Exempt companies grew by 9%. This is an important benchmark because exempt companies represent approximately 80% of the revenue generated by the General Registry.

The Cayman Islands Monetary Authority recorded a 14.7% increase in the number of registered mutual funds for the year ended 31st March 2008. This sector continues to perform well and all indications are that growth will carry on into the coming financial year.

The Cayman Islands remain a choice jurisdiction with over 40 of the world's top 50 banks licensed here.

The Cayman Islands Stock Exchange recorded a 43% increase in its total listings for the 2007 calendar year which includes a 19% increase in fund listings and more than doubled the number of debt securities listed. Market capitalisation increased 51% from US$111.5 billion to US$168 billion.

The Tourism Industry—Performance and Outlook

Madam Speaker, over the past three years, the tourism industry has been stable and has made a significant contribution to the economic development of the Cayman Islands. Since 2005, when the recovery from Hurricane Ivan began, tourist air arrivals have significantly grown year over year. In 2006, air arrivals grew by 59.3%; in 2007 by a further 9.1% and for the first quarter of 2008 we have had a 9% increase in air arrivals when compared to this period last year.

This recovery can be attributed to a joint public and private sector initiative to drive economic recovery and product improvement. The Government has continued to build effective distribution channels, protected or grown all important airlifts to the destination, and led a strategic shift in the target market which has better positioned the destination to survive the ups and downs of the world economy.

The Government has recently led a strategic plan to help the entire industry prepare for, and mitigate, the expected negative impacts of the global economic downturn. While a softening of the recent growth trends are expected later this year, we remain optimistic that given investments in marketing coupled with the strong British Pound and Euro, the Cayman Islands will rebound with a strong winter 2009.

While the United States remains by far the largest market for the Cayman Islands representing some 80% of all visitor arrivals, both Canada and Europe are demonstrating impressive growth with each posting gains in excess of 16% at year-end 2007. In the first quarter of 2008, these secondary markets continue to perform well, with Canada showing an increase of over 23% and Europe showing an increase of 10%, compared to this period last year.

The Impact of the Global Economy on the Cayman Islands

Madam Speaker, the effect of the global economic downturn on the Cayman Islands, is not all doom and gloom. In recent months, the interest rates charged by local banks for loans and mortgages have fallen dramatically following reductions in the US prime lending rate, giving some real relief on personal and business cash flows.

I wish to remind everyone that the Government already has in place certain tariffs that seek to minimise the extent of any increase in the cost of living. Currently, import duties are not charged on staple food products such as chicken, fish, rice, beans, flour, bread, cereals, milk, cream, butter, cheese, sugar and salt—in addition to a number of other food products which are charged reduced import duties of 10% to 15%.

The decision to keep these food products at reduced or duty-free rates is important: it endeavours to ensure that all members of our society continue to have access, at affordable-as-possible prices, to that most basic necessity, food.

In December 2007, Government announced that it had entered into an agreement with Caribbean Utilities Company, to provide an import duty rebate on the fuel the Company consumes in generating electricity: the Company, in turn, has and will continue to pass this rebate on to residential consumers—resulting in reduced electricity bills. The annual financial impact of this deliberate decision of Government to alleviate a portion of the high cost of electricity to residential consumers is approximately $6 million. In 2008/9, Government's forecast revenue from import duties on diesel has therefore been amended to take account of this decision.

The Appropriations

Madam Speaker, I will now turn to the specific Appropriations listed in the Bill that is now before this honourable House. Details of these Appropriations are shown in the Annual Plan and Estimates (AP&E) Document which accompanies the Appropriation Bill.

This Bill provides for appropriations across eight different categories in respect of the planned activities of the 13 Ministries, Portfolios and other Government entities. These appropriations will allow the Government to incur expenditures, make investments and undertake borrowings during the 2008/9 year to achieve its 13 Broad Outcome Goals.

Output Groups

Output Group Appropriations total $419.6 million, of which some $87.2 million is for outputs to be delivered by Statutory Authorities and Government Companies and $13.9 million is for outputs to be delivered by Non-Governmental Organisations.

Transfer Payments

Appropriations for Transfer Payments total $22.4 million and will allow for the continuance of important financial assistance to those most needy in our society.

Other Executive Expenses

Other Executive Expenses total $28.5 million and will be used to fund items such as: payments to the Public Service Pensions Board to reduce the Government's Past Service Liability in respect of the Civil Service pensions scheme; personal emoluments to the Executive branch of Government; and contributions to various international organisations including CARICOM, the Caribbean Development Bank and United Nations' agencies.

Equity Investments

Equity Investments into Ministries, Portfolios, Statutory Authorities and Government Companies total $118.1 million and will be used to fund the following major items:

- Ministry of Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture—$68 million—for the construction of three new high schools on Grand Cayman, development of a new George Town Primary School, repairs and upgrades to existing schools, completion of the George Town Public Library, upgraded information technology equipment and software and the purchase of land for a new Cayman Brac High School;
- Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs—$15 million—for the development of a Bodden Town Emergency Response Facility, development of a marine base and purchase of vessels and equipment for the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service, prison building renovations, purchase of vehicles and equipment for the Fire Service, development of a National Emergency Operations Centre;
- Ministry of Communications, Works and Infrastructure—$6.8 million—for the construction of a new vehicle licensing headquarters, purchase of vehicles and heavy equipment, upgrades to the Airport Post Office, equipment and materials for a recycling programme;
- Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing—$3 million—for the development of a new aircraft hangar for MRCU and the purchase of vehicles, equipment and other assets for the Ministry;
- Health Services Authority—$8.2 million—for the purchase of new medical equipment and to cover the Authority's expected Operating Losses;
- Cayman Turtle Farm (1983) Limited—$8.1 million—for bond repayments and expected Operating Losses;

- Tourism Attractions Board—$1.9 million—for the repayment of its Caribbean Development Bank loan;
- Cayman Islands National Insurance Company—$1.5 million—to maintain the company's compliance with the minimum capitalisation requirements of its insurance licence.

Executive Assets

Executive Asset Appropriations total $46.3 million and will be used to fund the following:

- construction of the new Government Administration Building—$19.5 million;
- continued improvements to the Islands' road network—$8.8 million;
- construction of upgraded sports facilities on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac—$2.6 million;
- construction of new or upgraded Senior Citizen Homes in North Side and East End—$2 million;
- construction of a new Summary Courts Building—$2 million;
- development of a new Bodden Town Civic Centre—$1.9 million;
- improvements to landfills on all three Islands—$1.2 million;
- development of a Juvenile Secure Remand Facility—$1 million;
- construction of a dedicated mental health facility—$1 million;
- development of a new Farmers' Market—$0.85 million; and
- acquisition of additional land for the Barkers National Park—$0.8 million.

Madam Speaker, the significant level of capital expenditures that will occur as a result of the Equity Investments and Executive Assets, will provide a tremendous boost to our local economy.

Loans Made

Appropriations for Loans to be made by the Government total $1.3 million. This is a relatively small amount and represents Loans Made to the following categories of persons: persons in need of urgent overseas medical care; Government employees in respect of loans to acquire property and loans to farmers.

Borrowings

Appropriations for Borrowings total $154 million and will be used to fund the Government's planned capital investment programme. Madam

Speaker, it is very important that I point out that the level of borrowing proposed for 2008/9 is exactly the same as that set out in the Strategic Policy Statement (SPS) for 2008/9. The SPS provided the foundation for the detailed 2008/9 Budget that was tabled earlier and it (SPS) was approved by the Legislative Assembly on 30 November 2007. Hence, the Legislative Assembly has approved the level of borrowing set out in the 2008/9 Budget.

Recently, there has been much public commentary on the level of borrowing and debt incurred by Central Government. Whilst it is legitimate for such discussion to occur, it must be done in a factual manner. Such commentary frequently states that Central Government's borrowing in the course of a year and/or its debt is $700 million.

Note 27, on page 311 in the Annual Plan and Estimates document for 2008/9 clearly indicates that the Central Government's debt level expected at 30 June 2009—assuming that the full current year's proposed borrowing of $154 million is drawn-down—is $412.7 million. Commentary that Central Government's debt and/or its borrowing in the course of a year is $700 million, is therefore inaccurate.

Nonetheless, it is proper that members of the public focus on Central Government and the wider public sector debt. The Government, equally, keeps a focus on borrowing and debt levels.

Financing Expenses

The Appropriations for Financing Expenses total $13.4 million and represent the interest expense on the full balance of Government borrowings.

Government's Forecast Financial Statements

Madam Speaker, I will now turn to the forecast financial statements which underpin the 2008/9 Budget. These statements are also shown in the AP&E document which accompanies the Appropriation Bill.

The Operating Results

The Net Operating Surplus is the key measure of the Government's operating performance. In order to comply with the PMFL, Government is required to achieve a surplus.

The 2008/9 Budget forecasts a Net Operating Surplus of $13.5 million. This surplus is an important component of the Government's overall fiscal strategy: operating surpluses assist the country in achieving cash balance levels that comply with the PMFL and, such surpluses also help to fund capital expenditures.

The fact that the Government is forecasting a Net Operating Surplus in the face of global economic difficulties is not an accident nor was it achieved easily. Over the past few weeks Ministries and Portfolios were required to re-examine their 2008/9 Budgets in order to identify expenses which could be eliminated without creating disruption to the provision of services to the public. Each year, Ministries and Portfolios—which can be collectively described as agencies—are given expenditure allocations that they are expected to abide by as closely as possible. This is done in the SPS that is formulated in respect of each financial year. The SPS is presented to the Legislative Assembly by 1 December each year—in respect of Government's financial year that will start on 1 July in the following calendar year.

In many instances, the 2008/9 expenditure re-examination exercise resulted in agencies reducing their Budgets below their SPS allocations.

Madam Speaker, I must congratulate Honourable Ministers and Members of Cabinet along with their Chief Officers and their finance teams for undertaking this important task of intense budget scrutiny and also for re-prioritising their plans for the year ahead in order for the Government to have a forecast operating surplus for 2008/9.

Revenue Projections for 2008/9

There will not be any new revenue measures introduced in the 2008/9 financial year. This honours an earlier commitment given to the country by the Government and it reflects a deliberate action of the Government not to increase the financial obligations of businesses and individuals during 2008/9.

In the 2008/9 financial year, the Government is forecast to earn approximately $528 million in operating revenue. This is approximately $11 million less than was forecast in the 2008/9 SPS. This downward revenue projection is the direct result of the current economic environment we find ourselves operating in, and it also reflects lower economic growth forecasts. The revenue forecasts represent a slight gain of $4.9 million over the estimated revenues for the current 2007/8 financial year.

Over the past four financial years the Government of the Cayman Islands has experienced significant growth in its revenues and while overall net growth in revenues is forecast for the 2008/9 financial year, this growth is not expected to be as strong as in previous years.

The reduction in the forecasts of Other Import Duties and Charges primarily reflects the view that the decline in the outlook of the US economy would impact the Cayman Islands, resulting in lower imports. This is supported by the Economics and Statistics Office's import statistics, which suggest that the value of total imports in 2007 is significantly lower than in 2006.

The lowering of the forecasts for Cruise Ship Departure Taxes and the Environmental Protection Fund Fee is directly linked to lower forecasts for cruise arrivals in 2007/8 and 2008/9.

While there will not be any new revenue measures in 2008/9, Government's revenue-collecting agencies will be stepping up their efforts to collect all revenue which is due to Government. In this regard, all businesses and individuals are asked to be prompt with their payments to Government. Delayed payments negatively impact cash flow and can lead to higher expenses for debt collection.

Forecast Operating Expenses

The 2008/9 Operating Expenses are forecast to be $501.3 million. This amount represents some $28.2 million more than was forecast in the SPS and a $12 million increase over the expected 2007/8 outturn.

On the surface, these increased operating expenses may seem to present cause for concern, however, one has to consider the economic environment in which we operate and the fact that these higher-than-expected operating costs are being driven by a number of external factors which are impacting the cost of doing business worldwide such as the rising cost of healthcare, fuel, electricity, and general upward inflationary pressures on most areas of expenditure.

The costs associated with the provision of safe, high quality healthcare have continued to increase in the Cayman Islands; this is consistent with global trends.

The Government, through the Cayman Islands National Insurance Company (CINICO) provides health insurance to civil servants and their dependants; civil service pensioners; employees of some statutory authorities and Government companies; as well as the elderly, veterans and seamen, health-impaired and low income members of our community.

CINICO has seen a significant increase in the cost of providing overseas medical care. In addition, there has been an increase in fees being charged by the Health Services Authority, the primary health care provider for persons insured by CINICO. These facts have resulted in CINICO increasing the premiums it charges Government for civil servants and pensioners by 44% and 32% respectively, resulting in a net increase of $14 million in expense to the Government for the 2008/9 financial year.

This $14 million increase accounts for approximately 50% of the increase in operating expenses between the level in the SPS and the 2008/9 Budget.

Another area of Operating Expense which has seen a significant increase since the SPS forecasts are the net operating losses of the Statutory Authorities and Government Companies, commonly referred to as SAGCs. When the 2008/9 SPS was approved by the Legislative Assembly in November 2007, these agencies were collectively forecast to record an Operating Deficit of $1.6 million in the 2008/9 financial year. However, for the 2008/9 Budget this forecast deficit has been increased by approximately $10 million to $11.6 million.

This significantly-worsened operating position in the SAGC sector is being driven by a combination of the global economic factors described earlier as well as particular challenges facing some agencies.

The most notable loss-making SAGCs are: the Health Services Authority with a projected net loss of $7.6 million; Cayman Turtle Farm (1983) Limited with a projected net loss of $6.9 million and Cayman Airways Limited with a projected net loss of $2.7 million. The Government takes this matter very seriously and is working closely with all loss-making SAGCs to implement changes in these organisations which will improve their operating position.

The Forecast Cash Flow Statement

Madam Speaker, the forecast Cash Flow Statement indicates that $145 million will be used for the purchase or development of new assets and a further $21.6 million will be used to fund Equity Investments into SAGCs.

The Cash Flow Statement indicates that net cash outflows for investing activities are expected to be $165.4 million for the 2008/9 financial year. This represents a $33.9 million reduction over the SPS forecasts and reflects Government's commitment to keep its capital investment programme to levels that will enable compliance with the PMFL.

Cash Reserves at 30 June 2009 are expected to be $118.5 million. This is a $7 million increase over the forecasted 30 June 2008 expected cash balance of $111.5 million. The expected Cash Reserves level of $118.5 million at 30 June 2009 complies with the minimum 90-day expenditure coverage required for the PMFL for the 2008/9 financial year.

Compliance with the PMFL

Madam Speaker, the PMFL is very specific in terms of how it defines the fiscal guidelines within which the Government must operate its financial affairs.

The Principles of Responsible Financial Management are set out in section 14 of the PMFL and I will now explain how this 2008/9 Budget complies with these Principles.

The first principle relates to the operating results of the Government and requires that Core Government's Revenue less Core Government Expenses be positive. This has been fully satisfied with a forecast operating surplus of $13.5 million.

The second principle requires that Government maintains a positive Net Worth. Full compliance has been met as the Government's Net Worth is forecast to be $532.6 million at 30 June 2009.

The third principle relates to the maximum allowable Debt Service costs and requires that these costs be no more than 10% of Core Government Revenue. This ratio is ultra prudent, and holds the Government to a very strict limit. It is the international norm for this type of ratio to be calculated using only the principal repayments; however, the PMFL goes a step further by including interest payments in the calculation, making the ratio more onerous to comply with. For 2008/9, the Government is forecasting its Debt Service Ratio to be 7.9%—which is below the 10% limit.

The fourth principle also relates to borrowing but it sets the limit for the total amount of Net Debt that can be carried by the Government to be no more than 80% of Core Government Revenue.

The Net Debt is calculated as being the outstanding balance of Core Government Debt plus the outstanding balance of self-financing loans, plus the weighted outstanding balance of SAGCs' debt guaranteed by the Government, less Core Government liquid assets.

For 2008/9 the Government is forecasting its Net Debt Ratio to be 73% of Core Government Revenue—which is well below the maximum of 80%.

The fifth principle requires that Government maintains cash reserves that are no less than 90 days of estimated executive expenses at 30 June 2009. The 2008/9 Budget complies with this requirement because it has cash reserves forecast at 91 days.

Conclusion

Madam Speaker, I will depart quickly from the written text to express my and the Government's sincere thanks to the Budget and Management Unit for compiling the 2008/9 Budget. Madam Speaker, you and honourable Members of the House may know, but members of the general public may not know, that the process of compiling Government's annual budget often requires civil servants working throughout the night and for that we are truly grateful.

The preparation of the 2008/9 Budget has been challenging but it has also been rewarding. In the face of global economic uncertainty the Government has had to make changes to planned budgetary interventions for the 2008/9 financial year.

It has been rewarding because despite global economic difficulties, the Government has produced a Budget which is grounded in sound fiscal management and is in full compliance with the Public Management and Finance Law. The 2008/9 Budget is a budget that will enable the Government to achieve its stated national priorities.

The 2008/9 Budget will allow for the construction of some key physical infrastructure that will, among other things, improve the overall efficiency of the delivery of Government services; significantly improve the educational system for our children; foster economic development and growth; and create a firm footing for the next generation of Caymanians to create the next chapter of the Cayman success story.

Madam Speaker, the requests made in the 2008/9 Budget are encompassed within the Bill that is now before the Legislative Assembly.

I, therefore, commend The Appropriation (July 2008 to June 2009) Bill, 2008 to this honourable Legislative Assembly and seek Members' support.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MEMBERS AND MINISTERS/MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

POLICY STATEMENT: “Keeping the Faith— Securing the future”

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Book of Ecclesiastes powerfully reminds us of an eternal truth. It is that the human experience is characterized and shaped by exposure to a sequence of seasons: With linguistic elegance and simplicity, Chapter 3 of Ecclesiastes tells us that there is a time and a season for everything under the sun. A time to sow and a time to reap; A time for peace and a time for war; A time when there is little and a time when there is plenty.

Some seasons bring rich blessings; others, however, bring untold misery. We can turn on our television set on any given day and switch to BBC World, CNN or any other major news channels. We will see vivid images of the misery people in certain parts of the world are experiencing. In many instances, theirs is simply a struggle for the basic necessities of life—clothes to wear, food to eat, a decent house to live in. Theirs is a constant struggle against considerable odds to make ends meet.

Madam Speaker, in a world where so many things seem to be going wrong, we are indeed fortunate here in the Cayman Islands. Despite the challenges, a lot of things are going right for us. So much so that we have become one of the most sought-after places internationally to live, work, and enjoy a good quality of life. Yes, we are not without our problems but, generally speaking, we have been richly blessed as a nation. Yet, sometimes when I listen to public debate, I get the impression some of us are taking our good fortune for granted. It seems that all certain persons can see is gloom and doom.

Madam Speaker, some of these persons may be hearing my voice right now. In response, they very well may be asking: ‘Why is he comparing the Cayman Islands with other countries? What is the relevance? What do these other countries have to do with us?’ The answer is, a lot. A whole lot! Madam Speaker, it would be a great mistake if we continue to believe that we live in isolation from the rest of the world. You see, the world has fundamentally changed.

The world of the first decade of the 21st Century is characterized by growing interdependence among nations. It is a situation where what happens in some distant land can easily affect developments here without our even being aware of it. We are a connected, rather than a disconnected world. It is a reality of the world today. A world shaped by the phenomenon known as globalization.

Madam Speaker, I wish to urge our people to be more mindful of the impact which globalization is having on our lives. Practically every job, every investment decision, prices we pay in the supermarket or at the gas pump, the relevance of our education system, our competitiveness as a place to do business . . . they are all influenced in some way by globalization. Through trade, investment and communication, the Cayman Islands are fully integrated into the global economy.

Madam Speaker, no longer are we the Islands that time forgot. It behooves Caymanians, therefore, to start seeing their experience, not in isolation from, but more in relation to the rest of the world. If we do so, it will be more readily apparent how fortunate we are and how much the Good Lord has blessed us. As that well-known missionary hymn urges us—and I will quote, Madam Speaker, not sing: [Members’ laughter]

“Count your blessings name them one by one;
Count your blessings see what God has done;
Count your blessings name them one by one;
And it will [truly] surprise you what the Lord has done.”

Madam Speaker, as I deliver this policy statement on the 2008-09 Budget, I am particularly mindful of the many blessings which this PPM Government has received. Indeed, our very first blessing was the decision of Caymanians to make the PPM their choice for change and to entrust the destiny of this country into our hands.

The PPM's assumption of office following the general election of 2005 ushered in a new era, a new approach to governance through what is known as “government in the sunshine.” That is, government committed to and guided by the principles of honesty, openness, transparency and accountability. In our words and actions, this PPM Government has given full expression to these core principles. We have restored trust in government, re-introduced fiscal discipline, eliminated corruption in government and upheld the rule of law.

We hold ourselves accountable to the people of this country and have faced the press on a weekly basis almost from the date we assumed office. We have introduced Freedom of Information legislation which, when it comes into force at the start of next year, will introduce even greater levels of accessibility to government information and thus increase transparency and accountability in government generally.

We have kept the faith. We have made a difference. The evidence is clearly there. We have laid a strong foundation and are on course to securing the future. Our critics are free to voice their opinions. But what really matters is the fact that our track record can stand up to any objective scrutiny. When we took office, it is fair to say that the Cayman Islands were in crisis. Devastation from Hurricane Ivan was widespread and very much in evidence across the land. Crime had become a serious problem. There were serious concerns about governance and allegations of corrupt practices in government.

It seems, based on how they speak today, that the other side has conveniently forgotten these things. The Government of the day, which comprised of members on the other side, had no solutions. It proved unable to rise to the challenge of recovery and reconstruction. Caymanians therefore weighed them in the balance and found them wanting. Fed up, frustrated and deeply worried, Caymanians turned to the PPM for leadership; for a restoration of hope; for a new beginning.

While it is practically impossible to please everyone, we have delivered in key areas. Never mind what the critics on the other side—and perhaps even a certain talk show—may say. They operate on the premise that Caymanians have short memories. And they seek, from this self-serving perspective, to manipulate the thinking and cloud the judgment of Caymanians to promote their own narrow agenda. As I shall demonstrate by way of example, this PPM Government's track record speaks for itself.

Madam Speaker, look at the amazing transformation in education—from pre-school right through to university. We are significantly expanding opportunities for Caymanians to grow, develop and achieve their potential. Additionally, we have reformed our curriculum to ensure what is taught in our institutions of learning is not only relevant to the country's developmental needs but also supports our international competitiveness. Government's goal in education is to put our people on the cutting edge and equip them to be able to compete with the best in the world.

How many people remember the worrying state of health care a few years ago? It was in shambles when we took office. Nothing exemplified the crisis more than the fact that the Health Services Authority was operating without a budget for two years. Madam Speaker, that this could occur is nothing short of scandalous. It demonstrated in a powerful way that the Government of the day was asleep at the wheel.

As a result of the various interventions we have made, specifically through our Minister, health care is in much better shape today. However, we still have some way to go before we achieve our desired goal of providing health care in a wider range of areas that is comparable to what is available anywhere in the world. As we pointed out from the outset, as much as we would love to, the problems of health cannot be resolved overnight. It will take time. Upgrading the quality of health care remains very much a work in progress.

Madam Speaker, through various initiatives, this PPM Government has made it easier for Caymanians to qualify to own a home. If Caymanians are to feel a genuine sense of belonging in the country of their birth, land and home ownership is the key. In most Caribbean societies, land and home ownership is comparable to what is referred to in the United States as the American dream. Caymanians purchasing their first piece of land can now do so free of paying duty on lots up to a value of CI$50,000. Madam Speaker, in light of the increasing cost of land I am pleased to say today that we are presently reviewing that ceiling with a view to increasing it to CI$75,000. Our intention, if at all possible, is to cause this to happen before this Meeting is over.

Additionally, Caymanians buying house and land where the house is valued up to $300,000 pay a marginal rate of stamp duty of 2%. For the first time, 100% mortgages are available. There is also the affordable housing programme. Madam Speaker, these are some of the initiatives taken by this PPM Government to give Caymanians a chance to own a piece of the rock. We are delighted with the response of Caymanians. Many have seized the opportunities and have already become proud property owners and many are now entrain.

We have now received the first installment of the EU funds to be used for Hurricane Ivan related works to be carried out through the National Recovery Fund offices. The total amount forthcoming is 7 million Euros and the first installment being the equivalent of some CI$1.3 million. We expect that the tendering process will begin very shortly, with construction to commence immediately thereafter. This Madam Speaker will go a long way to providing relief for all qualified persons. We expect these funds to complete all recovery efforts relating to Hurricane Ivan damage to homes and displacement of families.

The added benefits of this will be to provide work for the many small contractors who have been pre-qualified to tender for all of the construction, and most importantly Madam Speaker it will improve the quality of life for the many hundreds who will benefit from once again having a decent roof over their heads.

Madam Speaker, this PPM Government has invested heavily in expanding and modernizing our network of roads. We have done so to facilitate hassle-free travel for motorists and also to open up parts of the country—particularly the East End district—to more economic activity. We are already reaping the benefits. For example, getting into George Town on mornings now takes place minus the stress which resulted from the heavy traffic congestion that was commonplace just a short time ago. Madam Speaker, I know that there are a few finishing touches being done now, but I am sure that in a very short while we will be back to the beautiful straight ride. Less stress means improved safety as a result of a reduced possibility for accidents and injury on our roads.

The road development programme undertaken by the PPM Government is the most ambitious in the nation's history. It involves the construction of 165 lane miles of roadway. Our critics, with their myopic view of development, have questioned the wisdom of making such a major investment. They have difficulty understanding, it seems, that it serves as a platform, along with other infrastructural improvements, for taking the development of the Cayman Islands to the next level—and I can assure you, Madam Speaker, that the Minister responsible sees that vision very, very clear—for ensuring that we remain competitive as a place where people would wish to invest and do business, for promoting the long-term prosperity of these islands and, thereby, securing the future.

Madam Speaker, I have cited but a few examples to demonstrate in a tangible way that the Cayman Islands today are in much better shape than in 2005. In other words, Madam Speaker, it has been a good season for the Cayman Islands and Caymanians under this PPM Government. In the fullness of time I am therefore confident that Caymanians in their wisdom will extend the season of the PPM Government.

We have kept the faith. We have built a strong foundation on which to secure the future for the benefit of Caymanians. This is not the time for looking or going back. It is the time to look and move ahead in order to seize the exciting opportunities that await us. Of course, as a government we would have liked to do more. However, we have had to be realistic in implementing our agenda for change because of the limited resources at our disposal.

At the same time, we also had to be mindful that in trying to do so much we could actually undermine what we were seeking to achieve. We therefore had to strike a balance. History teaches us that Rome was not built in a day. Similarly, the Cayman Islands cannot be built in a day—or to be more specific, a single term. Good things always come to those who have patience.

Madam Speaker, this budget is the fourth to be presented by the PPM Government since our election to office. It fits into a continuum. In other words, it builds on the previous three budgets, it is grounded in the same philosophy, principles and values, and it supports the overriding objective of the PPM Government. That objective, Madam Speaker, it is to improve the quality of life for Caymanians and other residents of these Islands.

I explained in my Strategic Policy Statement last November that when we speak of improving the quality of life, we not only mean improving healthcare, education, roads and opening up access to affordable housing, we also mean developing the talents of our people so that everyone has the opportunity to realise his or her potential. We also mean improvements in law enforcement, public safety and other issues such as our constitutional arrangements which have an undeniable tangible impact on the quality of life.

Government's approach to improving the quality of life is therefore comprehensive and holistic. We strongly believe in a balanced approach to the development of the three islands. We do not believe that Grand Cayman should be developed and Cay-man Brac and Little Cayman allowed to be left behind. There should be a fair and equitable distribution of resources among the three Islands, which has been a policy focus of this PPM Government. This, Madam Speaker, the records will show—simply by the figure in sharp contrast with what transpired under the former administration.

Additionally, we do not believe that development today should jeopardize the quality of life for future generations. Therefore, Madam Speaker, the concept of sustainable development lies at the heart of the PPM Government's development strategy. We are building today to meet our current needs whilst taking care of tomorrow.

Madam Speaker, I spoke earlier about the impact of globalization and how increasing interdependence among nations means that the Cayman Islands are not immune from what is happening externally. This year's budget was prepared against the backdrop of an unfavourable external environment—an environment more unfavourable than last year.

Oil and food prices are steadily rising. It seems as if no end is in sight. The United States economy is also showing signs of being in recession. As the saying goes, when the United States sneezes, the rest of the world catches a cold. Obviously, these developments have implications for the performance of the Caymanian economy during the coming fiscal year. In the prevailing circumstances, fiscal prudence and discipline are required. We have always practiced both but they are needed now more than ever.

Particular emphasis in this budget is placed on safeguarding the gains of the past three years whilst cushioning the economy of the Cayman Islands from the full impact of the current economic downturn in the United States. There are also signs of sluggishness in the global economy. United as a country, I am confident we will keep our heads well above the water and ride out the storm. The Government is optimistic and, Madam Speaker, I would encourage the public of this country—public sector business, all factors—that they too must be optimistic.

You see, human belief is a powerful force. A person who is driven by what he or she believes . . . Have you ever noticed if you are sick and believe that you will get well your recovery is so much quicker? Similarly, if you believe the future is bright, you will be motivated to work to make it bright. The same applies to economic downturns. If you notice, downturns tend to accelerate when the view that there is a downturn becomes dominant. With booms, the opposite happens; there is a belief that things are bright and people show it through their behaviour.

One might wonder—especially the Second Elected Member for West Bay—why the Government is optimistic? We are optimistic because the fundamentals of our economy remain strong. So much so, that despite a projected decline in revenue, Government has honoured a commitment for the third straight year not to introduce any new taxes that would have the effect of increasing the cost of living and the cost of doing business here.

Indeed, Madam Speaker, the Government has already acted decisively on other fronts to tackle the rising cost of living. I should mention in passing that a wide range of foodstuff (as we have heard the Honourable Third Official Member say in his delivery) is already imported duty free. They are mainly staples and include milk, poultry, beef, grains, macaroni, butter and cheese, among other items. An area where Government intervention to combat the cost of living is already making a difference is in the cost of electricity.

After years of negotiations, both by the last Administration and this Government earlier this year, the Minister for Communications, Works and Infrastructure signed on our behalf a new license agreement with Caribbean Utilities Company which has significantly reduced the cost of electricity to the consumer.

In addition to securing a better deal for consumers from CUC, Government is also subsidizing the supply of electricity to the consumer through a duty rebate on the fuel used by CUC in the generation of electricity. This is costing the Treasury some CI$6 million a year, but we have concluded that this is money well spent and there is a direct benefit to the people of this country. As a result of this intervention, residential consumers are now paying 15% less for electricity than would otherwise be the case.

Madam Speaker, Government is projecting a budget for the 2008-09 fiscal year with a healthy surplus as was the case in each of the last three years. This is despite a projected fall in revenue for this year in the order of some CI$11 million, if we compare to our SPS projections in November when I delivered the Strategic Policy Statement. Contrast this, Madam Speaker, with budget deficits which many governments elsewhere are projecting because of the impact of the global economic downturn. The Government also is committed to maintaining public sector employment at the current levels. In other words, we have no plans to send people home.

Madam Speaker, I have to say here—I'll do it in passing . . . It amazes me in times like these when we know that there is a slowdown and people will have a more difficult time in getting new jobs, that there is even the suggestion—if not even directly but by innuendo—that the Government should be laying off people. It would amaze me . . . but we will hear more about that later, I am sure, in the debate.

The key point I wish to emphasize, Madam Speaker, is that the economy is in safe hands with this PPM Government. If what obtained prior to 2005 is a strong indicator, the same certainty cannot be said about the other side. Madam Speaker, one of the first priorities of this Government after taking office was the restoration of fiscal discipline which was thrown out of the window by the previous government. In relation to the management of public finances, it was a policy of anything goes. As the late philosopher George Santayana warns us, "those who do not remember the past are condemned to repeat it".

PRIORITIES

Madam Speaker, with your indulgence I now wish to provide for the benefit of this honourable House and for the citizens on the outside a summary of the major priorities to be pursued by the various ministries and portfolios of Government during the upcoming fiscal year. These priorities support the pursuit of the overriding objective of the PPM Government which, as I have explained before, is to improve the quality of life in the Cayman Islands; in other words, to make life better, more enjoyable and fulfilling for Caymanians and all others who choose to live here.

Madam Speaker, just before I begin speaking regarding the ministries and portfolios, I need to say this publicly—and I am hoping sincerely that the private sector will take a very serious look at the lead that Government is taking—Government, after compiling all the facts, has agreed to implement a 3.2% cost of living adjustment to the salaries of civil servants. This will be paid in July 2008 and it is retroactive to 1 July 2007. If we check the history we will know that sometimes it is 8 or 10 years before there are any cost of living adjustments dealt with in the Civil Service. It always causes too many things to lag behind and it causes any government to have to find too much money out of general revenue at any one time to make any dent in catching up.

We have applied this policy, Madam Speaker, that we will be as current as we can when it comes to the cost of living adjustments. I can say that the Civil Service has been more than cooperative in this regard because we have actually made them understand that we are prepared to do so, but they must find the ways and means to fund it out of current allocations and, Madam Speaker, they have done so. I wanted to make that announcement and I hope that the private sector will look very seriously, given the circumstances that we live in today, in doing what they can do for their employees with regard to at least cost of living adjustments.

Madam Speaker, I wish to begin with the Ministry of Communications, Works and Infrastructure.

Ministry of Communications, Works and Infrastructure

This Ministry has been playing a pivotal role in transforming the physical landscape of our country with tremendous benefits for everyone residing in Grand Cayman, from east to west—and also in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Thanks to major upgrades of our roads, what we have today is comparable—and in some cases superior—to what exists in some developed countries with more resources than the Cayman Islands. During the coming year, the public can expect the following—and a whole lot more—from the Ministry of Communications, Works and Infrastructure working through its various departments, Madam Speaker.

National Roads Authority

The Government recognises the great need for the Linford Pierson Highway to continue through from the roundabout and Bobby Thompson way on to Walker's Road. You see, Madam Speaker, all of the works that have gone on both on the extension of the Esterley Tibbetts' Highway and also the East-West Arterial, all of those works are inter-connected to the vision which the Minister has and which we share. But, Madam Speaker, we understand and the Minister is super-sensitive about it. We have sat and laboured over it and discussed the matter at length while listening to all the interventions from individuals and groups alike.

- We will be examining all options and the relevant costs, along with—once it is practical—an environmental assessment in order to decide exactly which route this road should take. I wish to make it clear that the Government is mindful of the environmental concerns regarding the proposed route through what is known nowadays as the Ironwood Forest. I want to assure the country today that we are doing everything we can to preserve this important environmental asset.
- I can also say that in our discussions there is no intention to do further work on this aspect of the road until we have a very clear understanding and we look at all of the costs involved with any alternative routing.

The path that is gazetted now is already an alternative to what was there before in an attempt to mitigate against the impact. But the Minister is keen, along with the rest of the Government to look carefully to see if there is any possibility of mitigating it even more. Madam Speaker, I can only say that at the end of the day we have to do the road, otherwise all of the other efforts the public will not reap the benefits of. But we will be doing it the best way that we possibly can. The Minister has publicly stated on more than one occasion that his intention is to preserve as much of the forest as possible and even going further to vest it so that it is preserved for future generations.

Madam Speaker, there will be:

- Ongoing road repairs and repaving in all districts. Major works will include re-grading and asphaltting Walkers Road and South Sound Road in George Town, Rum Point Drive in North Side and Queens Highway in East End.
- Continuation of coastal protection/armouring works along the most vulnerable coastlines.

For example, between Bodden Town, Breakers and possibly South Sound Road.

- Improving street lighting in some neighbourhoods to enhance public safety.

Cayman Water Authority

The Water Authority will continue to increase the amount of piped-water lines throughout Grand Cayman, for example, in the district of North Side and along the Queens Highway.

They will also upgrade underground water pipes which are now an average of approximately 20 years old. I think a good example of this would be the pipes that are along Walkers Road, which we know always give problems with leaking.

The Water Authority will also increase during this fiscal year the capacity of the Reverse Osmosis plant in the Sister Islands. And they are continuing the development of the Frank Sound Reservoir so that that will be able to work along once the citizens are connected with water in the North Side and on the Queen's Highway area.

Department of Environmental Health

Regarding the Department of Environmental Health, the Department will continue the landfill reorganization both in Grand Cayman and the Sister Islands. They will increase the export of used oil, spent batteries, and they are going to be working toward establishing a new contract for the export of scrap metals. The Department, as we speak, is expanding its recycling activities in all three islands.

The Government continues to be committed to the development of a waste to energy facility. That programme will be moving as swiftly as we are able to allocate funds.

Recreational Parks and Cemeteries Unit

The new Recreational Parks and Cemeteries Unit plans to:

- Increase the number of public boat ramps and docks. The Ministry through that Unit is very active in this regard. In conjunction with the Ministry of Tourism's "Go East!" initiative, there are plans to construct a public boat ramp, public dock, car park, toilet block, and kiosks at the CoeWood Public Beach site in Bodden Town. It will provide a major benefit to fishermen, boaters and emergency crews who will have a more central public access to the South Coast, instead of either having to go to South Sound or to Frank Sound to launch or to effect emergency services.
- Increase public cemetery capacity in each district.

- Identify and increase the number of public parks in each district.

Postal Services

Under Postal Services we will see: Increase in the number of post boxes installed throughout the Islands. Plans to physically upgrade and improve the Airport and the George Town post offices. And, Madam Speaker, by sheer coincidence the long awaited new Savannah Post Office will be officially opened this afternoon at 5:30 p.m. and everyone is invited to attend.

Ministry of Health and Human Services

Now to the priorities of the Ministry of Health and Human Services. As part of plans to improve the Health Services, the following interventions that I will speak to, Madam Speaker, are some of the proposed actions:

- A restructured Public Health Department will be established.
- Merging the Health Insurance Commission and the Health Practice Commission to form a new Department of Health Regulatory Services. The anticipated result is more efficient use of resources and improved oversight of the health care and health insurance regulatory services.
- Increasing physician services at district health centres to provide greater public access to primary care services.
- Renovations will be made to the physical structure and technical capabilities of the Faith Hospital in Cayman Brac. We know that is well needed and funds have been allocated in the Budget for that.
- Establishment of a Hospital Foundation for the purchase of capital equipment. This will allow access to the public. The public will be able to make donations toward specific projects.
- A comprehensive review and adjustment of fees for services provided by the Health Services Authority will be carried out in order to ensure that the organization appropriately accounts for the cost of services provided.
- New programmes will be implemented to achieve greater levels of efficiency in staffing, equipment utilization, patient services and finance.
- Formal accreditation for the DNA lab is currently being pursued so that the Cayman Islands will be positioned to become a major operational centre for the provision of professional forensic DNA services.

And I might just add, Madam Speaker, that it is one of the topics I, and other heads of overseas territories in the Caribbean, have been discussing. I dare say we will get much support from our colleagues in those territories.

To strengthen the family and community, some of the actions proposed are:

- Restructuring the Department of Children and Family Services to create a dedicated Department of Children's Services.
- Recommendations from the National Assessment of Living Conditions will be used as the platform to develop various - strategies and programmes required to promote sound social development.
- Development of a National Anti-Drug Strategy.
- Amendments to the Poor Persons Relief Regulations, the Adoption of Children Law, and the Children Law 2003 will be completed early in the next budget year, taking into account our obligations under the Convention on the Rights of the Child.
- A Community Empowerment and Development Agency will be created.
- And, Madam Speaker so that males do not feel left out: Men's well-being. The roles of men in family and community, will be promoted in the context of the National Gender Policy.

To support the continued development of our women, these and other actions are proposed:

- Appointment of an Officer of Gender Affairs who will review and update the National Gender Policy, and spearhead the establishment of the Office of Gender Affairs, as well as the policy of gender mainstreaming across the public sector.
- Passing legislation to give domestic application to the UN Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Among Women.
- Placing greater strategic focus on the delivery of outreach and support services to victims of sexual violence.

The following are some of the actions proposed in relation to young people at risk:

- Funds are in the Budget to begin the construction of a purpose-built youth therapeutic facility to accommodate a total of 18 boys and girls in separate wings. This facility will enhance rehabilitation through therapeutic and drug rehabilitation programmes. And, Madam Speaker, I am absolutely certain that throughout your battle over the years you will be very pleased to see this become a reality.
- Also, Madam Speaker, there is a plan to move the Young Parents Programme under the new Empowerment Agency, following completion of a review by a multi-agency team.

- In response to the amended Youth Justice Law, training will be sought in the areas of Victim Offender Mediation and Family Conferencing in order to provide the Youth Court with alternatives to sentencing in these areas.

Madam Speaker, we have not forgotten the elderly. In many societies, they are pushed to the margins and in many instances forgotten. The needs of the elderly are receiving attention so that they too can enjoy a good quality of life. With this objective in mind, the following actions are proposed:

- Development of a National Plan for the Elderly.
- Complete the redevelopment of the Golden Age Home in West Bay.
- Expansion of the home for the Elderly in East End
- Construction of a new home for the elderly in North Side

Madam Speaker, funds are in the Budget for the new home for the elderly in North Side but I have to say that one hold up has been the ability to locate and get consent from the adjoining land owner for the piece of property that has been identified in order for Government to acquire an additional piece. The Lands and Survey department are pursuing that as we speak.

Madam Speaker, the Government is deeply conscious that in times of rising costs those most vulnerable and adversely impacted are the elderly and indigent and so for the second time since we assumed office, the Government has decided to increase financial assistance to the elderly and disabled from $500 to $550 per month. This increase will also apply to seamen and veterans receiving the monthly ex-gratia payment.

Madam Speaker, having outlined some of the plans of the Ministry of Health and Human Services, I now turn to another Ministry which is equally people-centred—the Ministry of Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture.

Ministry of Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture

This Ministry's agenda over the coming year will focus on service delivery through legislative reform, programme improvements across the various units, and an intensive capital works programme.

Some of the expected outcomes are as follows:

- A comprehensively restructured Education Law and an updated Employment Law. Both laws, with input from key stakeholders, will seek to equip the Ministry to be more effective in addressing present-day realities.

- The Cayman Islands Government Central Tenders Committee has approved the award of contracts for the construction of two of the three new secondary education campuses, John Gray Campus in George Town and Clifton Hunter Campus in Frank Sound, signaling the imminent start of these much-anticipated capital works [projects] Madam Speaker, whilst plans to start construction on the Beulah Smith Campus in West Bay are also progressing, further dialogue is required at this sensitive stage of contractual negotiations, in order to secure the best value for public expenditure.

So, Madam Speaker, to put it in perspective: the Beulah Smith campus will be built along with the other two but the Central Tenders Committee has not awarded the contract for that one yet because there is some fine tuning with the negotiations to make sure that the Government gets the best value for money before the contract is signed. It is hoped that these negotiations will be resolved in the near future at which time details will be submitted to the Central Tenders Committee for review and evaluation. And with a little bit of luck we'll have the contract signed within a short time.

- Challenges facing the Government's capital funding programme have necessitated an extension of the originally anticipated project lead times. This revised schedule means that the new secondary campuses, including the Beulah Smith Campus, will be completed by September 2010, when all the facilities will be fully operational for the start of the 2010/2011 academic term which, again, is 2010.
- Meanwhile work on the design new facilities for George Town Primary School continues in earnest, with construction expected to start early in 2009. The new George Town Primary School will also open its doors to students in September 2010.
- The launch of a new National Curriculum at the start of the next school year in September. This will be followed by a range of professional development initiatives to support teachers and education professionals in the delivery of 21st Century teaching and learning practices.
- Madam Speaker, the Ministry is also developing protocols to ensure children with disabilities cannot be discriminated against when it comes to access to education. This follows the introduction of protocols to provide similar support to children with special needs.

- The Ministry is also stepping up the promotion of literacy through various interventions at the primary and secondary school levels.
- Upgrading of facilities at the Truman Bodden Sports Complex is ongoing with the completion of work on the track and pitch and the new boxing gym. Work on the two fields at the Ed Bush stadium is also scheduled to be completed.
- A number of community playing fields are also being restored and upgraded to international standards. When completed, these community stadia will be able to host regional and international competitions.

Madam Speaker, when we were coming to the Legislative Assembly this morning, I am sure we all noticed the work that is going on with the expansion of the Library services. And there is a new building being constructed behind the old Library right here in the heart of town and that is ongoing and soon to be completed.

Madam Speaker, it is only right for us to recognise the generous grant from the law firm Maples of US$2.5 million paid over a period of time towards this project.

Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Investment and Commerce

Madam Speaker, allow me to move on to the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Investment and Commerce. Here is a glimpse of what is on their agenda:

- Continuing to focus on policies and programmes that promote sustainable development. At the same time, enhancing physical and human resources to support competitiveness.
- Redevelopment of key tourism infrastructure. For example, the expansion of the Owen Roberts International Airport and the establishment of berthing facilities for cruise ships in the George Town harbour.
- Expansion of customer service training programmes. Apprenticeship training for Caymans seeking entry level of managerial positions in tourism.
- In response to the challenge which climate change poses to island nations such as ours, the Ministry will work with the Cabinet Office to develop a National Climate Adaptation Strategy and also a National Sustainable Development Framework.

The Department of Tourism continues to work closely with the private sector to preserve and grow upon a solid track record of growth in air arrivals despite challenging external economic forecasts. Madam

Speaker, the results of all of these efforts keep proving positive in the years past and even up to now we are seeing continued increases in air arrivals. The Ministry of Tourism's diversification initiatives which began increased promotions in Europe and Canada during the past two years have aided the recovery of the tourism sector in the aftermath of Hurricane Ivan and these markets will continue to be targeted for their potential contributions.

Turning to Public Transportation which is vital to Cayman's infrastructure, following a comprehensive market analysis of this sector, the Public Transportation Unit is being restructured to improve the economic and service-related performance of this sector. A professional, vibrant and disciplined public transport sector not only benefits the tourism industry but has the potential to stimulate local demand for public transportation and thereby decrease carbon emissions which result from such high reliance on private vehicles.

I would like to take this opportunity this afternoon to congratulate Cayman Airways as it celebrates its 40th anniversary. While mention was made earlier of organizational improvements, it is the dedicated and professional staff of CAL that has made our airline a success. Cayman Airways has therefore undertaken to enhance customer satisfaction while working with the Department of Tourism's PRIDE initiative to provide customer service training for all front line employees of Cayman Airways.

An employee-focused program designed to enhance employee morale and performance has begun, while improved corporate communications has improved transparency and public awareness. Also, Cayman Airways has made major strides towards modernizing its fleet. Recently, two Boeing 737-200s have been retired and have been replaced with more efficient 737-300 aircraft.

Madam Speaker, the Ministry is also continuing to support the development of entrepreneurs through the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau and the Cayman Islands Development Bank.

Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing

Rising food prices are a major concern around the world, Madam Speaker. I have said that before. In response, the Government is keen on encouraging and supporting farmers to expand production so that we can all eat more of what is produced locally. I was being told yesterday that it just seems like yesterday, not a year ago, that the one-year-old initiative by the Government—namely, the Saturday farmers 'Market at the Grounds'—has provided a tremendous boost in this regard.

Madam Speaker, no longer than two days ago the Government and our Backbench met with representatives of the merchants and we intend to continue our discussions towards seeing if there can be a collaboration between the Government and the importers with regard to bringing any relief to the consumer in noticing the ever rising cost of food. Merchants are acutely aware and they wish to help in any way they can.

Following that meeting, Madam Speaker, we will also be meeting with representatives from the farming community along with the merchants so that we can be specific as we can with regard to inducements or enticements for the farming community to produce more produce locally. The merchants are quite keen once there can be a fairly consistent supply to be able to buy more locally. Madam Speaker, that is something that the entire country needs to take advantage of. Even less than a year ago when I mentioned how important it was to become as self-sufficient as we could, not a single soul thought that there would be ration on rice and here we are a year later.

Madam Speaker, for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing, which I have the honour to lead, expanding domestic food production as I just mentioned is a major goal during the new fiscal year. In terms of focus areas, food crops, livestock, horticulture and aquaculture have been earmarked for special attention. The Department of Agriculture will support farmers by providing services, technical assistance and training, in order for them to enhance not only their volumes but the quality and the diversity of their products.

These interventions are aimed at helping farmers to gain the best value from their products through processing, marketing and promotion. Special emphasis will be placed on encouraging farmers to adopt a more business-oriented and technology-driven focus. Madam Speaker, this will be pursued through the promotion of agri-business techniques and the introduction of enhanced production systems, including lower capital cost greenhouses.

The following, are some of the other priorities of my Ministry:

- The launch of an expanded disease prevention programme by the Mosquito Research and Control Unit. The aim is to thwart a possible outbreak of dengue fever which has become a major health problem in some of our neighbouring Caribbean countries.
- Stepping up the affordable housing programme for low-income Caymanians. The National Housing Development Trust now has acquired land in East End, Bodden Town, George Town, and West Bay and is actively seeking property in your district, Madam Speaker, so that they can continue the construction of affordable homes for Caymanians.
- There is also the expansion and upgrading of the road networks which is planned for Cay-man Brac and Little Cayman by District Administration.

- Public beach and park facilities are also earmarked for improvement in the Sister Islands.
- Construction of the sports' playfield plans on the Bluff on Cayman Brac will continue.

As I understand it from the District Commissioner and also the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the turf is being placed on that field as we speak. So, there is good progress. There are plans to host the first international match there in the summer of next year (2009). The expansion of the District Administration building will also be completed in this fiscal year. And there are ongoing initiatives which promote Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as domestic tourism destinations.

I believe it is fair to say that that initiative is reaping with some success, because as often as I travel there I see more and more Caymanians who do not live in the Sister Islands, but who are visiting and I am certain they will enjoy their continued visits.

Madam Speaker, we are also in discussion with the owners of the Point of Sand beach property in Little Cayman with the objective being for the Government to acquire it over a period of time for the benefit of future generations of Caymanians.

I dare say for those of us who know where this property is located, that there is no other piece of property within the Cayman Islands like that piece. The owners have traveled to Grand Cayman and they met with me about a week ago. They are quite happy for the Government to acquire the property. They are also quite happy for it to be paid for over a reasonable period of time—several Budget years. I think we just have to get to the point where we agree on what is fair value. So, Madam Speaker, I think that is good news.

Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs

Madam Speaker, I turn now to the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs which has responsibility for public safety and national security. These are vital elements in creating the right environment to support continued economic growth and prosperity for our country. Madam Speaker, some of the Portfolio's main priorities on a departmental basis are as follows:

Royal Cayman Islands Police

- Reducing crime and road traffic casualties is high in order of priority.
- Increasing detection of threats of violence and drug offenders also.
- Construction of a new Drug Task Force and Marine Base is becoming a reality. Improved border protection with the scheduled arrival of new vessels, including the helicopter will also make a tremendous difference.
- Madam Speaker, the Royal Cayman Islands Police also have plans to strengthen the neighbourhood policing initiative.

Fire Department

- Completion of the Bodden Town Emergency Centre is a high priority and construction should begin shortly.
- It is expected that plans for a new Cayman Brac domestic fire station will be completed with a view to beginning construction in the 9/10 Budget year.

Immigration Department

- Maintaining strict border controls.
- Madam Speaker, I previously announced our intention to make fundamental changes to our work permit regime aimed at improving the speed and efficiency with which certain non-contentious categories of work permits can be dealt with. This will involve significant changes to our Immigration legislation and it is planned that this will be brought to the House later in this meeting. These changes will improve service to the business community and is further demonstration of this Government's commitment to enhancing the economic environment in these Islands.
- Madam Speaker, the Immigration Department also has plans to strengthen measures to detect and prosecute employers and employees who fail to abide by immigration laws and regulations.

Cayman Islands Prison Services

- The Cayman Islands' Prison Services will be working to improve prisoner education and rehabilitation programmes.
- This upcoming fiscal year will see the commencement of the first phase of construction of a new prison. Madam Speaker, what is going to make this become a reality is—instead of talking about it, it is actually going to be happening now and it has been “happening” for quite a while and the inmates are going to be participating in the construction of this new facility.

911 Emergency Communications

- The 911 Emergency Communications will see an introduction of electronic monitoring of offenders. This is a very important component of the new Alternative Sentencing Law. I believe as we speak this new system is being tested.

Hazard Management Cayman Islands

Hazard Management Cayman Islands will see the design of their new National Emergency Operations Centre completed during this year with construction to begin in the 9/10 fiscal year.

Portfolio of Legal Affairs

Madam Speaker, the following are some of the priorities of the Portfolio of Legal Affairs are the:

- Development of a comprehensive and coordinated criminal justice strategy. It will cover areas such as alternative sentencing, post incarceration initiatives, prison reforms as well as early intervention programmes for "at risk youth".
- The Portfolio is also very busy drafting laws to improve protection of children from child pornography and also to improve the protection of witnesses in criminal cases, reviewing the law relating to environmental health and regulating the incidence of tobacco use and its consequent harm.
- Madam Speaker, we also know from various debates either in the Legislative Assembly or in Finance Committee that there are difficulties being experienced with the Legal Aid system. The Department is in the process as we speak of doing a review of the Legal Aid system with a view to making specific recommendations at a very early date.
- Madam Speaker, the Department is also very proactive in the global fight against money laundering, terrorist financing and other financial crime by making sure that our legislation is not only up to date, but it is on the cutting edge.
- They also recognise that it is important to strengthen ties with our international partners as a reflection of the commitment of the Cayman Islands to having a very sound regulatory financial regime.

Portfolio of Finance and Economics

Finally, Madam Speaker, the Portfolio of Finance and Economics which has responsibility for our vital financial services industry posted another very solid year of growth in 2007. Leading this growth on the transaction side was the Investment Funds Sector, which posted a 17% increase over 2006; the Company Registration Sector generally, which posted a 16% increase in new registrations over 2006; and Exempted Limited Partnerships, which posted a 42% increase in new registrations. Figures for the first quarter of the calendar year in these sectors are healthy, with New Fund Registrations up 14% over first quarter 2007; New Company Registrations running equal with first quarter 2007; and New Exempted Limited Partnerships up by 45% over first quarter 2007.

In addition, in terms of calendar year 2006 over calendar year 2007, there was a 3% increase in the number of licensed captives; a 45% increase in listings on the CSX and an 8% increase in new pleasure vessels registered on the Cayman Islands Shipping Register.

On the institution side, 2007 saw further, but minor (i.e. 3%), contraction in the number of 'Class B' banks, but on the other hand it saw a 17% increase in the number of full fund administrators, compared with 2006. The number of 'Class A' banks, insurance managers, trust companies and other licensed service providers remained stable.

We know that we are operating in a very competitive environment and that part of the mutual compact we have with our financial services sector is that we work together to ensure that the industry has the tools and support it needs to compete successfully, which ultimately rebounds to the health of our economy. We know that we have work to do in this area, and we are committed to getting it done. We need our legislation, our regulatory regime, including our Business Staffing Plan and Work Permit regimes, and our administrative processes to fully align with our economic needs and objectives.

On this score, there are important developments which I will take a minute to report this morning. Firstly, during this meeting of the House, as I mentioned earlier, we will bring amending legislation to the Banks & Trust Companies Law and the Mutual Funds Law that will, among other things, underpin two lines of business: Islamic financing structures, which are significant globally and in which the Cayman Islands has good prospects for increasing market share, and also private trust companies, in which the Cayman Islands to date has only been competitive in a very minor segment of this huge global sector. This legislation and supporting regulations is expected to enhance the competitive landscape for our industry and certainly we look forward to our service providers being able to capitalize on it so that it generates revenue for all of us.

Most excitingly, Madam Speaker, the Government, with the benefit of recommendations from the Reinsurance Task Force, is pleased to announce its full support for the promotion of the Cayman Islands as a location for reinsurers. We have already seen a strong and vibrant insurance industry here in the Cayman Islands, including a world class captive insurance sector, a very successful existing reinsurance company and strong participation in the structuring of reinsurance vehicles such as what is termed as sidecars and catastrophe bonds. This, together with our vibrant hedge fund sector, a key source of capital for reinsurers, and our strong financial, legal and regulatory infrastructure make the reinsurance industry a natural area of expansion for us here in the Cayman Islands.

Government support will take the form of a clear, effective and tailored entry regime, including an enhanced Business Staffing Plan regime, for qualified reinsurers, designed to appeal to either start-up reinsurers or existing reinsurers looking for viable options for locations in which to grow their business. In turn, the Government expects reinsurers who wish to take advantage of the entry regime to enter into a "social contract" reflecting a partnership approach to joining our financial services community, via specific commitments to education and training opportunities for our own Caymanians. The Portfolio of Finance & Economics as executing agency will be coordinating the delivery of the regime, which is expected to be rolled out very shortly.

Madam Speaker, the Government welcomes the continued growth of the reinsurance sector and the substantial activity that it can generate in and for our financial services industry. We pledge, Madam Speaker, to do all on our end to ensure that this becomes a reality.

CONCLUSION

Madam Speaker, in conclusion, the presentation of the 2008-09 budget is anchored on the theme – 'Keeping the Faith—Securing the Future'. It was meant to put the performance of the PPM Government in its true perspective, to demonstrate that we have matched our promises at election time with our performance even in the face of tremendous odds. We also wanted Caymanians to be clear about the Government's overriding objective, namely, to improve the quality of life, to leave no one behind in this process, and by so doing to build a strong foundation on which to secure the future.

Madam Speaker, I have demonstrated that this PPM Government is indeed doing so through its various policies, its programmes and its projects. However, there is another key element which supports securing the future. It is the adoption of a modernized constitution which is long overdue. A modernized constitution as the supreme law of the land is vital to establishing the basis of a new relationship between Government and Caymanian citizens and residents, and, Madam Speaker, also between the Cayman Islands and the United Kingdom.

The present Constitution has been in effect since 1972. The world has fundamentally changed since then. Our needs have also changed, but we have a situation where the existing Constitution was designed for needs as they existed back in 1972. At a glance the inadequacy is quite apparent. A modernized constitution is the only answer.

Our critics have been exploiting the natural fear people have about change. However, when you look at it objectively, change is the only constant feature in life. We may not be conscious of it but we undergo change every day. It becomes necessary from time to time to pause, take stock, and decide how to adjust to change. Such a time is now; otherwise, we could find ourselves at a disadvantage. This is a real danger which the Cayman Islands face if we fail to modernize our constitution. The world is moving on. It is not going to wait on us.

The Government is heartened by the fact that more and more Caymanians are recognising the need for a new Constitution. The approach of the Opposition on this issue has been most disappointing. However, the Opposition has proven by its words and actions that it cannot be taken seriously in this matter. A few months ago it was saying Caymanians should vote "No" if they did not know. The Opposition chose to place emphasis back then on scaremongering tactics instead of helping the people to know. With the recent publication of its Discussion Paper, the Opposition has made a dramatic u-turn. It is now saying a modernized constitution is important. It is now saying that Caymanians must be informed to make a decision.

Madam Speaker, the Government has been forthright with our people from the onset. It has laid all of its cards on the table. Government has proven there is no hidden agenda, as suggested by the Opposition. Any new Constitution that will be adopted will be informed by the views and wishes of Caymanians. It will be a constitution that comes from the people, not the Government. The Government is merely acting as the agent of the people. And this Government, this PPM Government, will vigorously defend the interests of our people. So, I want to take this opportunity to urge Caymanians to participate in the upcoming referendum, the date of which will be announced very shortly. Madam Speaker, the participation of the people in this exercise is another way of securing the future.

Madam Speaker, on behalf of the Government, I want to take this opportunity to thank everyone who has contributed in some way to another successful budget exercise. I also wish to thank our hard-working public servants who have carried forward the Government's vision through successful implementation of our many policies, programmes and indeed our many projects.

From the utter devastation of Hurricane Ivan, the Cayman Islands have just about achieved full recovery in three short years. An exciting future lies ahead. So, Madam Speaker, my comment is just this: now is not the time to change course; now is not the time to gamble with the future.

With faith in God, confidence in our people, our inner strengths and indeed our proven ability to succeed, the Cayman Islands can—and will—grow from strength to strength and serve as a shining beacon of good governance and prosperity in the Caribbean and indeed in the wider world.

I want to quickly interject, Madam Speaker, to personally say a special thank you to all of my elected colleagues on this side—the Ministers and backbenchers. Madam Speaker, we work hard and I am not saying this looking any thanks; but if it is one thing I know they cannot accuse us of, it is not working hard. And I want to just take a minute to let my colleagues know that I appreciate all of their efforts and I am sure the country does too.

Madam Speaker, this Government, this PPM Government has faithfully, earnestly and honestly served the people. We have provided effective leadership. We have kept the faith and we are securing the future.

Thank you Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

[Pause]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I was just taking a breather, sorry.

Madam Speaker, Members are aware that we want to return next Wednesday to continue the debate on the Budget Address and Throne Speech, but also, Madam Speaker, there is a 2007-8 Supplementary Appropriation Bill and Finance Committee which needs to convene before that.

So, the proposal (and with your indulgence, Madam Speaker, I am just explaining so that Members will have a clear understanding) is that we return next Wednesday to debate, but that we return this Friday, so that the Honourable Third Official Member can table the Supplementary Appropriation Bill and move straight into Finance Committee and we can get the Supplementary Appropriation for 2007-8 put to bed before we continue the debate on the 2008-9 Budget Address and Throne Speech.

So, Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this honourable House until [Friday, 2 May] at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until [Friday, 2 May 2008] at 10 am. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 12.51 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Friday, 2 May 2008.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker, just a brief contribution.

The Committee met on Friday, 2 May 2008, to consider the 2nd Supplementary Annual Plan and Estimates for the Government's financial year ending 30 June 2008 and, more specifically, the Supplementary Appropriations both positive and negative set out in section 10 of those Supplementary Plan and Estimates.

The Committee also considered a motion that I moved in the Legislative Assembly on behalf of the Government, a motion to the effect that the Committee approve the supplementary appropriation request set out in section 10 of the AP&E document. The results of the Committee's deliberations were as follows:

- 1) All of the supplementary appropriation requests were approved with amendments to three of the initial specifications to appropriations, and two new appropriation changes were also made.
- 2) The motion that I raised in the LA was approved by the Committee inclusive of the five modifications to the Supplementary Appropriation Schedule in section 10 of the AP&E document.

- 3) The Committee granted its approval that I report the results of the deliberations to the LA. And these are provided in the report that has just been tabled. The Committee also agreed that the report just tabled be the report of the Committee.

And, Madam Speaker, the Committee also met this morning to finalise its report.

At the end of its deliberations, Madam Speaker, the Committee had approved 106 individual items, or supplementary appropriations, some positive and some negative, that have a total net value of $5,462,655.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: [Commencing] the debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I am grateful to Almighty God for allowing me to be here to debate what is the 24th Throne Speech and Budget [Address] since 1984. Madam Speaker, I add my thanks to the good people of West Bay for giving me that privilege to represent them this many years.

Madam Speaker, our forefathers and governments before us worked hard to build these Islands where we all came from poverty to a situation where there existed good houses, work for all who wanted to and generally a better quality of life for those who worked hard and planned for the future. Well, there have been challenges, during at least this past forty-odd years, [but] God has been kind to us. This is still what I want for the people of these Islands: to experience the good times.

Today, the whole middle-class is being wiped out. Caymanians are losing ground. There is real unemployment and the rate is rising. Caymanian businesses are going under. I have received many complaints about companies not being able to even afford to pay their rent. Yet, the PPM has now tabled the largest Budget in history.

This Budget will not improve the lives of the vast majority—if any at all—of the man on the street. If you listen to the present Government, nothing was done right before they took office, and they are doing everything in their power to prove this misleading strategy to the world by giving false information.

I listened to the Leader of Government Business in his presentation statement reporting what his Government has done and some of what he claims we have done. I never heard from anyone in these 20-odd years so many misleading and unfounded allegations being made in this Legislative Assembly. Never! I wondered how that Member could do so because the rules do not let him make his accusations the way he did.

According to them, everything is good today. Everything is done right. And the Leader of Government Business is saying that Caymanians never had it so good. And any good done is because of them. He would want you to believe that the Islands started in 2005. Nothing happened before that. From the Shamrock Tree blossom to the young Tamarind Tree, everything is done because of him and his Government.

Well, the opposite is true. Madam Speaker, the Government has produced its election budget laden with political rhetoric and absent of proper planning. A budget must detail where funds are coming from and going to. In their pronouncement of a deserved 3.5 per cent increase in salaries of civil servants, the PPM failed to identify where the funds will come from.

In a budget where the civil service had to identify savings of $25 million or there about, and where they had to cut their programmes to find that money, surely having to find another $10-plus million will leave them in an untenable situation. How are they going to do it? He said they must find it.

The Government has been caught up leaving important matters to the last so as to have an effect on the upcoming general election and, more importantly to them, their so-called referendum.

Madam Speaker, on this side we certainly agree with the raise for the civil servants because the situation is terrible in this country. The whole Island, the whole working population needs attention when it comes to salaries; particularly those at the lower end, Madam Speaker, particularly those who are only getting $2.50, $3 or $5 an hour. They need attention. We agree with the raise for the civil servants because they work hard. But we oppose how it has been handled by the PPM.

At a time when so many Caymanians are struggling to meet the daily demands of life, such as paying their mortgages, adequately feeding their families and, in general, maintaining a reasonable quality of life, he says we must “count our blessings.” Well, surely, our blessings can only be counted one by one and these are in no way attributed to the PPM, but to the protective covenant provided by our Christian heritage.

The Leader of Government Business and the PPM Administration are completely out of touch with the realities of the Caymanian economy and the social ills resulting from blatant mismanagement of the country. The Leader of Government Business encouraged Caymanians to turn to CNN and BBC to see struggling people around the world. I would encourage him and the PPM Government to go into our communities and talk to the many Caymanians who know too well what hardship is through their own struggles. They do not need to turn to BBC or to CNN. Talk to those in the trailer parks who are still waiting for the failed promises of the PPM to come to fruition. Talk to the many Caymanians who expected more of them because of what they promised.

They should ask the residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who were promised to be embraced by the PPM and, subject to numerous planning sessions, Madam Speaker, only to experience a resumption of the old system that we had done away with. We fought hard to do away with it, where the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer and only the roads to so-called friends’ subdivisions—frien-frien—and family are getting done. But I will deal with that.

Rather than the Leader of Government Business using this opportunity to introduce some relief and reassurance to the Caymanian public, he chose to deliver an address laden with political rhetoric and cries empathy for an additional term for his failing PPM Administration, suggesting that Rome was not built in a day, so the PPM needed a further term to complete the Cayman Islands—oh yeah? Such admission of failure after what would be four full terms for them—four full years for them, when compared to the UDP’s mere two years and ten months to the month before [Hurricane] Ivan, Madam Speaker. And that is the reason why the Government has found it necessary to occupy its time and the resources of this country to continually attack the many accomplishments of the United Democratic Party’s Administration.

Caymanians are having it bad. They are worse off now than at any time that I can think of, yet we have a self-centered, lying Government. They talk about corruption? Corruption exists in Government while shenanigans are not reported in the press because real information is not made available. And while the Leader of Government Business blames and accuses the UDP, he is incapable, he is incompetent, and has no real economic plan except to tax, borrow and spend, with no long-term plans to ensure economic prosperity for a higher standard of living. None!

Adding $50 to the poor people’s money cannot solve the problems. They should be at this time at $800, as we said they needed back in 2004. We knew that. We did not have to do any studies; we found it out through the Social Services Department. They should now be at that $800.

Madam Speaker, they can accuse me all they want, but I moved the country forward. We had plans in 2005 and I have plans today that can help these Islands in the long term.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: You wouldn't know what to do with them my son.

While they ask me to give them today . . . instead of prancing up and down on the streets having a good time, travelling all over the world having a good time, they should be representing the people. That's what they should be doing—coming now and saying I must give them plans.

While the Leader of Government Business says that they put no extra burden on the people because they did not increase fees, he fails to understand that fees increased by any government agency create hardships and a burden on the people of these Islands.

What about the increased fees at the Health Services? And the various company fees last year? All this helps to add to the burden of the people. Is he not listening to what people are saying? They also have confirmed that the fees at the Airport will be increased. How can they be so disingenuous? How can they?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: They say they want a dictionary. After I sit down today, Madam Speaker, they are going to have to get a couple of dictionaries!

But the Fourth Elected Member for George Town does not ever believe that wrong is being committed. He is so blind that his extension cord exists from one end of Bodden Town all the way to the Glass House.

While, Madam Speaker, we can say 'thank you' to the Minister for Roads, for he has followed some old plans and made some new ones, the Minister of Education says much. There is a lot of glossy paper, a tremendous amount of staff in his ministry and consultants who took away long-term jobs from Caymanians. He has gotten nowhere. Education, except for those glossy statements and glossy paper, and a lot of to-do in the [Cayman]NetNews and other papers . . . where is education today? While their cronies and other political associates have $10 million in contracts to do prep work for school buildings that he has now had to admit cannot be built at this time—because we told him so before . . . He was in the wrong direction.

I ask, Madam Speaker, what system the Government uses to get rid of teachers, or to not renew teachers' contracts. Before, the Chief Education Officer or her deputy would call in a teacher whose contract was not being renewed and performance, et cetera, was discussed. Today I understand that is not what is being done. Teachers are just handed a letter, and that is the end of it. This has not only just affected the teachers concerned, but those whose contracts will soon be up for renewal. It has caused hard feelings; it is causing uncertainty and anxiety to exist which is bringing about low morale in the teaching staff. This certainly is not good for the teaching profession, especially when we have Caymanian teachers who do not, or cannot, stay in the system. And I am not saying that is just so today. But I am saying, where are all these things that he said would be done?

So if that kind of treatment is meted out, how are they going to entice anyone to come here? Good staff will stop and consider whether they want that kind of treatment before they come and agree to a contract.

The Government says it has a new national curriculum. I have been informed that it is nothing more than a replica of the British National Curriculum. It seems teachers are still relying on the old national curriculum which I am told is more user-friendly and still contains what teachers need to get the job done. From what I understand it is not so different in content than the new curriculum. How many teachers did it take to get the new curriculum together?

Madam Speaker, the Minister spoke about protocol and says that protocol is now put in place to ensure that children with disabilities are not discriminated against. This is what the Leader of Government Business said in his statement. It is one of the best multipurpose special education facilities built years ago. And all the tremendous work done over the years through the Special Education Unit, successive governments have ensured that good learning environment provisions were put in place to avoid any form of discrimination in that area.

What is being done now that is new to enhance this area other than a number of post increases to keep it in line with the increase in the number of students requiring special education? A number of posts put in place—that is something done on an annual basis.

Literacy they talked about, but literacy has been a focus of past governments and literacy coordinators were put in place before this Government who added a few more bodies to work in schools.

Madam Speaker, I want to take the time, why they say nothing was done. In his mad rush to be re-elected, the Leader of Government Business said that the UDP had no plans or programmes. Madam Speaker, in 2002 the UDP implemented the ITALIC programme which ensured that all teachers in the government schools received laptops and online training to improve their ITC skills. That programme, like others we left, has been thrown away.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town is asking what happened to it. Well, does he not know? He says teachers do not like it. Well, they certainly did not say so.

You wouldn't know—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, direct your debate through me and leave the Fourth Elected Member with his crosstalk.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Don't you hear him over there?

The Speaker: Yes.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Don't you hear him over there, Madam Speaker?

The Speaker: I do.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, don't you think that that is disturbing?

The Speaker: I agree with you—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: So why are you speaking to me and not to him?

The Speaker: Because I'm telling you to—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Because I am on the Floor. I am speaking. He should shut up until he gets up, Madam Speaker.

That programme, like others we left, has been thrown away. Nothing new has taken its place to assist teachers to develop their ITC skills. There seems to be a few more technical supports . . . will that be of eternal help to teachers? [The ITALIC programme] was in the pilot phase. Six projects were being piloted in our schools. All schools were involved in at least one pilot programme.

The education portal had been established to allow internet and intranet connection to and between all schools. Email for students and teachers was put in place. Schools developed their own websites. Teachers developed their own web pages. Through web-based courses some teachers were developing lesson plans which could then be evaluated and available in lesson banks. And such action plans would have met the standards laid down by the national curriculum for government schools. It was anticipated that all teachers would have been trained in this method through the course of 2004.

We had plans to pilot wireless computer [lab] [using] carts in schools. This would have given every child access to a computer and the internet. At the same time, information technology policy which included internet use policy and technology support policies were being developed. These draft policy documents were being reviewed by the appropriate personnel.

Madam Speaker, as I said, 1) the ITALIC programme was launched.

2) We provided state of the art computer and labs in classrooms for students' use, as well as digital cameras, camcorders and LCD projectors, and provided teachers with laptops for personal and classroom use.

3) We enrolled teachers and administrators in training programmes to improve IT skills and to integrate technology into the curriculum.

4) We provided wireless access to the internet from any site on the school grounds.

5) We signed agreement with the British Columbia Institute of Technology to accept UCCI technology students for transfer.

6) We completed a new state of the art Prospect School.

7) We established the University College of the Cayman Islands, offering four year bachelor degree.

8) We developed the National Education Leadership Programme with London University Leadership Institute and the first class graduated.

9) We developed national standards for principals in government schools.

10) A major review of technical and vocational education carried out by overseas school inspector.

11) We awarded 10 scholarships to the New England Institute of Technology in various technical areas.

12) We revamped the Alternative Education Centre and provided new curriculum and new programmes.

13) Over 1100 scholarships were provided during our term.

14) We introduced a citizenship education curriculum for primary and secondary schools.

15) We established the Cadet Corps focusing on developing citizen skills, leadership, discipline, and teamwork and life skills.

16) We published six Cayman Islands Social Studies text books for primary schools with teachers' guides.

17) We piloted vocational distance learning at the Cayman Brac High School in a number of areas.

18) To improve business and management practice Investors in People and an internationally recognized standard that benchmarks a business training and development of its workforce was introduced.

Yet the Leader—gone out now, gone out! We didn't do anything. He should stay here, Madam Speaker, because I have some serious challenges and questions for him here today.

The PPM . . . while much noise is being made and four different schools are made out of one, some people say they say look at all we have gotten done. Where is it? Where is the proof?

The PPM's main focus has been restricted to school buildings with little or no attention on programmes and no thought to what the expenditure will be for building those schools or what the recurrent budget will be to maintain those schools. They are putting education in a position that is going to be hard to get things done. I say that at this time. I wait to see exactly what is going to be the real programme for educating our children.

They say the Community College. They say we haven't done anything. They say the Community College is better and it has more students. How could it get [there] if we had not done the work? And if the previous president—who they like to talk about and make slurs on—had not done the work, Madam Speaker, and tried to . . . he did not focus on beautifying the grounds. He focused on getting students into college, that's what he did. And he did it without tremendous cost to government. He did it without tremendous cost and I thank that man every day! I thank Sam Basdeo for the work that he did. And he was qualified too.

The Health Services, as I said in Finance Committee the other day, Madam Speaker, needs a new plan. I emphasize, sometimes I sympathize, with the current Minister. But we were promised a plan by the PPM. And we do thank the Minister for his efforts. However, when there is no medicine to immunize babies that are six months old from November 2007, we are no better off than we were in 2005 in some areas. So, perhaps the Minister will check on that for me.

Madam Speaker, in tourism—Lord Haw-Haw is not here this morning—but the Minister thought that he only had to smear me, as he did, and that there would be a great big party. But his baseless allegations which he took to Desmond Seales, he and the Minister of Education together, have been shown to be just that. The Commission of Enquiry bit by bit proved him to be a scoundrel for what he did, who is not yet punished. However, I trust that he will not escape his deserved punishment, Madam Speaker. Meanwhile, tourism has fallen behind even while our competitors have moved ahead.

The Minister seems to be hanging his hat on European travel to the Cayman Islands. He talks much about it. However, these numbers cannot be significant at the moment. We are glad for any increase; but neither is the future potential being truly planned for. These types of visitors desire more all-inclusive resorts that are lacking in these Islands at the moment. And two that existed—Beach Club and Spanish Bay Reef—are moving to something else.

Additionally Madam Speaker . . . and I have not heard about any new ones, maybe there are others, but they are for the more prominent ones. Additionally, the air lift presents a real and tangible constraint in attracting European visitors to these Islands. The lack of, and no future plans for, an extended runway severely limits the flight from Europe. This leaves us with the British Airways via the Bahamas.

These 300-odd seats are shared between the Bahamas and Cayman with the larger percentage going to the Bahamas. And what we are getting is a tremendous flow of people on work permits who are coming through London. Not all of them, some are visiting friends and family.

Madam Speaker, an additional short- to medium-term influencing factor is the increased value of the Euro against the Dollar making the United States a more attractive vacation alternative.

The cruise industry is not doing good and the people who work the cruise industry are not doing good either. I hope, I trust and pray that when the new plan for docking is complete that those who depend on the cruise sector—that is, cruise tour operators and taxi operators . . . and from what I hear those who own duty free stores have cause for concern. And if they believe that Cuba is just going to stay in the doldrums forever they are making a big mistake. All we have to do, as he said, is to look at CNN—look at the papers and we can see how they are being permitted to buy technology.

The many ports that Cuba . . . and cruise taking a beating from one of its favourite destinations, the Cayman Islands. That cruise business will look at Cuba and they are going to look more at Europe for the summer, Madam Speaker.

So, Madam Speaker, they can have a party. They can prance up on the street; they can dance up a storm. But I can tell you that the Cayman Islands are in for a rough time, rougher than we are having it today and that is not good.

Madam Speaker, the PPM took over power in May 2005. As I said, they took power after the UDP had led for 2 years and 10 months before the hurricane hit us. And nothing was normal after that. The truth is that the Leader of Government Business, the PPM, has had no real adversity to face outside of the problems arising from their own mismanagement.

Madam Speaker, he did not have international pressure we had—OECD, SARS, Foot and Mouth Disease—affecting tourism and affecting our finance industry. They did not have the problems with the EU Tax Savings Initiative. They did not have any of those things to deal with. No international pressure on them.

People only have to think back to the various problems this country had to face when George McCarthy was Financial Secretary in the last two years and just as the present Financial Secretary came into that post. If they think that we did not have a rough time . . . and look at the many things we got done, and look at the money we left in the Treasury.

Madam Speaker, “a Government in the Sunshine”, he says, came to power in May 2005. Its Leader of Government Business, as we have heard in his budget speech, has endowed himself with some sort of magical powers. As the country will recall, the UDP rescued the country in 2001 after the Leader was in power for a year, during which time the country suffered a serious economic decline after 9/11. But as a result of his lack of leadership, lack of foresight and lack of policies, Madam Speaker, as the records will show. The UDP came to the rescue. The country faced a serious economic crisis. The sound policies and good management of the UDP created a vibrant economic environment which resulted in full employment; Caymanians creating their own business, and enjoying the benefits which sound economic had brought to the country.

Madam Speaker, as the records of Hansard will show, our Honourable magical Leader continued to harp on his song the other day which misled the people into believing the country was mismanaged and that the United Democratic Party was corrupt.

Just to assure that he does not include ECLAC personnel of the United Nations in his corruption theme in efforts to mislead the country, I would like to quote from their report which was done for and widely published in the Cayman Islands in December 2004 after the hurricane.

Madam Speaker, the ECLAC shows close to $4 billion damage done here. The ECLAC Report shows also that at the end of 2001, the GDP was $1,482,000,000. In 2004, prior to Ivan, we had worked hard. The GDP increased to $1,710,000,000 an increase of over 15 per cent. Total government revenues in 2001 were in excess of $285 million. The country had a deficit of over $31 million. That is for the benefit of the magical Leader of Government Business.

An amount of money which the government has spent in excess of what it made in revenues, and no telling himself that things were good in 2001 would change this fact then or today. He cannot change that. He can come and tell the people, he can go anywhere and tell them what he told them. He had to borrow. He had to borrow to fund recurrent expenditure.

Just prior to Ivan, government revenues had grown to $342 million, an increase of 8.9 per cent. Madam Speaker, remarkably, the estimated surplus, according to the United Nations report pre-hurricane Ivan, grew to over $24 million, a net change of over $55 million.

Unemployment in 2001, during his leadership, was 7.5 per cent and growing. And under the UDP unemployment was reduced pre Ivan, September 2004, to 3.9 per cent. That took planning. It took hard work. Maybe at that time I danced a little, but I worked. I worked against tremendous odds. I worked against people who did not support us, I worked against international pressures. I worked against an Opposition that was unrelenting—opposed everything, even the suspension of Standing Orders. They held us up for an hour debating so that they could come and tell the people that we weren't doing anything, that we were corrupt, and the place was going to pieces because he was so wrought-up with anger that he was not the leader at the time.

The Leader of Government Business still insists on getting up in this honourable House in an effort to mislead the people in his normal fashion of painting the UDP as a government who had no fiscal policies and poor governance policies. That is what he said.

Madam Speaker, we spent after the hurricane something (I believe if I am correct) close to $50 million of government money between September and April or May (whenever the election was 2005) extra on the hurricane. I think I am quoting right. Maybe that figure is a little bit under, but I believe it was either close to $50 [million] or between $40 million and $50 million.

We had worked hard to help people in this country, Madam Speaker. An amount budgeted and spent by government the actual work being overseen by district committees who were government employees at least in most of the districts, in the period from September 2004 to 30 April 2005 was $3.2 million. An amount paid over to the Cayman Islands Development Bank to effect housing recovery grants to those in need during the period September 2004 to 30 April 2005 was $7.5 million for a total of $10.7 million.

I do not have the time to go through all the debate because I only have two hours. It is not the old days where I could talk for days! I do have other things I need to talk about. But, Madam Speaker, it really galls me—it does!—to have to listen to somebody who didn't do anything come in and tell you that you did nothing after all that was done.

I said so then, I say so now: If he had been the leader of government we would still be getting committees to tell us how to pull the CUC wires out of the road!

The audacity of him to say nothing was done in reconstruction. We could not get everything done. But plans were laid, even to the very roads that I congratulated the Minister on. Plans were laid for it and work started. Roundabouts built. Linford Pierson Highway built. Hyatt Roundabout built going north, or northwest. And they say nothing was done.

Everyone on that side—every one of them—believes that this is still 2005 and they are going to crush McKeever into the ground, because it's him they need to kill. They need to prove to the world that he is such a bad person. And they continue to do so. But bit by bit it's being unraveled and the truth is coming to the forefront bit by bit.

[With] all that we spent, Madam Speaker, we still ended up with over $80 million in government accounts—and we weren't doing anything?

Now, what have we done? No misleading the public can change what was accomplished in that time, and people now recognize it. Thank God people now recognize it.

The Hansards of this House will show, Madam Speaker, that I indicated in the first budget after the PPM came to power and each and every speech thereafter that the PPM policies were going to cause a severe economic slowdown in this country, and that they would put us in trouble financially. The majority of the business generated by the financial industry—which, Madam Speaker, is the real eco-conomic benefit derived from that business—would be redirected outside of Cayman, that the change of immigration policy and result would affect that industry and Caymanians in a negative manner and result in not more jobs for Caymanians, as the PPM misled people to believe, but less jobs of a more menial nature. I told them so.

Is that not happening?

I think he is recognizing so now too according to what he said.

Madam Speaker I am horribly concerned that despite all of the technical resources of the Government and the forewarning given by the Opposition that the Government has only now found it appropriate to reconsider its borrowing and expenditure. They have technical advice, and all they could say when I warned them was that I was making fun or insulting that technical advice to civil servants because you see they think that that can still get their votes. But the civil servants have sense. They understand what is going on. They are carrying out their duty, but they understand, they see. Some of them are saying so too.

In February of this year, I sponsored a Private Member's Motion calling for the Government to reconsider and reduce the level of capital spending and borrowing because of my concerns over the global economic downturn. The Leader of Government Business responded in his usual fashion on behalf of the Government by saying that I was insulting civil servants. And I quote also, "Not even on the kindest of mornings could the Government accept the motion." That's him.

The intent of that motion was pure and intended to protect the interests of the Caymanian people who are exposed to an unprecedented level of public debt projected to be over $658 million in two years. However, they come back to that one too and say, 'Oh, we didn't say that there was not going to be $600 million; we were saying it was not central government.'

Oh yeah?

What we said was that public debt and government entities would be close to $700 [million]. However, the PPM Government arrogantly side-tracked the motion and continued to push ahead with capital projects promised. Spend, spend, spend! All the while dancing up a storm on the street having a good time. Big party! Yes, spend!

Don't go yet! Come back because I have something for you to answer!

He said the Government would not be distracted from doing what was needed in terms of capital projects. With such blatant information at their disposal, and the reality of a slowdown confronting them face on, their persistence to continue to commit this country to more and more debt and capital expenditure must have some other motivating factors from improving the quality of life for the Caymanian people. They talk about contracts and what the UDP did? And how they got a contract. I am hoping the two geniuses are trying to find out what is going on in these contracts. It might suggest that promises were made to friends and supporters who would benefit from the capital works which would, in turn, benefit their campaign in May 2009.

Madam Speaker, this or that sort of blurring of the line between politics and prudent decisions has characterized the PPM Administration and the reason why I brought the Anti-Corruption Motion to the honourable House—which they also defeated . . . but they are going to get some of it.

The PPM Government has headed towards bringing back financing reforms before the next election. This is more political rhetoric aimed at providing a red herring to distract from their unadulterated relationships and deals that are aimed at enriching a few at the cost of the country—the same thing that they blamed the UDP and accused the UDP of. Humph!

The Leader of Government Business employs tactics, Madam Speaker . . . and I have watched and listened to him because he had some of his friends in the Assembly that day that enjoyed it. They were going to town on it. Tactics normally associated around bar rooms and domino tables where they believe they can talk things into reality and bluff their way out of a difficult situation rather than provide constructive solutions.

In his address he attempts to deal with the economy, suggesting that not accepting the reality and developing strategic solutions he prefers to talk positive about the economy in the hopes that this will cure the economic woes experienced by so many people. If you do not think there is a recession, there will not be a recession.

Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman (who is a good businessman), if you do not think there is a recession there will not be a recession? Ha! Ha, ha!

Today, Madam Speaker, the business community is feeling the effects of the poor policies instituted by the PPM. Many jobs once done in the Cayman Islands and which generated benefits to our country, from rental of houses, purchasing of apartments and purchasing and fixing of motor cars, purchasing of goods from shops and suppliers, eating in our restaurants, et cetera, are now being done in developed countries. Large developed countries such as Canada, Ireland, Singapore and Hong Kong are actively encouraging, welcoming and giving special incentives to professional and semi-professional people who once worked in our Islands to move to their jurisdictions and bring the work with them.

And who is suffering? And who is going to suffer? All of those young professionals who they made believe things were so terrible that they would not be getting anything! Making them believe, like Manley did back in the 70s. 'See those houses up there on the Hill? They're going to be yours soon.' Be yours? Yeah? And that is what they did. 'See those jobs that those people got? McKeeva's giving it all to them

Yeah! We need a change. Yeah! A Government you can trust. Oh yeah? A Government you can trust? Yeah—trust to do the wrong thing!

You're shaking your head?

Madam Speaker, I do not forget it and the people do not forget it, because in spite of them talking about help being on the way, the help that has come was to help the Caymanian people's business go out. The help that came was to help good civil servants be retired or pushed out, and other people in government entities being pushed out. The help that has come has seen a reduction in the good living standards of Caymanians. The help that has come has seen . . . Madam Speaker, people and business leaving our shores. Now they want to talk about other things. But there has been too little too late by this PPM Administration. In fact, that's the title of my budget debate: "Too little—Too late."

The business community is reeling. And the ones that are going to suffer . . . we have not seen it yet, because they are productive. If you look at them you see that they are predicting (the Government, that is) that next year could be worse if they look at the GDP.

Madam Speaker, those countries I mentioned understand the economic benefits to their countries while the PPM is actively encouraging businesses, by their poor policies and their anti-business rhetoric about Caymanians do not like foreigners, to relocate the benefits of our financial industry elsewhere. The effect of these policies is just beginning to be felt. And the economic decline caused by them is affecting Caymanians and devastating our lives.

Madam Speaker, as you have heard, our newly found magician now waves his magic wand to change these poor policies to try and encourage businesses, he claims—which he has driven out—to return to the Island and new business to locate here. As I said, unfortunately this is too little too late, even as they produce an election budget. And as they say here in the West Indies, once bitten, twice shy.

Today our people are enduring the worst economic times in the history of this country. When you go to stores, Madam Speaker, you can hear people walking around saying, 'but this price wasn't that last week.' And 'Boy, I don't think I can go any further because my money already spent.' Listen! They are out of touch with the people that they claim put them in.

Our people are finding it hard to buy food, to pay for electricity, pay their loans, even with the reduction caused by the US in loans and interest rates. There is a problem making ends meet on a day to day basis here in these Islands and it is becoming a very, very serious problem. By the end of this year, the suffering of our people brought about by the PPM policies will be much worse than it is today, in spite of what the Leader of Government Business says about Caymanians doing better today.

In Finance Committee recently it was disclosed that the number of families who require weekly vouchers to feed themselves increased from 400-plus in 2006 to 700-plus in 2007—an increase of nearly 100 per cent. And this figure you can believe has no significance to the many hundreds more who are in desperate need of help and who Social Services has no money to assist and who sometimes do not even go to Social Services.

This, Madam Speaker, is the PPM's example of the best off that Cayman has ever been? Maybe, Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business was referring to his close friends or partners, or those who just received all the lucrative government contracts.

Revenues—as I predicted—are falling significantly. And at the same time Government borrowing and expenditures are increasing at a significant rate. Madam Speaker, forecasted debt, as I said, is close to $700 million. Maybe it is less. I have no doubt though, as the public has been told that the additions and changes to the large building projects have caused the public debt to be close to US$1 billion.

Let us assume that there are 20,000 Caymanians. This equates to every man, woman and child owing US$50,000, not including interest. But according to the fiscal management policy and philosophy of the Leader of Government Business if we think we do not owe money, then we do not owe money.

Mr. Second [Elected] Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, you surely do not believe that. You know that when you owe money, you owe money. And when your income is falling you are in bad problems. You know that as a businessman. And the Minister of Health knows so too.

As the Hansards will show, as recently as February this year I warned the Government that their policies together with the weakening world economy and their failure to have effective representation in Washington, the closure of the Investment Bureau overseas in Hong Kong and Dubai, would severely affect the Cayman Islands. The evidence is now before us in this House today. Madam Speaker, let them go back and read the Hansards.

Now, today, they want the Sharia funds after London has licensed five Sharia banks and is in the process of licensing more. But the Honourable Minister who took the papers shut down the process to open the Investment Bureau and Friends of Cayman offices in Hong Kong and Dubai. He is obviously more intelligent than the financial persons in London who have aggressively tried to attract business from these countries.

Madam Speaker, this is the PPM's vision for securing the future for our people and generating economic activity to repay our debt.

The PPM . . . Madam Speaker, can I have a break?

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11.37 am*Proceedings resumed at 11.53 am

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, thank you very much.

When we took the break I was making the point on the troubling loans and borrowings by the Government. The PPM has ridiculed us and said that we had no solutions and that there existed mismanagement in our administration. As I said, when I brought a motion here in February and begged in the interest of our people for them to exercise fiscal restraint, that is what he told us.

But what is happening today? Even His Excellency the Governor, whom they forced to exercise his special powers in order to pay for a commission of enquiry into their own political corruption, has sounded the warning and is encouraging the PPM to exercise fiscal restraint and discipline in this, his latest, Throne Speech. But so, the Chamber of Commerce chastised them.

Madam Speaker, these Islands are now facing a very serious economic crisis as a result of the poor policies of the PPM. I told them their policies were divergent. You cannot close down businesses; you cannot create bad atmosphere and want to do things they claim they want to do because you are not going to have the revenue. So, as I said, they were divergent.

Those who believed it was wise to change the exemptions for professional and semi-professional persons have engineered the exportation of the main engines of our GDP. It will take many years for us to recover from the bust which has been imposed on us by the Government that you can trust.

Sound economic policies which encouraged the return of business and establishment of new businesses, the reinstatement of trust and working relationships which existed prior to the election of the PPM between the private sector and the government is an essential ingredient in re-establishing a sound economic foundation and creating a future for our young people. No country . . . let me repeat to them outside.

I know what they are going to get up after me and say, so let me repeat then: No country the size of Cayman can expect to maintain one of the world's largest financial centres and a vibrant tourism sector without professional and skilled persons. Those who have been misled to believe that this is possible by the PPM are beginning to see devastating results. It will take similar sound economic policies and careful planning to get us out of this serious situation which has been created by the PPM. We are fast losing our leadership role in the main generators of economic activity, the financial and tourism industries.

Madam Speaker, in addition to creating as many problems and red tape as possible, which has severely impacted young and old Caymanian businesses the other sector of our economy, the tourism industry, as I said, is suffering. And, Madam Speaker, where do we go from here? Because the needs of our people do not get less, they get more each day. The need to run the country becomes more each day.

The expansion of the airport in its current location in my opinion is a mistake. I had that opinion when we were the government. I still do. In order to meet the challenges and the changing market conditions of our tourist industry with the expected growth from Europe and Asia and other jurisdictions, which are a significant distance from the Cayman Islands, we need a state of the art airport for the future which should be located elsewhere.

What sense does it make for us to put sixty to a hundred million dollars in an area that we know if a surge comes it will be under six feet of water? This is what the ECLAC Report told us. This is what the United Nations Report told us. And we should not need any warnings from outside after experiencing what we did in Ivan. The present airport should be reserved and maintained to provide service to the increased private sector business that we want because that is the high end tourist, and that is what we are trying to get.

We should want to see 100 private planes there because it means big money is coming into the country and that trickles down. It should be left for cargo deliveries. And as I said before, turn it into a centre for the courier services such as DHL, UPS, FedEx, and so on, a transfer centre for this region.

Let me quote what I said in 2007: “We should know that by now—politics or no politics—creating solid, new revenue. We do not know. We do not know what vagaries will hit our finance and tourism base. We do not know!” [2007/8 Official Hansard Report, p.27]

I said that in 2007, and look where we are today. Look at where we are with no end in sight of the problems of the world economy.

We know that we have been challenged, and challenged and challenged. Whether it will be a hurricane that destroys the Seven Mile Beach, South Sound or George Town—God forbid if anything like that were to happen—or, an international issue that affects global finance, such as we are benefitting and experiencing good revenue from today . . . What if something worse happens? I said that in 2004, I said so in 2006, I said so in 2007. I do not blame this Government for that, but I want to lay on the Table of this House the “Crisis Readiness Programme” that I outlined in 2003/4. I do not blame this Government; I blame some other people in the top brass of the Civil Service who rejected this when I took it to Cabinet. But I did end it up by saying, Madam Speaker, “We pray to God that we never have such a disaster, but we must be ready with an alternative in the event we find ourselves in such a predicament.” That dealt with being ready for a crisis.

I will lay that on the Table of this House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

[Crisis Readiness Programme tabled]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, they would want to call me fool-fool. They would like to make people believe that. But I know what it takes to make the Cayman Islands tick. I know business. I understand it. And I know when this country needs to do something, and thank God that He has given me the ability to sense when danger is close by. I have always had that ability. He has always taken good care of me simply because I was raised without a father. So I had to have that. And I grew up in a war zone. So I had to have that ability.

The Speaker: Where was that?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: My plans, Madam Speaker, to have a new airport built in the east, to build a sheltered and safe harbour for shipping and cargo, a transshipment base and trade centre with a sheltered facility for mega yachts, [which] would definitely have given this country a new economic base, along with the investment bureaus in Dubai and Hong Kong and (the Friends of Cayman) with one of the Princes heading it up for us, where we would ensure, and we could ensure Caymanians benefitted, and we would have created a strong third leg to our economy that it needs to get the revenue. It is good strategic planning.

Now that we are going to move on to some of those areas we should not make those mistakes. A harbour in George Town, a port in George Town is going to curtail this country for ever and aye. Madam Speaker, I warn them again. Sounds good to get it, but putting that cargo port in George Town does not work. That's my opinion.

Nevertheless, whatever they want to say, those plans that I proposed are the right thing to do for this country to have a safe harbour. We need a safe harbour. If you put one here it is not going to have it. This country, we know, has the safest harbour in the Caribbean that I know, the North Sound. But nobody is going to touch it. We do not want that. So we should create one. We know that one does not exist out here in George Town. We know the problems that we have. Creating one in the east with 35 or 50 acres, one of the cruise ships could go sometimes when the weather is bad on this side. The people would still get a good cruise visit.

I also proposed a small oil refinery, Madam Speaker, and they scandalized me for that too. But they must have plans. You must have plans for the future. A leader must have plans. Never mind about who is going to knock it down and who is going to say you're crooked and all this. Let them say that! Can you imagine, had we been able to develop a small oil refinery the country would have been receiving tremendous new revenues from the royalty.

They say Cayman Airways bill is $14.4 million: that would be practically nothing. CUC bill would be a whole lot less. In fact, practically nothing. They say the fuel factor is 14.4 cents per kilowatt. The gas bill at the gas stations would be a whole lot less.

Oil refineries, Madam Speaker, do not have to be what they were in the 40s and 30s when they began those things. You go and you look at them and you see them, they sparkle like the silver you have in your kitchen. One is right in Spain, close to a resort, Right along side of a resort.

But you must have vision. You must be willing to take those chances. You must be willing to be cussed. You must be willing to sometimes lie in bed at night when you know you are right and people say you are crooked. You must be willing to do that.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, whatever you want to call it—gambling or vision or ambition, whatever you want. The fact is, it would do good for this country. That's how I feel about it. You have to have plans.

Madam Speaker, we would be in a better position today in times of an oil crisis. However, the PPM did everything to stop, to destroy the chances of the country. What do we have today?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: It is so true that where there is no vision the people perish.

Madam Speaker, I know what the Minister said about us in Cayman Brac about we did not do anything for Cayman Brac. According to him, we did not embrace Cayman Brac. Well I was not accustomed to going to Cayman Brac as often as he does. But I tell you what, I am proud of the efforts that we made for Cayman Brac. The things that we had to do to make the Sister Islands work. And I just did not take supporters, Madam Speaker, because the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman I asked him to work with us, and we with him, to create better opportunity for Cayman Brac. And plans were laid. And things were done. And how can the now Leader of Government Business say that we did not do anything? How can he say that? In all honesty, how can he?

- We repaved Cayman Brac airport runway and we paved Little Cayman's landing strip.
- When it came to roads we paved the Song Bird and Major Donald roads.

- We completed and opened the West End Post Office.
- Even to Mr. Scott's pier—he, I believe warrants assistance and has some kind of plan that should be looked at—we allowed him, although there was opposition from DoE on it, we extended Cemetery Pier.
- We built the computer lab at the West End Primary.
- We appointed the first Cayman Bracker as a sports instructor.
- We rebuilt Aston Ruddy Centre as a category 5 hurricane shelter – completely rebuilt it and strengthened it.
- We rebuilt the Cayman Brac dock.
- We supported the development and launch of Lost City of Atlantis for dive tourism. No one can say that is not a good thing.
- We held the first agricultural fair in Cayman Brac.
- We supported the construction of the Cayman Brac Seamen's Centre.
- We developed the new express service for the Sister Islands. And they went ahead and bought two planes – I think they bought them. I do not even know that, or so they said.

And Madam Speaker, this new plan that it seems the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman wanted—he knew that information before. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman knew that if you put in the Dash-8 or the ATR, you have to expand the airport in Little Cayman because you could not afford to run two different types of service. That is not new. And it is not new today. But that is just how disingenuous, that is how bad that little fellow is!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: [replies] Not here day! Don't know where he is! Gallivanting somewhere about! That's just how awful it is!

Everything that was done . . . and I see it. Even the Batabano that we supported, they want no reference to that.

Mm-hmm. We never did anything! Nothing!

[inaudible]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I used to have my dance. I used to like to dance. I danced for hours.

[inaudible]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, I can't play dominoes. But I danced. I had a good time!

[inaudible]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: But I am past that. I dance for the Lord today. Dance for the Lord. Had enough of that! Been there, done that!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, done nothing for Cayman Brac?

All those things I named out plus all the other assistance given such as the record number of scholarships for Cayman Brac children. And individuals who are now working in Cayman Brac who could not get anywhere because of likes and dislikes in the service, we gave them the opportunity.

And do not let me talk about roads because I have a history and knowledge about Cayman Brac roads and what obtained. We did a lot of that and we ensured that the poor people up on the eastern end were taken care of all the way up to Spot Bay!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Not for special friends and special family. Do you hear what I say?

But how dare this man come and tell us that we did not do anything for Cayman Brac? Madam Speaker, even to housing, blatantly taking credit for my housing plan—the Guaranteed Housing Plan. Read how he says it. What's the difference? Can I ask, what's the difference?

The applications in the past used to be processed by the banks and today the application is processed by the National Housing Council (Authority or Board or whatever it is). That seems to be the only change. The programme was there. Mortgages are much more available today. Private people get the same 1 per cent above prime. So, what is he talking about?

The truth is that he has done nothing about housing. The truth is that we left $14.5 million guaranteed in a bond from Scotiabank and that Member has sat back and done nothing for the vast majority of people in this country—$14.5 million approved! And he dares get up here and say we had no plan and we didn't do anything? That was done in the last days of our administration.

What are you doing about it? is what I want to find out. People are in need of housing and if he is true, as he says he is, about how people look at the country and feel about the country . . . that is why, Madam Speaker, we did something about it. I am not saying that the plan that was done was the best, because I would have liked to have seen blocks. But I am only one person. However, some people, you must admit, got homes who would never have gotten a home.

But what are you doing for three years? [Why] are you trying to sell the piece of property down on North Sound or Eastern Avenue for little or nothing! And you got a $14 million bond that you could utilize! You want to put a debt on this country that is worthwhile and makes it worthwhile for this country to spend revenue on? Do that for the people of this country who have no housing.

I call upon Government to utilize it, to do something, to get the money to do something real tangible for this country about housing. And you have the audacity to tell us that [we had] no plans and that we did nothing for the people of this country when we left instruments in place that you could utilize and until now you haven't done anything about it except to sleep and doze and dance up in the middle of George Town street!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: You can tell. I expect, Madam Speaker, that he will get up behind me to try to counteract everything that I have said. But the facts are the facts. The facts are the facts!

And, Madam Speaker, I certainly cannot deal with all the untruths and misleading information in the statement by the Leader of Government Business. But what I can say is this: That his statement is totally misleading and not based on truth.

They brag about a Government you can trust. Madam Speaker, you can put as much faith as you want in a crocodile. But it doesn't make any difference. Be you sure he is going to try and eat you.

In dealing with the matter about them being forthright, let me give you a few areas where they have not been forthright and deliberately so:

1) The Speaker. From the day they took office in 2005 she was supposed to be temporary. The longest period of 18 months to be in that post. She is still there today.

2) The Constitution. The same period, within 18 months the Constitution would be changed because, he said he (and I quote), "wanted the good people of North Side to have a Minister." That is still not so today.

3) He gave an assurance that every Member of the House would be involved in the PR process of the Secretariat. Yeah. Yeah? No! No!

4) They said new schools would be built by the end of their term. We built Prospect Primary. What have they done?

5) The Public Accounts Committee. That was temporary too. And every one can see through shenanigans and everyone knows the reason why one of his Members is still the Chairman.

So nothing gets done on the PPM contract. Nothing gets done on the PPM project. Nothing gets done on the PPM expenditure and other things while making an excuse that they have to look at the previous government expenditure.

Oh yeah? Parliament does not work that way.

6) They told us that England would shove a Constitution down our throats. England said, no way.

7) He said they are the Government you can trust and they promised that if any one of their people were found guilty of wrongdoing they would not sit in Cabinet. The Commission of Enquiry proved skulduggery and he is still sitting in Cabinet, thumbing his nose at them and at us.

Madam Speaker, these are but a few various points. A few that clearly show they are definitely the Government you cannot trust. And no matter what their leader says, and extension cords who get up after I sit down and say, they can't be trusted.

Are we better off today? No. According to the Leader of Government Business crime is down. But that is not so either. He was comparing our time in office as against theirs. The record shows from statistics that the rate of crime is up as of December last year as compared to 2005 when we left. The number of crimes is up.

Serious crime exists today. And for him to try to persuade people that it is better today than in 2005—when the whole Island is so worried about the state of affairs—is a further attempt to mislead the public.

At the end of 2005, there were 2,922 crimes reported. At the end of 2007, there were 3,063 crimes committed. And this is after, according to them, they were spending a whole lot more than us, some $49 million in three years. Oh yeah?

Once again, as they have been doing, the Leader of Government Business made misleading and untrue allegations.

We spoke about the Constitution, but we have enough time to deal with that and I do not have time to deal with it today. But he can say what he likes. All we are saying is that if we get a Constitution we must get one that everybody is satisfied with. I would like to see the referendum done after we come back from England. Bottom line. And we have in our discussion paper—we have asked a lot of questions that are not in theirs, and we are trying to get those answers so we can better know what the people of this country want.

If they want good for this country they would not rush anything between now and the election or after we come back from England if we go there to discuss any changes. That's when the constitution [sic] should be held. But as I said, I have other things—

The Speaker: Referendum.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: When the referendum should be held, yes.

Madam Speaker, he slammed us hard making unjust accusations about us. I have dealt with his baseless accusations about plans and performance. But let me deal with his accusation about corruption in government because he flings that word around and they have been doing it, and as I said the purpose of them doing it is to make people believe that I am so bad that I cannot be trusted but they can be trusted. That was their theme and they are still hanging on to it.

I have had to put up with their baseless accusations. And the Commission of Enquiry has cleared up and spoken to who was doing wrong and where wrongdoing was done. We must now wait on the PAC report, but I already see the political shenanigans being played. But that's being cleared up too.

And they said that more money was spent? Yes, more money was spent to get double the size of the building. Yes, more money was spent to create an acre of land out in 18 feet of water. Yes, money was spent to give us cement instead of asphalt.

So, when that is done let us wait to see what the report will be. Maybe it will not be McKeeva that needs to get attacked. Maybe it is somebody else. And I hope that they have the guts and the wherewithal to do it where they were misled.

I am prepared to wait until the Committee completes its examination of the report. And I will be going before the Committee. But enough has come to clear the air. The people . . . and that is where you are tried. No matter what they write down in the majority, it is the court of public opinion.

But the Leader of Government Business pushes ahead with his corruption accusations because he knows if he can continue to make people believe his accusations then he has a better chance of keeping his post. Surely he knows performance will not allow him to. Performance will not allow him to.

The police review must soon be published too because it is completed.

I have never been afraid of anything when I have not done any wrong.

And they said there wasn't anything new. No, no, no. Auditor General's Report? They still come here and accuse us of . . . making accusations on the street to tell people in the House that we are corrupt. We've done no wrong. And if you have clean hands and you have a pure heart then there is nothing to worry about. And that police report must soon be published. But I know what I was told, and it is not McKeeva that they have any wrongdoing on. So let them come and say so to the public quickly.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I do not know what you are grumbling about, but if you have something to say, be upstanding and say it. If you have an interruption to make, I will sit down.

I have told the Leader of Government Business before—and it is he who I will deal with now—that he is not innocent. He is not innocent Abigail. The last time I saw her, she didn't look like him.

I know, Madam Speaker, all governments up to now have made far-reaching efforts to build infrastructure of a just and lawful society; that there was a free press and a civil society that became active; that there has been open and fair elections to these Islands; and that the legal and regulatory institutions to make government accountable before the law and before the people of these Islands, and government has abided by it. Governments also created a healthy environment for investment. Yet they continue to try and drag us down about corruption?

They are good at lying and the world has proven it.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, would you please stop using the word "lying"? I have ruled that it is unparliamentary, so please—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I agree.

But it is the truth! They are lying.

But for the Leader of Government Business to come making those accusations, ought he not to remember that the only time the Auditor General named any elected Member for wrongdoing was him—his failure to pay $22,000 to the Water Authority for his housing development project.

Ought he not to remember too that he had all of the business from GIS without a tender for long years? Anyone else doing that, it would be corruption!

Ought he not to remember too that he benefited from catering for CAL with no tender also?

The people ought to know too about the roads that are being built in Cayman Brac going to their property.

I've asked this question before. What about the pieces of land given for roads at a certain subdivision? And was the deal with the affidavits by his political assistant forced upon the Lands and Survey Department? Was that good governance? Where did it come in? Other people couldn't get it done.

For far too long this man, Madam Speaker, has been allowed . . . he did so with Truman, but he's not going to do so with McKeeva Bush and get away with it. No time! [He] has been allowed to do what he did here Friday and get away with it when he himself is one of the richest legislators that we have. Some declared businesses and some not declared.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, please do not go down that road unless you have proof that the Honourable Leader of Government Business has not declared his businesses.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Mm-hmm. You should have stopped him Friday when he was making those accusations. I just want to say that he is not lily white and the day you have any corruption on this Member, bring it here and table it.

I can be blamed for making some small business people get business, but I said so to the Cabinet. I said so to the public on the radio. I said so in this House. It was not done in a crooked way. The Boards did what they had to do. It was declared to the world for all to know who wanted to know or to criticize it.

I was elected by the people of this country to help them and not the big conglomerates who are owned by friends and frien-frien and family. Yes, they must get business too. But they shouldn't get it over the small business all the time. So I can be blamed for that.

Unlike the Leader of Government Business, any business interest that I have, or have had during my tenure in this House, has been dealt with in accordance to the rules of this House and placed in the Members' Register of Interests and opened for public scrutiny. Can they say the same?

I am waiting because proof exists.

I have always adhered Madam Speaker, always, to the philosophy of "country before self." Let them say what they want. If they think that I did not accomplish anything, I would like to table this. Don't blame me for this picture, Madam Speaker, that's not me who put that there. But I would like to table it because it is a profiling of some of the things that I accomplished in this country. I lay it on the Table of this House.

And you can get a copy, Madam Speaker. Good reading.

The Speaker: [So ordered.] Honourable Leader of the Opposition, you have 17 minutes left.

[“All About McKeeva Bush” tabled]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Good.

I have done good for people where I could, Madam Speaker. The evidence of this is mountain high. My reward has always come when I get a little card from people saying thank you; or a call saying thank you very much, you helped my family; I remember how much good you've done.

Madam Speaker, I was elected to serve the people of these Islands. And from 1984 until today my record can stand scrutiny because whatever it looks like, when it is unravelled they will see that nothing wrong was done, but I tried to help somebody. So I have nothing to hide.

But it has not been an easy road these 24 years. I had made up my mind that this would be my last debate on a Throne Speech. And I am not too sure that it won't be. Only God knows that. But as far as my decision, it might be, because the truth is until there is room and ways of making people like me, who came from nowhere, feel wanted by central administration, not opposed from the top . . . and I do not worry about those who [do not] vote for you who do not like you, Madam Speaker, because they can't kill you, can't make you lose weight. But I wonder about that kind of thing. Until I see evidence of such things, then I must be concerned. I must be concerned when I am accused of corruption and when people who are counted as "privileged" do worse things and get away with it. Yes, I must be concerned.

I must also be hurt—which I am, and so are my wife and my children. And my mother, I have to shut off the radio so she can't listen to it at times.

Mr. Lynden Pindling said, "He who sets himself up to lead will be the first to be shot at." It is true. But what I do not expect is this continued tirade about corruption.

Madam Speaker, I did not get anything by taking anything from anybody and I can blatantly say so because I have not. My real estate company has done [well] off the Ritz Carlton. That is doing good for the country. Nobody is not saying so otherwise today. And every time they want to pee-pee they go down there in that bathroom!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: But, these 24 years have not been good. And it is simply because of where I come from. I know that. I know what exists in this country. And, Madam Speaker, I have been here that long! But this little boy that grew up barefoot with nothing but a floor-bed to sleep on, I say this: I have worked with the worst and the best in this House, but we have always been Caymanians together. We were never the lad or the boy from East End, or Bodden Town, or West Bay on our own.

I know what the petty likes and dislikes have been, but under this sheet of fire and the fog of battle my mission became crystal clear. And colour, religion, and background melted away, Madam Speaker. No matter who they supported, they came to my door-mouth, office or home. And they got help if I could give it. And all of us over these years fighting for the same good and praying to the same God.

But I see some things different today, Madam Speaker. I see some things existing today. That's why we put in our Discussion Paper whether the people want the party system or whether they want this kind of confrontational government to continue. And I hope to get a fair hearing on it, because I see something different today. I see something different today! And as the current Leader of the Opposition, I do believe that we all are in the same boat. Not all on our own, but Caymanians together.

I believe that no matter what our differences, Madam Speaker, Caymanians all over these Islands want pretty much the same things in life. We want to believe there is more we can do about the problems facing these Islands, not less. And we want the opportunity to build a better life. Not more barriers to prosperity. Prosperity for all.

This Government is on the wrong road.

Someone said, Madam Speaker, that our lives may have different stories, our struggles leave different kinds of scars, and our triumphs tell different tales. But the things we believe are the values our parents taught us and lessons we have learned, that opportunity must be shared, that responsibility brings strength and trust requires truth, that faith is a comfort and service a blessing.

I believe that when we are united in a good cause, nothing in the world can stop us as Caymanians from doing good. There is nothing we cannot do. Our forefathers, brothers and sons, and grandfathers proved it when they went out on the biggest ships in the world and became mess men up to engineers, and piloted those ships and became so when they came from a poor little byway shop, to one of the largest conglomerates in the country. I believe that we can all move ahead and become something—but it is not for one or two.

How much time do I have left, Madam Speaker?

The Speaker: Twelve minutes.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Good.

Madam Speaker, what I am about to say here last is about this Assembly, and you can take it how you want.

In management of the Assembly, from what I observe there is far too much upheaval. The good, long-term, staff seem to be insulted, and the Clerk, from what I have seen, is pushed around.

From what I observe and what I do know, I could never say that the Speaker of this House does not know how to be a good Speaker. I couldn't say that, because the Speaker has the necessary experience. However, from where I sit as Leader of the Opposition, she is far too friendly with her party in this House. And the Speaker is not the Clerk.

Until a new system is devised, the Clerk, the Deputy, and other senior staff must be left alone to run this Assembly. If something is wrong, then it needs to be addressed. And if the Speaker knows something is wrong it needs to be addressed at the highest level.

The job of the Speaker is to sit when the House is meeting and to run the elected business of this House according to the Standing Orders of this House. And if she needs to and cannot find any help in those Standing Orders to turn firstly to Erskine May and then the Conventions on Precedent of the House of Commons in the United Kingdom; if that fails then the theme of other Commonwealth jurisdictions. But the Speaker is not the Clerk.

This is the Legislative Assembly where government majority has no more say than the minority except in the matter of a vote or a committee of this honourable House. But not one of the Government Members, inclusive of the Speaker, should be treated as if they own this Assembly. The fact is we have had many good staff pushed around and treated shabbily since May of 2005. This House is not the fiefdom of the PPM or anyone else for that matter. There is too much strife, bickering, insulting and simply interference when there is no need for it.

We have a hardworking staff. Everyone from the Clerk to the cleaner—the Speaker included—has kept us afloat. But somebody—and I have had to write His Excellency the Governor before—but someone needs to look seriously about what is happening in this Assembly.

I will not address the Constitution, but perhaps that question needs to be asked. Do we want this House to move to an authority or a separate unit where the Speaker has full control and not the Clerk so that the defining lines are there? I don't know whether we put it in the Constitution or when we address it, but it needs to be done.

I have been here for 24 years and I have sat up in that gallery for many years before that. And I sat in the Town Hall even, I should say. And I cannot agree that what is happening today here ought to continue. There is far too much good that can be done.

I even said, Madam Speaker, that if you are not here and if we are the Government, that you could possibly be our Speaker. The present Speaker could be our Speaker because she has the knowledge. I am not going to say any other thing but that. But what obtains here . . . not all is well! Not all is well.

Madam Speaker, in one of the great hymns of encouragement, Norman McLeod (1812-1872) wrote:

*Courage, brother, do not stumble,
Though thy path be dark as night;
There's a star to guide the humble;
Trust in God and do the right.
Let the road be rough and dreary,
And its end far out of sight;
Foot it bravely; strong or weary,
Trust in God and do the right.*

*Perish policy and cunning,
Perish all that fears the light!
Whether losing, whether winning,
Trust in God and do the right,
Some will hate thee, some will love thee,
Some will flatter, some will slight;
Cease from man, and look above thee:
Trust in God, and do the right*

*Simple rule, and safest guiding,
Inward peace, and inward might,
Star upon our path abiding,
Trust in God, and do the right.
Courage, brother! do not stumble,
Though thy path be dark as night;
There's a star to guide the humble: —
Trust in God, and do the right.*

It is with these encouraging words that I entreat my fellow Caymanians not to lose courage in this season of need and uncertainty, for a good and fair God watches over all of us if we but trust Him and do what is right. He will see all wrong put right in due season. For, Oh yes! Oh yes! There will be that season. It will be that time to speak and a season to cast away. I encourage them [at] that time [to] cast away the PPM into the sea of forgetfulness never, never, never, never, to bother nor to harm us again. Amen and Amen.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30.

Proceedings suspended at 12.43 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.37 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Budget Address and Throne Speech. Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the . . . Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Thank you Madam Speaker.

I rise in this honourable House to make my contribution to the Throne Speech and 2008/9 Budget Address. But before I do, I would like to offer condolences to the Leader of Government Business on the loss of his nephew, also to Mr. and Mrs. Grant in Cayman Brac who lost a son. Please know that all of us in this honourable House have you in our thoughts and our prayers.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business, the Financial Secretary and His Excellency the Governor delivered their addresses last Wednesday. I take this opportunity to say that all of them did a good job. I commend them.

I take special note of the delivery by the Third Elected Member [sic] when he touched on the Budget and the global economic challenges.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, [that is] the Third Official Member.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Third Official Member, the Honourable Financial Secretary.

Madam Speaker, I was just saying that I pay tribute to the comments that he made and what a good job he did outlining the challenges of the global economic situation that we are in that reaches our shores. And they will continue to impact the Cayman Islands. He very ably outlined the increases in the operating expenses because of these foreign forces: the factors of the increase in oil and commodity prices which face us as a country every day.

I think the most important thing that he touched on was that after this budget was put together it remained for the country itself to have a $13.5 million surplus. After we subtracted all of our liabilities, the country is projected at 30 June 2009 to have a net worth of $5 million-plus.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Quite an error! Thank you, sir – $532 million and our debt service ratio of much less than 10 per cent, 7.9 per cent. Very simply, this financial picture meets all prudent guidelines for responsible financial management of this country, Madam Speaker.

As we waited for the Budget to be completed, we heard of the long hours and revision after revision that every department of government was tasked to look at. They were asked to take one more look and prioritize needs. They were reminded to distinguish between needs and wants. They were challenged to be good stewards of the people's money, while delivering all the necessary services to allow us to continue the success story we call the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, in my contribution today I want to explore a different topic—the national topic of cost of living and the strengthening of the middle class.

I believe that the Government is charged with the responsibility of providing access to the best medical care possible for its citizens, access to education which provides opportunities for upward mobility, enhancements to quality of life for all of its citizens. And a quality infrastructure and framework for a modern free market society to grow and prosper for each one of us to work in private/public partnerships.

So, Madam Speaker, I would like to individually look at some of the Ministries and see how the Budget touches them and some of the challenges.

First, let us look at health services. I believe the Minister responsible has stabilized the HSA and he deserves credit for this accomplishment. The Board and management team, especially the acting CEO, Ms. Lizzette Howell-Yearwood, have worked continuously to improve the HSA and deserve recognition for the hard work and improvement.

We ask: Are the health services perfect? I think we can all answer, no. They are not perfect. Do we have a feeling that they are headed in the right direction? I think that answer is, yes. As you talk to members in the community who have to use the services (as we all do) of the HSA they comment on needs, but they recognize the improvement as well.

The Budget identifies an equity investment of $8.2 million.

Honourable Financial Secretary, did I get that number right ($8.2 million)?

[inaudible reply]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: It shows the confidence that this Government has in the health services team and I wish them continued success.

Secondly, the Minister responsible for Education has brought a vision for our educational system which has full support by this government. We know that there are very few places where money can be invested in a better way. I use the word “invested”, Madam Speaker, because we are investing in the future of these Cayman Islands. We are investing in our youth, our teachers and our schools, in order to prepare students to enter the world with a diverse knowledge base which will, in turn, stimulate them to make their contribution to society by living a protective life.

If we do not invest in and prepare our youth, the blame for their failure will lie squarely on us. The opportunities have been provided, they will be in place. Our youth and adult learners must now seize these opportunities in order to receive the benefits for themselves and this country.

Madam Speaker, we should not stop there with the vision and the thought. We must take note of two other benefits from improving our school buildings. The country will gain hurricane shelters. I think it has been proven we need more of [them.] We will gain useable community space for us to bond. And as the world economy slows, the Cayman Islands will have ongoing construction to stabilize our economy. I believe the Budget, rightfully so, supports this initiative.

In the same way that the new education buildings support our economy in the short and long term, Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business understands the importance as well. He has pushed, he has worked, and he has now succeeded in the beginning of the building of the government administration building in George Town. This expansion not only shows the commitment to the country, but it improves our local labour force and allows them to work through predicted economic downturns.

It makes our civil service more efficient by improving the working conditions. And I am sure that most people have visited what we call the Glass House and they all know that the conditions need to be improved there. I believe the Civil Service deserves credit for what they have worked through, and we certainly look forward to the addition of this new office space for them.

The final point on that is a prudent decision on the part of the Leader of Government Business in owning instead of renting. While we build the building and own the building the movement will not demand rent and the country itself will benefit from building equity in those buildings and the buildings will be owned by the people.

Madam Speaker, the Minister responsible for Communications, Works and Infrastructure, must be congratulated. His success in building and improving roads, one of his initiatives, provides a better quality of life for everyone living and working in Grand Cayman.

It allows less time in traffic, more time for productivity and quicker reaction time for emergency services—some of the benefits that are provided. Add to these the fact that road access increased the value of public and private property, which in turn pays dividends through the money budgeted for his ministry this year and you have a complete picture of what improving roads has done all over Grand Cayman. And, of course it would be remiss of me if I did not add that we look forward in the short term to improved roads in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Minister responsible for Tourism has challenging responsibilities which demand money in the short term in order to fund long-term strategies for success. The Turtle Farm, as an example, is supported by this Budget as we work to fund a viable long-term solution to this Caymanian tourism attraction.

Madam Speaker, later on I will also elaborate on another success that this Ministry has had with a programme through the Cayman Islands Development Bank and the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau that has started in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman but I will keep that until I go to that area.

If you look at the Budget it touches many areas of the Islands: It touches the senior citizens' homes in North Side and East End; Summary Courts Building; Bodden Town Civic Centre; Bodden Town Emergency Response Facility; dedicated mental health facility, along with other capital projects are supported in a Budget and will show prioritization of needs in a very prudent way.

Madam Speaker, I want to take some time this afternoon to talk about fiscal responsibility because I believe in today's uncertain economic times it is incumbent upon us to prepare ourselves to weather the storm. We cannot ignore the external influences of the global economy that we live in. Instead, we need to be vigilant in our observations, thoughtful in our conclusions, and united in our actions and reactions.

There is an old saying that necessity is the mother of invention, which refers to the maxim that people will apply all their knowledge and skill to deal with the problem at hand. Of course, this requires that the problem be acknowledged. Today, I contend that we should face the challenges presented by the rising cost of oil, the downturn in the US economy and the rising cost of living as the problems at hand and embrace them as a catalyst for us to strengthen our economic resilience as a country.

You see, Madam Speaker, business is about finding solutions to problems. As we as a country identify a problem, we need to be prudent, we need to be resilient, and we need to be aware that we must look to solutions. These are not easy times; but these are times laden with opportunity. I would like to encourage every Caymanian to become part of the solution and seize the opportunity to work together to build a strong resilient financially stable community, one that gives opportunity to the middle class, one that will withstand not only the current economic pressures but also those that will surely come in other economic cycles.

There is no magic to this. It is just a common willingness to share in hard work, sacrifice, and personal responsibility required to create an economy that allows every hardworking Caymanian the opportunity to improve his quality of life. Madam Speaker, a financially resilient community requires fiscal responsibility at three levels. I will speak to each one today—public fiscal responsibility; private sector fiscal responsibility; and personal fiscal responsibility based on financial literacy.

Public fiscal responsibility is the prudence shown in the Government's Budget of a $13.5 million operating surplus, a projected net worth of $532 million, and a 7.9 per cent debt ratio.

Private sector fiscal responsibility in the private sector community. In my mind this what we have seen in action the last six months. As this slowdown appeared on the horizon we saw meetings take place. We saw meetings with the local bankers to explore how they could help. Last week we saw a meeting with the merchants. I thought the comments in the paper by Woody Foster were extremely interesting. He said that we need to bring all sectors together for a discussion—shipping and handling, wholesalers and retailers, truckers, Port Authority, to name a few.

The example of each one of those looking at the community and world economic pressures to find a way to reduce their cost and in turn reduce the price that they charge by a half per cent to 1 per cent and you multiply that times 5 and see a 3 to 5 per cent savings before it went on the shelves to be sold. This is just a simple example of the dialogue that has to be created, and the continued working through the problem of how we as a community are going to face this.

Madam Speaker, the third is the personal fiscal responsibility of financial literacy. It is what I refer to as a very important part of the Cayman Islands itself with financial literacy, and where we really are in the growth of financial literacy. Financial literacy is the ability to make informed decisions regarding the use and the management of money. It influences how people save, borrow, invest and manage their financial affairs. It affects the capacity to grow wealth and significantly affects the quality of life. It has much wider implications for the potential growth rate and stability of the country's economy. It is, Madam Speaker, a national quality that protects the financial health of its society.

In today's world it has become common practice for families and individuals to assume debt. In the not-too-distant past . . . I know that North Side is a lot like Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and I think all the Cayman Islands. We were a country that built our own homes over time as we accumulated enough money to build them. Or we waited to buy a car until we had saved the cash to buy it with. However, as we evolved that is no longer the norm in our society. Like many other societies we have become willing to buy on credit and accept debt as a normal part of our living expenses. I would contend that this growth in the housing and consumer debt makes it even more critical that Caymanians are equipped with the knowledge to manage their personal finances.

The pattern of consumption has become pervasive, but in many ways has slipped in under the radar screen. As a society we have become not only consumers of goods and services, but we have become consumers of debt. This is a point that not many people recognize. And for emphasis, I would like to say it again: As a society we have become not only consumers of goods and services, but also consumers of debt.

We understand how to shop. We understand how to shop for bargains, buy goods and services, look for the best price. The skill to evaluate the cost of the products we buy and to determine where we get the best deal is part of our everyday lives that we have become accustomed to. However, Madam Speaker, today insight into the cost of money and the skill to acquire money at the best rates and use it efficiently is something we have very little education in. I take note that our Education Minister is listening so intently to this. And I am sure it will become a big part of the programme for our schools in how they change and move toward benefitting the community itself.

The average household spends much of its hard-earned income to rent someone else's money. When we sign for a mortgage, a car loan, or a student loan, or a credit card, or store credit, we are in fact acquiring debt. We are living beyond our current income. We are agreeing to pay a company to rent their money so that we can acquire something before we have the money to buy it. So, in addition to paying for the product that we have become good at bargaining for, we are also paying for someone else's money that we are using to buy it with. And this, of course, is what we now know as interest—interest on the loan.

Madam Speaker, I want to drill down on this and take a little bit of time with specific examples and solutions because I think this is one of the key areas where we can do something about the cost of living.

A specific example would be a family that makes, let us say, $4,000 per month. Half of that $4,000 is going to go toward food, gas, insurance, utilities, medical, clothes, and entertainment. And that is the part that we know about. That is the part we can bargain for and look around. But the other half of that salary goes towards home mortgage, car loan, boat loan, credit cards, store credits. And when we explore this example the question is, What do we really have control over? How can we really lower our cost of living? What opportunity do we have as a people to lower our cost of living?

Half of our income we understand how to spend. Half of it we understand how to bargain with. We can shop every store and gas station for the best prices and, at the end of the day when going from one store to the other, finding the gas station that has the best price and the other commodities that we have to buy, we may save at the end of the month 5 per cent, or $100.

To make a significant dent to allow us to have any of that 50 per cent of our salary left at the end of the month, we simply have to not buy something. We have to do without. However, the place that common-sense shows us that we can make the biggest impact in lowering our cost of living is the other half, the half we spend to pay off debt.

Madam Speaker, if you think about lowering the interest rate that you pay on your loans and your home mortgage, an example is that if you are now paying 12 per cent and it is lowered 3 per cent, on a $200,000 loan, across the board on your debt over a 20 year period, you would save $500 per month; $6,000 per year.

While the cost of oil and commodities have skyrocketed to unprecedented levels, therefore increasing every product that is transported to our Islands and every product that requires oil, the prime rates on the world market have dropped at least 3 per cent. They have dropped significantly. I heard 5 per cent prime the other day on the radio. It is reduced to the point that with correct financial help you can reduce the monthly payments on your mortgage and other loans to the point that even with the increased cost of fuel and goods your basic cost of living can remain the same or be reduced.

Here is the simple fact as we look at how we attack this problem with an out-of-the-box thought: The only thing that I can think of on the world market that has reduced in cost is money. Oil is more expensive, rice is more expensive; everything you touch and see has gone up. But money has gone down significantly. We must take the opportunity to capture that. We must take the opportunity as a people to be involved in it.

What it really means is that each of us must look at our personal portfolio of living cost and debt and evaluate how best to finance and pay off our debt. The commonsense part is, again, let us just look at it and see what has reduced and how we take advantage of it.

You know, Madam Speaker, the point is this: Our society is not comfortable with negotiating debt. We are traders and very comfortable haggling over a price. We understand how we feel good when we get the best price. But when we go to borrow money at a bank or credit union or development bank, we do not ask for the cost of the money. We do not ask for the interest rate. All we do is we get this idea of the car we want, the boat we want, and we look straight at the person who is going to lend us the money and we say 'Can I get the loan?' You don't ask the price of it. You don't ask how many years you have to pay it back. You just want to know if you can get the loan. We are too busy with our daily business to simply take the time to understand how to negotiate this. We don't even think of it.

I believe, Madam Speaker, in the interest of my constituents and our constituents we must think outside the box and think of every opportunity. We have to give each and every Caymanian the tools to manage their personal finances. We have to empower them to control their cost of living. We need to teach personal financial management within our school curriculum. Financial literacy should be part of our national agenda.

Financial literacy is in the best interest of the country as a whole, and the creation of a financially healthy Cayman Islands is the responsibility of all—Government, the private sector and our community based organizations. It is too large a task for one group of stakeholders to achieve on their own.

Madam Speaker, this understanding of the cost of money and the impending impact of the rising cost of oil is something that I have spoken of in this honourable House before. But never has oil been at $124 per barrel. And never has interest been at 5 per cent. I think it is 2.5 [per cent] as prime in the States. So I am proud to share with you today that this is an issue that we have not just acknowledged and analysed, but one which this Government has taken action on in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I am pleased that through the Leader of Government Business and the Minister responsible for commerce laying the foundation for building financial literacy, we have seen the result in Cayman Brac through the combined efforts of the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau and the Cayman Islands Development Bank, a programme that is just being launched. A programme that is needed and well timed.

Madam Speaker, Miss Lolita Bodden-Esteban is the daughter of a well-known Cayman Brac entrepreneur, Mr. and Mrs. Alva Bodden. Lolita has been successful in her own business career and has recently moved to the Brac to manage the Cayman Brac office of the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau. One of her functions is to advise on financial matters, budgeting and business plans. This initiative of financial counselling combined with the debt consolidation programme provided through the development bank and other commercial banks is providing self-sufficiency tools that have never been offered before.

Madam Speaker, if this programme is taken advantage of, it has the potential to dramatically lower the cost of living in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. This is how simple it really is, Madam Speaker. As you look at your bills at the end of the month and you see the loans that are due to be paid, and you say to yourself, I wonder how I could actually get a better interest rate. Or, how can I get a better budget to benefit me? You feel at a loss because that has never been offered to you in a systematic way that you could take advantage of. But now, very simply, you pick up the phone and you call the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau and you ask Lolita for an appointment. You go in and you sit down and you share with her your problems of financial literacy. You share with her what you really need and how you need help with your budget to live a better and more productive life.

She analyses what can be done and basically says, Your mortgages, your loans need to be accumulated and instead of paying $500 for your car to one bank, $500 for your boat to the Credit Union and $1200 to another bank for your home mortgage, CNB, we need to look at organizing your budget to where we put all of this together. We look at your ratio of what you are allowed to have and then after that is put together we look at an interest rate that is the best possible interest rate that you have available to you. And with the cumulated debt put together and by one person or one agency (the Investment Bureau working with many people it gives them the ability to look at packaging these) it gives them the ability to have confidence in a loan officer and the bank personnel they deal with on a daily basis.

So, the individual that feels unsure of himself and does not feel he's empowered to do something with this 50 per cent of his paycheck he doesn't understand where it goes and what it is spent on, he now has a vehicle of opportunity that he can go take advantage of and at the end of the day real examples of a $200,000 mortgage being reduced to save you $500 a month. This is just an example, Madam Speaker. It is a very good programme. I am very proud that it is being launched and I am very happy to do whatever I can to support it.

The final result is not to create a society of financial experts, Madam Speaker. It is to strengthen the stability and the sustainability of our middle class and thereby our democracy. It is important to equip all of us with the knowledge base to manage our personal finances. It should be a national priority to give our citizens the ability to make informed decisions in the management of their money and in a way that it betters them as a person and as a family and strengthens our community.

I close this part of my contribution by just saying the commonsense part of looking at the one thing that has lowered in its original cost to this country—and that's money. Let us be smart enough to take advantage of it to lower our cost of living.

Madam Speaker, at this time I would like to turn to discuss the Budget items that have been presented for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Would this be a convenient time to take a break before . . .

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.16 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.40 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, continuing his debate.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Before we took the break I had just finished talking about the programme that the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau and the Cayman Islands Development Bank have put together in Cayman Brac. Just to recap, I pledged my support to Miss Lolita, complimented her and basically said that I am glad that she is there to offer assistance and I hope that she will continue to work. I wish her continued success in reducing the cost of living for all of those young people and citizens of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who come to visit her. And I encourage them to do that.

We were looking to bring some Cayman Brac people who were actually working in jobs in Cayman. She is one of the success stories, with her career here in Grand Cayman for years upon years. When the opportunity arose for basically a frontline job, but the idea of the back office initiative, she seized the opportunity and came home. I can assure you that not only her family but the whole community has welcomed her. She is a very good, positive addition to our community.

Madam Speaker, I would like to take the balance of my time to talk about my district, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Today is approximately three years into my first term as a Member of this Legislative Assembly, with the distinct honour of representing the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I would like to take the time left to look at the outcomes to look at the tangible successes that have been accomplished in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the things you can touch and feel; the things that are not plans or promises but reality, the things that every member of that community is enjoying today. And then I will move to the plans for this Budget and what will come. Now, when we say in Cayman Brac something is going to happen—based on two years ago saying a university would be in Cayman Brac, now people see that university—they believe.

The idea of creating opportunity and bringing every person in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman together on this team, on a working relationship to better the community . . . we have no time for divisiveness. We have no time to be separate in our small community. Our opportunity to go forward is to be one. That is how our forefathers were successful, that is how the community has grown up, that is how I have enjoyed it and my commitment of what I try to do on a daily basis is represent every person that is there and work hard for each individual to bring us into one group of people working for the common purpose of a better quality of life and a better place to live.

Madam Speaker, the Budget identified recurrent spending for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I view that as the top priority not only for myself but for the Government of the day. I feel quite happy to report that we have a successful recurrent budget. What that basically means is that all persons who work for the school system, public works, district administration, fire service, post office, agriculture, and any other government service, know that their jobs are funded.

Madam Speaker, they not only know that their jobs are funded in this coming Budget, they have also heard the announcement that in July they will receive a lump-sum check for a cost of living increase from last July 2007 to June 30, 2008. That check will be put in their hands to help with cost of living issues. I am very happy and proud that this Government has put this initiative forward and I look forward to the day when every one of them receives that check.

I also make mention that a large part of our retirees are veterans and seamen. I believe every one in these hallowed halls agrees that benefits have to be looked at and continue to be increased for that group. But the fact that it has been increased in this Budget, I am pleased to report and happy that they will be receiving it.

Some of the projects that have been completed over the last three years for Little Cayman and Cayman Brac . . . I will take Little Cayman first. I believe especially in today's situation of what is needed and how we have become competitive and prepare ourselves for the future, the idea of 'green' is huge on a worldwide basis. The properties and the people of Little Cayman have grabbed that initiative. The initiative was between the Department of Tourism and the Department of Environment and the private sector. It is simple steps that, working together, you realize that these are things that any one of us can do on a regular basis and we do not think to do them. But we need to start doing as many of those as we can.

In talking to some of the hotel properties, part of the initiative is as simple as changing bed linens every other day instead of every day, saving soap, saving water, with the clear understanding that if the guests want them changed every day they are; biodegradable cups throughout a resort; low energy light bulbs; Signs in every room and by every faucet reminding guests and employees to conserve water; showerheads which reduce the amount of water needed for a shower; timers that turn off air conditioners and water heaters. Simple steps. Commonsense. Don't really think of them. Don't follow them.

But what happens when you combine the efforts of the private sector and these two other agencies is that you start seeing what partnerships really are because the Department of Tourism now takes this initiative and they use it in their marketing process and promotions worldwide. People like to follow green properties. They like to follow green communities. And Little Cayman especially (and Cayman Brac to a point) is beginning to seize the opportunity. I think it is safe to say the Southern Cross Club and Little Cayman Beach Resort are leading the pack in some of their initiatives and marketing combined with the Department of Tourism. Successful partnerships.

Little Cayman itself this year has a new road across north and south on the eastern end of the Island about three miles from Point of Sand. This allows easier access to property, shorter time and, again, private/public partnership between a private landowner and Government working in conjunction to give the people better access to Little Cayman.

They have made it easier for the district officer to operate. They have relocated his office and improved the way he is able to do business for the citizens there. Very shortly (next week Friday the 16th) the Department of Environment building in Little Cayman will be opened by the District Commissioner, Leader of Government Business and other invited guests.

Some of the discussions we have had, some of the ideas to look at for Little Cayman is a daycare centre. Again, it is a private/public partnership discussion because it is not a large enough community but the people there have a need. So, the discussion has begun on how can a church, how can the government system, how can district administration and how can the parents work together to find a way for the children that are there to be taken care of on a daily basis allowing the parents to work in a timely manner.

We, of course, will improve air service this year. But that is a discussion that will come a little bit later this afternoon. The Leader of Government Business announced the purchase of Point of Sand (long, long, long overdue). But kudos to the Leader of Government Business for addressing the issue, contacting the people and beginning the negotiations. We look forward to when that is vested in the people of this country and the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for generations to come.

One quality of life issue that affects Little Cayman is water. The discussion is still whether the Water Authority will be involved in distribution there or whether it will be private. But the fact of the matter is, there is just not enough water at this point to go around. So, the District Administration under the guidance of the District Commissioner has been delivering water as a government service. This year an actual policy will be put in place . . . we have looked at a government well to see if that can be made available for the community. It will be regularized that people will know they have the ability to receive water in a timely manner.

The daycare centre on Cayman Brac is built and opened. It is said of a community you can understand it when you see that they nurture their children and respect their elderly. I believe two initiatives that have taken place in Cayman Brac support that. The daycare centre, as far as nurturing and providing for the young people of Cayman Brac, and then allowing their parents to have the opportunity to work and know that their children are well taken care of.

I believe it is the best equipped and most modern daycare centre, bar none, in the Cayman Islands. I mean the building, the physical equipment and the very competent staff and caring members that make up the team that operate there on a daily basis.

The facility also functions as a hurricane shelter located adjacent to the main shelter the Aston Rutty Centre.

Also connected to the Aston Rutty Centre is a new medical wing that was actually used for the first time last year as the hurricane passed down. And I believe that everybody involved with the building, the staffing, the equipping of that medical wing was extremely pleased to see the dignity that was afforded to the patients; the way the nurses and doctors moved about with proper oxygen and medical supplies as the hurricane winds picked up. It was a tremendous success. And that compound itself has turned into a success story. It is the planned nucleus for hurricane preparedness and response at 100 feet elevation above sea level.

The thought process of protecting the people of not only Cayman Brac and Little Cayman but the Cayman Islands as a whole goes further than that. The idea of systematically connecting the Bluff road system starts at the eastern end with the Ann Tatum Bluff Ramp. It is probably 130 feet elevation. It is scheduled to be completed by the end of June this year. But as of today you can drive it and it is designed to be an integral part of the Bluff road system. It functions to provide quick access to the Bluff for the eastern districts of Cayman Brac, Spot Bay, Northeast Bay and the Creek in particular, in the case of a hurricane or overflow of the sea.

In addition to this, again what it has basically done is to give an opportunity to the people of the eastern district for quicker and more inexpensive access to their family agricultural grounds, which for generations have been on the Bluff. It saves them from driving the long route, probably saves them about 8 miles. So the ramp itself can be driven today, will be completed in June has increased the value, the comfort, and the safety of the citizens of the eastern districts. I believe we are all proud of that.

Also when you look at what has been accomplished as far as connectivity in the case of hurricane management and disaster, by the end of June the last 1,000 feet needed on the Bluff to connect the West End School to the Bluff road system will be completed. This means that for emergency purposes access to the medical facility on the Bluff starts at the West End Emergency Centre and actually ends at the Ann Tatum Ramp for access to getting people in an emergency situation to that medical wing. It offers protection and convenience to all of those who have to shelter in the West End School in case of hurricane.

One of the things that has happened in the Bluff area of Cayman Brac is an influx of new homes being built. We must stop and look at what those new homes not only do for the people who build them, but what it does for the community itself.

Most of these homes are built to a category 4 or 5 standard—cement block, shingle roof, cement wall interior—and they not only offer protection for the owner, but they offer protection for the owner's family who may live on low land and in past years were accustomed to going to a hurricane shelter for refuge. But with these new homes on the Bluff, access being provided by the road system and by developers, we now have a more comfortable way for a lot of citizens on Cayman Brac to shelter during a hurricane. It also allows government hurricane shelters the ability to care for the ones who show up there and provides opportunity for ones who maybe could not get in to now have that available to them.

Madam Speaker, last year my comments at this time talked about the increase in land sales. I think statistics are very interesting because the old people say numbers do not lie. And when you pull the statistics of what is actually happening in Cayman Brac, numbers do not lie.

When you look at 2004, approximately $7 million of land was sold; in 2005, $13 million; in 2006, $18 million; in 2007, $19 million. You see the trend. You see the confidence, the way that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are being looked at. And it is the same thing when we mention Little Cayman. It continues to show increased land sales.

But there is a comforting feeling that Caymans themselves are taking the opportunity to acquire second homes and look for opportunities for jobs to move to Cayman Brac, especially, with the Bluff being the catalyst for safety and the lessons learned from Ivan.

The other statistic that is extremely interesting, Madam Speaker, is . . . remember, the large building boom after hurricane Ivan took place in Grand Cayman, not Cayman Brac. But now what we see is that Cayman Brac has a steady increase and the spike is not slowing down. It continues to go up.

In 2005, building approvals were at 31; 2006, 52; 2007, 67; and to date (the first three months of 2008) there are 24 approvals. I think it is comfortable to say that if you drive the streets you will see around 50 projects being worked on.

The trend continues: Not only are people buying land, but they are actually building on it to become partners in our community, to enjoy our way of life.

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: The Honourable Second Official Member wants to buy a piece of land? Is that what you're saying?

Very good!

[laughter]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: The government provides a surveyor on Cayman Brac.

[laughter]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: The department itself is extremely successful, a gifted young man, Jerry Banks, went away to school in England, put his time in, came back, and is not only well respected but much needed in the community, Madam Speaker.

On a daily basis he goes out in the field with younger men and teaches them the trade so hopefully they too will go away to school because the need in Cayman Brac, the opportunity for another surveyor is immense. And the numbers do not lie!

It is a programme and a success story that government has created by bringing this young man back to Cayman Brac and having a positive impact not only on him but the growth of the Island allowing him to do what he has learned to do and keeping him there at home which has been a goal from day one.

Madam Speaker, I think it is very interesting to watch immigration patterns when something starts developing. We now see well-known successful Cayman-Brackers who moved to Cayman—saw the opportunity and took advantage of it—and Caymanians who have had tremendous success here in Cayman looking at the opportunity available in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. As the Second Official Member said he wanted to buy a piece of land, Madam Speaker, let me assure you that there are other Members in this House today who have in the last months bought land in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman: a very, very positive trend for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

One of the most interesting developments on the drawing board is, again, a Caymanian who sees an opportunity in Cayman Brac. He has purchased 100 acres on the eastern end. He now plans to open a 50 or 60 acre farm. His plans are extremely interesting. The equipment that he is going to have to purchase explains why he wants to do it on a large basis to be able to make the investment that he needs.

And we certainly welcome Mr. Lemmie to Cayman Brac and to the community itself as he plugs in with his wife, Sarita, and family.

Madam Speaker, as you drive you see apartments springing up. You see houses being built speculative for sale. I am proud to say here today that the private sector has come alive and they will spend more in capital investment in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman this year than the Government does, which is something that has not always happened in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

One of the young successful entrepreneurs is Curtis Connor. He is a young man who is just completing an apartment complex taking advantage of opportunity in an upwardly mobile way. He builds houses. He is well known throughout the Cayman Islands and I certainly wish him continued success. I know he will be successful.

We saw recently the return of Bracker Cleveland Dilbert, well known in Grand Cayman for his successes with Big Daddy's and restaurants. He built a retirement home right above his father's old homestead on the Bluff, was settled and thought that he was going to enjoy the Island itself. But as he looked and saw opportunity being created for this type of investment and development, targeting people to have the opportunity to come home, he quickly saw a need for a small hotel.

Not only did he purchase the land, but he broke ground. He has started and he anticipates the hotel itself to be completed early 2009 along with a shopping complex (which is now operational), houses, real estate firms, a Big Daddy's and a Laundromat. Well on his way.

Madam Speaker, it is also interesting to see that a law firm has opened in Cayman Brac. Bodden & Bodden, one of the local law firms in the Cayman Islands. And, of course, it is well known that you need two law firms because you have to have two lawyers to fight. On a daily basis we encourage another law firm to look at Cayman Brac and see the opportunity for back office work to be done there.

The Immigration Law, the standalone immigration board has been strengthened and they are ready to receive back office work especially from financial and offshore firms.

Madam Speaker, the opening of the Cayman Islands Development Bank was welcomed. It is a new service opened two days a month and continues to be a new presence. The initiative that I spoke about earlier, combined with the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau, shows that the foundation, the fundamental pieces that we need to build on are being put in place.

When you think of what is actually taking place, you see a hotel being built. That hotel is going to need services around it. It is going to need tour buses and taxis. It is going to need fishing guides, dive masters. And we want to put in position the banks, the expertise through the Investment Bureau, that the local Cayman Bracker and Caymanian can benefit from the development that comes.

If we do not create opportunity, if we do not allow them to get the government funding, if we do not give them a mentor and somebody who can draw a business plan, and somebody that can help them be involved in the opportunity that comes . . . Not everybody can afford to build a hotel, Madam Speaker, but put them in a position where they get help. We are a smart, resilient people that have depended on outward investment to go forward.

Give them the tools that they need to benefit from the development that comes to the shores of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and we will create a very, very successful group of young entrepreneurs. That, Madam Speaker, is our goal. Our goal is to share this economic benefit of sustainable development with each person that wants to come on board and be part of building and creating a sustainable economy for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Madam Speaker, I heard a comment earlier by the Leader of the Opposition. And I know that he probably didn't mean it the way he said it, and that is why I almost feel like I should not bring it up. But the comment of the rich get richer and the poor get poorer is the farthest thing from the policy of what we are trying to put in place.

[Let me] mention the names of some of the young entrepreneurs that we have doing things now in Cayman Brac: Lenaris Ebanks investing in a landmark, and opening it and turning it around; Carvel McLean Construction, going forward and building homes; Kirky Parchman with a new business; Danny and Dole Dixon, construction, government job; I mentioned Curtis Connor and his apartments. Madam Speaker, these are young, smart, bright people seeing opportunity. And we want to continue to not only give the opportunity, but to put the tools in place and strengthen what is needed to give success to everybody.

I believe that is honestly what he [the Leader of the Opposition] was trying to say and the point that he was trying to get across—that opportunity is there now in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Madam Speaker, a very successful man in Grand Cayman is Kent Rankine. He seized the opportunity in Cayman Brac. He built 15 houses, beautiful complex. Now he is there building more. And they are being sold. And they are being integrated into our community.

Garston Grant, a new office complex on the western end of the Island by the airport. Carib Sands, phase 3 under development. Robert Banks, the Ryan family, ready to break ground to 23 more two-bedrooms on the eastern end that take advantage of the nature product and the beauty of the Bluff and the sea on the eastern end of Cayman Brac.

You know, Madam Speaker, one of the real problems that we faced after the election was the closing of the Divi hotel: fifty-odd people out of work at a moment's notice. You did not know how you were going to re-tool and recover from that. A purpose-built dive resort that attracted a clientele over years and years—had been there for 20 years. And now when you look at it, the silver lining under that dark cloud is that the new rooms that are being built will double the rooms that we had available. But they will attract a different clientele. They will attract a clientele that probably makes $200,000 more per year, which means that when they come to the Island they want to rent a car, eat in a local restaurant, be part of the community. And that, for us, in the next nine months will retool our tourism product and lend itself to how we go forward and encourage others now that they see success is there.

Madam Speaker, I mentioned Lenaris Ebanks before, but I just have to mention him again because he took the challenge of renovating one of the tourism landmarks of Cayman Brac that had been built by Mr. Audley Scott. If you go there go to the Coral Isle Club. He bought it, he rebuilt it, he manages it, it is open, we admire his entrepreneurial skill and we wish him the greatest of success.

The Affordable Housing programme in Cayman Brac will turn over four homes in the next 30 days to needy people. But I believe that we should really look at the programme itself and rename it because it gives it . . . the name Affordable Housing, Low Cost Housing, whatever, is the farthest thing from the truth. The homes themselves are of the highest quality, they are built extremely well, they are built with cement block walls, Timberline shingles, cement block interior walls, and the connotation of it being an affordable home is misleading to the public. It is misleading to the people that live there, to the children, and I would really like to look, not only for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, but for the Cayman Islands as a whole at how we can re-name this initiative.

Let us be very clear about it: The last government, this government, whichever government it is, the thought of putting people in a home is very important. The way you go about it in this programme is that you make it something that they can afford by building it on government land, turning over a freehold title. You pay for the plans, you pay for the architect work, quantity surveyor, you pay for your contractor and then when they receive a loan that is negotiated at as good a rate as can be provided, they move into their home.

So, the connotation and the name “affordable” . . . let us rethink it. The point is, it has been a success on Cayman Brac because the homes are extremely well built. As soon as these are turned over, four more will be started and it will continue to provide not only labour for a young entrepreneur that's building them (and successful with the building), but it will also provide housing for people who have worked hard and it will provide the biggest asset that they have in their lives after the 20 years that it takes them to pay for it. They will be left whole and financially better off because of this initiative.

Madam Speaker, again I say figures, do not lie. In Cayman Brac, statistics show that February, March and April, there were over 115 work permits issued. Some of these work permits have gone to domestics. And a lot of them have gone to the construction industry itself, labourers, mason helpers, and jobs that if you can walk and you want to learn, it is available to you to go there. I implore the contractors to look at them and if some of the young Cayman Brackers come and they do not know how to drive a nail, remember there was a point in time when you did not know how to drive a nail either. Take them under your wing see what you can do with them, bring them into the community. We are all on one team.

Madam Speaker, the Youth Programme of Cayman Brac is a tremendous success story. I wanted to make sure that all my colleagues in Bodden Town know that on Saturday history was made. For the first time Cayman Brac's Under 16 Team beat Bodden Town.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Beat Bodden Town!

He threatens to get up!

And not only that, they will have to come to Cayman Brac in the very near future to play at our house.

I hope the Third Elected Member comes with them!

[laughter and inaudible interjections]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: The Youth Programme has a very dynamic leader, Mitchum Sanford. He was hired by the last government and I am very pleased to say that this year the programme is funded and successful. It is funded by approximately $120,000. I believe that in its initial stage it was only receiving funding around $10,000.

The Cadet Corps is doing extremely well. The Cadet Corps was introduced in Grand Cayman by, I guess, the last government.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: You guess?

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Was it?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: You don't have to guess that.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: All right. Well, I wanted to make sure.

It was?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: [inaudible]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Well it was?

But in Cayman Brac it was introduced by this government.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: [Inaudible]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: The greatest of plans are tremendous things. What you want is something tangible that you touch. Everybody can plan, but you have to get something done!

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: [inaudible]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: All right.

Let me just go over the programme which I think is extremely important to the youth of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Football. Forty-five athletes registered under 14, under 16, under 19. Three volunteer coaches, Kenroy Martin, Lawrence Nelson, Errol Bergman.

Local recreational needs: CIFA [Cayman Islands Football Association] National Youth Leagues. Netball Youth Programme, 15 athletes. Track and Field, 65 athletes registered 3 volunteer coaches in the community, Ventisha Conolly, Flynn Bush, Lawrence Nelson. Basketball, 15 athletes registered, 2 volunteer coaches, Flynn Bush, Andre Scott, ages 13 to 17.

Peewee Programmes, 8 children registered. Volleyball community programme, 40 athletes registered, ages 12 to adult. Cricket, 18 athletes registered. Swimming, 40 athletes.

[inaudible interjections]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Talent identification programmes, two scholarships, Stephen Tatum, Michael Sanford—football scholarships. And travel, which makes them ambassadors when they go abroad to sports. Very successful programme, Madam Speaker.

The agricultural grounds continue to improve. Our second show was held at the new grounds with over 1200 attendees.

MRCU building is now under construction by Danny and Dole Dixon Contractors. Over 4,000 SF building designed to be redundant for the Cayman Centre as well in case of a national disaster.

Water Authority has proposed a $12 million plant to be built on the Bluff. They have done the survey work to take the parcel out north of the Aston Ruddy Centre, again creating a nucleus. That is the first step in vesting the land in the Water Authority name.

Madam Speaker, construction on the Fire Station has started. We had this discussion in two previous Finance Committees. The construction completion enables the domestic service to be introduced in Cayman Brac in a way that it is manned all the time and creates many more jobs in the fire service.

The High School Hall is complete and being used for exams this year—a need that had been talked about and identified. It is built in a way that when the new high school is built on the Bluff it can be moved and used at another site.

The Tibbetts Annex, this goes back to caring for your elderly and giving them respect. The Community Care Centre addition of the Tibbetts Annex over a million dollars, mostly donated by Mr. Linton Tibbetts and his wife Mrs. Polly Tibbetts, state of the art. Other private donations were given, enough to where all new furniture was bought for the centre and it is now operational.

Private enterprise, Private/public partnerships coming together—all on one team—working for the betterment of the community.

The Board that works there enabling [inaudible] Mr. Floyd Banks, Mr. Chris Randall, Mr. James Ryan, I give them thanks along with the people that donated.

Beautification Committee continues to plant and bring a pride to the Island from the east end to the west end.

Madam Speaker, the University College of the Cayman Islands, Cayman Brac Branch: It is a project that I have to mention with pride. It took a lot of tenacity and perseverance to be realized. I believe it will become one of the foundational building blocks for the future of Cayman Brac's sustainable development. The University College is a success today because people from the civil service are now attending it with high school graduates this year more and more will start to attend. It provides every person in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman the ability to pursue higher education: a campus that even provides for young people from Grand Cayman to come and study in an unhurried atmosphere which is obviously conducive to learning.

It is one of the most important advancements to ever happen in the educational system of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. And I believe we are all proud to have been involved in it.

The FIFA [Federation International Football Association] certified football field has now been completed to a point where practice is held by the youth. It is built to the standard that it can receive international competition and world cup games that will allow Cayman Brac to capture sports tourism. We look forward to the actual opening of it that we can bring all of us together and play a game with over 35s against some of the youth. I think it will be a good day for all of us and I believe everybody will be extremely pleased.

Madam Speaker, the projects I have talked about have been completed with the teamwork of the ministry, district administration, public works, and the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Leader of Government Business deserves credit for leading the ministry and embracing Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The District Commissioner and his Deputy and his team deserve credit for what they have done.

Madam Speaker—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, Standing Order 10(2) tells me that the hour of interruption is 4.30. I think my interpretation of that is correct. Are you going to be finished within the next couple of minutes?

Mr. Moses Kirkconnell: The next five minutes.

The Speaker: Continue.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Thank you Madam Speaker, I will try to wind up here.

Just so much has happened in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that I just need more time. But I can do this.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you do not have to rush. You have tomorrow morning. So we can adjourn and tomorrow morning the proceedings are here again.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: I am almost finished, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceed.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, one point two million dollars is budgeted for a complete renovation of Faith Hospital. This renovation, along with the completion of the rest home gives us a compound that we will all be happy will improve the quality of our life through the medical needs being met.

Spot Bay Park, Panama Canal, West End Jetty, are all earmarked for improvements and marked to happen quickly. The Tourism product for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is being enhanced through a website, "It's Yours to Explore."

Madam Speaker, there has been much said about electricity rates and the government being successful in a reduction of rates for residential consumers on Grand Cayman, by reducing duty on the diesel used to power electrical generators. This reduction, the same way it has been done in Grand Cayman, must be passed on in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as well. But we have to find a way that it is going to be done because of the Regulatory Authority.

The Minister responsible is opening negotiations and discussion with the power company in the Brac for a resolution as quickly as possible for this reduction in electrical rates.

Madam Speaker, through private/public partnership we will find the best way forward for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The District Administration expansion is to encourage the long overdue back office development. It was identified that the Brac would need the following:

- Company registry
- More office space
- Better air service

The increase in the size of the District Admin allows the government to lead from the front, have office space and move some back office jobs when the office space is complete.

Madam Speaker, before I move to my last topic, which is Cayman Airways, I just want to say again that the team that is put together in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman of the DC and Deputy DC leading the way, is a group of hardworking dynamic individuals all the way down to PWD.

The final topic, Madam Speaker, much awaited, is Cayman Airways. Cayman Airways is the only air bridge providing for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—the only company operating there. For as long as I can remember, including the years I sat as a director of Cayman Airways, we have struggled to find the right level of service to allow Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to find sustainability.

It is a true chicken or egg scenario, especially for the Brac. This Government has been receptive of the ideas of how this issue can be addressed and solved. You cannot be sustainable without air service, you cannot get good air service until you are sustainable.

The Government and the Ministry purchases from Cayman Airways Express for $1.5 million in this budget a service in small twin otter planes. The Government and the Ministry purchases from Cayman Airways a jet service for regional gateways to support tourism and facilitate economic development. The problem is that we have three Islands and we do not have the right size plane to promote economic development for Cayman Brac itself. Personal opinion.

If I have a property in Little Cayman and I look and say, 'What kind of airlift do I need? I sell a tourist adventure experience, I sell an out island experience, and if someone wants something out of the norm they are very happy to fly on a twin otter plan with a big window and have that experience to tell their friends about.

If I have a property in Grand Cayman, I want a jet service to strategically chosen gateways to penetrate the market in the US and Europe to bring them to Grand Cayman.

But if I have a property in Cayman Brac that not only do I have to cater to the tourism aspect but to the population itself for the milk and egg run, for the medical needs, I have to understand that the jets are too big to give frequency three or four times a day, and the twin otters are too small at this point in time to meet the needs of the transfer of passengers and goods between Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

So the air bridge created for economic development had to be looked at. The business case was directed by the Minister. And, Madam Speaker, my opinion is that it will support two 50 to 60 seat planes that will give frequency between Cayman Brac and Little Cayman when the airport in Little Cayman is completed. It will give direct service to Miami and direct service to Tampa. It will bring Cayman Brac and Little Cayman economic sustainability in a way that has been planned and it is a need that has to be met now rather than when the airport in Little Cayman is finished. So, we will have to keep (only in my opinion) the twin otters, if the business case supports bringing the regional planes in. And then, as the airport is built, remove the twin otters and service Little Cayman as well with the regional 50 or 60 seaters.

Madam Speaker, it would be a great honour for me today to say more or make some kind of announcement but I simply am not empowered to do that, and I do not think the business case itself has been completed and viewed. But I look forward in the very near future to an announcement.

Madam Speaker, I want to take this time to thank you for the kind things you have done for me the three years I have been here. The mentoring and the advice, sometimes in a nice kind way, sometimes in a little more direct way. Thank you for the introductions and the times when we were in India and how kind you were to introduce me to the international and regional members of the Commonwealth that are all your good friends and pay such high tribute to you.

I know you had a rough day today. But maybe it is part of the job. But from my standpoint, I thank you for what you have done to nurture young people that come into this House and help them to become parliamentarians.

Thank you.

I have highlighted many accomplishments in a short three-year period. I look forward to next year and to this budget and getting started.

In closing I thank my colleagues on the back-bench for their continued support. I thank the Leader of Government Business and the Ministers for truly embracing Cayman Brac and Little Cayman during my term in office. I remind them all, though, that if global problems more than we have today reach our shores we will all come and call on them again to adjust the budget to ensure that our needs as a people are met. I have great confidence that they will rise to that challenge without hesitation.

I repeat what our Financial Secretary outlined as I close my comments on this Budget, "We have delivered a Budget that provides $13.5 million in surplus. At the end of June 30, 2009, it provides $532.6 million net worth for this country. And we have a 7.9 per cent debt ratio."

Madam Speaker, I am pleased to support this Budget. Thank you.

The Speaker: Before I ask for the motion for the adjournment, I would just ask the Executive of the Cayman Islands Branch of the CPA to meet for a short meeting in the Committee Room. It will be for about five minutes.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

If no other Member wishes to speak . . . Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to offer a few comments on the Budget Address and Throne Speech and what has been delivered to this country. Obviously, as is the norm for this time of year we play the cat and mouse game of trying to wait each other out. It's easy to say that we have seen the arrival of all the mice.

The Speaker: You are not referring to the Members of the Legislative Assembly are you?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Oh, thank you.

[laughter]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: That would be unparliamentary, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Okay, thank you.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, we have seen a few themes, as a House, being thrown at us and as the editorial in one of the local print media said recently, when the leader of a country gets up and begins the most important address that the country ever receives on an annual basis by quoting scripture and ends it off with a hymn, things are not well.

Madam Speaker, that is all fine and dandy because we know that things are not well. However, we have been down this road before so none of us in this Legislative Assembly and, indeed, none of our constituents, no residents of the country I believe are surprised that this would be the place that we would find ourselves in.

You see, Madam Speaker, often times as Members of this House we are duty bound to reflect and look back, for doing so sharpens the eye but more importantly sharpens the mind for the future and the task at hand. And from the speech of the Leader of Government Business, which was dubbed "Keeping the Faith—Securing the Future" it was obvious that this was the launching pad for a political campaign. The launching pad for the next general election which is but a short 12 months away.

He has been around here a lot longer than I have, but I have been around long enough to understand that when you get to this point in an administration, really you get a few things done, but the system starts to transition itself and ready itself for a new birth. The new birth is going to be the new class of legislators.

So, at this point in time, it is natural for that tenor to be the tenor of the day. To start asking people to count their blessings and name them one by one, to ask people to think about human misery in much less fortunate parts of the world and be thankful for what we have, the natural other aspect of this is to try to build yourself up and in doing so the natural human tendency is to compare oneself and to put a spin on one's opponents to try to ensure that in making the opponent look weaker you would naturally become stronger in the eye of the beholder. Of course, the all-important beholder is the registered voter in these Cayman Islands.

Thus far, over the last three years we have come down to this Legislative Assembly (we, the Opposition) and we have said to the Government You are on the wrong track. The well is going to dry up. Because you were fortunate enough to have two things happen: 1) an economy that was rebuilding from the massive devastation of Hurricane Ivan; and 2) an economy that had turned around and become productive from a government and private sector standpoint, don't think that that would continue in finitum.

However, we were laughed at, scoffed at, even when we brought good sensible motions. Of course the Government and its supporters would not acknowledge the sense in what we were trying to say and try to embrace constructive criticism to avert the situation that we find ourselves in today. So I would say that perhaps an alternative theme, a more appropriate theme to the speech that was delivered . . . and what has brought about the speech would be inept performance and a compromised future.

You see, the Government—and especially the backbench members . . . because I find that what they do is mimic what has been said before and have not taken the time to go back in the records of this Legislative Assembly to educate themselves about where we were in 2000, to educate themselves about how we got ourselves out of that conundrum; and then be able to effectively and sensibly dispose of duties as legislators.

Madam Speaker, the goal has always been about attack the opponent; attack the Leader of the Opposition so that we can win the next general election. The prize is not about the financial realities of this country. The prize is about the next general election. That is the MO of the Government.

Madam Speaker, you see, when we look at the current state of affairs the Government has acknowledged that they are not good. They have had to come down to this Legislative Assembly to tell us that revenues are going to be off. We've been telling them three years this is what is going to happen. Oh, no, no, no, we are not going to listen to that. We are not going to listen. We are not going to understand. And if some of them would listen a little bit more they might actually learn something about budgeting. They might actually learn something about revenue and they might actually learn something about how the Cayman Islands economy works.

Now I must say, Madam Speaker, that many of them from the standpoint of wanting to go into their districts and improve and do things for people . . . I am not saying that they don't want to do that. I have stood on the Floor of this House for seven straight years and never questioned any Member's motive on that point. Where there has always been a disconnect is how do you keep the country moving so that you are able to really help people?

At the end of the day the Government also realizes that it is about the economy. I have stood on the Floor of this House for seven and a half years now and talked about the importance of a robust economy. Not getting up and talking about these specific and very finite measures that we have come up with in a piece of legislation. The Public Management and Finance Law and the compliance thereto does not put one slice of bread on the table of the people of this country. It does not keep people employed. It does not protect the socially vulnerable. It does not provide adequate policing. It does not provide adequate healthcare. It gives us a framework in which we have said here is the minimum standard that we are going to use as a measure for a discreet document called the Budget.

So when the Government continues to get up and talk about measures in a piece of legislation, it really hammers home to me how disconnected they are from the realities of keeping a robust economy versus electioneering and trying to get re-elected in May of 2009. Complete disconnect.

Madam Speaker, just doing a quick analysis of this speech that was delivered on Wednesday, 30 April 2008, I had to really make myself some notes. And I am not usually a person that's big on notes, but you know, when things are really, really bad you really do not want to miss these points.

Page 1 I dub lowering the bars for Caymanians especially the poor and vulnerable. [It is a] Skillfully crafted document because the first thing it did was it said the poor people . . . it said to the middle class—the shrinking middle class—lower your expectations. Temper what you expect in what is supposed to be the land of milk and honey and compare yourselves to what you see on TV and the pictures you see of those in very poor countries who experience abject poverty.

Madam Speaker, I believe it is totally irresponsible of any government to say to this country that that is what we should be doing. To go to our people and say, Listen, look at the misery of human existence in other parts of the world. Be thankful and just keep the faith. We should continually be encouraging our people to expect and demand the very best. We are supposedly building a country that is for the very best.

The inconsistencies in the Government's utterances are so obvious because on the one hand we try to temper expectations and on the other hand we say, Hold on, we are going to build for you an $85 million building to house civil servants. Hold on. We are going to build for you schools at an indeterminate cost. We are going to give you three of them because at the end of the day nothing is more important. Nothing! Not policing, not healthcare . . . nothing is more important.

Because, we have persons in this honourable House (and that's the reason they have got here) who are skilled at the art of winning votes. And they understand how to win votes and you win votes with heart-string issues. It is like any relationship. If you can pull a person's heart you are more than likely going to get a positive result. If you can pull their heart and really make them feel positive toward you, you are more than likely going to get a positive result. And that is what is happening in the country today.

On page 2 we hear . . . here we are in 2008 and here we have our Government reminding people of the phenomenon of globalization. If that is not indicative of a government that is lost and out of touch with reality, nothing else is. Globalization is no longer a phenomenon. Globalization is here. It has been here for a long time. We have been talking and preaching and trying to educate our people about that reality.

But you see what happened in the months leading up to May 2005 was that we tugged at the heartstrings and we talked about taking the country back. Taking the country back. We have to take it back because someone has come in and taken it away from you. So everybody's expectations were riding on a high. Oh yes, this is the conservative government we want. They are going to come in and really clean house. We, as Caymanians, are going to get our just desserts.

Three years later we are being told to compare ourselves to abject poverty and be thankful. Now, we must count those blessings and name them one by one.

Now, let's fast forward that to today, Madam Speaker. My, how the time has changed! On page 34 of the document, we hear the Government now saying, "We need our legislation, our regulatory regime, including our Business Staffing Plan and Work Permit regimes, and our administrative processes to fully align with our economic needs and goals." Sounds like a message that we have been preaching from 2000 till today.

But, you see, the White Knights came along and the White Knights said to the Cayman Islands, Hold on! McKeeva is selling Cayman out. The UDP sold you out. Sold you down the river along with your future. We are going to take Cayman back. Help is on the way!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: The help now tells us, if we turn to page 35, the point is so important that it has been mentioned twice in this all important document. "Government support will take the form of a clear, effective and tailored entry regime, including an enhanced Business Staffing Plan regime, for qualified reinsurers, designed to appeal to either start-up reinsurers or existing reinsurers looking for viable options for locations in which to grow their business. In turn, the Government expects reinsurers who wish to take advantage of the entry regime to enter into a 'social contract' reflecting a partnership approach to joining our financial ser- vices community, via specific commitments to education and training opportunities for Caymanians. The Portfolio of Finance & Economics as executing agency will be coordinating the delivery of the regime, which is expected to be rolled out very shortly.”

Again, Madam Speaker, I have gotten up on the Floor of this House trying to make our people understand the reality of globalization and the reality of capital and how capital works and how capital seeks a profit. And if you want to be in the fight you have to give something up because there is no one out there that loves the Cayman Islands and Caymanians so much that they are going to come, invest all their money and simply say, Here Caymanians, you have and do as you please with my business. You reap all the benefits and that's how it's going to work.

We have been preaching that for years. We have been preaching to people, Look, let's make sure that Caymanians are given every opportunity to maximize their potential. Let's ensure that our labour and immigration policies work in tandem to force companies who may otherwise give Caymanians the first opportunity to maximize their God-given potential.

And we have also said clearly to the public, Look, we need to ensure that Caymanians are in the fight. I would much rather . . . and you have heard me say this before Madam Speaker, I would much rather have a Caymanian come to my door and say we need for you to try to change this law or that law to ensure that I am treated fairly, than to have a Caymanian come to my door and say Well, my company's closed down. Mr. Anglin, I need $100 for my light bill.

But you see the mixed signals were sent out—the divisive factions that are still in this House despite the wishes of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who delivered a very eloquent, Rodney King, can't-we-all-get-along speech yesterday.

The reality is . . . he may very well see it that way, but he ought to understand the realities of what happens in this Chamber and what happens when people want to get in here and what has happened is, we had to go out and fool the people and tell them . . . Okay? The PPM had to go out and fool the people and say, We need to take Cayman back. Not understanding the realities of what that message was sending to the very people that they now claim they are going to attract and welcome to our shores. Not understanding that a lot of them were going to leave our shores. Not understanding that all we were doing was building up more animosity between Caymanians and non-Caymanians. But you know what? At that point in time it was convenient. They did not care! They did not care!

Now, I must say there may be a couple of them who may truthfully get up and say I didn't know. There may be a few that can say, You know what, I really didn't understand what I was doing. I didn't understand. But in the vast majority, they understood exactly what they were doing leading up to May 2005 and it was to get here at all cost.

Now that the economy is turning down, and now that businesses are continuing to leave, oh the tune has changed now. Mind you, those points have been so conveniently hidden in the address by the Leader of Government Business that they have barely seen the light of day. They are not going to come out and openly tell the public, Look, we were wrong. We now have changed. This is the way life needs to be. We need to have a partnership in this country because this country is years, generations, away from having any semblance of economic independence. The majority, my guess just based on my knowledge of private sector . . . All you have to do is drive around and look with your eyes wide open and your brain in gear to understand where the capital in this country lies. And the majority is not in the hands of Caymanians. Now, what we also need to tell our people at the same time is that is globalization.

I have said this before, so I hope the Third Elected Member for George Town is listening. I said this before. President Clinton, the former President of the United States, became the most successful president (economically speaking) in this generation because during his term the capital markets in the US had three times the amount of foreign capital invested in them than [during] any other president.

I hope that the Members are listening and starting to learn how this world works. No man is an island. And I have said this before. But, of course, they don't listen. I have said this for at least three Throne Speeches. If the great United States of America—the country acknowledged to be the world's economic powerhouse—is dependent on foreign direct investment, how in the world could we dream that an island as small as Cayman, no natural resources to speak of, only started to have any semblance of real economic domestic activity in a tangible sense in three short decades, how could it be that we could dream of having economic independence?

Come on people.

Come on fellow legislators. Let us be truthful to our people for a change. Let us search our souls and start to be real ambassadors for change, real educators. Let us really be honest with our people.

Madam Speaker, let us think about the number of Caymanians who have gone on to become architects, qualified accountants, qualified lawyers, doctors, other professionals. Let us talk about the number of Caymanians who started up small businesses in the last three decades. I know all of us can think of people that we would never have dreamed would have made it to where they are today, if we had judged them 30 years ago. Some Caymanians have benefited tremendously.

Madam Speaker, I have said this before as well. I am convinced that one of the real and only reasons that I stand where I am today with this honour is because of that economic prosperity, [and] is because two Englishmen who were partners at Pricewaterhouse at the time had enough confidence in me to send me on a scholarship.

We ought to also . . . because you see, as the old saying goes, if you are prone to forget you are going to make the same mistakes in the future. And I say this, and I have said it before in this House without fear or favour, 'When we look at who in the private sector has given scholarships to poor Caymanians who would never have gotten it otherwise in this country, when we look at who has done that in this country, I want the PPM to tell the country who we are taking the country back from. That's what I want the PPM to tell the country.

Why do I get so impassioned, Madam Speaker, when I am speaking? I get so impassioned, Madam Speaker, because you know the reality is . . . when the Honourable Leader of the Opposition got up yesterday and talked about those in this country who would never, ever, ever and never will support people like him and me getting to where we have gotten to in life, that is a stark reality. I can tell you this: When I go to the cocktail parties nobody recognises my mother or father's name—and that is no disrespect to my mother and father because I love them and I would never change them for anything in this world. But that's the reality in this country. If they want to talk about truth and they want to talk about taking Cayman back, that is what they should be telling the people.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: But you see, Madam Speaker, this is all about a game. The game is called politics and the game is called Defeating McKeeva Bush. That's the PPM's agenda.

Now, of course, they never ever like when I get up to speak, you know. They never do.

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: That's why they wait by the door until I get up because they don't ever want me to have the last word. Oh, they say no, no, no, no, no. When the truth comes out we need somebody to come from behind and smear and twist things back around so that it suits our political agenda.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: That's been the MO of the Government for three years.

Am I surprised at where we have wound up economically? Am I surprised?

Two years . . . last Throne Speech, last debate on the Throne Speech and Budget Address, my theme was 'the war on the middle class.' Madam Speaker, I sadly have to stand here 12 months hence, and I have not seen any initiative by the Government—none!—that has stopped the hemorrhaging of the middle class in this country.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: If we are going to build a successful society that is mimicked after western society, you have to have a vibrant and strong middle class. Otherwise everything else falls apart.

I wonder if the PPM honestly understand the connection between rising serious crime and the social dysfunction in this society. I wonder if they do. Or is it, Well, let's budget some more money and let's throw some money at it?

Madam Speaker, you know, if it took throwing money at problems the Cayman Islands would have none. The Cayman Islands would be a Utopia. There would be not one single problem in this country because we have the resources and we have thrown the money at it. But we have done it and we have not fixed and tried to address the very root causes of what we see manifesting in our community. That is one of our big problems.

Madam Speaker, if we move back we see another buzz word. One thing I must agree with the Honourable Minister of Education on or use, rather, from him. . . he had this little saying when he was in the Opposition, "oh how loud the thunder, but how little it rains." And the reality of the chickens we now see coming home to roost in terms of revenue being down is a result of just that.

Let us talk about some more of the buzz words. Another great buzz word of the PPM is "Government in the Sunshine."

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Found on page 4. "government in the sunshine" and three years later none of the statutory boards of any significance are open to the public. One of the most important functions in the governmental organs of this country has been our use of boards to execute government business under law. Boards like the Central Planning Authority, the Immigration Board, et cetera.

For a long time we have talked about this. So much so, that when we did not see any action happening, I think it was last year 2007, we in the Opposition moved a motion because the truth is that in 2005, we said we were not going to be the type of Opposition that the PPM were when they were in opposition. We gave them a whole 24 months to lay out their agenda and where they were taking the country.

Of course, we didn't see critical things coming forward—that being one of them. Because if we are going to speak about 'government in the sunshine,' what has caused Caymanians to be so distrusting of government and how government functions is what happens in government statutory boards. I mean, certainly it could never be that we are the only ones who have heard that over the last few decades. It could never be. It could never be that we are the only ones who have heard people accusing boards like the Central Planning Authority and the Immigration Board of being corrupt and favouring the privileged few. And that big business can get away with anything. Certainly it could never be that only one side of this House has heard that.

Yet, Madam Speaker, matters like that with any little bit of will could happen. Of course, you hear all the excuses in the world 36 months hence. Oh well, where are they going to meet? How are we going to execute this? How are we going to do that? How are we going to do this? You know, the people do not elect us and do not then put us in trust with the administrative day to day responsibilities of this country for them to be asked how. They are to be shown how. It needs to get done. People's business needs to get done.

But, Madam Speaker, the halls of government are as dark today as they have ever been. They have been hanging their hat—that is, the PPM Government—on these so-called Cabinet press briefings.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh! Scandal meetings! Government Scandal meetings!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: What a farce!

And, Madam Speaker, at the end of the day the people ought to remember and the people ought to judge them based on all of this immature and childish behaviour that we are seeing. All of this misuse of public funds.

So, what is a Cabinet press briefing, Madam Speaker?

[In] any mature country, the Cabinet comes to the country, it announces the major decisions that it made in the last week. If there is a matter of national importance, it speaks to them. And then they open themselves for questioning. That's a Cabinet press briefing.

The farce that we have seen as born in the Cayman Islands is one where Ministers get up, they lambast and smear, insult, badger the press and make comments like, Oh well, this isn't your show, this is my show in reference to some of these talk show hosts who apparently go to these Cabinet press briefings who apparently agitate the Government.

So, Madam Speaker, they then decided, no we are not just going to have them we are going to put them live on Radio Cayman, we are going to put them on TV, we are going to misuse the public purse for our political agenda without coming maturely to this country to offer up a sunshine government. Anybody can do what they are doing. Anybody can get up and go in the hall and start going to and fro with members of the press. Who can't do that?

What about the non-sensitive decisions that Cabinet has made for the last week giving a detailed report, opening itself for scrutiny and moving on?

That's all a Cabinet press briefing is. But even that, the Government has put their little twist on.

You see? I guess it is all part of this taking Cayman back. And the taking Cayman back is all about smoking mirrors. Next election get re-elected. Every step of the way that is the prime motive.

"When we took office", and this is again continuing on page 4, "When we took office, the Cayman Islands were in crisis. Devastation from Hurricane Ivan was widespread and very much in evidence across the land. [Said the Leader of Government Business on 30 April 2008] Crime had become a serious problem. There were serious concerns about governance and allegations of corrupt practices in government."

Now, Madam Speaker, devastation from Hurricane Ivan was widespread and very much evident across the land, yet they were the same Opposition who when we went to the Governor, and all of us met after Hurricane Ivan, and said to the Governor, Look, we believe for there to be free and fair elections the country needs the time to recover, heal, so that everyone is in a correct frame of mind and can go to the polls and make a responsible decision. But do you know what the Opposition said? I clearly remember the Honourable Minister of Education sitting in the committee room of this Legislative Assembly and telling the then Governor, Mr. Bruce Dinwiddy, that everywhere he went in the country people were concerned of the date of the next general election and that they were not going to agree to it being delayed any more than six months because the country was ready for the election. Yet, 36 months later the Honourable Leader of Government Business gets up and says that when they took office the devastation from Hurricane Ivan was widespread and very much evident.

So, devastation was evident across the land, yet they pushed an agenda, let's have this election now. Let's make sure that people vote while we believe they are in misery. Because when people vote and they are in misery they are going to vote against the incumbents. Classic! I mean . . . I have to laugh when the Leader of Government Business says, or accuses any of us of being slick politicians. I really have to laugh at that. Let me tell you, I like the gentleman, but—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: They are slicker than you.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: —but to get slicker than the Honourable Leader of Government Business . . . Madam Speaker, I would have to be reborn about 100 times to be able to fill those shoes, because classic, classic, classic politician!

If this is not proof and evidence . . . the country was wide . . . devastation was seen across the land; yet we were ready for an election, yet we held an election. Something doesn't add up.

Then, he goes on to say, “It seems, based on how they speak today [they being the Opposition], that the other side has conveniently forgotten these things. The Government of the day [that, is the UDP], which comprised of members on the other side, had no solutions. It [that is, the UDP] proved unable to rise to the challenge of recovery and reconstruction.”

Wow! Classic politics again!

He then goes on at page 7 to say: “We have now received the first installment of the EU funds to be used for Hurricane Ivan related works to be carried out through the National Recovery Fund offices. The total amount forthcoming is 7 million Euros, the first installment being the equivalent of CI$1.3 million. We expect that the tendering process will begin very shortly, with construction to commence immediately thereafter. This Madam Speaker will go a long way to providing relief for all qualified persons. We expect these funds to complete all recovery efforts relating to Hurricane Ivan damage to homes and displacement of families.”

Madam Speaker, let's make sure that we have got this right because the PPM has a way of really spinning things. So maybe they are spinning this one so far that none of us can keep up. The last time I checked Hurricane Ivan hit Cayman in September 2004. The then Opposition, the PPM, were confident enough that the country had recovered to hold general elections in May 2005.

Two thousand six, two thousand seven, two thousand eight . . . I use my little fingers, Madam Speaker, to come up with three years. Thirty-six months later the Government has the audacity and the temerity to say that the UDP was incapable of rising to the challenge; yet 36 months later they are going to stand in this honourable House and talk about Hurricane Ivan damage to homes and displacement of families? They are still incapable of getting people out of trailer homes, Madam Speaker.

I should not get worked up? I should not be infuriated as a legislator? I should not be infuriated as a Caymanian?

Does the Honourable Leader of Government Business have the audacity—audacity!—to call any person on the face of this earth incapable? Yet he can get up here and talk about for three years—three years, Madam Speaker—we talked about a budget surplus in 2006 of $3.3 million. In 2007, $35.5 million, in 2008, $17.4 million, this year $13.3 million budget surplus, operating surplus. This is what Government was expecting and in all instances they have experienced real surpluses. The Cayman Islands have made real profits, the Cayman Islands Government.

That is not even to talk about whether or not we have made that and you might want to borrow some money to fix some people's homes, to get displaced families replaced and into their homes and into a comfortable lifestyle. Yet, the Government has the audacity to come with this slick document that is so disingenuous and so disconnected. It spreads so much lies and propaganda because, Madam Speaker, if you could on one hand (on page 4 of the document), say that one person is incapable yet you had 36 months and you still have people in his district and in my district in trailer homes living in deplorable conditions.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Yes.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Yet they are going to talk about incapable?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Shame! Shame on them!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, slick politicians. Very slick!

Make people suffer for 36 months, try to do something at the very end because they are going to remember it. They are going to remember us as the White Knights. They are going to give us the vote.

The same thing happened with the poor relief. It is only in the last 24 months that people are bad off and that people needed more money. It is only in the last 24 months that the increases came.

Madam Speaker, if the UDP had the audacity to do what the PPM did last Christmas in giving away public funds to underprivileged people, they would have had marches, demonstrations, they would have had everything in the world. They would have called commissions of enquiry, they would have called the Auditor General to investigate, they would have called everything! Everything they would have called at us!

Imagine the Government going out and saying . . . and of course, they did it. Do you know why? They said, Well, you know, look we are going to box the Opposition in now. Let's get back to the politics of this. We are going to box the Opposition in because once we are giving the seamen, veterans and indigents, they are not going to say anything. They're not going to dare say anything about that.

I say, as the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has said, the truth is that money needs to be increased and we all know it. We all know that the minimum standard for living and surviving in this country far exceeds the $550. Far exceeds it.

But you see, Madam Speaker, the Government really was not interested in trying to listen to us and work with us to come up with ways to get this country in a sound financial state so that we could be giving these persons—these deserving persons—the money they truly need to survive.

Oh, I know they are going to come behind me and say, Oh well, you see, he's against you. Because they really, really take the Caymanian public for a bunch of fool-fool people. But Caymanians know better. Caymanians know that they have been duped.

Madam Speaker, how loud the thunder is is more evident on page 5 where we talk about the amazing . . . “look at the amazing transformation in education—from pre-school right through to university.”

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition last year in his [debate] on the Budget Address, and other Members, have all said that we are waiting to see what the results of what the Minister of Education is trying to do will be. We've all said that. Nobody is going to suggest that the Minister is not trying. He is trying. He says he is trying. But we do not see any proof coming forward yet, 36 months later.

Everything he has hung his hat on has been programmes that he found in place. He has made a few changes to the Middle School [formerly George Hicks Middle School] which, from what we can understand has made some good improvements on that campus. None of us have gotten up and bashed him. We try to be fair, Madam Speaker, really trying to be fair. But the proof is in the pudding, right?

Let us talk about exam results. Let us talk about how many people are graduating with distinctions from university. Those are the sorts of things that the people in this country are expecting; they are not expecting children to be left behind by the system.

Now, let us get on to the schools. Oh boy! Oh boy! On the heels of getting elected, that same Minister got up and said on the front page of the Caymanian Compass that the school in West Bay was a pie-in-the-sky concept. Pie-in-the-sky!

Well, all I can say is that he must be today's version of the old fictional character that was in schoolbooks of years of yesterday, Alnaschar.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Alnaschar!

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Because, Madam Speaker, that pie-in-the-sky . . . and let me say this, Madam Speaker, and I say this in all seriousness: He is trying to build that school into the sky, because when I am driving home I cannot even see the cricket pitch from Birch Tree Hill Road. That is piled so high.

Now, Madam Speaker, that area used to be a cliff. It used to be about a five foot cliff. When ground was broken for it to become the Dalmain Ebanks Civic Centre, a decision was taken at the time to tear down some of the cliff. Everyone wondered why the cliff was being torn down where the cliff had gone. Then the civic center, they wanted that high to avoid hurricane surge or flooding. Then, as I understand it, they had done even more only to now be refilled.

I suspect that what we are going to hear is that from an engineering standpoint there was something in that rock that caused it to be compromised, et cetera. What would be very interesting to know is how that material that has been removed is going to or has offset the cost of the fill that has now been put there.

Every citizen that has to traverse Birch Tree Hill Road has come to us as MLAs and asked “How is the Government going to avoid Birch Tree Hill Road at that point from becoming flood prone?”

Madam Speaker, you may not have seen this. I am not exaggerating when I say that when you drive past you cannot see the cricket pitch any longer, that is how high they have piled this up. As I understand it they are saying it is going to serve as a hurricane shelter so it ought to be high. Fine and dandy.

The community wants answers. They want to know what is going to happen with the road. Are they going to do an overpass there? Are we going to build the road up at that point so that the road rises to that same height and then slopes downwards at the other end? We do not know. And I would have thought that a Government in the sunshine would have come to the community and said, Folks, here is what we are doing. And here are all the areas that you may be concerned about. And here are our thoughts on them. Here's how we are going to mitigate those factors. I do not think that is asking too much.

But, you know, from what we can understand in West Bay . . . you know, it is certainly the district that time forgot.

“Health care is in much better shape today . . .” on page 6. Buzz words again. I am confused on this one. Health care is in much better shape today, but the HSA is hemorrhaging to the point where there is no end in sight. It is subsidy after subsidy after subsidy.

Is it just us in the Opposition who get the complaints? There is a great staff up there. A lot of very hardworking men and women. And all of us, whether in private or public sector, applaud the hardworking men and women in Cayman. We applaud them. We want to make life better for them so they can build a good solid middleclass and be able to provide for their families so that we can build a socially protected community. That's the goal of all of us.

Unfortunately, we have been falling way short of meeting that goal. We hear all the massive complaints. We have been told about a reorganisation of health services for three years. All we are asking is where is it? Is that too much to ask? Where is it? How is it that we are going to overcome the difficulties that plague the organisation?

I believe the Minister of Health greatly cares about the HSA and healthcare. Nobody can say that the Honourable Minister is not a caring man. Nobody can truthfully say that. Nobody can truthfully say that he truly does not care about this subject and the other subjects in his ministry. Nobody can say that.

However, the facts are the facts, and facts are a stubborn thing. During this term the Minister came and he said, We've found . . . not even the best thing since sliced bread, we've found a replacement for sliced bread in the form of the former CEO. What a disaster that turned out to be. I think he quickly learned that despite how easy these things have looked, there is a real risk when you hire somebody. They just might not be what they are cracked up to be.

So while they pine in the past and make all the statements they want to make about the HSA as operating without a budget, and they make all these wonderful revelations that have been made now for three consecutive years and the country is there with their hands in the air saying, Okay. Fine. You have told us that for three years. Where is your plan? Where is your budget that has made things better at the HSA? Why are we still getting the same complaints that we have always gotten?

And mind you now, Madam Speaker, I think it is fair to say that the complaints we get are about a very, very small, small group within that organisation—miniscule. I say all of that to say that it would seem as though from the outside looking in that the cancer is very much confined. It seems as though it is not like you have an organisation that has cancer that spreads throughout every organ and every limb. Where is the reorganisational plan? Where is the plan to make the organisation truly sustainable? That is all we are asking.

But when you add these types of bombastic statements that do not reflect reality, they have to be challenged, Madam Speaker. Have to be.

The Government then went on to brag at page 6, “. . . made it easier for Caymanians to qualify to own a home.

Madam Speaker, speaking in the vein that the honourable Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had, which he really tried to bridge the gap and say legislators, community, whilst we have different political views on some things we really want to be working together. But you see, Madam Speaker, how his front bench works together is to come down here and slap people in the face. Not even give them credit for what they tried to do, not even give the Opposition as much credit as to say, You know what? We got some stuff done. There were some programmes in place that we have now resurrected and, more important, they moved some important motions over the last two years which the Government accepted as it related to first-time Caymanian home and land owners, real property owners.

Couldn't even have the goodness in their hearts to say, You know what? Perhaps they did move a motion. We accepted it. But they then could have right then thumped their chests and said, But we did something about it. And then the Opposition would have had to applaud them and say, Yes, we moved a motion and you did something. But no, no, no, no, no, We have to leave those boys behind. Sounds like the constitutional modernization process. But I will get to that in a minute, Madam Speaker

Road development: Madam Speaker, we on the Opposition have long advocated the necessity of road and infrastructure development. I remember standing on the Floor of this House and saying it (that is, road development) would have provided a new wave of economic opportunity in this country. I remember standing on the Floor of this House and just taking my district and using what I believed to have been the average salary of West Bayers and the amount of time they spent in traffic on a morning and annualizing that number. In other words, Madam Speaker, looking at the human cost of inadequate road infrastructure. I was coming out conservatively, Madam Speaker, at somewhere around C1$8 million to C1$10 million.

So, I am not going to stand here and criticize the Minister of Roads. As far as I am concerned, and I have said this in public before, that road has paid for itself within 18 months of its opening. Now, what would have been more helpful would have been if the Government had also acknowledged the fact that the road had been started when they took office. That is, the extension from Esterley Tibbetts to Indies Suite, what is now St. Matthews dormitory. Certainly, funds were left in place for the works to be done.

Madam Speaker, they had to take a shot at the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Now, it would not have been . . . the job would not have been complete if we did not say on page 10, and I quote: “. . . Cayman Brac and Little Cayman [have been] allowed to be left behind. But I will leave that to be dealt with by the honourable lady Member who can ably defend her record and her performance.

What I would like to ask the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman though, is if he could give the country a list of the meetings that perhaps the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has been conveniently left out of as it relates to their district over the last three years.

But down here we talk about brotherly love. I get back to that Rodney King thing, “Can't we all just get along?” Yet, Madam Speaker, the actions are so different. Talk is so cheap. Talk is so cheap!

Madam Speaker, the Government came in this term with a tax package, if I remember correctly, somewhere in the region of $28 million. We argued vehemently against the tax package and said, Look, just understand. Irrespective of whether some of these items are directed directly at the small man, you have to be careful that some of them—not all of them, but some of them—do not give people the impression that costs are going up and, therefore, people start reacting. Because the Honourable Leader of Government Business has acknowledged in his contribution that perception is reality. And I am coming to that a little bit later. But he has asked people not to believe it is so bad and it will not be that bad. Don't lose confidence because if you lose confidence then things will get worse.

So, Madam Speaker, we got up and we argued against it. We said, Look, you don't need the money now necessarily because at the end of the day a lot of this money we were told was to fund the capital works of the Government.

I clearly remember that a lot of it was said was going to be used for the wholesale changes in education that were going to take place. Thirty-six months later we hear that the schools are now going to open in 2010 instead of 2009. We hear that Beulah Smith campus in West Bay . . . well, they are working out some details on that. So, the resources, that is human, the operational cost, like electricity, et cetera, of those campuses are not going to take effect until at the earliest (from what the Government is now saying) September 2010.

Yet, Madam Speaker, no, no, no, we are not going to listen to anyone on the Opposition. Opposition you are wrong, wrong, wrong. So we are going ahead and do this.

Lo and behold, some 24 months later a lot . . . the money or the uses of this money has not even come to fruition for the Government yet. I suppose, though, that perhaps if I were to really, really use my imagination, perhaps the Government was recognising even from then what private sector was losing was confidence. And so they said to themselves, Let's get the money in now because we would rather introduce it now than introduce it later on. That is, the tax package.

Now, what's very interesting about this Address, and I have said this before and I will say it again—we have to listen very carefully to the Government when they speak. We have to listen very, very carefully to the Government when they speak because on page 12, “So much so that despite a projected decline in revenue, Government has honoured a commitment for the third straight year not to introduce any new taxes that would have the effect of increasing the cost of living and the cost of doing business here.”

What we have learned over the last few months is that we need to ask the Honourable Leader of Government Business what he means by “government” because when we entered the debate on the Health Services Fees, we heard, Okay, that's not core government that's an authority. Fine. Great.

We get a little wiser now (we, that is, the Opposition). So this time around we say, Mm-hmm, we see this same claim. Let's search the document and let's see what else they are saying. And, Madam Speaker, lo and behold we see that the Government is also telling us that, as it relates to the Health Services, and this is on page 19, bullet point 1, 2, 3, 4—have to be very specific because I do not want anyone to come behind and say this was my imagination and if I really, really believe it is not the case, then it won't be the case.

“A comprehensive review and adjustment of fees for services provided by the Health Services Authority will be carried out in order to ensure the organization appropriately accounts for the cost of services provided.”

So, what we as a House, what the country needs to clearly understand is that when the Government says no new taxes, they mean core or central government, not the entire public sector. So there may be new fees and new taxes in statutory authorities because they are not part of core government.

Madam Speaker, I should not have to be standing here wasting my time and the good time of this House having to delve into this document in the way that I am. But history has taught me that I'd better because if I do not, when I come back with an argument a few months from now I am going to be told no, no, no, no, no, no, this is not what was said. And you see, Madam Speaker, it would have just been more useful if the Government had just simply said at the same time that there is no new government revenue measures, to have said what they meant by “government” and to have said to the country, Look, we do have some statutory authorities that need to be financially feasible and therefore we are going to have to look at the fees and here's why. Just tell the country up front, right then and there together at the same time . . . not in this disjointed fashion where you can have, again, these splashy statements said and then later on something slightly contradictory being said. But, you know, at the end of the day, if you are not paying attention, we will all get caught out. That is certainly the way I read this.

We all know, and I think even the Leader of Government Business would agree with me, that his call for people to be more confident in Cayman has to naturally entail more spending at home. And so, the Government ought to have had a complete holistic package and approach as to what they were doing, or what was currently in place that they would enhance, to encourage people to spend more at home and not take their dollars outside the country, to really continue to promote economic growth and economic expansion. I have not seen that anywhere in this document.

I believe as I am standing here that it has not even crossed the Government's mind. They have a couple of little bits and pieces here and there, but in terms of saying, Look, if we are going to manage the economy here are some of the hallmarks. Here are some of the things we need to try and enhance because we really need people to be spending more locally. We need the multiplier effect to really be maximized. We need people to not be laying off staff. We need people to be hiring more. We need small businesses to be opening.

But I did search. And I found one. “Promoting Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as domestic tourism destinations.” So, I have to give the Government credit. In their document, there is one reference, very specific, clear, unambiguous reference to something that they want to do that would cause Caymanians to spend more money at home. At home. So much so, Madam Speaker, that . . . and I encourage all legislators to take up this challenge. I encourage all Caymanians to take up this challenge.

This year for vacation, my wife and I have decided that we are going to spend a week on Cayman Brac instead of two weeks in Florida. One week in Cayman Brac. I see the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman smiling. So that tells me that that is a good decision.

I encourage all Caymanians to do it because, let's face it, what do we do? Let's be very honest. We jump on the first plane going north and we spend all of our disposable income up north. Madam Speaker, I know people need to do their shopping, et cetera, there are certain things that we simply cannot find on the Island. We are a small economy. We are a small country. We understand that. But perhaps people might consider ordering a few things online, using a freight forwarder to get them here to avoid having to go overseas and perhaps go and really appreciate Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I will tell you what—it would do a lot of people on Grand Cayman who have never been to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman a world of good. Not only is it a safe and wonderful experience, and you would be spending money at home, but they would really get to see what the realities are over there and not wonder why it is that we have had to budget the way we budget for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for many, many years.

I will be the first, Madam Speaker, to put my hand up to say that when I first got elected I really did not appreciate the plight of Cayman Brac as an island. I really did not appreciate it. I will acknowledge that up front.

And it's a learning experience to really see. A lot of us know a couple of Cayman Brackers here and there who live on Grand Cayman. A lot of us have not really realised the brain drain, the human drain that that island has experienced over the last few decades and still experiences. It is a tremendous challenge. It is a tremendous work in progress. That is what the Government needs to be telling the country, not that no one else has done anything for Cayman Brac and trying to lambaste the prior administration because they want to look good for next May.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I think you have gone over one hour. Would this be a convenient time to rest your voice for a suspension of 15 minutes. Not meaning it that way, meaning the constant speaking. Or would you prefer to continue debating?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I would never take anything you say in a bad way.

The Speaker: Well, then we will continue debating

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: —and I appreciate the break—

The Speaker: Go ahead. We will take the morning break later on.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: No, but Madam Speaker, I would appreciate the break for my voice.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I don't know. . . I must have said something in the wrong order.

The Speaker: No you didn't. You are always a gentleman. Continue your debate.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you Madam Speaker.

In all that, the one thing that I would encourage the Government to do, though, is to not only look seriously at what the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has said, and many people before him I might add. And I know that he will acknowledge that very quickly. He is not the first person to have come to this House or publicly and said that we still have not gotten the right equipment for Cayman Brac. That has been an argument that has been age old.

I can remember when we hired NCB Consulting in 200—that being a great debate about what equipment was truly needed for Cayman Brac so that tourism could really thrive and be maximised on that island. So that's not new. But I agree that a business plan really needs to be developed and we need to put our money where our mouth is and try to ensure that we develop Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and there is a sustainable economy that suits their wishes and aspirations.

I am not just going to subscribe to the notion that a lot of people down here in Grand Cayman have of saying, Oh well, that can't be achieved because, you know, if you get too much development then Cayman Brac isn't going to want that either.

I think that we have learned a lot of lessons here in Grand Cayman, and if we are going to keep our finger to the pulse and be sensible, we can develop Cayman Brac sensibly and within the wishes and aspirations of the residents of Cayman Brac.

But, Madam Speaker, as I understand it in regard to domestic tourism, we have a major problem with the timing of the jet service into Cayman Brac, I think on a Friday night—

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thursday, Friday and Sunday as I understand it, the jet goes in ridiculously late. So much so, that when you get there a lot of the amenities, like the stores, have already closed. Restaurants, et cetera, perhaps may be already closed. I mean if we are going to try to enhance domestic tourism and encourage people from Grand Cayman to go to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, we have to make the flight scheduling and the packaging attractive.

We ought to be talking to Cayman Airways and the travel agent about putting together special packages, promoting those special packages. That is what I was hoping to hear in this speech. I was hoping to hear not just an encouragement for people to go; we have always said that we want people to go. Are we really going to make it attractive for Grand Caymanians to go over to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Madam Speaker, as you and I well know, there are so many people in our community who never set foot on either of the Sister Islands. There is a real untapped market. I know a group from a church in West Bay went up, I think it was early this year or late last year. The vast majority of those persons (a senior citizen group) had never set foot on either Sister Island. And they thoroughly enjoyed it. So I believe that there is much that can be achieved but there is much work to be done. Much work to be done.

The honourable Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman spent a good deal of his time yesterday touching on an issue that is near and dear to my heart. That is macroeconomic performance in Cayman, how it relates to the cost of living and how do we try to address that major issue—people's purchasing power. That is all it is all about; it is about how much can people purchase with the money they make. If people cannot survive, misery will abound. Plain and simple, Madam Speaker.

He had a very interesting train of thought, but I would like to develop some points in it and I would also like to clarify a few of the issues that he relayed. And some of this touches on the Honourable Third Official Member's contribution as well.

We see the Federal Reserve in the US, the Federal Reserve Board of Governors which is chaired by Ben Bernanke. He is charged with instituting policies to right or make better the US economy. As the Chairman of the Board of Governors in recent times he has lowered interest rates. He has lowered interest rates for specific objectives in the United States of America, not the Cayman Islands. So we have to be clear about that.

There is a huge subprime crisis which has led to a massive housing crisis. Every candidate in the US primary election is talking about what needs to happen from a Federal Government perspective to keep people in their homes. And just to make it abundantly clear, subprime is simply . . . if predatory lending practices where lending institutions lend people money who otherwise would not be able to afford the mortgage. In other words if interest rates go to low levels, naturally the repayment decreases.

So, for example, if it is a $250,000 mortgage, and if interest rates are at 6 per cent and your repayment per month is $1,500, if interest rates come down to 4 per cent your repayment then comes down to $1,000. But your income has not moved materially and the lending institutions, having good knowledge, that that rate of interest is not within the band of what is the average over the last two decades, then lend you money on the basis that you now qualify at those historically low rates. In most people's eyes that is not good banking practices. That is a form of predatory lending. You are lending money to people who you know in normal circumstances cannot afford what you are giving them.

We know the prime four years ago had reached historic lows. Tons of people, millions of people in the US were lent money that they could not afford and as soon as those interest rates started to rise, because the majority are on variable rate mortgages, their repayments started to rise. Well, guess what, the rise in repayment outstrips any raise in pay that they got. Hence they got into financial difficulties.

Now, the United States is trying to address that and trying to stave off inflation. However, in doing so, it has had the knock-on effect of causing the financial market to not be very interested in the US dollar any more because if the US dollar, which is tied directly to its own interest rate and that interest rate is going down, if you are an investor you are not going to put money in a currency that is earning you less.

So, two things have happened: The US dollar has declined. Guess what? The Cayman Islands dollar is directly pegged to the US dollar. It is 20 per cent stronger but directly pegged. Every time the US dollar declines, the cost of goods and services in the Cayman Islands increases. It increases because we do not produce and manufacture locally. All of our goods are imported. So one big piece of the equation that was left out yesterday was paying particular attention to that aspect.

Now, it has had another knock-on effect, which is the decline in interest rates. Lots of people have started to move their money out of anything that is directly tied to interest rate movement and US currency and have put it in commodities. What is one of the most necessary commodities? Oil. What does oil do? Oil makes electricity. So, all of a sudden, people pumping a lot of money into oil have caused the price of oil to skyrocket. It is at historic highs because the US dollar is at historic lows.

So, Madam Speaker, while I acknowledge what the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said yesterday, that we should charge our people as best they can to try to refinance . . . that is the underlying message he was giving, that if interest rates are going down and you have been with a banking institution let's say 5 or 10 years, you have proven your credit worthiness, if you are at prime plus 2, you should be going to your bank and saying "Can I have some consideration here for prime plus 1?" If you can lock in a lower spread long term, your repayment is going to go down.

However, while some persons who have a mortgage are temporarily benefitting, we have to acknowledge that that benefit is but temporary because we certainly have seen the reaction on the US political scene. A lot of people are now questioning whether or not Mr. Bernanke and his Federal Reserve Bank Board of Governors are doing the right thing by lowering interest rates.

What happens when their economic circumstances dictate that they want to stave off the rising cost of fuel? What happens when they want to encourage people to get back in the US dollar and back in Treasury bills and Treasury notes? What is going to happen is that interest rates are probably going to go back up. So, that holiday that people are on is not to be confused with any permanent decline in the cost of living. We also need to be reminding people that they should be shopping around and they should be trying to make sure that the banks are competing for their good credit. I moved two motions as it relates to banking practices and interest rates, a topic near and dear to my heart.

The high street banks in this country cannot say that they have not done well and are doing well. I clearly remember the first report issued by a local bank after Hurricane Ivan. Their unaudited accounts were in the newspaper. And they still were up in terms of their net income and their earnings-to-capital ratio. Okay? So the banks are doing well. A point that has been advocated is for there to be perhaps some diversification of access to capital in this country. Perhaps if the high street banks are going to continue to insist that long-term lending mortgages are tied to a short-term price (that is, prime), then perhaps it is time that Government tells CIMA to look at how they are going to encourage other players into this market who have capital and who want to take on the Cayman Islands.

For a long time we were told, Oh, well, you're in the hurricane belt and you're a little small country in the middle of the Caribbean, so as a country your country risk is so high that we have to charge you prime plus 3 and prime plus 4. But I think Hurricane Ivan dispelled all the myths about the risk of the Cayman Islands. The reconstruction and recovery in this country—despite the untruths in the speech by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, this country has rebounded remarkably well and we have proven that we are a good solid market. So perhaps it is time that we stopped seeing situations where our long-term mortgages are prime plus yet we can look online and look at USA Today and see where the average national 30-year fixed mortgage rate is lower—considerably lower—than our variable rate. Considerably lower, Madam Speaker.

Cost of money, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is asking to right the cost of that all-important commodity—credit—money that we are borrowing is of crucial importance to every citizen. I think all of us would implore Government to come up with any programme where they are going to start real financial counseling and be able to assist our citizens in making better decisions and be more fiscally savvy and fiscally responsible because we should be shopping around for our mortgages.

If we are persons who have not missed any payments on our mortgages and we are good customers, why should it be that we are paying infinitum and not getting the best rate that we can get? I said this I think it was two years ago (I am not going to just try to beat up the banks). I applaud the banks for some of the work they have done in this area. There are many banks that are now offering “premier customers” prime plus 1. I remember 10 or 15 years ago prime plus 1 was strictly for the very wealthy. So you have to acknowledge that the institutions and business sector have done something. You have to give credit where it is due.

Speaking of the slick politics displayed by the PPM Administration, I note in recent times that the Honourable Leader of Government Business at his Cabinet press briefings has . . . and remember what I said earlier, a Cabinet press briefing should be about the decisions made by Cabinet over the last week and matters that are of national importance. The lowering of interest rates is certainly not a Cabinet matter, but I agree it is a matter that is of national importance. It is very important to all of us in this country. So, he gleefully and gladly has announced the decline of interest rates, somehow wanting to tie his Cabinet and his Administration to people doing better. I am hoping that when the rates start to increase that he also makes those announcements at Cabinet press briefings. I hope he does not forget that. You know, Madam Speaker, I think we go both ways on that street.

I know the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. He is a man after my own heart in that regard. He knows what I am saying.

Madam Speaker, you know history is something else. I started off my contribution by saying that it would do a lot of the legislators well to go back to some of the debates, go back to some of the budgets and peruse them to really get an understanding of how we have arrived at the point we are at. The Honourable Third Official Member mentioned growth rates in the economy. He mentioned that despite declining projections now those projections still compare favourably to the period 2001-2003, I think he mentioned. I agree with the honourable gentleman. I take his numbers as accurate.

However, there is one piece of that puzzle that needs to be elaborated on. We need to talk about the 2000 budget which had a massive $55 million tax package of which $30-something million was paying for recurrent expenditure. We need to talk about the September 11 terrorist attacks. We need to talk about the SARS outbreak. We need to talk about the Afghanistan War. We need to talk about the Gulf War. We need to talk about what the world economy was and what the state of the Cayman Islands economy was because of the world economy during those times.

What might compare favourably to that period? The Government took over a country and an economy that was robust and, had we not frightened and scared off people in their haste to get elected, had the PPM not frightened and scared off capital, frightened and scared off people in their haste to get elected—talking about they were going to take Cayman back—if they had not done that, perhaps they might not find themselves in the mess that they find themselves in now when they have to come like a sinner in church at the altar quoting scripture, singing hymns . . . my God, Madam Speaker.

Man, talk about prison religion. You know, I see this as being distress religion. This is that crisis religion. You know what happens, Madam Speaker, people go to prisons and then all of a sudden they become Christians. You know what happens, Madam Speaker, you get sick and all of a sudden you find religion. Same thing happening here! Mismanagement! Not understanding how a country works.

Economy? Shaky.

Now we find religion!

But, Madam Speaker, I cannot knock them for finding religion. Okay? That's good. That's a good thing. I am happy to see that that's the route the Government has gone. But, Madam Speaker, you know, humph . . . they can quote all the scripture they want. They can ask the Caymanians to close their eyes and pretend that it is good that all is great all they want. If people cannot feed themselves, pay their electricity bill, pay their phone bills; if people cannot afford to pay for lunches for their children . . . I do not care how much the Leader of Government Business gets up and talks about pretend it's better, pretend all is good, and we will be okay. Keep the faith, brethren. Keep the faith.

Madam Speaker, people keep the faith when the economy is moving. People keep the faith when there is capital being invested jobs created and people not being laid off. People keep the faith when there is genuine effort to move the economy forward. At the end of the day, I have asked this question in this House . . . if every person in the country had $100 in their pocket and they had their children and they had to decide how to divide that up and they had to all of a sudden talk about, Well, do I go to the doctor? That is health. Do I make sure I have police? That is safety. Go to school? That is education. How will people spend that last amount of money? How will they take care of their children?

That is prioritisation and being honest. Be honest about what you are doing. Being honest and forthright with the country will always leave you on steady ground. But like the repentant sinner, here comes the PPM acknowledging they have done wrong, acknowledging through the backdoor that they have told this country untruths in their own document—telling the people, but hiding it conveniently on pages 34 and 35—that they are going to change Immigration. We're not talking about taking Cayman back any more. We're not talking about that any more.

Madam Speaker, I think the Third Elected Member for George Town should have stayed in if she really wanted to debate. But I think she might be learning something.

The Speaker: Could we stop the crosstalk please so that the Member can continue his debate?

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I hear her saying I was on the Immigration Committee. Yes. I was on the IRT and the IRT was very specific about how these policies inflict men's patience. Nobody stood up here in December 2003 and talked about taking Cayman back and running off and scaring people. Nobody stood up in this House at that time and chased away the very goose that would lay the golden egg.

We all talked about partnerships. We all talked about how important it was for us to ensure that we had the foreign direct investment that this country so vitally needed so that Caymanians would benefit. And so that Caymanians would continue to improve. And as they improved, they would become the masters of capital. They would become partners and owners in business.

But you see, Madam Speaker, they don't understand that. Just do not understand it! But it all comes out in the wash. Just last year, November 2007, I stood in this honourable House as we were debating that Strategic Policy Statement that the Government has used as the basis for this budget, which, I might add, the Opposition did not vote for. I said, and I quote, "I cannot feel confident to stand here, on 30 November 2007, and say that given the world's economic performance and the fact that we know that the world economy will have natural periods of slow down and recession, Madam Speaker, that this is the path that we should take the country. I cannot stand here and say that we have institutions, like education institutions, that are in such a state of disrepair that we have to go headlong, headlong, into massive borrowings and massive debt to try to convince the country that that will be for their best interests." [2007/8 Official Hansard Report p. 635]

This was us arguing against the Government's agenda, against the Government's plan of continuing to launch this country into an unsustainable state because we could sense it coming. We were listening to people out there and listening to people saying that they are sitting on their hands, they are not investing in Cayman. They have a project but they really do not know that they need to go forward with that because they hear the rhetoric and know that they perhaps cannot sell the product they want.

I also said, generally speaking, the cost of all commodities goes up over time. It is exaggerated because our dollar is weakened so drastically against other major world currencies. It is weakened because we are one-for-one pegged with the US dollar. When I say one-for-one, that means for every movement the peg is one-for-one. We know the actual .8 to 1 peg that is in place, so for every movement in US dollar good or bad we have to deal with the consequences.

Madam Speaker, we were talking that talk for three years. In particular, those types of analyses have been offered up to Government for 24 months. And lo and behold, the Government then has to come and tell the country, Well, we're projecting revenue shortfalls.

Big picture, Madam Speaker. Where do the Cayman Islands go? The PPM Government believes that if you close your eyes and imagine it is good, it is good. This PPM Government also believes that it can do the same insane thing over and over and it will get a different result one of these days. I am here to say to the PPM Government that if you do the same thing you did yesterday you are going to get the same results you got yesterday. No vision whatsoever for this country.

To imagine that a government knowing the road infrastructure that we have in and out of George Town, knowing the congestion, knowing we only have space for a two-lane road in and out of this central business district, yet they are going to be insane enough to even entertain the thought that we are going to move our cargo port basically about a mile down the road and think that that is going to fix it?

Oh yes, that fixes the problem.

Thinking outside the box. I am not sure what box the Government is thinking outside of. I know this much, they are thinking well outside any sound economic and business sense box. Way outside that box. They are so far out of the box, Madam Speaker, that I do not even think it is in sight of the PPM Government.

The same with the Airport. Imagine an MLA from West Bay being brave enough to stand in this House and say to our people and all the country that we advocate moving the Airport. In every country in the world, every time you have redevelopment of airport and port, period, the move has been to get them out of the central business district because most central business districts have grown over time. So their capacity to absorb major ports, whether they be sea or air, is not there. They just do not have the physical landmass and compaction to do it.

So, what does the PPM suggest? Well, they are going to try the same insanity that we did yesterday and get a different result today because we can dress it up in red. Just close your eyes, ladies and gentlemen and all Cayman, imagine the good and it will be good.

We have an Airport that we have already moved the road once to accommodate. Now we know we have to move a road again. We have to lose a cricket pitch. Even with all that I understand that we still have to go into the North Sound—the jewel of tourism, by the way—but we have to go into the North Sound. Yet the Government does not see the sense of looking at the big picture and saying where will Grand Cayman be in 15 to 20 years? That is what is benefitting future generations.

Their definition of “generation” is political curves. I finally got that. It took me a while to clearly understand it, but for the PPM the next political term is the next generation. So, to benefit that next “generation” is to fool the people into believing that what they are doing is right or sensible to get re-elected. Future generations, Madam Speaker . . . most people acknowledge generations are certainly not four years. Four years apart is not a generation. And for us to really benefit this country, we need to have a vision of where we want it to be. And where we want it to be ought to be in a state to provide the infrastructure and opportunity for our children and our grandchildren to prosper.

Perhaps, Madam Speaker, it is because of my age. And perhaps it is because my children are so small that I get so wound up about these very important issues. When I think . . . when I see things that blind Bartemaeus could see, and see the Government going headlong—headlong—making decisions that take us headlong into disaster that our children—my children—are going to have to pay for . . . It is my children that are going to have to deal with all these insane decisions, absolutely insane decisions, because one little area called George Town.

Now, Go East Initiative . . . I guess a part of the Go East Initiative does not take into account whatsoever the fact that we could take some important services and move them east and cause real economic vibrancy in the eastern districts. Do they understand what an airport in the eastern districts would bring to the eastern districts? Do they understand what that would do to traffic? Do they understand what that would do to this economy? Where is the vision, Madam Speaker?

Vision? Madam Speaker, the eye is on the prize. And the prize is May 2009. And you know that is tough for some of them to admit. It is really, really tough because they do dress themselves and sell themselves as something different. But their decision is how they will be judged.

I say that the public will look on and find that the decisions, the implications of the decisions that this Administration is making, will have gravely ill effects to this country. And, Madam Speaker, I believe that with every fibre of my being. History has proven that more times than not, we have been right and the Honourable Leader of the Government Business and the Honourable Deputy Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Minister of Education, have been wrong. Hence, the reason we have asked them, they should go into the history books.

When we brought a budget down here in December 2001, the budget that saved this country from financial ruin because the current Leader of Government Business in November 2000 got up and told this country, quite rightly, that the country was broke. He brought down a tax package of $55 million, $30-plus million of which paid for recurrent expenditure, paid for groceries. Who would go out and have to borrow for groceries? He did it!

We stood up. We said we did not like it. We supported it because the country needed to move on. We had just come out of a general election and we needed a budget, we needed to function. All of us who were here know the times we were in.

By December 2001, when a sensible budget that caused there to be increases in areas that we knew could afford it and, Madam Speaker, in areas that we knew through the OECD and other international initiatives, FATF initiative, we knew were going to cause a certain loss of business in Cayman. We knew that certain Class B licenses were going to go. They simply were not going to stay in Cayman. Everybody knew that. All and sundry.

So we said, Well, we are going to get the most out of them before they leave and we are going to fix this financial problem. We took a tough decision, Madam Speaker. Tough! I remember sitting in that committee room and the lawyers coming in and this one and that one coming in and saying, We don't like this, we don't like that.

I remember the Opposition getting up and saying, Oh you're going to cause (because it was December 2001) people not to get a bonus this year if you institute those fees in the law firms. They are going to leave the Cayman Islands. We are going to lose the financial industry. May 2005, they didn't reverse a one of them. Not a one! Kept every one of those fee structures in place. Every one of them.

If we add up since 2002 through today, because those same fees are in place on those same licenses, if we add up the hundreds of millions of dollars that that has brought into this country's government's coffers, you would quickly see that the country could not have survived without it. They were wrong then, they are wrong now. Three years they have said let us not amass this massive debt.

Madam Speaker, a point that I have been very reserved in bringing into this whole debate over the last three years about the sustainability and affordability of debt, has been the whole issue of what is our bottom line tax base. In other words, when we look at ourselves as the people who are the legal belongers in this country, not people on a work permit who tomorrow if things change more than likely will leave, when we look at how much they contribute to Government, that is the all important measure—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have seven minutes remaining.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

That is the all important measure when we are going to start talking about debt servicing ratios.

We have seen these rounds of attacks. A committee of the House of Commons is now looking at off-shore centres again, looking at their impact on the global capital markets, the global economy.

Madam Speaker, the attacks are not going to end. From the big picture, the big world's perspective, a country with 50,000 people should not be a major financial player on the world scene. We should not have somewhere around 10,000 hedge funds registered here with trillions of dollars of assets. According to them, we should not have the 270-plus class B licensed banks. According to them, we should not have the captive insurance companies.

We have seen the investigations launched by the US Senate. Now, we have been smart-ish so far to try and really defend ourselves. That is something that we have been starting to understand and do a much better job at, and the private sector has assisted greatly in that regard. But let us bring this argument back into focus.

When we are talking about sustainability, yes we cannot just paint gloom and doom and say, Well, we can't afford anything, therefore we are not going to improve any infrastructure. And the Opposition has never advocated that position. What we have said is when we incur debt, we need to make sure that when we are looking at our ability, the government's ability to raise revenue that we need to really make sure that we are looking at what is the sustained tax base in this country.

What happens, Madam Speaker, if there is a launch or an attack that we just do not anticipate today? And I am not suggesting that this is going to happen tomorrow, but let us say it happens in five years' time and all of a sudden the hedge funds are gone. The mutual funds are gone. The class B licensed banks are gone. What are we going to be left saddled with? We need to keep our eye on the ball. And we need to be truthful to ourselves and say, Okay, what do we need to do? Not want . . . I want everything for Caymanians!

I think all of us want everything for Caymanians, for ourselves and for our people. But we need to be careful about sustainability. What is truly the sustainable level of future commitment we want and ought to make?

Can we survive by phasing some of the Government projects and saying, Okay, we have a priority area, but within the priority area here is the absolute must do this year. Three years later we are going to do "Y", three years later we are going to do "Z" . . . and on down the line. Madam Speaker, at the end of the day, the proof is in the pudding and we are starting to see the economy start to crack. We are starting to see some of our fears realised.

Madam Speaker, if there is any genuine commitment on the Government's part to working together, as the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has said, the Opposition will be there to try and work. But you see, Madam Speaker, that has never been this Government's style. Let us take the Constitutional Modernization process.

Kept that under wraps and all of a sudden it is launched to leave the Opposition behind.

At the end of the day I can stand here and say that I have heard a lot of rhetoric. I still see much too much commitment on behalf of future generations than I am comfortable with. Madam Speaker, I cannot in good conscience support where this Government is taking this country that I love so much.

I know they are going to come behind, as is normal, and point fingers. I know they are going to come behind and talk about what was done here and what was done there; who did what, who said what, because that is really this Government's hallmark—smear others, do nothing, ask the public to close their eyes hope for the best and wing it on a prayer. We are going to make it, keep the faith by and by.

Unfortunately, Madam Speaker, that does not cut the mustard. It falls way short of cutting the mustard. I am big enough, been here long enough, can take whatever—and, oh, Madam Speaker, you have been here a lot longer than me—can take whatever they dish out. What I know is that facts are stubborn things, and facts have been painted. The country really understands where they are.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Ms. Juliana O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I'm just begging your indulgence until I can have the podium.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you very much, indeed, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, once again, I am extremely honoured to have been given yet another opportunity to rise to give my contribution as far as it relates to the Throne Speech and the auxiliary contributions that have been made from the Government's perspective and from that of His Excellency the Governor.

Indeed, as always, I am extremely humbled and grateful to the people of Cayman Brac and those of Little Cayman for their continued expressions of confidence and trust and optimism that they have placed in me for the three successive terms. And I have no doubt, Madam Speaker, that the good sensible people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will not be blinded by the redness of the eye, but, indeed, they will see the logic of the day.

Now, Madam Speaker, it is my considered view that the genesis of the success story of the Cayman Islands in fact came from the fact that we were founded upon the sea. We did not begin our success story, thankfully, by the election of the PPM Government. In fact, what a woeful state we would be in today if that was the measure of our success. In saying that, Madam Speaker, I would wish with your permission, to just share a poem to remind myself and others of who we are and from whence we came. It is entitled "Speak Out For Jesus":

You talk about your business, your bonds and stocks and gold,
And in all worldly matters you're so brave and bold;
But why are you so silent about salvation's plan?
Why don't you speak for Jesus and speak out like a man?

You talk about the weather, and the crops of corn and wheat,
You speak of friends and neighbours that pass along the street;
You call yourself a Christian and like the gospel plan then why not speak for Jesus and speak out like a man?

Are you ashamed of Jesus and the story of the cross that you lower his pure banner and let it suffer loss?

Have you forgotten his suffering? Did he die for you in vain?

If not, then live and speak for Jesus and speak out like a man.

Now I know Madam Speaker, that we have come so far from what our parents built this shore and steadfast foundation on, that it is not even considered politically correct to make reference in public . . . and we have not yet got the Bill of Rights entrenched in our Constitution . . . might I interject that right here and now. In fact, as I have always done during my past 12-year tenure in this honourable House, unashamedly stand up for what I believe in for what has made me what I am today; in fact, for what has made this country what we are today, whether or not we wish to admit it. And we cannot sing the success story of the Cayman Islands unless we continue to acknowledge that the God from whence gave that success not only is the Alpha but, indeed, he is the Omega, and the sooner we take cognizance of that and genuinely believe it, the better off we have of securing our future.

Now, Madam Speaker, most people who know me know that I studied law, but English is perhaps one of my favourite topics, and though words come cheap some will allege words are my life. I listen very attentively to what is said at all times, even when it appears that I'm busy reading here or writing. God has blessed me with the ability to pick up quite a lot that has been said, in particular with facial expressions and otherwise, that I can weigh and see whether it is found in the balance, or whether I can take the words as they have been presented.

Madam Speaker, just three (I would like to say short, but once you are in the middleclass that has been so crushed by the PPM Government, it is not as short as one would like it to believe) . . . But some three years ago when the clarion call was being sent out for the people of these Islands to put their trust in the Government, and when the call was also married with “help was on the way”, I believe that if we are to put credence on those statements, when we married it with the promise of being a sunshine government, if the test was put today I am sure we would see that there has been an eclipse somewhere along the way. And, certainly, if there has been sunshine in Grand Cayman, please spread it to the Sister Islands. Because, not only from my political tenure, but as a resident of the Sister Islands, we on the eastern side of Cayman Brac surely must be living in some other economical utopia because if this is not the worst that I have seen Cayman Brac, in particular, then I don't know. And I don't have a disconnect Madam Speaker. Yes, I have come from the grassroots, but I have walked with kings and I know my people.

This has been a Government (again, as far as it relates to the Sister Islands) where the one, two, three, and maybe if you count hard enough you may get to ten persons or families who have benefited significantly while the rest have been woefully left behind, Madam Speaker. And yet they have the audacity to come and present their leader—also a Bracker through heritage, not birth—to ask the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to trust and to have faith?

Well, Madam Speaker, I took the time to look at these two words: First, “trust”. I can see why some people bought in on that concept. Never mind we did not have a PPM Member running at the time of the election; that was after-the-fact annunciation. We understand the reasons why and we don't lay blame for those reasons, perhaps others would have done likewise. But to put trust means that they were asking to put belief or confidence to rely on their goodness, their character and their power or ability. Perhaps a reasonable proposition at the time when there was not an opportunity to put it to test, but now, Madam Speaker, we have gone into three years and I can see why the Leader has decided (perhaps, reminding his good self of the definition of trust) that, you know, we have to change gears.

Let's not use that trust word—and I wasn't able to find it very many places, if any at all, in this whole entire lengthy protracted contribution—let's say “Keep the faith”. Well, Madam Speaker, may I submit that if we are going to keep something we ought to take time to know what we are going keep. And I quickly referred to what I call the “Faith” chapter in the Good Book that everybody now is referring to. “Keeping the Faith”—let's see what the Leader means.

If we look at Hebrews 11 and take the time to read it, and I am going to put it as proposition so he can answer if he so chooses when he debates or gets someone else to bring it out for him. Hebrews 11, I will not read it, Madam Speaker, but I did read it and I found 12 different examples of faith, and I want him to tell me and this honourable House and the wider Caymanian community which of these 12 definitions he wanted the Caymanian people to concur with, or to adopt, or to adapt to.

The first one I found, Madam Speaker, was a sacrificial faith, and those who want to check it they can check verse 4 in Hebrews 11. And the example is Abraham and I will just read part of the verse: “. . . he being dead yet speaketh.” Is this the type of faith that the Leader of Government Business wants Caymanians to have?

Then I found an example of “translated faith” being Enoch. It says that he should see death and was not found. Is this the type of faith that the Leader of Government Business was asking the Caymanian people to have?

The third example of faith I found was “preserving faith”. The example, Noah—“. . . being warned of God of things not seeing yet, moved with fear, prepared an ark to the saving of his house . . .” Perhaps this is the faith he wants us to adopt.

Then I found an example, Madam Speaker, of obeying faith. Again, the example was Abraham and I quote: “He went out not knowing where he went.” Is this the type of faith, Madam Speaker, that the Leader wants the Caymanian populist to have?

Another example of faith, in searching for its definition was “believing faith”, an example given was that of Sarah. Again, I quote: “. . . received strength to conceive seed, and was delivered of a child. . .” Is this the type of faith that the Leader of Government Business wishes our beloved people to have?

There was also the example of “trust in faith” and the example given was Isaac. The quotation: “. . . that God was able to raise him up, even from the dead.” Is this the type of faith that the Leader of Government Business wants at the end of his term? Is this the condition that he wishes to see the Caymanian people in?

And then there was “prophesying faith” and the example given of that is Jacob. The quotation: “. . . leaning upon [the top of] his staff.” Is this the condition that the Leader of Government Business wishes to leave the Caymanian people in upon his departure come next year?

There was an example of “commanding faith”. Example given was that of Joseph. Quotation: “. . . when he died made mention of the departing of the children . . .” Once again, I put the question: Is this the type of faith he is asking the Caymanians to have as we see our many children being left behind?

Number nine, I found an example of what I term “daring faith” and the example given was Moses—not this one, but in the Old Testament, Madam Speaker. The quotation: “. . . not afraid of the king . . .” or might I add, “the Governor”. Is this the kind of faith, Madam Speaker, that the Leader of Government Business wants for our Caymanians to have? Only he can come back in response.

The tenth example I found, Madam Speaker, was what I term “chosen faith”. Again, the example given in the Bible was that of Moses. The quotation: “. . . refused to be called the son of Pharaoh’s daughter; Choosing rather to suffer affliction with the people of God, than to enjoy the pleasures of sin for a season; . . .” Perhaps this is the kind of faith he wants knowing that the Bill of Rights is coming up and with the headlines of “homosexuality” we have seen this past week.

Madam Speaker, I found an eleventh example of faith. It was what I call “conquering faith”. The example given was that of Joshua and the quotation is: “The walls of Jericho fell down. . .” Is this the kind of condition the Leader of Government Business wishes to find the Caymanian populace in at the end of his tenure?

And then with a sigh of relief from shore the twelfth faith was the “delivering faith”. The example given was that of Rahab. And the quotation: “. . . the harlot Rahab perished not with them that believed not . . .” Maybe, Madam Speaker, this is the type of faith that the Leader of Government wants the Caymanian populace to have. Or does he perhaps want all of the twelve mentioned above? And lest I forget, Madam Speaker, being the avid reader that I am, my eyes could not miss verse [39]. It says, “And these all having [referring to faith] obtained a good report through faith, yet received not the promise:” And if I were in court I would quickly sit down, Madam Speaker, and say I rest my case, but because I am also a politician, like the Second Elected Member from Cayman Brac, and my colleague from West Bay, I too have a role to play in this Parliament here today.

You see, Madam Speaker, in my view the Leader of Government Business, from its very inception quoted from the Bible, from Ecclesiastes. Of course, being an average churchgoer I recognised immediately that he was somehow trying to emanate the wisest man that ever lived, but that too has a consequence because the wisest man that ever lived, indeed, was just that. But he certainly had the most concubines recorded in the Bible as well. And, Madam Speaker, he, at the end of his day said: “All is vanity”.

Madam speaker, I was somehow encouraged to see the words that were taken from Ecclesiastes 3 in the very first paragraph of the [address by the] Honourable Leader of Government Business, and I note with interest that he did not quote with entirety, but he chose the sentences from this chapter which was poetic irony, if I may so term it. Because he prefers, you see, Madam Speaker, linguistic elegance and simplicity.

I wish to thank him at this juncture for providing me with the first two adjectives because certainly I can say that I have perused his contribution with much care and attention. I can only conclude, Madam

Speaker, that it was nothing short of linguistic elegance. As far as simplicity is concerned, I will leave that for my conclusion.

He referred, Madam Speaker, to it being “now”, we’re now in a time to sow, to reap, a time for peace, a time for war, a time when there is little, and a time when there is plenty. Having studied psychology, I quickly and immediately recognised what the Leader was trying to do. In my humble opinion, he was setting the stage for what I would term lowering the expectation of our populace. Well, certainly, Madam Speaker, I cannot speak for those in Grand Cayman because I have a more casual relationship here. The Members can get up and defend their own constituency. But certainly I can speak with confidence for the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. He has to do much, much more than talk about a time when there is little and a time when there is plenty because under the PPM Government we are still looking for the plenty, Madam Speaker.

And then, if that was not enough, he puts the icing on the cake of this linguistic elegance. For a while, Madam Speaker, I almost thought of the words, and I am sure this will bring a smile to your face as I say it—being a chef of flowery language. Because it did cross my mind as I heard him go on and, Madam Speaker, with your permission I would just like to read it again for two purposes: to convince myself that upon my first reading I got it correctly, but, secondly, to make sure that the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman really hear what the premise of his whole debate was.

And I quote, Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business: It says, “. . . some seasons bring rich blessings. Others, however, bring untold misery. Turn on your television set on any given day! [Unless you are in Cayman Brac, you forgot to say that we don’t get all the stations always, but nonetheless] Switch to BBC World, CNN, or any other major channel! [and might I interject, Madam Speaker, perhaps we should have CITN because the misery is not just international, it is on the Sister Islands] You will see vivid images of the misery people in certain parts of the world are experiencing. In many instances, theirs is simply a struggle for the basic necessities of life—clothes to wear, food to eat, a decent house to live in. Theirs is a constant struggle against considerable odds to make ends meet.” And, Madam Speaker, hadn’t he taken a cap or bag and took a collection at that time, I think even I would have made a contribution to these poor people and these circumstances that he was so vividly reminding us of. But might I, through this medium, Madam Speaker, invite that Honourable Leader to spend more time on the streets of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, meeting with the constituents there, and he would not have to resort to international examples. But that did not surprise me, Madam Speaker, because they said help was on the way, leaving out the silent letter ‘A’.

I think that if they wanted to be the sunshine government they should have come to the Caymanian public and said, "Help will be coming from away". Why do I say that, Madam Speaker? Because when we see the consultancy fees that have been paid to come to advise them, interpret the advice, implement the advice and come to take it through next year May for election, certainly, help had to be coming from away and the Caymanian people should be told that, especially when they were a government that so ably and eloquently advocated the rising of the Caymanian spirit and the nationalism for the Caymanian people; not even wanting to speak the word status, but oh, woe unto those consultants! Where are their nationalities, Madam Speaker? Perhaps the sun needs to come out of the eclipse and some sunshine start to shine.

This is an appropriate time, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Proceedings will be suspended until 2.00 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.44 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.26 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The First Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman continuing her debate.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, just before we took the luncheon break I was about to embark on a statement which was made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business in his contribution some days back. With your kind indulgence and permission I would ask you and honourable Members if you wish, to turn your attention to page 3 where he refers to and I quote: "Madam Speaker, as I deliver this Policy Statement in 2008-09 Budget, I am particularly mindful of the many blessings which this PPM Government has received." And, in particular, Madam Speaker, he says, "Indeed, our very first blessing was the decision of the Caymanians to make the PPM their choice for change and to entrust the destiny of this country into our hands."

Madam Speaker, what arrogance! What utter nonsense! It is my respectful opinion, Madam Speaker, that this is nothing short of a presumptive declaration by the Honourable Leader of Government Business. And again might I remind the public, I am speaking as far as it relates to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and if the circumstances differ in Grand Cayman, I take no cognizance of that as I am not intimately involved with the constituents here. I am sure there are other representatives who are quite able to deal with that as deemed necessary.

Madam Speaker, over the past three years I have heard many, many words in the public domain that were used to describe the actions or the inactions of the PPM Government, but I can assure you, Madam Speaker, that "blessings" was not one. In fact, Madam Speaker, I would submit that the Leader of Government Business has absolutely lost touch and connectivity with the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. And I would go further, Madam Speaker, to submit that perhaps if he would spend less time behind Ed's Bar and spend more time with my constituents that the disconnect would not be as it has been presented.

Now, Madam Speaker, I thought long and hard before saying that. I have waited three years to see if that would improve, and it has not. And, Madam Speaker, I say that today without any apologies because I am sick and tired of persons coming into my constituent office, making complaints about the official car being there for long periods of time and for the increased hours past opening hours. And, Madam Speaker, we are in an open and transparent government, which I fully concur to those principles, but if we lift up such a high standard we must hold our heads up to it. Am I saying that any Member should not go? No, Madam Speaker, that is their preference. But when you visit the Brac on government business to attend government functions, it is not good enough to send a family member as a representative when you are there at an establishment having come over on official business paid by the purses of the Government. I will not remain silent, Madam Speaker, on that anymore. And I would hope that this would be the last time that I would have to speak on it because I am absolutely sick and tired of getting representation in that regard.

I also believe, Madam Speaker, that representation has also perhaps been made in that regard, because in recent months the official car is no longer being parked there. It is now the Custom's truck. But Cayman Brac is small, Madam Speaker. You have been there, you know. And it only belittles the reputation of other Members of Parliament, and it does not matter whether it is this Leader or another Leader, I speak it as I see it. Members who are on official business have no business in the bar rooms of this country. There are too many things happening that are of national importance that we should strive as much as possible to execute our duties in a sober frame of mind, Madam Speaker.

If we feel that politics has come to such a level that we can only do bar-round politics, it is no wonder the prophet Isaiah had to say "Woe unto these people"; because that woe, Madam Speaker, is going to come back. I heard a lady, with reference to these blessings that we are supposed to be having, referring to how God checked us up as Caymanian people when we had [Hurricane] Ivan, and yet it was such a fantastic miracle that as far as we are aware not one person died directly as a result of Hurricane Ivan. But,

Madam Speaker, what did we do? For a few short months we acted as Caymanians who are known worldwide. We were kind, generous, compassionate, caring. Our neighbour's keeper. But it did not take long before the evidence of those inherent Caymanian traits soon disappeared out of the window.

And, Madam Speaker, make no mistake, we talk about endangered species. Well, I am more convinced every single day that the Caymanians, certainly the Cayman Brackers and Little Caymanians, are becoming an endangered species. When are we going to have someone looking out for our species? Am I saying that we should operate in isolation, Madam Speaker? Absolutely not! Because, certainly, and I can speak for the past three years, the modus operandi on the Brac, as far as some Ministers are concerned . . . and I stress 'some' for avoidance of bringing embarrassment to the entire Government. I will not call those names, but those Ministers know how I interact with them. They give respect and I try my best to give respect back at all material times. If they are coming to the Brac, Madam Speaker, there are Ministers who will pick up their phone and say, 'Ms. Julie (or Juliana), I'm coming' or they will get their staff and say likewise. But the Leader of Government Business, Madam Speaker, who should be the one who is doing it . . . I can count on my one hand the number of times that it has been done. And, Madam Speaker, I raised this point last year and I hoped that I would not be here raising it again.

I was given the undertaking—and the records will bear it out—as far as it came for the road works, for example, that the First and Second Elected Members would sit down with the District Administration staff and the Leader of Government Business. After all, we are elected Members in this House and I believe it is not a slap in my face, Madam Speaker, but I would put it as a slap in the face of the good people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman when he, in particular, totally ignores the outcome of the last election as far as meetings are concerned. And, Madam Speaker, any Member in this House, yourself included as the Member for North Side when you sit on the Floor, would not sit by for four years and tolerate that, because at the end of the day, as the Minister for tourism said in jest, we are all politicians. And no matter how many altar calls, pleas are made for us to come together and work. It cannot be a unilateral effort; there must be some giving and taking.

Madam Speaker, I have taken it for three years now, and we have about twelve months or so to go through these (quote unquote) "blessings" on the Brac. And I really, really hope that some genuine effort is made within the next twelve months as we now embark upon a new budget for 2008/09, that the Leader of Government Business has enough manners and respect for the people of Cayman Brac, even if not for myself, Madam Speaker, to invite me to at least one capital investment planning meeting in the Brac. Out of an abundance of caution, I am not asking to be invited to the administration meetings where there are staff meetings or matters of that kind, but certainly, no matter who is in the Government, we are not always going to be in the Government or Opposition. Things change. I have been there twice, Madam Speaker, and things change.

The Good Book says we should treat other as we would want them to treat us. And I am sure, during his tenure as Opposition Member here, he probably had similar treatment. But he cannot say on this Floor that he got that treatment from me. Any time the Honourable Leader wanted to see me I made myself available to him, whether it was for a personal nature or for something from his constituency. I was not one of those Ministers, Madam Speaker, who sent selective invitations. No, Madam Speaker. We are all Caymanians and at the end of the day if we are to succeed we must come together, we must not just say so but we must actually act it.

And then, Madam Speaker, as I contemplated the plea from the Second Elected Member, I really, really wished that I could accept that on the surface, but, Madam Speaker, as recent as last Friday—and I give this example just to show the ingeniousness of this play, this political game that we are in—something as innocent as sponsoring the special needs persons from the Lighthouse School. I have had a relationship with these children long before I was Minister of Sports, and I am sure you likewise. So, I did not have to search long and hard when I heard a public plea for them to be sponsored or tickets to be bought for them to take a trip to my constituency of Cayman Brac. And I did what I felt I could afford to do and what was in my heart to do, and yet, something as simple as that caused the Second Elected Member, in his shop, which is a public place (that's how I got the information, from a customer) to curse once it was heard that Juliana had sponsored a thousand dollars to these poor children.

Now, Madam Speaker, how can I then come here today and really believe the plea, as much as I would like to believe it—late though it be—that that plea was a genuine one to come together? It just blows my mind, Madam Speaker. And you know, if we are not careful in this party business that we are now having, and its divisive nature that it has brought to these Islands, not just within these Chambers, Madam Speaker, but within families. I know on the Brac, and again, I speak in the Brac context, where families are being split over their loyalty and support, whether it is to the PPM Government or to the UDP Government, or whether they have an independent candidate they wish to support.

Cayman is too small, Madam Speaker, for us to play this type of politics. Yes, Government wants to be re-elected. Opposition has the desire to be Government and likewise, but do we have to destroy each other and strategise and devise to make sure that that wagon is surrounded one layer and two layers?

[inaudible comment]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: No, Madam Speaker. What I am doing, Member from George Town, is letting my constituents know . . .

No, the male Member, Madam Speaker.

I'm sorry I have to go across but I have to respond as I hear it come forth. What I am at long last doing is letting my constituents know and the people in Grand Cayman and, indeed, Members here, that when we hear these flowery things about so nice and dainty and they call for this, that is not what is operating on Cayman Brac, as far as it relates to me. And, Madam Speaker, may I take it further?

We, for a long time have had the challenge of dealing with employment of young people on the Brac. So, it would be remiss of me if I laid that blame at the feet of the Honourable Leader of Government Business. But what upsets me greatly is when we hear that a job has been filled, sometimes advertised, sometimes not, by persons who are not even Caymanians or Cayman Brackers. And yet we have persons who are willing, capable, and able. They go to interview after interview, Madam Speaker, They have even had the benefit of being told, 'well you came first or you came second' but yet cannot get a job (We know how things leak out of government).

Madam Speaker, it only lends to an unsuccessful recipe then when we see the Honduran national, for example, being married on a Saturday night and into a job on a Monday morning. Madam Speaker, I'm afraid but I almost had to say to some of these unemployed Brackers, 'come let me do a deed pole and you can choose from one of the six names to see if you land a job as easily.' Madam Speaker, this is Cayman and this is utter nonsense.

We were raised in a generation who, number one, did not have the patience that we have or the tolerance level that we have. A lot of them are educated to a greater extent than we are because of the opportunities and the privileges that were afforded to them. And we want to leave behind a legacy that we can say we have left a united Cayman. At the end of the day when we come to retirement, whether it is voluntarily or involuntarily, we must be mature enough politically to ensure that the greater majority is the beneficiary after taking a holistic approach that they will benefit.

Madam Speaker, when we begin to enter into the garrison of politics and the special interest politics, and only if you support me or my party politics, we are going down the road of those other Caribbean countries that we cry down and put down when their inhabitants come to look for a job here. Those who study economics know that every single country, including the great United States, rides waves and valleys. Cayman has ridden her wave for a long time; a long time, Madam Speaker, and yes we are blessed because of our Christian heritage—not because the PPM Government has been elected. The Bible tells us some sow, some water and some reap. There will be projects that will fall in each of those three categories. The PPM will have an opportunity to display their wisdom, foresight, vision and new projects. They will have the opportunity if they jump to it and maximise the opportunity to continue existing projects. And, of course, like all governments they can decide to stop them.

But, Madam Speaker, it is totally deceiving and untrue when we try to paint this red picture that the previous administration did not do anything for Cayman Brac. I would wish that after that statement was made that the Leader of Government Business or his delegate would go on a talk show or do a referendum or do a survey and ask the people of Cayman Brac whether or not I did what they wanted me to do.

Madam Speaker, if I had my manifesto here with the things that God has helped me to accomplish for the people of Cayman Brac, that gentleman would have to ask for an apology because God has helped me, through colleagues on three different governments, to get things for Cayman Brac that I myself did not imagine a single woman would be able to get. And you know what I mean. Not that we are a weaker vessel, but we live in a real world, Madam Speaker, and we are a minority whether we like it or not.

The people of Cayman Brac will tell you, even today, that whilst I was Minister I did not just pick out little interest groups or whoever had the most money, or whoever had the fairest skin or the most affluence. That is not the way I operate and I would implore those who have the opportunity and the responsibility, to not introduce that type of politics in these beloved Cayman Islands. We may temporarily reap short-lived benefits, but in the long run it will destroy our community and it will destroy our country. You do not have to go far to see what it is doing. Just take a visit to Cayman Brac and make your rounds, not just to who supported you but throughout the community and you will see.

Madam Speaker, I have always said that it is the duty for each government, each administration, to teach our people how to fish. That is where we are getting into trouble, Madam Speaker. I am so sick and tired of constituents coming to me, first time seeing politicians giving groceries, giving beef at Christmas, giving turtle meat . . . We must move away from that type of politics. That is an insult to the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We want more and we deserve more. We are an integral part of the Cayman Islands.

I was so relieved and happy to see that the PPM Government at its inception included in one of its eight or nine objectives to embrace the Sister Islands—or Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, as they should be rightly referred to. But, Madam Speaker, as my colleague from West Bay said, 'talk comes cheap'.

Yes, Madam Speaker, there are a handful of families—if I am liberal or generous with my comments—that have done very well on the Brac under the PPM Government. They are the ones who have the businesses. They are the ones who have the rentals. They are the ones who have the rental cars. They are the ones who got the contracts. They are the ones who got the information to make their benefit progress the way that they should with that advice. But, Madam Speaker, we have more than a handful of families. And you know the irony of this, Madam Speaker, those families perhaps did not even need the assistance of government because they are wealthy in their own manner, whether it is through land or through money. But, Madam Speaker, I heard a past colleague say that the song is not completely over yet, and it is going to be over, but the punishment that my people have to go through for twelve more months if there is not a change in this attitude.

And, Madam Speaker, while I am here I want to specifically mention the attitude of the Honourable Minister responsible for Social Services. I know how difficult it is to get monies for this field. It is not one of those glamorous areas. It is usually dealing with the underprivileged, the handicapped, the indigent, and it is always difficult to get financial allocations for this. But yet, he takes the time to answer your telephone calls; he takes the time to respond to your texts, and if he can help working within those restrictive financial resources, the people of Cayman Brac are the beneficiaries.

Madam Speaker, that's good politics because it tells me that he does not worry whether the request comes from me, the Second Elected Member from West Bay, or from North Side, or what have you. His ultimate objective is that the lives of the people—our Caymanian people—are improved. Madam Speaker, until we can rise to that level of political maturity without worrying whether or not it is going to chalk up a couple more points or votes . . .

And, you know, Madam Speaker, before I leave this topic, the more obvious mode of operating—and, again, because the Brac is so small, these things get back to me—where applications are being made for housing repairs or different services, not to this Minister, but to the Leader of Government Business and the First Elected Member. And, yes, an undertaking is made to assist, but the comment is thrown in: 'Remember to vote for me' or 'Make sure you do that because there are two votes in the House'. Madam Speaker, if we do what we are elected to do that will come. And I am sure you know that for yourself having been here approaching 16 years. We don't have to play these petty petty politics with the minds of our constituents because it is going to come back to bite us and bite us hard, it will.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader mentioned that despite the challenges a lot of things are going good for us. Well, I respect his opinion but I challenge him to come to the Brac, meet with the citizens of the Brac as the Minister responsible for the Brac, and listen for a change; listen to their challenges. And I know the gentleman, he can (when he wants to) rise to the challenge and help. It is time for the politics to go out of the door because I can tell you it is not hurting me.

Madam Speaker. Whether or not I get re-elected it matters not, because as I have said many, many times before, when I came into this honourable House I just did not do it arbitrarily. I sought what I thought was the will of God in my life and it was clear to me that it was not by might, or by power, but the will of the Lord. So, I know that when one door closes it will be His time. He raises leaders up and he takes them down. But, Madam Speaker, one thing I do know, the righteous will not be forsaken or his seed begging bread. So, that is why it matters not to me to pay $150 a week to make sure my picture or my story gets in the newspaper. I don't even care if it gets in the newspaper. What matters to me is that the persons who are in need get it, Madam Speaker. I don't operate a Clinton style politics on the Brac. My people are far, far more important to me than that, and whether or not they come back and say 'thank you' by their casting of their vote, I can still sleep in tranquility and peace because I would have known within myself that I did all I could do for as long as I could do.

Madam Speaker, my first logo when I ran for a position in this lofty House was that the people of Cayman Brac would get a legal voice in the House. And, as long as God gives me breath . . .

Does the Member want [me to give] way, Madam Speaker?

The Speaker: No, I think he is going out of the Chamber but he was just checking to see the quorum.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I beg your pardon. Thank you.

As long as God lends me breath, Madam Speaker, I will speak up on behalf of the people of Cayman Brac because they have been left out, especially in these past three years, wrongfully. And they tell me so Madam Speaker. They tell me so, Madam Speaker. If they were not, I would feel like what the Honourable Leader was saying was fine, and everything was fine, and maybe it was just in my residence that the middle class were being pushed down into the lower class. Well, Madam Speaker, it is traversing the Island of Cayman Brac. People are living from paycheque to paycheque. There seems to be more bills than money to pay, Madam Speaker, and people are suffering. And I take that extremely hard when we hear the bragging of a surplus and how we have met another 91 days that we can run the country from the extra revenue that we have.

And then, Madam Speaker, to add insult to injury, in the recent activities not only with the constitutional meetings but other meetings—the immigration meeting—so much food was ordered and wasted on the Brac with public funds because they were not able to judge the outcome. And I have people there who cannot get vouchers because the Honourable Minister had to scale back to ensure that his budget is kept.

Madam Speaker, that should not be happening in the Cayman Islands that brags of such affluence. We're not a huge constituency, Madam Speaker. Certainly, there must be some feeling remaining. We have passed talk, Madam Speaker. We on the Brac need to see action and we just don't need to see it because election is coming up, because that is another insult to injury. It needs to be sustainable. We talk about sustainable development. Well, let's stop playing games with the intellectual capacity of the constituents of Cayman Brac and, to a lesser extent, Little Cayman.

Madam Speaker, we will see also from what I am about to say that there is need for more attention as far as it relates to our elderly. Obviously, I do quite a bit of church work but I also make my rounds in the neighbourhood, Madam Speaker. And I can tell you that there has been more than one occasion that tears have literally come into my eyes when I saw some of the conditions of the elderly. And, it was not because their conditions were not brought to the authorities' attention, but this umbrella reason of 'oh, your children can afford it' or 'your family can afford it' . . . Madam Speaker, that may be the case in some of the instances, but I know of one particular instance where this elderly woman (who is now 81 years of age) . . . and you would have to know the dignity of this woman to really feel the grief and the pain. As I visited her just recently her two feet were so swollen that she could no longer wear shoes. She has not been to the hospital in over three years because as she is getting older dementia is setting in and, of course, she needs to be encouraged to do these things. I understand that the public health nurse visits her but there has been no medication for obvious reasons. She is not a doctor and she is doing the best that she can.

So, I am imploring the Honourable Minister, who is just now hearing of this, if he would perhaps look at the scheduling of the doctors at the Faith Hospital to see whether or not we could come up with a policy or programme where they could visit some of these elderly, or get some counselor or someone to go and speak with them. Her monies from the seaman and her husband's pension have been at the local banking institution, as I understand and from the documentation I could see, for a number of years, so much so that it is almost in the region of $20,000 to $25,000. Yet, because of her mental ability she feels that someone else has been taking her money because it is no longer coming in the mail, Madam Speaker. That has been how long!

And that is what I am saying, Madam Speaker, we are small and it does not take a lot of effort to do these things. But if you saw the condition of that poor woman you would think that it is something that would be shown on National Geographic. I don't know how she could have endured the pain and the suffering from the inflammation and from the bacteria that is obviously affecting her. And, Madam Speaker, one may say, 'Well what about her children?' Her children have tried but they are not professionals. We pay professionals, Madam Speaker. We pay them! And as I took it a bit further and attended the hospital last night looking for another elderly person, I brought it up with some of the staff there and they admitted that they were aware of it but felt that they could not do anything. Madam Speaker, what are we going to do, just leave her in the house? I don't think so, Madam Speaker.

There must be some way, some programme, some element of humanity to deal with these situations. And I know the department has its hands full. I know that there is at least one vacancy if not two that they have been trying to fill for a long time which has not been filled. And again, as we look at these "blessings" that we are supposed to have, I would ask that the powers to be ensure that whenever there is a vacancy on the Brac to do everything possible to make sure that it is filled because that is an extra income that is being injected into our economy, and perhaps a lesser amount of vouchers that the Social Services will have to dispense on a Friday evening.

Madam Speaker, fortunately but yet unfortunately, I have people in my constituency that are unemployed but they do not want to receive the handout from Social Services. That is the pride and the dignity that they have because they were employed but for whatever reason, the slowing down of the economy or whatever, those jobs are redundant. They are trying. Every time a job comes up, Madam Speaker, applications are put in. And that brings me to another point as far as the Administration of the Honourable Leader of District Administration.

Madam Speaker, I really think it is high time that when applications are put in, within a certain period of time they are kept on record because they are pretty much done in clusters and each time they have to keep putting in the same details the same applications, and most times from what I am told, they are not even given the courtesy of a reply to say that they did not get the job. They hear it on the street long before. And sometimes, even before the interview Madam Speaker, the person who has been selected has already been done.

Now, I have been made to understand as well that District Administration no longer has the authority to hire—that a human resource person has been hired within the Ministry. I am not sure of that situation but I would ask the Honourable Minister to look at it and if that is the case, to ensure that there is adequate representation from District Administration to make sure that these jobs are handled correctly because the last few hires, Madam Speaker, as Manley said: "It grieves me for every person that does not have a job but it grieves me even more . . ." in his instance he said Jamaican, but I will say Cayman Bracker or Caymanian that does not have a job in our own country.

Our priority, Madam Speaker, as I am sure Members in their right-thinking minds would agree, is to do everything possible to ensure that our Caymanians get jobs. And if they need training let's train them. We have a Minister of Education who has taken an innovative approach to education and who is not afraid to come and ask for millions of dollars. And if we need training I am confident that that Minister will provide the programmes to do it.

And, Madam Speaker, you would have noticed [during] my debates in the past three years that I give credit where credit is due. I believe that the Minister of Education is doing the best he possibly can within the circumstances that he has to revamp, to reform, to transform and modernise our educational services. And it is a big challenge which has taken quite a lot of money and a lot of time. But I look forward to the day when we on the Brac can get our High School (from the Honourable Leader's presentation), as the Minister of Education has not spoken yet. He indicated that funds would be allocated for the acquisition of property for a High School in Cayman Brac. I am happy to hear that and I hope that it will be going in close proximity to the Football Field or the Sports Complex so that we can have utilisation of that property.

Madam Speaker, that dovetails into the area of sports and sporting facilities on Cayman Brac. Madam Speaker, I am happy to see that after the inception (I believe it was in 1997 when the whole idea concept of a football field, sport complex came to this Floor when I was Minister of Sports) that after many, many challenges and many innuendoes and charges and everything else, it has finally come around to see that the sports facility, the 18 acres that were acquired for a mere $89,000 (and you can do the math to see how cheap that was) was perhaps one of the best investments that government ever did.

For a long time our facilities, like many areas and districts in Cayman, were substandard and there was a programme (which you assisted the Honourable Leader of the Opposition when both of you had the responsibility for sports) to ensure that various infrastructural needs were met in Grand Cayman, and I was able to continue a number of them. But for some reason, when it came to us putting this sporting facility on the Brac, it met with a lot of challenges within my own government and outside the government.

For whatever reason, Madam Speaker, I remember being the Minister sitting on the other side and the now Leader of Government Business coming to me and saying, "You know, I want to support this project but you need to say it should be a playing field and not a sports complex", and that is how I got the project through back in 1997. And yet, today, the PPM Government is calling it a sports complex—soon to be opened, I am told from the marl road, although it is fairly close to where I reside—and yet, it is the best thing that ever happened. Madam Speaker, that is pure politics. And then if that is not enough they take pictures of the new turf that is put there. They pay to put it in but it does not say "paid advertisement" of another (quote/unquote) "blessing" of the PPM Government.

Madam Speaker, which cave are they living in? Because everyone in the Cayman Islands knows, without a shadow of a doubt, that I was the Minister who took licks, who almost lost my first election over that. Even so, a special report of the Auditor General—one of the favourite instruments for wasting time and scandalizing people's names—was utilised for that. I was tried and the scale was perfectly balanced without interference from anyone. But God always provides a way of escape. And, Madam Speaker, I am so proud to be alive here today in this debate to be able to see it come to some form of fruition.

Madam Speaker, I was able to take it, not only with the acquisition of the property putting in the sub-base, the lighting, seating for some 500 persons, and it was laid to near desolation by some of the same movers and shakers who now are getting excited about bringing in professionals to open it up and, again, having the cameras and probably all the red ribbons and balloons and everything else. But, Madam Speaker, the people of Cayman Brac know full well how that field came about. And I am grateful that monies were put in, although it took three years to finally get it. And even though the ordering of the turf was wrong because the wrong measurements were given which caused us to spend more money, as I understand it, delayed the time, it matters not, Madam Speaker. They will have to give account to the people of these Islands for those inefficiencies in failing to ask persons who knew the right size of the field. But I am glad to see that it has advanced to this stage.

Madam Speaker, I say here and now, I hope that politics do not continue to play because I already sense how it is coming in to those who administrate. People learn quickly and the feeling is given that unless you align with the PPM or say that you support the PPM, you are not going to get x, y or z. Madam Speaker, sports, again, is too important. Too important!

We have too many people at Northward Prison that are costing us in excess of fifty something thousand dollars per prisoner. We know the benefits of sports. Having been a P.E. Teacher myself and studied it, I know you know, the other lady Member knows, the Leader of the Opposition and other Members who are average sports fans know the benefits of sports. We know the hardships that it has taken to get funding, especially when it comes to the ladies' sports.

I have said before and it bears repeating—I remember when I first began to teach at the High School, I was given footballs to go and teach netball because it was a girls' sport, and they had footballs in abundance. We haven't come that far with the mentality of thinking. We have Mr. Mitchum Sanford on the Brac who is doing an excellent job with our young people there. But is it not high time to get a good female coach to help Ventisha and Lavender who have just come back from university? Can we not share the coaches that are here in Grand Cayman more frequently over in the Brac? And I trust that we would see a greater move towards that as we continue to get more and more of our sporting infrastructure put in place.

Madam Speaker, before I leave this topic I just wish to state that the football field is yet but another example of where some sow some water and some reap. And it is not going to kill us to say that we did not do the whole thing. Don't mislead the public, because Cayman Brackers . . . you can call them anything you want, Madam Speaker, and I have been called many names in this honourable Chamber, but one thing we are not is foolish. We are not nincompoops; we are quite wise to what is going on. Many of them have not had the opportunity to receive tertiary education but, certainly, there is rarely a Bracker, if any, who has not gone through successfully the School of Hard Knocks and knows when they are trying to have the wool pulled over their eyes, Madam Speaker.

I also wish to voice my disappointment on the fact that our hardworking, arduous, conscientious and diligent firemen on the Brac and Little Cayman have to wait another year, if not more, to get the long awaited fire station. Just before we lost the government in 2005 we were well on the way to them having acquired property for the Fire Station trying to get it up in the eastern district, and I wonder whether that is the reason why we have not gotten it yet. And still, even today, three years since, we still don't have the Fire Station for the men. And, Madam Speaker, people who have been to the Brac know the location of the Fire Station. It is just a matter of 100 yards, or what we call the Bogue (one of the deepest parts in the Caribbean). They know the size waves that come in there; they know the proximity of the pond on the other side that floods with the littlest of rain and yet those men are expected to stay there during the storms. And some of them take their wives there for obvious reasons so that they do not have to worry and be unduly concerned during the stormy hurricane season. But, Madam Speaker, we cannot put their lives at risk any more in this facility in the storm. It is high time for this project to become a priority. I understand that money will be put in for the plans, which I believe, I understood the Honourable Leader to say. Madam Speaker, this Fire Station has become almost like the North Side Civic Centre; it has been asked for time and time again, and I take my hat off to you and the Honourable Minister for succeeding, from what I have seen, to put sufficient monies in now that the people can get it.

Perhaps we need to talk to find out the secret, Madam Speaker, because this Fire Station seems to be somewhere in quicksand because the firemen cannot get it.

The firemen have been able, subsequent to the last Finance Committee and the line of questioning and the pressure that was brought to bear, to bring their equipment up to a very high calibre, and that they are prepared to go into the domestic service. They are now prepared, equipment wise, with a lot of equipment. But, Madam Speaker, even to that, as soon as Finance Committee was finished they were called up and told not to talk to me. Now, Madam Speaker, I am their elected representative and all I merely did was to come here and fight to see that they got their fire engine. This type of politics is divisive, Madam Speaker. Completely!

The same thing has happened at the Agriculture Department, Madam Speaker (as I make a transition now to agriculture). Staff in that department have been told by their senior manager there not only that they are not to talk to me, because I questioned about the chickens and the farming the last time I had an opportunity, but they were also told (the three of them) not to vote for me by a civil servant, Madam Speaker. And they will only get away with this nonsense while it is under the carpet. I for one will not be a politician who will come and hide it because I am absolutely sick and tired of it.

What it does tell me, though, is that they will stop at no length to ensure that come next election, either I am not the First Elected Member or, as far as they are concerned, I am off the scene. You see, Madam Speaker, they don't understand my psyche. That does not mean anything to me. When the time comes that there is another capable, able and willing Cayman Bracker that God wants to move up to that step, I have tons of church work I can do. I can spend quality time with my family. I can do so many things that I wanted to do and I could not do.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Madam Speaker . . . I resist the temptation to the lady Member from George Town. I really will.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Elected Member for the district of George Town, could we stop the cross talk please? and allow the Member to continue her debate. Thanks.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Madam Speaker, I wish to say that I fully support civil servants. I have been one myself. I know the challenges that they face. I know the long hours and the ungrateful job that they do, sometimes underpaid whenever salary freezes come in and reviews take a long time to come. But we must cultivate the type of civil service that the late Mr. Harry McCoy talked about, where you are there to do service for your country, carry out the policies of your minister regardless of political affiliations, and you don't get yourself in the quicksand of politics because politician members will change. It is not like the U.S. Government where you are going to get thrown out, or it should not be, as new ministers come in. And we need to cultivate that type of service regardless of the side that we sit on in this House because one day the chickens will come home to roost, and we would wish that we all had united and got our efforts together in aggregate fashion to ensure that the success story of Cayman continues on.

Madam Speaker, it does not help to breed an environment or an atmosphere of fear within the service in trying to prevent or stop them from having their right to approach a politician, whether it is from their own representative or from another district because civil servants are human beings too. We expect them to go out and vote. Most politicians pander up to them and make sure, especially when it comes to election time, that there is a big voting block in that they are well taken care of. Madam Speaker, it should be reciprocal. It should be a mutual agreement and partnership and understanding between the vested interest parties.

Madam Speaker, I am not sure from whence the policy emanated and whether it is just in District Administration and other government departments on the Brac, or whether it is the status quo in Grand Cayman, but I have received several representations that they are not allowed to have their radios at work. Now, on the face of that, Madam Speaker, one may say, 'Well they are there to do the country's business and everything else' but as far as it relates to Cayman Brac, may I make a plea that, certainly, from 1 June [2008] until 30 November [2008], during our hurricane season, that even if it is not every single civil servant, there is at least one radio within the offices so that they can hear the weather reports.

Madam Speaker, we don't have the luxury of just watching television spontaneously as you good folks do in Grand Cayman. Most of them do not even have access to the Internet so that they could just go on and check at their own convenience. So, radio Cayman, in particular, is of paramount importance during the stormy months and hurricane months to the people of Cayman Brac, and even more so Little Cayman. And, it would not take any expenditure as such from the Government. So I would hope that they would positively accept this request and put it into being before we embark upon our hurricane season, come 1 June this year.

Certainly, when we embark upon the Bill of Rights, this and other things will come into play. So, the more practice we get, the better off we will be. As I speak, hopefully briefly, on the area of Bill of Rights, I plan to deal not with the Constitution in this debate because I believe there will be more than ample time on other occasions to deal with that and to present my views and the views of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

But I must say that the news and the headlines this past week of the kissing in public and the homosexual activities coming to the forefront again, certainly, have caused the conservative voter—I would imagine in Grand Cayman as it has done in my own constituency—to be a little bit leery. They were almost lulled into a sense that the Bill of Rights would come, and the assurances that were given, that these things would not happen. And then I see, and it is my respectful opinion Madam Speaker, that we had this test case to test the waters at this relevant appropriate time.

And, Madam Speaker might I say, Caymanians are known for standing up for what they believe. We herald and we tout that we are a Christian nation. I had the opportunity to visit Israel, the Holy Land, for a vacation. And I dared not tell them, Madam Speaker, that I was not going to cover my head when I went into their holy spaces, especially not with soldiers there with the M-16 guns and everything else. And I am not advocating that we do that, but there must be something that is still Caymanian. Why do we have to change our lifestyle to accommodate a minority? We are told in the Good Book, which gives us instructions for everything by the way, and if they don't think it is—I think it is Romans chapter 1, probably from [verse] 14-19 that speaks about it being an abomination. Not just a sin, but an abomination unto the Lord.

Are we going to sell out our birthright for everything? Are we as Caymanians finally going to come together and say, 'Look, is there not a cause?' And not 'cost', 'c-a-u-s-e', Madam Speaker. There must be something left Caymanian that we are all willing to stand up for.

Yes, I know we have challenges, Madam Speaker. In Tourism . . . I am not responsible for it and my heart almost bleeds for the Minister of Tourism as he sees the challenges that are presented from globalisation, from the possibility of a transitioning government from Cuba where Cuba could open up and give us more competition because of the value for money that they could in that depressed economy. We have tons of challenges. We have the rising cost of fuel. We just voted money for our national airline, which I have indicated I support not just today but from the time I was exposed to Cayman Airways. And it is only going to get worse, Madam Speaker, if we do not start finding ways and means of coming together as Caymanians.

We have embarked in modernisation of the Constitution. And whether we say it publicly or not, it is a process of nation building. How fast we go is left to the results of the referendum and the leaders that are at the helm at that day. But, Madam Speaker, we must have something to carry. How can we keep the faith and secure the future when we have this nonsense going on?

And then, Madam Speaker, to make it even worse, when you look at the way we are almost made fun of . . . I wish I had brought it in here, but the newspaper with the headlines about these gays kissing, and then we have the distinguished members of Government, official and elected, plastered on the front page. Has no relevance whatsoever. Oh, Madam Speaker, I was being polite Ma'am [laughter] being plastered on the front page with this big caption. Most people in their businesses getting their coffee in the morning, or what have you, will read the headlines and especially where it says "law."

The Speaker: [laughter]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: And we see my good colleague, the Honourable Second Official Member, the first thing that is going to connect because a picture is worth a thousand words, Madam Speaker. We need to be responsible in what we are doing because we are desensitising our community that these things are accepted.

And you know it first came in phases of 'oh, they are consenting adults in private'. Well, Madam Speaker, that is condoning it, whether it is in private or in public. And I have no apologies to make. I am not preaching to you to tell you to go and get converted, because if I could, you all would have been saved a long time ago. But, our children are looking at us. They are looking to see what position we take. Will we be like the Good Samaritan and stop and render help and remedy the situation? Or will we be like the Publican who crossed on the other side and just cast a blind eye because of the almighty dollar?

Have we not learned from history what happens when we fly in the face of an Almighty awesome God, Madam Speaker? We ought to learn, because I can tell you—and I am no prophetess and one of those, as the Honourable Leader of Government Business says, sees gloom and doom—but I can tell you, Madam Speaker, without any fear of contradiction that if we as a Government and Opposition don't get our priorities straight in where we want this country to go as we continue to nation build, then we won't have any country. And I don't know about anyone else, but I only have one citizenship and that is Caymanian—not even British, because I refused to apply for that for a number of reasons.

We need to have these core issues, so important, so burning on our minds that our political hats will be thrown out of the windows and we can come together in caucus and say, 'look, this is about politics, we have to stop this now'. Because you know, Madam Speaker, this is not going to stop by itself. It is not going to stop by itself, and what happens when we get an Order in Council saying that we have to do it? Are we just going to say, 'oh, it means we are going to get more tourists; it means we are going to get more money; it means we are going to get more of this'? What about our children? What about our culture? What about our way of life? If they want to see that they can go to Los Angeles, they can go to 42nd Street in New York, or they can go to London. Is that the tourism product that we want to promote for the Cayman Islands? I think not, Madam Speaker.

In this instance I am prepared to give the benefit of the doubt. I have not had an opportunity to speak to the Director of Tourism or to speak to the Minister on this topic, but I feel within myself that certainly what was reported could not be as it was reported. So, I give them the benefit of the doubt to either come and explain, to pacify, to justify, because I am at total loss as to why we would have to apologise. I understand the legal ramifications of it, but rather than a letter of apology we should have immediately gone to the Honourable Second Official Member and said, 'there is a loophole here, draft the legislation, bring it down'. If the Governor does not want to assent to it, let it drop where it drops. But we would have done our part as parliamentarians, Madam Speaker.

And you know, Madam Speaker, what is really scary, is that we, even as politicians, have been so desensitised to this that it has almost become like a joke. Well, it is their business. They can do what they want to do. Well, start giving the Minister of Health much more financing. Because, if you think that we are in the red now at the hospital, let that lifestyle come and permeate our small community and we will have to do more than raise taxes just on HSA (Health Services Authority), but we will have a depleted revenue base as well for the Third Official Member to deal with.

Madam Speaker, these things come with consequences and we are just putting our head in the sand if we believe that it is just going to go away. How are we going to face the conservative churches in our country that have placed their trust, whether it is in the PPM Government or the UDP Government, when these issues come up? Are we just inches away from our pastors being told they cannot preach about this lifestyle? Or that they have to marry them, Madam Speaker? This makes me nervous knowing that we are at a point of dealing with the Bill of Rights, and the unreasonableness of these persons that they would almost come to try to abort it at this time when we were well advanced with getting the Bill of Rights, which is needed in this country.

You know, Madam Speaker, the nerve of these people and the money that they have to back it. And, Madam Speaker, I would pray and hope to God that none of us here today who have the ability, who have the power to stop this, would do anything to augment it or fuel it or make it go any further, Madam Speaker.

We were known throughout these Islands, throughout the world, as being some of the best seamen in the world. God opened doors that were nothing short of miraculous for our people. He will provide. As I mentioned in my beginning, He has never seen the righteous forsaken or his seed begging bread. If we truly say that we trust in this Almighty God, who is the God of infinite resources, once doubt and anxiety enter our equation that we feel we have to pander to these special lifestyle people, then we are diminishing our trust and our faith in God.

The God that I know about, and I am sure some of you have trusted and proved Him, has done it before and he is able to do it again. But the same God of love and generosity, compassion and patience is also the God, Madam Speaker, that says, My Spirit will not always strive with men, and that includes us here in the Cayman Islands. We are no special people, but God does pour out his blessings to those who are obedient because the word says, "The obedient will inherit the good of the land". And, Madam Speaker, I get more and more concerned as I see the lack of commitment to these principles and virtues that have made us what we are today.

Madam Speaker, the argument has been put as I listen to the talk shows and other marl road things, and as I talk to constituents that, 'you know we have them here'. I'm not going to dispute that. But what I am responsible, as Joshua said, ". . . but as for me and my house, we will serve the Lord." And when we have more families taking family life more as a duty, as a calling, we will have less of these things manifesting [themselves.] We owe a duty to our children and our grandchildren to pass on to them no less than what we have achieved. And, Madam Speaker, I never thought that I would hear, or be in Cayman to hear about males kissing in public or females or whatever going on, and then we just take a little slap of the wrist approach and say, 'Oh, we are sorry'. Sorry for what, Madam Speaker? Sorry for what, Madam Speaker?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, would you like the afternoon break at this time? Is it convenient?

Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.26 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.46 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman continuing her debate. Honourable Member, I have been passed a note. You have 40 minutes left.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you very much indeed, Madam Speaker.

Before I move from the area I was speaking to regarding sports, I wish to also go on record by congratulating the Brac Football Team for their success this past Saturday in winning many of their games, even the great challenge of the Bodden Town Team. They were able to successfully show their stuff.

I am very grateful for those successes and it is another example of how sports can be used to bind and enhance the camaraderie between the three Islands rather than having this divisive factor come in. So, I was grateful that even in the heat of great competition against their foe in sports, Bodden Town, they were still able to shake hands and enjoy it and come away from it with a wonderful experience leaving some very happy fans on the Brac. Although they were in the midst of the Lion's swim meet, Madam Speaker, they still had time to give a cheer for their football players and coaches and assistants when they came across to Grand Cayman.

To this extent as well, Madam Speaker, I should also wish to congratulate the relatively new management at District Administration in the person of the District Commissioner Mr. Ernie Scott and our deputy Mr. Mark Tibbetts and their staff. In particular as well, the hardworking staff at the public works department and as it relates to the planned opening for the football field because of the nature of the infrastructural operation they have had cause to work overtime in the evenings. It is not only good from an economic perspective for this particular project, but it is something that has been long awaited. Regardless of which government is able to see the completion, I will certainly be happy to know that the footballers and hopefully in time to come as the master plan materialises, the Aqua Centre, the changing rooms and the other needed facilities there would come on line.

What I would say in this regard though, Madam Speaker, is that much effort needs to be put forward. I would ask the Honourable Leader of Government Business and his supporting colleagues in Cabinet and their Backbench, to ensure that there is adequate funding now that the artificial turf has been put in place to ensure that there are public facilities like restrooms because it is going to be used. Even now as I go across in the evenings, it is not uncommon to find the public work men already playing a friendly game of football or soccer with the technicians who came to actually install it.

So it will not be there for the want of using. So it is very important that we install the lights, especially, as quick as possible and at the bare minimum some proper changing rooms, restroom facilities, for that particular area and to ensure that the access road is widened and flattened in some areas. And if not in this budget, that some means be found for the perimeter road to go across because we did agree to access for an adjacent landowner who is now proceeding to construct a little hurricane home and we need to ensure that the field has not taken away from that, that provision has been made. And I trust that that is the case.

Madam Speaker, I am also anxious to hear, or be invited to the opening of what should have been a youth facility at the Creek—the property that was purchased from Mrs. Jacobs back in early 2005. I understand from the Minister that it is to be opened sometime this month the end, or early next month, under the leadership of Ms. Annie Rose. There was some talk about the cadets. I am not sure whether that is going to be materialising.

Whichever way it goes, Madam Speaker, I will be happy to know that it actually is used because it has been sitting there with some work being done in the past three years but I believe that we should have utilised that facility much better seeing that it was hard and a long time in coming. So I trust that once it is opened that it is properly equipped and that she is given the full support that she needs for the scouts and the young people that she works so hard with from time to time.

Madam Speaker, I wish to take my hat off, as it were, for persons in the community like Ms. Annie Rose who, despite her challenges at home with illness in her family, et cetera, the tremendous amount of work that she has to do being in the Social Department, but also that she has taken a keen interest in the people that she is willing to go that extra mile and give that extra smile to ensure that her clients live a very comfortable life whether it is the youth that she is dealing with or the older ones that she is able to take across to the Governor for his annual tea parties.

Madam Speaker, speaking just briefly as it relates to programmes and that of the Cadets, I am sure you would have heard last year many, many times of our absolute surprise, yet gratitude, for the speedy success as far as numbers in the programme of the Cadets and the interest that is still being maintained. But I am concerned to the extent that what has transpired and mushroomed and blossomed into a very excellent programme for our youth in the Brac, is starting to come apart somewhat from its seams, mainly because of lack of transportation now in the afternoons.

I intend to pick my daughter up or make arrangements for her but it is not uncommon to have to pick up many, many of the youth, especially those going to the eastern districts who do not have a ride. And, yes, there are many of our youth in the programme whose parents have the luxury of vehicles but there are many of the children, the Cadets in the eastern districts, that do not have access to a vehicle and there is no organised, as it were, public transportation.

Now, Madam Speaker, I cannot see it costing very much for a small bus to be purchased to assist this program. I would ask, Madam Speaker, that the powers that be look into this as a matter of urgency because it will be too late after all hope is gone and discouragement sets in. In addition, it would be an excellent little part-time job for some of those who are unemployed (as has taken place in the Education Department with one of the ladies who was unemployed and now drives for the Creek and the Spot Bay primary school).

A similar job opportunity could be created with very little negative effect on central government's revenue to ensure that this programme stays together because a lot of those kids I also have in my youth group on Wednesday night and Friday night and I can see the difference, Madam Speaker, when they hold their retreats with their discipline and the attitudes and the dress, attire that has been picked up from the Cadet programme there on the Brac.

I take every opportunity to thank those who are involved from the former Minister Bodden, the present Government and the Portfolio who have assisted with it. I would really ask if they would give special consideration to the provision of a driver and for transportation for the Cadets. It is a very non-political area. It will benefit the whole community, Government and Backbench alike. But regardless of that, I believe they deserve at the very least these two requests to be filled as soon as possible, Madam Speaker.

As it relates to Cayman Airways, I wish to do two things: Firstly, I wish to thank the Honourable Minister for his undertaking, I believe it was on Friday last when we were in finance supplementary, to look at our newly implemented weekend schedule so that it would dovetail better into his attempt, and the Ministry's attempt, to promote and augment domestic tourism into Cayman Brac. So I thank him for that undertaking and I look forward with eager anticipation to hear either through a press briefing or otherwise that that has been rectified so that in particular on the Friday evening and the Sunday evening we can get in at a reasonable time from what we had before—perhaps to remain as a Saturday schedule.

Then I would like to add to that, Madam Speaker, while he has his technical staff looking at this area, if they would also look throughout the year. There are probably less than six, if that many Madam Speaker, Mondays which extend or protract the long holidays when people generally come to the Brac in greater numbers, obviously as they get a longer stay over there. And it creates quite a difficulty from the representation that has been made to me putting in that Monday afternoon flight at very late notice because people make other plans. They go to Miami, Jamaica, Cuba, whatever, and I believe that we can capture some of that domestic traffic if some attempt was made from an early stage to put into the system that Monday evening flight to the Brac at a reasonable hour.

Now, Madam Speaker, I understand that it is perhaps more lucrative to go to Costa Rica or a longer route because there are chances that more revenue can be received and we have limited aircraft, but as I said in Finance Committee, knowing the Minister I have known him to be committed to Cayman Airways. And from my interaction with him, I have known him to be committed to the Brac.

Yes, as we indicated, politics do come in now and again. And just as he is a politician and so am I, but not to the extent that I have to come here today and reprimand or come clean, Madam Speaker. I will give credit where credit is due. I have made requests not just recently but in previous times and I have found him to, as far as he can with any constraints that he has, assist the Brac. I am sure the same can be said of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as far as it relates to Cayman Airways or tourism. Both Ms. Bush, the Minister and Mrs. McField [Nixon] go beyond the call of duty to assist.

And this is no different from the previous Ministers, both the present Leader of Government Business and the past Minister Jefferson, whenever requests came in from Cayman Airways they seemed eager to assist. I would hope that this would continue, because if you think that Cayman Airways is an insurance for Grand Cayman, there is no adjective to describe what it is for Cayman Brac because that is our all in all. That is our only air link and survival in rough times; it's a cargo substitute; it is everything as far as getting sustainable development. So, we have to continue in our efforts to make sure that we get Cayman Airways right.

The last thing I would like to say on this is that I know that quite a bit of work has been done, or it seems apparent as far as training the frontline agents for Cayman Airways. Certainly in my weekly travels I have seen an improvement. But unfortunately [there are still a couple things] that I have observed, not necessarily myself but as passengers standing in the line, the attitude is not what we want to portray as a premier destination. So I would ask that the Honourable Minister bring this (if he has not already brought it) to the attention of his staff, that training continue in this respect so that all of them become team members because Cayman Airways is a very major employer within our community and every one of us needs to do all that we can to support Cayman Airways.

It is no secret that Cayman Airways has the best—the best!—pilots in this world. I have been through some scary situations, especially in the smaller planes. And those guys know what they are doing. And the same thing when on several occasions Madam Speaker, a bird has been ingested in the wing (sic), those guys keep their cool. They are professionals.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In their engine.

And Madam Speaker, these are Caymanians so it is a prime . . .

Madam Speaker, it really amazes me, you know? And I really hate to spend my time here, but I have to, Madam Speaker. It amazes me, absolutely amazes me . . . We've just gotten through hearing the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman making what I understand was a very eloquent, articulate and impassioned plea about unity. And because I made a simple grammatical mistake and said the wings—which house the engine—that gave him occasion to make a derogatory remark across the Floor.

That is why, Madam Speaker, I stand here today and express my great disappointment for the disingenuousness that is being portrayed in this House.

Now, Madam Speaker, not because I don't have one of those six last names, not because I am not from West End, and not because I am not a member of the PPM Government am I going to tolerate that type of arrogance. I will not tolerate it. So, I put that Member and any other Member on notice that when I am speaking, whether or not they like me or they support me, they ought to behave themselves in a manner that behooves this honourable Chamber.

Now, may I continue with my debate, Madam Speaker?

Madam Speaker, I wish to touch now on housing. The Leader of Government Business said that the PPM has made housing much more accessible for persons. Madam Speaker, I wish to say as far as this statement, this policy, relates to the Brac, that I am anxious to see that statement come to fruition. We are now into three years, Madam Speaker, when I was there I left $800,000 in the budget. They have changed the policy. I agreed with the change that they made where they assist the banks with helping the individuals. But, Madam Speaker, it is now time to get people occupying those homes.

Those homes need to be finished. We are now three years in with one year to go, there is no reason—no reason that I can see—why those homes are not finished and why people are kept hanging. As I understand it, some persons have been in to the banks, the banks have approved it . . . and you know how banks are, Madam Speaker, they work on a business sense. How long can we expect them to hold on for these to be finished? Whatever the problem is, whether it is finances, whether it is manpower, whether it is inefficiencies, whatever, these homes need to be finished and not dragged out to say it some housing accommodation carrot just before election as was in the previous conversation. Remember, there are two people in this House. Now remember there are two votes.

No, Madam Speaker, some of these single women parents are housed up in cramped apartments assisted by rental assistance, in some cases not all, by the Social Services Department. And you have the brother and sister in the same room.

I know of one particular case, Madam Speaker, where the gentleman is probably in his late 30s, early 40s, with mental challenges. The grandmother, who is 60-plus, probably 70, sleeping in the same bed, Madam Speaker. The same bed. This is Cayman Brac this is not Haiti. This is Cayman Brac, Madam Speaker. And we want to talk about we are making housing more accessible? We need to do it, whatever it takes. Just like how the Minister of Education came and said I found a problem in Education, it is going to take X million dollars . . . we need to give the Minister responsible for social welfare, whoever that Minister is, the monies necessary to take care of our people.

There is no sense, Madam Speaker, that we continue to go on as if it is not happening. And I am not putting any blame to that particular Minister, whether it was you, Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition or the current Minister. That is why we hire staff and professionals to go and do the fieldwork. That is why it is important for us as Caymanians to continue to be our neighbour's keeper so that if we see these circumstances going on that we can do it.

All of it should not fall on the feet of the Government. We, as Caymanians, must get back to that state of affairs where we go on a Saturday and the women or the men, whichever these days, cook the food and share with the construction work and do the projects as the Lions used to do and the Rotary and the others. This has to be a partnership.

If we are going to win the war against poverty, Madam Speaker, within the Cayman Islands—again, in particular Cayman Brac, to a lesser extent Little Cayman—it has to be a coming together of the minds. And then everyone will look good because those children will have a less chance, be a lower risk factor for going to Northward Prison. We won't have to be spending millions of dollars incarcerating them in Northward Prison only for them to come out as more hardened criminals, Madam Speaker, because it is a vicious circle.

Then, Madam Speaker, last year and perhaps the year before, but for the benefit of doubt certainly last year, I came and I made a plea as best I could about names that I had requested. It was somewhere between 13 and 15, I don't quite remember who we had named after former parliamentarians and outstanding persons in the community both private and public. I was told all sorts of things, as we speak so and so is happening; the machine broke down. Then the honourable Minister of Communications corrected the Leader of Government Business and said, No, that's not the case.

Well, I am happy to report, Madam Speaker, that it is probably in excess of months upon months probably a year the signs have finally arrived on the Brac. And still they are sitting in the same place they arrived and have not been put up.

Now, Madam Speaker, what could be the reason why these signs are not being put up? They are road signs, Madam Speaker. They are not things that are going to benefit Juliana. They are road signs that are there. But is it because when they see "Captain Charles Road" or "Captain Mabry Road" or "Glenn Road" or some of those, or "Mr. Alfred's Road" they are afraid that Juliana is going to get praise for it?

Madam Speaker, I don't care. I have already named them. I can go and get the record to say I was the Minister. I don't care about that Madam Speaker. But we need to get the names of the roads up. They are sitting there. We have enough men. We have hired new men at the Public Works. The Honourable Leader needs to give the direction, whatever that is, to put [them] up and not on the eve of next year, Madam Speaker.

Then, Madam Speaker, I would also ask, seeing that we are now getting close to the beginning of the hurricane season, that all of the easements and footpaths leading to the caves on the Brac are cleaned and kept clean throughout the hurricane season. We are under capacity as it is in Grand Cayman with adequate hurricane shelters but, thankfully, we do have the high elevated caves that many of the elderly people still take refuge and shelter in. But it makes no sense to wait to just before because there are a number of them. I had an occasion just this week to take a run through the Island to see which have been cleaned from which have not and that's why Madam Speaker, I am making a plea while we still have some time and before the season starts for this to be done.

And then quickly, Madam Speaker, I wish to thank the Government for placing within their budget . . . I believe there are actually two entries for the beautification of the various districts. But as I speak, and again I speak as it relates to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The lady who seems to be in charge, who has been contracted or hired, whatever the employment relationship is, Miss Valerie, I have to put on record, Madam Speaker, that I do not think they could find anyone else to do a better job than what she is doing, not only with hiring some of those who are unemployed who are local, but with her ability and skill and talent to do the landscaping with local plants and adding beautiful rockwork.

But, Madam Speaker, the same old application is back again. We seem to be stuck for the past three years in Stake Bay. I remind the powers that be one more time, because I did ask for the list of properties that were being beautified, to remind them that, yes, we are just 12 miles long, but West End still exists and they could use some beautification in some areas. Certainly the Bight, Watering Place, Creek, Northeast Bay and poor old Spot Bay (that they never seem to remember) could use some of the beautification money to be beautified. It is so beautiful the work that the lady is doing, please share it!

Madam Speaker, I wish also quickly to speak to the location of the Hospital. It has been there for a long time. It was one of those examples, many examples yet again, where Cayman Brackers came together, women and men, the property was donated they worked together by the people for the people but I think [Hurricane] Ivan has [taught] us that in our mid-to long-range planning we may have to look at either relocating or building another hospital on the Bluff because it is relatively close to the sea. It is in a flood prone area.

Over the years various Ministers have spent a lot, a tremendous colossal amount of money, buying very expensive equipment, state of the art equipment in some cases. They have a wonderful dialysis machine that the Honourable Minister and other Ministers assisted in getting there. Madam Speaker, it would be such a pity if it got destroyed because where are we going to get the money from in this economic downturn? And we would still have to get the health wing.

So I wish to let the Honourable Minister and his Government know that when that time comes, hopefully fairly soon, that you have my full support for the relocation of the hospital as a matter of priority on the Bluff. The other reason, Madam Speaker, is that when we do get hurricanes they have to remove them to the hurricane shelters on the Bluff and a lot of these patients are old time Caymanians that do not believe in getting wet because they believe it is taking cold and all those different phenomena that they describe. Yet, the staff cannot necessarily be expected that every no'easter that comes that they can just move them. So they had to put policies in place that a certain category would be the catalyst for moving them. That, in itself, creates a lot of problems. So, if we had it on the Bluff it would be extra capacity for a hurricane shelter but it would keep the dignity of the patients and the staff alike and it will preserve the sustainability element of good health services on the Brac if we were able to get it elevated and built to a hurricane five standard.

Then, Madam Speaker, despite my propositions, despite airing here today what I have felt has caused concern within my constituency, concern personally, I have to perhaps concur with what the Leader of Government Business said on page 12 of his paper, where he refers (and I quote with your kind permission): “Human belief is a powerful force. A man or woman is driven by what he or she believes. Have you ever noticed if you are sick and believe that you will get well, your recovery is so much quicker? [he said] Similarly, if you believe the future is bright, you will be motivated to work to make it bright. The same applies to economic downturns. If you notice, downturns tend to accelerate when the view that there is a downturn becomes dominant. With booms, the opposite happens. There is a belief that things are bright and people show it through their behaviour.”

Now, Madam Speaker, if I had to give a synopsis of all of those words that are put here and other kinds of examples of linguistic elegance, I would say that this is the art of positive thinking at its best.

It is not because you put a car in a garage that it is going to become something else. You have to take active steps to make sure that it is transformed or metamorphosed or conformed to what you want the end product to be. I could think for the rest of my term in here till next year that the PPM is the best thing since sliced bread (as the Leader would want us to believe), that is not going to change the high cost of living on the Brac, the high electricity bills. Every time a barge comes the food seems to go up.

And then Madam Speaker, I wish I could even take comfort in the fact that there are waivers. Even an attempt was made as if the PPM did that. Madam Speaker, you know as well as longstanding Members, that several governments introduced complete waivers or reductions on food price. But there is no inspection as far as I know to ensure that the consumers are getting it. And I can tell you, Madam Speaker because I spoke to one particular merchant on the Brac, trying to get a feel, trying to get an idea how this was being passed on to the consumer especially now that everything is so expensive. It takes $63 to fill up an Explorer. That cost $45 before.

To those who are rich and wealthy a few dollars do not mean anything. But when you are crunching the numbers, as the new term on CNN, you find out that everything counts, Madam Speaker. So it is with the majority of my constituents on the Brac.

What this gentleman told me, the merchant, was that it was too much trouble to calculate it individually for ice cream or flour or whatever the items were. So, he said as far as he is concerned he would just do a general thing and it will affect all of the different items. And I looked quite critically at that response and after a bit more probing he actually admitted that most times it is not done.

I can't necessarily blame him. It is not perhaps moral or ethical or perhaps even legal but we need to find a mechanism, whether through the Economics and Statistics Office, whatever, to do a random check on these prices to see what is going on because not everybody is making a hundred and something thousand dollars a year. On the Brac we still have people working for some of these same merchants who are making less than $3 or $4 an hour. And it is a drain on our revenue to continue to give the fish, Madam Speaker. We must find innovative ways and incentives to ensure that once we put these economic incentives in place that the people who are supposed to benefit are the ones who are benefitting.

When you have to pay $4.25 for a dozen and a half eggs and, sometimes depending whether the barge comes or it has to come on express, $7, $8, $9 for a gallon of milk . . . these are things that people need. Madam Speaker, I know. I live there. I do not credit, thank the Lord, not because I am rich, Madam Speaker, but because I am a firm believer that we will not get out of this economic slavery until we can build our people up to the level where they do not feel enslaved to get goods and pass over their cheques.

Some of these people, when they get their voucher, all they do is sign their name to the back of the cheque and it is given to the merchant. Yet those same merchants come to me and complain about how Social Services is giving away the people's money, that they are banking and getting a profit. Some of them have the audacity that when certain clients go in [they] will make comments and remarks about what they should get and what they should not get.

Madam Speaker, we have to find a way of getting out of this. Slavery was abolished in the late 1800s, but I say today—and I say it without any apologies—that we are still in economic bondage, certainly on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. And it is used—it is maximized so that the people feel that their very vote is tied to them getting the lumber, getting the groceries, getting what have you.

Madam Speaker, if we did a search to see the many poor people—as we look at the lower echelon, the lower stratification of our economic society that has lost or has given away their properties for groceries . . . Madam Speaker, it is still happening. I know of an instance where two acres of property on the Bluff and a merchant was able to get it for $1,200 worth of groceries after the husband died. Is it any wonder that the Brac has been increasing a colossal, a gigantic amount of vouchers to pay out?

We must fix these problems, Madam Speaker, and I know people may say, Well you are committing political suicide, you should not question it, but Madam Speaker, I said that to say this: Even if I have to do without water or bread or whatever in my household, I have refused to go and open a credit account. And it is not because I am rich, Madam Speaker. There have been days when I have had to go in my ground to make sure there is food on the table, but I refuse to carry on this legacy of a loop over the head. And I do not want my children to inherit what I see my constituents going through.

I go and talk to them. They come and talk to me, Madam Speaker, when their electricity bills are high. And calls are made and $200 is given here, or $1,000, or whatever amount is given. I appreciate that. The people appreciate it. But what is going to happen next month? It is only going to be higher because there has been nothing put in place. My people want to earn. My people want to have the dignity.

We have people in the community, poor though they be, who have saved up their $1200, Madam Speaker, for their vaults. And they are well on the way to saving up some money for their funerals—which it has become cheaper to live now than to die with the cost that we have to pay for these extravagant funerals. But they have that dignity and that pride still where they do not want to say that the government put them away or put them on the pauper's list.

But people that you would not even imagine now are coming and asking to borrow money or coming to ask you to go to such and such a person to borrow money. When will this spiraled economics nonsense end? It will only end when we have merchant-class people in our country who will not put on 300 per cent increase, but who will have a feeling and a compassionate sense, a human face, to the problems we are seeing.

And it grieves my spirit when I see them driving around splashing off the money or splashing off the groceries or whatever because it is just encouraging the problem. It is magnifying the problem and it is going to fall in the hands of central government because those types of politicians will not remain forever. Even if they were able to fly their ways through the mafia politics, Madam Speaker, we are appointed unto man once to die and after that the judgment. So we will all move on from this stage of life Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I do take comfort however, as I am reminded in 1 Corinthians 15:58. It says: “My beloved brethren stand ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord. For as much as ye know that your labour is not in vain in the Lord.”

And Madam Speaker, the battle is not mine, it is the Lord's. Just as he told Joshua in Chronicles. And with that confidence and with that belief, I say bring it on. I have endured it for three years, for the benefit of my people. But if it means like Esther where a night with the King is requested for the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, then you are looking at an Esther because I put on notice last Friday that I was going to use my two hours today. I thought about it for a long time, because I know how politics work. Money still talks, certainly in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

But if it means my seat, Madam Speaker, because of the position that I took today, then I will go out feeling satisfied because it is better to be a live hero than a dead coward.

May it please you, Madam Speaker.

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Continuation of debate on the Throne Speech. Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak?

Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

It is indeed a pleasure to be able to stand here this morning to debate the Budget and Throne Speech. I am thankful to Almighty God for the privilege to be here serving my people and my country as a part of an honest and open Government.

Madam Speaker, I particularly thank the good people of Bodden Town for their continued faith in me to represent them and to do the right thing to the best of my ability. Before I get any further in my debate, I would like to take this opportunity to wish my good friend, the Honourable Third Official Member, the Financial Secretary, a belated happy birthday. I know he didn't want anyone to know, but we found out and it is my privilege to be able to wish that to him one day late. I hope that he will be around for many, many more.

Madam Speaker, much has been said thus far, mainly by the Opposition of this House, in relation to the matters before us. The Opposition has pretty much, I guess it would be safe to say, showed a certain amount of desperation so far in that they have been very negative in the main in relation to just about everything that they have said. If you were to listen to the Opposition and believe them, then this Government in three years has done absolutely nothing; we are a bunch of vagrants and vagabonds, dishonest and all the like.

I will certainly deal with a lot of issues today, but as a part of this Government, as a Member of this Government, Madam Speaker, when someone calls this Government dishonest, they call Osbourne Boddin dishonest. And if it is one thing I am not, it is dishonest. I think there are those in the Opposition who know all about dishonesty.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition, in particular, knows that he is under a lot of pressure, under scrutiny. And he has been that way for 24 years, Madam Speaker, because from the time he was elected he has been a troublemaker.

Madam Speaker, that man has broken up every relationship he has ever had as a political affinity. He has not stayed in one church, and yet he continues to blaspheme and hide behind Christianity. Hypocrisy to the max, Madam Speaker! And this country needs to understand that and understand the nature of the man they are dealing with. I hope that when he leaves that Opposition seat that he retires to West Bay. He will not be coming back on this side if I have anything to do with it.

Madam Speaker, I will leave that for now and continue my substantive debate. I will say more later on.

Madam Speaker, the budget as prepared by the Honourable Third Official Member and his team is another balanced budget. The budget covers a lot of many important areas for this country, especially in the area of infrastructure development. The Opposition is pounding us to death about the amount of borrowing and spending that this Government is doing. But if this spending had been done over a reasonable period of time in the past, then this Government would not be forced to deal with so many issues at this time.

In fact, I do not think there has been a harder working government in the time that I have been around to see the amount of initiatives and the things that we have taken on in a very difficult time. In fact, some would say that we have taken on too much. We are too ambitious. And yes, some of our projects will not be complete. That is the nature of this business. And, yes, we have to build on what the other governments and the governments before them started. We would be stupid, Madam Speaker, and it would be a very irresponsible government to stop it and start over. So, this thing about, I started it! I started it! Unna only finishing it . . . Madam Speaker, that is the nature of this business.

As the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said yesterday afternoon, one of the things I had to agree with her on is that in this business some people plant, some people water, some people grow and some people reap. That is a fact. You cannot do it all, especially in one term. Especially in three years. But I have the utmost faith, as I said, in the Third Official Member and his team for putting together a budget. And, I am not sucking up to him, although I wished him a happy birthday earlier . . . but I know him. I have known him all my life from high school, and there is not a more honest, able, capable and conservative being that I know. Therefore, Madam Speaker, when that gentleman brings a budget to this House, I know the pressure he puts on Ministers and Departments to ensure that everything is lean and trim as possible, and the pressures that they have to produce that budget. So, Madam Speaker, I have faith in the budget.

The Honourable Third Official Member spoke to his budget and spoke of the many issues that we are faced with. It is a difficult time, Madam Speaker, because we have a worldwide almost, I guess, recession or economic slowdown. Therefore, it is a difficult time that we face. And, yes, we have large borrowings. No denying that. But we have borrowings and debt that we can service. That is the key to it. When our borrowing is within the parameters set out—and I will show that as I go along—then I do not see what the big deal is. Of course, large borrowings will concern anyone, and it concerns me.

One minute please, Madam Speaker. I beg your indulgence.

Mr. Osbourne V. Boddin: Yes, Madam Speaker, my apologies.

I was saying that borrowing would concern anyone. And I am not saying that because we have large borrowings we should not be concerned. We are concerned, Madam Speaker. But we have confidence in our economy and what is going on around us and we feel, therefore, that we will be able to service that debt.

As I said, the budget is a balanced budget, compliant with responsible fiscal management under the Public Management and Finance Law. Madam Speaker, I believe that it is a sensible budget, clearly thought out and was certainly well presented by the Honourable Member.

Madam Speaker, I would like to go over the Public Management and Finance Law criteria in a very concise way so that anyone listening can understand what we are dealing with.

I will not list these necessarily in order of priority, but there are five criteria set out under the Public Management and Finance Law, and borrowing (what I am speaking about) is one of them. It says that the maximum debt service ratio that the country is allowed to have is 10 per cent. Madam Speaker, our debt service ratio is standing at 7.9 per cent. So that is 2.1 per cent under, or 25 per cent under the allowed maximum. I think that is a fairly conservative figure.

It also calls for a certain amount of cash to be held at any one point in time, and the requirement now is for 90 day's cash to be held, three months cash, in other words, to cover three months of government expenditure. And, we have met that. I think we have 91 day's worth of cash on hand predicted as at the end of 2009.

We have also budgeted a healthy surplus of $13.5 million, which is another one of the criteria.

Another criteria, Madam Speaker, is to have a positive net worth. We have over $500 million, $532 million to be exact, of positive net worth.

And the last one of the items is the net debt ratio. The maximum allowed under the Public Management and Finance Law is 80 per cent. We have our net debt ratio projected at 73 per cent.

So, Madam Speaker, we have complied with all of the criteria under the Public Management and Finance Law. That is the first thing that we need to make absolutely clear. We are not in violation of any of those principles of prudent accounting practice. And they are very conservative in the main. There are some that would say that in calculating the debt service ratio, for instance, in most cases you use principal repayments only. But the Public Management and Finance Law calls for principal repayments and interest. So that is an ultra conservative percentage.

Madam Speaker, as I said, we have a worldwide economic slowdown. There is no doubt about that. But our economy continues to strive. We have predicted growth of 1.7 per cent comparing favourably to somewhere such as the US, which is predicted at .5 per cent. So, our growth is three times what is predicted in the USA.

Another very important factor for us to look at—and this is very, very important, because this speaks to investor confidence and how people perceive these Islands and whether they are willing to come here and invest their money—and that is the rating that has been given to us by Moody's, the international rating agency. They have maintained their Aa3 rating for Cayman and this is a huge testament to the way they perceive Government and the economic condition of these Islands. And this is based on their looking at figures and the economic climate. So, this is not to be taken lightly and we should be very proud of such a rating.

Now, Madam Speaker, one of the favourite sayings from the Opposition, the theme of the three speakers who have spoken thus far from that side, is that this Government is an irresponsible one. I ask the question, how so? How so, Madam Speaker? when this Government is showing clearly that we are working within the parameters as set out and we are being open with what we are doing. Madam Speaker, bear in mind also, that this budget takes into account 3.2 per cent cost of living adjustment for the entire civil service, retroactive to July 1 [2007].

I was looking at one of the reports in the paper, I think this morning or yesterday, and one of the things the Leader of the Opposition was saying is that we have offered up this increase and we do not know how we are going to pay for it. Well, that is totally untrue, Madam Speaker. I would like to make that clear because the time the SPS (Strategic Policy Statement) was brought in November, departments had factored the cost of living increase into their figures. It is not a line item in the budget, no. But, certainly it is within the personal emoluments that are there.

So, Madam Speaker, I say that we are doing this without any increase in taxation. Madam Speaker, I think that the Government should be applauded rather than torn down, as has been the case thus far.

Madam Speaker, I would like now to turn my attention to some of the items and areas of national importance and some of the various areas we are going to be spending on and developing over the foreseeable future.

I would like to start with our number one priority, and that is education. This Government has embarked on a very ambitious reform process that includes the building of three new high schools, one new primary school, as well as a total reform of the education system. Madam Speaker, this is a reality. Ground has been broken and work started on site preparation on a number of these schools, with the John Gray and Frank Sound campuses being the most advanced to date. This initiative has been talked about regionally and internationally. The Minister of Education is seen as someone with a vision, as someone who is passionate about delivering a top-class education system to these Islands.

When any one Minister does something . . . this Government is not five governments; it is one government. So, that Minister is working with the support of his colleagues and the entire Government. Everyone needs to be fully aware and cognizant of that fact.

Madam Speaker, these schools will be state of the art with indoor gymnasiums, arenas, swimming pools (25 metre swimming pools in the case of Frank Sound and John Gray), state of the art playfields, multipurpose playfields and, on top of that, these schools will serve as category 5 hurricane shelters.

Of course, we have been beaten over the head with the price of these schools. Yes, they are expensive; that is for sure! But, Madam Speaker, I ask this question: what price do we put on our children's development, advancement and education? The future of this country depends on highly educated individuals. For too long we have simply accepted the fact that Caymanians would be content to sit on the floor—not at the table, but sit on the floor—and pick up the crumbs from the table. We want them to sit at the table, Madam Speaker. We want them to be a part of their future, the controlling part of their future, not dependant on someone else to make it happen for them.

Our teachers are a crucial part of this reform process. I, for one, and all of us on this side and I am sure in this House, want to see our teachers treated fairly and properly. It concerns me the way some non-renewals of contracts have been handled recently. I know that the good Minister shares this concern as well. This is not the way to foster good will among our teachers, and good teachers are hard to find. I do not need to tell anyone that.

I hope that those listening to me will take note of my concern in this area and seek to improve the way that we handle people when that time comes.

Madam Speaker, this Government has also embarked on a very ambitious sports development programme. Anyone looking on can see that. They look at the renovated Truman Bodden Complex, the beautiful field we had when Cayman played Bermuda recently; the stands that have been redone; the modern state of the art lighting that has been installed; the new track that is going to be laid there . . .

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: It's actually laid? The new track that has been laid (I have not been there recently to see).

Madam Speaker, this is a stadium now that when you walk into it the whole complex gives you a lift when you look at it. It is a beautiful national stadium that we have. The foundation was there for us to build on and, yes, we have chosen the opportunity now to make it into a beautiful place because we are renovating it. So we made it even more beautiful than it was originally, and more practical because there were a number of issues there that had to be sorted. And the lights, as I mentioned, I think those same lights are going to be used in West Bay. The poles can pivot and actually in the event of bad weather, inclement weather, those poles can lay flat on the ground and the lights removed, which can reduce the risk of a lot of damage. Therefore, Madam Speaker, although they cost more to install, without a doubt, again, in the long run they should be a wise option.

Look at what is taking place at the Annex, Madam Speaker. The new Astroturf pitch there is going to be another wonderful facility for us to play sports on, especially football.

In West Bay, I believe Astroturf will also be used. Again, the Ed Bush Stadium will be a really fine facility to use when it is all completed.

The Bodden Town field (as I will mention later) is under repair and the grass is looking really lovely up there. We have new stands, bleachers, and a new irrigation system.

The North Side facility up there, where a lot of matches are played at the moment, is in absolutely wonderful condition. New stands, new field, changing rooms that we never ever had up there.

Madam Speaker, you have heard of the facility in the Brac which will be officially opened. It is a world-class facility as well, another Astroturf pitch. Just on what I have mentioned thus far, how can anyone say that this Government is not working; that this Government is not delivering to the people of this country in the terms of infrastructure that they need and that they can be proud of?

Madam Speaker, there is also the new cricket pavilion in West Bay. You hear often too that we leave West Bay out, but I do not know how anyone can say that because I have already mentioned West Bay a number of times in my speech (and I have just started) about things that are being done there.

The school in West Bay has had some hiccups with getting started. But, again, that is no doing of the Minister. That is just the way that things have transpired, and he is working hard to get that up and going along with the other two.

So, Madam Speaker, this Government continues to deliver. This Government continues to work hard with honest representation.

Madam Speaker, one of the passions that I have, and I mentioned it the last time I debated the Budget Address, and I am going to mention it again. I would like to see public tennis courts in each district on this Island. I call yet again on the Cayman Islands Tennis Association to work in tandem with Government to form a private/public partnership to achieve this goal. I think that it is an area that we would be well served to take seriously because tennis courts would allow a lot of recreation in districts, especially districts where our young people really do not have access—not just young people, anyone for that matter, because people can play tennis well up into their 60s, 70s for that matter. Give them an option of something to do.

Tennis is one of those games enjoyed by many but, unfortunately, in terms of access to tennis courts, unless you live in a complex that has a tennis court or you become a member of the Cayman Islands Tennis Association and go down to South Sound, you really do not have much chance to get to play tennis. Therefore, a lot of our young people grow up without the opportunity. And it is not in the schools either, so a lot of them just simply never get exposed to the great game. But I would like to see serious thought put in. I know there is nothing in this budget directly for that, but I would like to encourage the Minister and the Tennis Association to take that on and have a serious look at it.

Madam Speaker, I would now like to turn my attention to some of the road works that have been going on. We look at the roads and the hardworking NRA (National Roads Authority) crew under the leadership of Mr. Tomlinson and, before that, the leadership of Mr. Colford Scott, and on his departure, Mr. Edward Howard and Mr. Paul Parchment. We have to give these guys a lot of credit and kudos, and the Minister for pushing to get his plans to alleviate traffic congestion in these Islands.

I do not believe that we can truly, over the next 10 to 15 years, build enough roads to build us out of congestion. I think that when we are done with what we are doing now and basically getting two main thoroughfares throughout the Island, you cannot do much more than that. But, if we continue to import vehicles and do not have a proper public transport, a reliable public transport system in place, one that when you know the bus is coming at twenty past you can step out and the bus is there, Madam Speaker, we will continue to have congestion in the long term. But I can say truly that what has been done thus far in terms of the West Bay Bypass and the East/West Arterial, I think that it has given us a breath of fresh air. I will go so far as to say that I feel firmly it has reduced some of the stress on individuals and on families. Because when you arrive late and flustered to work in the mornings, or when you cannot get home in the evenings, or when you have to get up at the crack of dawn or before to get your children ready to get them to school on time and get yourself to work on time because the roads are so congested, then, Madam Speaker, I believe that you are adding to the ill health of our nation.

But Madam Speaker, I know that the people of West Bay, and now the people in the eastern districts as well even with the ongoing road work . . . again, I have to give the NRA credit for the way they manage to keep the traffic flowing in and out of all the barriers and lights and all that is going on. They are working while people are driving there. So, Madam Speaker, I want to give great praise to the Minister and his Ministry and the NRA for the efforts that are being made in this area.

Since he has become Minister that same Minister of Works, the Honourable Arden McLean, also created a Recreation Parks Beach and Cemeteries Unit, which is doing some really good work in these Islands. This new unit under the leadership of some young Caymanians has really made a big difference since they have gotten up and going. They have a lot of equipment and you can see the difference in the way the public open spaces, the beaches and the cemeteries are now being handled. They have the street sweeper that was bought recently, the new one, and again doing a great job here in George Town in the mornings keeping the roads clean.

Madam Speaker, as I said, we keep hearing that nothing is being done. Nothing is being done. That is the cry from the other side of this House, from the Opposition. I just wonder where they are living. They say that we need to get out and see what is going on. Well, I think they have their eyes shut or they just simply are being mischievous.

Madam Speaker, I am saddened that I have to stand here this year and say that the Savannah gully project has not yet been completed. But we all know what has caused this problem. The approval system has basically put a hold on this. The Minister desperately wants to get this done and, as he said, he has a vested interest because he lives right close to where the gully is, although it has not directly impacted him so far. But we want to get this done. I know the three Elected Members for Bodden Town are anxious to get the Savannah gully project completed.

We have objectors to the plans that we have put forward. But a lot of those objectors are not even directly impacted by what happens when we have weather rolling in from the south. The people who are affected are certainly not objecting to this project. I wish that somehow we had managed to bypass some of the delay in this. But I know that this is not just a Bodden Town issue; this is a national issue. When we get a flood in that area it basically cuts the Island in two. I mean, the last time it was really bad. You could not get through unless you were prepared to go to your wheel wells in salt water. And a lot of people do not want to do that with their vehicles. So, you have a real blockage when that area floods, not to mention the amount of damage to homes and yards and disruption of everyday life.

I know one particular family that has put in . . . I think they are on their third or fourth set of furniture now because of the Savannah gully problem. Therefore, Madam Speaker, I know that Mr. McLean is going to work his hardest to get it done. He has been accused of removing money from the budget, but the money will be found when the project gets the green light. And it makes no sense to start the project now, as he said, during the rainy months and storm season because any weather that comes then will simply destroy what you are trying to do. And we do not want that. That would cost us even more. One thing I am certain of, I do not want to be standing up here on my next budget debate saying that it is not done, or it is not at least well on its way to completion.

I would like to turn my attention now, Madam Speaker, to the issue of housing. We desperately need affordable homes. The Government has been working hard. The Leader of Government Business has been working hard in this area coming up with a guaranteed government scheme and land being purchased and selected by the National Housing Development Trust in Cayman and Cayman Brac for this very important initiative. We have people who are desperate for affordable homes in our country, Madam Speaker. We are not denying that.

We have people still in trailer homes and that is not the way we want to see our people living. We have to get them back in proper homes and I know that the scheme in Cayman Brac is well on its way. I am hoping that the other districts, George Town, West Bay, Bodden Town and East End, in particular (I do not think there is a great need in North Side at the moment. I may be wrong, but I do not think so.), are the districts I certainly would encourage those in charge to ensure that we get the land fully purchased, get affordable homes, get that initiative properly up and going so that we can give people an opportunity to have some pride in owning their home.

Madam Speaker, much has been said about the state of our healthcare in these Islands. Some people feel it is not good. Some people feel it is doing better. Some people feel that it is good. What we do know is that the cost of healthcare continues to rise. We hear of the complaints coming in from the hospital and the various aspects of healthcare coverage, insurance, whatever. So, we have to work hard in this area. It has been an area that has been a problem for as long as I can remember in the last 20 years, I guess.

We had an authority. We disbanded the authority, we put it back under the Minister; we put it back in authority . . . back and forth it goes. But what I do know, Madam Speaker, is that our own Caymanian, Mrs. Lizzette Yearwood, since her appointment as acting CEO, has done a good job in stabilising the hospital, boosting morale, and keeping the rumour mill on the quiet. So, I want to encourage that young lady. I think she is a tribute to us here in Cayman because we have had many people at the helm and we have had a lot of turmoil as we know. But we are making slow progress.

The budget contains funds for new equipment that is badly needed and also for a new mental health care facility. Madam Speaker, as you know, I brought a Private Member's Motion late last year that received unanimous support in this House and the good Minister Eden, my colleague from Bodden Town, assured me that it would be on his next budget. I am happy to say that that Minister has kept his word to me and to this country and we indeed have the funds to get a mental health care facility started if not completed, in these Islands.

Madam Speaker, I think that we need to be able to care for our loved ones here in these Cayman Islands. It bothers me that we have to send people overseas in the main to Jamaica, but some are in the States as well for this type of treatment. I think they would be much better served being looked after in their own country where they would be closer to their loved ones, and these special people who need special help would be a lot happier as well. So, Madam Speaker, I want to pay kudos to the Health Services Authority and the Minister for taking that initiative on. I know it is not going to be easy because it is a specialist area and the cost for it is not cheap. We have a lot of expenses in this area already but with God's help we will manage.

Madam Speaker, another area of major concern is the whole area of overseas medical and the cost in that area. We know that this continues to place a great burden on the HSA and the Government coffers, and CINICO certainly has its hands full to keep these costs streamlined and manageable. We must ensure that all of the right service providers are used and that CINICO itself is properly structured to manage the ever rising healthcare costs locally and abroad.

It is my opinion that all insured persons need to contribute to premiums paid on their behalf because without this people will not have the feeling of responsibility required to keep claims under control. Madam Speaker, if you have 100 per cent coverage paid by someone else, you will go to the doctor and you will not worry too much about your premium shooting up because you do not have to fund that out of your own pocket. But, when your claims increase your premiums, then you are a little more conservative; you are a little more cognisant of the fact that you do not want to be on the receiving end of a higher bill. And this is what happens to Government. We have a huge outlay in premiums. We fund 100 per cent the whole civil service as well as other areas, other people. And, Madam Speaker, that is a lot. That is a heavy burden for any country to continue to carry. So, I think that area needs to be looked at and streamlined to reduce the amount of cost that this country is bearing.

I move then to another large area of indebtedness to this country and that is the area of Social Services and Children and Family Services Department.

Madam Speaker, this budget, thankfully, has again increased financial assistance to the elderly and disabled. And, yes, some may say it is too low because it is up to $550 now. I think this may have started years back at around $400, maybe even less. And it is up to $550 now. But the truth is, yes, that might be small; but it is what we can afford at this time. I think it shows that the Government is cognisant of the fact that people are in need. For a long time we did not have pensions or health insurance in this country. As a result, we have people who, through no fault of their own over the years, have very little savings. Some have none. Therefore, they are completely dependent on the State. As a Government we have no choice. They are our people. We have to look after them. But what I will say is that we have to make sure that it goes to the right people.

Madam Speaker, the Department of Children and Family Services continues to play a crucial role in assisting those less fortunate in our community. It is unfortunate that, again, this area continues to grow in expenditure. But the Department is working hard, I know, with the STARSS (Support Towards Autonomy, Retraining and Self-Sufficiency) programme, which allows individuals to be trained and placed in jobs to ensure that many of them do not remain fixed in their dependency. The old principle, teach a person to fish and not just give them the fish, because they will keep coming back, applies here. That is what this programme is based on. Again, it is a battle. It is an area that is really hard to keep fully controlled because people find ways and means of beating any system. But I encourage those in Children and Family Services to work hard to streamline their operations. I know they have the mindset to do just that and to help those who are really in need.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition spoke at length about how much they should be getting, $800, and there are so many of them and what-not. But this poverty, this state of affairs, this social dependence by our people did not start with this government. Madam Speaker, this has been long in the making. And because of some of the things I have already mentioned, such as, the lack of emphasis on education and the development of our people, actions such as his—that can never be forgiven—with hundreds and thousands of status [grants] were given to people who are not Caymanian, who are not our people, who continue to bring people into this county as dependents, Madam Speaker, [that] places a greater burden on our government and on this country.

Those are the actions we are reaping the rewards of now. That is why we have to fund and carry such a heavy social cost. So, Madam Speaker, I do not want the listening public to think that this PPM Government has suddenly made the Cayman Islands a poorer place. Nothing could be farther from the truth! We are working very hard to develop our people and to develop this country in the right way.

I can go to bed every night knowing that I have honest colleagues and get up in the morning and not have to worry about some scandal or rumour or dishonesty. That means a lot! And I will not be part of a government that is not like that, Madam Speaker. The day that I am done with this one, I am done! I certainly, would never entertain the one on the other side, and I do not see any other thing on the horizon right now.

So, Madam Speaker, I know that we are trying hard. And, yes, there are a lot of people out there that are hurting. And we appreciate that because, remember, we are elected. They come to us, every one of us here.

Mr. Osbourne V. Boddén: Exactly.

The Opposition, in particular the Leader of the Opposition, would make people believe that they are the only ones that know about the hardship. It is only those on that side that the people call and come to their doors and look help from. There are more of us on this side, Madam Speaker! So there has to be more money going out and more advice and more everything else! More doors to knock on, Madam Speaker.

So, I want this country and the folks listening to me to understand . . . do not listen to the desperate sounds of the Leader of the Opposition. He knows he is out in the wilderness. He knows he is not contributing. Yes he has done some good over his years; but he has done a lot of mischief too. And he continues to do that. It is time for him to go.

Madam Speaker, our young men and women also have to be responsible and take advantage of the opportunities that are afforded to them in the workplace and in their personal development through education.

Madam Speaker, each and every able-bodied Caymanian should be able to do this with the right guidance and a system that is willing to give them a chance. Our job as a Government is to ensure that this happens. That is our job, Madam Speaker; to create the environment, the system that the young people, our young people, can take advantage of.

Their personal development has to be through education and they must take advantage with both hands. We are offering scholarships to all persons that qualify. We have the University College of the Cayman Islands that is bursting at its seams with students, I think in excess of 3,500 students. A lot of people are now taking up this challenge.

Madam Speaker, there were 800 registered there when we took over. So the people, our people, have recognised that this Government wants to educate them. This Government wants to develop them. I am not saying that we have started everything or every initiative. We have not. I said at the beginning that the foundation was laid for many, many things. But it is incumbent upon as a Government to build on that foundation and develop it in a proper manner.

Madam Speaker, previous governments, I dare say especially with education—and, in particular, with the UDP Government—had no vision when it came to education in this country. No vision, Madam Speaker. We have the University College. I will speak in detail to the Brac later with some of the things we are doing there, but I just want to mention, since I am talking about the University College, that we recently opened a branch in Cayman Brac as well. And it is doing very well.

So, Madam Speaker, I keep repeating. I have reached this far in my debate and I have outlined so many initiatives, so many projects, and yet we are being accused of doing nothing. Well, I wonder who is sleeping, Madam Speaker, because it is not the PPM Government.

As I said, the Minister has increased the number of scholarships in this country to unprecedented levels. Overseas scholarships are higher, more bountiful than ever before, and the private sector is also playing its part because they realise too the importance of having qualified Caymanians to fill the post. At the end of the day, when you have to deal with immigration and the permit system, you have extra costs. But if you can have a good Caymanian in a post it makes that much more sense.

Madam Speaker, I reiterate, what will make a difference in this country in the long run is well prepared Caymanians, able and willing to take their rightful place.

Young women, in particular, face the challenge of teenage pregnancy. I am going to talk about something that is not very popular and something that in some areas may not win me much support, but I have to talk about it because it is reality. And that is my job—to speak it as I see it. I am tired of seeing these young ladies getting themselves in a situation where they are left to fend for three or four kids—five sometimes. They have different fathers, all of them not doing for the kids. And these young ladies are left on the mercy of government. Chances are they cannot hold a job because of the demands with the kids or they are in and out, they are transient amongst jobs so they are not making a lot of money. They are really, really in a deep trench.

I say to the young women out there, 'Wise up'. Do not put yourself in this situation because you have control of your destiny. You can do something about it. You can protect yourself. You do not have to get yourself where you become dependant on the State to this extent. This is within your control. You deserve better than this, young ladies, and your children most certainly do. They did not ask to be brought into this world and they are being brought into hardship. So, Madam Speaker, that is a plea from the bottom of my heart to young women out there, in particular, as I said.

Young men, we have our challenges with them as well. But the young women who are burdened cannot go on to further education, cannot hold a job, and have to find school money, lunch money, clothes and all the other stuff that goes along with kids that need to find that and find themselves in this rut. And only the government at the end of the day is left because they have begged and asked family members and looked for support everywhere, and at the end of the day, it is only government.

We have the Young Parents Programme, the STARSS Programme, and a lot of initiatives. We have a lot of organisations that work hard; NGOs (Non-government Organisations) that talk about this kind of thing and offer support. I beg and plead with our young women to take note and take their rightful place in society.

Madam Speaker, turning my attention to the area of our Police Services and the whole crime fighting area. As you know, when we took office one of the first things that we did was sit with the police and give them a healthy budget that would take them over a three or four year period in which they would get the resources they needed to protect our borders and all of the crime-fighting strategies that they needed.

Well, Madam Speaker, a lot has been done, but there is a lot more to do. We have heard the Honourable First Official Member speak to the fact that the boats . . . one would be here this year and more are coming in the next year. They are taking a long time. I wish they would have been here by now because we have constantly had problems with the Protector. I do not know why but it seems to keep going down and staying down. We have the helicopter that is out in the wilderness. I am not sure where she is, but I am hoping she will get here soon.

So we have a lot of things that we need the police to push and step up to, and get their marine base built in the Newlands area so that they can finally, once and for all, have a proper coastguard type facility with customs and immigration taskforce to properly protect these Islands. Because, Madam Speaker, until we can protect what comes into these Islands, we will constantly have a major issue on our hands because we will just be from one bust to the next. We are not slowing down the supply if it is coming in all the time. I think the helicopter and the new fast craft that we are looking at will go a long way at alleviating some of these problems.

Of course, we have had our own problems with the police force. That is ongoing as I speak. But we have managed, with the introduction of an acting commissioner and the return of one of the deputies. I think we have righted the ship and are on an even keel. So, I am hoping that whatever efforts have to be made to root out whatever else is there . . . And we have heard that that undertaking has been given by the gentleman in charge of the investigation. I hope that he continues to do his job and does it to the best of his ability and, once and for all, give us a police force that we can be proud of. All of the innuendo and rumours of corruption and whatever will fall away.

Madam Speaker, I am praying that we will see that day. I am praying for that, and I am praying for all of those hardworking police officers who continue to do a good job day in and day out under difficult circumstances. I am hoping that in the end it will all work out for the better.

Madam Speaker, I would like now to turn my attention to our financial industry, which is the other pillar of our economy along with tourism. It continues to face its many threats head on, those initiatives, as we know, that pop up from time to time with offshore sectors where the big boys in the big countries don't like the fact that we exist, although most of them do business with us. So, they continue to send down the pipe many initiatives to try and disrupt what is happening.

We also face the threat of economic slow-down, as I said earlier. That is a reality. But I am happy to say that all reports out of the financial industry are that things are going quite well.

We have a good strong regulatory regime. And although they continue to battle constraints in human resources I think that they are doing a good job. But we have to beef up the manpower in that area because there are a lot of things that they need and it has to be in the form of human capital. We have to make sure that we fully equip CIMA (Cayman Islands Monetary Authority) and our regulatory authorities to do the job properly. That is crucial. Our regulatory environment is what has created this success story so far and we have to ensure that it constantly stays strong and vigilant.

The funds sector, that is, the mutual funds/hedge funds sector, continues to thrive and all of the areas including captive insurance, company registry, listings on the Cayman Stock Exchange, and shipping, have all shown growth in the last year. So, Madam Speaker, I think, although the Second Elected Member for West Bay laughed when I said that the financial industry continues to be strong . . . I am not sure why he laughed, but I think that the figures speak for themselves.

I just came back from a conference, RIMS, which is the largest Risk Insurance Management Society in the world representing Government, in San Diego for a couple of days. I must say at the Cayman booth and at all of the events we had there everyone was quite upbeat and quite optimistic. Even with the soft market in the insurance industry, Cayman continues to do well and thrive with captive insurance. So, that is just one example I use. But I must say that from what I am hearing . . . and my wife, in fact, just last night said to me that the volume (she's in the mutual fund business) of business that they are seeing is unbelievable. She works for State Street and that is one of the largest fund operators and administrators in the world, so I am happy to hear that.

Madam Speaker, Cayman continues to attract good business and those involved in bringing this business should be complimented both in the private and public sectors. A lot of people work hard to bring good business to the Cayman Islands. It does not just happen. People do not just pop up and say they want to do business. Some do, but in the majority you have to hustle and compete for that business. And there are a lot of people working as insurance managers, bankers, mutual funds operators, accountants, lawyers, regulators, all of the service providers, Madam Speaker. They work hard to bring good business to these Islands.

As a Government our job is to create the environment for this business to thrive and grow. Hence, I believe that we have to streamline our system, yet again, in this area and make it as clear and user-friendly as possible. In particular, our Immigration and Business and Staffing Plan Boards, Madam Speaker, are crucial in this regard. We must endeavour to fix any problems that we have in this area. And we do have some, Madam Speaker. There is no getting away from that. Once you have boards, you have problems. There are issues, there is always something going on. There is some talk, and whether it is true or not, it is always an issue. There is no getting away from that unless you do not have boards.

At the moment I cannot see where you could do without boards. But, certainly we are looking at making some of the business more administrative in nature where it would be dealt with through the Immigration Department rather than every routine thing going to a board. That will go some ways to taking some of the backlog and alleviating some of the accusations.

Our regulatory regimes, Madam Speaker, must be clear and practical. That is the bottom line. People must know where they stand, whether they are here working or visiting. They must know when they come into this Island where they stand. I believe that if we can achieve that then it makes . . . In my years of working in the financial industry, I always remember hearing clients and people working there, colleagues of mine at the time would always say we just need to be clear on what is expected of us. Once we are clear, we may not like it, but we are clear on it. We have no doubt that this is our status and this is how we move ahead. And that is important. People like surety. People like to know that they are steady. I am sure the Second Elected Member for West Bay knows from his days in the financial industry . . . and he is still there. I am sure he heard and he . . .

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Right! They do not like uncertainty. They hate it. And it's not to be underestimated. I don't think there is anything that they hate more. They really do hate that!

Money has feet and it will walk! And it will fly. It has wings when it is ready too. So, we have to be cognisant of that Madam Speaker, and set clear guidelines and rules for people who come here to do business and work, play and visit among us.

Madam Speaker, I am happy to hear that we are looking to enhance our share of the reinsurance market. Currently we have one company, Green Light Reinsurance Ltd., which came in last year. I say I am happy to hear that because we are not necessarily looking to compete with Bermuda. In fact, I think that would be impossible because they are known as a large offshore reinsurance market. They are huge. We are not looking to compete with them. But what we are looking to do is put the Cayman Islands on a solid footing in our own right. This will complement our hedge funds and captive industry.

We have to ensure that we set up the regime to allow this business to develop. I know that the reinsurance task force (which was commissioned by the Minister of Education under his financial obligations) has now completed its report. I believe a lot of work has gone in and a lot of good findings are coming out of that. This will go a long way to shoring up the financial industry.

I think it was back (if memory serves me right) in the 70s that Cayman lost out at that time to Bermuda with their reinsurance market for various reasons. One was simple. I think, one of the men who wanted to come here, his wife had been to Bermuda and she simply wanted to go to Bermuda and he went. That's no joke. That's true. That is reality. That is how business is; sometimes it is simply a personal preference, whether their golf course is better than mine or whether they have gambling and I don't, or whether they have nicer hotels, or nicer cars, nicer streets, whatever. People are very fickle in that business and they move at a whim and a fancy. And that is why we do not have a really developed reinsurance market currently. But I know we are not going to make the mistake the second time around. We have been given an opportunity. We have one good company and we are looking to attract others.

Madam Speaker, in my humble opinion, I would suggest that we probably look to attract another three or four more good solid reinsurance companies. This will give us another leg to stand on and, as I said, shore up our financial industry and give a lot of confidence back and restore some confidence where people will know that the market here is a mature market. And once you have reinsurance on hand your hedge funds and your captive insurers will be happy to utilise those services.

Madam Speaker, would it be a convenient time to take a break?

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11.44 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.06 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing his debate. Honourable Member, I have been informed by the Clerk that you have 50 minutes remaining.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker, that's five-zero, right?

The Speaker: Fifty.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you.

All right, Madam Speaker, as I was saying before the break, I wrapped up my comments on the financial industry and the need for us to have clear guidelines for people doing business in the Cayman Islands and the need for us to develop a substantive reinsurance market.

I would like to turn my attention now to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and speak briefly on some of the initiatives and the things that this Government has been working on in the three year period.

Again, we have been accused of ignoring Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. That one is a complete fallacy because often times we get upset because Cayman Brac and Little Cayman seem to get more than what we are trying to get for our districts. So, we row with Mose all the time, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, about his apparent preferential treatment and all that is happening in his Islands. I do not know how anyone can accuse us of ignoring Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Anyway, be that as it may, the Opposition will have their say.

As I mentioned earlier, we have an affordable housing programme well on its way and homes are being built as I speak. We have opened a branch of our development bank in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and they are offering good advice and services to the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We have encouraged cruise tourism. I know that we had cruise ships go to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman before we came to office, but certainly we have encouraged that to help develop the local tourism.

There is tremendous local tourism between the Islands at the moment, and I think Cayman Airways is under constant pressure to keep up and provide the kind of service that is needed for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, to enhance this local tourism and international tourism.

Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are beautiful ecotourism areas where there is so much for the tourist or local who wants to relax, sit back and enjoy nature. There is so much to do in that regard—great diving, there is the bluff, the caves, the wreck and the wonderful native plants; the animals and all of the other stuff that is there for people to just simply relax and enjoy life at a slower pace.

Little Cayman is still virtually undeveloped and I personally would love to see it stay that way with just the right amount of development to make it operate and be somewhere nice to go to, but certainly not too much development that will ruin it.

The new airport has to be built there to allow better air service for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, in particular to Little Cayman. I mentioned earlier the sporting facilities, the sports project that was started on the bluff under, I think, the Ministry of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman when she was Minister. It has been some time coming, but it is certainly now coming to real fruition and being completed by this Government. The football field has just been laid with Astroturf and, as the Second and the First Elected Members [for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] spoke to, it is now a world class facility where we hope that we will be able to host international games and maybe even some World Cup qualifying games.

So, this is all going on.

UCCI (University College of the Cayman Islands), as I mentioned earlier, has a branch that was opened recently, and we are working hard with Cayman Airways to provide the type of service that is needed. This will involve new equipment and we will have to make sure that we get the right equipment to make it work because we have always had the difficulty of the jets going in to the Brac. And, of course, we have had the Twin Otters and other planes over the years. But what we need is something in between, for 40 to 50 people that will travel frequently and travel at a good capacity and make it that much more efficient.

So, Madam Speaker, the Brac, in particular, is becoming a place that in some ways is a retirement haven for people from Cayman. There are a lot of older Caymanians who have moved up that way and who are developing, and some of them just kicking back and relaxing. That is good to see. We are appreciating what the smaller islands have to offer. Therefore, Madam Speaker, it bemuses me when I hear that we have neglected the Brac or we are not doing what we are supposed to be doing for the Brac and we have only done what was done before, and this and that. I just do not understand where all of that comes from.

The fire station is being worked on as I speak. That will hopefully get completed and the firemen will have a much better facility to work from. So, along with the Bluff Road being developed and the Ann Tatum Ramp, and all the other stuff that will allow proper access to the Bluff. . . I go there a fair amount, and if you go there you will see the place is a-buzz with activity and the Bluff is just blossoming and developing with nice development, residential mainly. I know that the Second Elected Member [for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman], one of the projects he is involved with is developing back office facilities in the Brac and moving the power station up on to the Bluff and all of that. So, there is a ton of activity going on.

This Government has certainly played its part to make that happen. This Government appreciates Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The Leader of Government Business is himself a Bracker, so I do not think anyone should doubt the commitment that this Government has because, I mean he would be the last one to turn his back on what is needed in those Islands. So anything that district administration or the Members for Cayman Brac ask for, within reason, they are going to be accommodated. As long as we can manage it financially we certainly support all that is going on in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We want to see them remain pristine and developed in a very sustainable fashion.

I would now like to turn my attention to another hot issue, and that is the cost of living. One of the first things I will talk about under the cost of living is the fact that we now have a new contract with CUC (Caribbean Utilities Company Ltd.). And we all know that there are benefits to be reaped from that contract that the Minister McLean worked so hard along with his negotiating team on. Unfortunately, we are not reaping the benefits right now because . . . I guess it would have been worse if we didn't have the contract in place, but the sky-rocketing cost of fuel, where oil is $130 (or close thereto, $126 I think it is today) a barrel. The whole world is reeling from the effects of high fuel costs. Certainly, a power company that depends on fossil fuel is going to be in deep trouble and cannot but pass on certain costs to the consumers. To add to that, Government in its negotiations gave up $6 million in import duties, to show the type of commitment that went in to getting the agreement that we have.

Madam Speaker, I would certainly like to encourage CUC and anyone else for that matter, to explore alternative fuels and methods of generating electricity. I know it is not easy and it is a very expensive proposition because I know that they have already been doing that in the area of thermal energy. For instance, I know that they have looked at ocean conversion, and I am sure they have explored solar and wind and everything else because it is certainly in their interests in the long term, with fossil fuels becoming scarcer and more expensive, to find alternative methods. But I want to implore and encourage them and anyone in the business to look at alternative methods.

I think solar, and although initial costs are high there is something to be said for us to look closer at it in these Islands because we have a tremendous amount of sunshine on a daily basis which comes to us free. If we can find a way of harnessing some of that it will go a long way to maybe making it a viable option one of these days. I am no expert in that area, but I will just make those comments.

Madam Speaker, as I said, oil approaching $130 a barrel is driving prices not just in Cayman but worldwide through the roof. It affects everything that we do from producing to transporting, and as the Cayman Islands is totally dependent on imported goods; we are definitely going to feel the crunch from the high cost of fuel. Fuel at the pump in Cayman is almost at $5 a gallon. That is not easy, but people that sell fuel, in most cases (those that are reasonable anyway) will tell you that they do not make a lot on fuel. The markup is small and there are some who take advantage of this, of course, and do what they have to do. I am in that business. I happen to know firsthand what is what when it comes to fuel.

Madam Speaker, because of all of these factors, I believe that each person must practice fiscal restraint and limit their own spending to what is affordable for them. I have said this before in this honourable House, Madam Speaker: You have to cut your suit to fit your cloth. You cannot, simply because you see Tom Jones or John Brown with something, expect that you can have it if you cannot afford it. And too many of our people that are on the lower economic rung of the ladder . . . In fact, Madam Speaker, people that come to us for financial handouts are looking something or the other because they claim they are dead broke. They are still carrying two cell phones on their sides and they are driving up in your driveway in a fancy car—sometimes fancier than [that of] the person they are coming to see!

Madam Speaker, what I am talking about is a matter of priorities. Until we can get this through our heads and get those priorities right . . . yes, the cost of living is high, but we can manage ourselves better Madam Speaker. Pay your rent, your mortgage, your food and your utilities and then you can treat yourself. But do not do it in reverse order. That is where we have so much problems and we as legislators on both sides of this House can vouch for that. We know. We see it. We see the people who come and we know what they are doing. They are jumping on the plane and going, but yet they are not paying their bills. They did not pay their rent before they went on their vacation or shopping in Miami. You know, this is reality, Madam Speaker. And it is my job as a legislator and as a representative to point this out because this is what is killing our people. If they were managing themselves better, we would have fewer complaints.

My colleague, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman often talks about personal financial management. In fact, in his debate yesterday he spoke about again about the need for this and the fact that we need to make this advice more readily available to the average person so they can learn to deal with their personal affairs in a more prudent manner. Madam Speaker, I could not agree more. In my opinion, this should be launched . . . and there is the beginning of it, as he referred to, in Cayman Brac in particular right now. I think there is someone there who is working with people. But we need to have this launched as a national initiative, in my opinion, by the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau or the Cayman Islands Development Bank, one of our agencies, on a district by district basis. That is how serious it is.

Even the great USA has on CNN something called "Money Matters" that comes on 8.30 every morning, I believe. There is a gentleman on CNN talking to the nation about how to be prudent, how to manage money matters, how to get by in a prudent way. Madam Speaker, this is important. Just like the country and the government have to be fiscally responsible, each individual in it needs to take that same approach.

We have to educate our people to the financial pitfalls that are out there and teach them to avoid the deep trench, the rut that once they get into there seems no end. And, Madam Speaker, you are talking about people here, and about lives and stress and all of the problems that go with that. When you are financially hamstrung it puts you and your family under pressure, and it causes marriages to go haywire; it causes people to do things that are irrational and unreasonable.

So, Madam Speaker, we are not talking about any little problem; it is a big problem when you cannot survive financially. I am not saying it is easy out there. Do not get me wrong. It is tough; it is hard to get good jobs right now and some of our people are ill prepared, as I spoke to earlier. But those who are working and have an income need to find a way of managing themselves better. I believe that at the end of the day it costs Government a lot more if we do not get involved in the prevention business because prevention is always better than cure. I am very passionate about that area. But I think it is something that we, as a Government have to play our part, yes, but our people too need to understand that they have a responsibility in this very serious matter.

Madam Speaker, now to conclude my debate I would like to turn my attention to my district of Bodden Town and all that has been going on within the last three years since I have been a representative—a proud representative of the district of Bodden Town. And as I say that, my colleague, the Honourable Minister shows up.

Madam Speaker, we have been doing so much in Bodden Town over the last three years that, again, apart from Cayman Brac I think, the other Members are also jealous of Bodden Town. I tell them all the time, we laugh about it and they say, 'Oh lord, not you again!' I say, 'Yes, we had so little for so long. Don't envy us now.' The truth is that Bodden Town, and I guess the good folks from Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will say too, we were neglected!

The Speaker: Not North Side, or what?

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: I know, Madam Speaker feels that way about North Side too, and not since you have been elected, Madam Speaker!

Madam Speaker, seriously, I would like to outline some of the projects that we have been working on and are ongoing, and some are complete, just to show again to this country and the listening audience that we have not been idle, we have been working very hard.

Madam Speaker, we have a new civic centre to be built next to the Bodden Town Primary School on a piece of government-owned property that will have a Category 5 rating to serve as a hurricane shelter. That new civic centre will be state of the art. It will have indoor sporting facilities, gymnasium and courts and all the other stuff. It will provide another wonderful venue for meetings. Money is in the budget to get that project started. I know it is a substantial project so it will not be complete in this financial year, but hopefully by the next one.

The old civic centre, anyone who passes by there now will look and see a nice looking blue and white building. It has been wonderfully renovated. We are looking forward to opening it closer to the end of this month. That is going to provide in the interim meeting space upstairs that can hold 300 to 400 people. Downstairs is divided up into offices and we are looking to have a vehicle licensing services brought to the Bodden Town district to operate from that venue.

Madam Speaker, that whole area where the old civic centre stands houses, as most people know, our police station and clinic at the moment. It is our sports area where we have hard courts, netball and basketball. And we have our football field. This whole area was severely damaged by the hurricane and a lot of work has gone into it. The field is almost fully grassed now. A lot of work has gone into the irrigation scheme and the building of the brand new stand. New bleachers are going to be put in that stand and the whole area had to be re-fenced. The lights had to be reinstalled. Poles had to be righted and some replaced. A lot of work has gone into that area. The basketball backboards and stuff had to be replaced, new nets for the netball and the whole area basically cleaned up. That area in itself, a tremendous amount of work has gone into it.

I am looking forward to vehicle licensing services coming to Bodden Town. It will be similar to the West Bay operation, although I think a little bigger. They will probably be able to do some inspections there because we have the land. This, again, will prove the interest of this Government in diversifying, decentralising, [so] people [do not] have to go to George Town for everything. This will alleviate traffic, it will alleviate stress, and it certainly just makes good sense when the outer districts can have their own services and everyone does not have to go one direction for service.

I know Minister McLean is working hard on this. He is working also very hard on purchasing land for cemeteries because our old cemetery, the original one, is filling up rapidly and we have to procure additional land. That is being worked on and negotiated as I speak.

The same Minister, yet again, Mr. McLean—

The Speaker: Honourable Member, could we refer to the Honourable Minister for Communications?

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. My apologies.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: The Honourable Minister of Works has had the privilege of completing and just opening the Savannah Post Office where we have over 2,500 post boxes and a far cry away from the original tiny post office that was next to the Savannah Primary School. It is a wonderful facility and it was opened with all of the fanfare a couple of weeks ago. Everyone was very proud, and justly so.

Again, the Minister for Communications and works is working at getting the Newlands launch ramp completed. The ramp itself has been built and the surrounding area is now being landscaped. The jetty will be built and this will be a wonderful addition and appreciated by all of the people who go boating in that area because everyone knows we launched within an outcrop of rocks which was sort of a natural inlet and very difficult, painful, and not easy to launch any decent size boat. There was nothing to tie up to or anything, and no depth. So, we are looking forward to this wonderful facility being fully operational. And again, we have to thank the Honourable Minister of Works for all of these good works in the Bodden Town area.

We have also procured beach property in central Bodden Town. The Honourable Minister of Tourism with his initiative to go east has bought two parcels of land on either side of the existing Coe-Wood Public Beach. The plan between the Minister of Works and us is to make this beach into a central showpiece for Bodden Town. It will house a lunching ramp, landscaped parking, and cabanas. We are going to be shifting the toilet facilities to one end of the property and we are also putting in kiosks that individuals can use to sell their wares and crafts and whatever.

I know we have agreed on the conceptual drawings and those plans are going through the process now. I am sure we are looking to get that started as soon as possible. I think we will be closing the beach for a while to make this whole thing happen, but when it reopens we are going to open that and have a much better facility than what we have there now.

I mentioned under the police that the marine base will be built in the Newlands area. That will be starting soon as well. The Leader of Government Business, Minister for Planning and District Administration is also developing his argi-tourism project in the Lower Valley area. We started off with the Market at the Grounds on Saturday mornings and I know he has a great vision for what he would like to see in that area. As it stands, we have the Agriculture Pavilion and the pens for the animals and whatnot. But we have bought a lot of land in that area, a tremendous amount of acreage. The vision there is to create an agri-tourism project that will be something that tourists and locals alike can enjoy in terms of craft and food and the whole agricultural type atmosphere. So, that is something that we are looking forward to enhancing activity on the eastern end and will certainly fall under the Go East initiatives.

So, Madam Speaker, all this is happening and is very real. I am not just pulling these things out. As I said, there are different levels of construction but in three years these things do take time to plan, to implement, and to operate. So, we have to bear that in mind. I do not think the Government should be accused at all of sitting on its laurels and paddling away doing nothing. This PPM Government has been working extremely hard, Madam Speaker—I repeat that—to get a lot of things into the districts and to ensure that these islands have a sustainable future.

Madam Speaker, continuing with the activity in the Bodden Town area, we re-opened the Bodden Town Library after the hurricane; a newly renovated library with computer access and internet access. It is a wonderful facility with nice parking. It is a joy to watch the school kids in the days being walked up the road by their teachers, going to the library. It certainly is playing its part in the community, and rightly so.

Thanks to many in Government and in the private sector, in particular Mr. Bob Watler who did the roof on that for no cost to Government. I want to thank him also for his assistance with tearing down the old buildings that we had on the property next to the public beach after they were purchased, again at no cost to the Government. So, people like Mr. Watler and others in the community who continue to step up and help and do their share are much appreciated. They are community stalwarts. Government cannot do it all, as I keep saying, Madam Speaker. Government is us; it needs us to play a part to make it happen.

Madam Speaker, we also have the recently opened Harry McCoy Senior Park, compliments of the Dart Foundation on Government property in the Gun Square area. We have the senior centre, the Nurse Josie Senior Centre, which is a wonderful facility. It is not a residential home, but it is somewhere our elders can go and enjoy themselves and do their crocheting and hang out and do their little cooking because it has all the facilities they need in terms of bathroom, kitchen and all that type of stuff.

Government has put a lot of money into it to make it happen. I would encourage anyone who has not been to the senior centre to pass by sometime, in particular on a Saturday afternoon when the committee that works so hard in the district, people like Ms. Flo Wood, Mrs. Agnes McCoy, Mrs. Ellen Eden and all the others: Mrs. Mary Lawrence, Ms. Josie. It's too many to mention all, but they know the group I am talking about. They know themselves. We thank them for all of the efforts they have put in to making the senior centre, the museum and showpiece that it is. It has a lot of old artifacts and old plant trash bed. Those are the kinds of things you can give people to find out if they are a Caymanian. You can ask them what a plant trash bed is, and if they know that, then they are Caymanian.

So, things like that are all inside the walls of that building. It is actually quite crowded now because they have put . . . these ladies are something else. They keep finding more and more stuff to bring and the building is only a certain size. But the Minister for Tourism, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, also purchased the property adjacent to the senior centre which was intruding into the park area because the senior centre sits in the middle of the park. We purchased that property as well, and that property was an old house, which had become a tenant home and that is now going to be utilised to enhance this whole service to our seniors in that area. We are looking forward to getting that cleaned out and properly used in the future.

I have had much support from the police in keeping the area under scrutiny, ensuring that it does not become a place for vagrants or people to just hang out. But you go there in the evenings and you see the families taking their kids to the park, parents sitting there and the kids playing on the swings and all that stuff. It does the heart good to know that we finally have somewhere in Bodden Town like that. It certainly enhanced the whole area because the Gun Square/Cumber Avenue area for a long time was not in the best of states. But it certainly is improved.

The Mission House is another wonderful addition by the National Trust to this area. We now have a complex, as it were, where you can go and you have the park, the senior centre and you have the Mission House all in walking distance, all pretty much on one property. And you have the bird sanctuary in the back and the lookout tower and all that stuff. A wonderful area. I encourage people from throughout the Islands to come to Bodden Town and see what we have to offer there.

At the same time we are working with the residents of the Cumber Avenue area to develop and enhance that whole area and to make the journey through their residential area a pleasant one. I have to give kudos to some residents in that area who have already taken the initiative on their own to start beautifying their area. I encourage the others who can do it to follow suit.

Madam Speaker, along with what I have outlined there to date in Bodden Town, we have—with the assistance of the NRA and the Minister—paved a number of roads. In fact, Cumber Avenue, I think for the first time since it was done many, many years ago by Commissioner Cumber who was called to Bodden Town when that area was known as Well Pass and just a footpath . . . [He] came up and saw the need for a road and that is why it is named Cumber Avenue. From the days when I think that road was put in, I do not remember it being paved. So, that road was paved by the NRA under the guidance of the good Minister. Again, we thank him for all of his efforts in the Bodden Town area. As I often say, we have six members of the PPM, six elected representatives living in Bodden Town, so we should get something!

I know I am not too popular when it comes to speed bumps because they call me the Speed Bump King! I was instrumental in having so many of them installed in the Bodden Town area, but in most cases, they were very necessary and there are still some more to go, Madam Speaker. It is sad that people will not take responsibility for how they drive and they are speeding in residential areas. The only thing to slow them down is to make them go up and down a bit. So, we installed the speed bumps with the assistance of the NRA.

Also with the street lighting, we lost a lot of lighting after the hurricane and a lot of lights had to be replaced and there was tremendous support from CUC and the NRA.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: All right, I have to get one for the Minister. The Minister of Tourism says he is still waiting on his, so we have to fix that.

But we will deal with all requests that come in and they are expedited through the NRA and CUC. So, I thank everyone who has helped to deal with my many requests. Sometimes I know it's a lot, but a lot is expected because, like I said, we had so little. And now I think Bodden Town, apart from a few homes that individuals own that are not taking the time to fix, where some of them could well do it, apart from those homes that are not complete, we can see activity taking place in Bodden Town.

More and more businesses are popping up. We are about to have the opening of an art gallery and craft shop next to the caves. We see all of this stuff happening. We see people doing horse rides on the beach and various other eco tourism initiatives.

We have another bed and breakfast in the form of Mr. Harvey Stevenson's on his property and, of course, everybody knows about Turtle Nest Inn and how well that does. So, Bodden Town is coming along quite nicely and I think that it certainly now has the representation it needed. Unless you push—and sometimes you are going to upset people pushing—but unless you push to get things it is not going to happen. It is just not going to happen. If you have representatives who are working in tandem for the district, you are going to get what that district needs. It is that simple. And that is what is happening.

I thank those on the Cabinet side of the PPM who have always supported, in most cases, just about anything that we have tried to achieve in Bodden Town. All of this activity, without saying, creates employment opportunities for our people in our local community so that everyone does not have to go to town to look for a job. We are hoping that as we develop this Go East initiative—I know the Minister has many plans for the three eastern districts and Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—we are providing the incentive for people to stay at home, or at least stay within their district and make a living.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have six minutes.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you Madam Speaker.

I would like to deal quickly with the fact that we have been working hard on the modernisation process of our new Constitution. No one in these Islands can say they have not heard about that now. We have had widespread consultation and I think the last meeting was last night at the Anglican Church. So, we will now assess where we are and come back with a revised proposal and, of course, the referendum is upcoming.

I simply want to encourage . . . but before I do that, I want to thank the Secretariat who has done a sterling job getting the word out and dealing with the Constitution and getting people's input. I want to, at the same time, urge people to take it seriously and play their part and make their feelings and representation known.

I also want to encourage the Opposition to play their part in a constructive manner and work with the Government in getting the best Constitution for these Islands, because no doubt about it, we have to modernise our Constitution. There are no if's, and's or but's about that. The question is: how do we do it? And, what do we want in it? And there are challenges. There is the whole issue of human rights and we know all that is going on with that and the fears in that area. There are many important areas. But we have to get a practical Constitution that suits the 21st century that enhances our development as we move forward as an island nation.

Madam Speaker, I would now like to thank most sincerely the Third Official Member and his team and all the heads of departments who have worked hard to put together the budget that we have before us for 2008/9. We know it was not easy. There were a number of cutbacks because of revenue predictions being reduced. Getting a budget done in the best of times is hard work. But this one was particularly challenging and we thank all those who played their part and made their cutbacks and streamlined to make it happen.

Madam Speaker, this PPM Government continues to work for the people of these Cayman Islands for the betterment of these Cayman Islands. We are confident in our ability to govern and we trust that our people will return that confidence in us to continue to steer Cayman in the right direction. When I say Cayman, I speak to the Cayman Islands.

We have had a lot of negative stuff, as I said earlier, from the Opposition, but that is expected to a certain degree; Oppositions tend to do that. But sometimes they could be a little fairer in their criticism. All is not doom and gloom in the Cayman Islands. We still have a wonderful, wonderful set of Islands. We do not have a rouge Government. I know the Leader of the Opposition knows what it is like to be in a rouge government. He should know that we do not compare, Madam Speaker. We do not compare.

So, when he jumps up and he blasphemes and he turns around and then later on goes back to his Christian ways, the country knows, Madam Speaker. Our people are intelligent. Our people know who is working and who is not. I ask the Opposition to be a little more constructive in their criticism. Not all of them, Madam Speaker, but most of them. Be a little more constructive in [your] criticism because as a representative you have a serious responsibility. You do not have to inflame a situation. What we say here is important. It gets carried on the airwaves and it gets heard; it permeates a society. We have to take that responsibility seriously. We cannot spread untruths and just expect that people out there are not going to hear.

As I said, the Leader of the Opposition, in particular . . . there is no better at making mischief. And there is no better at wriggling out of situations. I told him already that I believe he is Houdini's cousin! There is no one who can get himself caught up into more controversy and innuendos and everything else and still somehow or the other come back out at the end of the day and believe that everything is All right. But, Madam Speaker, where there is smoke there is fire. And that gentleman has been involved in so many scenarios over the years that some things have got to be true. Something has to be true, Madam Speaker! He needs to stop maligning good people and speaking ill especially—being the Christian that he says he is—of others and then expecting them to come back later and just be Mr. Nice Guy and be appealing to the people to support him on his Christian march.

Madam Speaker, this Island has fast surpassed that type of representation. We do not need that type of representation. We need people that are conscientious, hardworking, and honest.

So, Madam Speaker, I will leave with that. I know I will get my licks but I have said what I had to say. I am not intimidated by anyone in this House. I have a job to do. I have been put here by 1140 Bodden Town people, and they can't be all wrong! So, as my friend, the action man, says, I fear no man!

Madam Speaker, I thank you for your patience. I pray for all of us in this difficult job that we do. And I ask God's blessings on these Cayman Islands.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15.

Proceedings suspended at 12.53 pm

Proceedings resumed at 3.05 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Debate continuing on the Throne Speech and Budget Address. Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

Third Elected Member for George Town.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to make my contribution to the Throne Speech as delivered by His Excellency the Governor, the [Budget Address] delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member and the contribution by the Leader of Government Business.

Madam Speaker, before I go into the main part of my speech I would like to thank my George Town constituents for enabling me to be here today to represent them, to give their voice to something that is very dear and close to their hearts, and also to the Caymanian people as a whole.

I also want to thank my colleagues who have diligently spent hours to put their contributions to this budget, and to the civil service who has given human service to the building of this 2008 Budget and Throne Speech.

Madam Speaker, I would like to thank God too for giving me the strength and the ability, the health to be here today to give my contribution to this, my fourth budget. And to also say to the staff of this House, thanks for their service in terms of working with us and being at our beck and call.

And to you, Madam Speaker, words cannot express how we appreciate you. But before I close my budget debate I will certainly give you your accolades.

Madam Speaker, a comment was made in the [debate on the] Throne Speech and Budget by somebody about how we were saying that this is such a blessed country, how the Honourable Leader was saying this was a blessed country and how he asked us to look at CNN and see some of the devastation. But isn't it ironic, Madam Speaker, that the Governor—and you know there is no collusion between the Governor and the Leader of Government Business—said that if we look around at other countries that struggle with even greater challenges we realise that these Islands remain blessed.

There are many captions in the [Throne Speech] which the Governor made that relates to us as a people, that we have come a way of economic and social success. But he warned us, because we are so successful, of our complacency. It struck me when, I believe it was, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition said that we were mystifying people and creating our own image of our progress. But the Governor, who is the head of State of this country, also acknowledges the same thing. I just wanted to remind this honourable House that there is no collusion between the Governor and the Leader of Government Business when it comes to the Budget.

Madam Speaker, as I said before, I consider this a privilege to rise within these hallowed halls to give an account of my contribution to the stewardship of the People's Progressive Government affairs, financial and social affairs which, perhaps, could be my last budget before the elections. But I am not campaigning nor pandering. I am speaking the truth and the facts.

I distinctly remember that in 2005 I promised the good people of George Town and of these Islands that I would be their eyes and their ears. Madam Speaker, they trusted me and they trusted the People's Progressive Movement. And they responded to our request and they gave us a mandate to transform the Cayman Islands to help the ordinary people of these blessed Islands to realise their dream.

That dream, Madam Speaker, is a simple and beautiful desire to be able to afford a decent standard of living, have a roof over one's head, have access to good education for themselves and for their children, find rewarding and satisfying employment, travel comfortably around one's country, have easy access to affordable healthcare services, live in safe and supportive communities, engage in social and recreational activities, enjoy the beauty of the natural environment that people pay to travel halfway around the world to see.

I am proud to stand here today to say that we have not disappointed the people of the Cayman Islands. Many lives have improved. Many have accomplished their dreams and, with many of our social economic initiatives, those who were falling through the net after many years are seeing their way and settling more small objectives to improve their lives. Many have seen, through additional education, change for employment or redirected a career choice.

If you go to the University College at this time of the evening or tonight, or let's say Monday night, you would be surprised to see the various age groupings there. It is not just young people. You see people in their 40s, 30s, and 50s, redirecting their lives. And it is because of the opportunity that, more specifically, the PPM's Government has given them. The University College in the last three, four years I would say, has risen from 800 students to almost 4,000. That is quite a feat, Madam Speaker. It means that there has been a driving force to reawaken in the Caymanian populous that if they want a bigger part of the economic pie they have to be educated. It is so important that at this stage the senior and the older ones are seeing that they can embrace that opportunity.

Madam Speaker, there are many nay sayers that have said we have not come up with our promise and that the people perish. In particular, they perish in Cayman Brac. But unless I was dreaming yesterday, when the Second Elected Member [for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] enumerated all of those things that were happening in Cayman Brac, then the speaker that came forward to say that nothing was happening, that the people are perishing . . . something must be wrong. Perhaps all of us need to go over there to see.

But I cannot see the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman delineating all of those activities and all of those people who have accomplished things, all of those young entrepreneurs. I cannot see him making that kind of mistake, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, they say people's memories are short, especially those who are the nay sayers and those who support the Opposition. But I would like to cast your mind back to the beginning of 2005 when this country was in a mess, as the people have said. Months after the passage of Hurricane Ivan houses were still damaged and roads were impassable. Morale was at its lowest ever. And the ruling Democratic Party was in a state of shock. Indeed, our beloved country was sinking fast into the quagmire of crime, corruption and despair.

We came into office in May 2005. Since then, Madam Speaker, we did not grab the power from the Leader of the Opposition, as he said yesterday. And I am sure he said that. We did not. The people took the power and gave it to us. And we are ever so grateful. Since then we have restored good governance in the Cayman Islands. It is universally accepted that good governance is a precondition for social and economic growth.

And, Madam Speaker, the Governor himself spoke about the good governance of this country and he related things like Freedom of Information and spoke about the Information Law and the constitutional modernisation that will cap good governance in the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, as we know, good governance is based on principles of accountability, transparency, responsiveness, effectiveness, efficiency, participation, consensus, equity, inclusion, and the rule of law. All of that the Governor in his speech spoke about. Good governance assures that corruption is minimised and the views of the people are taken into account. It is responsive to the present and future needs of the individuals, communities and the society at large. Good governance is about healthy and sustainable development. It is essential for sustainable development. That, too, the Governor spoke about in his throne speech. The records show that the People's Progressive Movement has delivered on each of these principles.

Madam Speaker, I spoke just now of the Freedom of Information Act, which we passed and will come into effect in 2009. Very soon (the Governor spoke about it as well) will be the Anti-Corruption Bill. Today, even when the world has taken a dangerous turn in the direction of economic decline, the Cayman Islands can hold its head up high with the assurance that it has in place a safety net to prevent our people from resorting to desperate measures to survive.

We have not, as the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman alluded to, crushed the middleclass. You cannot crush a group in three and a half years unless you take away all of their privileges. You cannot do those things. We are not wanting, as was said.

Madam Speaker, we have tried to stem the rise in the cost of living by taking import duties off staple food items and giving Caribbean Utilities Company a rebate to ensure electricity remains stable. We have even gone to the extent of meeting with significant people, the stakeholders, such as the merchants and others, to talk with them to see where we could have this partnership. If we cannot decrease, we can level the cost of living.

Madam Speaker, you have heard from several speakers, such as, the Leader of Government Business and the Financial Secretary, that the gross domestic product of the Cayman Islands is expected to grow at a rate of 1.7 [per cent] in 2008. The financial services sector remains strong with 40 out of the world's 50 leading banks maintaining a presence here.

Tourism remains buoyant. Madam Speaker, I could stand here a day and a night and talk about the advantages that we have had since our Honourable Minister has become the Minister of Tourism and the achievements he has made. But I will leave that to him.

Throughout our first term, Madam Speaker, we have shown fiscal prudence by ensuring that the operating revenues always exceeded operating expenses. This year is no exception.

The priorities of this PPM Government have been and remain the creation of the conditions for sustainable social and economic development of the Cayman Islands. Towards this end, we have modernised the infrastructure of this country in order to make it a good place to live. Madam Speaker, let me just tell you what a couple of well-known people have said to me. Some of them are past parliamentarians. They have said, 'You know, they talk about your Government spending money on the infrastructure. But if the infrastructure had been in place to the modernity that it is today then there would not have had to have been this plethora of money that we are using in order to have the infrastructure to suit the kind of place that we live in today. So, if governments before, had put in place every year to improve schools at a higher level, to improve roads at a higher level, to improve government buildings at a higher level, because at the end of the day we are encouraging the flight of capital to come to our shores . . . and when we encourage the flight of capital to come to our shores, we must have the necessary facilities to encourage that.

Madam Speaker, I will enumerate some of the things we have done to enhance the infrastructure and to make it 21st century. Roads—wow!—another day and night to stand here and talk about all the hundreds of lanes of roads that we have built.

Madam Speaker, it gives me great satisfaction as a person in my senior years to be driving at night now on these plush roads. Granted they have changed my direction a little bit from where I would normally travel to reach my place of abode, but it equates us with first-world living. It certainly does. And, Madam Speaker, we needed that.

I am sorry that the Honourable . . . We have improved our tele—Sorry, Madam Speaker. I lost my trend of thought.

Madam Speaker, we have improved our postal services, our utilities and our water. We are improving our environment. And we even have a unit for parks and recreation. That is a significant improvement in the Cayman Islands because the Cayman Islands are looking at the greening of the Cayman Islands.

When we, as a country, look at parks we are saying that we want to have people congregate more together; that is what we are saying. It is only through that interaction that we can pass on things. We do not interact, if we just move from work to home, and to the supermarket. But to interact we go to parks and we go to these leisure places.

I am very, very happy that we have since bought a sweep cleaner (and that is my simple terminology, but it is very high tech) to clean the business sector, what we call the business centre, because one of the things that enamoured people to us when they came here in the early days is that we were a clean society. That is one of the principles that must remain with us. We must remain a clean society. And this machine literally drives around Elgin Avenue, Shedden Road in the business district, parts of Mary Street, and cleans the place so that when our own people come down into town to work they see a clean place welcoming our tourists.

Madam Speaker, it is one thing to make opportunities available to the people, but it is another to ensure that they benefit from these provisions. I want to remind you, Madam Speaker, that what is unique about us as a Government is the willingness and capacity to put people first. What we are doing with putting all the infrastructure in place is not for the benefit of the nine elected persons in the PPM, but for the people of our country so they can be proud of their country. We can reduce crime because when you do these things you do reduce crime.

Madam Speaker, we must go the extra mile to ensure that they take advantage of the opportunities and to improve the quality of their lives. Hence, you will notice the bulk of the expenditure in the budget has been on activities designed to impact massively on the people of the Cayman Islands, and to empower them to enjoy a higher standard of living and improved life. That is what the money is for! I am not saying that we must not put money in the reserve. I am not saying that. But we must take the money and be smart and wise enough to see how we can improve the lives of our people individually or collectively. The bulk of the money was put in areas that I will speak on now. I will start with families and community.

When you look at the SPS (Strategic Policy Statement), over the years you will see that we have always emphasised strengthening the family and the community. I would like to say special thanks to my colleague and school friend the Honourable Minister for Human Services. I know it is a tough job to have inherited the people that have a lot of needs. I know it is a tough job.

I must also at the time I am thanking him thank the Children and Family Services for what they have done. They have held up and have gotten large, huge, because the population of the Cayman Islands has increased. The needs of our people have increased, so they have seen the wisdom in restructuring the Children and Family Services. Madam Speaker, your heart is here: they will have a special area for Social Services itself where they will have the elderly, most elderly, and we must look after them. They are our babies and we must look after them. They helped us to be here. Then you will have a section for the children. We have to look after our children. They say you can tell the health of a country when it looks after its old and its young. Then we will have a section where we empower people, women, and men.

Madam Speaker, using the recommendations from the NALC (National Assessment of Living Conditions) as a platform to develop various strategies and programmes required to promote sound social development, this is the vehicle that will tell our Government and the movers and shakers of successive governments how much was really spent on lifting the people out of poverty. I must say that I have not seen the report. I have not. As a matter of fact, I do not have an inkling of what is in there. I would venture to say that we may not like what we see.

But I want to thank you, Madam Speaker, and I am sure that they must have said that you must have possibly paid me to give you accolades, but the books will tell that you have played a pivotal role in all of this. First of all, you were the Minister at the time and you left $250,000 in the account. I don't know what happened to it afterwards. And then comes along our Minister from the PPM and followed what you did.

Madam Speaker, we might be surprised, but we had to do it. We had to have scientific and empirical evidence and not some people say, 'oh you know we shouldn't be really giving those people, they are not really poor they are lazy', and those little excuses.

Other than the family study (which was a scientific study on the family by Dr. Eleanor Wint) no other scientific study has been carried out on the economic and social landscape of our people. And I want to put those two together: socioeconomic landscape of our people. The NALC is one such study. As I said before, I wish to thank you for bringing that in. I wish to thank you for bringing it in during the one year of our current Leader of Government Business.

Madam Speaker, many persons have claimed over the years that Cayman had no poverty. They still say it! A lot of people still come here and a lot of tourists wonder what we are talking about. But they have not gone on the side roads and the byroads and the back streets of this country and seen the vulnerable and seen what we found there. Some people call them lazy and don't want to work. But sometimes when you grow up in poverty and there is no political will to help you, there is apathy, and it grows on you, and it multiplies. And it is apparent that you are lazy but there is no will, no hope, no belief, no yes I can and those sorts of things.

Additionally, governments over the years ignored the question of equity distribution of wealth and put absolutely nothing in place to ensure that the Caymanians did not fall through the safety net, or ignored the cries of Caymanians for opportunities to fulfill the Caymanian dream. Ignoring all of this we continued to build a knowledge-based economy which supported a highly skilled work force. And we know what happened there. This workforce came from outside. We failed to create relevant higher educational opportunities to enable Caymanians to fill more of the professional and technical jobs in the marketplace.

Madam Speaker, I grew up in the time when people used hoe, pickax (and my age group I am talking about), crowbar to dig coals. Today they use something from Caterpillar. Now, do you see what that has done? That has replaced the livelihood of those persons who used crowbar, ax and pickax.

An hon. Member: And shovel.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: And shovel! Although we still use shovel.

But what happened? We brought in all of these technological things and we developed this high tech and this knowledge-based economy forgetting that our people were still using third world stuff. But we didn't do anything about it.

Thankfully hope, as Obama would say, our hope—the Honourable Minister of Education, our hope—will say to them, 'yes you can!'

Our economic base improved our population. Quadrupled it! But we failed to improve the upward mobility of our middleclass who are the trendsetters for the poor and the vulnerable. We should not have left our people's futures to chance or ignored them or left them behind; we should have balanced these forces that are necessary for prosperity. We must always maintain the equilibrium.

A skilled and educated workforce of locals brings about balance. But we disturbed the equilibrium. We brought the highly skilled workforce in, in large quantities from outside, so the scale tipped. Hence, we do not have to say today why things are what they are. And I don't care, Madam Speaker, who comes after me to refute what I have said. What I said is definitely right. And it can be proven. I have not seen it, I have not heard it, but I would venture to say, it is going to flag up all those things.

But what can the Opposition say? That we crooked that one up too? That we would crook it up and make it so bad that it reflects on them? They are changing their mouth if they did that.

Madam Speaker, when we slowed down in upgrading our people and putting the 100 per cent focus on education, the lack of focus of the 21st [century] education disturbed the equilibrium. Our people are an asset. It is the people, Madam Speaker, who add value to the goods and services we produce and deliver. This Government has placed education as its primary focus and many millions have been accorded to its priority. Madam Speaker, an educated workforce no doubt creates an upward mobile society, and the wellbeing of a society is evident.

The other point in developing our families has to do with (as the Throne Speech and Budget Address said) anti drug strategy. We know that we want to prevent drugs, we want to reduce drugs in our Islands whether by intake or by bringing it in to sell. We know that. But we have to put a strategy in place. We have a lot of services, but we have to tackle this front.

Madam Speaker, I was watching TV the other night where the drug cartels even go underwater now by submarine. Imagine! And we have a lot of deep water! So, we really have to put that strategy in place.

To see that we are strengthening our families we are amending the Poor Person's Relief Regulations. I am not party to this, but I would hope there is a section in there that would move people from welfare to work. I understand at the moment that in the social services department they have a programme called STARSS. There are ladies, in particular, who attend this. But when they come to get help from social services they are assessed and their academic needs and other needs are looked after and they are then put into these programmes. But I believe that they think they need to strengthen that more.

I also see in the strengthening of the Children Law—Madam Speaker, that was in your time as well—and the Convention and Rights of the Child. Just last night, when people were talking about the gay issue (and I was at a constitutional meeting), I reminded people that something was quite evident here and we were trying to brush it under the carpet, as they would say. It is the whole question of pedophile molestation and defilement of young children, in particular, girls. Yes, you have some boys. But it is a very strong thing. Yet we [do not] get a hue and cry about that. But to me that is very important. That is about a human being, barring a person from living a very normal life in the future and having children. Madam Speaker, I am glad that all of this is going to be part of that.

Madam Speaker, I know you will like this one, about creating an empowerment agency. That is what we have to do with our people, we have to empower them. Even the Constitution is about that. The Constitution is not about, as they would say, power (and I will come back to that a little later); but it is about empowering people. So, we have to give people in the community, whether individually or collectively, that. We have to give them an opportunity for self-help to look after themselves, to have dreams, fulfill those dreams; to have the ability to be ambitious, to love their home, to love their environment. To be empowered, Madam Speaker.

There is also a section in the whole strengthening of the family (and I am sure my colleague, the Fourth Elected Member of George Town, will be very happy to hear this) about promoting men's wellbeing and highlighting the role of men in family and community through the National Gender Policy.

That National Gender Policy has been on the table for some time. I understand it came about through the Motion that you brought forward in 1995 for a women's office and women's affairs, and they named the Ministry of Women's Affairs and all the other things. And now I believe they want to broaden things a little more and have an area of gender affairs.

So as not to seem discriminatory, we know why we have to promote women, Madam Speaker. We know the historical issues with that. But today I think we even have to bring legislation to protect our men . . . but, Madam Speaker, you know why we say that. We really need this aspect of it for our men, for their health.

As women, we are conscious about our health. We go to the doctor every month or every year. We get our assessments. We get our tests and we look at our health. Our men are not like that. Not all of them. They wait until they are sick. So we have to put programmes in place to entice them. Programmes about prostate, programmes about stomach cancer, testicular cancer, those sorts of things that affect men. We have to do that. Also about the wellbeing of men, and I am sure implicit in this is boys, that we have to find opportunities to bring our boys back on stream. If we don't mind, Madam Speaker, we will lose them. We will not only lose them by death, we will lose them and they will become completely useless to society in terms of not having hope, the will to move on, dreams; we want them to have dreams. I do not care how high those dreams are, but we want them to have dreams.

I spoke a lot about women, but women carry a multiple role. They are producers, they work, they have the burden of production and reproduction. That's a heavy load. And if anybody thinks it's not a heavy load, someone should take it from them. But it is heavy. It is hard for women in our society who want to have a high standard of living.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Sorry, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, my George Town colleague looks after me so well.

In the women's affairs you will see the appointment of an officer who will review the National Gender Policy and spearhead the establishment in the office of Gender Affairs, as well as the policy of gender mainstreaming across the public sector. Madam Speaker, that is crucial and I am glad that the Minister in his wisdom has said that.

For us to tackle equity and equality in the public sector or in the country, it has to be inter-ministerial. It has to be! It cannot just be the Ministry of Human Services; it has to be the Ministry of Works to ensure that there is equity. You have people who work in all of the various departments.

Madam Speaker, we are "Passing legislation to give domestic application to the UN Convention of the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Among Women." Madam Speaker, I am sure that you must be laughing or smiling to yourself there, and saying that this is your day at last.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: "Placing greater strategic focus on the delivery of outreach and support services to victims of sexual and domestic violence."

I have spoken about that. And the domestic violence, I think we are getting better, but we need more education. It is not so much legislation you know. You can put legislation in place for it. But if there is no enforcement in education it is not going to happen. And because we recruit so many people who come with different cultures where it might be in order to beat your wife, it might be in order to pound up your children, or it might be in order to do something, we need to have constant education with our people who work in these areas.

With respect to the young people, the PPM Administration will focus on youth at risk and help them to negotiate the transition to adulthood. Madam Speaker, I know you must be tired of hearing this, but you know, and I am not negating anybody's advancement in life here. But when we stopped sending our men to sea, we stopped a staging post, a rite of passage which moved them from boys to men.

Regardless of what I think of my own brothers or whatever, I know in their young lives . . . and I can remember how they were so orderly they could do anything. I mean, it was like anything they put their hands on they could do. That is what . . . and the Honourable Minister of Works is saying "me too", Madam Speaker.

The people of my generation, my age and just a little younger, are so able. They can try anything. You go to their homes, they can do anything. Unfortunately, these young men will have had to have done something for us to capture them. But constructing a purpose built youth therapeutic facility to accommodate a total of 18 boys and girls in separate wings. I must refer, Madam Speaker, to girls also.

"This facility will enhance rehabilitation through therapeutic and drug rehabilitation programmes." What I want to press here is that we also need to ensure that in our drug therapy we are not just looking at those we capture; but children come from many, many good homes who for one reason or another, get wayward. They try out things. They try out ecstasy, drugs, but they are from good homes. A parent might want to take them to a counselor. And we have to ensure that there is also a facility . . . and they start doing this from a young age, Madam Speaker. We have to ensure there is a facility and there are able people that will help our young people, not only those that are going to the purpose built place.

Let me congratulate the Minister and previous Ministers, or whoever started it. But I remember in my time when I was a civil servant, where there was an interagency that worked at developing the Young Parent Programme. The Young Parent Programme fell under the auspices of the Social Services. It was a tremendous success, and it has been. A lot of those young girls (there was only one boy that ever went there) have jobs in banks and that sort of thing. Not just domestic work, they have elevated themselves. And they are at university, and I want to thank the Minister for looking at the programme and see its worth and to enlarge it, and to give it more prominence. I would like to thank him for that.

Under strengthening of the family, again, providing training the areas of, "Victim Offender Mediation and Family Conferencing in order to provide the Youth Court with alternatives to sentencing in these areas." Madam Speaker, we have spoken about how we must look at our young people when we are going to incarcerate them. We deal with that on a daily basis when a young boy or girl does something and for some reason their name goes before them. So, they are now 25 or 26 and they still have that hanging over their head. So, I believe in the alternative sentences and mediation where you can get families and work with them. This, I believe is a good thing.

Madam Speaker, with respect for the elderly, I want to assure you that every effort is being made to ensure that those who planted the seeds of the modern Cayman Islands are not forgotten when the harvesting is done. We have spoken before about the elderly, and I could be here a day and a night and talk about the contributions of the elderly. But with that objective in mind . . . I am not so sure, Madam Speaker, if you were part of this, but they are developing a national plan for the elderly. That is good. We need to know. Just like we have a plan for youth, it is one continuum. We need to have a plan for the elderly.

Of course, we have about completed the Golden Age Home in West Bay, the expansion of the elderly home in East End, and of course, in your own district, Madam Speaker, the expansion, the new home for the elderly in North Side.

I note where we are also trying to work with the Pines to help the Pines to develop their facilities. I believe it could be about 80 per cent of our elderly who are supported by the Government in the Pines.

We are also mindful of the impact that the rising cost of living can have on these most vulnerable members of our society. In the Budget Speech by the Honourable Leader of Government Business he spoke about an increase. I thought there was a little jab at it by the Opposition regarding, oh it should be at $800. But I wonder if it was introduced quite a while back . . . the time we had a lot of money is the time we should have increased it. We certainly do not have a lot of money now. But we certainly have to find a way to help the elderly and the disadvantaged.

This increase also applies to the seamen, the veterans who are receiving the monthly ex-gratia. It is not by all what the Honourable Minister would like to do, but every little bit helps. And they are so appreciative, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I want to remind this honourable House that I brought a motion some time last year regarding the contributions of women. I know my colleagues and the Honourable Minister are listening attentively regarding the contributions that widows who were married to seamen in the days of the seafaring years and other women who perhaps may be vulnerable at this time that, when they were divorced their spouse married someone else (even someone, perhaps, not from here) and they have now deceased. And their spouse is benefitting from it. But the first spouse, the estranged spouse, is withering in the wind and holding her hands out for alms. I am asking that the Honourable Minister in this assessment would just ask his Ministry if they would look into it. I do not think there are a lot of people left but there are some. I know one came to me from the district of West Bay—if we could look into that.

We have said on several occasions that our greatest investment would be in human capital in future generations. Of course, the institutions through which this investment is best made are within the Ministry of Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture. The Hope Man!

This Ministry's agenda over the coming year will focus on service delivery through legislative reform, programme improvements and intensive capital works programme. As an educator, I am proud to be associated with the following initiatives: A Comprehensive Structured Education Law and updated Employment Law. I believe that the Education Law has not been changed since 1982. I stand for correction, Madam Speaker. But [with] both laws, the input from key stakeholders will seek to equip the Ministry to be more effective in addressing present day realities.

Madam Speaker, “The Cayman Islands Government Central Tenders Committee has approved the award of contracts for the construction of two of the three new secondary education campuses, John Gray Campus in George Town and Clifton Hunter Campus in Frank Sound, signaling the imminent start of these much-anticipated capital works projects. Whilst plans to start construction on the Beulah Smith Campus in West Bay are also progressing, further dialogue is required at this sensitive stage of contract negotiations, in order to secure the best value for public expenditure.” These facilities will be completed in 2010 for the start of the 2010 academic year.

It has been [asked] why Government has spaced out the structure. I do not really have to repeat that. I think it is a very wise move that they have made. It also enables more work, work on a continuous basis that people can get jobs if we spread out the infrastructure.

“Meanwhile work on the design new facilities for George Town Primary School continues in earnest, with construction expected to start early in 2009. The new George Town Primary School will open its doors to students in September 2010.”

Madam Speaker, when this building is built I know that the people in your district will be happy to have a high school. But the people in George Town would be happier than you to see a modern facility for their little ones with modern innovations for their little ones, modern programmes, 21st century education.

“The launch of a new National Curriculum at the start of the next school year in September.” is also so. You know I have been in education a long time and I came up through different systems of teaching and learning. One of the things that I am very happy about in the primary system is the introduction of what we call the primary years . . . well, I cannot remember what the acronym is. I think it is PYPY. But it is part of the international baccalaureate. It means that we have changed a system where there can be more innovations, more hands on, a more interactive way of learning, and more discoveries through individual groups.

When they are taught they should be able to retain more. And where the teacher is a facilitator and leads these children on a voyage of discovery to their own imagination and enquiries. To me, in this whole education metamorphosis and change, I think this is the best at the primary level, because it is at that stage, it is at that primary stage that we cultivate the habits of learning; that we learn best.

What secondary does is to build on top of what we have gotten out of primary. To me, this is the best in the whole change of the education.

Madam Speaker, “. . . professional development initiatives [is happening now] to support teachers and education professionals in the delivery of 21st Century teaching and learning . . .” What is going to happen . . . and one of the things I believe that they are trying to emphasise in our system is something like fine arts. Yes, we do a little music and things, but it is going to be entrenched more in our curriculum—music, art, sculpture, gymnastics, physical education, which enhances learning. I believe this is going to set very well with the change in our school system.

In the education process in building family and community also, “Developing protocols to ensure children with disabilities cannot be discriminated against when it comes to access to education.”

And, of course, Madam Speaker, stepping up the promotion of literacy—a society that can read, not just read, but comprehend, is a society that is going to benefit from this knowledge base economy that we have put in place. I am happy that they are introducing this at various interventions at the secondary level.

In building the family and the community also, there has been an expansive programme in sports. “Upgrading of facilities at the Truman Bodden Sports Complex with the completion of work on the track and pitch and the new boxing gym. Work on the two fields at the Ed Bush . . .” and George Town.

Madam Speaker, I do not know when was the last time you went across School House Road by George Town Primary, but it is beautiful. When you look down from the sky it is even more beautiful. It has changed the landscape of this country when you look at George Town. That is good that our sports people will be able to get fine playing fields at international standards.

When you drive in here on the right and you look up, you see the extension of the library. That tells us about where we have arrived. When you build libraries that can facilitate learning, not just going in to borrow books, but innovative things can happen in libraries. We can put up cut things that people do. We can have displays. And it is a place where you meet too; where children meet other people and where families meet other people.

I know there has been a partnership with Maples & Calder and I want to thank them for their social responsibility.

Madam Speaker, at the end of the day, I believe, the greatest contribution the PPM has made is the deepening of democracy in the Cayman Islands in its willingness to reach out to people; to listen to their concerns; to address their issues at the highest levels. This is how we arrived at our Manifesto that swept us to victory. This is how we have remained relevant since then.

We did not jerk power from the people's hands, they bestowed it upon us. We did not take the power from the UDP, as was said yesterday. The people have loaned it to us for four years and if we be good and obedient and eat off the fat of the land, we will get it for another four years, Madam Speaker.

I believe that the wind of change has been blowing across the Caribbean. It is driven, not by the inability of governments to govern and to develop their countries, but by the serious disconnect that crept into the political life. This Government—I am talking about the elected Government which we call the PPM—reaches out and holds hands and pulls us towards them.

We have done this because this is the only way you can find out what your people want. And I am not trying to be political here . . . partisan rather! I will always be political, but I am not trying to be a partisan. But this is the only way that you can know what is happening, what your people want. You understand their particularities and hence you transfer that into what you do on a national level.

Whilst I know the press will record me verbatim (as I saw today in one of our newspapers) . . . and that is good . . . I like when the press does that. I am sorry that I do not have an audience except my Government to hear me.

Madam Speaker, I spoke before about the Constitution. I will interject here. Madam Speaker, I tell you I am here decades on this earth. I remember change in Constitution, the first one in 1959. Then we made a proposal in 1991 or 1993. We had our new Constitution in 1972, and I have been, I would not say intimate with the logistics of it, but I know of it. I know the energy that is being put in this constitutional modernisation for people to be educated and understand, and to participate and have input in the changes that they would like to modernise the framework under which they should be ruled, I have never seen that before. Never in my lifetime!

If I remember correctly, the 1972 Constitution was changed about 70/11 times. And I do not remember the day that anybody came out, sent out, went out to anybody's home or called them into meetings to ask what their opinions were. Madam Speaker, I admire the Government. It is a risk we are taking to give people democracy to choose, to say what they want in a Constitution. And the referendum is that. It is not about hiding something; it is about bringing out of the people what they want to see. And I have never, never, never in my lifetime—and I go many decades, many!—[thought] I would have seen it. And I would have been in the know how to know. But I have never seen it.

Madam Speaker, I want to give kudos to the Government. Also, what I like about it, it did not become partisan where there was a PPM injection of its partisan thought. The people had their own thoughts and that is extremely . . . I would say a compliment to our Leader of Government Business.

Madam Speaker, as a backbencher I have taken it upon myself to ensure that the channels of communication between the people of the Cayman Islands and myself and my colleagues remain open. Madam Speaker, if I were to enumerate on my colleague, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, to tell you the things that we do and how our day starts—I know you are familiar with that, and when our night ends and when sleep starts, and what our seven day week is—you would be here a long time. But we have tried to close that communication gap that people said . . .

I understand on the radio they said that they call us and we do not answer. But Madam Speaker, I do not have an answering service on my phone so I know who called me and I call them back or I text them. I have gotten more modern now, so I like to text. And I have introduced that to some of my senior citizens who text too! Oh yes, they are texting themselves and that is good. I know somebody else who texts, but I will remain quiet here, Madam Speaker.

George Town has gotten a lot. But one of the things I want to say here is to show how we as a knitted cohesive group of PPM legislators work. When we came in here and we looked at our country, we realised that George Town is the Capital. It is the Capital so the private sector will build it up. The private sector will build their buildings. They will build their buildings in George Town.

The Government is putting a big building in George Town. But we understand, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and I. They call us too the Speed Bump Kings.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: We are the drain people. But we understand flooding so we are always at the Minister about drains, roads, streetlights, digging wells, spreading marl and looking at sewer systems. All that we have to do, you know. I have become an engineer over night. But it is good. I like that. I like when the people feel that you can help them help themselves.

We green the place. The Minister of Education and the Minister of Parks have even gone to the extent of having a park and recreation unit. That shows you where we are—21st century people. We have removed a lot of cars. We have looked at garbage. We ourselves get into it and clean the streets; sweeping the roads, taking the signs off. These are things. Of course, we see ways of where they can get a loan, where they can get repairs for their homes and all of those things that we do. We help paint homes. We do not mind that. That is part of the process. You know that, Madam Speaker, you have been through that. That is what you do.

We leave the big things, the big, big, big things to the Ministers, like the road network, the big buildings, the schools. But you see Madam Speaker, what my colleagues have taught me, especially the more senior ones in political life, that all politics is local. So, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and I know our job. We do not have any problems about talk shows and what they say about us because we know what we do. We know that.

Madam Speaker, before I conclude I would like to make a few comments on what I call breach of privilege.

I am new in this House (well, when I say new, I have not been here 24 years).

[laughter]

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Madam Speaker, I have been taught that the Speaker in this House is high in the land. I have been taught that early. I have been taught it again, and my colleagues keep repeating it.

But, Madam Speaker, when a well seasoned Member of the Legislative Assembly—the Father of the House—looks at you, Madam Speaker, and says to you “. . . what I am about to say here last, is about this Assembly. And you can take it how you want.”

I know, Madam Speaker, you cannot fight for yourself up there, but I certainly can here. I know the repercussions it will have; I know what I will be called. But you see, Madam Speaker, I have a great heart with a rhinoceros skin, so nobody can do me anything.

I cannot fight like my colleagues, you know, the other one in front there, I cannot fight like that. But I certainly, having gone through cancer—which this year is 10 years—no one flinches me. Nobody can move me or penetrate me or the principles that I have. Therefore, I am going to say what I have to say.

“In management of the Assembly, from what I observe, there is far too much upheaval.” Now, Madam Speaker, there are 15 Members of the Legislative Assembly here. That Member does not attend as often as I do. I am here. The only time I am not here is if I have to be away. I am always here an hour or so before, so I know who comes. So I do not know how things can be meted out to this Member, or who manages . . . who is the person . . . is that one of the roles of the legislators to manage the Assembly now?

We have gotten a lot . . . we cannot take that on to manage the Assembly, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I am just taking little bits of [the statement by the Leader of the Opposition] “. . . what I have seen, is they are pushed around.”

I do not know who “they” are.

Also, Madam Speaker, you are “. . . too friendly with her party in this House.”

Madam Speaker, you sit in that Chair and you give all of us . . . as a matter of fact, you balance your relationship with the Opposition in here, and when you sit in the dining room with us, and you joke with all of us. As a matter of fact, Madam Speaker, I believe I have only been in the Speaker’s residence twice. But I see that the Leader of the Opposition, the Deputy Speaker, and the Second Elected Member for West Bay go to your Chambers. I think, maybe the only one from this bench I have seen go into your Chambers is the Leader of Government Business himself, because you beckon for him to go.

And then, the excerpt again, “And the Speaker is not the Clerk.”

I can understand because I know I read that somewhere . . . I know the Speaker is not the Clerk. But I do not understand why an elected Member must breach privilege to chastise you in your Chair in this hallowed House. I do not understand that, Madam Speaker. I think it is . . . let me just . . . Madam Speaker, it is lower than the white line that Mr. Arden put on them roads! It is a low blow. And I never thought that I would see that. But Madam Speaker, I checked my Erskine May—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On a point of order, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: May I hear your point of order please?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Member is misleading the House. There is no such thing as me breaching any order in what I had to say. We were debating the throne speech—Madam Speaker can I have a chance?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I would like to hear your point of order, not the personal—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I said the Member is misleading—

The Speaker: Would you please sit down for a minute?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I ain’t gonna get no satisfaction with you, you know.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Elected Member for the district of George Town, continue with your debate please.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Madam Speaker, in our Standing Orders, in . . .

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: [inaudible]

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Madam Speaker, in our Standing Orders, in section 35, content of speeches, number 7 (you see it Madam Speaker?) “(7) The conduct of Her Majesty, members of the Royal Family, the Governor, the Presiding Officer, Members, Judges and other persons engaged in the administration of justice or of Officers of the Crown may not be raised or impugned except upon a substantive motion; and in any amendment, question to a Member of the Government or . . .” et cetera.

Madam Speaker, let me just continue what I was going to say.

"She's too friendly" . . . in your Chair, Madam Speaker. I can understand this in the dining room. Madam Speaker, you know? And that is even far out in left field.

"Until a new system is devised, the Clerk and the Deputy and other senior staff must be left alone to run this Assembly."

Madam Speaker, I know how often that Member comes here. Now, nothing has been said to anybody and I would vouch for the Officials because there is no commission that runs the Assembly that is in charge of the Assembly. So, none of us are part of that.

I will continue to say, and it is a long thing, Madam Speaker, but I underline things. "But the Speaker is not the Clerk!" That is the important thing. And, "This is the Legislative Assembly where government's majority has no more say than the minority except in the matter of a vote or a committee of this honourable House."

"The fact is we have had many good staff pushed around and treated shabbily since May of 2005." Madam Speaker, that is directly on your conduct and the PPM.

"This House is not the fiefdom of the PPM . . ." " . . . insulting and simply interference when there is no need for it . . ." " . . . but someone needs to look seriously about what is happening in this Assembly."

I would like to know myself, Madam Speaker. Unless it is happening at night!

And " . . . the Speaker has full control and not the Clerk so that the defining lines are there?" "And I cannot agree that what is happening today here ought to continue."

Madam Speaker, my question is, is that a new job for the legislators to come here to chastise and demean the conduct of the Speaker? If the Clerk of this House has an issue with the legislators, the good thing to do is to come speak to the Leader of Government Business and say, Look, this is what is happening, what your party is doing with the House.

But, Madam Speaker, why I am in this is because it affects me. Every Christmas since I have come to this honourable House I give the staff a gift. As a matter of fact, I do not know whether it is true or not but I will say so. They have said to me that I am the only one who gives them a gift. And I will say that to you, Madam Speaker.

I take umbrage to this. And I think Madam Speaker that in this House where the act was committed there needs to be an apology. If not, then Madam Speaker, I will seek advice for my colleagues, as to where we go from here.

Thank you, Madam Speaker, for listening.

In conclusion I want to remind the people of the Cayman Islands that the future of our beloved country is in good hands. We have not only kept our promises with respect to maintaining high standards of living to which we have been accustomed, but we have also striven to spread the national prosperity to the middle class and to vulnerable groups.

Madam Speaker, above all, we have invested heavily in the next generation to equip them with the skills that will be needed to make them more competitive in the brave new world of the 21st century.

Madam Speaker, one of the last things that the Ministry of Education is doing (and you know I brought a motion as well) is to give our persons when they finish school more opportunities, more pathways for a brighter future. And that is good! Our boys can stay a little longer and grasp opportunities to embrace this country.

Madam Speaker, two things I would like to say: I would like to say here that when I read from the excerpts, I read from the Unedited Hansard Excerpt of the debate by the Honourable [Leader of the Opposition].

Lastly, I would like to thank the Constitutional Secretariat, in particular all of them, but I want to make emphasis of two persons because I have had a lot of intimacy with them and they have taught me a lot. Those persons are Mrs. Suzanne Look Loy Bothwell and Mr. Christian Suckoo. We are very proud of those young Caymanians. Not even 40 yet!

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: It is the hour of interruption. I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Madam Speaker.

I move the adjournment of this honourable House until Monday morning at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is—

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, forgive me . . . Monday morning at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10 am Monday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 4.32 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Monday, 12 May 2008.

Seventh Sitting

The Speaker: I will ask the Third Official Member to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Let us pray: Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surer foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say The Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Throne Speech and Second Reading of the Appropriation (June 2008 to July 2009) Bill 2008 (Budget Address)

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak continuing the debate on the Throne Speech and Budget Address?

The Fourth Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would like to begin by saying that I trust that you and all of the mothers who work here in the Legislative Assembly building, and all the mothers of the Cayman Islands, were treated yesterday like the true champions you all are, by thoroughly enjoying your special Mother's Day.

Madam Speaker, I rise to lend my support to the Budget, as presented by the Honourable Third Official Member, and to make some comments on the Policy Statement as delivered by the Leader of Government Business, and also some comments on the Throne Speech as delivered by His Excellency the Governor.

Madam Speaker, I have seen and heard some weird things in my short time here in the Legislative Assembly, and of the many years that I have listened to debates in this honourable House—as I closely followed the career of the now Leader of Government Business ever since he was elected (but I did have an interest in politics before that so I would occasionally listen but there was a point for me to make sure that I listened to the things that he had to say)—the ending remarks by the Leader of the Opposition, in his contribution are confusing and somewhat troubling.

I considered the remarks that he made most peculiar and extremely unusual words to be used in the House of Assembly. And, Madam Speaker, I would like to read from the [unedited] Hansard. The Leader of the Opposition said: "It is with these en- couraging words that I entreat my fellow Caymanians not to lose courage in this season of need and uncertainty, for a good and fair God watches over all of us if we but trust Him and do what is right. He will see all wrong put right in due season.

“ . . . Oh yes! Oh yes! There will be that season. It will be that time to speak and a season to cast away. . . . that time . . . cast away the PPM into the sea of forgetfulness never, never, never, never, to bother nor to harm us again. Amen and Amen.” [2008/9 Official Hansard Report, 7 May 2008, p. 45]

Madam Speaker, I think that when the honourable Member read this many of us were shocked, surprised and I think at the end of the day we probably smiled knowing that you do not expect much better from the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Madam Speaker, I must say to you that this has troubled me greatly and it is not a verse from a Bible. I don't know whether it is a prayer or it is intended to be a curse. And, whichever it is, Madam Speaker, I would say that it seems wholly unusual. I do not know, I would like to challenge the theologians of this country to analyse this and give us some idea of what they think this means. This is highly, highly unusual and somewhat suspect.

I would also like to briefly touch on the remarks that the honourable Member made about your good self and the operations of the Legislative Assembly, and I will not go into any details. But I would like to say, Madam Speaker, that I think I get along very well with the staff here at the Legislative Assembly. I will admit that from the very first few months that I came in here I was made aware at times that there is some uneasiness here and there. But usually, Madam Speaker, there are avenues for us to deal with these things.

If the staff of the LA finds it necessary to complain to the Leader of the Opposition, then that is up to them. But I would have to ask, Madam Speaker, the wisdom of a Leader to . . . instead of taking the issue up with the civil servant responsible for the Legislative Assembly in a diplomatic and controlled environment to try and resolve the problem, the Leader of the Opposition takes the opportunity—like he usually does—and makes a public display of the entire thing. And I consider that to be most unfortunate.

I believe that he will do just about anything to give himself an advantage, regardless of what position he puts those that he makes believe that he is trying to help in. He simply has no idea, no concern whatsoever of the position that he may be putting them in.

The Speaker: True.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: And I want to say that I really . . . It just shows you, Madam Speaker, it confirms to you that the art of diplomacy is not something that the Leader of the Opposition has any connection with. He has never been able to sit down and amicably sort out a situation, to sit down and bring people together to resolve conflict. He simply does not have that ability!

And, many times there are things that he does that could be done in a very productive way. He could even gain a lot of political mileage, and the fact that he does not do it, Madam Speaker, says to me that he does not know how to and he will never know how to at this stage.

So, I am hoping that whatever the issues are we can sit and resolve them somehow because we do need to work with one another here in the Legislative Assembly. I took serious exception to insulting the Chair, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, in the way that it was done. That was most uncalled for and most unprofessional.

I am hoping that we can move forward, Madam Speaker, with this matter and have it resolved so that all may benefit.

Madam Speaker, “Keeping the Faith—Securing the Future.” A most fitting and well chosen title to the PPM's Policy Statement delivered by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Kurt Tibbetts. Madam Speaker, keeping the faith is the message that this Government has been giving to the people of the Cayman Islands ever since we were elected in May 2005.

We know that the state of our economy, that the general morale of our people was just not where we would like it to be. So, as we move along our constituents expect things to, and for the most part, most of them believe that negative things will turn into positive things over night. And we know that that is not possible. So, our message to those who are disheartened and have struggled for some time has always been that you must keep the faith.

Now, the Opposition has made fun of this and made all of their snide and rude remarks, but, Madam Speaker, they have also said that even the theme we have brought is electioneering. But, it is the same message that we have brought all along. They have said that the Budget and the Policy Statement is the beginning of the campaign for next year's election. Madam Speaker, as far as I am concerned, this Policy Statement and Budget is unlike any other that we have presented. We have done nothing out of the way to try and induce or to encourage people by way of acts that we made in the Budget or the Policy Statement that you would say would encourage people that we are buying votes or anything of the sort.

We have done an increase of $50 to our needy, our seamen and the indigent. And they say that that is electioneering at its worst. I think those were the words echoed by one of the Opposition Members. In the same breath, Madam Speaker, they say it should be $800. We moved it to $550. So, which one is it?

Are we doing things in a timely fashion? Are we being prudent in our spending and increasing these assistance amounts for our people timely as we go along? This is the second increase that we have done since we have been in office, Madam Speaker. And, the Leader of the Opposition—who said it should be $800—I would say, Madam Speaker, that that is electioneering at its worst. Because you put an expectation up for people who will then say, Well the Honourable Leader of the Opposition says it should be $800 and all the PPM is doing is giving us $50. Now, if that is not electioneering, Madam Speaker, you tell me what it is.

Madam speaker, I want to talk a little bit about our great Leader as I see him. The Honourable Leader of Government Business has proven to us and this great country why he is the Leader. A focused and determined individual who is able to separate himself from the personal and venomous attacks from individuals who simply envy this good gentleman; from individuals, Madam Speaker, who believe that in order to build their own political career it is necessary to try and tear his apart; individuals who are unable to make the necessary appeal to the general public that would endear them for the country to even want to consider giving them leadership of this country. They are simply envious of him and his ability to lead as he does.

Madam Speaker, individuals that do not have an original thought of their own, and sit and wait for productive and progressive individuals—like the Leader of Government Business—to offer ideas and then they go to work at character assassination, innuendo, smear tactics, including some of the dirtiest and awful electioneering I have ever witnessed.

Madam Speaker, for the last couple of years since the Honourable Kurt Tibbetts has found himself in a position of leadership, just usually prior to an election this old story of barroom talk emerges. They go into their old war chests and find this file that is entitled “greatest leader.” (This is a bit of a fantasy story but it is as close as I can get to how the Opposition operates.)

They seem to smile, Madam Speaker, and hold it tightly against their chest. They close their eyes tight and float away in clouds of grandeur and imagine themselves as kings and queens on top of their political game. They sing and they dance and they proclaim religion. They frolic along, their childlike imagination causes them to see pictures of themselves on this folder that holds a file.

Madam Speaker, I believe that as they are skipping along and enjoying themselves chanting ‘I am the greatest! I am the greatest!’ suddenly they realise that their other colleagues have joined them. No one saw them coming, they just suddenly appeared. I believe also, that they each begin to wonder if they were overheard calling themselves the greatest, because we all know that that could be disastrous if the wrong Member of the Opposition hears anyone else calling themselves the greatest political leader.

Madam Speaker, they each open this folder with their picture on the front. Smiles, I imagine Madam Speaker, slowly turn to expressions of anguish and total disapproval. I can only imagine that this is the kind of world that the Opposition lives in. They slowly look up from the folder only to find mirrored expressions on their faces and the faces of their colleagues, and they each begin to stutter and in unison they say, “How can this be?”

They turn their folders inside out and reveal the source of their torment—the portrait of the current Leader of Government Business. And it is labeled “Still the Greatest.”

I can only imagine that this is the kind of world that the Opposition lives in, Madam Speaker. And after this unveiling and they realise, it is like they all come up with a plan to dethrone this well respected and much loved Leader. They search high, they search low; they search east, they search west; they have gone north, they have gone south; they went to West Bay, George Town, and they even went to Cayman Brac and found nothing of substance except that this gentleman—this courageous Leader, a friend to all—will have a drink and loves to play dominoes!

Madam Speaker, please tell me—anyone, please tell me—where is the crime in that?

So, they decide each year around this time that this is the approach they are going to take forgetting, of course, that they tried the same thing before, and before that, forgetting, Madam Speaker, that it did not work that time either. You see this is the kind of thing that continues to happen with this Opposition, this UDP Party, Madam Speaker. They seem to forget things that they said yesterday, things they did yesterday and they bring them up again as if they were brand new and believe that the public forgot about it as well.

These people seem to be locked in some kind of time warp. Maybe, Madam Speaker, the results of the election in May of next year will break the spell and finally release them from years of torment.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business has never tried to hide the fact from anyone that he will have a social drink. He is a man; he is a real man, Madam Speaker, who does not have to hide behind anyone or . . .

An hon. Member: Go off the Island every chance he gets to gamble.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: . . . hide behind anyone’s closed door, Madam Speaker . . .

An hon. Member: Go Bahamas and gamble—

An hon. Member: Yes!

An hon. Member: —in the name of Christianity.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: . . . to have a drink. The world knows that.

He does so openly. He does not hide in a hypocritical fashion to do so.

Madam Speaker, he does not get on a flight and travel overseas to satisfy his habit. With him, Madam Speaker, you know exactly what you get. You know exactly what you've got. No mystery in this man.

He has no compulsive or obsessive habits that have to be fed. What he does, he does in a controlled, mature and responsible manner.

Madam Speaker, like you, like many of us in here, we have known the Honourable Leader of Government Business for many years. For me it is in excess of thirty years.

Madam Speaker, I will tell you this: My first encounter with the Honourable Leader of Government Business was not a good one. I remember it clearly. I applied when he worked at the Nor'wester Publishing Company for a job and he would not give it to me! So, Madam Speaker, I'm saying to you that in time I have grown to understand this man. Now, I think he eventually left that employment about six months later, and I went back and got the job.

[laughter]

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: And I didn't have anything to do with him leaving!

[laughter]

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: But, Madam Speaker, as life would have it, our paths were destined to cross again. And, I would say that he has probably had the more positive of influences on my life. I have said this before and will say it again, he is not a good man because he is my friend; but he is my friend because he is a good man.

I have known him for over thirty years and have been through a lot with him. I've been through a lot! Lots of things that I can't tell you, Madam Speaker. So, I am qualified to say the things that I am saying about this Honourable Leader of Government Business. I have never seen him at any point in time, Madam Speaker, when someone had to take him home because he was unable to drive.

I've seen many other situations of people who had to be bodily picked up. People who find themselves asleep (these are males) in a female restroom and people—including the same Leader of Government Business—assist them and take them home. But, Madam Speaker, this Honourable Leader of Government Business will never stand in this Parliament or anywhere, be it private or otherwise, and mention that. He is just not that type of person. He does not believe in doing things like that. That is not his way of gaining points or confidence with people.

That is the type of man he is and that is why I admire him so. But, Madam Speaker, we ought to be careful, those of us who live in glass houses and are throwing stones.

Madam Speaker, I still do not understand why they keep this going, why they continue with the personal attacks. Will they ever deal with the pure unadulterated facts of what is happening in this country, Madam Speaker?

Do they continue because he always comes through for his people and this country? Because he is a catalyst, a beacon of hope and someone who can bring his people together who can rally the troops and help them to keep the faith and help them to help him secure their future?

Is it because he has been able to pilot another balanced budget?

Is this something that continually upsets the Opposition when they see that 'Oh boy, mm, this is a tough one. What can we find to say about this one? Mm, nothing! Well, let's go to the old war chest.'

Is it because he has not stumbled under any pressure from the Opposition, inside or outside of this House, Madam Speaker?

The man is a stalwart! The country feels comfortable with his leadership. I know his colleagues do. Is it because against all odds he is able to keep the faith?

Madam Speaker, you would know, you have worked with him. Many people in the general public know of his talents and his demeanor, his attitude towards life.

And I can tell you, Madam Speaker, that he is a definite stabilising force. There are times, Madam Speaker, I will admit, that the bunch of us are prone to flying off the deep end, flying off the handle because of the way things appear in front of us at times. Many times we would do things, and may be justified in doing so, but would not benefit the majority. I am not afraid to tell you that, Madam Speaker.

But the country needs to know that in any situation this man that will go to a barroom and sit and have a social drink—and the man loves dominoes—as long as people will stay with him at a table he will never get up. The man loves dominoes and I venture to say he can play them too.

Madam Speaker, this country is much better off because of his ability to do some of the things that I have just said. He has the ability to sit and listen to everyone, analyse exactly what they are saying, and in the end, with few words, bring everything into perspective. And you sit back and say 'Oh my. Ooh my.'

And I have seen it, Madam Speaker. I have seen at times when we—I myself—have not listened to his advice and usually I go astray. And I am going to give one simple example here today (and I am trusting that my colleagues will not beat me up too much.) But I am going to say, Madam Speaker, that in the constitutional modernisation process I remember distinctly all of us (if not every one, the majority of us) wanted to call the new Leader under the new Constitution "Premier" and he was not happy with it because he felt that the people would read it the wrong way or somebody would try to do exactly what they are doing with that position right now.

I know my colleagues remember what I am talking about. And we (how should I say, Madam Speaker) we mouthed him down. We joked about it at times, but in the end he said okay, if that is what you feel like, go ahead. But when it came to where people started to talk about this position of Premier . . . which, Madam Speaker, what they are saying is not correct. It is far from the truth. But there are individuals who can use situations like this or make more out of it than it is. But, I am saying in his wisdom he could foresee that that simple act would cause some consternation.

The other thing, Madam Speaker, he will never do—he will never ever come back to you and say I told you so. [I] don't ever know him ever saying that. Well, he does not have to because usually it makes such a big impact, you understand. And all it does is to force you and put you in a position where you then trust his judgment more and more and more.

Running a country is not an easy task. Those of us who have kids that run families know how difficult that is. Those of us who have businesses and have a few employees understand how difficult it is to keep everything rolling and worrying about pensions and health insurance, and how to make sure that you are doing the right thing for your business; that all your employees are okay, and this one is not going astray and you have to spend more time with this one because this one is stronger and can make it on their own for a little bit. That is the kind of thing that happens in the Government only that it is multiplied a thousand times over.

So, Madam Speaker, I wish, I pray—and this is not one of the prayers by the Leader of the Opposition—that the people will see the Honourable Leader of Government Business for what he is and assist him; allow him to do his work; allow him to do the good deeds that he is doing for this country without finding ways to distract from what we need to do.

Madam Speaker, I wonder if they continue with this negative talk because he is able to remain steadfast and unwavering in times of great stress. Is it because in spite of what negative comments are uttered about him he is stilled loved and respected by so many? And, Madam Speaker, maybe I am talking about the Leader of Government Business a little too much, because I would venture to say that the majority of our Ministers in particular, the general public sees them in the same light. They defend, they protect and they get upset when things are said that they know are not correct.

But, Madam Speaker, on a daily basis people will say to you, 'Boy you wait till I see so and so. I can tell him that he needs to stop saying those things about Kirky'. A lot of them call him that.

But, Madam Speaker, we talk about being responsible, doing what this job entails us to do. Being responsible, that when we sit in Parliament we sit in Parliament—that this is a big part of your responsibility as well. And, Madam Speaker, so far this morning it is only the Fourth Elected Member from West Bay that's in the Parliament. There are no other Opposition Members who have taken their seats inside the Chamber. Perhaps, Madam Speaker, they are still on the radio talk show lambasting the Speaker.

Madam Speaker, is it because he has been able to assemble and manage a productive team of individuals to help him run this country? All of our Ministers, our Backbench support, respect the Honourable Leader. And this is something that is foreign to a lot of people in this country and within the ranks of the UDP, where you can keep something together for so long; that there are no distractions, no arguments, no power struggles within the group, Madam Speaker, to keep them together. I believe that people simply do not understand that, and they believe that it is their duty to tear it apart.

Well, I don't know. I don't see how that is going to happen. This group realises that it has the respect of the majority of people in this country. We are also able to understand that what we are doing is right and that the people appreciate that, and that there is no reason to go elsewhere. We can sit and work out our differences because do not let anyone ever believe that there are no differences. We have our issues, but we sit and talk them through. And whatever the majority decides that is the line that we take.

Now, the UDP may find that difficult because of their ego: each one wanting to make a name for himself, and everybody must go his own way, and everybody might have his own little story. But not here, Madam Speaker! We have one story. We have one story, and it is keeping the faith! It is all about securing the future for the people of the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, is it because this Honourable Leader has vision and brings out the best in others? This is one of the most important reasons that I like to be around the Leader, because of his ability to understand how people work, how people think and be able to make adjustments to meet that.

Madam Speaker, before one word was said in this Parliament on this budget, before the First [Elected] Member of the UDP got up to make his contribution, the Leader told us what their theme was going to be. Madam Speaker, no ordinary individual can do that. He knows. He listens and he sees the way they move and the things that they are asking, and this is like six months ago when they asked questions in Finance Committee. He remembers things and puts two and two together and he said to us, 'Here is what they are going to do'.

Now, Madam Speaker, I believe that this is important. And I may not touch some of the other things that the general public may think are extremely important to this country right now, but my colleagues have done that and more of them will after I sit down. But I believe that this is important, that people understand that the Honourable Leader of Government, Madam Speaker—I keep wanting to call his name.

The Speaker: Can't.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: That people understand what we have here and the man is a true leader and has this country at heart.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader of Government Business does not, has not, will not use his position in Government or as an elected member to enrich himself. He would die first!

No one will point a finger in his face honestly. People do, people do, but they are not being honest. They are not being honest! And if he has a shortcoming it is that he will not take them on; that he will not go to any length to prove them wrong. For this he depends on the good will of the people and the good Lord to see him through. But if he has a weakness, Madam Speaker, I will tell you that I wish he would not do that all the time.

Madam Speaker, I wonder if they hate him because he is able to ignore the negative comments, remain focused and get on with his job. Is it because he is the catalyst in the restoration of investor confidence in this country?

Madam Speaker, stories are plenty. The individuals that will sit down and discuss with you and explain to you incidences where they came to this country with the intention of doing business and the first shock that they got when they visited and came to talk (at this time) with the PPM Government, was that one of the first things they found was that they were brought into a room with all of the Ministers, and they wondered what was going on. On some occasions the Backbench was there as well. But they quickly told you that when they came to talk about business in this country, that they went into a room with one Minister. One Minister! And if they were lucky, at some point in time, at some later stage they may have met some of the other Ministers, but that one Minister was the person responsible for setting the stage and understanding and saying, 'You know you want to do business here? These are the things that you need to do. These are the things that the Government requires of you, and these are the things that I will require of you.'

So, I said that to say this, Madam Speaker: They talk about investors leaving, companies pulling up and going. At this stage I can only say to you that I trust that those that are leaving are not leaving because they are no longer getting the personal attention and the favoured treatment that only certain companies got from their favourite politicians. But if that is the case and that is why they are leaving, then they were here with an unfair advantage over the other companies. So, I can only wish them well and trust that they will find some other jurisdiction that will cater to their illegal ways.

Now, Madam Speaker, from time to time climates will change and there are companies that will genuinely find that they may have it easier doing business in other places for legitimate reasons. And I am not talking about those. I don't want to paint everyone with one brush, Madam Speaker. I don't want to do that. People set up companies all over the world and sometimes it is just easier or more beneficial for them to go to other places, just like many times people find the need to come to Cayman and find here to be a more hospitable place for their nature of business.

But, Madam Speaker, on a whole, we have had many of our new investors come to us indicating that they had tried to do business in this country before and from the onset, the first conversations they had they realised that for them to do so would have meant doing something out of the ordinary. And, Madam Speaker, a lot of these overseas companies are honest people just like us, you know. And in spite of their millions and millions of dollars they want to earn their money in a legal way and just way.

So, many of them refused to do business prior to this PPM Government coming into power. But they have come back and they have sat and talked with us. So, while there are those who, yes, may be leaving, but that happens on any regular day. You win some, you lose some! If we want to make a little bit more out of those that are leaving and not mention those that are coming, then if that makes the Opposition feel better, Madam Speaker, so be it.

Madam Speaker, is it because this Leader has been able to steer his colleagues clear of corruption? I just spoke about that, Madam Speaker.

This Honourable Leader of Government Business will have nothing to do with anything that is illegal. And none of his Ministers or Members dare come to him with anything that is even remotely untoward. It won't happen! That is the time, Madam Speaker, when he won't sit and listen to the whole story. I can tell you that. He will stop you right now and clear it up. Honesty is still one of his greatest attributes.

Is it because, Madam Speaker, he refuses to get down in the gutter when his detractors keep trying to lure him there? Madam Speaker, again, I have said sometimes that I wish he would because he can manage any of them in any circumstance. And sometimes I wish that there was a little of the 70s and 80s left in him. But, Madam Speaker, I am grateful for who he is and what he has meant to this country.

I listened intently to the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for West Bay talk about this Government having no vision and, by extension, not planning for the future of this country. The Leader of the Opposition always takes advantage of every opportunity to criticise our plans for the advancement of education in this country. Madam Speaker, we have a lot of educated people in this country, a lot of smart people. And I would say, thank God.

The Leader of the Opposition continually uses the Prospect Primary School as his party's flagship education project. And you know what, Madam Speaker? I thank the UDP Government from the bottom of my heart for building the Prospect Primary School. It was well needed. The location, I believe, was excellent. And I do believe that that was an excellent idea. It is a well built facility and I can understand why they are so happy and proud of the Prospect Primary School. And this country owes them a debt of gratitude for doing that. Well built, served us well in Hurricane Ivan because it was so designed. However, Madam Speaker, it was an expensive structure. And the only way you put together the kind of schools that you want, and incorporate the type of hurricane shelters that this country must have, is by spending more money than you would normally spend on a simple school.

Now I would have believed that they would have understood that. But, Madam Speaker, I need to go back to where they said that this Government has no vision and that they had it all. One year after the school was commissioned, it was over capacity. Now, what kind of planning is that? What kind of vision is that? But we must give him credit for building the school.

Madam Speaker, the other project that the Leader of the Opposition continues to talk about is [the ITALIC programme]. This is another bragging point for the Leader of the Opposition. Maybe he has not noticed. I don't know who else has, but I certainly have. None of his colleagues ever mention it. I wonder why. I wonder why, Madam Speaker. I wonder why they don't brag about [the ITALIC project]. Is it because they understand the true picture and understand exactly what went on with [that project]?

Madam Speaker, ITALIC was an elected government's project. It was a project that came from the elected Members and it was forced upon the schools. The teachers were not in tune with it; they did not agree with it, but they were forced to accept it. Madam Speaker, time proves all these things to us.

Why did [the ITALIC programme] not do well if the teachers were embracing it? I think that we need to understand; we need to come to terms with these things, Madam Speaker and call a spade a spade. Don't let the Leader of the Opposition continue to fool people about ITALIC being such a wonderful programme. There was some merit to it. I will not say that it was totally useless. But it was a project of the elected government and not born out of the schools.

In the same breath I want to say, as far as education is concerned, that the Honourable Minister for Education, Alden McLaughlin, I find him to be one of the [greatest] visionaries this country has ever seen. I have a tremendous amount of respect for him but, Madam Speaker, he is not alone. Yes, the man has a vision, but we have it in every one of our Ministers.

One of the greatest politicians, a Statesman, this country has ever seen, is our current Minister for Health. He stands tall and strong among the best of them.

Madam Speaker, our Minister for Tourism has had his share of issues. They have tried in I don't know how many different ways to derail the things that he is doing. But, again, he is standing steadfast, head to the wind and moving forward, moving east, Madam Speaker! Moving east!

[laughter from the Speaker]

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: Sure, he can stand tall.

[laughter]

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: He does so all the time. He finds a way, Madam Speaker.

Our Minister for Communication and Works—whew! What a man! The action man! Yes, they referred to him as the Roundabout King. But, again, you know it's a little bit of a joke but there is vision involved in this too.

The way that the structures of the new road had to go, the way that we had to build things, some things had to come first. And in many instances it was the roundabouts because the roundabouts are where you filter or disseminate the traffic in different directions. So, many times your roundabouts had to go in first. And there were many people, including the Opposition, who were confused as to why so many roundabouts. But now as the main thoroughfares come together we understand the value and exactly how the roundabouts work.

Vision? I would say so. A little bit high and out of some people's perception, that they don't really understand and can't see what is happening until you put the full picture in front of them.

And I will say to you, Madam Speaker, that in some of these discussions we have had about roads, I have been confused myself. Some of it I just could not see it coming together. And the area next to Brown's Esso was one really confusing part for me. I see how it has come together now, but it was difficult for me to grasp that. I will admit that. But the Minister has his passion; he has had the vision to set up the Cemeteries and Parks Unit.

Madam Speaker, we may not have been able to see then how useful that would be, but, by and large, it has proven to be a very useful addition to our departments. And it is working well and it has also facilitated the employment of many Caymanians, Madam Speaker. And I congratulate him every day because I think the way it has turned out has been by his insistence that that unit should cater mainly to our own Caymanian people. And he has done very well with that. He has been able to have that filter down to staff. Again, they have gone with him and I am so proud of that little unit, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, is this a convenient spot to take the morning break?

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: Yes Ma'am.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11.31 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.02 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Throne Speech and Budget Address.

Fourth Elected Member for the district of George Town continuing his debate. Fourth Elected Member, you have one hour and one minute I am informed.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: Thank you kindly, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I was about to move on to speak briefly about our Ministers, the way that they operate and their vision for the security of our little country and livelihood for all of our people and how they come together to make sure that that Cayman dream is a reality.

Madam Speaker, I wanted to speak briefly about the Minister for Education whose responsibility also includes Culture. The Honourable Minister saw it fit to take part in the recent Batabano Carnival. He wore a costume. The Minister of Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture, is that type of person.

As I spoke about the Leader of Government Business of his love for dominoes, the Minister of Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture loves to have a good time. He loves to dance. And as the Minister for Culture, I was absolutely proud of him taking the decision that he was going to take part in the Carnival, so much so, Madam Speaker, that I made the decision that I would be a Marshall and walk alongside my Minister during the parade.

Now, the Leader of the Opposition finds it necessary to criticise him for that. Madam Speaker, what better way of getting your people involved in things like this than by leading by example?

Now, certain things fit certain people. You know, Madam Speaker, I can understand the Leader of the Opposition criticising the Minister for Culture for doing that because he himself may not fit into that role as somebody who can jump down the street and put on a costume and enjoy it. I can understand that he may have difficulty wanting to do that, or he says that his religion forbids him from dancing now.

But we know that the Leader of the Opposition is a good-time man himself, and loves to dance as well. But he made the remark, talking his usual nonsense, that the Minister of Education should be doing the people's work instead of jumping up and down in the street. And there is a time for everything—there's a time to laugh; there's a time to cry and there is a time to die. But, as long as we are here, Madam Speaker, we are to make the best of life. And it is not all about work.

The Minister plays a very important role in doing what he did that Saturday. I would encourage all my other Ministers to join him next year because I can tell you this much: the Minister of Education and Culture, once he is in good health, is going to be there again next year. And perhaps our Minister of Dance—the Third Elected Member for George Town—will be joining us as well next Batabano.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition, again mentioned (and another Member of his party also mentioned), the fact that the way we have administered and interpreted the Immigration Law is not the way that he intended it to work. Madam Speaker, didn't he and his government not do enough damage with his status grants in 2003?

How could it be right to give permission for hundreds of exempted employees' positions in certain companies, not even knowing what those positions would be used for? Companies were given just blank numbers of exempted employees, to fill in the blanks whenever they needed to, that at some point in time they would just be given a list of one or two hundred exempted employees that that would be that company's allotment. Whether or not that was for a fund manager or whether it was for an administrative clerk or for a messenger, we had no idea where those positions were going to go and how they would affect Caymanians.

Now, the Leader of the Opposition continues to speak about this and criticise us for curtailing that, saying that in order to keep business running freely in this country, that the way he planned this thing for exempted employees to work, we have gone against that.

Well, Madam Speaker, remember where the Honourable Leader of the Opposition started with his status grants? And, I heard him on the radio this morning saying (when he was asked by the talk show host this morning) if he had the opportunity whether he would do it that way again, and his answer was 'No'.

Now, if something you did in the past was so right, so justifiable, why wouldn't you want to continue doing the same thing? You must, at some point, recognise that what you did was wrong, and have no desire to do it that way again.

Now, Madam Speaker, I need the public to understand that just like the Leader of the Opposition piloted the status grants in 2003, he is upset that his plans have not gone through as he intended them, and is continually speaking about the exempted part of this that we have curtailed. And I want people to understand that should the Honourable Leader of the Opposition ever become part of another government that he will pick up where he left off and go back to the immigration policies the way that he intended it and will do what he wants to do with the exemption section of it to suit himself and his special interest to the detriment of the Caymanian people.

That is a project that he has started, a project that he is proud of and at any point in time that he has the ability, he will revert right back to it if the general public, the voting public of this country ever, ever give him an opportunity to do so again.

Madam Speaker, we need to understand what happens here with carte blanche exempted employee status, and what it does to the young Caymanians who have been working towards a promotion or otherwise a salary increase and the fulfilling of their dream for a better life for them and their family. And understand how uncertain it makes life, and how unhappy it makes people who are progressing; people who want to move forward and who deserve the right to move up the ladder, when you sit in a company and work and work, and do what you are supposed to do, and you believe that at some point in your life this is what is supposed to happen to me. In another year or two after I have done my studies; I've done this, I've worked in this department and now it's time for me to move up to another job.

And suddenly, Madam Speaker, there is some work permit employee over you whose position you should aspire to move to; all of a sudden there is a big party in the office. And what it is for? That employee who you were supposed to replace has now been granted exemption; now has exempted employee status.

So, Madam Speaker, what does this do?

What is the morale expected from a young Caymanian employee who has just been dealt that blow?

Do they continue to work?

Do they continue to improve?

Do they continue to make sacrifices?

Will they still have the desire to work late to complete projects knowing that there is no end in sight; that there is nothing to look forward to?

You see, Madam Speaker, they kill us every way they can. First they say that we are not qualified for the jobs that we want, and then we make the qualifications and they then find another way of keeping us down. And, I dare say, Madam Speaker, that Members of the House of Assembly who have been elected to look out for the welfare of our people should not be assisting companies in placing glass ceilings over Caymanians.

So, I ask only that people think this through and understand the way the Leader of the Opposition operates and understand that if you give him another opportunity—look out! You think things are bad now? Put him back in there.

Madam Speaker, one of the things that has continued to confuse me is the Leader of the Opposition and his Party talking about Government spending too much money. The Leader of the opposition continues to mention this approximately $90 million he left when he was uprooted from his position as Leader of Government Business in 2005. He does this continually with pride. Brags about it every chance he gets: 'I left the Government some $90 million. What they done with it?'

Now, Madam Speaker, anybody with any political savvy, anybody with any pride that would get up and speak about $90 million that was just sitting there while his people were suffering; while the hospital was in need of funding; while people were still in trailer homes after Hurricane Ivan; while his constituents were battling horrendous streams of traffic; schools bursting at their seams, Madam Speaker. But the Leader of the Opposition is bragging about this money that he had sitting there—while we had a lot of money in the bank, we were starving to death.

Now, I ask you, Madam Speaker, where is the vision in that? I don't know. I can't prove anything. But I do believe that the Leader of the Opposition was banking on winning the election and having a good bit of money to start off some other wonderful programme for him and his party.

Well, there was a party all right but he was not invited to it.

And I want to say, Madam Speaker, that I trust that this wonderful country will always understand the things and the way that the Leader of the Opposition continues to operate.

I want to briefly get back to Education and what I always perceive as his lack of appreciation for it. It is difficult for him to understand, to accept, exactly what education does for a country and why it is so important. Madam Speaker, over the years we have left our education system behind. We have simply gone along, done what we have always done with it, but we continued to expect different results. Buildings were not adequate; facilities were not adequate; teachers were not in tune with things Caymanian, with the way that we wanted our children to be brought up. They were teaching all right and, thank God. I have the utmost respect for all of our teachers. I think they deserve a lot more respect than they get. But the whole complex issue of educating our children has to be thoroughly thought through and planned out and legitimate goals set, and we should have measuring sticks to make sure that we reach those goals.

Madam Speaker, I can understand how the majority of people feel about the large amount of expenditure that we are embarking on with building the schools. But, like the roads in this country, they have been left for so long that in order to catch up you cannot do it piece by piece. It just does not come together right. You must put all your ducks in a row; you must cross all your t's and dot all your i's and set your plan in motion. It does not make sense, Madam Speaker, to put a four-lane highway, two lanes going west and that ending up into a one lane cul-de-sac or something of the sort. That does not make any sense! You have to put all your plans together and work them accordingly.

So, we have to do the same thing with our schools. You cannot have one school with the size capacity that we need, you cannot have one school with all the facilities that are necessary, you cannot have one school with one set of teachers that teach one way because of the environment that they are now in and have the other schools in other districts do something completely different. It is difficult to do what the majority of the public wants us to do in saying build one school at a time and you take your time and move it in that direction. That is not the way the system works best.

Now, we will have to do what we have to do as far as our financial constraints are concerned, Madam Speaker. But, ideally, the Minister is right; the Minister is on top of the game when he talks about building the three high schools at one time. That is the way the plan will work best. That is the way that this country needs to go so that our children in years to come will be able to benefit and qualify in their country for the jobs that many of the expatriates and many of the exempted employees that the Leader of the Opposition wants, are taking.

It is a difficult thing, Madam Speaker, because the benefits of this are quite a [distance] in the future. You will not see the benefits of this a year after the schools are built. Maybe not even five years. It may take ten to fifteen years before we come to realise. And that is what keeping the faith is all about. It takes our people to sit down and analyse what is happening here and take time to understand what the Minister of Education and his team has been saying, and give us the opportunity.

Let's not fight against the schools, Madam Speaker. Remember that we are not going outside of our borrowing limits. We are doing nothing of the sort. We can't do it! But it is necessary for us to move forward with the schools in the way that they are planned.

But, as usual Madam Speaker, it is difficult—more so, I believe, for Members of the Opposition, not to mention the Leader of the Opposition who really, really does not put the education concept together. It is something that completely eludes him. And I have asked him, I have asked other Members of his party a long time ago to please understand that they are not serving the country, they are not doing anything good for the country when they keep him in the position that he is in because education, in particular, if for no other reason—just ignore all the other problems that he causes—but his understanding and appreciation for education, Madam Speaker . . . if we go by him and the way that he operates, we will all perish. But maybe there is light at the end of the tunnel.

I also need to impress upon everyone that the schools on their own is one story; but this country is—and I will repeat this—the country is always in need of hurricane shelters. We are in a hurricane prone area. That will never go away, so we will always need hurricane shelters, Madam Speaker.

Now, do we build these new government buildings and make no provisions for hurricane shelters in them?

If we do that you are going to have the other set of people who will tell you that now you are wasting government's money—and I would agree at that stage, Madam Speaker. Any major government structure that goes up now like that has to have provisions in it for a hurricane shelter. Now, whether it's 20 per cent, whether it's 30 per cent, Madam Speaker, whatever the cost is this country must be prepared to pay for that and understand the benefits that we get from it, and know that when hurricane time comes that we have somewhere to go.

Not all of us will be able to build homes that will withstand the winds and the ferocity of major hurricanes, Madam Speaker. Not all of us can afford to build in high areas where flooding may not occur. So, as a country, as a government, we have to take those things into consideration and make provisions for our people in times of great need that they will have somewhere to go, at least during a hurricane and for some time after.

So, if the additional cost of these schools, Madam Speaker, is because we have to include hurricane shelters then, when the Opposition—or the detractors—talk about the schools being too expensive, I think they need to explain that as well to the general public and let people understand. Right now, Madam Speaker, we are short of adequate shelter space, and the addition of these schools will double what we have now. So, we are on the right track. And I hope that at the end of the day we can go through—although one or two of them may be a little delayed—and be okay in the end.

Madam Speaker, cost of living: I will only touch on one basic area. We all know what the effect of the cost of oil and gasoline has on our country. But it is not just our country; the entire world is going through a crisis right now. The cost of oil, in turn, is causing the cost of everything to increase making life difficult for those around the poverty level or in that area, who have just been scraping by. So, life has gotten more difficult. But I want to say, Madam Speaker, every month, in particular when I look at my utility bill, I thank the Minister responsible for utilities in this country for his efforts, his tenacity and his determination to go the direction he went with his team in organising, in setting up and negotiating on our behalf with Caribbean Utilities Company Limited.

Madam Speaker, I have seen a tremendous decrease in my utility bill. And I am grateful for that. And I know and understand that it must be happening to everyone else as well. Now, I will say this much, that in all of the negatives that are happening now with price increases it would be a lot worse if we did not get some relief with our utility bills. It would be a whole lot worse. But because that is positive we do not hear that talked about on the talk shows anymore.

Because that's a good thing that seems to have been forgotten.

And it is something that we need to pay attention to as Caymanians, you know, Madam Speaker. We complain a lot. And a lot of times we complain when we do not have any reason to. A lot of times we complain because we heard someone else complain and it sounds good, and we want to repeat it. But it has no effect on us what is being complained about. So, good news we need to talk about that as well.

There's been quite a bit of relief in mortgage rates also, Madam Speaker. Interest rates have gone down. So, there are two positives. And people, as the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman spoke about, need to take time to understand what they can do with their mortgages, even if it is a recent mortgage if it is a year old. I am sure that you can go in and talk to your banker because adjustments can be made.

Madam Speaker, I just refinanced my mortgage and it has made life quite a bit easier for me. I still don't have enough to save, but I can manage my bills a bit better now. But it has made a tremendous difference in my life. I want to encourage people to go in and talk to their bankers. It is as easy as that. The Government does not have to do everything for you. We need to make an effort to help ourselves a little bit more. We need to understand that when things get tighter, when the bills are now higher than what we earn that we need to cut back on things. We need to plan our days.

We talked about this in here before and in many instances, Madam Speaker, some of our constituents were upset because they said that we were trying to tell them how to spend their money. But, when they can't make their bills and they have to go to other people, including us as representatives, then they are telling me how to spend my money. I will help whoever I can, Madam Speaker, but in many instances there are individuals that you just cannot help because you understand that they did not have their priorities sorted out. And if you help them they are going to go back into the same system that they have always been and do not make life any better for themselves or their family.

We need to sit down and budget and look at the things that we can now do without. If you live in the outer districts and you have to travel into George Town, Madam Speaker, rather than do that two or three times a day, plan your day so you reduce the time on the road, reduce the gasoline that is burned, and accomplish more things on that one trip. Some of us it is just fashionable, we just love to drive. And I guess the next thing we are going to do now is to blame the Minister for roads because the roads are so nice and such a pleasure to drive on that people may want to drive on them more.

But, Madam Speaker, we need to budget and take time out and look at the things that we can do without, and do without them for a while until you are in the bracket again or when things stabilise that you can afford to do those things. But if you could do without it, Madam Speaker, for that period of time, it means that you do not need it. So, that extra money that you find yourself with when the time comes, we need to put that aside.

As a country, one of our great failings is that we fail to save. We do not pay much importance on putting aside something for a rainy day. If we get an increase in salary we find something new to spend it on. If we find ourselves with a couple extra dollars we decide that we need a new car or we need to remodel the house, or we need new furniture or we need to change the roof. And, Madam Speaker, a lot of times these things are not necessary, it is just a want and desire because the neighbour next door just redid their lawn and planted trees and we can't stand ours looking like this if theirs is looking like that.

But that is not what life is all about, Madam Speaker. We need to take time to sit down, discuss the things that are important to us, understand how we are wasting our money and the importance of saving something for the rainy day.

Madam Speaker, there are so many people in this country who are still of the old way who would die before they come and ask you for a handout. I know of a lady in George Town who had some hurricane damage to her home. A beautiful lady. The National Hurricane Fund assisted the lady in getting her roof fixed and she still had some issues with it so the district fund assisted her in getting part of it resolved. And here is a lady who talks to you on a regular basis and she is always reminding you of others in her community who need help: 'Oh you know so and so down there need . . . so and so . . .' That is the type of individual she is. She will never ask you for a penny or help, even though the Government had put itself in a position where they were helping people, she still would not go and ask for that help.

People had to go to her. And at the point, Madam Speaker, where we finally got her roof secured for her, just out of the blue someone said to her 'Well what about the interior of your house? Was everything okay in there?' She kind of turned her head away and [was like] 'don't worry about that', kind of thing. But we insisted: 'Are there any other issues?' She said, 'My son, the old cabinets were under salt water ya know. They not no more good'.

So, there are still many of those people in this country, Madam Speaker. We got the cabinets fixed for her but it was a lesson for me that this lady who was in need, but because of her upbringing the way she understood life, she did not want Government or anyone else taking care of her. She would fight and battle with her kids until they got it resolved, but she was not prepared to ask.

You know it was a bit of a tearjerker for me when I understood exactly what had happened to her and why she would not ask for help.

So, I know that we have lost a lot of that along the way and there are many individuals in our community now who believe that it is Government's responsibility to take care of them. So they don't plan for their future; they don't stay on their jobs because if they are not working they can go to the Department of Social Services and apply for a voucher for food for a couple of days or get rent paid for a couple of months. And we have accepted that as a way of life where we believe that it is our God-given right to those funds, and it is the Government's obligation to do so.

But it is making us a nation of very little values. We need to do what we can to change that. We need to stop the tide. We need to get families to stop doing that because what is happening, Madam Speaker, the children are growing up in the home and believing that that is the way that they should go; that a job is not something that they really need, somebody will take care of them.

You know the days, Madam Speaker, of people going out of the way to save money, the one thing that they always made sure of was that they were able to bury their loved ones. And that is something that we do not seem to pay a lot of importance to anymore, that that last dignified act is an act that the family wants to take pride in, in saying that you know I am able to take care of my mother, father and grandparents.

There will always be cases where some people have it harder than others and Government must assist. We acknowledge that. But many times, Madam Speaker, there are too many cases where people can afford it but they make the Children and Family Services Unit believe that they can't, just so that they don't have to spend their own funds. That is distressing and disheartening when people will go to that length.

Madam Speaker, just a word of advice to all of our people, that you are responsible for yourself and your family. Please understand that the more Government has to give you personally for you to live to pay your rent, buy food for you, the more that the Government has to do that, it is less money that they are going to have to hire teachers, police officers, to fix the roads, to build hurricanes shelters. We need to understand that if you take it from somewhere, wherever you get this money from, something else suffers. Because the expectations on those levels have not changed, they continue to expect better roads, better schools, better hospitals; but they still expect Government to take care of them as well, and the two things can't work.

So, my appeal is not to insult anyone, Madam Speaker, but to ask our people to get back to being proud, to being ambitious; to strive to take care of yourselves. In the extreme, Madam Speaker, when things go absolutely wrong for you and you can no longer help yourself, that Government will come in then and try and help you get back on your feet; but not to maintain you for the rest of your life. That is the other thing that happens. Once you help them out with a few things they expect that it must continue.

Again, this is part of the education process that I was speaking about that the Leader of the Opposition does not understand, where you educate people in the schools but you also educate them about life, about how they survive in this world and the importance of us making sure that our kids are properly educated so that they can get the jobs.

We have too many work permits in this country, Madam Speaker. But if we had more Caymanians qualified to take these positions that they are saying we are not qualified for, life would be better for a whole lot of them. Their earning power would be a whole lot better for them to be able to take care of their families.

That leads me into a wish of mine. I trust that it is something that we have loosely talked about within our Government. It was something that I talked about along the campaign trail in 2005, and that is a manpower survey in this country where we simply understand exactly what jobs are available in this country, a comprehensive survey, and we understand how many people in this country are qualified for those positions.

Madam Speaker, I have talked about this before but it is something that is dear to my heart, that if the survey shows that we have 15 quantity surveyors in this country and their positions are all filled, but 10 of those positions are filled by people on work permits, we know that in our curriculum our career counseling that we should be driving some kids in those areas to take over those positions that are held by people on work permits.

If there were 15 jobs for quantity surveyors, again, and we found that we had 20 Caymanians qualified already and these positions were all filled, then I believe that common sense needs to come into place somewhere where the career officers will know how to direct these kids when they are going off to school that, 'Yes, if you want to go and qualify as a quantity surveyor understand that when you finish school you may not get a job because that particular job area has been saturated'.

But, Madam Speaker, in many other areas where expatriates seem to do best is where we need to be able to look at it in bold letters and understand that there are 500 jobs in the hospitality industry and there are 50 Caymanians working in there and the rest of them are held by expatriates on work permits. So that we can know and see that here is an area where Caymanians are lacking, here is an area where Caymanians can move to if they get themselves qualified. And explain to them the benefits of it, that it is a job like any other. It is an honest living.

So, this is something that I hope that my Government will be able to look at, Madam Speaker, because I think it is well needed. We have done all the other things. We have done the national assessment of living conditions; we have a new education plan; we have done our new Immigration Law and I believe that the missing link with all of this right now is for us to conduct a thorough manpower survey in this country so we know once and for all what is out there and what direction we need to go.

And set it up in a way, Madam Speaker, that it is maintained on a regular basis. It will also make a big difference when work permits are being issued. The information is there, that we know exactly who is who and where people and what their qualifications are. So, it has to assist us, especially with our immigration policies. But it makes the Caymanians understand that the Government is battling for them and that they know that we have done what we can to identify the positions that they should be striving for. And as a government, you then can move forward with all certainty to assist those Caymanians in making sure that they get those jobs. At that point you can do that. Right now it is rather difficult, if at all possible, to move in the direction that we need to move with helping get our people in the jobs that they want.

Madam Speaker, another thing that I wanted to talk about has to do with tourism and culture. It is to do with tourists coming here and getting a piece of the Cayman experience. I have gone to many countries, travelled all over the world to Lions Club conventions, to CPA conferences, I have been to hurricane conferences; lots of things in different areas, Madam Speaker, that at some point in time during the course of these meetings there is something called a cultural night. Regardless of what else you see in the community that you are visiting, you are usually exposed to some of the raw meaningful, but down to earth, culture of that country you are visiting. That is missing in Cayman, for a lot of other reasons. I see it as a possible joint project between the Hotel Association, the Department of Tourism and the Department of Culture, where we organise cultural troops so to speak, where people are trained—our local Caymanian people, as best as we can—who will be proficient in the art of Quadrille, for instance, the old Caymanian ring games, the old Caymanian storytelling, and we turn this into some kind of show that will go around all of the hotels, the areas that tourists frequent a lot, so that we know at the Holiday Inn on Tuesday night it is cultural night; at the Westin, Wednesday is cultural night; on Thursday, at the Ritz it is cultural night, and we are able to make sure of the content that our tourists see and understand that it is pure Caymanian culture. These individuals who do this, Madam Speaker, may have to be employees of the Government, but they are developed by the Cultural Foundation and the Department of Tourism, and whenever they go to perform at these hotels, the hotels pay for their services.

Maybe there are other ways of working it out, Madam Speaker, but we will ensure that our tourists have a Caymanian experience and it is something that everyone will look forward to one night or the other at either of these hotels. And they can be used for other things, Madam Speaker, but it is another source of employment. It is another source of pride for Caymanians to be part of a troop like that.

We import too many things from other cultures in this country, Madam Speaker. If our cultural director is from Barbados, Trinidad or Jamaica, that does not matter to me. But they must have the desire and respect to try to grasp things that are Caymanian and try to make their presentations based on that, and not simply make it easy for themselves to teach what they know or what they brought here.

So, that is another one of my appeals for us to get into this area where we make sure because a lot of our tourists come here and leave and the one complaint they continue to have is that they saw nothing Caymanian. The manpower survey I talked about earlier will help assist us in making sure that the employees they meet at the hotels and barrooms; bartenders, waitresses, people who are tending to the rooms and reservation clerks, if we do the manpower survey the right way with our other employment agencies it will ensure also that more Caymanians will be seen at these establishments.

I know that everything cost money but I believe that it is something we can work out and I would like to appeal to the Hotel Association. Maybe this is something that they can do on their own, to look at this, because we are lacking in a true Caymanian experience in our tourist industry.

Madam Speaker, spending money: Again, we continue to be criticised for what appears to some people to be overspending. And I had to laugh when one of the Opposition Members starting talking about a new airport. Now, the airport is currently going through extensive renovations and I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Minister responsible for the airport, the Honourable Charles Clifford, for his determination in seeing that through. I know that we are going through some inconveniences now as we travel, Madam Speaker. But if you have any little bit of vision at all, you can understand that it is going to be a beautiful project when it is done. So, we are making our efforts to make sure that when our tourists come in, when we come back home, when we are leaving, that our experience there is a whole lot better.

But I had to laugh, Madam Speaker, when a Member of the Opposition said that—the Leader of the Opposition again. Same man. Same said guy—

An hon. Member: Who?

[inaudible interjection and laughter]

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: —who, Madam Speaker, talked about moving the airport somewhere else. Now, how in the world can you complain and ridicule and criticise a government for spending what they are spending now for necessary projects, and you talk about relocating the airport, Madam Speaker?

Where in the world would we get that kind of money from now?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I believe from my calculation you probably have about eight minutes left. Something like that.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, the airport as we are doing it now will serve us well for a long time to come. Because the part that he mentioned about general aviation is real. That is real. And that is a part of our investors and tourists alike, that we do need to make a little bit more provisions for. But, again, the Minister is working on those plans. Now, we can do a lot of it right there. Who knows what the future will bring, but right now the Owen Roberts International Airport is quite adequate.

I want to move from air to sea, and speak a little bit about what the Leader of the Opposition said about the cruise ship facilities and the cargo dock. And we know that the cargo dock and cruise ship facilities have been a bit of a controversial item for a long time and in years to come will probably remain that way.

Originally, Madam Speaker, the idea (since we understood that we had nowhere else to go as far as the dock was concerned) was to shift the cruise ship part of the dock to what we consider the south terminal, and move the cargo dock north separating that. And that was the premise that we proceeded under as a country.

Now, Madam Speaker, out of the blue, I don't know whose wisdom it was, but the decision was then made to split the facilities that we had there and have tourists on the south terminal and tourists on the north, and cargo in the middle. Now, for the life of me I still cannot figure why we thought that was best. Anyway, that is the way it is and that is the way we are proceeding right now.

The Leader of the Opposition— and this is not the first time I heard him say it. He said it here again in his debate contribution to the budget. He makes light of it when he says that one of the best harbours in the world is in the Cayman Islands and it is the North Sound. And he goes on to say, 'But you'll never be able to do anything with that' in a contemptuous tone.

I want to say, Madam Speaker, here's another warning from me, that (it is my opinion) for the frequency . . . And nobody else mentions the North Sound. Nobody else talks about the North Sound as a possible cargo dock; but the Leader of the Opposition continues to mention it. It is something on the forefront of his mind. I caution the people to be careful, but I can see it now, Madam Speaker. If he gets the opportunity that Leader of the Opposition will simply say, 'Well, you know what, I mentioned that four or five times for the last four years and nobody objected to it.

So I believe that I have the right to go ahead and develop the North Sound as a cargo dock'.

This is the way that the Leader of the Opposition operates. He drops things, he says little things and he waits on your reaction. And if you don't pick him up he will do it again and again. And what it does for him is that he then starts to believe it. The many times that he repeats something it stays in his mind and it becomes law. It becomes the way of the world to him.

So, I am going to lay a caution to everybody to beware of the Leader of the Opposition. If he ever gets his hands on the reins of this country again, that the North Sound could be in danger.

Madam Speaker, I want to take my last few minutes to talk about some of the issues brought forward by the Honourable Third Official Member in his contribution entitled "Maintaining Fiscal Prudence in Challenging Economic Times." (The Leader of Government Business has always told me from our Lion's Club days that I have a problem saying the word fiscal and I usually say physical.)

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: And I probably did just now too. But, Madam Speaker, the Honourable Financial Secretary talked about the Cayman Islands Economic Forecast and he said:

"In view of the changes in the economic prospects for the world's major economies which are key markets for the Cayman Islands, the forecasts of real GDP growth for the Cayman Islands have been lowered to 1.7% for the 2008 calendar year and 1.4% in 2009. It may be noted that while these growth rates are lower when compared to those in 2005, 2006 and 2007, they are slightly higher when compared to the economic performance between 2000 and 2003 when GDP growth occurred at an estimated average rate of 1.3%.

"The key assumptions for the forecasts in 2008 and 2009 are that the financial services sector will remain resilient and that the high-end stay-over tourism market will remain relatively buoyant. Given the GDP growth expectations, unemployment rates in the Cayman Islands are forecast at 4.1% in 2008 and 4.5% in 2009.

"For the Cayman Islands, the forecast inflation rates are 3.1% in 2008, and 3.0% in 2009. The actual inflation rate in 2007 was 3.2%" [2008/9 Official Hansard Report p. 7]

Madam Speaker, we know that from time to time economies throughout the world will have their highs and lows. And we know that our little Cayman Islands, in the corner here, depends on a tremendous amount of what happens on the world economic stage. And we try our best to mitigate as best as we can when those things happen [so] that we can survive. Now, we have always produced a balanced budget. We have always been mindful of our spending. We have kept our percentage below the danger level and, Madam Speaker, because of excellent balanced budgets produced in the last three years, because we were mindful of the possibilities knowing what the world economy was, and understanding that this country was going through a boom dictated primarily by the construction industry right after Hurricane Ivan, that it could not be maintained. Okay?

Because of prudent budgets, because of making sure that we did not overspend as we went along, we are now better able to withstand what is going on in the world economy. Because we were not foolish, because we did not overspend; because we did not do as the Opposition continues to say 'oh, you are doing everything to get re-elected'. . . I mean, if you really want to get down to it and analyse the way that this Government has done, it has simply not done things that will help it get elected.

I mean we have taken some big chances; we have taken on things that people were scared to do for years, for decades, Madam Speaker. We are here for the benefit of the people of the Cayman Islands. And I dare say that I am proud of the fact that we have had a sensible Government, and I congratulate the Honourable Financial Secretary for his guidance, because at times, Madam Speaker, I know that they (Cabinet and the Honourable Financial Secretary) at times do have difficulty working things out. Again, they end up with the best possible product at the end of the day. So, I am very confident that the difficult times that we are experiencing right now is but for a time.

But I am also mindful, Madam Speaker, that because we have been so careful, because the country has been so well managed, that we are in a better position today to withstand the slowdown of the world's economy. With that, Madam Speaker, I thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 1.03 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.31 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Budget Address and Throne Speech. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment, Investment and Commerce.

Hon. Charles E. Clifford: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, as I rise to debate the Budget and Throne Speech for 2008, I note that the Opposition is still absent from the House. But I am fairly sure that before I take my seat they will come into the Chamber one by one, or collectively perhaps.

Madam Speaker, in his Budget Address the Honourable Third Official Member was able to demonstrate that this budget presented to this honourable House for this upcoming financial year is compliant in every respect to the principles of responsible financial management. There is no need for me to go over what the Honourable Third Official Member has already said, but clearly, he has demonstrated that the budget that we have presented to this honourable House is compliant.

Madam Speaker, I wanted to make specific reference to the repeated misrepresentations on the morning talk show about the level of government debt. Despite the assurances and the statements made in this honourable House by the Honourable Third Official Member the talk show host continues to misrepresent the facts in that respect. Be that as it may, this is what we have come to expect from that host, and I am sure as we draw nearer and nearer to the elections in 2009 we will have more and more of that type of misrepresentation. I say today what I have said on so many occasions in this honourable House: the Caymanian people are smart people. They will not be misled, they will not be fooled; and they have proven that time and time again. They demonstrated that in May 2005 when the United Democratic Party was once again trying to trick the people of this country into voting them back into office.

Before I get into the subjects for, which I have constitutional responsibility, Madam Speaker, I want to deal first of all with a few items particularly with respect to my Ministry and Ministry staff, and then to go into the various projects within my constituency and to finish off my debate going into detail on the subject areas for which I have constitutional responsibility.

Madam Speaker, I am very, very proud as the Minister of Tourism, Environment, Investment and Commerce, to stand here today and commend my Caymanian staff, my senior managers in the Ministry, for the job that they have done, certainly over the last year, and since I have been in office as a matter of fact. I certainly expect no different from them as we go into this new financial year.

Madam Speaker, I know I have taken my share of criticism and I have had my share of challenges, and I have been accused of all sorts of things, that I am getting rid of this one and that one and the next one. I want to say that I am very proud today to be in charge of a Ministry that has the five Caymanians it does in the senior positions within the Ministry. The Chief Officer, Mrs. Gloria McField Nixon; two deputy chief officers, Mr. Samuel Rose, who is the Deputy responsible for administration and environment; the Deputy Chief Officer responsible for Tourism is Mrs. Oneisha Richards; the Corporate Communications Officer is Mrs. Andrea Fa'amoe; and the Human Resources Manager is Mrs. Dawn McLean-Sawney.

Madam Speaker, these are all qualified capable Caymanians and Caymanians for which the country certainly should be proud.

This Government, Madam Speaker, is very, very happy, and the Leader was very, very proud to announce the cost of living increase that we have granted to the Civil Service. And while I speak specifically of the staff within my Ministry, I know that every Ministry and every Portfolio has dedicated staff that work night and day on behalf of the Government and the people of this country. Madam Speaker, they certainly deserve the increases in salary that they have received. And I say, again, that it is not wise for any government to continue to procrastinate and to wait, and to wait, and to delay increases in salaries for civil servants and then be faced with the situation that some governments were faced with in the past, where you have delayed it for so long that you have to give double digit increases to try to play catch-up with the private sector and essentially create an unnecessary burden on the revenue of this country.

Thankfully, Madam Speaker, we have taken a different approach and we believe that we have to keep up with the cost of living and to give civil servants the increases that they deserve so that they too can maintain the standard of living that they are accustomed to. In fact, we compare much better today with the private sector than we did many years ago, and, indeed, in his policy statement, the Honourable Leader of Government Business invited and encouraged the private sector to follow the Government's example and to look at their individual operations and businesses, and to make sure that their employees too are treated fairly in this respect. And we can only hope, Madam Speaker, that the private sector will take those recommendations and that encouragement on board and, in fact, follow the Government with its lead on this matter.

Madam Speaker, I want to also pay tribute and thank my constituents of Bodden Town for the trust which they continue to give me and my colleagues from the district of Bodden Town, and to say that Bodden Town has been neglected for so many years that we often hear the comment nowadays, 'Well Bodden Town is getting so much more than some other areas.'

The truth of the matter is, Madam Speaker, we do look at priorities and we have to decide on areas of priority, but the district has been neglected and under-represented for so many years that, finally, we have representatives in Bodden Town who are prepared to go to battle for their people and secure what needs to be secured. Madam Speaker, I will just use as an example and go through some of the projects that we have underway. When you consider a district the size of Bodden Town, and the fact that to this day, we still do not have a fire station in that district, it says a lot about the type of representation that the district has had in the past.

We know, Madam Speaker, that our own colleague, the Honourable Minister for Health, has fought for many years, for many of these things, but when you do not have the backup support that you need from your other colleagues it creates an issue, and it creates an issue when it comes to budgets. But he has certainly tried and now he has the support that he has been waiting on and it is beginning to pay dividends.

Madam Speaker, as you know the project to establish the fire station has commenced in the district of Bodden Town and, indeed, it is going to be much more than a fire station on that site. We are also going to be creating a full emergency services centre with a new police station and emergency medical response unit, a helicopter pad and some other components. And we are very, very proud of that and I want to thank my colleagues in Government and, in particular, my colleagues from the district of Bodden Town for their strong support with that particular project.

Madam Speaker, the Civic Centres—and I say Civic Centres because there are going to be two. We have one now in the Bodden Town district, and as you know, that was severely damaged during Hurricane Ivan, and as a result of that we made the determination that it could not be rebuilt to category 5 standard so we would look at establishing a category 5 hurricane shelter/civic centre elsewhere in the district.

So, we have repaired the old civic centre; we have created meeting space on the top floor and we are going to outfit the bottom floor of that civic centre for the vehicle licensing unit for the three eastern districts of Bodden Town, East End and North Side. There is funding in the budget, Madam Speaker, for the commencement of the new Civic Centre, which will be constructed on a parcel of land behind the Bodden Town Primary School. And, as I said, that facility will be certified to category 5 hurricane shelter standards and it will also include substantial sporting facilities within that civic centre along with offices for MLAs, showers, changing rooms, et cetera.

Just moving back very briefly to the emergency services centre, I need to say that while the construction on the project is about to commence and the site filling and preparations are almost completed, a lot of work has gone on in relation to the Bodden Town emergency services centre. We have looked at specifications for the equipment, as an example, for the fire station and the fire service has had on order now for some time the equipment for that station, the trucks, et cetera, that will be required. There is significant lead time from the date of order to the date of delivery, and we want to ensure that when that facility opens in 2009, that all of the equipment will be on-land and ready for use.

I know also that the fire service has invested quite a bit of time and effort in making sure that all of the HR components are in place so that the station is fully staffed when it opens in 2009.

Madam Speaker, we realise that our Bodden Town cemetery is almost at capacity and we have been concerned about that now for some time. We are looking, in conjunction with the Ministry responsible for cemeteries, at purchasing and acquiring additional property in Bodden Town. We have looked at several parcels and we are in active negotiations for the acquisition of those parcels to create a new cemetery not very far from the existing one for the Bodden Town district. And it will be large enough to serve us for many years into the future.

Madam Speaker, another project that we are extremely proud of, and that is connected to the “Go East Initiative,” is the expansion of the CoeWood Public Beach in Bodden Town. My Ministry is in the position to purchase two additional parcels of property, one on the east side of the CoeWood Public Beach and the other one on the west side of the Public Beach, to expand that beach and make it a lot larger than it was before. That particular property is going to essentially be the centre for cultural and recreational activities for the Bodden Town district and it will have on it a launching ramp and a dock. We will maintain the cabanas that are there and build, perhaps, one or two additional cabanas. We are going to designate the area to the west side of that property as a swimming area, because we do not want people swimming on the eastern end which is where the launching ramp is going to be.

We are also going to be building the “Go East” kiosk on that site and they will be available to people in the community who will be interested in promoting and selling their arts and crafts and local food, and even individuals who wish to start small businesses such as kayak tours, fishing tours or snorkeling tours, who simply do not have the wherewithal or a location to operate from. This will essentially be an opportunity for them to start that business.

As always, we have the Cayman Islands Investment Bureau (CIIB), the Department of Tourism (DOT), and the Cayman Islands Development Bank (CIDB) standing ready to assist those individuals who come forward with small business development ideas.

I want to pay tribute as well to the Bodden Town Action Committee that has done some very, very important work in the district. In fact, just this past Saturday we had the unveiling of a sign at the Guard House Hill in Bodden Town, essentially welcoming people to the historic district of Bodden Town, the first Capital of the Cayman Islands. It was attended by a good cross-section of the community and I thought the ceremony went very well. The sign is beautiful and very appropriate for the area. I want to take the opportunity again to thank the committee for their work on that project.

Madam Speaker, I also want to say to the committee (as I said to them on Saturday) that the CoeWood Public Beach, as we move into the development phase of that public beach, it is an important project for public/private sector partnership and we expect that the Bodden Town Action Committee will partner with us as they have done on so many other projects, and assist us not just with the redevelopment of that site, but also with the maintenance of the public beach once it is redeveloped.

I also said in my remarks on Saturday that we are aware that since we have purchased those two pieces of property and expanded the area, that there are some undesirable activities going on there. The public beach is intended for wholesome activities for families for the community and we are simply not going to be tolerating that type of behaviour on our public beaches. So, Madam Speaker, what we propose to do when we move into the redevelopment gear to establish all of these facilities on this beach in Bodden Town, is to shut the beach down just prior to the redevelopment—fence it off properly, have it properly secured—and proceed with all components of the redevelopment simultaneously, and then to reopen the beach under new rules. And those new rules will certainly be strictly enforced, and we have already had meetings with the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service about the current activities on that beach and what we expect going into the future.

I have to also commend the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service for their commitment to the project and for ensuring that the beach is reserved for wholesome activities and for community activities.

What I just mentioned, Madam Speaker is not unique to the CoeWood Public Beach. It is a situation that we face with most public beaches in the Cayman Islands and in Grand Cayman, in particular. And, it is something that we need to pay keen attention to. I know that the Minister with responsibility for Works and Infrastructure, who has established a unit to deal with beaches and cemeteries, certainly has this at the top of his agenda as well as to look in more detail at how we best manage our public beaches going forward. But we are very much looking forward to the commencement of the redevelopment, which we hope to get underway by the first week in August and to the ultimate completion of those facilities to enhance the opportunities in the eastern districts.

Madam Speaker, those types of facilities are also going to be available in North Side and East End as well, so we are going to have kiosks built in East End and North Side and, indeed, in this budget, we have $400,000 budgeted for the acquisition of additional public beach in the North Side constituency.

The Speaker: Wow!

Hon. Charles E. Clifford: Madam Speaker, we are also very fortunate and very grateful to be in a position very recently to officially open the Savannah Post Office. That was well attended. It was a large crowd there that evening and clearly it is a project that is well appreciated by the community. Again, I want to commend my colleague, the Minister with responsibility for Communications for his commitment and for helping us to realise this project. It is a beautiful facility and it will serve the community well into the future, and it is a community that we all acknowledge as the fastest growing community in the country.

Madam Speaker, we are also going to be establishing the Police Marine Unit as we promised in our political manifesto and from the political platform during the last campaign. We have also done significant preparation in relation to the Marine Unit, the Coast Guard and the Marine Base Station. The Royal Cayman Islands Police Service has been engaged in extensive research over the last three years in developing specifications for the vessels for that unit. Those vessels are on order. The Marine Base itself, that site has been secured and some site preparation work has commenced and so we expect that in the not-too-distant future we will have, as we promised the country, a properly functioning and effective police marine coast guard unit fully supported by air support.

Madam Speaker, this is something that I have always said—long before I came into this House—that we needed to secure our borders properly because if we wait until the contraband comes in or goes beyond our borders and into the community, we have essentially lost the battle. So, we have to stop it before it gets to that point and we are not living in a fantasy land, Madam Speaker. We do not expect that we are going to be able to stop everything. This is a fight that must be continuous. It is going to be a fight that is going to last forever, in my view, for a very, very long time. We have to simply dedicate the resources that we know we can to the cause to make sure that we can fight it effectively and that this country remains one of the safest in the region.

There is too much at stake, Madam Speaker. Our economy is built on tourism and financial services—two very, very fragile industries that can be damaged significantly by things such as out of control crime. We as a government have an obligation to guard against that. And, Madam Speaker, one of the most important components in guarding against that and making sure that your country remains safe is to properly secure the borders. And that is exactly what we set out to do.

Madam Speaker, I want to speak, as my colleague did, on the Savannah gully because that too is a project that has been outstanding for many, many years. I know that my colleague, the Minister for Health and Human Services, has certainly fought over the years to try to address this issue. I remember as far back as 1997, when I transferred from the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service into Central Government as the Deputy Permanent Secretary in the Ministry, is when money was first budgeted for this project to fix the gully issue. Here we are 11 years later still talking about it and the problem is still not fixed.

But let me say this, no one, Madam Speaker—because I have been there and I know—no government has made the progress that this one has with respect to addressing that issue. We have looked at the options. The Minister responsible has brought in consultants. We have had district meetings. We have had consultations with key stakeholders, and we have had recommendations. The Government has committed to funding this project, which is quite substantial. We have an initial estimate, which is several million dollars, and we have committed as a government to seeing that project through and making sure that it is properly funded and completed.

We know what the hold up is. We have had objections from some people in the district and the Government, as you know, is not exempt from due process. The application which has gone to the Central Planning Authority is essentially in limbo at this point because of the objections that have been lodged.

Madam Speaker, all I will say at this stage is that while many people in the community have many ideas about how best to address the situation . . . I do not pretend to be an engineer and what we have done is, we have brought in professionals, we have brought in civil engineers and also specialists who deal with coastal issues such as this and they have made their recommendations to the Government, which we have accepted. What I do know is that the situation as it currently is cannot be left alone. It just simply cannot be left unchecked and unaddressed. Whatever we do in that area has to be well thought out, and I believe that it is going to help. Now, none of us can guarantee that but we do believe that it is going to, at a very minimum, mitigate the impact of a storm passing to the south of Grand Cayman.

Madam Speaker, I suppose it would only be those who live in the area who are directly affected who can really, really appreciate the danger and the risk that is posed as a result of that. I do think, Madam Speaker, while we would never want to take away the ability of anyone to object to something for which they think they should be objecting to, I would simply ask those who are objecting to consider the matter; to consider the damage that has been caused time and time again for many, many years—long before this Government came into office. Consider the damage that has been caused to so many homes in the Newlands and Savannah area, and to rethink the objection and ask themselves whether it is absolutely necessary for them to proceed with those objections.

As I said, Madam Speaker, at the end of the day, if they feel strongly enough about it and they have their reasons for objecting, then I suppose that is what they will have to do. But I make that plea because I believe that this project simply cannot be delayed any longer.

We wanted to get this project underway in December last year because we understand that it will take about six to seven months to complete. We have been advised by the engineers that this is not a project that you can do during the hurricane season because you would not want to be in the middle of the project when an event occurs, because that could be quite serious. The Minister and the consultants have explained to us that the concrete requires, I think up to 30 days to properly cure. So, the ideal time is to commence the project in December and to finish it ahead of the hurricane season. We were comfortable with doing that, Madam Speaker, because we know that the active part of the hurricane season really starts towards the end of August. So, even though the hurricane season officially starts in June, we did have some additional flexibility, we believe, between June and the end of July, middle of August, before we get a lot of activity.

Unfortunately, it is what it is and we will take it one day at a time and hope that we can get formal approval from the CPA shortly for that project. Then we can do a proper risk analysis and assessment and determine exactly when it will be best to commence that project. My view on it, Madam Speaker, is the quicker the better. But I do recognise that there are some risks with starting it after June.

Madam Speaker, quite a [few] roads have been repaired and paved in the Bodden Town district. My colleague, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, spoke about some of them. I believe, he also made reference to the fact that the Cumber Avenue and Gun Square area has been paved and I do not think that had ever happened before, and we were very pleased to be in a position to make that improvement in that community along with many more improvements.

We know that the Mission House, as an example, was completed by the National Trust and, again, my Ministry is very, very pleased to be in a position to give the National Trust an annual grant to assist with their operations. The Mission House, as you know, is located in the Gun Square area and it is adjacent to another project we were very instrumental in, the Nurse Josie Senior Centre. And we have also purchased an additional piece of property adjacent to Nurse Josie's Seniors Home so that we could utilise that area properly. The Harwell McCoy Senior Park is also located in that area. So, that is a perfect mix, Madam Speaker—the seniors' Home, the park and the Mission House—for us to create a cultural centre and a tourist attraction that will complement the Go East initiative and we are working towards that end.

There is a lot more road work, street lighting, et cetera and speed bumps to be done in the districts. We have done a lot already since we have been in as the Government and, in particular, my colleague, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, certainly stayed on top of those issues for us and has been very effective in working with the Ministry responsible to make sure that we have put in place the proper street lighting, speed bumps and that we have paid attention to the district roads and we have dealt with those in order of priority. Madam Speaker, the National Roads Authority and the Minister responsible for Infrastructure has supported us every step of the way and we are very grateful for them for their commitment to the district.

Madam Speaker, in the Newlands area we have under construction the Newlands launching ramp. In fact, the launching ramp has actually been finished. [One of the] other two components of that project is a parking lot, which is quite a large parking lot. I think it can park up to (I think 30 trucks and trailers), and we are also going to be building a dock adjacent to the launching ramp to make the whole boating operation a lot safer. I know, Madam Speaker, and those who are familiar with that area, and who visit there on weekends, in particular, will know that a very large percentage of the population use that area on weekends. I know just from the feedback that we have received since we have completed the first component of that project, the launching ramp, that the community is very appreciative to the Government for those achievements and for putting that in place.

Madam Speaker, the East/West Arterial, not a lot has been said about that during the debate, although my colleague, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, did mention it in his debate. Again, I want to pay tribute to the National Roads Authority and my colleague, the Minister for Infrastructure, for their commitment to this project. We just ask that the community be a little bit more patient. It has already significantly improved the travel time into George Town from the three eastern districts in the mornings. But we have to recognise that some of the work, particularly the work in front of the Lion's Centre and along the Red Bay area by Hurley's, is still not finished, and the extension of the Linford Pierson's Highway is also not yet completed. When all of that is done it is going to make a tremendous difference. Once the work is finished in front of the Lion's Centre, I think that people will have even additional relief at that point. But it has made a difference and, again, I want to thank the National Roads Authority and my colleague Minister.

So, there's been a lot going on in my constituency, Madam Speaker. And we heard all sorts of comments from the other side of the Floor about these projects. You know, Madam Speaker, they like to be negative and they will talk about spending too much money on the Emergency Services Centre, spending too much on the East/West Arterial, and we will hear all of those criticisms; but when they get to the point of actually voting the funds, the Opposition usually falls in line because they do not want it to go on record, you see, Madam Speaker, that they are against these projects. But they will make their little comments here and there; they will make their comments to the press about the Government spending too much money.

Madam Speaker, we hear them talking about coming to Bodden Town for constitutional meetings and to the other districts for constitutional meetings, and for meetings on this and that and the other. When they come, particularly to my district, I want them to tell the people of Bodden Town why they were bad mouthed the Government for spending money on the East/West Arterial, why they were bad mouthing the Government for spending money on the Bodden Town Emergency Services Centre. So, when they come to hold their meetings, if they do not answer those questions I can assure you we are going to raise those questions again because we are going to be having our own meetings, and they are going to have to be accountable for what they say.

But, as I said, Madam Speaker, they will come and say, 'But we voted the money for this.' We understand that and do appreciate that, but we have heard their comments as well. We have heard their criticisms. And let me tell you, Madam Speaker, they accuse the Government of all sorts of things, but you see they really cannot accuse anyone on this side of some of the things that they have been accused of. So, they come up with all sorts of things; all sorts of accusations. And they talk about good governance. Madam Speaker, can you imagine the Opposition, the current Opposition, preaching about good governance?

Madam Speaker, I only need to refer them to the several Auditor General's reports on their Administration, and the types of activities that were occurring; the types of things that have been reported on; the types of criticisms that have been leveled by the Auditor General. If that is what they term good governance, then there is something wrong, and that in itself is a very, very serious warning sign to this country.

I am going to say a few things on the Commission of Enquiry because the Governor mentioned it in his Throne Speech, and the Leader of the Opposition (although I was not here, I was off the Island when he was debating the Budget and the Throne Speech) mentioned it as well. Madam Speaker, I know that the Commission of Enquiry and the Commissioner made several recommendations with respect to good governance issues. What troubles me about this, Madam Speaker, because some of the recommendations are good, in my view—I do not support all of them but I will speak to that in a few minutes just very briefly. But, Madam Speaker, what troubles me is that this whole thing was put in the context of addressing good governance issues.

Madam Speaker, I do not think I would be where I am today if we had had an effective governor in 2004. But the circumstances were what they were at that time, and I took the decisions that I did because I believed that it was in the best interest of the country to do so. When I ultimately decided to run for political office and to talk to the country about some of these issues, I did so because I believed then, as I do now, that it was not in the best interest of this country for it to go into a general election in 2005, not knowing of these issues. That certainly was not in the best interest of the country. So, Madam Speaker, I certainly make no apologies for that. I have said that before and I say again that, perhaps if we had had an effective governor at the time I would not be standing here today; I may still have been a senior civil servant. But it is what it is and that governor refused to come here to testify and I don't have to say anymore than that.

But, Madam Speaker, I think the Government could have certainly saved a lot of money, because you know, when this matter was first reported by Mr. Desmond Seales I was expecting the current governor to come and say something to me or to ask me what my response was, because I would have certainly told him. It would have been as simple as that. And all of the other recommendations with respect to document handling and protocols with respect to that—which we never had in government, and which the Commission is recommending we have now . . . Madam Speaker, we have the wherewithal within central government to come up with those recommendations. We certainly did not have to pay two hundred and forty something thousand dollars to get those recommendations.

As far as what I did is concerned, when I resigned, someone just had to ask me. Someone other than the press that is, because I was not getting engaged in any conversation with the press on this issue. But certainly, if the Governor or someone appointed by him had come to me and asked me, I would have told them, Madam Speaker. But the matter was reported and the next thing I knew the press was calling asking me if I had any comments on the appointment of a Commission of Enquiry, which I knew nothing about. I had not even been advised. The press was advised before I was. And so that is how the game has been played, Madam Speaker.

Many people have come to me and said, 'We don't understand how you do this. How can you continue to do this in the face of all of this criticism?' Madam Speaker, it is very simple: this is my first time in office but politics is not new to me. I have been around politicians for quite a long time. I knew what to expect. And when I took the course that I decided to take to go down this road of making sure that this country knew the type of government that they had in office when they went into the elections in 2005, I did so in the face of advice that told me, 'You understand that when you go up against this kind of thing you are going to be attacked and attacked from every direction you can think about.' I understood that, Madam Speaker.

But you see, they underestimated me: I come from a very disciplined environment and I can maintain my cool and I can wait for them to ask questions and to make statements and I can respond calmly. I do not have to jump up and down and go all over the place and say all sorts of things. I know how to deal with those issues and so they were surprised at that.

But, Madam Speaker, all I can say is (and I have said this before, I have said it in the press briefing and on other occasions) no one can convince me to this day that the people in this country believe that exposing corruption is worse than the corruption itself. I know that there are more law abiding citizens and honest people in this country than there are criminals and corrupt people. So I go about my job as a legislator, a politician and as a representative of the people with that certain knowledge with confidence that the people in this country understand what has gone on. And, Madam Speaker, it is not for this Government to say that X, Y or Z should be charged with any criminal offence. That is not for us to decide. What we have said is that there were obviously some very, very serious issues and some serious irregularities going on. They have been validated by the Auditor General. So much so, Madam Speaker, that he has referred those matters to the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service for an investigation.

I don't know what the result is going to be; it is not for this Government to determine that. That is for the Police Department and the Legal Department to determine. What I do know, Madam Speaker, from my experience as a police officer, and it can be very frustrating sometimes, is that sometimes you know that a crime has been committed but you just can't come up with the evidence to prove it. And, Madam Speaker, that may very well be the case in respect of some of these things. We don't know. But what I do know is that the burden of proof, as far as the community is concerned, is quite a different matter, than the burden of proof in the courts of this country.

The community understands, Madam Speaker, what has occurred here. It does not matter what else happens after this point, you know. The community understands; they understand very, very clearly what has occurred. It reminds me of a case I had one time in court and my good friend, Mr. Kipling Douglas. I was presenting the case and the defense lawyer presented at the end, to say, that essentially there was no case to answer and that the person should be acquitted because the prosecutor had not discharged their burden of proof. And, Mr. Douglas responded by saying, 'Well, my view on the burden of proof is that the Crown must prove its case beyond a reasonable doubt, but the Crown is not required to prove its case beyond a shadow of a doubt'. So, I just make that distinction, Madam Speaker, because the community is wise.

One of the many things I can say about Caymanians: is that we are very wise people, Madam Speaker. We would not have been able to achieve the types of things that we were able to achieve back in the 1930s when so many of our Caymanian men went to sea with very little education, but yet, so many of them were able to become captains or chief engineers—and to take leadership roles in the Merchant Marines. That is something, Madam Speaker, that is very significant and it speaks to the type of people we are, and the intelligence that we have. I caution the Opposition to be very careful—they can fall into their own trap if they want. It does not matter to me. But they must realise the mistake they made in the last election and for them to believe that they can continue fooling the people of this country, they are making a very, very sad mistake.

Madam Speaker, I am going to turn now to some of the areas for which I have constitutional responsibility.

As outlined in the Throne Speech and the Policy Statement, my Ministry will continue to pursue policies and programmes aimed at sustainable development in the Cayman Islands, particularly in the Tourism and Commerce sectors. There is little doubt that as we face a rapidly changing world, uncertain economic times, and the real effects of climate change, a national paradigm shift is needed in the way that we live, work and interact with our natural environment. As the Minister with responsibility for the key economic drivers of tourism and commerce, and the first steward of our environment, it is our duty to set a course for our beloved Cayman Islands that promotes sustainable investment.

Madam Speaker, the Go East policy which was developed last year, seeks to encapsulate the promotion of an investment in tourism and commerce that complements the unique and pristine natural environment in the eastern districts. Therefore, the Go East policy will be fully realised in the 2008/2009 financial year by the stabling of the policy framework, the establishment of an integrated counsel and the creation of specially designated facilities within the eastern districts beginning in Bodden Town. This policy, Madam Speaker, pursues environmental, social and economic welfare in tourism and is guided by extensive input from residents and businesses within the eastern districts.

Madam Speaker, the subject of tourism is certainly very, very important. As I said earlier in my contribution, it is one of the main economic drivers in the country. And, Madam Speaker, I want to make reference, again, to some of the things that we hear, particularly on the morning talk show, and how we hear repeated references despite and in face of the statistics that are published publicly on the Department of Tourism's website with respect to air arrivals into this country. We hear repeated attempts and statements, actually, by the host of that show, about tourism being down.

Madam Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth and, in fact, you only need to ask those who work at our airport, whether they are working for the airlines, customs, immigration or in some other office or occupation at the airport. They will tell you the difference that they have seen in air arrivals in the last three years. Madam Speaker, I don't have to go through the statistics in detail, but I will say that from January 2006 up to the present time we have seen increases in air arrivals over the previous year. So, we compared month to month from 2006 to present and we have seen increases. Last year we ended the year 9.1 per cent ahead of 2006, and so far this year we are running about 9 per cent ahead of where we were in 2007.

So, just to give those three months very quickly: In January 2007 we had 23,726 air arrivals; January 2008 we have had 25,845. In February 2007 we had 27,947 air arrivals and in February 2008 we have had 30,380. In March 2007 we had 35,146 air arrivals and in March 2008 we have had 38,425.

Madam Speaker, I understand what is going on on the talk show. We understand that one of the hosts, Mr. Solomon in particular, has declared his candidacy already. So, he has already set himself up as a politician. Madam Speaker, my view on that is, that while there is nothing wrong with that, that is his right, the ethical thing for him to do each morning as he starts that radio show is to remind the public that he is seeking office in 2009 and that he is in opposition to the Government, so that he does not continue to portray himself as this neutral moderator or talk show host because that, Madam Speaker, is very, very deceptive. So let him declare his interest and go about his business and do his radio show; but do not start the show every morning as if he is this neutral moderator that is there to essentially serve the public. He has an interest. He has a conflict of interest, as a matter of fact, for as long as he does not declare that interest. And so, we will see where we go from there.

I am not going to even bother to table the statistics because they are available for public consumption. They are on the Department of Tourism's website. But I just wanted to speak briefly to cruise arrivals because we have seen a decrease in cruise arrivals. But, of course, last year and the year before that, in 2006, the big cry was that we had too many cruise visitors and that George Town was too crowded; that the sandbar was too crowded; that the West Bay road was too crowded that residents could not get from A to B because of cruise visitors. And now that we have had a slight decrease, and I say that Madam Speaker, because we still ended the year last year at some 1.7 million cruise visitors. So, that is something that many other Caribbean islands certainly wish they had. That is not an insignificant number. It is though a more manageable number for us, and I don't know why people would complain, other than for political reasons, at what is in effect a slight decrease in cruise arrivals.

Madam Speaker, I want to say that the Leader of the Opposition is constantly talking about how "you deal with the cruise industry". I am as familiar as he is with the cruise industry. And his attitude, as it is with everything, is to go in beating up his chest and raising his voice and trying to bully people. Well, Madam Speaker, that only works for certain audiences; it certainly does not work with big corporations like cruise lines. They haven't gotten to multi-million dollar profits by being stupid, and so they will sit and listen to people like the Leader of the Opposition and when he leaves the room they will have their little chuckle and go about their business.

Madam Speaker, this business today is about diplomacy. That is what it is about. In fact, the politics of the 21st century is about diplomacy, and that is how you operate. So, the style of the Leader of the Opposition, Madam Speaker, that is what we term "old school politics". It does not work anymore. It didn't work the last time and for some reason he thinks it is going to work this time. Well, we will see. But, Madam Speaker, when you get on the world stage and you are dealing with world leaders or you are dealing with major corporations, you have to have the ability to negotiate. Madam Speaker, there are even times when you're coming from a position of weakness where you don't have enough eggs in your basket. And I will just use as a very, very quick example, air services agreements, which is a very technical area but an area that we have been working on now for very many years because the air services agreement that we had in place many years ago was allowed to expire in March 2005—before we came into office—and that agreement had in it a number of protections for our National Flag Carrier. We have been working since that time to put a new agreement in place.

Madam Speaker, these are very, very technical areas. In fact, any good negotiator would understand that it is not your policymakers that you put at the negotiating table, because there is a tactical reason for that. And so, you put your technical people there. There is a point and time that the policymaker comes into the room or comes into the process, but you do not come in at the front end because that is what causes it to fail. I know some people have a different approach. The Leader of the Opposition likes to beat up his chest and talk about, 'Yes, you gotta do this and you gotta do that.' Madam Speaker, all that matters to us, all that matters to the Government, all that matters to the people are results. That is what matters. And you get that through intelligently debating and negotiating issues and being diplomatic. You don't get that by creating enemies.

Madam Speaker, there is so much more I could say about that but I do think that the art of diplomacy is certainly an area in which the Leader of the Opposition has been found wanting, and I will just leave it at that.

As far as cruise tourism is concerned, because I was speaking on the statistics, and I just wanted to say that in our discussions with the cruise lines and with people connected to the cruise lines, there are several things happening in cruise tourism right now, and one is that the demand for the Caribbean region as a whole has been dropping off and there are a few reasons for that—and they have said this to every Caribbean country—the Caribbean product is getting a bit stale. A lot of their passengers are repeat passengers. So if you have a combination of the Caribbean product being perceived as stale, coupled with a US recession, connected to the strength of the Euro, you automatically see a shift in demand for cruise from the US market to the European market. As a result the cruise industry has redeployed a number of their ships over to Europe.

To give an example, Madam Speaker, we have the Freedom class ships and there are three ships in that class. We have Freedom of the Seas and Liberty of the Seas (both of which call on Grand Cayman). The third ship, Independence of the Seas is about to be launched. In fact, it may have been in the last couple of weeks. But just to prove a point, Madam Speaker, when that ship was designed and when it actually went into production it was destined for the Caribbean when it came out of production. So, it was going to be on a Caribbean itinerary. The ship is now coming out of production and going straight to London. It is going to be based in London. So, that just shows you how the demand has shifted. It is not going to be that way forever.

The US economy is not always going to be as slow as it is now or in recession. That will change. Some people have estimated that it will last six months, some have said it will last eighteen; some have said that it will last several years. We don't know what the answer is, Madam Speaker. But we do know that at some point the US economy will bounce back. We know what we have to do with respect to our product, and we are going to do that. Once that happens and the US economy gets back into a stronger position, then the demand will shift again and ships will be redeployed again. That is just how economies work.

So we have to prepare for that, Madam Speaker. I only mentioned that because the spin that the Opposition will put on it is that Grand Cayman has essentially seen a decrease in cruise tourism and the rest of the Caribbean has not. The truth of the matter is, Madam Speaker, most of the major ports, like Jamaica and Puerto Rico, are in a similar position to Cayman; they have seen decreases. It is only the new ports that have seen increases in cruise arrivals and that is only because, in many cases, they are going from zero to something. So, they have seen increases because they have developed ports.

I also note in the contribution of the Leader of the Opposition (as I said, I was not here for it but I've read the Hansard) where he mentions Cuba, specifically with respect to cruise tourism. Madam Speaker, we have talked about Cuba. I have talked about it and we have done as a Government what he did not do as a Government, or as a Leader of the Opposition, or as Minister of Tourism. We have planned for it. We put it in our manifesto. We said that we were going to diversify our tourism markets, that we were going to be investing heavier in Europe and Canada. And we have done just that because Europe and Canada both have access to Cuba already. So, we have planned, Madam Speaker.

Do you know what? It is a pity that that type of planning did not take place ten or five years ago because we would have been further ahead now. But we have planned for the eventual opening of Cuba. My personal view is that that is not going to happen overnight. We have seen some changes in policy in Cuba itself and we are going to see some changes in policy in the United States. But Cuba, in my view, is going to be in turmoil for some time as it tries to make that transition from Communism to Democracy, and that type of environment is not going to bode well for tourism.

Be that as it may, Madam Speaker, Cuba is a beautiful country and it will eventually open up and become a significant issue for us in our primary market in the United States, and we are beginning to prepare for that. As we have said, we do not want to put all of our eggs in one basket.

As far as cruise tourism is concerned, we have discussed that issue as well, and islands like Cayman and Jamaica are in good positions geographically to benefit from Cuba. And we have had these discussions already, Madam Speaker. He talks about I don't talk to the cruise lines. I have meetings all the time with the cruise lines—very, very frequently—and I have discussed issues like Cuba with the cruise lines. I can tell you that their view on it is that they would not develop a Cuban itinerary in the same way that they have developed an Alaskan itinerary. So, they would not have an itinerary that leaves somewhere in South Florida and goes to seven or nine ports in Cuba. They simply wouldn't do that and they have their reasons for that. So what they have said is that whenever Cuba gets to that point where it opens up and where they have a new itinerary that includes Cuba that islands like Cayman and Jamaica will benefit from that because of our geographic location.

So, you may have something leaving out of Tampa, Fort Lauderdale or Miami, that would call on a port in Cuba, or perhaps two ports in Cuba, Jamaica, Cayman and, perhaps, Cozumel. So, that is how they intend to structure it and we will obviously work with them in that regard.

I want to say this about Cuba, Madam Speaker—Cuba is a member of the Caribbean Tourism Organisation. Cuba, unfortunately, is not allowed to attend meetings of the CTO in the United States, as an example, because their Minister cannot get a visa to go. But Cuba is very much a member of the Caribbean Tourism Organisation. And so, it is wise for all Caribbean countries not to see Cuba as the enemy, but to see Cuba as someone that they can partner with, in respect to tourism, because it makes sense for that to happen. Already, Madam Speaker, on our Cayman Airways flights to Havana we have been picking up some European traffic coming through Cuba.

Those are the types of possibilities that exist. Those are the types of opportunities that exist. And so, as we move forward as we look at the developments and watch very, very carefully the developments in Cuba, we understand that not only are there challenges with respect to Cuba opening up, but there are also some great opportunities. And, Madam

Speaker, we fully intend to pursue those opportunities as we move forward.

So contrary to what the Leader of the Opposition has said, and very much unlike him and his government, this Government has planned for the eventual opening of Cuba to the tourism market.

Madam Speaker, as the 2008/2009 fiscal year begins, the Department of Tourism is going to be initiating work on updating a tourism economic impact study. When it is completed the Ministry and Department of Tourism will then have much better economic insights which will enhance the policy development and decision making with respect to tourism and the tourism industry, and will also allow us to better allocate and reallocate resources.

Madam Speaker, in the last four years we have had significant increase in funding to the Department of Tourism for product development and human capital development, and this has certainly resulted in a number of new initiatives and programmes. At the end of the day, the Department of Tourism has essentially two focuses: We have to focus on promoting and marketing the destination to make sure that we keep visitation where it ought to be and where it needs to be to keep the economy going, and at the same time we need to make sure that we develop our product so that it remains strong and that is it not perceived, as I said earlier, as being stale. An important part of that product, Madam Speaker, is in fact, our people. And I am going to speak to a very important programme in a few minutes with respect to that.

Given the challenges that we have certainly faced, and when I say 'we' I mean the world because the world economy is facing challenges now. The US, in particular, as I've said, is in some difficulty. So, we have had to be very, very careful with how we allocate resources and have had to be more strategic with our marketing efforts. The Department of Tourism continues to certainly work harder and smarter so that we get the best value that we possibly can from the investment that we make in tourism.

Madam Speaker, three years ago the Government was certainly acutely aware of the importance that the National Tourism Management Policy had for the country and we were determined to update and implement a revised National Tourism Management Policy. The consultant hired, actually by the previous government to do the tourism management policy, was also hired by this Government to essentially update the policy because not very much of the recommendations that are contained in the policy had been implemented. And I will grant the Opposition this, as they were the government at the time, that a lot of disruption was caused as a result of Hurricane Ivan. Many of the implementation plans were not able to be achieved because of the focus that had to be placed on recovery. And so, many of the recommendations simply needed to be enhanced, reworked and reordered with some new recommendations, of course. But many of the things that had been recommended under the old policy are still very pertinent and very live issues that we need to address.

Madam Speaker, I am also pleased to say that the Department of Tourism and Cayman Airways continue to work together in a strong, smart and strategic manner. Cooperation exists at all levels of both organisations. And while each organisation has a unique business purpose with its own set of goals and objectives, there are multitudes of instances where the two can, should, and do work together.

As an example, the Department of Tourism provides marketing, promotions and public relations services for the National Airline in the United States at no cost, allowing the country to benefit from significant economies of scale and cost savings. And the marketing teams in both organisations work very closely together.

Moving beyond a marketing relationship, the Department of Tourism and Cayman Airways also work together in the area of product development and training. The National Service Excellence Standards Initiative, which has now successfully been branded as Cayman Pride (and Pride standing for personal responsibility in delivering excellence) was made available to Cayman Airways at no additional cost, allowing the National Airline to save significant dollars, and at the same time, allow it to develop a vigorous, measurable and customised programme to raise customer awareness levels across all of the customer touch points of the airline experience.

So, that programme is not finished. It is quite a robust programme. Even after the initial training and programmes are implemented there is a maintenance component to that programme that ensures, going forward, that all of the agencies, including Cayman Airways, has a maintenance programme in place that is capable of being audited and that corrective measures are able to be put in place as soon as we recognise that something has gone wrong. Cayman Airways is currently the only tourism partner which is currently receiving every component of the Cayman Pride programme.

Madam Speaker, I mentioned the very shaky state of the US economy. As far back as the Tourism Conference in 2007, we were talking about the whole issue of the US economy. So, long before we heard mention made, even within political circles in Washington about the state of the economy, we were talking. I was talking about this in my remarks at the Tourism Conference at the Marriott, about the unusual number of foreclosures that we had noticed in the US market, and that this was something that as a department and Ministry we were following very, very closely because we had concerns about it. And here we are today, understanding that the US economy has significantly slowed and is more than likely in a recession as we speak. So, we had begun to think about this and prepare for this from some time ago.

I hosted a meeting in New York last year, Madam Speaker, at which we talked about this issue and we talked about mitigation plans for this downturn in the US economy. We came up with some ideas, some mitigation plans. Those meetings that had started in New York were continued in Grand Cayman where we brought in our private sector. We talked about partnerships, we talked about the issues and how best we could put our money together and get the best of value that we could for the country. Madam Speaker, I want to thank the private sector for their efforts and for the time that they invested in sitting down with us discussing these issues. Clearly, they too understood the importance of this.

Madam Speaker, we spent some long hours talking about strategies and programmes, talking about the competition, talking about what to anticipate and how best to address it. And I want to say now, that during the winter season we are very fortunate to . . . Let me put it this way: The visitors that we get during the winter season are traditionally visitors who have a significant amount of disposable income. And they are what we term as recession proof visitors. So, we are not too concerned about our winter season. We're just about to come out of the winter season and coming out in a very strong position ahead of where we were last year.

My concern, Madam Speaker, and the Department of Tourism's concern is the summer because the visitors who come to our shores in the summer – that come to the region in the summer – do not necessarily have the level of disposable income that those who come to us in the winter have. So, that is an issue for us and because of the state of the US economy, we expect that whatever negative impact we see, we will see that during the summer months, and so we have been preparing for that and trying to gear up our mitigation programmes to deal with that.

Madam Speaker, only because it would put us in a somewhat uncompetitive position if I were to go into detail with respect to those programmes, that is really the only reason why I don't feel it is right for me to go into any detail about those programmes because competition is a real issue.

Madam Speaker, I can tell you when I came into tourism in 1997, it really was not that competitive. I mean it was almost as simple as you build it and they would come. It is not like that anymore. We have seen tourism destinations emerging in places that we did not expect because people understand the value of the tourism dollar. And, I mentioned this on a previous occasion in this House, but when you see states like Colorado in the United States, states that are landlocked—yes, they have lakes but they are landlocked—promoting scuba diving, you understand very clearly how fierce the competition is. They create beautiful artificial reefs in these lakes and they promote scuba diving in Colorado. So, think about that! Scuba diving and skiing! I mean skiing in the snow and at certain times a year scuba diving.

I just mentioned that, but we have other issues such as on the cruise side where we have seen where cruise lines have gone and just bought vacant plots of land on the Mexican coast, and they have just gone and invested in infrastructure. They have created their own little ports. They have put roads in just to service the port, they have put in electricity, water, everything; they have just created a Port of Call, and they go to that. We have seen them buy islands in the Bahamas; we know that they are actively looking at some Cays in the Gulf of Mexico, which they are looking at to develop as Ports of Call.

Madam Speaker, there are places in the world today that in 1997 no one would have ever imagined that they would be tourism destinations, but yet, they're very much on the charts; they are very active. And so, the Caribbean region as a whole has recognised that. We have had these discussions at the Caribbean Tourism Organisation level. Ministers have had caucuses on this and we have talked about the Caribbean in general and how to promote the region.

As far as individual promotions and marketing strategies are concerned, that is something for individual countries to do. But as a region, the Caribbean Tourism Organisation plays a very, very significant role.

So, Madam Speaker, it is not how it used to be. We have to work smarter. We have to be more creative and more targeted than we have ever been before. As I said, I am not going to go into a lot of detail. We have a lot of programmes ongoing with the private sector that we hope will mitigate the impact of the US recession and that we are able to, at least, keep our numbers in the summer to where they were last year. And, if we are able to exceed them then, of course, Madam Speaker, we will be very happy about that.

I wanted to speak about two promotions that we are doing and one is a strategic partner with Nickelodeon and we have partnered with Nickelodeon before, Madam Speaker. This one is a different type of partnership. But, as we know, Nickelodeon is the single most powerful brand, which speaks to the family market in the United States. And I remind us again that the United States is our primary market. We get some 80 per cent of our visitors from the US market.

Madam Speaker, the targeted advertising and promotions would advise our target audience that one of their best loved characters, Diego, is visiting the Cayman Islands this summer. Diego will meet them at Cayman Islands Sea School and will talk to them about the importance of the environment using our Sea Turtles, Blue Iguanas and rare parrots as examples. Members of the House and community will be hearing more about this promotion as we go forward, and we expect that this will trigger additional visitation to the Cayman Islands in the summer.

Madam Speaker, our research has proven to us—and let us remember now that a big segment of our target audience is the family market—that in most instances when a family is planning a vacation (and when we say family, we are not necessarily talking about teenagers; we are talking about young kids) that you would be surprised at the influence that those kids have on their parents with respect to which destination they are going to vacation in. And so, that is the rationale, Madam Speaker, for this partnership.

The other promotion I wish to mention, Madam Speaker, is "Cayman Knockout Championship Boxing", which will take place in the Cayman Islands on the 20 June [2008] and will be the first in our history, a live televised broadcast from the Cayman Islands on Showtime. And this will bring championship boxing. It will be a two-hour broadcast and included in that broadcast will be promotional footage of the destination, and at segments throughout the two-hour period, in between the fights, we will have additional promotion of the Cayman Islands. As the announcers come on each time to talk about the event, they will say, 'this is Showtime championship boxing live from the Cayman Islands', or some words to that effect. Our brand (our logo) will be placed in the ring. So, as you know, during boxing that is where the focus is, it's in the ring, and so people will see the Cayman Islands and or the CaymanIslands.ky website advertised there throughout the event.

We have already had press conferences in the United States to announce this. We had a whirlwind tour essentially of the US where we went from Miami to San Francisco to New York and back home in three days, two and a half days, actually. We did press conference after press conference, so we had a significant turnout at all of those events. We had all of the major media there. We had all the major networks: we had the Associated Press and a lot of these networks and media houses have picked up the story, they have been running with it. It has been on blogs; it's been on various websites and our public relations unit is tracking that.

Madam Speaker, there will be additional promotion opportunities leading up to the event. We have a number of promotional opportunities that will occur, and the US media will also follow those, including the weigh-in the week of the fight. And the boxers will also be doing a number of community outreach programmes going into the schools. They have already visited the boxing gym here and they will be doing more of that. And, if not before the fight certainly after the fight, the boxers will also have an opportunity to do additional community outreach.

So, Madam Speaker, this, as I said is a live broadcast on Showtime that will bring awareness about the Cayman Islands into the homes of millions of Americans and others around the world. Madam Speaker, if we had to pay for the level of exposure that this event is going to give us, it would be in the millions of dollars. So, we see this as something that we are going to get significant value for money from.

I just want to mention here briefly, Madam Speaker, because this has been a topical issue, and our own fighter, Mr. Charles Whittaker, we have been in dialogue with him. As you know, Madam Speaker, because we feel so strongly about Charles' participation in this event, we have offered him more than four times what fighters in his category would be offered. And last week we got a response from Charles' trainer that said they would not accept that offer. We had given them a deadline because clearly we need to move ahead with our planning and we need to know who the fighters are going to be; the promoter needs to know that. So, the deadline had passed with them saying no to the offer.

Madam Speaker, we did get an e-mail from them, I think it was today—I'm just looking at it now. Actually, it came in yesterday, on Sunday, to the Department of Tourism, which indicated that Charles is willing to fight for the amount that we have offered him. Now, Madam Speaker, I feel good about this because I really want to ensure that Charles is a part of this. This is why I took him all the way to Las Vegas with me when I first came up with this concept because I wanted him to be a part of this event. I took the unprecedented step of involving him in what was a business meeting just so that he would understand the concept.

But I made it clear that there were essentially two objectives: the primary one was a promotion of the destination to bring awareness to the destination. And to the extent that we could use that promotion to further his career as a boxer, we were more than happy to do that; that was the right thing to do. And so, we have moved along in that direction and all I can say at this point is that he has indicated he will fight for the $20,000 but he's also introduced—and I need to say this so the country will be aware—some additional demands into this letter which some things are outside of our control so I cannot make any commitment to him in relation to that. And one of the things is in relation to his training, of course, which falls under the Ministry of Sports. That is a matter which I intend to speak with the Minister of Sports about. But we have just only received this e-mail from his trainer and I continue to hope that we will be able to move beyond this and make sure that we can in fact, have Charles Whittaker participate in this event.

Madam Speaker, no one can say that this Government, and in particular the Minister of Sports and myself, have not supported Charles. We have promoted his fights; we have given him sponsorship. The last occasion I requested (and Cayman Airways agreed) to fly in somewhere between twelve and fifteen people in relation to his fight and that was an expense that he did not have to pick up. So we have supported him every step of the way, and we are certainly hoping that he will be a part of this very, very important event. It is an event, Madam Speaker, that if he takes on the correct opponent, it can certainly take his career to the next level.

It is a type of event at which executives from Showtime will be present. They will be familiar with the event and people that matter in that particular sport will begin to notice him in a way that perhaps he hasn't been noticed before. So, it is simply in his interest for him to come on board.

As things develop with that, Madam Speaker, I will certainly keep the country informed about it.

Madam Speaker, can I just have an indication of how much time I have left so I can plan my debate accordingly?

The Speaker: From my quick calculation I think it is about thirty-five minutes. I don't know if the Clerk can confirm that or say if it is more or less.

[pause]

Hon. Charles E. Clifford: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: [addressing the Clerk] How much is it?

Hon. Charles E. Clifford: I hope you are taking the last two minutes out of it.

Hon. Charles E. Clifford: Madam Speaker, I will assume that I have thirty-two minutes. Is that correct? Thirty-two? Okay.

Madam Speaker, I want to move on now to the Tourism Apprenticeship Training Council, which I appointed in August 2005. This is a programme that as a government we are very, very proud of. We have said from the very beginning that we would be focusing on education and so too has the tourism industry.

Before going into some detail about this, I just wanted to essentially put on record my gratitude to the Council and the important work that they have done since they were appointed in 2005, and I want to quickly identify them. The coaches of the Tourism Apprenticeship Training Council are: Mr. Daniel Szydlowski, the General Manager of the Westin; Mrs. Belinda Blessit-Vincent who is at the University College of the Cayman Islands. My colleague, the Third Elected Member for George Town, Ms. Lucille Seymour; Mrs. Juliette Du Feu; Mr. Philip Scott, from the Department of Employment Relations; Dr. Elsa Cummings, who is from the International College of the Cayman Islands; Miss Wendy Jackson, who is at Cayman Airways; Mrs. Chevala Burke from District Administration; Mr. Chris Sariego, who is the Acting General Manager of the Ritz Carlton Grand Cayman; Mr. Gerry Kirkconnell from the merchants sector; and Ms. Karie Bergstrom, who is the past president of the Cayman Islands Tourism Association. And, of course, Madam Speaker, the Council is supported by representatives and staff of the Department and Ministry of Tourism.

Madam Speaker, the Tourism Apprenticeship Training programme provides participants with vocational skills and combines the on-the-job training at tourism accommodations and restaurants with classroom learning at the University College of the Cayman Islands and the International College of the Cayman Islands. The Tourism Apprenticeship Training programme is a fulltime programme lasting 38 weeks and successful students will walk away with the recognised CARIBCERT Certification. This is a regional certification, Madam Speaker, that is recognised internationally.

This year was the pilot year and it has been successful. We had 20 students enrolled in the programme and while we are not going to end the programme with 20 students (it is probably going to be more like 17, I believe), the second class of students will begin in September 2008. And, Madam Speaker, because we feel so strongly about this programme and the importance of the programme to the country and to the tourism industry, the Government has in effect doubled the budget for the next fiscal year. Rather than enrolling 20 students in the new class beginning in September, we will be enrolling a total of 40 students in the Tourism Apprenticeship Training programme. The Graduation ceremony for the current year will be announced a little later on and I certainly look forward to participating in that.

Just this morning I met with one of our apprentices before coming to this honourable House and this is a young lady, Miss Bethany Ebanks, who is involved in the culinary side and, in particular, she wants to do some specialisation in pastries and things like that, and she is seeking a scholarship as soon as she is finished with this programme to study at an institution, perhaps in Europe, where she can gain an additional diploma that is specific to that area.

Madam Speaker, the tourism scholarship programme is primarily geared to tertiary education and so the type of programme that this apprentice would want to pursue when she is finished with this programme is one that would not necessarily fall within the tourism scholarship programme. But, my view is that we have to be flexible about that. If we have students in Cayman who are interested in areas like this (which we don't have a lot of them) we have to do everything that we possibly can as a government to make sure that they maintain that interest. So, I made the commitment today that we will ensure that that young lady has the opportunities that she desires to take her further into that industry to make sure that she is certified.

I, myself, Madam Speaker, have appeared on several talk shows with some of the apprentices and I can tell you that they are very keen about the tourism industry, and the level of interest in the tourism industry today is much higher than it was even five years ago. And, I believe that people in Cayman are beginning to recognise that the tourism sector is certainly one that can be very lucrative. You need to take your eye off the base pay sometimes, because people in the industry will tell you that the bulk of their earnings come from gratuities. That is an area that is very important to workers in the tourism industry. It is a very lucrative industry, whether you're in management or on the service part of it, working in food and beverage. Food and beverage, in particular, can be very lucrative just from the tips alone. And people who work in that industry, as I said, will tell you that.

Madam Speaker, the programme is predominantly aimed at high school seniors and graduates interested in tourism hospitality. The programme is designed to create a cadre of Caymanian hospitality professionals in occupations traditionally, as I said, underrepresented by Caymanians but with respectable compensation levels and career potential. Career options, at this point in time under the programme includes front office operations, food preparation, food and beverage operations and housekeeping supervisory. So, people in the country will be hearing more and more about the Tourism Apprenticeship Training Programme, which is a programme that this Government embarked upon because we felt that it was more viable, more effective, and would be more attractive than a hospitality services training centre.

What this programme allows, Madam Speaker, is a true partnership with the private sector where these students in their final semester are placed in employment in the private sector and they get to interact with real guests. They get to work alongside professionals and gain the type of experience that we need them to have to work effectively in the industry. And, perhaps as important as anything else, the private sector is partially funding this programme and we are very grateful to them for that.

Madam Speaker, the SEPP programme, which is the environmental programme for the tourism sector, is a joint initiative between the Department of Tourism and Environment and the Tourism Private Sector for improved environmental performance within the industry. Phase 1, which lasts 18 months and runs through the 2008/2009 fiscal year, began in the second quarter of 2008 and includes the tourist accommodations sector. Pilot properties include the Southern Cross Club, Little Cayman Beach Resort and Pirates Point Resort, in Little Cayman; and Compass Pointe, Sunshine Suites and Cobalt Coast Resort. Madam Speaker, we also expect the Mango Manor in Cayman Brac to join the programme. So, we will have properties from all three islands included in this environmental programme.

The 2008/2009 fiscal year will see environmental audits completed on each property and recommendations made for improvements and environmental performance. An environmental management system will then be implemented with the ultimate goal of having the properties achieved—Green Globe 21 Certification—by the end of the 18 months. Also included (very importantly in phase 1) is the greening of the Department of Tourism and the Department of Environment, an exploration and investigation into Destination Certification for Little Cayman, which if successfully completed would be trailblazing in this region.

The benefits associated with this initiative are many and include reduced operational cost through improved efficiencies; reduced impact on the environment through sustainable tourism practices; widened market appeal to environmentally conscious travellers and tour operators; and, of course, gaining a competitive edge; enhancement of the quality of services; the fostering of good team spirit among staff; increase in customers' satisfaction by improving the tourism product; and improved relationships with the community by helping to preserve a healthy environment.

Madam Speaker, it is a very important programme and I look forward with certainly great anticipation to the progress on that initiative because it is so important to what we do when it comes to sustainable tourism.

Turning now, Madam Speaker, to Cayman Airways: Cayman Airways continues to fulfill its business plans started almost two years ago and has completed over 65 per cent of its identified action items all aimed at ensuring that the airline operates as a business and as efficiently as possible, despite the challenges faced because its unique position nationally and internationally.

The National Airline realised significant cost savings when employees in Grand Cayman were brought under one roof when the new headquarters officially opened in July 2007. Ten departments are now located within the new headquarter building. These are the administration, finance, operations, IT, reservations, city ticket office, cargo, human resources, commercial, and CAL Express. The moving to the new headquarters has eliminated rented locations at Caymanian Village, AVCOM building, Dorcy Drive, Andy's building and Mirco Centre. Madam Speaker, as I've said, the airline has been able to achieve significant cost savings as a result of establishing its new headquarters and I say again, that this was another item for which I took significant criticism.

Madam Speaker, that notwithstanding, I was determined to do this for Cayman Airways and for the country, and there was no criticism that was going to stop me, because, Madam Speaker, quite simply, the criticism was unnecessary. And again, the reason the Opposition chooses to criticise on these issues is because they can't find anything to accuse us of. They can't say that we are corrupt, but they know that we have been working hard and very hard, and they're concerned about our achievements. They know that we are going to have a lot to talk about in the next campaign, therefore, they have attacked us at every step of the way with everything that we have done to try to throw, as they say, a monkey wrench in it to stop it from happening so that we would not be in a position as a Government to say that it was done during our term.

Well, Madam Speaker, they should know by now that we are a determined bunch and when we make a commitment to the country, we believe on following through with that commitment and where we are not able to follow through with the commitment, we give an explanation as to why we could not do so.

Madam Speaker, the Airline has also embarked on a new brand enhancement campaign. This new look and feel dovetails with the renewed focus on the way business is done within the organisation. The Cayman Airways brand is symbolic of all of our people of all three Islands and it is best represented in our Flag and Coat of Arms. So far, Madam Speaker, we have had one of our 737-300 aircrafts with the new livery. Over time other items, including uniforms, other airplanes and stationery will carry the new branding. And, in fact, Madam Speaker, we have just recently acquired our third 737-300 aircraft, which is currently at Coopesa in Costa Rica, which is our heavy maintenance facility. That aircraft will be arriving in Grand Cayman towards the end of this month with the new livery and will go into service shortly thereafter.

Madam Speaker, with the assistance of the Lufthansa consultants we have appointed a new executive management team. I know that everyone is familiar with them now so I won't take the time to go into detail, but simply to thank them for the hard work that they have done since they have been in office. I mentioned during Finance Committee recently that Captain Chris Bergstrom had taken a decision to step down as VP (Vice President) of flight operations to pursue a private business interest, and he has since decided that he, in addition to pursuing that interest, will go back on line as an operational pilot and captain. We are very, very happy to hear of Captain Bergstrom's decision in that regard. At the same time (I took the occasion in Finance Committee, and I will do it again) I congratulate Captain Olsen Anderson on his appointment as Captain Bergstrom's replacement, and to wish Captain Anderson every success in his new post.

Madam Speaker, this year Cayman Airways is celebrating its 40th Anniversary. I want to take this opportunity again (as I did in Finance Committee) to congratulate the Airline on their achievements over the years. There has been a steady hand with respect to the Cayman Islands economy. Cayman Airways built the tourism industry; Cayman Airways has maintained the tourism industry and the economy, for that matter, for 40 years. We have been through difficult times. We have been through 911; we have been through Hurricane Ivan, and no doubt we will have challenges in the future. And, I can say without fear of contradiction, that every time, were it not for Cayman Airways, this economy would have been in serious trouble. We would not have been able to rebuild as quickly as we have been able to.

And, Madam Speaker, what makes an airline work, what makes a business work, is its people, its employees. I want to pay special tribute to the dedicated staff of Cayman Airways. Madam Speaker, we can't say too much and we can't thank the staff at Cayman Airways too much. They go above and beyond the call of duty every day of their lives and I try my best at every opportunity to meet with them, whether it is one on one, whether it is in a staff meeting, whether it is socially, to tell them that. And. So far, since I have been Minister, I believe I have had four staff meetings with them. I'm having another tomorrow evening. In fact, it is more of a social type of event to essentially kick off what will be several months of events celebrating its 40th Anniversary.

So, Madam Speaker, I encourage everyone—Members of this House, members of the community—whenever you are interacting with the Cayman Airways staff, give them words of encouragement. Thank them for their service, and essentially, just let them know that you appreciate what they do, and the National Airline.

As part of the collaborative effort between the Minister of Tourism and the Department of Tourism, Cayman Airways added New York to its list of destinations in June 2007 with direct flights from JFK [Airport]. Madam Speaker, this flight has significantly enhanced the airlift to the Cayman Islands, and I can tell you if you speak to the tourism properties on island, particularly the hotels, they will tell you that the New York service has made a significant difference. We are running very, very good load factors on that flight. We are very pleased with it.

Madam Speaker, as you know we launched that service with a frequency of three times a week last year, and by the height of the winter season, because of demand we had to increase that frequency to five times a week. And so, we will adjust the frequency as we go along into the summer when things slow down a bit but we fully expect that as we enter the next winter season we will go back into that mode of increasing frequency into the New York market.

Madam Speaker, as part of our efforts to simplify the fleet and to further streamline its offerings to the travelling public, Cayman Airways has recently retired two of its purchased 737-200 aircrafts and replaced them with new and more efficient 737-300s. The two Twin Otter aircrafts that we have to complement the weekly jet service to our Sister Islands, I am pleased to say that as a result of representation from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, we have looked at the Cayman Brac jet schedule after the recent adjustments and recognised that there were some issues with it that were not in the best interests of the Sister Islands. So, we have essentially reworked the schedule, Madam Speaker, to put it back to what it was so that the jets are going back into the Brac around 5.30 pm, I think it is, in the evenings from Thursday to Sunday, and coming back out the next morning.

In addition to that, Madam Speaker, we have further enhanced the jet service by adding some additional jet service, and this is all about aircraft placement and positioning aircraft for the following day as well. But, because it presents an opportunity to enhance service to Cayman Brac, we are going to continue on Fridays and Sundays the flight 107 which goes into Cayman Brac late at night and comes back out early in the morning. The reason for that, Madam Speaker, is because the two evening flights that go up on Fridays and Sundays at 5.30 pm will go up and come straight back out. So, because these are going to be scheduled flights we have the opportunity to sell both legs. The reason why that flight is coming straight back out is because that aircraft then has to go to Jamaica to service Jamaica.

Madam Speaker, just let me say something very quickly about that because when I took office we had five jets in our fleet and the aircraft utilisation was at 4.5 hours per day; very, very low—4.5 hours per aircraft per day. Industry standards, Madam Speaker, are somewhere between 12 and 15 hours a day. The bottom line was that we had too many jets for our network. So, going forward, our jet fleet is going to consist of three 737-300 aircrafts. Madam Speaker, what that does, is allow us to be more efficient, to utilise our aircrafts better, and it moves the utilisation of the aircraft from 4.5 hours to 10.4, I think, per day.

So, we're getting closer and closer to industry standards and, as I said, it just speaks to one of the efficiencies that we have been able to introduce at Cayman Airways.

Now, Madam Speaker, for a very important announcement: Again, as it relates to Cayman Brac, the Government asked some months ago for the Cayman Airways Board of Directors—and I need to just pause here to thank the Board of Directors because they too have been working extremely hard over the last several years on behalf of the county and the Airline. They have put in a tremendous amount of hours and I want to thank the Chairperson, Ms. Angelyn Hernandez and all of her directors for all of the very, very hard work and the commitment to our National Flag Carrier, Cayman Airways.

Madam Speaker, I asked the Board of Directors a few months ago—again this was at the request of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—to do a feasibility study into acquiring larger turboprop aircrafts for the Sister Islands, because we wanted to look at the enhanced service coupled with the efficiencies that it would bring because of additional opportunities for us in the region. Madam Speaker, the Board of Directors was very careful with their analysis. They looked at options within the region. They looked at average load factors. They looked at average fares. They looked at the current fleet. They looked at the infrastructure in Little Cayman. They looked at every component that you could imagine would have an impact, either positively or negatively on the feasibility study. The end result is that the recommendation is to acquire the larger turboprop aircrafts. So, the Government has taken the decision, and I am pleased to announce that today, that we will be acquiring two larger turboprop aircrafts to service Cayman Brac and a number of other regional routes.

Madam Speaker, these are going to be [aircrafts with] fifty seats, and they are not the Dash-8, they're not the ATRs that you heard the Leader of the Opposition blabbering on about. We are actually looking and have decided on the acquisition of the SAAB-2000 aircraft. And it is a fifty-seater aircraft, as I have said, Madam Speaker. The reason we have decided to go in this direction is because the SAAB aircraft is in effect a much better turboprop aircraft. It flies at a much higher altitude. It can fly as high as 31,000 feet; it flies a lot faster at 425 miles an hour. So, on a flight from here to Miami, as an example, Madam Speaker, it will only be ten minutes longer on the SAAB aircraft and you can fly a lot higher.

Madam Speaker, the altitude is important because in the summer months, in particular, and particularly over Cuba, you have a lot of cloud cover. And the ATRs and the Dash-8s, their altitude is certainly restricted and you would have to be flying through a lot of that cloud cover and it would not make for a very good ride. So, we have taken the decision to go with the SAAB-2000 for the reasons that I have already stated. So, the Airline's Board of Directors is moving rapidly in that direction. They're actively going to be engaging in negotiations. I will be bringing the necessary resolution to this honourable House to deal with the matter, because as we know, when it comes on airlift, strategic airlift and airlift to our Sister Islands of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Cayman Airways is not just an airline; it serves so many different purposes. And it does require the support of the Government.

When I discussed this in Finance Committee, the Opposition made the commitment that if we came with the recommendation they would support it, and we are coming with the recommendation, Madam Speaker. And we are going to be enhancing service to Cayman Brac, we are going to be enhancing service to Little Cayman, and we are going to be enhancing service regionally. I'm not going to get into the detail of the various areas that we have looked at, but I can tell you, Madam Speaker, that we are going to be enhancing service regionally in Central America, we are going to be enhancing service in Cuba, and we are going to be enhancing service in South Florida. What it also allows us to do, Madam Speaker, is direct flights from either Miami or Tampa or somewhere in South Florida, directly into the Brac. So, the Brac will also have an opportunity for direct airlift from the South Florida market.

Madam Speaker, I believe that by the end of the year, although we don't have confirmation on this yet, that we will be in a position to introduce these two aircrafts into the fleet in the feasibility analysis done by Cayman Airways. We have looked at the option of keeping the Twin Otters, which we have to keep anyway, because we don't have the infrastructure built in Little Cayman yet to accommodate the SAAB. But, either way, Madam Speaker, even assuming we had that infrastructure, there are things and ways we can structure the route network that would make sense for us to keep the Twin Otters at this time. But, I believe, that once we get that infrastructure in place there may be a case for the Twin Otters to then be sold and the fleet will then consist, as I said earlier, of the three 737-300 aircrafts and the two SAAB-2000 aircrafts.

Madam Speaker, it also presents opportunities for our young aspiring pilots to [do], as they have done with Cayman Airways Express and on the Twin Otters. That is essentially where a lot of them start with their training and they move up, eventually promoted to take on the responsibilities of flying the jets. So, we feel good about this, Madam Speaker. We feel good about the decision and about the enhanced service, and what it is going to do for the enhanced operations of Cayman Airways. As we are in a position to announce more about this we will certainly do so.

Madam Speaker, I have also mentioned . . . and Members will be very familiar because we've only just finished our debate in Finance Committee where we had to seek additional funding for Cayman Airways because of the fuel cost and the point at which fuel is at now per barrel. Madam Speaker, you know, since I spoke on that issue in Finance Committee last week (I think it was last week) fuel has already gone up $6 more per barrel. I think it might have gone up $7 a barrel since I spoke. So, I cautioned them that we were not at the end of the road with respect to the fuel issue, but I highlighted very importantly that were it not for the efficiencies that we were able to achieve as a result of the audit and the implementation of the audit, we would be in a much worse position. I mean I would have been coming here asking for probably $15 million instead of $4 [million]. But we have been able to make those efficiencies.

The other thing we have looked at, Madam Speaker, is that had fuel stayed where it was when we prepared the current budget 18 months ago, we would be $2 million better than the budget today. But because of fuel being where it is at, we have had these challenges. And it not just us; we've heard about all of the bankruptcies in the United States and in other parts of the world with airlines. I think four airlines have gone out of business and actually stopped operating in the last three or four weeks in the United States alone. And then we've seen strategic partnerships developing between Delta and Northwest, which, if it happens, Madam Speaker, that will create the world's largest airline—if that merger happens. And that is all about trying to survive.

We have seen American go up against their rival, Continental, and British Airways. They have actually gone with them and had discussions with them about joint marketing programmes. And it is all about trying to survive this issue with respect to fuel.

Madam Speaker, it is certainly not going to be easy for the Airline. It is not going to be easy for any airline. And, as I said, during Finance Committee, the aviation industry is heading into crisis because of fuel cost. And, Madam Speaker, fuel cost is actually linked as well to the food crisis that we are facing in the world. So, all of these things must be taken into consideration. But I know, Madam Speaker—I speak with confidence when I say that my colleagues, certainly my colleagues on this side of the House understand the importance of Cayman Airways to this economy. As I said, during Finance Committee, cost what it will, we have to support it because the cost of not supporting it is significantly more, Madam Speaker. There is no doubt about that! It is not even an option, as my colleagues have said.

Madam Speaker, I guess I got two minutes left.

The Speaker: I would assume that is what time it is supposed to be complete. But if you're going to be completed within the next ten minutes, I believe I do have the discretion to . . . once you're going to make it very short, not carry it into half an hour.

Hon. Charles E. Clifford: I would appreciate you using your discretion, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, the Department of Environment is obviously a very important department. We have had the whole issue of a national sustainable development framework under discussion for some time and in preparation for this the Department of Environment established a sustainable development unit 18 months ago to prepare for this framework. Madam Speaker, we have legislation in draft form, the National Conservation Bill that has been around now for many years. It actually started under the previous administration but they never took it anywhere. This Government has certainly had additional consultation. We have listened to stakeholder groups and, Madam Speaker, I will say what I have said so many other times and that is that the Government—any government, not just this one—does not have the option of serving just one interest so we can't just look at the environmental side, or we can't just look at the development side and pick sides. We have to look at the full implication of everything we do; look at all interests and put it together, make sense out of it and make what we believe to be the best decision in the interest of the country.

The same is true with this legislation. We have taken on board some suggestions. We have amended the draft. And I am going to be discussing it with my colleagues again very shortly at caucus and we are going to work through it until we get an acceptable Bill to bring to this honourable House.

Madam Speaker, let me say now, I am certainly not (as I said earlier) living in any fantasy world. I know that this legislation is going to bring strong opinions on both sides. All I will say about it is this: I will remind the Cayman Islands community of what happened when we introduced the Marine Conservation Laws of this country. The country was divided over it. The leaders of the day took the decisions that they knew they had to take in the best interest of the country and in the best interest of future generations. Madam Speaker, many of the opponents to the Marine Conservation Law, many of them today will tell you, they will honestly tell you, 'You know it's a good thing we put that in place when we did because if we didn't we wouldn't have any conch today; we wouldn't have any lobster; we wouldn't have many species of fish'.

Madam Speaker, the National Conservation Bill is similar in nature in terms of its implications. In fact, not preceding with it has even greater implications of not proceeding—or, if the government of the day then, not preceding with the Marine Conservation Law.

So, Madam Speaker, it is going to say the least, a healthy debate when that Bill comes before this honourable House. But we need to think, not just about ourselves and about our existence. We need to think about our children, or grandchildren, their children and their grandchildren, because we need to leave behind—we have an obligation to leave behind the proper framework, whether that is legislative policy or otherwise that will take the Cayman Islands well into the next century and that will ensure that this success story that we call the Cayman Islands lives on forever and ever and ever, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I know my time is limited. I had a lot more to say but I am going to end by saying that, yes, I know that I have been attacked and I know that I will be attacked again in the future. Madam Speaker, I am prepared for all of that. I have fought battles before and I will fight battles again. And, as I said, I don't think the Opposition clearly understood the level of discipline and staying power that I have. But I want to assure my constituents because they encourage me every day that I am here to represent them as I committed to when I asked for their support in 2005. I do not believe, Madam Speaker, based on what I have heard, that the country is out of danger as far as the politicians on the opposite side of this House is concerned, and for as long as I believe that I will continue to fight to make sure that this country is in safe hands.

The people know us, Madam Speaker. They know everyone on this side of the House. They know everybody on that side of the House. They know who is capable of what. They know all of the controversies; they know who is constantly surrounded by controversy. There is no question about that.

Madam Speaker, people know me. They know me from the time I was a police officer. They have known me since I was in central government as a civil servant; they have known me as a politician and they know that when I commit to a cause, I am committed to that cause. There is no amount of bullying that is going to scare me, whether it comes from the Leader of the Opposition or any of his colleagues. And if they didn't learn that during the last campaign and since this government has been in office, then there is something wrong with their understanding. But, Madam Speaker, we know on this side of this House that this beloved country of ours needs a steady hand at the helm. We have that steady hand now, Madam Speaker. We are going to maintain that steady hand.

This Government is confident of its successes. We are confident of the way forward. We have plans that take us well beyond 2009. Madam Speaker, they only need to read our manifesto to understand that. And we are, as our Leader has said, keeping the faith.

Again, I want to thank my constituents, the people of Bodden Town, for supporting me and continuing to support me, and for their words of encouragement; their calls, e-mails, text messages and their letters. I assure them, Madam Speaker, I remain committed to the cause. The fight is not over yet and until I believe it is over, I am not willing to stand down.

Madam Speaker, I thank you for your time and I look forward to the additional opportunity for further comments in Finance Committee. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: That concludes the orders of the day. I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

National Assessment of Living Conditions Report

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, from the outset of its tenure, this Government has declared that improving the quality of life for Caymanians and residents would be its overriding objective. With the release of the findings of the National Assessment of Living Conditions study (with the acronym NALC), Government is now in an even better position to deliver on this key promise.

NALC is the first-ever scientific study of living conditions conducted in the Cayman Islands. The Government wishes to place on record its thanks and appreciation to the Caribbean Development Bank (CDB), the National Assessment team, and Kairi Consultants Limited; the consultants who prepared the report for their considerable efforts in bringing this project to a successful conclusion.

The study has yielded a considerable amount of valuable information. The Government intends to put it to effective use in designing a social development strategy to benefit the poor and disadvantaged among us. The executive summary, which will be officially released on Friday, confirms how truly blessed we are as a country. It shows that our problems are miniscule compared with our Caribbean neighbours.

Just a few weeks ago, before the consultants had even submitted the final report to the CDB, the Government was accused on a local talk show of attempting to cover up the NALC study. An unsubstantiated claim was broadcasted far and wide that the findings were unfavourable. Madam Speaker, it was a classic example of political mischief-making through the deliberate peddling of false information. The findings of the study, which are being released for the world to see, prove very much the contrary.

It is an immense source of pride to Government—and should be for Caymanians as well—to learn that the study found we have the lowest rate of poverty in the entire English speaking Caribbean. Indeed, at 1.9 per cent of the population, the number of persons living below the poverty line can be described as marginal. This compares, for example, Madam

Speaker, with 9.3 per cent for the Bahamas in 2001, and 11 per cent in the British Virgin in 2002. In most other Caribbean countries, the average rate is above 10 per cent.

Considered from another perspective, what the study is effectively saying is that overall, life is better by far here in the Cayman Islands, notwithstanding the few pockets of poverty, which the Government will now target for relief. What is particularly pleasing is that the Caribbean Development Bank, a reputable regional institution, has been closely associated with this study. The very same methodology was used in similar studies sponsored by the Caribbean Development Bank in other countries of the region.

The key finding of the NALC study, namely, that poverty is marginal here in the Cayman Islands, stands in sharp contrast with the doom and gloom picture of living conditions painted by the Leader of the Opposition in his budget debate contribution, a week ago. There was a deliberate attempt for obvious political reasons to convey the impression that life here was a living hell. The NALC study confounds the jaundiced perspective of the Leader of the Opposition. The findings based on scientifically gathered data using a tried and tested methodology counters fiction with facts.

This is not to say that there are no issues of concern raised in the study. To the contrary, the study lists a number of challenges which some persons are experiencing. The report acknowledges that Government is already addressing many of these issues. However, acting on information presented in the report, the Government will now look to expand its interventions with the aim of bringing more targeted relief to affected persons.

Without taking too much away from the official launch on Friday, here are a few other eye openers arising from the landmark study, Madam Speaker. Of the total number of individuals classified as poor, the majority are non-Caymanian. This finding contradicts the false view being peddled that non-Caymanians, generally speaking, are doing better than Caymanians. Where health care is concerned, the majority of respondents, 93.5 per cent to be exact, said they were either very satisfied or satisfied with treatment that they have received. This finding, Madam Speaker, too contradicts the picture of our Health Services that is painted by most critics of the Government.

A significant benefit of the NALC Report is the relevant information it provides that will allow effective targeting of relief to disadvantaged groups. It will also allow a high level of efficiency in the spending of resources than if the Government were to act without the benefit of such information. Madam Speaker, before a surgeon performs an operation he or she first seeks to determine the exact location of the problem. Scientific means are used to ensure an accurate diagnosis. Government is taking a similar approach in relation to alleviating poverty.

I want to take this opportunity to appeal to all the media to provide fair and balanced reporting and debate of the report. A lot of positive things are happening for the Cayman Islands, of which we should be proud as a small nation with limited resources.

So, Madam Speaker, it is my pleasure to commend the Report of the first-ever National Assessment of Living Conditions to this Honourable House and fellow legislators for their study and endorsement.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Throne Speech and Second Reading of the Appropriation (June 2008 to July 2009 Bill) 2008 (Budget Address)

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech and the Budget Address.

Does any other Member wish to speak?
[pause] Does any other Member wish to speak?
[pause]

Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I am pleased to offer my contribution to the debate on the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member; the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency, the Governor; and the Policy Statement of the Government, delivered by my colleague, the Leader, of Government Business.

Madam Speaker, this is the fourth budget delivered by the PPM Administration since we assumed office in May 2005. It is the fourth budget that has produced an operating surplus for these Islands. I am proud to be associated with this Administration, which has demonstrated in challenging times that it is possible, nonetheless, to deliver the necessary programmes and projects to take this country forward; demonstrated that it is possible to be optimistic in challenging times and to present to our people, and to the world as a whole, a picture of the Cayman Islands which is forward-thinking, progressive, and as I said, filled with considerable optimism notwithstanding the global circumstances. That achievement, Madam Speaker, did not happen automatically and we did not arrive at that position without a great deal of effort and careful consideration of all of the matters that we have to wrestle with.

Madam Speaker, if one listened to the Leader of the Opposition and his colleague, the economic guru, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, one would believe that this Government . . . and indeed, Madam Speaker, if one looks at the poll question presented in the Caymanian Compass today, one would proceed on the premise that the Government was operating on the basis of deficit budgeting. I must say, Madam Speaker, that just the night before last, a prominent member of civil society said to me that he is struggling (this is the senior member of one of the big banks) to understand the seeming preoccupation which Cayman, particularly the press, has with bad news to the point where they will make it up if it is not so.

In a situation where you have a Government that has produced four budgets with operating surpluses; the fact that the Government's projected revenue is in decline in the global circumstances, how does that become the principle focus of any discussion? Where is the discussion about what the Government has done to ensure that we have an operating surplus? When they talk about the Government should reduce its projects, or push its projects back, Madam Speaker, that is exactly what we have done. And if anyone knows me . . . and I think by now most of the people of the country understand by my nature how hard it is for me to accept that we have to delay the completion of those necessary schools to 2010. Does anyone think that that is a decision that we came by easily? But we understand because we are pragmatic, because we are practical, because we are grounded in commonsense and reason, that sometimes—and this is one of those times—one has to adjust one's programme because of the fiscal constraints and the realities of the global environment.

Why is there is not a more aggressive roads programme in place? You think that my colleague, the Minister for Communication and Works, is happy about that? Anybody who knows him will know what we wrestled with over the course of the last six months to contain him. But every person who travels on this road network . . . Today was a perfect example because I came in really early, for me, because I don't usually come in during the rush hour. I came in the middle of the rush hour. And it is not perfect by any means, but I can tell you what, it is a whole lot better than when we took office. And that Minister, the Elected Member from East End, assumed that responsibility.

That is what this about, Madam Speaker, seeking to improve the quality of life of people who live in this country. That is what this Administration is about. You will hear no one here, Madam Speaker, stand up and boast about how well their real estate company did out of the Ritz Carlton project. Nobody on this side is going to talk about those sorts of things. None of us have any condos down at Ritz Carlton, Madam Speaker. These are hardworking men and women in this Government. We work diligently, assiduously and honestly to achieve what we can because that is our mandate. And, Madam Speaker, the same press who criticises us at every turn, now it seems ought to remember the dark days when their members were thrown out of press conferences; when members who voted for Radio Cayman were berated by the then Leader of Government Business because they reported a particular story which appeared to be favourable to the Opposition. That, Madam Speaker, is the kind of environment which has been quickly forgotten in this apparent new love affair that is developing between the media and the Leader of the Opposition.

Madam Speaker, so be it! I said a long time ago, a country gets the government it deserves. And if they think that the Leader of the Opposition is going to be any different the next time round (if he were ever to get here) they might as well believe that leopards change their spots.

Remember that, Madam Speaker. We have delivered. We have delivered, and we are continuing to deliver.

If, Madam Speaker, I had to describe the performance of the UDP Administration . . . and I see that the Leader of the Opposition has cut his time back with the benefit of the sort of Orwellian approach of 1984. He has revised the time they were actually in office. He says they were in office for two years and ten months. I am not sure how we get to that calculation. Perhaps trying to explain why so little good was achieved in that time, because a whole lot of ill occurred on that watch.

Madam Speaker, I do not believe, in fact, I am certain that no administration in the history of these Islands has ever been subjected to more reports of the Auditor General:

1. Special Report of the Auditor General on Affordable Housing Initiative.
2. Special Report of the Auditor General on Review of the Debt Financing Arrangements for Boatswain Beach.
3. Special Forensic Audit Report of the Auditor General on the National Housing and Community Development Trust.
4. Special Forensic Audit Report of the Auditor General on the National Housing and Community Development Trust (part two).
5. Special Report of the Auditor General on the Cayman Islands' Government property insurance settlement, post Ivan.
6. Special Report of the Auditor General on the Royal Watler Cruise Terminal capital project

And one more to come on the awarding of the contracts for Boatswains Beach.

The significant thing about all of that, Madam Speaker, is who was in the chair. And I mean literally in the chair in relation to all of these projects, because things can happen in government over which you have no control if they are run by departments or agencies of government over which the elected government has no direct responsibility. But in almost every instance, the Leader of the Opposition was in the chair. He was Chairman of the Board of Boatswain Beach or Turtle Farm (whatever we want to call it); he was Chairman of the Board of the Port Authority; he was the Leader of Government Business who sat in Cabinet and agreed, and agreed, to the arrangement with Cayman National Corporation which robbed this country of $70 million in insurance payments that we ought to have had.

And, Madam Speaker, ask who was in charge and Chairman of the Board of the National Housing and Community Development Trust, and who was driving that process. The former Minister, Dr. Frank McField.

The reason I am raising all of these things, Madam Speaker, is because Lord knows I would rather focus on the stuff that I have in my Ministry because we have been doing a lot of things and have a lot of things to talk about—positive things to talk about. But when I hear the Opposition stand here day after day—the Leader of the Opposition, the Second Elected Member for West Bay and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac—and heap all manner of evil upon the shoulders of this Government and, in particular, the Leader of Government Business, and portray themselves as paragons of virtue . . . Madam Speaker, it was all I could do to keep my lunch down sometimes.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition talks about me giving contracts for the site preparation works at the schools to my friends. This man—this man who has never ever darkened the door of CTC (Central Tenders Committee), does not believe in the Central Tenders Committee process. That's not me saying that! Look at the reports! I am not going to go through all of them this evening.

He never tendered Boatswains Beach; he never tendered the Port Authority; they never tendered the Affordable Housing Project; they never tendered anything. I can say this, Madam Speaker, and you can ask any member of the Central Tenders Committee, every single project that requires CTC approval from my Ministry and, I believe, from this Government, has gone to CTC. You ask any member there whether Alden McLaughlin spoke to any of them and suggested to them that anyone or any company was awarded anything. When the Auditor General's reports are written—as they will be written on any matter for which my Ministry has responsibility—of this I can be certain: Everybody gets things wrong at times, but no one will be able to fairly say that anything for which I had responsibility did not follow the proper process and the proper course.

And he has the audacity to talk about favouring friends! Tell him to get up on the Floor of this House and explain how he comes to own an interest in a company that has a condo at Ritz Carlton.

I believe in one thing, Madam Speaker, and I really am fed up about this. Any person you see come into this honourable House as an ordinary human being who becomes a multi-millionaire while there [that person] is bloody corrupt. Tell [that person] to explain that. I have had enough, Madam Speaker. I have had enough. I really have had enough.

Madam Speaker, I listened, and I not only listened but I obtained copies of the unedited transcripts of the Hansard Reports of the contributions made by the Leader of the Opposition, the Second Elected Member for West Bay and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I searched them for hours to see if there was something in there that could possibly help this country.

Madam Speaker, when the Leader of the Opposition comes and positions himself and his party as the "government in waiting", the country must be entitled to say, 'Mr. Leader of the Opposition, where is your plan? What is your plan? You had the helm for three and a half years, what did you do then? We know what you did then, tell us what you're going to do differently now'. Where is it, Madam Speaker? It was a diatribe, at least, to his credit.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay, my good friend the economic guru, did give us the benefit of his views and his learning on those matters: economics, accounting, and those sorts of things. But, I heard not a shred of anything useful from either the Leader of the Opposition or the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac. They spent their time berating the Government, tearing down the Government's plans and programmes and saying what they did in the past. There is no future in the past, Madam Speaker! Absolutely none!

And it seems to me that the UDP, generally, but the Leader of the Opposition and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac in particular, are firmly rooted in the past, not understanding that the world has moved on; that the Cayman Islands have moved on; that there is a new paradigm.

Coming here, as the Leader of the Opposition has done, and chatting nonsense about establishing an oil refinery in these Islands. Where are you going to get the oil from? He must have a special oil field down in West Bay! Of course, he is a self-proclaimed environmentalist as well. You know, I expect to find him tied to one of the Ironwood trees down by the UCCI shortly.

Madam Speaker, where is the plan? Where is the plan? This Government has a plan. We had one before we took office. It was in the infamous little red book and, by and large, we have delivered on it. We have done so imperfectly in some instances. Madam Speaker, we are human! We make mistakes. But we don't have any condos down on Seven Mile Beach, down by the Ritz Carlton. We don't make those kinds of mistakes.

Madam Speaker, they cry doom and gloom. They say we have gotten it wrong, but they provide no alternative. The Leader of the Opposition says that we are spending too much money. You know what his proposals are? To build an oil refinery! What is he going to do that with? Somebody is going to give that to the Cayman Islands? He says also that we should go back (this is his old plan) and build a port up at High Rock—an airport up there. Those are parts of his plans. What is he going to build those with? Good will? Promises? Madam Speaker, so loud the thunder, but oh, so little it rains. And that's what the country has become used to being treated to by the Leader of the Opposition. He ought to be ashamed of himself!

Twenty-four long years! Twenty-four long years, Madam Speaker, and he comes to the House, the final budget of this term of Government and does nothing but to say 'I told you so'. I told you what? I told you that there was going to be a global slowdown? Duh! We couldn't figure that one out? Thank you for the advice, sir.

Madam Speaker, we have cut the coat according to the cloth that we have. It has been some difficult decision-making but we have done it. And that is what rankles the Opposition more than anything else—that this Government has done it. We have done more than talk. He keeps talking about his plans and reviews. Do something! Please, sir!

What does the UDP have to point to in terms of achievement in the three years they were in office? Well, we got 3,000 new Caymanians, so let's give them that one. We got Boatswain's Beach. Oh, but hang on, hang on, that is part of the budgeting problem that we have because we keep having to find money to keep Boatswain's Beach running. Why? Because it was built on a false premise!

Let me just read this little bit, Madam Speaker, that I have here. This is my stuff, Madam Speaker, but I am going to read this rather than simply speak. Since the commencement of the Boatswains Beach project there has not been a properly articulated financial strategy. As a result of poorly structured planning the first loss of the farm in years was sustained in 2004 (who was on watch then?) $557,841, and has continued without relent, and increased virtually exponentially since then.

Two thousand and five shows a profit, but hang on, that was because of the insurance claim from hurricane Ivan. "The ordinary losses since then have been 2005—$953,000; 2006—$4,265,000; 2007—$7,672,000 and forecast to be $10 million at the end of this year".

The projected project cost, Madam Speaker was US$44 million and the actual cost of the project was $60 million. I think we should rename it, Madam Speaker, from Boatswains Beach to McKeeva's folly. And he has the audacity to stand on the Floor of this House and lecture this Government about fiscal prudence and careful financial planning? Madam Speaker, he has more nerve than a toothache.

Madam Speaker, I will tell you this: I have done some tough things in my life [but] this is the toughest I have ever done. I will tell you what—I shall persevere, not because I am married to this job or deeply in love with this job. Lord help this country if this leadership is put back in the hands of the Leader of the Opposition. It is one condo he got last time, Lord knows what he is going to get this time.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, perhaps if the Leader of the Opposition spent a little more time on this Island, a little less time in his yacht, frequented places like Las Vegas and the Bahamas a little less, we would not have had the gambling with this country's future that has gone on in the past. Madam Speaker, enough about all of that, but I had to get that off my chest.

Over the last fiscal year my Ministry has seen a number of significant achievements. In the course of this fiscal year we have . . . and I am about to outline our programme and projects. We will deliver these services in a range of ways through legislative reform, program improvements across units, and an intensive capital works agenda. And while I am talking about the intensive capital works agenda, Madam Speaker—for which we have been wrongly criticised—I want to say this: The economic guru that the Second Elected Member for West Bay holds himself out to be . . . I really am not sure that he is right about suggesting that in the current environment, where there is slowdown in the global economy, that the right thing for us to be proposing to do, as he seems to have proposed to do, is to cut civil service jobs and shrink government financial injection into the economy.

The Leader of the Opposition and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman talked about unemployment. And there are problems with employment, Madam Speaker. I live that every day of my life. I understand that. But if we do not ensure that the domestic economy continues to be vibrant as a Government, we would be derelict in our duties. It seems, Madam Speaker, from what the Opposition has said, that if they were in this role they would cut all major capital projects. They would cut the size of the civil service and would be able to boast, not of a $13.3 million dollar surplus, as we are doing, but perhaps a $100 million in surplus, and that, Madam Speaker, would be a very, very good comfort to people who were unemployed and for businesses that were made to struggle even more than they have to currently struggle in this environment. Because that is what they are suggesting!

Madam Speaker, the Government has taken a conscious decision to go ahead with major capital projects at this time, at least in part, because it is the right thing to do from an economic standpoint. And because of the benefit with the best advice that we could get and have, it is perfectly affordable. It meets all of the standards, even the very exacting standards of the UK in terms of debt service ratios and the like.

So, at one of their press briefings or mouthing offs on one of the radio shows, I hope they could explain to the country how it is that they expect things to improve if civil servants are out of jobs and if there is less money circulating in the local economy. All of us, Madam Speaker, do not have a condo on Seven Mile Beach to go back to. In fact, most of us do not.

The initiatives of my Ministry build on the previous years' achievements based on an overall four year delivery focus aimed at building excellence and service delivery to all our stakeholders. Policy reforms to meet the changing needs of our community and a continued engagement with our many stakeholder groups supported by research and utilising best practice.

Madam Speaker, this Government recognises the importance of an efficient and accessible employment relations entity to our national wellbeing. And following extensive review and consultation we are now in a position to make much needed improvements to our services in this area. We have, Madam Speaker, over the course of the past year, restructured the Department of Employment Relations and that department is now well set to provide enhanced employment services to the people of these Islands and, specifically, to our business community. The new fiscal year will start with a new director in place providing fresh impetus and leadership. And despite all of the preaching on a certain talk show, I am afraid to disappoint them, but the new director of Employment Relations is as Caymanian as I am. In fact, Madam Speaker, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I am sure, despite her views about the Government, would applaud the Government in this rare instance, because he is a Bracker.

Plans include strengthening the capacity of the Department of Employment Relations Administration to ensure the delivery of an improved customer focus, better utilisation of technology in delivering more support to employers and employees, and a more proactive approach to building relationships with public agencies and our business community. The recent adoption and utilisation of job placement software has provided a seamless interaction between the Department of Employment Relations, Department of Immigration and employers, successfully opening the door for many more Caymanian people to be placed in vacancies and gainfully employed.

In the last 10 months since the software became fully operational, placements have increased from an average of 6 per month to 24. Additionally, where as many as 60 waivers per month were being issued to the Immigration Board, due to a more coherent collaboration process with the Department of Immigration (which I should say, Madam Speaker, actually has direct access to the database), we have virtually eliminated this concept of letters of waiver.

Madam Speaker, there are a couple of more things I want to say about the matter of labour. We have had for some time a labour consultancy report entitled "A Review on the Functions and Organisational Structure of the Department of Employment Relations and Labour Legislative Framework of the Cayman Islands" done by Mr. Samuel Goolsarran completed at the end of September of last year. That report makes a number of recommendations. We have carried forward a significant number of them in relation to the organisational structure of the Department of Employment Relations.

As far as changes to the legislative framework are concerned, I have in the past announced my view that we ought to have a national minimum wage in place. I have also indicated, Madam Speaker, my agreement with the recommendation to fundamentally alter the current tribunal system to put in place a labour commissioner or a labour magistrate, or employment magistrate (whatever we wind up calling the individual) so that there would be fulltime qualified persons in place to ensure that labour justice is properly and fairly administered.

There are, Madam Speaker, a number of other proposals which are to some extent controversial, such as the recommendation to remove the provision for a waiver of overtime, and a number of others. I have been in discussions with the Chamber of Commerce regarding this report and I am awaiting a written report from them.

I spoke this morning at the opening of the Cayman Islands Human Resource Society of Professionals, and I said to them there that I wish to engage them also in this discussion about possible changes to the Employment Law.

Madam Speaker, there is currently an Employment Law that is somewhere in abeyance. I'm not sure where it is because it was actually passed by the Legislative Assembly back in 2004 and assented to by the Governor subsequently, but has never been proclaimed. So, it actually is not in effect. The present piece of legislation is some 20-odd years old, and I believe all who worked with it know that it needs some amendments, some improvements to reflect where the world and Cayman has gone in those two decades. But I am not about to impose or to force a piece of legislation upon the people of this country without careful consideration and consultation. So, I am hoping, Madam Speaker, that during the latter part of this year, I will be in a position to bring to this House, either a new piece of legislation or amendments which will improve employment relations in this country, that will create a better framework, but will not have the far reaching and sweeping effect of the Employment Law which is currently in abeyance and which caused such major controversy.

One aspect of employment relations is good employment practices. And it is in this area that Investors in People's Standards are poised to take off. In 2002 the first license agreement to deliver the Investors in People's Standard was signed. And, Madam Speaker, for those who may not know IIP, it is an international standard that sets out how good organisations manage and develop their people—their most important asset. Based on good practice among leading employers it provides a framework for organisations to strive for improved business performance through people.

It originated in the UK and was developed so as to help the UK move from an industrial economy to a more service-based economy. Since 2002, staffing for this project has only been part-time which has not allowed our business community to reap the full range of benefits of the programme. Today, Madam Speaker, we have ensured the sustainability of this very important project with the acquisition of a full time head of Investor in People's Services. Prior to my taking office one company, KPMG, achieved the standard. Since I took office three years ago, eight organisations attained the standard: CUC (Caribbean Utilities Company); Julius Baer; Appleby (all three entities of that firm); Unicredit Bank (formerly Bank Austria); and the National Gallery.

More recently one of my Ministry's units, the Education Standards and Assessment Unit (formerly known as the Schools Inspectorate) was recognised as an investor in people. I am very proud of this, Madam Speaker.

Between 2002 and 2005, when the previous government demitted office, their efforts resulted in just one success. Madam Speaker, in the same period of time, this Government has delivered eight fold. And presently, there are six more organisations working towards the standard. This speaks volume to the extensive tangible efforts we are making to promote the standard and its value to the human capital development of these Islands. We are not, however, simply satisfied with this significant improvement. Over and above the previous government, we continue striving for ever greater results. Our goal for the next fiscal year, therefore, is to see 10 new organisations attain the Investors in People's Standard, and to recruit a further 10 to start the process. This, Madam Speaker, is how this Government delivers on its promises.

This is Government in action and in partnership to improve the quality of life for the people of these Islands. And, when we talk about the people of these Islands, Madam Speaker, we need to address the needs of people of all ages. The National Pension's Office has a particular responsibility to protect the futures of our people as they progress towards retirement. In this regard, the National Pensions Office (now with three full-time inspectors) will be better placed to monitor compliance with the provisions of the National Pensions Law. This will entail a more proactive oversight of employers and pension plan providers alike.

At the same time, it is also important that the people of the Cayman Islands appreciate the need to plan effectively for retirement. Accordingly, the National Pensions Office will be actively engaged in a comprehensive public awareness campaign.

At the other end of the age spectrum, our Youth Services Unit will focus its efforts on supporting the development of the recently launched Cayman Islands National Youth Assembly, which is but one example of its efforts to encourage more consistent and meaningful participation by our youth in our country's development. Madam Speaker, I look forward to presenting to this honourable House the first position papers, which is currently being prepared by the membership of our National Youth Assembly.

Whether for the old or young, there are aspects of my Ministry's work which span the entire age spectrum. In education, we believe in life-long learning, just as in sports we promote sports and health activity for all. The key to the provision of lifelong learning and the improvement of literacy is an effective public library service.

In the 2008/2009 financial year, the Public Library Service looks forward to two significant developments. The West Bay Public Library will open to the public over the summer and once opened will be the largest district library in the Cayman Islands boasting the largest collection of materials.

For 24 years the Leader of Opposition has sat in this honourable House. And his district—which re-elects him and re-elects him and re-elects him—never had the benefit of a library. Perhaps, Madam Speaker (and I'll come to that), that is why he places so little value on education. Or perhaps because he places so little value on education he doesn't bother about things like a library.

It will be equipped with a learning centre and multiple computer access points, allowing expanded programming in the area of research, homework assistance, and literacy programming. As with all other branch libraries, a qualified community librarian has been hired to manage this new library and work closely with all various community services in the West Bay district. But I should say, Madam Speaker, in fairness to him, at least he has not come to this honourable House and opposed that project in the way that he is opposing a school for West Bay. But I will have a bit more to say about that.

The Second significant development is the Maples' addition to the George Town Public Library. This project will add some 12,000 square feet of useable space to the George Town Library. The Maples' donation of US$2.5 million is greatly appreciated by this Government. Whilst these funds will be paid out over a number of years, they allowed the Government to start the project now. This donation demonstrates the company's commitment to serving its community, assuring a broader range of library services than we have ever had. The Government looks forward to sharing with Maples in the opening of this outstanding development for our community later this year.

With the Harquail Theatre already operational, this library project, along with the opening of the National Museum building in November, will significantly increase the cultural opportunities available to our community and visitors to these Islands. The Museum building returns to operation after extensive renovations and refurbishment work allowing us to reclaim an important part of our national heritage. In addition, the Board of the National Art Gallery plans to see groundbreaking for its new permanent home taking place in late summer.

Madam Speaker, this Government's commitment to advancement of sport for all and the promotion of physical activity in the Cayman Islands will see the establishment of our first national sports council and work started on our first piece of legislation for sports later this year. These efforts will bring together all sporting associations across our Islands, ensuring a strategic focus on the ongoing development of sports at the national level. Additionally, this process will ensure greater collaboration between the various sporting associations and other stakeholders, including schools.

Over the past three years my Ministry has worked assiduously to restore our sports facilities. Madam Speaker, virtually every sport facility owned by Government in the Cayman Islands received some damage, in some cases major damage, during hurricane Ivan and, in any event, maintenance and upkeep on those facilities had been neglected for years. The completion of the track and the pitch at the Truman Bodden Sports Complex and the two fields at the Ed Bush Stadium in this fiscal year will provide much needed facilities for both track and field and football enthusiasts. These facilities, as well as the community fields, are being restored and returned to service at international standards.

This level of sporting facilities will not just allow for team and league games, but also provide the opportunity for regional and international competitions to be held here in the Cayman Islands. And I should add, Madam Speaker, because the Leader of the Opposition was responsible for this too when he was Minister of sports, we discovered when we were repairing or replacing the track at Truman Bodden Sports Complex, that the track had never been certified for international competition. And we found out why. It could not be certified because the turning radii were far too tight to meet international standards, and so, the country had been led to believe by the Leader of the Opposition—who was then Minister of Sports—that this was an internationally certifiable facility. It was not! It will be now.

Work will continue into the new fiscal year on the Annex field with the provision of proper lighting and seating as a component of its phased master plan development going forward. Madam Speaker, on the Annex field we have now had placed FIFA (International Federation of Football Association) two-star rated artificial turf, which is the same turf on which some of the World Cup games were played. It has been an expensive and long exercise involving far more work with the work lasting much longer than had been predicted. But we are almost there now.

As part of the measures that we have taken as a Government, Madam Speaker, to adjust our capital project programme bearing in mind the present economic conditions, I have had to defer the further major work on the Annex project. The master plan was estimated to cost somewhere between $10 million and $12 million, which would have provided the place with stadium seating for just under 4,000 people, proper changing facilities and concession areas. Because of the budgetary constraints, we will obviously complete the turf in another three weeks, I am told, and we will put in stadium quality lighting this year, and will put in some seating. We are working, Madam Speaker, to have that designed in such a way that it does not adversely impact the overall master development plan for that facility but, instead, will complement the larger stands when they actually go ahead, hopefully (if I'm around) in the 2009/2010 financial year.

Madam Speaker, the work for my West Bay colleagues on the Ed Bush Stadium is almost complete. The turf has been re-laid there, and just about all of the works necessary in relation to the stands and other facilities have been done. I can tell them and the country as a whole that we are also going to repave the parking lot, and I am hoping that we can reopen that over the summer.

Madam Speaker, over the past three years I have focused on extending support to sporting associations, particularly at the level of youth development programmes. This is already beginning to reap dividends as we see the emerging talent in swimming athletics, football, rugby, basketball, to name a few. These efforts, therefore, make me very proud to salute the Cayman Islands team which will represent the Cayman Islands in the Beijing 2008 Olympics: Cydonnie Mothersill, Shaun Fraser, and Brett Fraser.

I, and many others, Madam Speaker, are still optimistic that two of our athletes, Ronald Forbes and Tyrell Cuffy, will still qualify for the Olympics this summer.

Closer to home, Madam Speaker, I had the privilege over the past two years to support boxing events for our prize boxer, Charles Whittaker, who has over and over again made us proud. Madam Speaker, I was pleased to hear from Minister Clifford (and I think he mentioned it in this honourable House), that despite statements otherwise Charles has now agreed appear as part of the fantastic boxing promotion that is being put on by the Ministry of Tourism under the auspices of Showtime. And, I am hopeful that the details of that will be sorted out shortly, which include matters in relation to his training and so forth.

I am, as I always have been, Madam Speaker, happy to do what I can from my Ministry's standpoint to assist Charles and to give him every opportunity to do as well as he possibly can in the upcoming fight.

Madam Speaker, as Members of this honourable House will recall, this Government saluted the achievements of three of our lead athletes: Charles Whittaker, Cydonnie Mothersill and Shaun Fraser, for the first ever Cayman Islands Spirit of Excellence Awards on National Hero's Day this year. These young Caymanians display outstanding discipline and the determination to succeed. They are superb role models for our youth. On that day, as well, we celebrated the outstanding performance of our special Olympians: Kevin Anglin, Chris Samson, Andrew Smiley, and Waide McLaughlin, who represented the Cayman Islands at the Special Olympics in Shanghai, China, winning a total of nine medals of which six were gold.

On this occasion, as well, Madam Speaker, Waide McLaughlin was presented with the Sports Person of the Year Award. Madam Speaker, we have much to be proud of in our youth. We hear a lot of negative things, I know. And those are worrying. But I am passionate about ensuring that the efforts we make in youth, sports and education, are fully aligned so that we provide the greatest possible opportunity for each young person to achieve their full potential.

Restoring our existing sporting facilities, encouraging and supporting our athletes along with outstanding sporting provision in the new secondary campuses will ensure sports for all for the first time, from east to west. In Cayman Brac, work continues towards the completion of the sports complex, and funds have been allocated for the acquisition of property which will facilitate the development of a new secondary campus on the Bluff as well.

Madam Speaker, before I leave the whole issue of sports facilities, I want to say that the work on the Bodden Town field is nearing completion and when that is done, Bodden Town, like George Town and West Bay, will have top quality turf on which the game of football can be played not just at a local level, but at an international level. Once those three fields are operational, West Bay and the two in George Town, we will then proceed with work at East End and North Side to complete those fields. We have had to keep those two fields operational while all of the others have been out of commission. So, I am hopeful that by the start of the next football season all of the fields which have been out of operation this past year plus (just about a year now), will be back fully operational and then work can proceed on East End and North Side fields.

Madam Speaker, work will continue at a rapid pace in the area of Education, building on the range of initiatives completed since the start of the transformation process in 2005. In programme improvements in Education I am particularly proud of the recently launched Better Pathways—Brighter Futures Strategy, which is intended to provide an opportunity for all secondary students to realise their potential through a broader and more flexible range of education options geared to meet the diverse range of needs they present with.

The national curriculum will be formerly initiated with the start of the school year 2008, and a range of professional development interventions over the year will support teachers and other educational personnel in the delivery of the 21st century teaching and learning practices. All secondary and primary staff have already had training regarding the new curriculum and the leveling form of assessment which will provide clear evidence of a student's actual skills, abilities and knowledge within each subject.

The focus on literacy will expand within enhanced programmatic changes at primary and secondary levels. This will include the complete restructuring of the way in which reading is taught in primary schools to ensure a strong foundation in literacy amongst younger students, and provide the best possible base for their journey along the education continuum. However, our commitment is to ensuring high standards in literacy for all of our students. We are moving aggressively to provide literacy intervention and remediation for secondary students as well. In addition, following the evaluation by the Education Standards and Assessment Unit of the Young Parenting Programme, a framework for an education curriculum has been devised, including literacy and numeracy programmes fully adopted by the YPP. The students will have the potential to leave this programme with at least one qualification that is internationally recognised.

The clear priority will always be to improve the quality of teaching and learning within our education system. This includes extending the range of learning styles currently used, including greater use of project work to encourage students to have greater engagement and ownership of their education. Considerable emphasis has been given to increasing parents' awareness of the new curriculum through parent workshops in each school. These workshops have included considerable detail on the new ways of assessing students to reflect their abilities and skills in each subject.

The Leader of the Opposition has claimed that the new national curriculum is, and I quote: “. . . nothing more than a replica of the British national curriculum.” [2008/9 Official Hansard Report p. 33] And that the old national curriculum contains what teachers need to get the job done. I would propose, Madam Speaker, that this conclusion depends on what job the Leader of the Opposition thinks we need to do. And if that job is to ensure that 70 per cent of our students cannot attain expected levels at the end of secondary school, then the evidence to date supports his conclusions.

If, on the other hand, the mission we are undertaking is the one that this Ministry supports—developing the full potential of every child—I ask him, where are the results from the years gone by? To the assertion that our new Caymanian national curriculum is nothing but an import, I would urge the Leader of the Opposition to actually study the published curriculum documents where he will find detailed the names of more than 100 local educators who helped to write our first truly comprehensive Caymanian national curriculum drawing on best practice, not merely from one country, but successful education systems around the world.

The new national curriculum is very different. Perhaps his advisors and speech writers would like to read it sometime.

In his research on curriculum topics, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition has yet again been totally ill advised and misinformed of the facts. Luckily for our students, the many local experts who contributed to the new national curriculum were better equipped to prepare our children for success. If the Leader of the Opposition wishes to see a copycat curriculum, I would urge him to compare the old national curriculum for science with the same section of the 2000 English National Curriculum where he would find the only difference to be the substitution of the words "Cayman Islands" for the word "England". This cannot be said of the new national curriculum.

But, Madam Speaker, I really don't expect any different. The Leader of the Opposition and his colleague, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, have done everything in their power to keep the education transformation process from proceeding. From the day in October of 2005, when I brought a motion to this honourable House seeking to have the House adopt as the blueprint for the transformation process, the National Consensus [on the Future of Education in the Cayman Islands] document created by the educators and stakeholders in education who attended the first National Education Conference in September of that year, they fought to keep it from happening. They even got up, Madam Speaker, on the Floor of this House and moved a motion to have it deferred because we needed more time to consider whether or not there were problems with education in Cayman.

And the Leader of the Opposition actually said we are gambling with the Children's future; we are experimenting with their future. And every step of the way they have fought the transformation process. They have done so on the Floor of this House, they have done it on the talk shows; they have done it through the media; they have done it through the so-so, so-so, so-so, so-so, which always gets back to me in any event.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, is this a convenient point for a luncheon hour?

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: As convenient as any Ma'am.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.44 pm

Proceedings Resumed at 2.44 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on the Throne Speech and Budget Address.

Honourable Minister for Education, continuing his debate. Honourable Minister, I have been passed a note; you have 51 minutes remaining.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you Madam Speaker.

When we took the luncheon adjournment I was dealing with the allegation by the Leader of the Opposition that the national curriculum was simply a copy of the English national curriculum. I had pointed out that this, unlike any attempt at curriculums in the past in the Cayman Islands, was actually something that had been developed through extensive consultation, research and work by more than 100 local teachers.

I had referred him, in particular, to compare the old national curriculum for science with the same section of the 2000 English national curriculum, and he would see that in that case the only difference between those two documents was the substitution of the words "Cayman Islands" for "England." That is not the case with our new national curriculum.

In a first for our system, enthusiastic teachers are working collaboratively to produce units of inquiry sharing our own best practice across schools. Dozens of high quality units have already been produced and more are on the way as I speak.

To those, like the Leader of the Opposition, who feel that the new national curriculum is a foreign imposition, I will mention three of many units produced by young Caymanian teachers. "We came here by boat—An exploration of our national origin" by Miranda Banks. A unit called "National Pride" by Patrice Dilbert, and a study called "Comparing North Side with West Bay" by Erica Daniels. That is what we mean when we talk about a truly national Caymanian curriculum: a programme of study which is firmly rooted in our local culture, but which prepares our children to engage confidently with our globalised world.

This emphasis continued throughout the education system right up to the Caymanianisation of external exams where, for example, the new Vocational Leisure and Tourism course allows students to earn O-level qualification whilst studying our local tourism market and the worldwide industry.

Far from being rejected by our teachers, as the Leader of the Opposition has alleged, the new national curriculum has been embraced by the vast majority of our teachers, perhaps because of their opportunities to participate in its development.

All primary schools are working toward registration into the international baccalaureate programme. Already six of our primary schools have registered for candidate status in this programme, the first government schools in the Caribbean to have done so. The application process for secondary school pilot project to introduce the international baccalaureate (IB) diploma programme is well underway. This pilot project is expected to start in September 2009, with full implementation in September 2010, offering a gateway to excellence for Caymanian students within the government school system.

The exciting, Better Pathways—Brighter Futures Initiative allows for a range of new post-16 options now planned to be available to students as early as school year 2010/2011. These option programmes will take place on the existing George Hicks campus. This means that students leaving public secondary campuses from September 2010 will have access to the Better Pathways programme which includes technical and vocational programmes, opportunities to re-sit examinations, supervised work placement programmes, and government assistance for those choosing to study A-level courses.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition also went on at length about ICT and the ITALIC programme. Considerable focus has been placed by this Government on ensuring that our students have access to the most effective ICT hardware and software. And please note, Madam Speaker, my use of the word “effective”. The Leader of the Opposition, ignorant as he is of these things, speaks with great pride about the money spent by his government on ICT. We can attest to the fact that the $13 million—the untendered $13 million—spent on the ITALIC project under his government, under his Minister of Education, Mr. Roy Bodden, enriched the coffers of IBM greatly. That’s what they did! Thirteen million dollars!

To be fair, there were good aspects to the ITALIC programme, the laptops for teachers’ initiative among them. But perhaps, the Leader of the Opposition, when he so proudly proclaims about the email programme for teachers and students, is unaware that this aspect of the programme—for which his government paid so lavishly—never actually worked, despite years of training and implementation efforts. Doubt me? Ask any teacher in the system.

In fact, Madam Speaker, the first functional email system for all educators was implemented during this budget year which is now coming to a close. This is but one of the many examples that typify what went wrong with ITALIC and shows how out of touch with reality the Leader of the Opposition, his advisors, and speech writers are!

Or is it just that no one was really held accountable for the large sums of money spent on this and other projects while he was in charge and his Minister of Education, Mr. Roy Bodden, was asleep at the wheel?

The ITALIC project totally ignored perhaps the most significant innovation in educational ICT—the interactive white board. In this area, Cayman is still years behind our international competitors. But the Leader of the Opposition will be pleased to know that due to the investment by this Ministry and this Government, we are catching up rapidly.

Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition goes on to demonstrate yet again how ill informed his advisors and speech writers are about professional development of teachers in ICT. In fact, just this year we appointed an ICT integration officer to work as a coach with teachers in schools. Thanks in large part to his excellent work, you can visit schools across the Islands today and see teachers and students confidently using a range of equipment, including interactive white boards with sophisticated educational software that greatly expands the range of appeal of learning in the classrooms.

And Madam Speaker, although the Leader of the Opposition is not here and his deputy, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, the most vocal opponent to the Transformation of Education exercise that is underway . . . I am saying publically that I invite them and the rest of the Opposition to come and visit the schools and see for themselves what is going on in this amazing transformation in education that is occurring in Cayman. The two of them, in particular, are so plainly out of touch with what is going on that perhaps they can be forgiven for opposing every single advancement or initiative that is being proposed by me, the Ministry, and the Government.

Perhaps, Madam Speaker, if they could get past the fact that after 24 years in office the Leader of the Opposition can point to absolutely nothing he has done to advance educational opportunities in this Island . . . and perhaps he will also say in light of their claim to this office of government staking a claim, who are they going to propose as their new Minister of Education? Are they going to bring Mr. Roy Bodden back out, dress him up, give him another book to read, and sit him over here? Or are they going to appoint Capt. Eugene, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, as the Minister of Education? They need to tell the country who they are proposing since I am doing such a poor job at it.

Or, maybe the Leader of the Opposition—himself an educationalist, no doubt—will take over this role. They need to tell the country what they are proposing!

I would go further, Madam Speaker, and venture to suggest that the Leader of the Opposition inadvertently revealed his government’s fatal flaw regarding ICT when he dismisses the importance of technical support for educators. You see, Madam Speaker, it is one thing to read something; it is another thing to understand what it is you are reading. I would suggest to the Leader of the Opposition that before he trots out these nice-sounding statements and speeches that he recites here so regularly, that he understands what it is that has been written for him and check, perhaps, to find out whether or not it has any basis in fact.

He is correct when he cites the expenditures for computer hardware under ITALIC. The hardware was impressive. Unfortunately much of the time it failed to work.

Our focus, Madam Speaker, has been on technology that makes a difference in teaching and learning. For it to make a positive difference teachers must be able to depend on reliable and effective systems. Had previous governments—including his!—planned for the 21st century learning environment we would not have been faced with the necessity of rebuilding virtually from scratch many aspects of the much vaunted ITALIC computer infrastructure, so that we now point with pride to a fully functional wireless facility in all of our schools—computer systems that actually work.

In the ITALIC project, ITALIC stood for “Improving Teaching and Learning in the Cayman Islands.” And the previous Minister believed that they could do this by committing large sums of money on computer hardware and software and by their generous support of IBM. I believe, my team believes, that the only way to improve teaching and learning is by improving teaching and learning. And we have focused our efforts on what teachers teach and what students learn. I make no apologies for directing my support to Caymanian children instead of large foreign corporations.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition—he’s a real educationalist, you know. He is. [He] mentions with pride a review that he claims his government made of technical and vocational education. I would rather speak not of what we have reviewed, but of what we have introduced. Talk is cheap, Madam Speaker. Very cheap. Lord knows enough of it goes on in this House. But we need to examine what has actually been done.

Ask the Leader of the Opposition what he has done in 24 years to improve technical and vocational education. Ask him.

Ask him what his government did for three and a half years to improve education generally.

When we started, the physical plant was destroyed. All sorts of ad hoc programmes had to be put in place just to ensure that children got some kind of education. It has been three years since I assumed this office. And he has the audacity—he and the Second Elected Member for West Bay—to stand up and say, ‘Well, there is no evidence of any success?’

Forgive me Madam Speaker, if I become a little passionate about this.

He has sat flat on his you-know-what for 24 years! Brought down here a man with a master’s degree in education who sat down here and read books for four and a half years, and did diddysquat. When I went up to that Ministry at the Glass House, there was dust on the desk. There was no such thing as a computer on the table; the place looked like it had never been used!

Whatever they say about me when my time is over, or even before it’s over, no one will ever say that I have not worked, that I have not tried; that I have not actually made some bold initiative in the face of controversy and criticism, and in opposition by every Member on that other side—including the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman!

Madam Speaker, this is about the future of this country. This is about improving the lot of young people in this country. This is about ensuring that the people of this country are tooled and able to take advantage of the tremendous opportunities this wonderful little place creates. So, they can bash me as much as they want, but I will tell them one thing: Unless the good Lord intervenes, those schools are going to be built. They are going to be commenced on my watch. These programmes are not going to be stymied because they selfishly believe that either our people should not have that opportunity . . . the schools are too good for your Caymanian children. That is what they are saying!

They should be ashamed of themselves! The four of them from West Bay opposing school facilities and sports facilities and a hurricane shelter for West Bay . . . The West Bay people should tar and feather them!

Madam Speaker, humph . . .

Madam Speaker, I would rather speak not of what we have reviewed, but of what we have introduced. Students entering John Gray High School option programme this year—not next year, this year!—can choose from a range of challenging and accessible technical and vocational programmes which far surpasses anything we have seen before. This is what we have done, Madam Speaker. Not what we have imported someone to look at.

The installation of a new countrywide schools management system will for the first time allow for the comprehensive tracking of students’ progress and achievements throughout their school career. This will allow school leaders, teachers and parents to make better and more informed decisions about important issues regarding teaching and learning which affect students in a way that is unprecedented in the Cayman Islands.

For the first time, a clear professional development programme based on national priorities within the education service is being devised that will allow a far greater percentage of teachers access to high quality appropriate training. Teachers undertaking this professional development will always be required to share the knowledge gained with colleagues within the service.

The National Education Conference featured over 30 workshops for educators based on best practice. For the first time, many of the presenters were from within our own system. We are developing the skills and expertise, Madam Speaker, so that our own people, people within our own system, are able to pass that on to their colleagues. We have become a center for educational excellence. That is what we are aiming for.

All over the world people are looking at what is happening in Cayman. If the Leader of the Opposition even knows how to turn on a computer perhaps he could go on and look at the website. Look at our blog and see how many people from all over the world—almost 100 countries now—are regularly checking to see what is happening in Cayman on the education front.

Madam Speaker, so positive was the feedback from the last National Education Conference, that we are considering extending the conference to two days next year.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition has referred to the fact that teachers leaving the system this year were simply, I quote “handed a letter and that was the end of it.”

Madam Speaker, as you know I do not become personally involved in the routine operations of personnel practice in my capacity as Education Minister. But Madam Speaker, I did personally receive some complaints about the handling of teachers whose contracts were not going to be renewed. So, I investigated the matter.

Madam Speaker, I do not claim that the human resources processes of the Department of Education Services are perfect. And in this instance, I gave them my very, very strong advice, that the matter needed to be handled more sensitively. I can say with confidence now that in the case of each teacher who received one of those letters, they have had the benefit of an interview, a discussion, with a senior member of the Department of Education Services staff. I should also say further that every Caymanian teacher who has reached retirement age and who was not offered renewal is now being offered the opportunity to continue to work in schools as a supply teacher. I say up front that this matter, acknowledged, could have been handled better than it was.

I know as you do that Ministers do not have constitutional responsibility for employment matters. So, there are limits to what I can do. But I do not believe the Constitution prevents me from doing as I have done, offering advice and guidance about these matters which, I am happy to say, in this instance has been accepted.

What I can also say is that with the development of the new dedicated human resources unit in the Department of Education Services, personnel practices throughout the entire education system are now being reviewed to ensure that they reflect best practice. It is very clear that high quality education depends on excellent teachers and we are committed to ensuring and supporting excellence in every classroom. It is my great pleasure to pay a very special tribute to the many dedicated educators in our education system who continually strive to find cost effective and innovative solutions to a country's education issues within the necessary constraints of fiscal responsibility.

I am always delighted to receive a growing number of reports from the Chief Education Officer and the Department of Education Services pertaining to the successes and achievements taking place daily in our classrooms. The efforts of our educators are undeniably producing dynamic and creative responses to the challenges inherent in offering the best education possible to our Caymanian children.

This focus on a commitment to excellence is evidenced by the early actions taken to restore normalcy to the offerings available to students at the George Hicks Campus after hurricane Ivan. Back in 2005, the campus was severely overcrowded, discipline problems were rampant despite the best efforts of staff, and morale of students, teachers and parents was at an all time low.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for West Bay spoke in very deprecating terms about the move we made to turn George Hicks into a campus with four schools. He demeaned it; he said it really made little or no difference. The results, Madam Speaker, actually show tremendous improvement on a range of fronts, as I outlined above in terms of morale of students, teachers, parents, discipline issues, performance issues. All have seen a marked improvement.

With the shift system in place back in 2004/2005, students were not receiving the full amount of teaching provision they were entitled to. With the creation of the four small schools on one campus, relationships were transformed. Everyone noticed very quickly the vastly improved relationships between students and staff, and the increased involvement of parents with their schools and the resulting positive impact on the learning environment.

Madam Speaker, I can also point to the very significant improvements at George Hicks where this focused effort on the part of the school leadership and teachers has led to very encouraging feedback in their recent evaluations. And I hope, Madam Speaker, in the course of another month or so, to be able to make public the reports (which I have yet to see) of the Education Standards and Assessment Unit on all four of the schools on the George Hicks campus. But feedback that we have received from inspectors is very, very encouraging.

Madam Speaker, the new governance model for education has been running for eight months now and already it is showing a very positive impact with direct support for principals and school leaders. The focus of putting the child at the very centre of education service and ensuring that we focus on supplying the services to ensure that they get the highest quality education is already showing dividends. This implementation plan approach will continue next year.

Madam Speaker, much has been said about the new school building programme. The start of construction of these 21st century secondary learning environments will guarantee further support in raising education standards throughout our system. At the primary level, work will also commence on the new George Town Primary site.

George Town Primary School has a notable history of providing high quality teaching and learning for its students despite many challenges. It is long past the time for the teachers and students of this outstanding school to have high quality facilities which support their work rather than a crumbling long neglected facility with numerous modular classrooms.

Madam Speaker, I cannot tell you how much it hurts me to have had to come to the pragmatic decision that we would not get the new George Town Primary School completed in time to start the school year 2009. That delay is caused not just by the budgetary constraints, which I referred to earlier, but also to logistical issues involving the design of that school and the budget within which I have to work. It also has to do with the acquisition of some of the necessary property.

We acquired the property and we paid for the property on which the school is to be constructed, but new issues were introduced by the National Roads Authority in relation to access and turning radii and so forth for the busses, which will necessitate the acquisition of three very small parcels on the perimeter of this property which front onto Rock Hole Road. So, we are still wrestling with those issues, but all indications are that we should have the plans passed by the end of this summer, early autumn, and that we should be able to go to tender in about October. I hope that we will be able to actually start construction of George Town Primary in January of 2009.

I am absolutely committed. The Government is absolutely committed to the construction of this school. And I want to give every assurance to the parents, the teachers, and the supporters of that wonderful little school in the centre of George Town, that this Government is committed to delivering to them a first-class primary school facility.

And Madam Speaker, instead of opposing what we are trying to do, people like the Leader of the Opposition and people like Elio Solomon, who hoped to be a representative for George Town, ought to be supporting what we are trying to do to improve the lot and opportunities for young Caymanian children—particularly George Town children, in Mr. Solomon's case. And if the Leader of the Opposition and his tag team from West Bay really had the interests of West Bay and the West Bay children at heart, what they would have been doing would be lobbying me to build another primary school in West Bay, because Lord knows we need another primary school in West Bay. West Bay Primary School is at capacity.

I have been looking and my staff has been looking at where we can acquire property because, Madam Speaker, in the next term following the elections of 2009, God and the people willing it is my intention and the intention of this Government to construct another primary school in West Bay as well. There are now well over 500 students on that little campus. It cannot go on.

But instead of working with the Government, making these kinds of constructive suggestions, we hear absolutely nothing from them. All they do is oppose, oppose, oppose.

But you know, Madam Speaker, I hope I am around—and it would be wonderful if I am around in this capacity, but, I hope I am around anyhow—to see the day when the Beulah Smith campus opens for the people and the children of West Bay, and to see the Leader of the Opposition, in whatever capacity he is, with the smiles all over his face shaking everybody's hand and taking full credit for having delivered this facility in West Bay—because that is what he will do!

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, it is no wonder that people have such low regard for politicians.

I must tell you, some of them, particularly some of them on the other side of this honourable House, will say anything, at any time if they think somehow it advances that particular cause. They have no self-respect, no integrity . . . How can you lie down in your bed, let alone stand up on the Floor of this House and in knocking down church door every Sunday morning claiming to be “born again”?

I can tell you one thing, Madam Speaker, I firmly believe this: that the hottest fires in Hell have been reserved for them who mock God.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: That's all I am going to say about that, Madam Speaker.

Let each one of us examine our own heart and think about what we say and think about what we do when we knock down church door every Sunday morning.

One thing I do not have in me, Madam Speaker, is one iota of hypocrisy. What you see is what you get!

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman carried on all kinds of things, saying all sorts of derogatory remarks about the Leader of Government Business having a beer, playing dominoes. You know what? For all the years that I have ever known him he has had a beer and played dominoes. And he has served this country exceptionally well! And continues to do so. And you know what? They might as well include me in too 'cause I'll have mine, even though I don't play dominoes!

But you know what, Madam Speaker? What you see is what you get. There is no dishonesty about me. You may not like me, you may think I'm too brash, you may think I'm too blunt 'cause I give it to you right between the eyes, but that's me. You never have to worry about me sticking the knife in your back. The Leader of the Opposition knows all too well how to do that. Although someone told me the other day that in politics a friend is someone who stabs you in the chest. So . . .

I know one thing, Madam Speaker, the people who play dominoes are Caymanians. People who play dominoes and have a beer, they vote too. They are just as much a citizen of this country as those who only go from their house to church.

In case anyone misunderstands anything I am saying . . . I am a God-fearing man. I do not profess to be a Christian, but I have as much of the Christian culture of this country embedded in me as anyone else. And I love and fear God. But, Madam Speaker, I despise the use of God's name and invocation of Christianity and religion as a basis to beat up on other Members of this House as though those who are articulating those words are somehow Saint McKeeva and Madam Pius!

The Speaker: I'd rather you say Leader of the Opposition. No personal names please.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Leader of the Opposition, Madam Speaker. I stand corrected.

Madam Speaker, to get back to the work in education, there is much work underway now to carefully access our existing school buildings to encourage creative uses of existing spaces to facilitate improved teaching and learning.

Over the past year, much effort has been put into developing the protocols which govern the delivery of differentiated services to gifted students and those with special needs within our mainstream system of education. These achievements will now ensure that we can confirm equity for all students across our system, and ensure an opportunity for many students who would otherwise be left behind.

The increase in provision of special education needs services has allowed for much better service to our students. The waiting list of referrals is much less than was normally the case and the quality of service is greatly improving in all our schools. This is true for schools not just on Grand Cayman, but also on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Madam Speaker, it seems that in his synopsis of progress made in this highly critical area, the Leader of the Opposition has again made the same fundamental error that his government made regarding children with special needs. He believes that building the Lighthouse School solved all the special needs problems of the Cayman Islands educational system. We understand now, Madam Speaker, why the Opposition has been so stubborn in continuing to equate the transformation of education with the building of new schools. Their own limited understanding of education prevents them from grasping what a transformation of education truly means.

In this way, this Government has adopted— [coughing] . . . excuse me, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, you did gain six minutes. It should have been 57 minutes, not 51.

[pause]

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I shall need them.

Madam Speaker, the Opposition's own limited understanding of education prevents them from grasping what a transformation of education truly means.

As I said earlier, Madam Speaker, the only way to improve teaching and learning is to focus on teaching and learning. In this way, this Government has adopted a radically different strategy from that of the UDP, which boasts of the computers they bought, and the buildings they built. Their myopia, and that of their advisors and speech writers, has led them to believe that infrastructure is education.

Our focus, Madam Speaker, is not on structures but on services. While we celebrate the tremendous impact that the services available to children at the Lighthouse School provide for our most significantly challenged students and applaud the wonderful educators who work with them, this is only the tip of the special needs iceberg.

When in office, the Opposition was unable or unwilling to recognise the much broader range of special needs and learning disabilities which present barriers to learning for a significant percentage of our students within all our schools and, which, if recognised and remediated promptly, need not prevent them from achieving their full potential.

Instead, Madam Speaker, under the previous government and the former Minister of Education, Mr. Roy Bodden, too many of these students were allowed to languish in classrooms, their struggles unrecognised; suffering under labels like "lazy", "slow", and "unwilling to work", and inevitably disengaged from the learning process after years of repeated failure. We have case after case of students recommended for assessment and intervention who were allowed to progress through a school system and on to adult life without once receiving the specialised help they needed, while the then Minister of Education read his books and the Leader of Government Business (as he then was, the now Leader of the Opposition) flew around the world on planes in and out of Las Vegas, Bahamas, and places like it.

When the Leader of the Opposition asked what is being done to enhance this area, as he did in his budget debate contribution, I can respond with great assurance that the level of support to children and teachers in this area far exceeds anything we have seen before in the Cayman Islands. Let him come and refute it.

When I took over this Ministry our experts estimated that we were at least three years behind in providing assessments for the neediest children, and services to children were even more restricted than assessments. In order to correct the situation we have brought in over the past two and a half years . . . and it's a pity the Leader of the Opposition has absented himself two days in a row now so he can't hear this.

But I am sure that I can rely on the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to transmit it to him accurately.

In order to correct the situation, we have brought in over the past two and a half years four educational psychologist posts for a total of six instead of the previous two; two additional speech and language therapists, bringing that specialist staff to a total of seven; one additional occupational therapist, making a staff of four. In addition, we have introduced to our student services staff a teacher of the gifted. This is an indication of the breadth of our understanding and commitment to ensuring that all of our students are able to achieve their full potential.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for West Bay said he knows the Minister of Education is trying hard, but [asked] where the evidence of success is. Where are the results? he asks. Madam Speaker, the rewards of this investment in children may not be immediately apparent to anyone but the teachers and parents involved. But we believe that our entire community will benefit for many years to come. What we can say, however, is that our efforts have already reduced the number of children on our special needs registers because we have been able to provide them with appropriate remediation in a timely manner.

Madam Speaker, that, of course, does not fit neatly into the sort of political timeframe to which the Leader of the Opposition and the Second Elected Member for West Bay are working. They only care about tangible results which they can hold up and say, 'we did this, we did that'. That is why all they have ever talked about is building things like McKeeva's Folly, otherwise known as Boatswains Beach, and building the Port and throwing up all sorts of structures, because they care not about the things that really matter—which are the people of these Islands. They just want to hang on in office as long as they possibly can, get another condo at Ritz Carlton, do whatever it is they need to do, get another Hatteras, whatever the case may be.

Madam Speaker, this Government and this Minister are committed to programmes, to services, to plans, to projects which improve the outcome for young people in these Islands, principally young people, although we are committed to lifelong learning that goes beyond young people. But that is all that matters. We can have as much fancy buildings, we can have as much ICT, we can have everything that you can conceive that money can buy, but unless it actually improves teaching and learning, unless it actually improves outcomes, it is all for naught.

So, Madam Speaker, that is why, as committed as I am, and committed as the Government is to the building of 21st century learning environments, that is by no means the be all and end all; nor is it the focus or the focal point of the exercise that we are going through. It is because those new teaching and learning environments will improve outcomes that we are committed to them, not the other way around.

Now, Madam Speaker, I know most of that will be lost on the Leader of the Opposition because he can't think beyond a term. His whole life has always been, Get-to-the-next-election. If I'm not in office, I want to get back in; and if I'm in I want to try to stay in. That is how he lives.

Madam Speaker, that is not how I live. I am not a career politician. I had a good solid career from which I derived a great deal of personal satisfaction. I am here because I believe—I believed then and I believe even more so now—that the country needed good, sound, honest leadership. But the day that the people of this country decide (and that may be May of next year) that they wish to dispense with my services, I shall go. I shall go Madam Speaker, leaving, I hope, some legacy of good work—going much poorer than I entered; not as has been the case, and is the case with others in this honourable House.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, to forewarn you, you have approximately 20 minutes left.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

For those young people whose needs require alternative education provisions, I am pleased to be able to say that this programme will be undergoing a comprehensive review to ensure that its programmes are brought into full alignment with the ongoing transformation of education.

But we must never forget those members of our community with serious disabilities, particularly those who are unable to care for themselves. Despite their inability to access mainstream services, they must not be shunted aside and left hidden away in the margins. We can no longer focus on a one-size-fits-all programme for persons with disabilities and must, therefore, enter the 21st century in the way that we provide educational services to these young people and adults.

This cannot be achieved by any building, no matter how state-of-the-art it is. It can only be achieved by a moral commitment to the dignity and value of every individual. In fact, Madam Speaker, this budget gives evidence to this in the output that covers the Lighthouse School, which is now re-envisioned as the Lighthouse Developmental Centre. Our overall strategic thinking takes a clear focus on the types of services our clients require. This approach will ensure that our efforts from the early intervention programme through to the services for adults are fully aligned within the education continuum.

This matter, I am pleased to report to this honourable House, represents the first time a Minister of Education has ever given this country a full commitment to ensuring equity in the provision of educational services to all the citizens of these Islands irrespective of any disability they may have.

This transitional focus now underway will complete the circle of services ensuring that no matter what the extent of limitation anyone presents with, we are morally committed to support as far as humanly possible the provision of opportunity for all to achieve their best. Madam Speaker, I look forward to the next meeting of this House at which I will be pleased to present a comprehensive overview of plans for services in this sector, that is, dealing with persons with disabilities.

We have said that this Government's focus for education is on services not on structures alone. Having said that, this Government inherited an education system with many of its school buildings reaching the end of their useful life; in addition, we quickly recognised that the number of students far exceeded the capacity of our existing buildings.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition spoke with pride—his chest was so puffed up I thought it was going to burst!—about the state-of-the-art Prospect School which was built to house 250 students at a cost of $10 million in 2003. What he conveniently neglected to mention, however, is that due to poor data and planning the school was over capacity just 12 months after it opened. Prospect Primary School was simply too little, too late.

Equally, Madam Speaker, had the Leader of the Opposition ever considered making provision for the projected growth of the student population—including the children of his 2,765 Cabinet status grants—we would not have 62 classes housed in modular buildings across all our schools. Sixty-two modulars. We have 62 modulars which require intensive and very expensive maintenance and remediation work. We have more than a million dollars worth of modulars and they have the audacity to stand up here, go on the public platform and on the talk shows and oppose the building of new schools? They should be beating me up to build more, particularly in their districts!

But, of course, what really matters is not the provision of education to their children; what matters is ousting the Government, in particular this Minister of Education, so that they can bring back in some scarecrow to sit down and read books when he is supposed to be doing the country's work.

Madam Speaker, for the sake of completeness, the present enrollment for the primary school system in Grand Cayman is 2,217 students. In the secondary it is 1,984, for a total of 4,201. In Cayman Brac, it is approximately 160 in the primary school and approximately 200 in the secondary school, for an approximate total of 360. So, my indications are that we have about 4,561 students in the government school system.

Again, for completeness, in the private schools there are 2,582 in Grand Cayman only.

So those are the numbers we are working with Madam Speaker. For the first time we actually have projections. We actually have projections which take the school populations all the way up to 2012, 2014. So we are able to plan effectively.

They are beating me up about John Gray. They say we should leave John Gray, Madam Speaker. Whether I am around or not, I want the country to remember that I said this: I warrant that in four years' time we are going to have to build another one of these expensive schools that we are building now—unless something happens to the projected population growth and it falls off significantly.

Madam Speaker, in the absence of solid student data and a strategic development plan for education—which his government did not have! For that matter, the one before that did not have it either. And Mr. Truman's did not have it either. It is perhaps unsurprising that improvements in schools under the previous government were ineffectively planned and poorly executed.

When I say that our focus is on services and not on structures alone, we must acknowledge that the state-of-the-art 21st century learning environments provide a crucial service. They not only house bodies, but they nurture young minds and spirits. The country knows that this Government is committed to building new learning environments, both secondary and primary. The secondary campuses are not just to deal with our desperately overcrowded secondary schools, but have specifically been designed to provide additional capacity as the population of the Cayman Islands continues to grow.

Madam Speaker, this Government is planning for the future of education—something the Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues seem unable or unwilling to comprehend.

Madam Speaker, I have already announced the building of two of the secondary campuses, that of the new John Gray, and that of Clifton Hunter. The Beulah Smith Campus in West Bay is still the subject of very active negotiations and it is not prudent for me to comment further about that contract at this delicate stage.

That said, I will say this much: If these negotiations fall through, the extended duration for construction announced last week (a week before, actually), affords us the opportunity to re-tender, if that should become necessary, and still be able to have the school completed for the start of school year September 2010.

The Leader of the Opposition commented on the outstanding contribution of 1100 scholarships during his government's four years. Madam Speaker, I am pleased to confirm that in the last three years this Government has awarded approximately 1250 scholarships. And last year alone, a total of 800 scholarship places were granted. This is action, not just words. This increase in scholarships is, in large part, a result of the tremendous growth that has taken place at UCCI under the leadership of its president, Dr. Hassan Syed.

It is therefore with the deepest of regret that I say that the Chairman of UCCI, Mr. Conor O'Dea, has advised me, and the Board has now made a public announcement, that Dr. Syed has resigned. He is receiving medical attention due to a serious illness in Canada, and his resignation was tendered with immediate effect. Given the contribution of this man to the transformation of tertiary education in these Islands, I ask, Madam Speaker, that we all join our prayers together to wish him God's blessings for a speedy recovery.

Madam Speaker, the pace of change within the education service has been and continues to be aggressive. We are ensuring that as we change we consolidate practice and constantly evaluate the impact that any change is having. The priority is that we get it right for the young people of this country.

I am happy to defend my Ministry's record on the transformation of education so far. We have all worked extremely hard to accomplish a great deal so far, based on a clear vision, facts and strategic decision making. If the ill-advised utterances of the Leader of the Opposition are an indication of the way he and his Minister of Education, Mr. Roy Bodden, planned the education service when he led the government, no wonder education was in the mess it was when this Government assumed office.

Contrary to the shady outlines sketched by the Leader of the Opposition, I trust that I have been able, Madam Speaker, to provide you with a more accurate and engaging picture of just a few of the numerous actions and interventions in education instigated by this Government, which will produce brighter futures for our children. These initiatives will be underscored and encouraged by the introduction of new education legislation designed and drafted to reflect the reform and reconstruction of education that is so necessary, largely because of the lack of foresight demonstrated by previous governments, including the UDP Government.

Madam Speaker, if we had built new educational facilities as and when they were needed, I agree it would have been less expensive. But it is not this Government that has shirked its responsibilities to our children and jeopardized our future. Whatever they accuse us of, Madam Speaker—and, Lord, we get accused of many things—they will not accuse this Government of doing nothing. They will not accuse this Government of flying all around the world dreaming up Alnaschar stories of oil refineries and ports up in High Rock; of sitting down and reading book after book after book; of fiddling while the place burned down. They may say we are doing too much. They may say we are too ambitious. I can live with those, Madam Speaker. But history—and I don't mean history a long time from now, I mean immediate history—will show that the critical infrastructural improvements, which this Government has made and is making, are absolutely necessary, that they form the basis for the continued progress, development, of this place.

I can rest, Madam Speaker, every night because I firmly believe that what we are doing is right, necessary, prudent and progressive, and what we were elected to do.

The new Education Law will make provision for education in primary and secondary schools, in tertiary education institutions, for education in early childhood institutions and for lifelong learning. That is not just education for the select few, but for everybody. Nor is it education just for the sake of it; it must be the best possible quality of education for all. If we compromise standards we run the risk of the graduates from our government schools becoming second-class citizens in their own country. This is precisely why the new education legislation will enshrine a coherent and structured commitment to the promotion of high standards in education.

The realignment of Education Services seized the Education Standards and Assessment Unit (formally known as the Schools Inspectorate) providing independent evaluations of all schools in the jurisdiction which served to initiate a school improvement cycle and, where necessary, subsequent reviews to ensure that the quality of teaching and learning in all schools improves wherever possible.

The world continues to watch and track our rapid progress. My Ministry's blog continues to attract a large following. Since it was set up, people in 108 countries have logged on to read it. The very positive story of Cayman's education journey is beginning to appear in international publications, and a number of international speakers are constantly referring to the transformation underway here.

Madam Speaker, I had the great honour and privilege of being invited to speak at the World Education Ministers' Seminar in London in January of this year. What did they ask me to speak about? Building 21st century learning environments.

So, Madam Speaker, while the Opposition continues to languish in the time warp they have created, believing that the world has stood still since they demitted office, we have moved this country forward. We have developed progressive initiatives, plans, and programmes. We have had the flexibility, the insight, to be able to adjust what we are doing to take into consideration the economic environment in which we are now operating, but we have been able to do so in a way that has not derailed any of the major plans and programmes which we are committed to and which we firmly believe the country requires and desires. We have had to defer some things. We have had to delay the projected completion dates of some things, notably the schools, which are near and dear to my heart. But they will proceed, Madam Speaker. They will proceed in the face of opposition from the Leader of the Opposition and his UDP team. They will proceed in the face of opposition from Elio Solomon and his Rooster team, because from my analysis those are the two principal sources of opposition to improving education in these Islands.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, you are winding down?

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, this is about building brighter futures. This is about building a better Cayman Islands, this is about improving the opportunities and the lot of the people who live and work here and, first and foremost, those who are natives of this blessed land.

Madam Speaker, I hope that a lot of soul-searching goes on over on the other side of this House for I shall tell them that, unless something happens to my tongue, the country shall be reminded in the months to come as we continue to make progress and achieve results from the many initiatives of this Government but, particularly, Madam Speaker, nothing is dearer to me than the education subject for which I have constitutional responsibility.

This country shall be reminded every time I have the opportunity to speak, whether it is to two people or to hundreds, whether it is from a public platform or from the Floor of this House, or in somebody's living room, they shall be reminded of the obstacles and the hurdles to improving teaching and learning; to improving opportunities for their children which have been put in the way and are continuing to be put in the way of me and this Government as we try to improve opportunities for Caymanians and the people in these Islands. For that, Madam Speaker, is what the Opposition has done. Whether it is selfishly because they do not want to see other people do well, or whether it is simply part of their political strategy to tear down what this Government is doing, they are seeking to prevent Caymanians, but particularly young Caymanians, from having world class facilities, having world class opportunities to do well, to develop themselves and to be able to contribute to their families, but in the broader sense, to the continued progress and prosperity of these Islands.

That, Madam Speaker, is a terrible legacy for the Opposition to leave. But I have every confidence in the good sense, the good judgment of the people of these Islands. I am nearing the end of my second term in this honourable House. I have been around politics most of my life. I know that while there are criticisms, while we do not always get it right, while people are unhappy about a number of things that the Government has said, done or not done as the case may be, that goes with the territory and with the job you have.

I know that most people in this country understand that there has been good stewardship; that this is a Government that they trusted and the Government that has delivered budgets with operating surpluses, budgets which support the social fabric of this country, budgets which improve the infrastructure of this country, budgets which improve opportunities for Caymanians to do well. Madam Speaker, what more can one ask of a Government, but to do it honestly, as this Government has done?

When people come to make the decision to exercise the franchise they will, as they always do, evaluate who is best to serve as their representative; who is best to give them the kind of government that they want, that they can be proud of. I know that when they look at the other side led by the Leader of the Opposition they will do as they did in May 2005—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I have given you an additional 10 minutes, can we wind down now please?

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: They will do, Madam Speaker, as they did in May 2005. They will judge them and find them wanting.

Madam Speaker, it has been an honour to be able to contribute to this debate on the Budget [Address], Throne Speech and Policy Statement by the Leader of Government Business. I thank you for your indulgence and I thank the broader listening community for their indulgence in listening to what I have had to say.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

Honourable Minister responsible for Health and Human Services.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. What an act to follow!

As I listened to the Minister of Education, it was very touching remarks. As I rise to make my contribution to the Throne Speech and Budget [Address] debate, it is ironic that the two pledges and highlights within the "Red Book", the PPM Manifesto, were the focus on education, first, and healthcare and human services second. I must say that towards that end we have worked diligently.

We are not there yet, Madam Speaker. Over the past three years we have come a long way, but still there is much to be done. Once the focus is put where it should be—on our people, the ultimate beneficiaries of all the efforts we make here in this Legislative Assembly—once we have our people at the forefront despite the interaction at times across the Floor . . . it's about our people and making life better for them.

We had the opportunity this morning because we got the presentation from the National Assessment of Living Conditions (NALC). It gave us a bird's-eye view of where we still have to go to bring all our people along. And I am committed, with the support of my colleagues in this Legislative Assembly, to do [my] endeavour best to make it as good as possible for all residents of these Islands to enjoy peace and tranquility. Madam Speaker, it is something that we all have to work towards.

It was quite timely this morning, as I will now go into more detail in my Ministry, and I will lead with the National Assessment of Living Conditions.

As I said earlier, for decades our economic growth has been remarked upon by many. Perhaps even the envy of some people. All of us have benefited from this and we have all lost something by it. What the National Assessment of Living Conditions has found confirms what many observed; that we have a very low proportion of persons in absolute poverty, or to use a common expression “below the poverty line.” I do not say this as a boast, Madam Speaker, because as long as one person has to do without or go without, none of us in this Christian community ought to be entirely at ease.

Having said that, let me go on to say that this is why we commissioned the National Assessment of Living Conditions study to once and for all have a proper basis for making decisions about support for the needy. We also acted out of an awareness that if we are not careful we will complete the legend of yet another one of those historical places that became so obsessed with wealth that it self destructed.

Madam Speaker, I am certainly in support of economic wellbeing. I am making the point, however, that it is past time for us to make serious efforts to balance the national agenda. And the side of that balance needing more weight added to it is the side calling for a priority place for human development.

I am proud of you, Madam Speaker, in your time here. As I often allude to, we came into this Parliament at the same time. You led a few minutes different. Yes. You have led the charge. I vividly remember you, the lady Member for Cayman Brac and the former lady Member for George Town, Ms. Berna Murphy, and Miss Heather Bodden. But you are still here and so is the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The vision you folks had in making things better for our people, especially focused on the women. And I am pleased to say that we have another lady Member over here on our side, the Third Elected Member for George Town, and she is taking up on those very reins that you guys held on to and have promulgated for so long.

It was interesting as I listened this morning and you brought that point out from the consultants that the women, even though it was not a huge significant difference, but the women are the ones who have the most difficult times, who have it so hard, so very hard in that area when services and money are not available to help them. So, Madam Speaker, you ladies can take pride in the efforts you have contributed to these Islands, the elevation that you have come to—Speaker of this House. I always look up to you, always respect that your heart is there and you proudly represent our Islands when you go away.

Madam Speaker, it seems to me that we must use this priority, the human development that I alluded to earlier on, or continue in default of a conscious choice to simply allow changes such as the displacement of heritage and our heritage keepers. More bluntly, we can chose through the rush to get ahead to continue to spread to our children and elderly the already all-too-common experience of sheer neglect and being unwanted. How sad.

What is my Ministry's initial response to all this? Madam Speaker, the overarching strategic goal of the Ministry of Health and Human Services is to develop a holistic approach to addressing human needs. It is my aspiration. It can only be done with the support of my colleagues here in this Legislative Assembly. In order to accomplish this, we are undertaking major reforms within the Ministry and its agencies, and I will touch on them in due course. We are introducing changes in structure and focus aimed at ongoing alertness to discovery of needs. And we shall advocate for and seek to empower people to take responsibility for and to make right decisions in their own lives, with some support if necessary, for as long as really necessary. I am determined with my Government support and Members of the Legislative Assembly, to convince them and to press myself to accomplish this paradigm shift.

Our task as legislators, and more so Members of Cabinet, is to set a course for the good governance of these Islands, of our people. And in my view, the surest foundation for good governance is the wellbeing of all our people. One may ask why the Ministry needs to reform the way it operates. I will briefly comment on that again.

First, we know that large and growing sums of public funds are being spent on helping the relatively poor to make ends meet. I answered that in a parliamentary question earlier in the year. It was surprising the multiple millions that we spend, but all for the right reason—to make life easier and somewhat better for those who need that help. These are persons who are not absolutely poor, but need a hand up to make it. We are also spending on the care and protection and correction of young persons whose life paths are at risk. We are spending to treat persons who are mostly sick with diseases brought on by poor living habits.

Madam Speaker, I see some of my colleagues riding a bicycle. I would like other areas of exercise. I know, Madam Speaker, that you do your thing in North Side. And it is evident by the condition you are in! I would like to encourage all our people to do this. It is one of the big steps in reducing the overall cost of the provision of healthcare in these Islands. We all know the problem, especially with the cardiac situation. The more we exercise the better off it is for us. And there are so many other benefits. You know, once the weight goes on we are susceptible then to diabetes, hypertension, you name it.

We also know that the growth in these expenses outstrips the growth in our revenue base. The projected growth in these social patterns suggests a picture of our society that would become less and less pleasant to live in with higher percentages of persons in poverty, growing numbers of delinquents or disaffectured youth, and stressed out, chronically ill adults with the associated disabilities, dependencies and dysfunctions that come with such conditions.

In terms of our response to these challenges, we also know these facts: We cannot continue our old Band-aid approach with so little money for poor relief, or inject more cash into healthcare. We have to get at the root causes of these situations. Work right across Government and join our partners in civil institutions to really turn this around. This means lots of rethinking and re-tooling. We must begin to see each of our areas of work through the lens of what the whole human being requires. In other words, we must address human needs in a holistic way.

Over the last two and a half years my Ministry has been analysing the rapid changes within our society and has made several policy proposals to deal with the negative development. This analysis was undertaken with professional assistance of my staff and with broad consultation with residents from all walks of life, as well as regional and international consultants. This exercise has resulted in the development of a strategic plan to guide the work of my Ministry over the next three years, 2007/2010 actually.

One of the activities from which we hope to gain significant insight about the needs of Caymanian society and the consequent requirement for institutional response has been, as talked about earlier, the National Assessment of Living Conditions. I am pleased to report that a national consultation exercise will continue to be held this week on the now draft report.

I would like to take this opportunity, Madam Speaker, to encourage everyone to take time to attend the public meeting on Friday at Sir Vassel Johnson Hall at the University College of the Cayman Islands and please offer their comments on the draft report.

I also trust that all Members of this honourable House will play their part in supporting the implementation of the recommendation arising from this historical study. I have no doubt in the commitment of my colleagues here.

To do business differently also requires updating the Ministry's vision, mission and strategic goals to reflect the needs of current society. As a result of our collaboration across the Ministry, we jointly identified the core values to which the Ministry is committed, namely, justice, empathy, excellence, commitment, and integrity. Based on these values the vision of the Ministry is optimal wellbeing for all.

In keeping with this mission the Ministry of Health and Human Services is committed to empowering people in the Cayman Islands to achieve optimal wellbeing through strategic policies, innovative programmes and proactive services. And we have determined that all of these components must be governed by the highest principles of justice, personal and public integrity and excellence of standards. Based on these principles, the needs of Cayman, and the roles of the Ministry, eight broad strategic goals have been identified for the Ministry of Health and Human Services:

1) Ensure human development is a top priority of the Islands.

2) Achieve seamlessness in policy planning and service delivery. Madam Speaker, what we want to see in this area . . . if one of our clients should be identified, for example, by the Children and Family Services (better known as Social Services) there is a need for counselling or there is a need for medical care, instead of having to go to another agency, that referral can be made directly to one of our partners in delivery services.

3) High quality at the best value for health-care and human services. I do not have to tell this Parliament about the very high cost of healthcare. We continue to try to manage, but one of the best ways to reduce this, as I alluded to earlier on, is taking more responsibility for our own actions.

4) Achieve gender equality, which I know has always been one of your visions, one of your dreams.

5) Strengthen families and communities.

6) Promote wellness and preventative care.

7) Develop civil partnerships to secure and deploy appropriate levels of communal resources.

8) Invest in staff wellbeing.

Madam Speaker, this latter one is important. For the people within my Ministry and the departments for which it is responsible, it is very stressful. It is very difficult. We often have to see the end result of some negative actions which our people end up having to deal with. It is so important that we support staff and give them better working environments and give them time, especially with their families, Madam Speaker. I have always said it is important—the most important thing as far as I am concerned—family relationship.

The clarity that these goals provide has brought us to the conclusion that we need to adapt and make changes in the structure of the entire Health and Human Services system. My Ministry is determined to do it now and act decisively in order to meet the needs and expectations of the Caymanian society, and to do so efficiently and in a sustainable manner.

Madam Speaker, we are aware that a greater degree of personal responsibility is called for, which I have alluded to so many times. In fact, it is necessary to make these proposals work. But people need to be informed and encouraged to participate, first in taking care of themselves and their families, but also in public affairs. Government must become more of an agent of empowerment, not just a regulator or service provider. In fact, empowerment ought to reduce or contain government's role as a service provider. As you have heard me say so many times, give a man hook-and-line, not just a fish. He needs the fish to get started, but give him the ability to raise himself up and provide for himself and his family.

With this principle of empowerment, the reform process was initiated with an internal review of the Ministry's structure and operation. Consequently, policy and administrative work have now been separated in the interest of greater efficiency and staff accountability. Without the invaluable leadership of my chief officer and the dedication of all staff, the completion of the internal restructuring process would not have been possible.

I will now speak briefly to the changes in human services. In the area of human services, the following reforms are being implemented. First, to support the mainstreaming of the gender equality perspective in all areas of government, it was decided to appoint an officer of gender affairs in July this year. This officer will review the national policy on gender equity and equality and the proposed implementation plan.

Madam Speaker, I would just like to pause here briefly to thank you and the Third Elected Member for George Town for travelling to Quito, Ecuador, last year to attend the national conference there so that we may have a better understanding of what the other territories around us are doing. I look forward to continuing to ask you ladies and also the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, to provide assistance in these areas. Once again, it is all for the betterment for our women. And as you know, Madam Speaker, I speak so many times [about] the women of these Islands . . . where would we be today if it wasn't for them?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: When we were away at sea, sometimes . . . yes, they say don't go to see the sea, go to see the feel. There were times when we were living it up. But the ladies were here taking care of those few little dollars we sent home, building our homes. I will always be indebted to the ladies.

I always remember my dear mother, her precious memory . . . because of strong people like her, wonderful people with magnificent personalities.

Madam Speaker, just to divert from where I was in this, when I see the job that you all did with the children in those days and what we, as hard-back men now living here all the time with our families allow our children to get away with. But you ruled with an iron hand and an iron fist. Sometimes all you needed was the look. It is so difficult for us to continue the way we are going, but we can make a difference. And we do not need to bring in consultants to get us back to the days where we were.

I know it is difficult. And the very report I talked about earlier on indicates that. But let us work together. Let us empower our women; let us do what is the right thing for them. They went a long way in building these Islands.

Second, to strengthen families and communities and to better manage respective client needs: The Department of Children and Family Services will be divided into three departments. One will focus on the provision of social services; another will focus on community affairs and adult services, and the other on child and youth development. The latter I look forward to working with my colleague the Minister of Education, the Honourable Second Official Member, and Honourable First Official Member, in trying to deal with the number of these situations. The creation of these three departments will better manage the broadening responsibilities and improve relevant policy development and oversight. It has also been designed to implement recommendations arising from the National Assessment of Living Conditions study.

More specifically, the Department of Social Services will have several areas of concentration:

- 1) To enable vulnerable persons to improve their living conditions.
- 2) To address issues of inequality within society through the development of relevant social policies.
- 3) To work on the development of a national plan for the elderly and enhance their lives via more purpose-built facilities, programmes and services.
- 4) To properly manage financial assistance provisions for those determined to be in need.

Madam Speaker, I visited the Brac last year and saw the addition of the Tibbetts Annex to the Kirkconnell Senior Centre over there, it is quite an outstanding facility. And I do not have to say your dream, especially for North Side, you have been waiting over 15 years on this. My Government has committed to doing one in North Side. We have been up to East End to look at that. We are in the process now of renovating the Golden Age Home in West Bay. Oh, Madam Speaker, it could be so painful when you go down there and see how some of those people live. And I know as a Minister you witnessed this. We, as a nation, cannot allow this to continue when we talk about hedge funds and one trillion dollars. What are our people getting? It is time to put some of this money where our people need it. And I know that the Government that I am now a part of—and this entire Legislative Assembly—think similar when it comes to these people. We have to make it better for them. These things must be across all party lines. It is about our people; it is about making our people better.

The Community Empowerment and development Agency will build on the work of the Women's Resource Centre to provide programmes especially designed to meet the needs of women. I am back right to where I started; to our women.

I would like to take this opportunity to take my hat off to one of your North Side young ladies, Miss Tammy Ebanks Bishop. Tremendous leadership! You know, I must now confess, Madam Speaker, because of that young lady and a paper that I saw her present, I did not quite understand what gender affairs was all about. She is a sharp young lady and has much potential for these Islands in leadership positions and in helping our people and our women (once again) to attain a certain standard that they so deserve.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, if you are going into another section, I will entertain a motion for the adjournment at this time because it's just like two minutes to the hour of interruption.

The Speaker: Continuation of debate on the Throne Speech and Budget Address. The Honourable Minister responsible for Health and Human Services continuing his debate.

Honourable Minister.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When I paused for the intermission yesterday I was speaking on the separation of the different responsibilities within the now existing Children and Family Services that will take place in July.

Before I start this morning, I just wanted to share this one with you and the Parliament, when we were talking about women, which we talked about yesterday.

It says, "God may have created man before women, but there is always a rough draft before the masterpiece."

An hon. Member: Ha, ha.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I think that is very appropriate for our women here.

[laughter and interjections]

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I was asked to repeat that, Madam Speaker, with your permission!

"God may have created man before woman; but there is always a rough draft before the masterpiece."

[laughter and applause]

The Speaker: We need a light note in here this morning.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, when I took the pause yesterday I was commenting on the Community Empowerment and Development Agency. What they will be doing is to build on the work of the Women's Resource Centre to provide programmes especially designed to meet the needs of women; and to facilitate community development via its community development unit and community development officers in all districts. As we know, in the past the community development officers were attached and then they were separated. Now we are bringing them back and making sure that each district has one of them to deal with, not only our seniors, but with anything that needs to be looked at in a comprehensive manner. And also enable our young people to assist them wherever necessary and empower and motivate parents to work together in order to build up positive and effective parenting skills.

On that line, Madam Speaker, with your permission, last night I spoke at a function at the Bodden Town Primary School. I thought it was good information and with your approval I would like to speak briefly to some of the comments I made. Some of this came from a magazine I subscribe to known as the Good News magazine. It was in the March/April 2008 issue. It is referring to 10 practical ways to teach your children right values.

"1. Model good values . . . set a good example for your children. They learn from seeing how you treat them, overhearing your interactions with others and observing what you do in different situations . . .

2. Apologize to your children when you make mistakes. When you fall short with your children, not only do you need to acknowledge your mistake, you also need to tell them you're sorry.

3. Use everyday experiences as a springboard for conversation. Almost every day something happens [in the news or otherwise] that can provide you with an opportunity to teach your children about values. Use these incidents as conversation starters.

4. Read the Bible with your children. Plan some Bible studies . . . each exploring a different moral [value]. You can discuss many Bible stories.

When you're finished reading a Bible passage, talk with your children about specific values and what they have learned.

5. Share your personal experiences. Most of us can look back at our past and think of a lot of experiences that taught us some valuable lessons. Be willing to share some of those stories with your children.

You may also want to share some stories where you made bad choices and had to learn some lessons the hard way.

I am sure, Madam Speaker, when we all reflect back to when we were growing up this can easily come in very handy.

6. Hold your children accountable for their mistakes. Your children may get themselves into trouble now and then.

You may be tempted to rush in and immediately try to 'make things better' for them . . . If you rescue your children every time they make a mistake, they won't take responsibility for their actions.

7. Don't let your children take the easy way out of challenges. You should require your children to finish projects they start, even if their endeavors get tough or tiring.

You don't want them to become quitters.

8. Involve your children in encouraging and helping others. It's amazing how helpful they can be to others just through simple acts of kindness, such as making get-well cards for people who are sick, befriending shy or new kids at school, opening the grocery store door for [an elderly person].

Try to motivate your children to do these kinds of things.

9. And Madam Speaker you have heard me say this many, many, many, many, many, many times Monitor television viewing and Internet use.

Granted, you can't shelter them from everything, but you can and should limit their exposure to television and the Internet.

Consider putting [televisions and] computers only in areas of your home where the whole family congregates together. "You don't want your kids surfing the Web on a computer in their bedroom . . . If your children do have computers in their bedrooms, install parental controls so that they're not going to sites you don't want them to see.

10. Applaud good behavior. When you observe your children doing something good, let them know you are pleased with their actions. Positive reinforcement is a wonderful thing. Sincere praise goes a long way in reinforcing behaviors you'd like to see . . . Point out specific actions your children did that were good, so they know exactly what behaviors they should keep doing.

Finally, in order to instil values such as respect, kindness, honesty, courage, perseverance, self-discipline, compassion, generosity and dependability, we need to communicate with our children. Do not let yourself get so busy that you stop having real conversations with them. It is very, very important.

Talk about what they did right and what they did wrong; how to make better moral decisions and what character traits God wants to see in us."

I will close this section out by commenting on an article from one of our own counsellors located in Cayman Brac Counselling Centre, Joachim J. B. Skyea. He says, "All children are born perfect. They are indeed gifts from God. Unconditional love is the key ingredient in raising healthy children. Responding in anger to a child's behaviour only instils fear and mistrust. Understanding and rewarding good behaviour are the building blocks to successful adulthood. We want our children to have good memories of their younger years, filled with joy, happiness and lots of love. Healthy happy adulthood is dependent upon a healthy happy childhood."

Madam Speaker, I hope that these few pointers will be helpful for especially our young parents and one-parent families that have to deal with the raising of children on their own. Yes, it is a difficult life out there, but if we work together and try to assist wherever possible and whenever necessary to help these parents we can make a difference.

Back to the Community Empowerment and Development Agency, the last area that is talked about here is to empower, motivate and educate young mothers in order to instil confidence and equip them with necessary life skills, which is something I alluded to earlier on.

The Department of Children's Services will:

- 1) Focus on implementing legislation such as the Children Law and the UN Convention on the Rights of the Child.
- 2) Implement the adoption of Children Law and Regulations which is now, Madam Speaker, I am pleased to say, in its final stages, and the recommendations of the National Child Protection Strategy which will be completed this month, May of this year, and December 2006 respectively. Address issues related to the report on risks and vulnerabilities facing children of the Cayman Islands.
- 3) Enhance Youth Rehabilitation by overseeing the operation of the Cayman Islands Youth Facility with the appropriate therapeutic programmes and services so that youth who are experiencing difficulties can have their needs met on island instead of being sent away.

And finally, advocate in conjunction with existing Youth Services agencies for amenities and programming to enhance recreational and psychosocial development opportunities for young persons.

Madam Speaker, in regard to Human Services, the Department of Probation and Aftercare is now called the Department of Community Rehabilitation in order to reflect a broadening scope of activities. It is charged with implementing existing legislation including the Alternative Sentencing Law, 2006, which uses a community based approach to sentencing in order to achieve greater success in rehabilitative efforts. This department will also manage the range of rehabilitation orders handed down by the courts, as well as by the parole board, and will focus on increasing the role of the community in the reintegration of offenders into society.

Planned changes in the Health Services: Within the Health Services, the Ministry is working to implement the following changes: A regulatory department will be established to monitor the delivery of quality healthcare services to our people and compliance with statutory health insurance requirements. In order to establish such a department the Health Insurance Commission and the Health Practice Commission will be placed under common management.

Also on the Ministry's agenda and in fact, already underway, is the implementation of a new governance model for the health services authority. This will in due course require certain amendments to the Health Services Authority Law, 2005, and the development of regulations to clarify the responsibilities of the Minister, the Board and the Chief Executive Officer. These are changes I hope to bring later on this year.

In order to determine how best to structure the new governance model and rebuild health services in the Cayman Islands an essential part of the reform will be the establishment of public health as a government department. The Ministry is currently in the process of issuing a contract for a situational analysis of the public health system. In addition a task force will be established to determine whether responsibility for Cayman Islands National Insurance Company (CINICO) should be transferred to the Portfolio of Finance and Economics. We have briefly talked about this. There is nothing specific looked at. It is just our feeling that a move like this should enhance the independence of CINICO and prevent internal conflicts that may arise as a result of the Health Services Authority, and CINICO falling under the purview of the same Ministry.

The Ministry believes that open debate on the position would be beneficial as this is a matter of national benefit and ownership needs to be clearly established. It is my firm belief that we need to take a very, very close look at the operations of CINICO and deal with whatever changes are necessary.

As honourable Members will be aware, the Government has accepted a motion calling for the establishment of a long term residential mental health facility to enhance the lives of this particular group of the vulnerable in our society and the lives of their families, many of whom have been affected.

Before this facility can be established, however, I have committed to first conducting a comprehensive review of all the relevant services in order to determine the extent to which we are able to address mental health needs and to identify any gaps or shortfalls in the service. Such a review will assist with the development of a national mental health policy for the Cayman Islands, as well as inform the development of an appropriate facility.

The Ministry fully supports streamlining of the mission and staff strengthening of the National Drug Council which is now currently underway. I will consider any necessary changes to the National Drug Council Law, 2003, to ensure the implementation of the National Anti-drug Abuse Strategic Plan and to strengthen the Council's role in advising on policy, conducting research and carrying out roles of coordination as well as monitoring and evaluation of drug treatment programmes.

Madam Speaker, in winding down the section that pertains to my responsibility as the Minister, I must say I wholly and fully believe that reform is essential to the sustainable development of Health and Human Services, as it clarifies the focus of service delivery and operational management. In other words, what people can do for themselves, who needs what kind of help and how it can almost effectively and efficiently work together. Reform will create a system that is better equipped to respond to the changes and needs of our society.

As our ultimate aim is the optimum wellbeing of the public, we cannot compromise on these principles because they not only reassert some of our traditional values, but are also alive to the growing needs of our changing society. We must therefore, all be active and committed partners in this reform because if we do not act now, we could all too easily slide into social crisis. Certainly, at the very least, a high quality of life will ultimately allude us if we do not act, starting at this very upcoming budget, to focus across the board on human development priorities.

Madam Speaker, although my other two colleagues have already spoken on the developments in my own electoral district of Bodden Town, I would like to thank the people who have had the confidence in sending me here for four consecutive terms. I am committed with my two colleagues, the Honourable Minister of Tourism and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, to continue to represent them fairly and robustly.

Madam Speaker, I was amazed that in three short years with the three of us working together as a team, what we have been able to accomplish, put in place, put in train, for the district of Bodden Town. I will briefly touch on some of them.

In another month or so we will be opening the new women's wing of Caribbean Haven; the rebuilding of the J. M. Bodden Memorial Civic Centre. As I visited there with some of the ladies from our senior citizens group . . . it is quite a fine job. I must thank the Leader of Government Business, my colleague, for expediting this. God forbid . . . we know it is not strong enough for a category 5, but I am made to understand that it can be used for up to a category 3 and then subsequently after, if necessary, for housing after a hurricane. It is very well furnished. I think they are just waiting on some chairs. I anticipate the opening some time later on this month.

The new civic centre, which will be built to a category 5 hurricane shelter, which is adjoining the Bodden Town Primary School, emergency services centre in Bodden Town which will house the domestic fire station, ambulance services and the police headquarters in Bodden Town and a number of other police functions will be decentralised into that specific area.

We are very proud, the three of us, of the completion of the Nurse Josie Senior Centre. It is finally becoming functional thanks to the leadership of Miss Flo and her people, Miss Agnes and others. Every Saturday afternoon just about, unless something unusual comes up, between 2 and 6, these ladies gather there for some artwork, some craft. It is good to see how they are coming together and using it as a social outing, especially some of our seniors that will get bored.

I would like to thank my colleague, once again, the Minister for Tourism, for purchasing the adjoining house to the Nurse Josie Senior Centre. This will be fixed up and because they are close together I know we are looking at putting a breezeway between the two and joining them together.

We finally, Madam Speaker, got the Dart Park. All in this very same area is the recently opened Mission House. This little area of Bodden Town, some of the older people are saying that it is bringing life back to that area. There is so much history, tradition and the way of life, how things used to be. A lot of reminiscing takes up their time as they have their little bush tea and so on. It is good to see them coming out. I encourage them.

The Savannah Post Office: Madam Speaker, we waited on this for 16 years. Oh, what would we have done without my colleague from East End, the Minister of Works? I remember when I was in government back, I think, in 1997/1998 I was instrumental in purchasing this piece of land and I think you were in Cabinet at that time, Madam Speaker. The land around the Savannah Primary School came up for sale and we quickly took the opportunity to buy it. We looked not only for the post office, but possibly putting a fire station. But the fire station will now go further up the road which will be more beneficial in that area.

The East/West Arterial: Wow! It is so nice. Madam Speaker, when we now get off work in the evenings, something that used to take half an hour, forty-five minutes . . . especially [for] the people in the little district of Newlands, it must be a real godsend. But by going through that specific area it then frees up all of the other eastern districts and central Bodden Town. Traffic just rolls.

Minister, on behalf of the people of Bodden Town and all the eastern districts, thank you, thank you, thank you! And I know more is to come.

The Speaker: Just teach the police how to use the roundabouts.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, other road works. I never thought I would see the day when we would get Cumber Avenue and certain areas in North Sound Estates . . . and I know that in working with my Cabinet colleagues, and specifically the Minister for Works, the North Sound Estates and a number of other subdivisions, Savannah Acres, Savannah Meadows, we need some work there. But we will be endeavouring as we need to do in all our districts, including yours, Cayman Brac and wherever, to make sure that our people have decent roads to drive on.

The Savannah sea wall: I will say that I am a bit disappointed that we did not get it going. But this Government is committed that once all of the approvals are put in place that we will start that as quickly as possible. Immediately after, God willing, hurricane free season coming up. I know God is going to bless us. I have that feeling, so that we can get our people some relief because for so long I have seen them suffer when the water comes in there. I have said before Madam Speaker, it does not have to be a category 3, 4, or 5, [but] any time the wind hangs to the south out there the water comes through the gully. I know some of your family members, especially after Ivan, caught living holy hell. I know some of my colleagues have land in that area. As a matter of fact, our Minister of Communications and Works lives in that area. But I can assure you that it is not his focus that it will benefit him, but it is all the other people up above and behind going into Newlands that will see the benefit of this.

The new headquarters for the Drugs Taskforce will be started where we will be housing the new boats we are buying. I know that the Second and First Elected Members for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will be pleased to know that one of these boats will be stationed in Cayman Brac. And, as we have said so many times, we have to break that cycle of drugs coming in from wherever. We have to monitor it closely.

CoeWood Beach: Once again back to my tourism colleague, the Minister for Tourism. In his Go East project he has bought two additional pieces of land. We look forward in the upcoming budget to start working on that, clearing it off, securing it, so that it is used for the proper reasons. It is something that Bodden Town will be proud of.

Our Honourable Leader has introduced the Saturday Market at the Grounds. Every time I see people, they so very much appreciate the opportunity to go there. I know this is just the tip of the iceberg, Madam Speaker, as he has some great plans for that area—the Agri-tourism project. This is what visitors look forward to. Where they can go and get a piece of what is actually Cayman. Madam Speaker, I know that you and your people from North Side will have the opportunity to continue to supply us with some of the wonderful produce from up in the North Side district.

I am not a boater per se—I went to sea for two years and every other day I was seasick! But I am pleased to say on behalf of the people of the Savannah/Newlands/Bodden Town district and probably the whole island, once again our Minister of Works is working diligently on the Newlands Ramp at Rackleys [Canal]. I understand it is greatly utilised. Thanks again.

My Minister of Education—and I can thank him on your behalf and on behalf of the people of East End for the planned construction which . . . Madam Speaker, remember just a short while ago you and I went and broke some ground there. But I don't know what happened to that, the first ground. But I can see where the second ground is. That building now will soon become a reality.

The Speaker: We broke it twice.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: In the Frank Sound area.

Madam Speaker, we have come a long way in a short time. Yes, the spending is significant. But it certainly goes on things we need and the buildings cannot be moved and it is all for the benefit of our people, especially our young people—the focus. They are the future of these Islands and must do what we have to.

We also must take care of our seniors. And we have a number of projects as you know ongoing with that.

Madam Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to thank some of the people who are assisting within my Ministry, externally, in trying to assist and encourage people to live and eat healthy. I will speak of Ms. Suzie Soto who has started the Cayman Heart Fund. There will be a fair on Saturday at the Family Life Centre. There will be a seminar Friday evening. This is all about educating our people to live healthy, to eat healthy, which is so very important.

I noted that in today's Caymanian Compass one of our local doctors said "A healthy diet for children should limit the intake of fats, salt and sugars. When feeding children from the family pot, these should be added after taking out the child's portion. A balanced diet, along with regular exercise is vital for healthy growth and development."

I must also take my hat off to the Cayman Islands Cancer Society for the proactive way they are promoting wellness and health. Dr. Yen and Miss Christine Sanders did a wonderful job in raising funds for the mammography machine at the hospital. It just goes to show, Madam Speaker, when people in the private sector get involved and work in partnership with government, the NGOs (Non-governmental organisations) . . . This is a place we all live in. By doing these things it makes the Cayman Islands a better place for all of us to live. It is investment for the future. Once the investors, visitors, tourists see an island that people can look up to, that has standards, it means well for us.

Madam Speaker, this leads me into a letter that I see in the Cayman Net News today. We all know the furore that has been going on in regard to the situation at Royal Palms. I think this individual looked at it in a light that we all as Caymanians would reflect and support.

It is not about tearing people down, it is about others respecting a little island nation, as we found out yesterday, probably of an indigenous population (if I can use that word. I have to be careful now in the fancy world out there of the 25,000/30,000 of us that are left), a lifestyle that we have always lived by that we try to adhere and, oh my goodness, there are many of us here that are hypocrites and whatever. But besides that, there are certain standards we have always lived by. But it is just like Mr. Reid . . . not necessarily all of this, probably for effectiveness I should.

 “Dear Sir,

“Cayman’s public decency laws are supposed to reflect the moral and cultural views of our community. Homosexuals should not get preferential treatment in an effort to be politically correct in our treatment of gays. I have personally asked even heterosexual couples who were behaving inappropriately in my presence to stop, or take it to the privacy of their bedroom. The public’s views on proper behaviour are to be protected by the law.”

“Public decency laws are meant to set out the minimum standards of acceptable behaviour for our society. Standards of decency will vary depending on the culture of the particular country”, which I alluded to earlier, Madam Speaker. We have always lived by this, at least for my 63 years. “Most nations have laws against indecency, which prohibit certain acts and behaviour. Conservative Muslim nations, for instance, have very strict public decency laws which regulate dress (no scantily dressed cheerleaders) and conduct (no suggestive behaviour).”

“English law defines indecency as ‘anything which an ordinary decent person would find to be shocking, disgusting, or revolting’.” And evidently, Madam Speaker, this was the feeling of some of the people at Royal Palms that night. “In Cayman, that must include public sexual displays by homosexuals as well as other acts. It is irrelevant that such behaviour might not be “shocking” to people living in England, which is far more liberal and its people are accustomed to seeing such public behaviour. Cayman is a more conservative, Christian community and its laws on ‘decency’ are therefore different.”

“Even though it is liberal towards gays, England still also has laws on public morals and decency. . . .” Quite interesting, Madam Speaker. “. . . against homosexuals, such as “solicit- ing/importuning between men for an immoral purpose”: (section 32, Sexual Offences Act). These offences are measured by that society’s view of decent public behaviour or immoral conduct.”

“Clearly, we need to urgently review whether Cayman’s public decency laws are able to uphold our ideals of decent public behaviour. The police appear to have concluded that our laws are not sufficient for them to take firmer action against Mr Chandler’s offensive behaviour.”

“Mr Chandler and other critics are now declaring Cayman to be some backwater nation of bigots.” How sad, Madam Speaker. We who have obtained one of the highest standards of living literally in the world and because we want to uphold a feeling of our people of our ancestors for 500 years, people are going to call us bigots? You’ve got to be joking! “However, Mr Chandler should bear in mind how peacefully his destructive little antics were handled – by all accounts, politely and diplomatically.” Madam Speaker, just to intervene here, I understand that when this individual was told to get his act together he did that to the police. Oh my goodness. “There are many other places where his disrespectful and deliberately offensive behaviour to the locals would have elicited a far different response from the public and the authorities.”

Maybe he should go to Jamaica or one of those far-east countries. Why can’t people respect other people’s culture and wishes?

“If Cayman is too conservative for your particular tastes or lifestyle, then you may choose to go elsewhere. As much as I can try not to judge, I draw the line at having you flaunt your [lifestyle] [homosexuality] in my face, in my home, in my country! I resent any effort to turn Cayman into a mini-England or a mini-USA . . .” (or a mini-anywhere, I will add) “. . . to suit your selfish purposes. Cayman . . .” and the world knows “. . . is a conservative Christian community and we are not comfortable with displays of [this type of homosexual] behaviour in public. If you cannot accept or respect the views of your host country, you should reconsider whether this is a place for you.

And in the final paragraph, Madam Speaker, it is advocating and suggesting to us to put in place proper legislation that defines.

Madam Speaker, this leads me into an article that I have saved for two or three months when we were talking about the proposed Bill of Rights. This article appeared in the Caymanian Compass and comes from the Human Rights Committee. I quote: “There is concern amongst the Human Rights Committee that sending legislation back to Parliament. . . [and I am referring to earlier on when they talked about Courts would be able to make a declaration if a piece of local legislation breached rights contained in the Constitutional Bill of Rights.] . . . would evolve, become highly political and contentious issues said the Deputy Chairman at a meeting in South Sound.”

They go on to say: "In a small legislature that has a small number of representatives they could become massive election issues in essence, giving the particular issue greater significance than they had, initially. Instead, the Human Rights Committee wants any new constitution to allow courts to strike down domestic legislation that conflicts with fundamental rights contained in the Bill of Rights."

I know, I am a Cabinet Minister, and I have not discussed any of this with my colleagues. But I am prepared to say that as long as I am a representative of the people and I do not have to sit in Cabinet, I will not ever endorse that the courts have the ability to strike down any legislation that we, the elected representatives of the people, put in place.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Hear, hear.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, we have come a long way. For those who may not believe—and I am a firm believer in the Bible—there are standards we need to [uphold.] We have been blessed, miraculously blessed. As we look, and we went through the pure hell of Hurricane Ivan, one or two lives lost. It is a total miracle when three point something billion dollars of damage was done and look where we are less than four years later with God's help, and all of us as representatives working together, have rebuilt these Islands.

There are many tough times out there, Madam Speaker; situations we have no control over. No control. We get criticised for the high cost of living. What do you do? What is the great United States doing?

The cost of fuel, Madam Speaker: A few weeks ago the Organization of the Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) said—they finally put it in the paper—that even if they added one million barrels a day to production it is not going to stop it from going to $200 a barrel. As residents of these Islands we need to be prudent in what we do. We need to think about what this can mean to our people, especially those on the lower end; those that were talked about in the National Assessment of Living Conditions, how we are going to make it easier for them. How are we going to assist them? Those one-parent families!

I know our Leader has been meeting with the business community and they have literally indicated that right now their hands are tied. Most of the difficulties come from the source of where they buy their goods. But we are committed in the PPM Government to deal and work and try to make it easier for our people.

The Government has decided to add another 10 per cent onto the Seamen and Veterans and also the financial assistance to those that are in the area of indigence. It is not a lot, but whatever we need to do we will continue to do it. These Islands have a group of very concerned and dedicated representatives. I remember when I and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman talked. One of his philosophies that I think we are all adopting is let us not give them a fish, let us give them hook and line; let us provide, let us continue to educate.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Empower.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: And the word that the Third Elected Member for George Town uses, the real word, and we talk about it so much—empower. Empower our people. Provide areas where they can benefit. They can learn and build themselves and their families up.

Madam Speaker, I will table this little comment from a past legislator, some said one of the greatest politicians to ever sit in this House was my cousin, James M. Bodden, Sr. It is so pertinent to Cayman as we continue to develop. He said, "We must welcome the future remembering that soon it will be the past. And we must respect the past knowing that once it was all that was humanly possible." I think that reflects well on all of us here as legislators what we have done in the past.

One last quote, Madam Speaker, and I got it this morning from one of my constituents, Miss Twyla Vargas. Every now and then she sends me one. This pertains so much to all of us. It's headed "Laws of Success" and it's very short. "The greatest mistake is giving up. The greatestcrippler is being afraid. The greatest handicap is ego. The most potent force is to be positive. The greatest thought is God. And the greatest victory is to be blessed."

Madam Speaker, I want to thank you and Members of this House and all our support staff for getting us through another financial year. I want to commend the Honourable Financial Secretary for bringing once again a positive Budget, a Budget that will benefit our people living here that have seen some difficult times.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.15 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.15 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on the Throne Speech and Budget Address. Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Communications and Infrastructure.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to make my contribution to the Throne Speech of 2008 delivered by His Excellency the Governor on 30 April to this honourable House; the Policy Statement delivered by the Leader of Government Business on the same day; and the presentation of the Budget and Budget Address delivered by the Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson, the Financial Secretary and Third Official Member.

Madam Speaker, I know that much has been said so I will not keep this House very long for fear of repeating much of what has been said already. Having said that, I believe there are a number of areas I would like to respond to, particularly some of the positions and statements made by the Opposition.

Before addressing some of those, let me say that this is my 8th contribution to the Throne Speech in this honourable House since being here. I should thank the people of East End for trusting me and giving me the opportunity to represent them. I will forever be indebted to the people of East End. I just hope that I have done them proud.

Madam Speaker, if I were a man of the perceived cloth that the Leader of the Opposition puts himself up to be, I would start with a prayer too, like he ended his contribution. But I know this is the silly season and the Leader of the Opposition knows that too. In the 8 years I have been here I have learned to understand this man. Madam Speaker, this will be the second election that I have been in this honourable House for. The last election he started going to church. This election he is going to church again. A couple of elections ago, when he was removed from Cabinet, he went to church to look sympathy and to try and fool the people of this country.

But his prayer at the end of his contribution is the most shameful thing I have really heard him do. If he is supposed to be born again I would advise that people take a serious look at him and his professing to be born again, because he certainly does not know anything about forgiveness, tolerance, all those adjectives that support or should be a part of a born again Christian, when he would pray damnation on another person, on a country, because this party is the party that governs this country. And he is praying damnation!

Madam Speaker, I would welcome his preacher to sit him down in a confession and let him confess his sins. We will be long past the election by the time that's finished, but at least we won't have him during the election.

I was not here for the debate, but I really thought the Leader of the Opposition went too far. He also, I believe, went too far when it comes to conventions and the respect that must be held for the Chair. I am not here to question the relationships in this honourable House, but, certainly, the Floor of this honourable House is not the place to do it. That is not to be debated on the Floor of this honourable House because there must be respect shown to the Chair. And he knows; trust me Madam Speaker, 24 years in this honourable House. And he has travelled widely. He has travelled to many Commonwealth parliaments and he understands. He understands! But he challenges everybody, especially now when it is time for election.

Madam Speaker, I think it is disgraceful when you challenge the Chair in that manner. I am not saying the Chair cannot be wrong, but you should not challenge the Chair in that manner. There has to be some discipline. But the Leader of the Opposition has no discipline. He has none. And it is disrespectful! Not only for this honourable House, but it is disrespectful to the people who elected him, who have sent him back here on six consecutive elections. Six, Madam Speaker! He must know better by now! He is bordering on disgraceful as a representative. He needs to know his place. But he likes jumping up in here and throwing up his voice. But the Leader of the Opposition's problem is coming home to roost. He thinks that he can fool the people all the time. You can fool some of the people some of the time, but you will not fool all of the people all of the time. And it is coming home to roost for him.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition likes to stand on the Floor of this honourable House and criticise. And, yes, he comes up with all these grandiose schemes. But then he comes around and tells us that he has been in parliament for 24 years. I wonder if he is just getting these revelations now so that he can come up with these grandiose schemes. Twenty-four years? And he did nothing for them? He did nothing to promote them? All of a sudden, now, this government has to do it? Or this government should be doing it? And he cries, "I told you so. The economy is in doldrums." Nevertheless, he says that he trusts the Financial Secretary, the Third Official Member, to bring to this honourable House a fiscally prudent budget. And he talks about how the UDP was so prudent in their fiscal management. Well, Madam Speaker, if you're doing nothing you can have a lot of money! That's how that works.

Madam Speaker, I have three years as a Minister, and four years in the land of wilderness that he had me in over on that side in the Opposition. But I have paid my dues. And he's not coming back over here if I have anything to do with it because if he talks about fiscal management, he must tell the people of this country exactly how he can talk about leaving $80 million in the coffers. Twenty million of it was borrowed money. They borrowed $20 [million] at five point something per cent, put it on fixed deposit and were only getting one point something per cent. Now you tell me what kind of fiscal management of this country that was!

Hon. V. Arden McLean: We have not borrowed it and put it in bank yet. We borrow it and we build.

And we built roads into West Bay which that gentleman, the Leader of the Opposition, told the developers of Ritz Carlton would not be built for 15 years. That is why I had so much trouble with them.

But he will come in here and accuse me of building the road into West Bay for my friends; my friends? I built it for the people of West Bay—things he did not do for the people of West Bay. That's why I did it. He told them not to worry about it because it would be 15 years before we do it. He was rather presumptuous in how long he was going to stay at the helm. Madam Speaker that is why I had so much trouble to get that road completed.

That is the same Father of this House who has been returned five times straight to this honourable House. Why is it now that he is lobbying me to gazette it into West Bay? Madam Speaker, I made a promise to the people of West Bay that I would gazette it before I leave by the help of God. Soon come. Within the next few weeks I hope I will be gazetting that road into West Bay. At least it will be gazetted. I did not promise anyone I would build it. Now, when the PPM is returned for its second term I will put it into West Bay. That's only 8 years, Madam Speaker. He had 24! It is the same land. It has not moved. We may have lost a little beach on West Bay Beach, 10 or 15 feet. Same place!

But you know what it is Madam Speaker? He is so embarrassed by that same road to the people that he claims to serve so faithfully, he is embarrassed because he—same said guy—was part of the destruction of the Master Ground Transportation Plan. Same said guy! Leader of the Opposition—the First Elected Member for West Bay.

I had to come along now some 18 years later, Madam Speaker—some 18 years later and try to get a road into West Bay. Why doesn't he stand up on the Floor of this honourable House and talk about that? That is why it is so expensive for us to get the Esterly Tibbetts extension into West Bay.

He stood on the Floor of this honourable House and voted against the Master Ground Transportation Plan that the former Minister, Linford Pierson brought to the Floor of this honourable House. He killed it! Do you know who else killed it too? Truman Bodden! Do you know who else killed it too? John McLean! They all killed it.

Now they have the nerve to criticise me; those same three. Do we not see the letters in the papers from John McLean and Truman Bodden? Yes! They know what is supposed to be done now, but they couldn't do it then! Do you know what happened to them? They couldn't multi-task; that was their problem—one thing at a time.

Madam Speaker, they must understand . . . and Madam Speaker I understand. God knows I understand that the debate and counter debate in politics means we are in an adversarial environment, eh? But when the microphones are on, when it is my turn to speak, it's my turn too. Everybody gets their turn. And one side of the story is good until the other side has been told. And the side that they would prefer this country to forget is the one where they killed the Master Ground Transportation Plan. The process that Mr.

Linford Pierson brought here was merely to gazette it as a road corridor. We could have built it over a longer period of time. But they killed it, not me. I wasn't here then. I sat on the Planning Authority at that time. When I approved it, I gave it my blessing on the Planning Authority.

But you see, Madam Speaker, there has to be vision in your leaders or your people will perish. They had no vision. The same lack of vision then, he is now carrying on today and we will never, never get any further with people like that at the helm of this country. But the future will tell the story. And I will await the future.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition made some broad-brush statements in his contribution about cronyism, that all the cronies of this government are getting all the work. Madam Speaker, he better stay clear of that, you see. He had better stay clear of that because I did not have any partner, I do not have any partner in any business venture, that as a chairman I give consultancy to. I have none! I hope he can say the same. Madam Speaker, by extension I am painted with that brush and I take offence to it. I have said in this honourable House before—this is my third job. In the [other] two instances, going to sea [was] my first one, [then] working for CUC, and now in politics. And in those two instances I have taken less each time to come and do the job.

Madam Speaker, the Minister for Education said yesterday, I think it was, that anyone who walks out of here a rich man, if he did not come in a rich man and he walks out a rich man, he has taken something from somebody. Madam Speaker, politics is not where you make money. I want everybody in this country to know that.

I have conducted myself with honesty, integrity and justice for all. Madam Speaker, I did not say I did not make mistakes, but it was not intentional. I never made it intentionally to defraud my country or my people of anything. I hope everybody else can stand up and hold their hands up. I never once used my position to get anything to enrich myself, nor my family. I hope everybody can say the same.

So, these broad brushes that they use, these sweeping statements, they must understand that people are going to reply to them—and I will! Anyone who encroaches on my integrity must understand that I am going to reply. They might not like it, but they are going to hear it.

Madam Speaker, the Opposition, including the Leader of the Opposition, the Second Elected Member [for West Bay] and, of course my good beloved friend from Cayman Brac, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac . . .

The Speaker: And Little Cayman.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: And Little Cayman. How could I forget Little Cayman? That is a shame!

But Madam Speaker, they are crying doom on the country. I understand politics too. I have been in it quite a while, much longer than I have been sitting in here.

The Opposition is the government in waiting. That is the fundamentals of being in here. They represent a certain sector of the population. The Government is responsible for governance. The Opposition needs to get here. They need to put us over there. Now, if they agree with everything the Government does, the people will naturally say why change when there is no need to change? That is the basics. That is fundamental.

There needs to be a line drawn in the sand with different direction, different objectives, different goals, for the people to be able to change the Government. But when the Opposition is on that campaign to do that, it should not be a campaign of paranoia. They should not frighten the people of the country. What they need to do (if I can give them some advice), is to support the principle, oppose the method. But they oppose everything. That is not the way to do it. The objective should be one country, one objective, one principle; betterment of our country.

And Madam Speaker, every one of us in here, I am convinced believes in that. But the Leader of the Opposition in his infinite wisdom and his run to try and get back out here is frightening people. And that is not good. And you know, Madam Speaker, there will be people out there who will listen to him and spread that fear amongst the people.

I am not saying that everything is glory land. I would never say that. We all have challenges. This country has challenges. But this PPM Government has taken it by the horns and we have addressed those challenges as best we can within what we have, within the resources that we have. And that is all we can do. And we must continue to lift up our people and support them.

But the Opposition is no help. All they talk about is that people are coming to their homes looking for assistance. Well, they come to ours too! And I respect that, Madam Speaker. There are some people in this country who are having some difficult times. And I encourage the rest of us to support them and help them. Let us get them up to where they are supposed to be.

Madam Speaker, if the economy is in a doldrum the Leader of the Opposition has assisted with it. He has done nothing during his tenure to better the people of this country. His latest thing was [when] he gave away over 3,000 status [grants]. As a matter of fact, Madam Speaker, some of those people have not even picked them up yet. He needs to be reminded of that because they do not even know that they have it—still over 200 to this day! I do not know whether they are in Timbuktu or the middle of the desert. Archangel Russia? I don't know. Over 200 have not picked it up yet, Madam Speaker. That was his contribution.

Madam Speaker, I believe that this country was treating people extremely unfair. There are many people who received that status who were deserving of it. I always oppose the method he used to try to keep his party in power. The method was wrong.

I think I should clear up some of what I heard him say on the radio a few mornings ago, he and the Second Elected Member for West Bay, I believe it was . . . or the Third . . . sometimes I get confused. Or both, because one can't breathe without the other. All three of them said that the PPM was involved in it too. And the PPM got what it wanted out of the grants; that we had our agents behind the scenes putting in names.

Madam Speaker, I have said this before publicly and I am going to say it again: If there is one person in this country who received a grant during that fiasco as a result of me, I challenge them, I invite them to meet me in the middle of George Town and we will have the press and point straight in my face and tell me where I did it. Madam Speaker, I have been responsible for recommending many, many people in this country for status because I believe they deserved it. And I wrote and my signature is on those letters. Bring them and I will admit to them. But I did not do anything during that time.

Madam Speaker, if you will remember, we were in the Opposition and the then Leader of Government Business walked right over to the Leader of the Opposition (the now Leader of Government Business) and handed him a piece of paper and said he was issuing 500 statuses for the Quincentennial. And he was going to allow the PPM to have 35. Those were the numbers. And the Leader of the Opposition then (the now Leader of Government Business) turned around and said so to us, and I said, "Give it back to him. He wants to issue them, let him pick them. Arden will not be submitting any names." Not one of us submitted any names, unless somebody did it behind my back. But I know I speak for myself. I did not.

So, the Leader of the Opposition needs to stop talking that now too. This man is hell bent to destroy every . . . what is it? Character assassination in this country? You cannot be doing that to get your political success or maintain your political popularity. He is doing nothing.

He told me one time that I should not be here when he was in the government because it was a waste of government's money. Humph! Well if it was a waste of government money then, it is worse now with him—and we went and raised his pay!

He is warming up the seat. He needs to pass the helm over and go home. The country is not getting value for money out of him. Half the time he is not here. He is not here today. He has not been here 90 per cent of this meeting.

One thing they will not say about me, Madam Speaker, I am here. They will not say that I am not here. I had a family emergency recently and I was not here, but I am here before anybody else—before 10 o'clock too. And I am in my office in the Glass House before 8 o'clock in the morning too. I have said it before.

My father told me two things won't kill you—crying and hard work. Stop your crying and get the job done! I have worked hard, Madam Speaker. And I take offence to the Opposition painting me with the same brush they paint everybody else with. I have worked hard. I have neglected my family, I have neglected my two sons and my wife to pay my dues and my father's dues back to this country. And the likes of him, the Leader of the Opposition, is going to question my integrity? Wrong man! He may put the saddle on me, but he won't put any bridle on me! Him, nor anyone else in this country! Tell him to go and question his own integrity. Don't question mine! And he needs to do that. The future must tell the story. He will not be any judge of that. He will not be any judge of the future—at least not mine!

As bad as the others are, they do not go that far. The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, and even the Third Elected Member for West Bay, as bad as they are they do not go that far, painting you with all kinds of brushes.

Now, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I am sure the Leader of Government Business will deal with her when he gets up because she went at him. He will deal with her and will respond accordingly with her in kind too, I'm sure. But he won't be as loud as I am, Madam Speaker. But the country remembers now that that is how I came in here. I am going to leave like that too.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Yeah, yeah, yeah. This is my country, Madam Speaker. I have no place to go. And the Leader of the Opposition is not going to push me out.

If he thinks that I am going to go quietly into the night, he missed the boat! He will not take me out like how he has taken out all those alliances he had in West Bay. You cannot do that to me. I will fight . . . woe be on to this country, Madam Speaker.

I do not have a problem with many of those people on the Opposition, you know. Capt. Eugene, the Fourth Elected Member, is a good friend of mine. Pleasant person, good man! He will not accuse you of all those things. But that Leader of the Opposition, Madam Speaker, I become incensed when he starts with his behaviour.

A drowning man will grasp at any straw. He just . . . you know . . . The only thing he talks about is that we are borrowing too much money. And the same persons—his constituents . . . I hope he knows his constituents are now going to the Bodden Town constituency. He likes to say that he trusts the Third Official Member. Well, I would draw his attention to page 13 of his constituent's presentation here.

It says, "Maintaining Fiscal Prudence in Challenging Economic Times." That is what the Third Official Member chose to call his presentation, Madam Speaker. I would draw the Opposition's attention to page 13, which is "Compliance with the PMFL (Public Management and Finance Law)." It was not easy for us to ensure that page 13 of the Financial Secretary's Budget Address was compliant. We had to cut some things. And we made no bones about that. That is what it is about. But, certainly, if you would listen to the Opposition—when the microphones are on, that is—they would want us to do nothing in challenging economic times.

I thought the responsibility of Government was to ensure that we shore up the economy and make sure our people are working. But if you would listen to them when the microphones are on, you are not supposed to do that. Why don't they go out and explain to the people if we did not start the schools or the government building. The Leader of the Opposition says people come to his doors. He thinks plenty are coming now? They will be lining up straight up along West Bay Beach if the government did nothing and does what he did. If we were to do what he did when he was here, hold that money, borrow it and put it in the bank for less interest than he was paying so that he could look good. It did not work then; it is not going to work now.

We need to ensure that the economy is propped up during these times. That is what this Government is about. What is the use of getting revenue into the Government and our people are suffering. That just does not make sense. Not to me. We need to ensure we put aside for the rainy day, but at the same time we need to make sure we keep the economy rolling.

But here is how they would do it: They would diversify the economy by bringing in an oil refinery. You know he has really got it bad now, Madam Speaker. An oil refinery! Madam Speaker, I would remind the Leader of the Opposition that I also served my time in Hell, and that was being a seaman. Okay? I did that too. For those who do not know, I can show you the discharges; plenty of them.

Madam Speaker, an oil refinery in this country? Now, I would like to see him mix that with the tourism that he is so passionate about. Mix that with the pretty white sand along West Bay Beach. He recently took me on about the Ironwood Forest. He portrays himself now as an environmentalist too. I want to see him mix a refinery with that.

Madam Speaker, my good friend, the Prime Minister from Dominica, was just playing with that idea. When I spoke to him recently he said, "No, no, no, no, no. I was only exploring the possibility." And hear where he was with our good friend south. Now if you think that isn't criminal at large . . . and I hope, I hope, that the Leader of the Opposition is not toying with the idea of our good friend south, out there in the southeast. He talks about the borrowings of this PPM Government, the UDP would put us down a good road too. Plenty worse, Madam Speaker! Trust me!

That is how he wants to diversify the economy, bring an oil refinery. I have walked through many, many during my tenure as a seaman. Madam Speaker, you smell them for miles. It is the dirtiest place you will ever go to. And the threat of a spill is ever so present. Tell him come with it. How are we going to unload the ships? Now I know how he's going to do that, because he also talked about putting a dock in the east . . . ah! In the east, again; he starts that again. But he wants to do that for cruise liners instead of putting it in George Town. So, I suspect if he was allowed to do a dock in East End, the tourists will come in on the passenger liners, they will get off right next to the tankers with crude oil, and then they will walk through the refinery, get in the car, and then we will put them on the road that is yet to be built, the East/West Arterial, and bring them down to George Town.

Now, if you think there are not plans . . . that is the only way you can figure it out Madam Speaker, because the size tankers that he needs to bring here for it to be viable, either they are coming out of the Middle East, Pakistan, Iran, or Kuwait, one of them, wherever. Tranship somewhere else because they cannot get into Cayman. Or they are coming from the south. And if they are coming from the south, that means he is going to have a personal interest in the building of the oil refinery because we do not have the facility here to unload those large tankers. We have the depth of water, but we will have to build offshore discharge facilities. Or, he is going to dig out the North Sound where we have calm water. Now, if that is what the country can look forward to, if they ever put him back at the helm, that is a serious indictment on him before he starts!

Madam Speaker, I have said to this country before, we have done our best as the PPM Government. We have steered the course. Sometimes we had to go off a little bit, but we got back on it. We have kept the faith. We have worked hard. If the country needs to change us, understand that I too will have to live here forever. And this is not crying now, Madam Speaker. No, no, no, no, no. I too have to live here forever. So I beg of the country if you do not want PPM, make sure you find someone else, not the UDP! Find someone else, Madam Speaker. That is all I beg of this country. It does not have to be me, but make sure it's not them! Madam Speaker, I hope they are listening to this: Do not make it be the UDP.

My father told me dog will eat your supper. Trust me, Madam Speaker, dog will eat our supper if they ever take over the helm of this country again, woe be on to the . . . double oil refineries? Oil refineries, them neon signs are going to be up too. Yeah, and plenty, plenty, plenty, plenty, Blackjack. And plenty, plenty slot machines. Every hotel bottom floor will be transformed into a casino.

My fellow Caymanians, whoever is hearing my voice, it does not have to be Arden McLean but make sure . . .

The Constitution is currently going through a lot of debate about human rights and the churches are weighing in on it, and thankfully so. But if you think that's bad, wait for the gambling. The churches are really going to need to keep the faith then. The Christians will really need to keep the faith because it is right around the corner if they ever, ever make the Leader of the Opposition become Chief Minister or Leader of Government Business or Premier in this country again. He does not spend enough time in this country to know what is going on in it. I am convinced that he is checking out and seeing how these things are done so that he will have a lot of experience in it when he is ready to bring it.

Madam Speaker, I realise I have gone off a little bit, but this is the time when the Opposition takes everybody for granted. I think it is necessary that I respond to some of their rhetoric. It is nothing but political rhetoric. We will soon have enough time for that. The campaign trail will soon start.

Madam Speaker, I would now like to turn to some of the areas that I hold responsibility for. But before going on to the Ministry, I would like to talk about some of the things that are being done in my constituency, in particular, and then talk about some of the things we hope to do and what has been done in North Side as well, your constituency Madam Speaker. I have to look out for the eastern side too. I have responsibility for that as well.

The Speaker: Do what I asked you to do.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, in the district of East End, my constituency, a number of projects are ongoing for the people of that district. The wall in the lower end of Beach Bay at the beginning of the district, and at Clarinda Beach along High Rock, as most people would know, is currently out for tender. It has taken us a while to get to the engineering on it and it is now out for tender. It will hopefully come in before the end of this fiscal year.

That wall is really needed for the district of East End because East End was cut off during Hurricane Ivan. The sheet piling is in. I can say [doing it in] the manner in which it was done—by putting in the sheet piles first, under one contract, and then do the wall under another contract—we saved significant sums. And then the Clarinda Beach area will be completed as well.

We are currently working on the boat ramp and jetty at Gun Bay. One of the policies I have taken since being a Minister is that from here on jetties exposed to the ocean—such as North Side, East End, Boddin Town—will have to be built out of concrete because the first nor'easter and the wood ones are destroyed. The first one to be built out of concrete with Government is the one at Gun Bay. It is anchored about five feet into the bedrock and then the boards will be able to come out and water can pass through. But this is the third one being built back there in as many years. Dean mashed up and destroyed the most recent one.

Madam Speaker, the Ministry of the Leader of Government Business has just purchased 8 acres of property to do houses in the district of East End and we are looking at an additional 14 acres or thereabouts for the future. I know that notices have been sent out to adjoining landowners about this subdivision, and there are 56 lots that the land can hold, that is, under the Government's low cost housing. I am planning, along with the Housing Corporation, to go to East End hopefully (it is scheduled for the 29th of this month) in order that we can showcase what that subdivision is going to be like and get people signed up for it.

There are a number of other things. Other people are going to do similar subdivisions in East End as well and I am trying to support them in order that we can have housing available in the district of East End.

Madam Speaker, one of the things I said when I came in was, like Cayman, East End is not for everybody. East End has a uniqueness about it that will not allow everybody to come in, and North Side as well. I said there was going to come a time when I was not going to support any more hotels in East End. And that time has come. Right now, Island Residences is getting ready to break ground. And Mandarin is not too far behind, at long last. And that is it. I am not supporting any more for East End. I do not have the labour up there. And then if we get it like West Bay Beach you will not be able to see the sea again. And that is not what the people of East End and North Side are used to.

That is not what the Go East Initiative is about either. It is about empowering Caymanians and trying to get them in place and make them share in this economic miracle. I am not supporting any more. I am not!

So, all those who come behind these two will have to find somewhere else to go because we cannot sustain it. The roads will not sustain it. The infrastructure will not sustain it. I mean, this is potentially going to bring us 2,000 more people in East End with these five-star hotels.

East End was not built for another 2,000 people. We do not even have apartments to accommodate these people. So it is going to be a breakneck rush now and I hope Caymanians, East Enders in particular, will build some apartments and share in some of this. I understand their reluctance because ground has not yet been broken for these, but as soon as it does it will be an indication that they can commence.

I have been discussing with the owner of the land (that the Leader of the Opposition is planning on building the dock on) to go ahead with an 18-hole golf course. I have discussed it with many of my constituents and they support that over any dock in that area. Of course, there is going to be a lot of work to put in an 18-hole golf course in that area. Certainly, there will be blasting; but not as much as digging it 60 feet deep in that area. So, I believe it will marry good with the other two five-star hotels that are planned up there. And besides, this country needs another 18-hole golf course. And East End is a beautiful and most appropriate place to put it.

I hope the environmentalists do not come up there and lay in front of the bulldozers because I never heard of that land being of any value in that regard. Hopefully, we can get started on that. I support that. I support a golf course being right there along the scenic coastline, right there at Clarinda Beach. We have a lot of land there. I think they call it a designer golf course by one of the big golf stars. I think that would be an added [attraction] to the Cayman Islands and, in particular, to the district of East End.

Madam Speaker, we have plans to build a new retirement home in East End because the home there is really not suitable. It does not have the proper wheelchair access or oxygen, nothing of that nature that is piped into that building. It is going to be built next door to the one that exists, higher up. And it has to be built in such a manner that we do not have to move our residents during storms. Every time there is a storm threat we have to move them to the civic centre. We have to get the ambulance, we have to mobilise most of the male residents to get this done. That is not the worst of it; these people have to be exposed to the regular people and they may get things like the flu and what have you. They are not strong enough to [fight] that.

After the storm has passed we have to keep them there for awhile and it is really difficult on these people. So, we are going to ensure that this is built to category 5 hurricane standards so that we do not have to move them. It will be self-contained and they can stay right there. They will be much more comfortable there. Likewise, I think the Minister is doing the same thing in North Side.

One of the things I promised the people of East End and North Side during the last election was that if I was elected Minister of Works, I would pave the roads of the Queen's Highway and into Cayman Kai, but I was not going to do it until the main water pipes had been laid. We are nearing the completion of the laying of those main pipes, I suspect in the next few months. We have commenced the paving and we are close to Cayman Kai, fairly close to Driftwood. It is this Government's intention of finishing that shortly, as soon as we get that in and the dry season comes back around—that is, the Queen's Highway and into Cayman Kai. Those are the last main corridors that need to be paved in this country.

There are some side roads in East End and North Side that need to be done. For instance, the Farm Road needs to be done in East End, the Hutland needs to be done in North Side and that is very important. Those are residential areas that we will be paving as well. Unfortunately, we cannot get to them right now because we are trying to finish off the East/West Arterial, which also helps us from the eastern districts as well. So, in the next few weeks we hope that will be finished and then the NRA will deploy the paver to do a number of these roads, for instance, in the Hutland. So your people can expect that we will be doing that, and then Farm Road.

No one can claim that I waited until just before elections to do what I have to do. I have been doing it for three years and I still have one. It doesn't make sense for me to slow down now!

Madam Speaker, there are a number of roads we are building inland in East End for farming, two major roads. We have to extend John McLean Drive westward. We are in the process of getting all those gazetted. We were coming up on some little difficulties. In North Side as well, the farming community has come together and we are working along with the Leader of Government Business to gazette these farm roads. I am sure he will be sending them over to me for gazettal. It will open up land for farming.

I trust that people understand what we are trying to do. We are not trying to destroy the environment, we are trying to ensure, especially now where foodstuff worldwide . . . I was looking at the BBC news recently. Thailand, the largest exporter of rice in the world . . . and the price of rice has gone up in Thailand. We need to be a little more self-sustaining. We need to grow a little more.

There was a time when the Leader of Government Business and I would get into hot arguments about that subject. I guess because I did not have much use for it and my father had made me dig so many yam holes and cassava holes . . . and the Leader of Government Business had hung on to it and he enjoys that. That is his hobby and livelihood almost. But nowadays, I am supporting his view. We need to get there. We need to do something. That is what this Government is doing, opening up these lands so that we can get in there and we do not have to be dependent upon outside sources of food, or we can assist with it.

Madam Speaker, we are in the process of starting the Blow Holes. McAlpine has committed to do the platform at the Blow Holes, which we all know is really a tourism icon in this country. We need to ensure that it is safe. Mind you, Madam Speaker, that piece of property is not the Government's. It is owned by a former Member of this Parliament. He has given us the okay to go ahead and do it.

Another thing I would like to talk to the people of East End and North Side about is cemeteries, which I spoke about some time ago. This is also my responsibility. Right now East End has sufficient space. We bought some in North Side to expand the cemetery. We do not really need it right now, but somewhere down the road if this country does not stop . . . I will eventually finish; but the country will not finish. We are embarking on a paradigm shift when it comes to burial. We are starting to do two vaults in one, we're stacking.

I know it is not going to come across well with some of us, but we are doing some pilot projects with it and we will see how it works. We have a finite amount of land in this country and we need to ensure we utilise it properly.

So, all the plans are in place. The design has been done. We have discussed it with the funeral homes. They are all on board. So, we are going to try a little pilot on this in some of the cemeteries to see whether or not people are receptive to it. There is nothing wrong if we see down the years people do not want to do it. But I can tell you, Madam Speaker, and honourable Members, that I have had much positive representation about doing it in this country.

The other thing I have had representation about is cremation. That is each person's choice. I certainly would promote it and support it, but I am not going to get Government into passing a law as an acceptable means of disposal. If the private sector wants to do it, then that's fine by me. I am not going to go where Ms. Georgette told me not to go one night, but my personal preference is not that. That's kind of asking too much. But we are going to at least do the pilot programme.

Madam Speaker, I would like to go on to my Ministry and talk about some of those things as they also relate to our constituencies. But before I do that I would like to address an Editorial of today, 15 May 2008. The Governor also spoke about the laws I am going to be changing in this upcoming year.

One of those laws is the Cinematographic Law. I guess the Caymanian Compass only found out about it recently. I think it must be tabled by now. They have taken me to task; they have taken this Government to task today in their Editorial. I would just like to say to them that I respectfully disagree with their position.

In their Editorial they talked about accountability and about Richard Tucker and his report, and his opinion—because everybody has one of those. Me too! Sir Tucker said, “If...the non-executive directors (of appointed boards) feel that they must ‘support the minister’ who appointed them, with the result that they are reluctant to bring their own skills, expertise and judgment to bear upon the matters at hand, the board of directors of the statutory authorities and government companies will serve little useful purpose.”

And they said, “Sir Richard’s comments were made in relation to organisations like Cayman Airways’ Board of Directors or the Boatswain’s Beach Board of Directors. But we think they could just as easily apply to members of this new Cinematograph Board.”

They did say that the Board is made up of a majority of politicians appointed by politicians. And I read, “On the surface, it would appear that government is merely choosing to replace a board made up of a majority of politicians with one that is appointed by politicians, removing the appearance of elected officials interfering with the censorship process.”

And they are thinking that we do not want to take responsibility for censorship. Basically, that is what they are saying. I want to ask them when was the last time they saw me back from my responsibility. Never! But I am [asking], Madam Speaker (and thankfully the Governor agreed with me), who died and left the Governor or either one of us paragons of virtue?

Madam Speaker, why do we need politicians to go see whether it is R rated, C rated, or PG? It just does not make sense. What the Editorial did not say was that Sir Tucker also talks about the appointment of politicians to these Boards, and they should not be.

Now, here we are trying to do that on one hand, which we support—that is the only thing he said right. We support that politicians should not be on any Boards, and we have practised that since we have been here. And here they are saying that we should be on them. I would like to know who they are promoting now.

But the Governor is the head of this Board. He is Chairman. Does the Governor know anything more than anyone else in this community about R rated or PG? What they do not understand is that this is one of those laws made in 1964, when the colonial system was king of the roost! Gone! Gone! Do they not see that he does not even wear the feathers in his hat anymore? And they talk about political appointments.

Madam Speaker, somebody needs to tell me where in this world you do not have political appointments. I would like to ask them if they think the Governor is not a political appointment. What do you think he is? You think the Labour Party is going to recommend to the Queen a Conservative Member? No! It is politics! And to the victor go the spoil.

Can you see me appointing someone that is not of like mind or objectives? Could I appoint the Leader of the Opposition to a board that I have statutory authority for? Oh, another Auditor General's Report. No, Madam Speaker, I am not doing that. But, Madam Speaker, I must say that many of my boards which I came in and found, very few of those that were appointed by the UDP Government have I changed. They are still there. They work well. They do what is in the interest of this country. I do not disturb them.

I will tell you that I just appointed one to the Information and Communications Technology Authority (ICTA) as chairman. He and I argue more than we get on. That is what it is about. But it must be an appointment. I am not saying in a wholesale manner get rid of everybody that is on a board when governments change. What are they talking about?

Madam Speaker, the Cinematographic Law needs to be revised. I do not have the time for it. But if I change the makeup of the board we can get people there from the community, and I said one of those should be a minister of religion (not from this side) so that they can guide this process. All of them can guide this process. They know best what this country wants and how it should be. But here we are, wanting to be inclusive, get the people of the country on the board, and the press is beating us. Something is wrong with that.

Who do they think I am going to put on it? Pope Benedict?

[laughter and inaudible interjections]

Hon. V. Arden McLean: We had a run with the Born Again St. McKeeva!

I am not putting him on it either!

Madam Speaker, it is not about whether we . . . it is what the people do when they get there. You give them direction. The Governor is insensible being on this board, Madam Speaker. He does not particularly want to be on the board. When I told him he was chairman, he was shocked to tell you the truth. And they met once in the last maybe 12, 14 years. I think the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is on it. They don't meet. They just met to issue one license to, I think it was Hollywood, last year. But I think it is time. Every time you make a promise, Madam Speaker, I think they forget you made it. All of a sudden when it comes forward it becomes a big deal. I said this sometime ago, nobody picked it up in the press briefing, and now that it is here, 'Oh Arden, we will survive'.

Madam Speaker, I want to turn to some of the areas that fall under my Ministry. I know time will not allow me to cover all of these but I will try to speak on some that are very important to the public. Let me start with what seems to be one of the most talked about projects in recent times, and that is the extension of the Linford Pierson Highway.

It is unfortunate that those who oppose this road did not have all of the information. We had a meeting last night at the Sir Vassel Assembly Hall, and I understand from one of my colleagues that the headlines on CNS or CES this morning is that there is no support for the road. I suspect there is no support for the road, Madam Speaker; but there are no alternatives to saving the forest either. There are not a lot of proposals for that.

My proposal was to try and save at least that which I could save—which is the government land—and pass that over to the National Trust. I was not going to get involved in private lands. I told them last night that there is only one of two ways to do that—compulsory acquisition, which I was not prepared to do; or if the private owners came forward and offered it for sale and we would purchase, like we did with the national park in West Bay. Each year you put money aside and pay for the next piece and the next piece and you go into agreement with these people.

At Barkers National Park, that is the one the UDP started, each year each Government is committed (we are committed) to expand it. And we would do the same up there. Then we would not have any trouble with Arden or any future politician about putting a road through it.

But in the absence of preserving it in its natural state and its entirety, we cannot stop people from [using] their private land and building. That is going to cause human interaction. I do not want to take any land from anybody, Madam Speaker, but if they offer it up, the Government will buy it. That is a commitment this Government has made, that we will buy it and invest it in the National Trust. It is going to cost us a lot of money to re-route the road, but that is a chance we have to take.

But one of the things the environmentalists do not know is that there appears to be just as big a forest east of the Seventh Day Adventist School. But nobody is talking about that. The Ghost Orchid that is supposed to be in England at the Chelsea [Flower] Show came from there. It did not come from the Ironwood Forest. That was saved by Mr. Nixon and the people from the Orchid Society and the Botanic Park two years ago when they were pushing it down to build homes. Somebody needs to go in there too and try to save it.

Madam Speaker, I support doing something for the environment because a lot of those who are out there talking about the environment and leaving it for grandchildren and future generations . . . I have more at stake than them. At least I can show mine how to make wawmpuhs. I made and walked in plenty of those. I wonder how many of them can show their children or tell their grandchildren that they wore wawmpuhs. So, I have a vested interest in this too. They must not think that I want to destroy everything in my country. But Madam Speaker, by the same token, if I do not do what is right, those same children and grandchildren are going to talk about me like we are talking about those who came before us. So, I have to balance it and make sure we do what is right all around.

The decision is yet to be made on this. I have plenty of other work to do. We have plenty of roads to build. We need to get one in the east so that we can get from East End and North Side easier; that's the East/West Arterial. And then, that will serve the biggest purpose of the East/West Arterial, as far as I am concerned, which is to open up those lands so young Caymanians can own a little piece of this rock. That's what I want to see.

I cannot go West Bay Beach; I do not think they are going to get there either. Maybe one or two get enough money to go buy a million dollar home. But one or two is not the majority of young Caymanians. I would love to see more Caymanians owning a little piece of rock at a reasonable cost. I hope if I leave any legacy in this country it will be that I was able to open up lands where young Caymanians owned a little piece of their rock.

Madam Speaker, the East/West Arterial is soon to be finished. Thank God! It's been a long, long journey. But I would like to publicly thank all those, especially the staff of the National Roads Authority (NRA). They have worked very, very hard, very assiduously to get this thing done with not a lot of gratitude shown.

Some mornings my ears are on fire with the talk show complaining about the roads and I feel sorry for some of those kids and some of those workers. Then, as soon as it is over, and you do not have the gridlock . . . not one person calls to say thanks. Caymanians and residents, do not be so ungrateful.

Madam Speaker, it is difficult for those guys. They work out there on that hot asphalt that is 180 degrees and then with the midday sun beating down on them they are out there labouring for this country, and they inconvenience you for a couple of minutes and they are cursed, they are decried and called everything. That is not right, Madam Speaker. I understand that we need to get where we need to get. I understand that. But have a little patience. You will get there.

I said before [neither] West Bay nor East End is moving any place; it is going to be there when you get there. Have a little patience. These guys are doing it as fast as they can. They work at night, they work on the weekend. They leave their families at home. Hopefully we will soon have it finished, Madam Speaker.

We have just completed a windscreen survey of the whole country. And while it is in its preliminary stages, a windscreen survey will tell us the condition of every road in this country and give us a better understanding of what it is going to cost to bring them up to a particular grade. Madam Speaker, I am even afraid to tell you what the preliminary cost is coming out to be because for 30 years we have done nothing. We just built the roads and left them. The surface damage . . . nobody did any maintenance, per se, we just left them. And you are looking at $100 million.

An Hon. Member: Whoa!

Hon. V. Arden McLean: If we were to tackle that right away, we are looking at $100 million.

It is a result of neglect for too long. So now this has to be phased over a longer period of time. There is no government that can just go and do $100 million unless you are taxing or getting money from gambling or something of that nature. The government cannot sustain that. But everyone wants good roads to drive on and successive governments have neglected the infrastructure of this country. I hope what I am trying to put in place is carried on.

Madam Speaker, that brings me quite nicely to the unit we created since I have been here, the Recreation Parks and Cemeteries Unit, and the Revitalisation of George Town. That has commenced. This is the first time we have seen such clean streets in George Town, because we equate tourism with George Town. That is the first place they see, particularly cruise tourism. Look at the streets in George Town now. Nobody notices . . . because that is the way it is supposed to be. But the morning there is one pebble on the road that is when we get the calls on the radio.

Madam Speaker, most people do not even know what is going on. We have men out there establishing these streets, shovelling off all the sand, and then we use the sweepers. They are working right now as we speak. And they are on different roads on George Town. Nobody sees it. All they see is a backhoe or a bobcat operating on the road. They are right now cleaning these streets.

We have a special sweeper that comes through and sweeps the street. Look at Batabano [Carnival]: By that Monday morning everything was gone. How often in the past have you seen that? It is seamless. People should be able to come to George Town to work and not see the difference, except that it is a pleasant place to work. That is our objective.

I said in Finance Committee the other day that there is street furniture we are currently ordering for George Town. It needs a little facelift and we are getting there. Look at what the little facelift in front of the Town Clock gave us. That is what we are talking about. Then, when we put the plants throughout and we put new posts for all the street signs and nice street posts (which, by the way, are on order) . . . that is what I want to see George Town become. When you look out there it is just what everywhere else is in the country, bland. It needs to be a different place to come to, and that is our objective.

The unit is doing all the beaches. Look at how clean the beaches are nowadays; void of rocks and stones that hurt children. And the parks: Look at the little park at Watlers in conjunction with those kids who were doing it. We went in there and grassed it, and we put the sprinkler system in. It is an oasis right there in the middle of that neighbourhood. And people are using it; kids are using it. That is my objective. Keep the family together. Make the parks so attractive that the kids take their parents to the parks. That is the objective of this unit.

Madam Speaker, the Ministry is very proud of the Savannah Post Office. I am so proud of that little post office. It is a new face for the people in the postal system. I said that the little one we had there was so small you had to go outside to change your mind. We have gone from 200 square feet up to 4,000 square feet. But it has different purposes. We have it as a sorting post office in case the one in George Town gets damaged.

This is what vision is about. This is what the UDP needs to start thinking about—vision! In the event we have a problem at the George Town Post Office we will carry the mail straight there and distribute it from there. That is what vision is about. We are going to perish under that UDP if they ever get back here because they have no vision. And you know what they said about vision and the people perishing. So, I am extremely proud of that little post office.

The little post office that we came out of, the National Trust has asked us to give that to them so they can interface it with the old school house, which we will be doing. Speaking of the National Trust, the house here by Royal Bank (Ms. [Arlett] Diaz House), we are in the process of giving that to the National Trust too, but, first, I would love to see that picket fence back around it. Remember the little picket fence it used to have? That is the only wish I have, to put that picket fence around it and make it very Caymanian right in the middle of town. But we will continue to maintain it while they use it to tour as a Caymanian house, right in the middle of the concrete jungle. And that is what it will be forever, Madam Speaker.

One of the areas the Ministry is working on is vehicle licensing. There is so much going on because we have had to restructure that entire system, not necessarily the human resources in it, but where, as we speak, there are a number of people in East End, led by Mr. Perry Powell from the Ministry, finishing up the review of the Insurance Law. We have finished the review of the Traffic Law and it is with the drafters . . . well, it was with them and it's been back. But there were some changes they had to make, so shortly they will get it back to us. This is the one that will include all the graduated drivers' licences and the like.

Unfortunately it is taking some time but, Madam Speaker, these things take time. This thing has not been reviewed for years. It has been amended in a piecemeal manner and all of this has to be brought back together and interfaced. As a result, the consequential changes to the Insurance Law and other laws have to be made. You cannot just piecemeal it, as you well know. But, of course, the public is crying for it and they do not understand what it takes. It takes five or six of these people and me away from work for two or three days at a time. Then you have to look at the different laws and get them all fixed. So, hopefully that will soon be completed.

Madam Speaker, one of the other things I promised the people of this country was that I was going to take that vehicle licensing office out of the middle of George Town because that causes more traffic congestion and problems in the middle of George Town than anything else. So, I am happy to announce that yesterday they started filling in the property across from Mr. Gunther. Planning approval has been received and hopefully by the end of sometime early next year they will be able to relocate to that location. And that is going to make me feel very good because the median down through there on the new East/West Arterial will be able to control the traffic. They will not be able to go across the road and disrupt traffic. There is a 6,000 square foot building.

So everything is going to be concentrated in that building. That is decentralised and further out of George Town. Maybe we will need to get it further out too. I don't know, eventually it may build in there. Hopefully not in my time, but maybe it will.

The Eastern District Office was another one we promised the country. That has received planning approval. We are on the bottom floor of the civic centre in Bodden Town by the police station. That will serve East End, North Side, Bodden Town and I guess Savannah as well. I hear how the Bodden Towners are telling me that Savannah is Bodden Town too; but that is like East End and Gun Bay. No one can tell Gun Bayers that they are from East End. You can ask the [Deputy] Clerk. She lives in Gun Bay too, but they don't consider that East End. That is how the little local communities consider themselves. But anyway, that will serve that area and people will not have to come into town.

One of the other areas that I would like to touch on before I leave is—

 Bill 2008 Budget Address

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: Debate continues on the Budget Address and the Throne Speech.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Communications, Works and Infrastructure, continuing his debate.

Honourable Minister, I have been passed a note that you have 17 minutes remaining.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, in the 17 minutes that I have left I would like to address the issue of the economy. I know much is being said about the economy of the Cayman Islands. Madam Speaker, if anyone was to deny that we are having challenges in the economy, that person, certainly, would not be a part of this country. We do have challenges, Madam Speaker. I do not think they are insurmountable, but, certainly, we have challenges. However, Madam Speaker, this Government has worked hard to ensure the economy keeps buoyant in this world economy crisis.

Cayman is no longer “the place time forgot” and we too become affected by the world economy. But we have worked hard. We have met with the merchants who can most influence the economy, such as large importers, supermarkets, et cetera. And, Madam Speaker, that is to ensure that we are at the forefront of what is going on and to ask for their assistance in ensuring that our economy does not become more affected by what we have no control over, which is the world economy.

I think the Leader of Government Business said that if America sneezes we catch a cold, and that is so true, Madam Speaker. But while we cannot do anything about that situation, we certainly have a responsibility to respond thereto. I want the people of this country to know that the resilience that I know my people have . . . we will get over this also.

Madam Speaker, we have had worse happen to us. We had Ivan . . . and I stood on the Floor of this honourable House and encouraged Caymanians to be like the mythical bird, the Phoenix, who after five hundred years of life consumes himself in fire and then rises from the ashes anew. And I think we will do that again. I think we will come through this. This Government has responded to the world economy by cutting our coat the size of the garment we had available to us. And, Madam Speaker, that is represented in our budget. We have no more taxes, so that is responding to the need to ensure that the people of this country will not be overburdened, particularly now when the world has a downturn in the economy. We have also put priorities on some of the projects to ensure that we maintain the economy to the best of our ability while we hold on and work through these challenges, such as the government building and starting the schools in a staggered manner.

Madam Speaker, I was just glad that my colleagues supported me in the building of two of the most important roads in this country to alleviate some of the traffic, and those are almost finished. So, I do not think we will see major projects like that undertaken in the next year. Of course, there are other projects that have to be done; some small ones—West Bay, North Side, East End, and in George Town as well, that we need to do, but certainly, it will not be that kind of expenditure for a while. That is not to say that the continuing of these roads is not absolutely necessary for the opening of lands and to make the economy . . . I don't think, Madam Speaker, we can even put a price on the value to this economy that those roads have had. But we made those decisions then and now we need to cut back on those and put our priorities elsewhere, where more people will benefit as a result.

And we have done that, Madam Speaker. We have worked very hard. Yes, every budget is but a budget and every person wants what they want. So, we have to make some priorities and cut back and look at potential earnings and address it accordingly. And if you put taxes on, sure there are many things that could be done. I could put that road, Madam Speaker, straight into Frank Sound, which was my objective. If I had gotten it there, you know, that was my objective. But I cannot do that now.

I would like to put the road into West Bay to Batabano, but I have it to be gazetted now so that someone will come along, if it is not me—I hope it is me—to continue those. But this is not the time to do it. We have by and large done what we had to do to alleviate the traffic.

And, Madam Speaker, I can tell the country (as the old cliché goes) “steady as she goes”. We have to maintain a steady course, albeit reduced from what we were doing before to ensure that the little man, the people of this country do not suffer unnecessarily, and that is the objective of this budget. So, we are responding to the economy; we are responding to ensure that people are not overburdened with taxes, expenditures. It is bad enough as it is.

Fuel! I am just thankful, Madam Speaker, that we could get 15 per cent off CUC because can we imagine if we hadn't gotten that off the fuel price what it would be? It would be astronomical. So, Madam Speaker, it would be that much more burdensome to some of our people. We have responded and I am confident that the people will see that in time.

Madam Speaker, I know my time is short. I would like to speak on the National Assessment of Living Conditions, but time will not allow me. But again, I encourage people to read it as that is going to be the guide for this Government over the next year and for future governments to take note of and help the people who are less fortunate or those who have been disenfranchised in the past.

Madam Speaker, in closing, one of the things I would like to bring to the attention of our people is that there has been much discussion surrounding the police force in recent times. Madam Speaker, I want the country to know that we need to continue to put trust in the police force. Yes, we may have a lot of speculation as to what is going on in there, and we have had that for many, many years. I do not believe that what is currently coming to the fore represents the entire police force.

Madam speaker, the only means of protection, prevention and detection in this country happens to be the police force. In particular, the only means of protection, really, is our police force. There are good men and women in that police force. I have every confidence that that is so. I have many friends in there, Madam Speaker. I place a lot of confidence in many of those men and women in that police force. I have worked with them and have never once heard it on the street.

Madam Speaker, my appeal to the people of this country is that . . . I am not asking them to blindly follow or be blinded by anything that would prejudice the way they feel; but, certainly, I would ask them to have some confidence in the police force. The police force is very, very important to this country. Yes, England is responsible for protection of us but, Madam Speaker, they have to come here. We are the first responders to anything in this country and we have to depend upon that police force. And if we have a few people that are being investigated, so be it. There are 400 (or thereabout) police officers in that police force.

That is the crux of the matter, Madam Speaker. Policemen are by and large doing a job, putting their lives on the line for those of us who sleep at night. Madam Speaker, these are good people and I would ask this country not to be blinded by what is an investigation that may result in a few people charged or arrested, or whatever the case may be. Somehow, somewhere, this is going to pass also. I have every confidence that the police force will rise again to be what we expect it to be; to be better than it has ever been. I know as a people we need to ensure through our support that the morale of that police force does not drop any lower.

Madam Speaker, certainly, if we speculate and start accusing people and use a broad brush the police force is going to become affected. And my appeal to the public is to give it time; let's see what happens. But remember that these police officers should not be painted with the same brush. The police force should not be painted by the same brush.

And I know, Madam Speaker, I have been one of the biggest advocates of the police force in my time and I continue to do that. But, certainly, if there are people within the police force who need investigation or have done something wrong, then [for] those people time will tell. But you cannot say that four hundred and odd police officers have done anything wrong. They have served this country well.

Madam Speaker, there are times when we talk about the provisions of investigation and it is not working and we see an unsolved crime, but we have to understand [we] don't know anything about investigation, that's their job. And sometimes, as I understand it, these things happen; but this is where it needs the country's support, the people's support to resolve these issues. Find a police officer and trust in that person. Get a relationship with that person. And that is my appeal.

And Madam Speaker, I can assure the people of this country that they will be satisfied. Find one person in that police force and trust them.

I am disappointed with what has happened. Certainly, Madam Speaker, no time is a good time for this to happen. Now is as good a time as any to have it resolved. Let's get it all over with and let's finish it up and move on. There's a future for this country. A bright, bright, bright, bright future. The country, Madam Speaker, is in good hands. We have kept the faith. We're not perfect! We are not perfect. If we were perfect we would not be here. But we have done in the interest of this county the best way we know how. I strongly believe that, Madam Speaker. I sincerely believe that all the Members of the PPM have one thing in mind, and that is the betterment of the people that we love of this beloved country, the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, I am not taking anything from the Opposition either. I believe that they have that same objective too. It is a different way of doing it, that's all. We do it in different ways and we all make mistakes, all of us. I'm not looking for any excuses, Madam Speaker. But, certainly, I don't think that there is one Member in this honourable House out of the 15 that started out in politics to make mistakes. We all started out with the same objective in mind: doing what we can for our country and making a contribution back to the country that we have taken so much from. And, Madam Speaker, that I am positive of!

So, when we look in the final analysis, this country is set on a steady course, steady as she goes. And, Madam Speaker, I encourage our people to be a part of that course. Let us come together, join hands and hearts and body and soul, and lead our country. This is our country. Every Member of this honourable House can claim they go back for five or six generations of ancestry. Madam Speaker, me too. All of us. Therefore, we must work in the interest of our country. Yes, criticism will be levelled at all of us, but by the same token we have good intentions for this country that we love.

Madam Speaker, I commend the budget to my colleagues, in particular those across in the Opposition, and I just trust that they will be able to support it and understand that we really have shaped the budget to suit the economic times.

Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak?

Fourth Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I rise to make my contribution to the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor, Mr. Stuart Jack, CVO, and the Budget Address delivered by the Honourable Third Official Member, and to make some comments on the Policy Statement delivered by the Honourable Leader of Government Business on Wednesday, 30 April 2008.

Madam Speaker, as I listened to the Leader of Government Business deliver his PPM Government Policy Statement it reminded me of sitting in church listening to the preacher. The Leader of Government Business was appealing to the people of these three Cayman Islands to give his Government another term in office. Madam Speaker, the people of these Islands (if you listen to what the public has to say) have had enough of the PPM Government.

I hate to disappoint the Leader of Government Business, but I must tell him that the people have already decided that they have had enough of the Administration of the PPM and that Government will not be getting back into power.

[laughter]

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: The writing is on the wall, Madam Speaker. The people have decided.

Madam Speaker . . .

[inaudible background comments]

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: . . . on page 3 of his policy statement it reads, “The PPM’s assumption of office following the general elections of 2005 ushered in a new era. A new approach to governance through what is known as ‘government in the sunshine.’”

Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business should have added rain to the sunshine because three and a half years later, after the devastation of Hurricane Ivan, there are still many families living with relatives and friends; many roofs that have not been repaired properly, and many families still getting wet every time it rains. So, he could have added rain to that sunshine.

Madam Speaker, pages 4 and 5 of his Policy Statement speak to the devastation of Hurricane Ivan, and it reads: “The Government of the day, which comprised of Members on the other side, had no solutions. It proved unable to rise to the challenge of recovery and reconstruction.” The Leader of Government Business obviously has a very short memory. If he can’t remember that far back . . . because there was no recovery of that magnitude done any quicker anywhere else in the Caribbean or the world than was done here in Cayman.

Madam Speaker, the financial sector was up and running within a matter of days and the cruise ships were back in George Town harbour within a matter of weeks, and yet, the Leader of Government [Business] would have the audacity to stand on the Floor of this honourable House and say that we have done nothing.

The first Cayman Airways flight to land after the hurricane was loaded with relief supplies, organised through the United Democratic Party, and Operation Blessing, with the help of Mr. Bill Horan. This flight was followed by two more cargo flights; eight forty-foot containers and two twenty-foot containers of relief supplies, which were all distributed through the National Hurricane Committee, the Red Cross and the United Democratic Party. Madam Speaker, this was at no cost to government.

These hundreds of tons of relief supplies were done through the United Democratic Party with the help of Operation Blessing and many other good people. Thanks to Thompson Shipping there was no charge for freight, and thanks to the Collector of Customs, he did not charge us any duty on the relief supplies. Thanks to Cayman Airways, they did not charge us to bring the relief supplies in. Madam Speaker, we thank them all.

Madam Speaker, as I listened to Members of the Government Bench castigate the honourable Leader of the Opposition, I had to think that if those Members would spend more time trying to find some solutions for the problems facing these Islands, their time would be much better spent.

As I look across I can’t see any Member of the Government Bench who has done nearly as much for the Cayman Islands and the Cayman people as the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. Just let me say, Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition—my colleague—has been a hardworking representative. No one can say otherwise. However, Madam Speaker, I realise that it is only natural for Government to try to paint him and all Members of the Opposition as dark as possible; that is their job. But no one on the Government Bench has given the valiant service that the honourable Leader of the Opposition has given.

I have served on boards with my colleague, the Leader of the Opposition, and I can say that he has ensured that what the board members wanted was the decisions that were taken. The projects that we worked on are assets to the Cayman Islands and the money that was spent on them was worth every penny. It should be noted, Madam Speaker, that 99 per cent of the work was done by Caymanians and the money stayed here in the Cayman Islands. Small business people got the benefit. Caymanians were not left out, Madam Speaker, as is happening today, with the exception, of course, of a chosen few.

On page 9 of the Policy Statement, Madam Speaker, the Honourable Leader of Government Business said: “Good things always come to those who have patience.” I am afraid, Madam Speaker, that the Caymanian people have run out of patience. Now they need help and they are not getting the kind of help they need so their tired. They cannot wait any longer; they have to get a change.

On page 11 of the Policy Statement, Madam Speaker, I will only read a part of the third paragraph. He says, “In the prevailing circumstances, fiscal prudence and discipline are required. We have always practiced both but they are needed now more than ever.” But, Madam Speaker, if I recall, just a couple of weeks ago, there was an article in the Caymanian Compass where the Chamber of Commerce was asking government to not spend so much money or to be careful what they were spending on. I wish I had the paper in front of me, but I do not have it. I remember seeing that piece in the paper.

On page 12, Madam Speaker, the second paragraph says, “Human belief is a powerful force. A man or woman is driven by what he or she believes.” That is very true, Madam Speaker, and what the people are believing now is that this Island is headed in the wrong direction. They are driven by that and they are going to change it.

Madam Speaker, on page 3 there is a beautiful chorus. It says, “Count your many blessings, name them one by one; Count your blessings, see what God has done; Count your blessings, name them one by one; And it will surprise you what the Lord has done.” Madam Speaker, that is true. I’m not a professing Christian, I’m a God-fearing man. He should have added another verse that says, ‘Count your many hardships, name them one by one, and it will surprise you what the PPM has not done.’

[laughter]

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I rise to make my brief contribution to the 2008/2009 Budget Address, and the Policy Statement of the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Honourable D. Kurt Tibbetts.

Madam Speaker, as I stand here I feel quite privileged and humbled to have been given the opportunity by the wonderful people of the district of West Bay to represent them for this, my second term, and I look forward to offering myself in continuing to be a representative of the people of that great district.

Madam Speaker, I think we have all acknowledged that times are difficult, not only for the Cayman Islands but for the world as a whole. And what we are seeing in terms of the slowdowns in our domestic economy are a simple reflection of what is happening in the wider world of which we are a part.

Before I get started into my debate I want to go along with my good friend, the Minister for works, who made the comment earlier that all elected Members of this House, all 15 and the three Official Members—I do not think there is any question that the intention of all the Members . . . Regardless of what people may think, this is not an easy job. It is very thankless at times and lonely at times as well. And for people to offer themselves up for public office is not something that they do because one morning they decide that they want to make their country a worse place. I think it is the same throughout the region and the world.

So, while we may not agree across the aisle specifically on some of the ways forward and what individual Ministers or governments are doing, ultimately I think it is unanimous that we all respect each other, respect what each person is doing and what they are trying to do. The debates we have are simply a matter of expressing disagreement or highlighting alternative methods of what could happen. Especially during these times it is no time to be divided and the general public needs to understand that while we may get here and debate and discuss, there is still respect that is due, and that regardless of how difficult or tense a situation may be here, there’s an understanding from both sides as to the responsibility and the important part that we all play in the future of our beloved Islands.

Madam Speaker, having said that, we have said publicly on many occasions on this side, that we do not feel that the budget the Government has come forward with is the right direction for the country to be going. And, as you will remember, even as recent as the last part of last year, the Leader of the Opposition brought a motion recognising and warning the Government of the lack of fiscal responsibility and the concern as to what would happen going forward based on all the predictions of the slowdown and the softening of the economy. And what we are seeing now, Madam Speaker, is the fulfillment of those concerns: we are seeing the Government attempting to carry its plans forward, even in light of those warnings and predictions. [They are] still going forward with significant capital development and attempting to convince us as a country that what is being done is affordable.

I am not exactly sure where the disconnection is. If we use an example of the much talked about schools, we have heard on many occasions that there were going to be three schools built all at one time. The latest information we heard was that two of those schools had been given out for tender, and the one in West Bay, the Beulah Smith school, while there were some delays it would be happening shortly. And now, a few moments ago, surprisingly I heard the Minister for Works talking about a staggered approach to the building of those schools.

Madam speaker, maybe I missed [something], but in this Policy Statement I am debating, it talks about the building of the three schools. And our position has always been that schools are necessary. Infrastructure for education is good. However, we could not afford to build all the schools at one time and the country could not afford the significant cost associated with that building. If the Government has now finally realised that it is important to stagger those schools and to build in phases, I think that would be a great step in the right direction. And I am sure the public will be relieved to hear that they will not be so significantly burdened with that expense.

Madam Speaker, I strayed from my original planned topic just because I heard it on the closing up remarks of the Minister for Works, and it struck me as being strange as to what I had seen in the Policy Statement and also had heard as far as public utterances elsewhere. But, Madam Speaker, I need to now move to debate specifically the Policy Statement that was delivered on Wednesday, 30 April 2008, by the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Madam Speaker, I note with interest, starting from page 4 where there is still a referral to this 'government in the sunshine.' Page 4 refers to a "government committed to and guided by the principles of honesty, openness, transparency and accountability. In our words and actions, the PPM Government has given full expression to these core principles. We have restored trust in Government, re-introduced fiscal discipline, eliminated corruption in government and upheld the rule of law."

Now, Madam Speaker, I have heard this before . . .

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, there is no quorum.

The Speaker: Serjeant, would you please. . .

[pause]

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay, please continue your debate.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, thank you.

Madam Speaker, as I was mentioning, those statements concerning trust, transparency, openness and accountability, and specifically the upholding of the rule of law, were things I heard touted during the campaign. However, I was really surprised that the Honourable Leader of Government Business, in light of the recent developments regarding the PPM, would still find it believable by the people of the Cayman Islands to get up on the Floor of the Legislative Assembly and continue on that same trend. I at least expected a little change to talk about honesty, openness, transparency and accountability when for the first time we have had a commission of enquiry on a sitting Minister of Government who has been found guilty of wrongdoing and obviously endorsed by the rest of his colleagues, and yet, to stand on the Floor publicly and still talk about this openness and honesty and rule of law.

Now, Madam Speaker, I know that is difficult for them to accept because even on this Floor, while we had discussions concerning paying for that commission of enquiry, there was a mix in the ranks and a question as to whether the country should pay for that commission of enquiry or not. There was a feeling, apparently from Members on the Government side, that it should not be paid for because it was started at the request of the Governor. So, certain Members of the Government challenged and questioned whether it should not be paid for by the United Kingdom. And I remember the point being made from this side, Madam Speaker, to say that the commission of enquiry was requested. It was held, there were findings of wrongdoing.

Maybe if there were no findings, and we could say that the Governor had been off on some wild spending spree, there may have been some claim that could have been made to say that somebody else should have been paying for this. But here we have a Governor who found the need to call an investigation; statements being made by members of the press as to the delivery of confidential information by not only one, but by two Ministers of Cabinet—one bringing the information accompanied by the other one—Minister of Tourism and the Minister of Education. Two Members of a sitting Government that prior to that had discussed all talk about rule of law, openness, transparency and honesty.

And even with those public findings, Madam Speaker, to believe that those Members would still get on the Floor and talk about the same things that they were found guilty of not being—not being open, not being transparent, not upholding the rule of law.

Now, Madam Speaker, maybe it was a mistake. Maybe this was a carry forward from previous policy statements when they were still fooling the people by telling them that they were a Government of openness and transparency upholding rule of law. But if the position has now changed, then I am sure the Leader of Government Business will clarify his statement, because the Caymanian people are having a difficult time understanding how they can still be clean while there were all these accusations before as to the previous administration not being open, not being accountable. There were claims of all these investigations that were being conducted by the Public Accounts Committee. But the only one where there has ever been any finding of wrongdoing . . . guess who that has happened to, Madam Speaker. It has happened to the same group that campaigned on restoring the trust in Government, and here they are found to be underhanded, taking confidential information and finding that they were doing it strictly for their own political gain.

There were red herrings thrown up about whistle blowing and all kind of justification as to why these things were being done. But when the smoke all cleared we found that there was no premise to say that it was done for anything other than personal gain—not one Member, but two Members involved and obviously endorsed by the whole of their group. And, like I said, Madam Speaker, it was highlighted by the fact that after that investigation was conducted some Members from that side of the Government did not even feel that they should have paid for an investigation. I am sure the people of the Cayman Islands were more than happy that His Excellency the Governor started [it] so [that] we could find out once and for all who it was, as our leaders, that was really found guilty of not upholding the rule of law. Now, Madam

Speaker, having dealt with the rule of law aspect, I want to now turn to the fiscal discipline.

Madam Speaker, we have a Government here that has acknowledged—proudly, I would say—that they have embarked on the largest capital development of any government. Now, while for a long time everyone else recognised that there was danger on the horizon, and that there would be potential problems with that embarkation that the Government had gone on, they proudly continued down that path talking about being able to continue because we can afford to pay. And I have heard some of the Members get up and talk about how we should be proud and how they are proud to be part of a balanced budget. Well, Madam Speaker, it is like they say, the devil is in the details, and what we see is, yes, government after government . . . our good gentleman, the Honourable Financial Secretary, always comes down and brings forward a balanced budget as presented by the Government.

I heard the Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town make the comment as to this being the most careful and considerate individual, and if he came forward with a budget then the country could feel proud and confident in knowing that it was a good budget. And, Madam Speaker, I was wondering when I heard all the great things being said about the Financial Secretary. I could not believe that that was the same gentleman that was also bringing the budget for the previous administration that had been so castigated, because when they castigated and questioned the budget at that time it was that same gentleman who was bringing it forward. But all of a sudden he is a good gentleman now; conservative. And if he is bringing it forward then the country should have great confidence. But before, Madam Speaker, it was the Government's budget and he was just the messenger delivering it.

What we see, Madam Speaker, is a memory of convenience, once again. We want to say that we do have confidence in the Financial Secretary, and we see the numbers coming forward, but we also know that the budget is prepared and presented by the Government. I think it was only on one occasion we had a financial secretary who came down here and said, 'I've been asked to read this budget on behalf of the Government'. And we all know what happened to that Financial Secretary. So, while we recognise this as being the Government's budget, this is in no way any question or reflection of the goodly, Honourable Third Official Member, the Financial Secretary.

Madam Speaker, we talk about a balanced budget, but we look at the numbers that are here. We just went through the supplementary exercise and what we have is a system where (you're familiar with it) the Government puts forward its proposed revenue and it goes out to the departments. The departments then come back with their projections, their expenditure, and we look at the shortfall and we go back and forth and look at ways to try to cut and ways to try to increase to try to get to that magical balanced process so that whoever is representing the Government at the time will come down here and deliver, and the Members of the Government will obviously get up and say. . .

We've seen budgets before, Madam Speaker. I'm sure the Honourable Leader of Government Business will remember in 2000 where, yes, the previous budget was balanced but after the election you realised that significant expenditures were not paid. There was outstanding some thirty-something million dollars, I believe. Forty-five million dollars. But that Government was also quick to come down and brag that 'You know what? We have a balanced budget.' Now, what does that prove, Madam Speaker? Is that really something for us to hang our hat on and say, 'Yes, we've done something great because we have been able to come down here and work those numbers out to be balanced?'

I don't think that we are fooling the public anymore, Madam Speaker. I do not think that the public, understanding how the system operates, really put a lot of credence on that whole expectation that has been created, that all governments are going to work until late in the Glass House working the numbers back and forth between the revenue and expenditure and come down to say that we have a balanced budget.

Madam Speaker, we also have the Supplementary Plan and Estimates and what we know is that every year, towards the end of the year, all governments come back and say, 'Oh well, we needed more money. We ran short in these areas and so we had to come back and get more money.' What we see, Madam Speaker . . . and it was the last supplementary we did and I remember it very clearly. There was a request for $1.8 million, I think it was from the Judiciary, as far as legal aid. It came back down to get the budget in line. That was reduced, I think to some $900,000, almost half of the amount. Obviously, the Judiciary knew exactly what they needed because of what they had spent the last time, so they put forward the correct amount, but to create that balance budget illusion we reduced that number to $900,000. Lo and behold, a few months later we have to come back to the Parliament and approve the initial $900,000 requested for the total amount that was initially requested.

Now, Madam Speaker, we see the same thing in Social Services. The Member is making a reference to us moving the . . . Since he is asking that question, what happened in 2007, Madam Speaker? We removed the amount because we felt that the Judiciary should come back with a document before they got the required amount, and in an attempt to try to force that document we moved it. Madam Speaker, the point that I am making (and I will use Social Services as an example) . . . When we put the amount for burial assistance or housing assistance, whenever we put that in we always put it in with the understanding that more than likely we will have to come back to get additional funds. I'm only using that example, Madam Speaker, because when we get up here and beat our chest and talk about a balanced budget at the beginning of the year, that does not lay a lot of comfort to the Caymanian people because they recognise the way the system works—that whatever number we want to put in the budget to make it balance, the reality will become apparent at the end of the financial year. And so, it is great now to be able to say that we have a balanced budget; but we don't know how balanced that will be at the end of the year because it will be dependent on the services that have to be provided by those service providers that we are funding.

Now, Madam Speaker, I note with interest that as we move down the page, the same page 4 of the Statement, the Leader of Government Business refers to “When we took office, the Cayman Islands were in [a] crisis. Devastation from Hurricane Ivan was widespread and very much in evidence across the land. Crime had become a serious problem.”

Now, Madam Speaker, again, that statement of, “Devastation from Hurricane Ivan was widespread and very much in evidence across the land.” Madam Speaker, both locally and internationally, people have commented on the quick, unbelievable recovery of the Cayman Islands, specifically in that six-month period. Now to talk about devastation still being in evidence, Madam Speaker . . . well if we were that bad still six months after, how could we be so rude, I guess, to call and have a general election if the country was still so devastated? Was that fair to the public, Madam Speaker? And, obviously, what it indicates is that even six months after a national devastation like Hurricane Ivan, the country had rebounded significantly enough that the Governor's representatives and the people felt that we were in a position now that we could go forward to some sense of normalcy and even have something as significant as a general election.

Madam Speaker, what is disconcerting with that is that here we are—some four years later—and we are still talking about these EU funds finally coming to get some of the hardships that our people have been going through for the previous four years under the People's Progressive Movement, starting to get that completed. Now they are criticizing as to what was done in the first six months after the storm. And guess who is doing the criticism, Madam Speaker? The same Government that has had four years of opportunity—four years of bragging about having surpluses, but still having people getting wet, still having people living in trailer homes.

Madam Speaker, this is the fourth budget of the Government. So when I say four years (just to give understanding to my colleague over there) I mean four budgets. And we still have people suffering those same effects, the same devastation that the Leader of Government Business . . . And he would give the impression that in some way . . . What he said is that the previous administration proved unable to rise to the challenge of recovery and reconstruction. Madam Speaker, based on that I do not even think the People's Progressive Movement should bother to run for election because if the UDP was found wanting . . . It said, “Caymanians therefore weighed them in the balance and found them wanting.” If they were weighed six months and found wanting after that, imagine what the PPM is going to be found after four years, after four years and four budgets and still . . .

Now, I would like not to believe, Madam Speaker, that the reason why those people have not been dealt with is so that they will be dealt with just before the election. I would hope that those people that are still in those trailer homes are not all of a sudden going to find themselves in new fancy apartments just before the election, which would be indicative that the Government's reasoning behind that four years of suffering was simply for political gain.

I would hope, Madam Speaker, that it was genuinely the inability of the Government to find a solution to the problem, not being able to deal with it even though funds were now pouring into the country; even though we now had surplus budgets. I can only hope that it was not politics being played with those individuals' lives and the disruption that was caused by so many, because that would be sad, Madam Speaker.

While politics is what it may be . . . but when we see those questions, or when we see those areas of questions and those areas that would directly impact the most vulnerable and needy in our society, we all are concerned about the best interests of the Caymanian people. We have to hope that the suffering those individuals have [experienced] was through genuine need. We know it was not through lack of money—because the Government found money, budget after budget, to talk about surpluses. The Government even found money to pay CUC (Caribbean Utilities Company) to say that we were going to take a reduction in duty cost, thereby taking a hit in the revenues so that CUC could continue making their profit margins but the consumer would get some relief.

So, the Government subsidised the cost of fuel and are quick to get up and brag about a 15 per cent reduction. But on the other hand, the services that that money—whether it is the $6 million or more in the coffers that the Leader of Government Business referred to . . . obviously, I'm sure, the people who are still suffering from Hurricane Ivan and those who still can't get the services that Government provides would have liked to have benefited more directly from that money.

Madam Speaker, the other point from Hurricane Ivan that I see is where we said that “crime had become a serious problem.” No, Madam Speaker, I know that I would be wrong in reading in the inference that the United Democratic Party had been found wanting in the balance on crime. Because based on crime then and crime now, there is not any time in my short life that I have heard Caymanians more worried about the state of serious crime. Madam Speaker, it was convenient at the time to lay blame on the previous administration and there was that promise that help was on the way. The Government was [saying]: 'Elect us, we're going to solve your problems; we're going to solve your hurricane problems and we're also going to solve your crime problems.' Madam Speaker, crime—especially serious crime—is at scary levels. People are scared for the first time to live in Cayman, people are scared to travel to Cayman; and what we are seeing is continuous increases and continuous fear.

Madam Speaker, I hear my colleague, the Third Elected Member [for Bodden Town], talking about scaring people. As a responsible legislator. . . I also hear that Member getting up and speaking at funerals of young people and talking about the need for concern. And I know that while he may not be pleased with the sentiments, I know his constituents are also coming to him like they are coming to me. So, while I feel sorry for him having to be in the seat of pressure . . .

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Well, Madam Speaker, he says he does not have any pressure. I can say to him . . .

The Speaker: Honourable Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay, can you direct your debate through the Chair, not across the Floor answering another colleague who is making a thing? Could you continue with that debate please?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker, as I am sure exists with yourself, and exists with all honourable Members of this House . . .

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, there is no quorum and the Leader of the Opposition pointed it out a while ago, and he is not in the Chamber.

The Speaker: I will suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11.46 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.02 pm

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed.

I would just like to read the relevant Standing Order relating to a quorum.

Standing Order 13 (2)

Standing Order 13 (2) says, "If objection is taken by any Member that a quorum is not present the Presiding Officer shall direct that Members be summoned, the Member taking objection having to remain within the Chamber and if, after five minutes, the Presiding Officer is satisfied that a quorum is not present he shall adjourn the House without question [being] put."

So, could we have a quorum so that we can continue the debate of the Budget Address and the Throne Speech?

Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay continuing his debate.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Madam Speaker, when I was interrupted the last time for the lack of a quorum, I was. . .

[laughter]

The Speaker: When I suspended proceedings.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden: Sorry, Madam Speaker, when you suspended for a lack of a quorum I was on the point of crime and the fact that crime [is] becoming a serious problem. I overheard my colleague saying that he is not under any pressure (and that would be the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, Madam Speaker). What I can say is that we are not a part of the Government, but we are elected Members and we are all under pressure. We are all under significant concern; concern of the state of crime and concern for the great fears that our people—who we have been given the responsibility to represent—have continued to express and we continue to give support.

So, Madam Speaker, I am not sure how that Member can say that he is not under pressure. Maybe he takes his responsibility as a representative differently. However, again, I think it is one of those areas where we all recognise the concern; we recognise the limits as to what can happen. But collectively, both as a parliament and as a community, there is significant concern.

As my colleague, the Elected Member for East End, said earlier, we have to continue to work together and support the police. Regardless of what doubts may be cast on some members of the police force, we have to continue to believe in the police force; continue to give them our support, because policing, again, is one of those difficult and thankless jobs that cannot be done without community support. And so I, too, continue to support the Police Department and feel that justice will be done if members have acted wrongly or not. Time will tell. However, in the meantime the Caymanian people need to continue to support our police department because as we see the continuing rise in serious crime we all have reason to be concerned.

Madam Speaker, when I made the comment earlier on about the Honourable Financial Secretary, I want to make sure when I referred to the one bringing the budget here before and saying bringing the Government's budget, I'm referring to the post of Financial Secretary, Madam Speaker, not a specific Financial Secretary, and I would expect that the same confidence and respect that is given to the current Financial Secretary would also be given to all previous Financial Secretaries who have come forth, as is their obligation, and brought forward the budgets of the respective governments of which they were a part.

Madam Speaker, moving on, having dealt with hurricane and crime, we now see that looking at the . . . I mentioned that I was a bit surprised that the Leader of Government Business referred so much in the document to trust and transparency and accountability because we recognise now and the general public of the Cayman Islands recognise that, using his own words, the PPM has been weighed in the balance and found significantly wanting. So, when I looked at the outside of the document I could understand why the terminology now being used was "Keeping the Faith and Securing the Future." I assume that the Leader of Government Business recognised that he could no longer go to the public and talk about trust, because it had been proven that the People's Progressive Movement was not a Government that you could trust. So now they have gone to 'keeping the faith.'

Madam Speaker, we see that the faith is difficult to continue to keep because we are seeing more and more a disconnect between the Government and the Caymanian people.

[laughter]

Mr. Cline A. Glidden: Madam Speaker, we see this discussion of trusting now moving down to a position of . . . that whole idea of faith.

Madam Speaker, we are all people of faith and we believe quite well and have many clear indications that God has been good to the Cayman Islands and continues to be good and looks out for our wonderful Islands. But, Madam Speaker, it is only so much that faith can do.

When I read this document [Policy Statement] and I see the Leader of Government Business making reference to the comparison of when you're sick, if you feel well you're not really going to get sick, and he drew that comparison to talk about having faith, that even [with] all the signs of the economy—a declining economy—around us, that we have to stay positive. And as long as we stay positive, if we think there is not going to be a recession; if we think we are not going to have a shortfall of revenue, then we are not going to have a shortfall. Madam Speaker, that goes a long way to showing how disconnected he really is to reality.

The reality is that our economy is slowing down—or has slowed down. We are suffering, we have significant people . . . and so, this idea that all we have to do is think that things are well and that means everything is going to be well, Madam Speaker, I understand now why we find ourselves four years into this Administration in the kind of financial problems we have. When we talk about fiscal prudence, if the fiscal prudence is just thinking that there is going to be money to spend and it is going to be there, then, Madam Speaker, things are even worse than we initially thought.

And so, the concern of the general populace would be, as my colleague said earlier on, that in thinking that the Government is concerned about their needs, the Government feels they are thinking about it and so those people should be taken care of. They are thinking about spending money and so we should not have to worry about our shortfall in the budget; whether that's $500,000,000 or $700,000,000 in borrowings that we refer to and debt that the country will have. All we have to do, Madam Speaker. . . .

And I know, because some of my constituents have come to me and said that they tried that. They went to Foster's [Supermarket] and they did not have a lot of money but they picked up enough food that they needed for the week and they were thinking real positive, Madam Speaker, that when they got to the check-out line they were going to have enough. But lo and behold, Madam Speaker, regardless of how much they thought about it, when they went to check-out, it just was not enough.

Madam Speaker, that is where we find ourselves, where the leaders of our country have decided that the solution to our financial problem is that all we have to do is think positively and everything is going to be all right.

Madam Speaker, I feel sorry for our people who still have almost another 12 months under this very positive-thinking Administration—positive thinking but little doing—and in the meantime our people are suffering. So, Madam Speaker, the faith, understandably, is getting more difficult for the people because when they go to the store and go to pay those bills at CUC (Caribbean Utilities Company) that faith is just not working out. When the gas gets cut off, the lights get cut off and when it rains they are getting wet, the strongest faith in the world, Madam Speaker, is tested. And at those stages, while it is easy for us in here to talk about keeping the faith, we see that our people are having it more and more difficult.

Madam Speaker, I move from that point (and I guess this may be faith based as well) to the point on the National Assessment of Living Conditions. The whole process has been, I guess, trivialised to the point where we have been talking about people in the Cayman Islands being able to live above the poverty line with some $10.87 per day, with the food component of that being $1.83.

Now, Madam Speaker, I know that my colleagues on the other side, like yourself, like the Honourable Leader of Government Business, know that that number is not a realistic number. That threshold, Madam Speaker, regardless of who our consultants were, regardless of where they came from, regardless of how many times they have done this before, that number is not realistic, Madam Speaker.

Now, while I understand we paid for a document and we take it, what surprises me is that the Leader of Government Business would then take that document and use that as another opportunity to criticise the Leader of the Opposition by saying that, based on this information we have only 1.9 per cent poverty in the Cayman Islands and that that puts us to the lowest in the English-speaking Caribbean, and so, obviously, when the Leader of Government Business painted a picture of difficult times, that he was wrong.

I really expected better, Madam Speaker, because I don't have any doubt in my mind that the Leader of Government Business knows the significant levels of poverty in the Cayman Islands.

Someone sent me an e-mail a few days ago and said that they would like any of the people who have referred to that document, specifically the Leader of Government Business, to try to survive for a month on a $1.83 a day and then we would see how unreal that number is.

Now, while he had that information I can understand, but for him then to use that to say that what the Leader of the Opposition has been saying—that times are tough and people are having a difficult time surviving—that that was his justification for saying that he does not know what he is talking about. Surprised me, Madam Speaker, because what I would have expected that gentleman to do when he received that document was to probably take a similar approach to that of the Deputy Leader of the PPM, the Minister for Education. In his statements he is taking a much more cautious approach. But to put everything based on this $10 a day, some $3,800 a year and say that there are only 986 people that fall below that category so things are not as bad . . .

Madam Speaker, to believe that we have some 986 people that are making $2 an hour, basically $18 a day, surviving on $3,800 for the year, that in itself is a crying shame. But to believe that that is the real poverty line, I hope, Madam Speaker, that while he has a lot of faith, he is not that disconnected from the reality of the Cayman Islands of which he has been elected to represent. Madam Speaker, that $336 per month is pretty much half of what the indigent have been given to live on. And we know that they are not able to survive on the $550 a month. We know that that has to be supplemented by children, other family members, social services, good friends. And here we are saying that really they could survive and be above the poverty level with almost half of that.

And we have the nerve, Madam Speaker, and give that kind of information and use that to justify the fact that we are rated as having the lowest level of poverty in the Cayman Islands. Take it behind closed doors, look at it, ask them to go back and revise it.

Madam Speaker, the reason why I say that that is ridiculous is because I (who did not have the resources of the Leader of Government Business) upon seeing the document simply went to the United States Department of Health and Human Services and figured I would get a little comparison as to what they have set as their poverty line. Taking into account that we import almost 100 per cent of our items from the US, all expenses, as far as utility costs, are significantly higher than the United States. But I figured we would get a small comparison, a ballpark as to the accuracy of the document that I am sure we paid money for or spent a lot of time doing. And lo and behold, Madam Speaker, where there's accessible information, I have come to find that in 2007 the poverty guidelines established by the United States Department of Health and Human Services said that for one person in a household in the 48 contiguous states of the United States, the poverty level is set at $10,210 per annum.

So, here we go, Madam Speaker. We're living in the Cayman Islands; we're importing everything from the United States; we are paying significantly higher for all other commodities, like fuel or all of our utilities, but lo and behold, we're able to set a poverty threshold at one-third of the level of what it is in the United States. Now, what creative math or accounting would we have there, Madam Speaker? How in the world would our leaders, responsible gentlemen, take that information and distribute that to the public of the Cayman Islands and expect that they are just going to take that again and have trust that what our leaders are telling us is correct?

You see, Madam Speaker, that is where I think the Government is fooled. I think the Government is still depending on that trust that was established in 2005 where they could say anything they wanted and the public would continue to listen and not question. Nowadays, Madam Speaker, we have information that shows that what they are saying contradicts everything else that is happening anywhere in the world. More importantly, it is happening to our major trading partner where everything is imported from.

And, Madam Speaker, just to give an idea on the incremental cost of freight—not duties, but there has to be a component of freight—in Alaska that cost now goes up for one person in a household to $12,770 per annum. So, when we take into account the cost of duties and freight, a more realistic number—very difficult but more realistic number—would be somewhere in the range of $15,000 per year. Even that, Madam Speaker, would be a stretch. But at least, after the delays we would have expected that some level of reasoning . . . I'm sure there are other studies that have been done. This one was very easily available to me on the Internet, and right away we see that this cost, surprisingly Cayman has one-third—a person can live on one-third of what a person can live on in the United States.

Now, Madam Speaker, it goes again to the point that I made earlier. Faith is good to have, but there has to be a reality check at some point in time, and the Government is obviously removed from . . . it is one of two things, Madam Speaker, either they're removed from reality or they're underestimating the intelligence of the Caymanian public. But for them to go forward with a document without drawing any comparison, but to be able to get up and say 'this puts us at 1.9 per cent poverty level, which is the lowest in the English-speaking Caribbean and of that we should be proud'. . . Madam Speaker, I only hope that we are not basing too many of the decisions that we are having to make on the findings in that document, because the other point that is there is that it rises significantly, obviously, with each additional member of family in a household.

So, for one person in the household it is $10,200; for two people in the household it is $13,000. So, it is incrementally moving around $3,500 per year. Now, that would be difficult in Cayman because suppose our whole expense is only $3,500 or $3,600 for the year. And so, it would be interesting to see—and I guess we'll see that when the chart comes out—as to how much it increases for each family member in the Cayman Islands based on our assessment that has been done.

Madam Speaker, when we refer to the challenges that the Caymanian public are facing, we hear every day the greater difficulties. We hear from the Government that things are good. I must say, Madam Speaker, I did hear from the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town (in the part of his speech that I caught) where he said that he was worried. When he talked about the financial picture and the borrowing, he said it worries him too. I found that significantly concerning, being a Member of the Government, and him acknowledging on the Floor of the Legislative Assembly that he too found himself worried about the financial position.

But, surprisingly, the Leader of Government Business said that they have brought back fiscal prudence. So, maybe he should comfort his member over there to make him less worried and to have that faith, because everybody else is worried and that's a significant enough sign. However, when the members of his own group get up and acknowledge that they are worried, we should then all take that as a sign as to how worried the rest of us should be . . . because with the inside knowledge that he would have to acknowledge that he is worried, Madam Speaker . . . like I said, it makes me a lot more worried and I am sure all other reasonable thinking Caymanians will be more worried as well.

Madam Speaker, I was happy to hear and have it confirmed by my friend, the Minister for Works, that there seems to be a new plan in place. There is going to be a phasing in of the schools. Now how that phasing in is going to happen I am not sure, but one area that a lot of the local suppliers and truckers have come to me with is the concern with fill and the ground preparation works that are there. They said that it is some $10 million in contracts that have been given out to one entity and they would have hoped that during this difficult time that it would have been spread around a bit more to take into account some of the smaller local operators instead of giving the whole contract to one entity.

Madam Speaker, I assume that that was all done above board in a transparent fashion and so I will not carry on with some of the reasoning or rationale that was given by those operators. But just to say, Madam Speaker, that there is significant concern to the fact that such a significant contract would have been given to one entity when there are so many local truckers around that do not have work.

There was also another issue brought to my attention, Madam Speaker. I heard that it has been straightened out, but in the whole era of openness and transparency I would expect someone to explain what occurred on the sites where, apparently, it was found that some of the fill was being removed; some of the existing fill on the sites was being removed and sold, and additional fill was being brought in. I have been told that it was addressed and that it has been stopped. However, I would expect that a statement would be made to explain what occurred and who was responsible and what action was taken for that dishonest behaviour. Or maybe, Madam Speaker, it is one of those things that will have to be investigated by the Auditor General.

Madam Speaker, that whole point on the Auditor General changes the focus of my debate because we have had so much discussion about all of these value-for-money audits and so many things that went wrong; so many investigations and allegations that have been disproved during the audit process.

Madam Speaker, one of the concerns about the Public Accounts Committee, though, is here we are moving along 12 months out, less than 12 months away from the next election, but the head of the Public Accounts Committee is still a member of Government. Now, Madam Speaker, as you will remember there was a lot said about that process and how unfair that process was and how the new Government recognised that that was not the way that it should work, and that they were only going to put one of their own there for a temporary period to deal with the outstanding audits from the previous administration. Madam Speaker, here we are, three plus years later and we still have not gotten a change. We see this again, Madam Speaker, as the Government saying one thing but doing another.

I guess this is another example of the faith. They have faith that even though it is not the right thing, their colleague . . . while it was wrong for everyone else, any other government to have it chaired by one of the Members of Government, all of a sudden their Member can stay on. Even the last administration offered the chairmanship to a Member of the Opposition. They chose at that time not to take it, if I remember correctly. They were not satisfied to only have the chairmanship; they also wanted the Opposition to have a majority of Members.

Now, all of a sudden, here they get elected, and on this transparency, openness, this accountability, something as critically important as a Public Accounts Committee . . . because understanding how unrealistic that would be. No one from the Opposition is now saying that the Government should not still maintain a majority, but at least the chairmanship, which was agreed upon, you would have expected by this time that there would have been at least an offer of a change. But, lo and behold Madam Speaker, transparency, accountability, gone out the door again. It is not convenient anymore for the PPM to refer to those things.

So, in other words, just keep the faith that they are going to do better if they are given more time. Give them more time and they are going to do better than what they have been showing us—that all they do is talk a lot but when it comes down to action, there's no action.

Madam Speaker, when I hear the reference made to a balanced budget and fiscal prudence, I can't help but think about a few days ago when we had a reference made for supplementary funds for our National Carrier, Cayman Airways. Madam Speaker, you will remember during your time (you've been here longer than me) that there was a time when the Cayman Islands used to do injections or subsidies to the National Airline—$2 million, then it went to $4 million—and those were big numbers. People used to talk a lot about could afford to keep the Airline. And it continued up and pretty soon it was at $6 million, and then, Madam Speaker, we had a savior: The new Government got elected and they said they had someone who was going to come and turn the Airline around; the administration before did not know what they were doing; it was bad management when they were losing six and seven million dollars, but they had someone who was going to save it.

So, they came, got a new building, got new consultants, some $2 million, I think, worth of consultants for our National Airline. So, Madam Speaker, the country was holding its breath, waiting with bated breath to hear how this very important asset, the National Airline, was going to be turned around and those losses of some $4 million to $6 million dollars, which had become pretty much the norm would be reduced. So, after paying out an additional $2 million in consulting, buying our own building, changing some aircraft and routes that were causing the losses to the country—all because of bad management by the previous Minister responsible—all those things were now under control; they were checked, put in place.

But, Madam Speaker, lo and behold, after waiting with bated breath what did we hear were the new losses for 2007/08 for Cayman Airways? Fifteen point five million dollars! And, Madam Speaker, the PPM has the nerve to get up here and talk about the fiscal prudence?

Madam Speaker, who do they really think that they are fooling? Fifteen point five million for Cayman Airways, not taking into account the consultant fees and all the rest of the stuff that was there.

Then we move on down, we see another good example of fiscal prudence. We go to Boatswain's Beach. Again, we hear that the reason for the losses at Boatswain's Beach is because of bad management and bad planning. So, we start digging a little bit deeper and we ask, 'well what were the losses in 2005?' When it was first opened, when you would have expected the operating losses to be significantly higher, they said, 'oh the losses in 2005 were somewhere around $700,000.'

Then we said, 'Well, what were the losses in 2006?'

They said, 'Well, the losses in 2006 were some $900,000.'

So, one year in the PPM Administration we see the losses increasing by some $200,000. But they are still blaming that on the previous administration. So, we decide to go a bit further out and say, 'well, what are the losses in 2007/2008?' Madam Speaker, lo and behold, we get losses of $8.5 million.

So, even in their first year when they took over there was $700,000; the second year it is $900,000. Not sure exactly about the third year, but the projected losses in this year are some $8.5 million!

Madam Speaker, do you know what their rationale for that is? 'Yes, we're four years in but the reason for that is still because bad boy, McKeeva Bush, bad boy, the Leader of the Opposition did not have a plan in place.' And here we are, four years later, we still have not been able to put a plan in place, and, 'oh, by the way, our losses have increased ten-fold but it is still the previous Minister's problem.'

Now, Madam Speaker, that idea that everything that goes wrong they are going to beat up and blame the Leader of the Opposition, everything that may have happened, even four years ago . . . they were so happy to get down there and put their names on Boatswain's Beach but now when it comes to the losses, oh no, it's the past Leader of Government Business, even though he didn't have a plan placed in 2005, and we have [had] four years to get a plan and now with our plan and under our Administration the losses have gone from $700,000 to $8.5 million! You must still blame it on that bad boy from West Bay. That bad Leader of the Opposition; that bad Honourable McKeeva Bush; it has to be his fault why it is bad!

The Speaker: Honourable Member, could we desist from calling Members by their names please? Thanks.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker . . .

[inaudible interjection and laughter]

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Mischief, they call it, Madam Speaker. Anyway, that just goes into account, or it challenges the statement about good fiscal prudence, and I know that is going to be hard for some Members to take, Madam Speaker. I accept that those things don't go down well; I accept that those Members are used to having it that they can get up and say whatever they want to say, and nobody is going to question. . . . If the Member thinks that I'm saying something wrong, Madam Speaker, Standing Orders are available to that Member. He can challenge me at any time. I stand by what I have said, and I still say that the time has come for the PPM to recognise that what worked in 2005 of blaming everything on the previous Leader of Government Business, the First Elected Member for the district of West Bay, that's not working anymore.

People recognise now that you have had . . . in fact, Madam Speaker, what I need to remind the public is that in the last two terms, from 2000 to 2009, the Leader of Government Business (now) would have had five years as Leader of the country, whereas the Honourable Leader of the Opposition would only have had three years. Two and a half if you take into account the hurricane and the devastation.

So, when we talk about all the blame, people are getting tired of hearing that blame, Madam Speaker. Any reasonable person would understand that if you could not get it done in five years, how can you continue blaming the person who only had three years, saying what he should have done and how much devastation he caused? And so, Madam Speaker, that little story, that little Nancy Drew tale is not working anymore. People are not listening to that argument anymore about 'well just blame the First Elected Member for West Bay. We haven't done anything but remember we are better than him because he was a bad boy'.

Madam Speaker, while they may have questions about the position (I had forgotten this point earlier on, Madam Speaker) that I referred to as the Honourable Third Official Member. Not only so much the budget that was brought here, but the decision that that Member was a part of, in concern, Cayman National Corporation when the Government took a decision to inject money to allow that company to go forward. He was one of those individuals, along with the Leader of Government Business then, the First Elected Member for West Bay, who gave the financial projections and advice on that. And not only the same Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, but basically, the whole PPM has criticised that decision significantly.

So, I find it quite amusing when the Member can get up and laud all these great comments and attributes to that honourable gentleman, because that's the same gentleman who was criticised for taking that part. But they assume, Madam Speaker, that once again they can get up and criticise the Leader of the Opposition. And there are other Members, whose integrity is being questioned. They forget what damage is done to them. They forget that it was the Second Official Member and the Third Official Member who made that decision that they so heavily questioned. But, all of a sudden now, the Third Official Member is a good man; a conservative individual who we can trust fully when he brings his financial projections.

You see, Madam Speaker, life has a way of coming full circle and that is why my recommendation to all of those Members . . . because when they make those irresponsible statements that will question the integrity of individuals, whether they are Members of this Legislative Assembly or members outside, they should take that responsibility seriously and they should not make those general sweeping statements, and then have to turn around and say what a good man he is and what a good budget he is bringing, only a matter of months afterwards.

You see, Madam Speaker, what we are seeing again is that whole thing: saying one thing . . . sometimes with the PPM we had, saying one thing and doing another. But what we are now saying, is saying one thing, and now saying another. So, I assume that they are acknowledging, Madam Speaker, that initial decisions that that gentleman was so involved in on behalf of the government at the time, that since he was involved and gave it his blessings, those decisions were well done.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, is this a convenient moment to take the luncheon break?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12:44 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.24 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. The Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay continuing his debate. I have been passed a note that you have 47 minutes remaining.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am hopeful that I will not have to utilise all of those 47 minutes.

Madam Speaker, when we took the lunch break I was discussing the National Assessment of Living Conditions and talking about the survey and information that has come forward. While I did make the comment as to the difficulty with the reality of the findings in that document, I am hopeful that with continued input and dialogue we will be able to get closer to a more realistic figure. We all recognise the importance of having factual information as to knowing the levels of poverty in our Cayman Islands. Until we find that information we will not know how to move forward. So I am hopeful that the document we do have will continue to be refined and that that information will prove useful for us to be able to move forward.

Madam Speaker, I mentioned in my earlier debate concerns with the Government's spending. I mentioned Cayman Airways and Boatswain's Beach. I want to give the Minister of Education credit for the work that is being done on the playing fields. I know our sporting enthusiasts are excited about the work on the field. It is taking a bit longer than any of us expected, especially since some of the fields were going to have artificial grass, which would have, hopefully, made the installation quicker. But spending some time there I can see that we are getting very close to having those fields completed. I am looking forward to that completion.

Madam Speaker, in the district of West Bay, there has been significant concern raised in relation to the height of the fill on the property where the school is going to go. While we recognise that it is going to be a hurricane centre, and recognise the need for lifting the base, there are concerns, first of all, as to how that fill will be retained. Right now there is no retaining wall around the fill. In some places it looks as high as eight feet. There is a concern that in the rainy season, hurricane season, that that fill will be eroded and slide down causing challenges and difficulties. One part of it is against the main road, and that could cause difficulties in the road. Hopefully there is a plan in place. I assume other Members have heard those same concerns.

Also at the site where the preparation works are going on for the Beulah Smith High School, some of the homeowners are concerned. They told me it has become pretty much a valley with the ground surrounding them and they find themselves down in a valley. I am sure Mr. Eden will remember one particular homeowner was relocated for the building of the clinic in West Bay. They were moved over into a piece of property that now adjoins the land that is being used for the school. What they now have is six to eight feet of fill all around their property, but their property is in the middle of that . . . No discussion has been had with them. Every day they see the fill being built up around them. They continue to get deeper and deeper into the valley and no one has even discussed with them, so far, what the plans are.

They recognise the need for the school as we all do, and they are looking forward to the school. But they are concerned, especially with the hurricane season approaching.

I am hopeful, Madam Speaker, that there is some plan in place for the surrounding areas and also the retention of the significant quantities of fill that has been used in the base for the schools.

Madam Speaker, we talked about the significant expense. I know my colleagues on both sides have talked about the concern for the levels of borrowing. We see that we have moved forward on a significant capital development as far as infrastructure for the country goes.

The Minister for Roads is doing some good work with roads. We see that we are going to get more roads, more playing fields, hopefully more schools. We are not sure, exactly what the timing is on schools. Hopefully they will be staggered in an affordable manner.

But Madam Speaker, we have also heard about the need for a new airport. We have heard the concerns expressed about spending significant sums of money at the current location for the airport. Due to the limitations of space at the current location [this] does not seem to be a prudent investment. I spoke to some of the people intimately involved and they told me that they figure with the current growth, the airport would probably have a 10 to 12 year lifespan because of the limitations without significant work. Whether we are going to go into the North Sound and extend the runway, whether we are going to cut off a road to extend the runway, there is still a challenge about a parallel taxiway. There is still a concern about the flight path; challenges are created over the hospital. So, there are significant questions as to the logic of spending some fifty, seventy . . . we have heard different numbers of dollars on the airport when we have so many limitations.

I know the possibility of moving the airport has been discussed before. I know the Leader of the Opposition when he was Leader of Government Business talked about a proposal to move the airport into the eastern districts. There was an idea to use the new road corridor and saying a 20 minute drive for an airport is a very acceptable distance as far as location of an airport. There are not too many other cities we fly into where we find an airport less than a 20 minute drive away. So, if we had a highway—which I am sure the Minister for Works could get built—we could move the airport for the cost especially. Since the cost of land is still low in the eastern districts, we could get a significant piece of land and move the airport.

Instead of that, we see that we are moving forward with significant expense and modification to our current airport in the same location. For some reason, while we recognise the need for improvements, we now see what seems to be a standstill at the airport. There was a lot of work being done, as far as the driveways and parking lots and so on, but now things seem to have stopped. Very recently we have seen a change in leadership at the airport as well.

Madam Speaker, I have been made to understand that the challenge that exists is that the Airports Authority is owed significant money still from our national airline, and they cannot collect their money. On the other hand, to get the loan required to move forward with the airport, the Government would be expected to guarantee the loan and the Government does not want to do that because that changes the borrowing levels that are acceptable and we will not be able to come down and talk about being compliant with all the requirements as far as prudent fiscal management.

So, with this important part of our infrastructure we seem to be in a situation where we are not sure. We have not heard too much in this budget document or in the discussion except where the Leader of Government Business talked about the continuation of the refurbishment of the airport. But so far we have not seen projections and we have heard that Government is not willing to go forward and provide the guarantee.

So I am looking forward to hearing some updates on the airport, whether here or in Finance Committee, because I think we all recognise that even if we can't move it to another location, as far as tourism and air arrivals being important to the country, we all recognise how important it is for us to have a modern and acceptable, as far as space and capacity, airport.

We hope that that is not one of those projects that has been talked about and started but that we won't be able to see something done. Maybe in hindsight we will be able to look back and say it is not worth spending that kind of money in the current location. We might have some innovative thinking with a possibility of moving the airport to a new location.

When Members on the other side talk about concerns, one of those would be that a lot of these significant capital works projects will also be significant recurrent expenditure. But no new streams of revenue seem to be associated with those projects. If we look at the schools we will see that . . . whatever the new number is. I do not know if it is still $100 million as first talked about, or now a more realistic $250 million, or what the cost is. But whatever that number is . . . and the reason I ask, Madam Speaker, is because at one time I heard they were going to be between $50 million and $30 million each. Then I heard that the budget price came in at between $60 million and $80 million each. If we do 3 times $80 million we get very close to that $250 million. But again, maybe there is some of that creative accounting or math—

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Hopefully someone will correct.

But the concern would be, Madam Speaker, whether it is $200 million, whether it is $250 million, my understanding was that we were going to have three new high school campuses to replace the current two that we have now.

The two schools that we have now each have around 1,000 students. So, we have capacity for 2,000 students. And we are going to build three new schools each with a capacity of 1,000. So, we are moving from the capacity of 2,000 to now have total capacity for 3,000. But it is going to cost us somewhere around $250 million in capital costs.

Madam Speaker, since we are talking about public schools the concern would be where is the revenue going to come [from] to pay not only the new capital but also the recurrent expenditure that would come along with the new schools? I hope we are not going to be charging our children more for their education. But it begs the question as to whether we are not collecting any new money on the roads, because I do not know about any tolls or taxes that we are doing for road works; we are not doing any money for policing; we are not doing any new revenue for the school. We see that we are getting a new government administration building, which is $80 million to $100 million—again, a service provider but not providing any new services that would generate any new revenue.

We see a new airport where we already hear that the departure tax is too expensive; Cayman is too high as a destination. So we have another $80 million being expended with no new revenue.

Then we move right down and we hear of the grandiose plans for a new cruise ship facility. We see the numbers out for that are around $200 million. Again, Cayman is also touted as being I think the second highest-cost destination as far as head tax. So it will be hard to expect that cruise lines will be willing to pay much higher fees for the recouping of that additional capital either.

So we see significant capital works projects, $200 million for the port, $100 million for the government administration building, $200 million for the schools. We are at five. Airport, another $80 million, $100 million, we don't know. And then we have roads. So we are at $500 million, $600 million in capital works projects and no significant increase in projected revenue from any of those projects. Madam Speaker, this should cause concern, unless we go back to that whole belief in faith, that belief that once we believe it is okay, it is going to be okay.

Madam Speaker, we have many questions as far as the port goes. We do not know a lot. We have heard there is going to be a new cargo port. We heard that it is going to be privately financed. We heard there is going to be a new berthing facility. And we are looking forward to hearing what is occurring with another important component of our tourism infrastructure.

Madam Speaker, I do have another area of concern before I move into the more local politics, and that would be the whole issue as to our education system. I have heard significant claims as to the significant improvements that Government has given to education. And as I have discussed with the Minister before, I think that all previous Ministers have had good intentions from going back to Mr. Benson Ebanks' days to Truman Bodden, to Roy Bodden and the current Minister of Education. I have no doubt in my mind that intentions are all good as far as improvement to education. And all of them, bar none, had significant changes and proposals to our education system and ways that were going to improve.

Madam Speaker, while they were all good intentions, some of those intentions proved to be good, and some proved to be not so good. But only in a matter of time were we able to decide whether the improvements were really improvements or not. From what we have seen so far, we have heard a lot of talk—we have heard that we are going to get new schools that will make for a better learning experience, and we have heard that we have a new curriculum and that the kids are supposedly going to respond better to that new curriculum. But until it is tested and proved and we see that the results are an improvement over what was there before we will not really know. All it will be is good intentions so far.

I think it is a bit premature to start talking about all the improvements that have been made because so far there have been conferences, pretty website, pretty pictures, but tangible measurable results is what counts.

Madam Speaker, on that point a concern that has been expressed to me and other Members of the Legislative Assembly concerns the recent exams set by the Education Department. A few days ago an exam was given—it was a national exam that was done throughout the schools—to try to get an assessment of where the schools were at. The Education Department apparently recommended to the schools that they would be able to get previous exam papers and practice for the upcoming exam. The students did that. The parents did that. They got those previous exam papers and when they got to the exam the students said, oh by the way, these exams are the same as the previous ones we did at home last night and last week as practice exams.

Some investigation has been done, apparently by some of the schools. I have heard from three different schools now that apparently whoever sets the exam took a past paper, changed from pounds and pence to dollars and cents, and gave pretty much the same exam paper to our students. So, those who had been practicing on previous exam papers obviously had great results because they will have practiced the exact same exam that was given to them as a current examination. So, what we can expect to see is very high marks by those children. And I am sure we will get that as an example as to how good our education system is now functioning. When, in reality, those marks will be significantly skewed since the examination paper, if not exactly the same was so significantly close to being the same, that children would have been given a very unfair advantage in that exam.

Madam Speaker, I know that in the system, regardless of all the changes we tout and all the improvements we make, mistakes will happen. All I want to get as a comfort level is that we acknowledge that the examination results will not be a fair example as to what the education level of our children will be. I remember . . . it is funny how when we want to make a point we use those numbers to our advantage.

I remember after Hurricane Ivan when a similar test was used and it said school had just started back these results will not be used because it is not fair for the children. But lo and behold, those numbers were terrible; the results were bad. And the government of the day could only get up and say . . . and those numbers got reported showing how bad our education system was at the time. After taking those kinds of results it would be very simple to come back and show other kinds of results to make the case as to what a great job . . . because even in the absence of those results I have already heard the praise that we have revamped and improved education even without tangible results. So I can only imagine the mischief that could be caused with the use of, first of all, those results, as well as these results now that have obviously not been done in the right fashion.

So, Madam Speaker, when it comes down to the importance of education we recognise and give credit to the importance of education. I hope with all my heart that all of the attempts at improving education in Cayman are successful. But I also recognise that there is a challenge when politicians get into an election mode and there comes a need for credit. And sometimes we take credit where credit is not due.

Since we know of the current situation beforehand, and obviously since the Government now knows that we are aware of the current situation, hopefully some explanation will be given, some balance will be drawn, and we will get a real measure sometime in the future just as those previous Ministers of Education have had to wait for their time and the public has had to decide. But it really bothers me when I hear Members on the other side get up and talk about the great inroads and improvements they have made in education, seemingly saying that the previous Ministers have not. And, like I said, only time will tell!

Madam Speaker, the other point of concern is Social Services. When I was referring to the National Assessment of Living Conditions and about how unrealistic those numbers are as far as only 986 people being below the poverty line, it reminded me of when we had the Director of Social Services, Mrs. Deanna Lookloy, here earlier this month for the supplementary budget. She explained to us that she had seen significant increases in the number of people coming to Social Services unable to make ends meet. She said that it had gone from 1,000 in 2007 to somewhere around 2,500 in 2008. All of us looked at those numbers.

I can recall one Member on the Government side even talking about whether there were any “strange Caymanians” that were coming, or new Caymanians. She made it very clear that in the large part there were no “strange Caymanians”, these were traditional Caymanian people who were now finding it very hard. And if we look at those numbers that in itself does not jive with the supposed 986 people that are the only ones below the poverty line because we see over 2,000 people that have to come and get assistance from Social Services regularly.

I know the attempt has always been made to say this goes back to the status grants and the new Caymanians and the work permits. And we have continued to try. It worked in the 2005 election. There was all this we were going to have overcrowding in schools. Now, when the Minister of Education comes out and we ask about overcrowding and he says no, it is all normal growth, we have seen no significant growth in students and education.

We talk about Social Services and we asked again about whether they are new or "strange" Caymanians (as the Third Elected Member for George Town referred to them). But we find that, no, these are traditional Caymanians.

What we are seeing is that all of those scare tactics that have been used about how devastating and how detrimental four years past, five years on from the status grants, while the Government still tries to justify everything with that, we see that the numbers do not really justify those claims.

We see that Caymanians as a whole whether it is through bad general immigration policies, bad education policies, bad employment policies, Caymanians themselves are finding it hard to make ends meet. The quicker we acknowledge that and look at doing something to fix that problem instead of trying to blame this on the expatriates, the better off we will all be.

So, Madam Speaker, I am hoping that now that we are some four, five years past that we will start trying not to blame. Before it was status grants, then it was Hurricane Ivan, and since that it has been the First Elected Member for West Bay. Everything that goes wrong it was the previous administration, even though in the last eight years, or the completion of his term, he will have served three years as Leader of Government Business, and the current Leader of Government Business will have served five. It is time, Madam Speaker, for the Government to move past that.

They cannot convince the general public any more that everything that goes wrong, whether it is Boatswain's Beach, like I said, or whether it is Cayman Airways, we cannot convince people any more that during that time the losses were around $6 million and $7 million and now the losses are $15.5 million but in some way it still has to do with the previous Leader of Government Business. It is time to take responsibility for those decisions that have been made. The logic that Boatswain's Beach loses $500,000 in 2005, but loses $8.5 million in 2008 and in some way we are going to still blame that . . . that is not going to work with the general public any more.

Madam Speaker, I am hopeful that in our next 11 months and a bit that the Government will stop continuously trying to blame previous administrations and stop blaming previous events, whether it is Hurricane Ivan . . . The time has come now for the Government's campaign. They were given the opportunity to lead the country and now they have had that opportunity going on four years.

If they have not been able to do that well, then just accept that some people can and some people can't. You have now been given your chance to, and if you don't do it, accept the responsibility of coming to the people in the next general election and saying, You know what? Thanks for the opportunity, but I failed you. Instead of still trying to find some ridiculous method of putting the responsibility and blame on somebody else.

Madam Speaker, the next 12 months (we have not actually heard an actual date for the elections, but the next 12 months) will be a trying time for the Cayman Islands because not only will we have an economy that appears to be in recession, but we also have a Government that is doing everything possible to try to get re-elected. So, while we have seen a lot of money being spent so far, and we have heard the concerns and the resistance to a reduction in that expenditure and the justification to talk about yes, we have a balanced budget and everything, once we think positive and remain thinking positive, everything should be okay.

But here we go, Madam Speaker. We will see more and more desperation on the part of the Government attempting to convince the public that they should give them an additional term because they were not able to do it in four years but if you give them another term they will be able to do this. Madam Speaker, as my colleague said earlier on, I have no doubt that the good Caymanian people will not be fooled by that. I think we have seen in the past that they come and vote out those people who do not perform when given a chance to represent them.

So, Madam Speaker, I look forward to the next 12 months. I look forward to our continued discussion on the Constitution. Maybe I missed it because I was absent a few days last week, but I heard during the supplementary that we were soon going to get a date for the referendum. I do not know if we have gotten that date for the referendum yet and whether we are satisfied that the amount of necessary discussions and education with the public has been held and that we are ready to move forward a referendum. I recognise fully that the reason for the Government going back on their position and delaying the initial date for the referendum was that they did not feel that they had the political support at the time and very smartly they decided to listen to what has been our initial call for a delay. But even that, they would not come out and say or give any credit to the fact that the Opposition had gone out and spoken to the people and recognised the need. Apparently they have not done that. But they came back after realising that they would fail or lose the referendum and they have now decided to delay the referendum. Apparently there is still some magically picked date.

For a while we heard there was a fixed date because if we didn't have it soon the UK was going to ram constitutional changes down our throats. But, as with many other things we were able to find out that was just a scare tactic that was used. We had an unequivocal statement from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office saying that was not the case.

So what we know now, Madam Speaker, is that any deadline or perceived deadline or timeline for referendum or constitutional change is not being driven by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office or any external power, but is being driven by our local populous, namely, the Government of the day, the People's Progressive Movement.

We are not sure, we have not been able to find out . . . I have heard a lot of criticism of the previous Leader of Government Business, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, and they keep talking about he stopped the process. And, yes, Madam Speaker, he did stop the process because going far and wide throughout the Island you found there was no support for the constitutional process. There was no support for the constitutional modernisation. And instead of continuing to push the document after going through the process, he did the right thing to stop it.

But here we have the new government also finding the same problem, but instead of listening to the people and either stopping or giving an adequate amount of time, we continue to hear them telling the people that we have to have this process. We have to have this referendum and we have to have constitutional development or constitutional modernisation and no one knows what this unknown deadline or established date would be.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, you have 11 minutes.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I think I can wrap it up before then.

Madam Speaker, the constitutional process, we all recognise the value in taking part, the value in educating our populace. At least now we are going forward on what seems to be a level footing. Like I said I have not heard the new date, but it appears that the education process is going full swing. I know there is a discussion tomorrow between the Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of Government Business. Hopefully the process will be allowed to take the time. And also, hopefully, the Caymanian people will make it clear that they are not desiring or seeking significant political modernisation that the Government as well will do as good representatives and decide that they too may need to stop the process until the general public is desirous of such.

I am not sure that I have too much hope that that will occur, Madam Speaker, since so far the previous Leader was criticised significantly for stopping that process. I guess it goes against the whole grain because on the one hand they say that he was referred to as a bombastic leader who used to push everything on and was some sort of dictator. Then they have to justify the position that he came back and stopped the process because of lack of support. That does not tend to go along with the whole picture that has been painted of him being the kind of dictator they would like to people to believe that he is.

Madam Speaker, the Constitution is of great importance. Regardless of what political agendas may be, I am still hopeful that as a people we will recognise the importance and step back, look in general terms and say this is what is good for the country, this is what is not good for the country, forget about who wants more power or forget about those personal fights or people may be upset because the Governor calls a Commission of Enquiry so there may be a need to take away power from the Governor. I think we have seen that the balance of power that currently exists has served us well in times of need. And while there may be room for changes we have to carefully go forward with those changes at a time and schedule that is advantageous for the Caymanian people.

Madam Speaker, I want to thank you for your continued assistance and guidance in my other role as Deputy Speaker. This will be the last Budget and Throne Speech, and I am not sure if the opportunity may arise. But, Madam Speaker, moving forward as I heard the Leader of the Opposition say already, we are looking forward to changes after the May election in the leadership of the country. And if that were to occur, it is good to know that there is a qualified Speaker that would be able to step in and assume the role. And Madam Speaker I look forward to a continued good relationship with you and all Members of this House.

I look forward to the continued blessings of the Almighty on our good ship Cayman.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: [inaudible interjection]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Ghee, that sounded like a farewell speech you were making, or wha?!

[laughter]

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to make a contribution to the ongoing debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor on the 30th of April this year. Understandably, Madam Speaker, I will be focusing my attention on the issues relating to law and order and general anti money-laundering compliance and regulatory issues and related matters. In that respect, I will begin with an overview of our regulatory and compliance framework for our financial services centre and related services.

Madam Speaker, for many years now this very tiny jurisdiction has been feeling the brunt of (if I might describe it as) the 'wrath' of the rest of the world because of our success as a financial services centre. Indeed, in more recent times we have been attracting a lot of attention because of the exponential growth in investment funds business in these islands. This has resulted in cries from all over the rest of the world for the Cayman Islands to be reined in because in the eyes of some of our detractors there must be some sleaze that is taking place here why people with legitimately-earned money would wish to do business in the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, it is no secret—certainly not to those who wish to know—that as a jurisdiction the Cayman Islands is one of the best regulated financial services centres worldwide. It is no wonder that we are the leading domicile for hedge funds. Anywhere between 70 per cent and 80 per cent of the global hedge funds are registered here in the Cayman Islands.

So, when investors seek to place their business, their investment around the world, and I say 'around the world' because the investment fund industry is distributed globally with every country now trying to attract some of the business. But, as I said, investors in financial business quite sensibly look to invest in jurisdictions that offer them a degree of confidence. And confidence in this case includes a number of things.

They look for political, economic and social stability. And as we know, Madam Speaker, Cayman offers nothing less. These investors need look no further than our Aa-3 rating from Moody's, our rating agency. We have free and fair elections constitutionally every four years. We enjoy one of the highest standards of living, not just in the Caribbean but worldwide. Accordingly, the investors are guaranteed that confidence when they think about the Cayman Islands. And given the global nature of things the information is now really just a mouse click away so they know where to find this information.

Madam Speaker, investors also look for other factors. And the Cayman Islands offer that. We offer a very experienced, competent and independent judicial system which is underpinned by English-based common law and legal systems. Indeed, our final court of appeal, our appellate court, is Her Majesty's Privy Council in London. And these are the same judges who sit in the House of Lords which is the UK final court.

We have legal systems that guarantee access to justice. We have a legal system that guarantees equality of arms; we have a justice system that offers equitable settlement of disputes including appropriate enforcement mechanisms for contractual rights. This latter aspect is underpinned by the availability of some of the highest calibre of relevant professionals. Some of the worlds best legal practitioners, accountants, bankers, funds and companies managers, regulators, compliance officers, police investigators and prosecutors all of whom observe and where appropriate apply our regulatory laws and best practices.

Investors are given the confidence to invest here because the Cayman Islands offers them the opportunity also to lower their tax burden while at the same time meeting their tax commitment to their country of origin. The Cayman Islands facilitates tax neutrality, not tax avoidance as some commentators would have the world believe.

By investing in places such as Cayman, Madam Speaker, investors avoid being subject to double or triple taxation on their returns. We all know that lowering one's tax burden is a legitimate commercial exercise. That is why persons running for political office worldwide when they campaign, they always campaign to lower the taxes of the electors. It is a legitimate concern as a legitimate commercial exercise. That is why they do it.

Let me make it quite clear that I am not in any way saying that there are not instances or pockets of tax avoidance or evasion here. Indeed, there is no country in the world that can completely prevent such an activity. However, what I can say to this House and indeed to the rest of the world is that the Cayman Islands have said or done nothing to encourage or facilitate tax evasion.

Indeed, I go further, Madam Speaker, by saying in instances where such abuses have taken place and have been brought to our attention, the Cayman Islands have cooperated with the relevant countries in providing information and other forms of assistance, where permissible, of course, to facilitate them enforcing their laws. So, the Cayman Islands does not provide any safe haven for tax dodgers or other persons involved in any illegal activity.

Madam Speaker, continuing on the issue of investor confidence, I would simply wish to mention also that there are other factors which an investor would look to and take comfort from. They would be impressed by our well developed communication and utility network, our strategic geographical location vis-à-vis some of the world's major gateways and our accessibility from places such as London, USA, and other parts of the Caribbean because we are serviced by some of the world's leading airlines.

Madam Speaker, our attractiveness is further enhanced by the relative speed and ease with which business is conducted here, aided, of course again by the relatively low cost due to the absence of some of the more burdensome taxes and tax structures often associated with doing business in other countries and it has proven to be prohibitive for businesses in those countries.

The fact that these Islands are so investor friendly and so attractive to business has nothing to do with any absence of regulation in the Cayman Islands. It has nothing to do with facilitating or encouraging illegal activity. Instead, it has more to do with a reflection on the burdensome tax regimes as well as other disincentives practiced by countries of origin and which, in turn, drive business offshore.

Madam Speaker, this is not just my opinion; this is something that these countries are now beginning to realise and are actively taking steps to encourage their business to stay at home. They are offering tax incentives. They are moving to lower taxes or in some cases abolish taxes. They are enacting legislation similar to those found in the Cayman Islands. They are putting in place tax neutral schemes. And some of them, I have seen one that even advertised that the Cayman Islands secrecy law is not as effective as it sounds but instead, that particular country's secrecy law is much tighter. There you go, Madam Speaker.

While I am on the issue of secrecy laws, let me just use this opportunity to explain to the uninitiated the purpose of our Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law. This law is not about preventing the disclosure and sharing of information. Indeed, it is not a barrier to the sharing of information. Instead, the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law provides a dedicated legislative gateway to guarantee the provision of information to anyone, including law enforcement and regulatory agencies that have demonstrated a legitimate entitlement to the information requested.

In this regard, it is no different from the various confidentiality provisions found in the different banking laws of other countries—the USA, the UK or others—as it relates to unauthorised disclosure of clients' information.

So, it is now clear to us, given what has been happening, that it is all about jealousy by the rest of the world. They are deeply jealous about the success of these islands, and so the line of attack is not now only to seek to put us out of business but to try to lure some of these businesses back home on shore.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, we've had no quorum for the last going on 15 minutes now. I was waiting to see whether they were going to come in and listen to what I think is very good information being passed on.

[pause]

The Speaker: Serjeant, are there any other Members in the Common Room?

Serjeant-at-Arms: Yes Ma'am.

The Speaker: Can we ask them to all come in to ensure that we have a quorum for the rest of the proceedings please? Thank you.

[pause]

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member, continue your debate please.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you Madam Speaker.

In continuing on this theme, let me remind this House and indeed the rest of the world about how much we have done as a jurisdiction to ensure that we are not just a jurisdiction of choice but also understandably one of the most regulated financial services centres world wide.

Madam Speaker, as you and others are aware, the Cayman Islands have been reviewed over the last eight years by every conceivable international and regional reviewing agency. They include KPMG; (CFATF) twice, Caribbean Financial Action Task Force; and the FATF of course. The IMF; the OECD; and, as we speak, the IMF is getting ready to come back again. Indeed, some people say that we are review-fatigued!

We are the only country to undertake the retrospective due diligence exercise, even at great cost, while others onshore and also developed countries who pride themselves on regulation refuse to do so because, according to them it is too costly. We are one of the first countries to enter into advanced commitment with the OECD. Madam Speaker, every time there is a pilot project to be rolled out by these reviewing agencies the Cayman Islands is asked to volunteer. They ask us to volunteer to use these new methodologies: we are the guinea pigs. And they ask us to 'volunteer' Madam Speaker, but we know better because if we do not volunteer we know that we are going to find ourselves on some list somewhere. So it is in our interest to 'volunteer.'

Each time they have asked us to volunteer, in all such cases we have opened our books and in all of those instances we have been found us largely compliant and in some cases we have exceeded international standards.

Madam Speaker, I can say without fear of contradiction that the Cayman Islands as of today as an offshore financial service centre enjoys the highest rating in relation to anti money-laundering and combating financial terrorism standards, the highest rating of an offshore centre.

Indeed, the various evaluations to date have confirmed that using the most modern methodologies the Cayman Islands as a jurisdiction ranks in the top three countries of those reviewed, including FATF member countries. We are in the top three in terms of being either compliant or largely compliant with these 40-plus FATF recommendations as it relates to international standards.

Madam Speaker, you, as well as Members of this House, will be delighted, but certainly not surprised to hear, that we are rated generally higher than countries such as Italy, Spain, Ireland, Switzerland, and, yes, Madam Speaker, in some areas better than the UK. But it gets a little better as well: it is now accepted, certainly after our latest CFATF evaluation in June of 2007, that our compliance culture is generally healthier and more robust in that we generally apply higher standards than even some of our major detractors including in some areas the USA. And I think I heard someone say, "So, what is it they want with us?"

But let me put this in some perspective for you, Madam Speaker, and honourable Members. In June 2007, the Cayman Islands was evaluated by the CFATF (Caribbean Financial Action Task Force). The examiners were from the Bank of Jamaica, the Attorney General's Chambers in the Bahamas, a member of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, an analyst from the United States Department of Treasury, Financial Services Enforcement Network (otherwise called FINSSEN), as well as the Deputy Director of the CFATF based in Trinidad.

Madam Speaker, they issued their report in December 2007 (six months ago) and in that report they found that the Cayman Islands were compliant or largely compliant (the two highest ratings) in 32 out of 40 FATC anti money-laundering recommendations, and six out of nine CFT recommendations. And in other areas, we were more or less partly compliant, and, Madam Speaker, these latter areas include matters such as some services not having in place screening procedures to ensure high standards when hiring certain employees and quantitatively inadequate human resources at CIMA (Cayman Islands Monetary Authority) and Customs. And on most of these other areas that they have identified weaknesses in, are areas that would be addressed when this House passes the new PCCL Law in the next fortnight or so.

But, Madam Speaker, the report went on to state, for example, that the Cayman Islands legal framework for combating money laundering and tourist finances is comprehensive and implements all the relevant provisions of the United Nation Conventions, saving one minor respect, not impacting on our effectiveness. I repeat that, Madam Speaker: "The Cayman Islands (this is the quote from the report) legal framework for combating money laundering and tourist financing is comprehensive and implements all the relevant provisions of the UN Conventions, saving one minor respect, not impacting effectiveness."

They went on to say that "the confiscation regime meets most standards and is effective as over one hundred and twenty million dollars in property has either been restrained or confiscated since 2003."

They recognised, Madam Speaker, the fact that we have had some five domestic money laundering prosecutions since 2003.

Madam Speaker, this superb rating—if I might call it that—is consistent with the earlier report issued by the IMF after its 2003 evaluation of the Cayman Islands. To give you a synopsis, I seek your permission, Madam Speaker, to quote quickly from the executive summary of that report issued by the IMF. It says, "The Cayman Islands financial industry and regulators have developed an intense awareness of the measures required to combat money laundering and the financing of terrorism. As a result of legal reforms and improved supervisory procedures since 2000, there is an effective regime to implement these procedures and good evidence of a developed compliance culture. In the last two years an extensive programme of legislative rule and guideline development has introduced an increasingly effective system of regulation both formalised in earlier practices and introducing enhanced procedures."

It goes on to say that "the anti money-laundering safety regime is robust, and that the Cayman Islands has been a leader in developing anti money-laundering programmes throughout the Caribbean region. Many in the Cayman financial sector provide leadership within the region to the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force. The system will be further strengthened as a securities investment business law is implemented for market intermediaries and by issuing guidance to all financial services providers regarding internal control and monetary audits, tightening certain provisions of the guidance notes and ensuring that adequate mechanisms are in place to safe-guard against potential risk associated with eligible introducers and to ensure ready access to identification records on clients introduced from abroad."

Madam Speaker, all these are already in place. The regulations in the Cayman Islands are in accordance with IOSCO (International Organization of Securities Commissions) principles as well as implemented except in mutual funds areas.

I pause to say, Madam Speaker, here is the IMF saying in 2003 that our regulations are in compliance, are in accordance with IOSCO principles. The point I am making is that this is now 2008 and we are still struggling to get membership into IOSCO. But there are countries with far less regulatory regime who have been granted membership of IOSCO. It begs the question, Madam Speaker. I say no more.

Madam Speaker, those comments from the IMF came as no surprise to those of us in Government and the private sector who have worked and continue to work very hard to ensure that our standards are up to international expectations. We need only to recount our combined efforts, that is, Government and private sector efforts, over the last decade and a half starting with the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty (MLAT) with the US which has resulted in excellent working relationship with them and, particularly, with our central authority, the honourable Chief Justice, and the US counterpart, the Department of Justice in Washington.

This excellent working relationship has resulted in excess of 300 requests that have been dealt with. In doing so, in providing that level of assistance we continue to have our annual consultation talks where from time to time the US Department of Justice people visit Cayman and vice versa with a view to reviewing the workings of the MLAT and to improve where improvement is required. And I dare say that the US Department of Justice has nothing but praise for our cooperation, our effort in cooperating with them. And this is despite anything that you might have heard coming from the Floor of the US Senate and House of Representatives.

It is despite anything you might have read coming from Mr. Morgenthau, the New York District Attorney who fails to update his records.

Madam Speaker, in addition to the MLAT, we do have other legislative and regulatory as well as institutional frameworks in place. We, that is, CIMA (Cayman Islands Monetary Authority) and Cabinet, as well as industry stakeholders, continually update and reissue statements of guidance or guidance notes to service providers in the Islands on the prevention and detection of money laundering. These guidance notes are not just general but are sector specific and cover other areas such as insurance, company formation and management, staff training, record keeping, know your customer requirements as well as SAR (Suspicious Activity Reports) all these requirements. These guidance notes are used to buttress the actual anti money-laundering regulations issued pursuant to the PCCL for the first time in as far back as 2000.

So, it was no surprise to us that the CFATF observed in their latest report that in terms of overall anti money-laundering compliance, the compliance culture prevailing in the Cayman Islands, it was evident to the assessors that the country in general and the financial services providers in particular, all have a keen sense of awareness of these anti money-laundering and CFATF issues.

Unlike some countries, the Cayman Islands enacted aspects of money-laundering legislation as far back as the 1980s starting with the Misuse of Drugs Law. And we have since improved on that, in 1996 with the enactment of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law to cover money-laundering in all other areas. These have served us well. So well, that they have been copied and used by other countries.

In keeping with our role of lead jurisdiction in this area, we have recently completed a review of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law and in the next couple of weeks I will be piloting a complete revised and updated PCCL reflecting the most up to date best practice among others. To complement the PCCL I need to also briefly mention the existence of our Terrorism Law that was passed in 2003 and, of course, the various related United Nations Orders that helps underpin that legislation.

We have also an Information Tax Agreement (ITA) with the United States. And that is as far back as 2001. In this regard we have also enacted the necessary legislation to underpin that agreement as well as any similar agreement that we will be entering into in that respect.

Madam Speaker, the actual form of agreement that was used is consistent with and acceptable to our G8 friends. They found it (to use their words) consistent with the high standard of transparency and exchange of information for tax purposes.

Related to this is the fact, honourable Members will recall, that we have also enacted what I might refer to in short as the EU Savings Directive Law. This was enacted to provide the framework, both legislative and institutional to create the capacity to provide information to member states of the EU.

So we have done our part, Madam Speaker, in attempting to partner with other countries to fight crime as well as other unacceptable behaviour. Indeed, as I speak, CIMA continues to do a wonderful job in working with international regulators in the financial services industry to ensure compliance with best practice. It is working closely with agencies such as the UK Financial Services Authority (FSA), the USA Securities Exchange Commission (SEC). There has been ongoing discussion with International Organisation of Security Commissions (IOSCO), and it has signed Memorandum of Understanding and other bilateral with overseas regulators as well. It is working closely with the offshore group of banking supervisors, it is working closely with the offshore group of insurance supervisors, and these efforts are all aimed at shoring up CIMAs ability and, by extension the Cayman Islands' ability, to provide international cooperation and cross border supervision and other related assistance.

The same may be said of our Financial Reporting Authority (FRA) which has done extremely well in restoring the confidence and respect of not only the local financial industry but its international counterparts as well.

So, Madam Speaker, we continue to do what is right, we continue to do what is balanced. We continue to do what is reasonable to maintain not just the good reputation of these islands, but also our competitiveness in the international financial services business. Having done so as a Government we wish to salute all the stakeholders, those in Government, the Portfolio of Finance, the Attorney General's Chambers, the RCIP, CIMA, FRA and others.

The Government also salutes the dedication, commitment and professionalism of our friends in the private sector, our legal practitioners as well, our accountants, our insurance professionals, our companies experts, our funds administrators, trust experts, real estate practitioners, bankers, we salute every one of them. We appreciate their efforts despite the challenges. And I say challenges, Madam Speaker, because for the Cayman Islands it is a continually shifting goalpost. And there is no such thing as a level playing field.

On every single occasion that we have been reviewed, and we think that we are just about ready for membership in some of these international bodies, we are told, "Hang on. We need to take one more look at you and we are going to be using a new methodology and thereafter we will get back to you."

So, Madam Speaker, we continue to comply. We continue to persevere and we will continue to be competitive. And I am confident that we will take our seat at the table not too long from now. We will not be fighting with them. We do not believe in confrontation. We believe in dialogue, and we will not give up. Instead we will continue to negotiate our way to the table.

Madam Speaker, I was going through my usual email traffic and I saw an email with an article written by a Hannah M. Terhune. I do not know who she is. But I found it interesting because I spoke about the competition in the hedge fund industry and jealousy. This is what she said: "Many countries are competing against each other to provide the best playing field from a legal standpoint for private investment hedge funds. For a new look low budget offshore fund, Anguilla or the British Virgin Islands and not the Cayman Islands, may well be the best choice. Best location for offshore funds? The short answer is that no one place is best. You can form an offshore fund in any location that makes sense and is affordable. There are many areas of the world that are considered prime offshore centres. The most widely used and the most expensive locations are Bermuda, Guernsey, Hong Kong, the Isle of Man, Jersey, Luxembourg, Mauritius, Singapore" . . . and it goes on and on.

"These locations provide a welcoming climate for funds in terms of the ample and pricey supply and sophisticated lawyers, bankers and consultants offering legal and accounting advice."

Madam Speaker, it is a competition. That's what it is. A lot of the rhetoric that we hear has nothing to do with any concerns about whether the Cayman Islands is well regulated or not. They are insisting and they are jealous and adamant that some of the business here must be moved to their jurisdiction. That is what it is all about.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member, is this a convenient point for me to take a 15 minute break?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 3.43 pm

Proceedings resumed at 4.08 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. The Second Official Member continuing his debate on the Throne Speech and the Budget Address.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

May I now just focus briefly on some areas mentioned in the Throne Speech mentioned by His Excellency the Governor?

His Excellency mentioned the issue of a criminal justice strategy. In that respect I wish to point out that as we speak there are a number of different initiatives being pursued by different agencies and departments in Government as well as outside of Government, all aimed at enhancing our criminal justice system in general

Not too long ago, the judicial department working along with other agencies rolled out the first drug rehabilitation court. This is a facility aimed at providing an alternative to the traditional method of fine and imprisonment for persons who have an obvious drug abuse problem, that is, a drug addiction problem that drives that person to committing other criminal offences invariably aimed at feeding the insatiable drug habit. The criminal justice strategy and in particular the drug rehabilitation court, is a multi-agency alternative approach to this endemic problem and from all indications it is doing very well as we speak.

But there are various other initiatives in train that could benefit from a more coordinated effort and by extension greater cohesion if not oversight. Indeed, I can say that there is probably no single agency tasked with coordinating some of the various strategies being pursued at the moment, and this is no reflection on anybody. Strategies such as outstanding recommendations on the Crime Study Report, the Alternative Sentencing Initiative, the Post Sentencing Parole Probation and Aftercare matters, prison reforms, early intervention policies for at risk youth, and witness protection and the proposal to enhance the provision of forensic and related services. These are all different initiatives being pursued within Government at the moment. Well intentioned.

But what is being contemplated is a sort of a more collaborative approach within Government as well as outside of Government. So, the Cabinet has recently approved the formation of a Criminal Justice Strategy Management Group for the Cayman Islands that will be tasked with the responsibility of overseeing or coordinating these various criminal justice initiatives. It is contemplated that this criminal justice strategy management group will comprise His Excellency the Governor as Chairman, and will include the following persons or agencies: a representative from the judiciary, which is the Chief Justice or his nominee; it will include the Leader of Government Business, the Hon. Chief Secretary; Commissioner of Police; Attorney General; Hon. Minister of Health and Human Services; probation services rep; Hon. Minister of Education; Chief Immigration Officer; and probably the Collector of Customs, as well as other relevant persons and agencies.

It was further agreed, Madam Speaker, that the office of the Governor working along with the Attorney General will provide the necessary secretarial support to this particular group. This secretarial support will, of course, include preparing written reports on the various initiatives of the group, attending meetings and preparing minutes therefrom as well as liaising with relevant overseas agencies.

It is also anticipated that there will be close working relationship with other Caribbean Overseas Territories as well as the UK in order to effectively implement some of these initiatives.

Madam Speaker, matters such as the proposed regional witness protection programme, the provision of enhanced forensic services, the proposal for close cooperation for the secondment of police officers from the Caribbean Overseas Territories, the training and secondment of specialist prosecutors as well as others will require significant cooperation with the relevant regional counterparts. In this regard, the Leader of Government Business was able to secure the necessary political commitment from some of the elected leaders from the other Caribbean OTs at the last Overseas Territories Consultative Council (OTCC) meeting held in London as well as at the pre OTCC meeting held here in Cayman last year.

So, Madam Speaker, we are confident that there will be the necessary political and institutional support for this exercise. Her Majesty's Government is also very keen to provide technical and possibly limited financial support for some of the initiatives, preferably a specific project with a regional component.

As indicated earlier, some initiatives are already at various stages of implementation and merely require the necessary coordination and support. The drug rehabilitation court is already in operation. The law to provide for wider sentencing options is also already enacted but awaiting a commencement date. This will be done soon, Madam Speaker. As soon as issues such as the electronic monitoring component as well as some of the key staffing issues are sorted out.

The various recommendations from the Crime Study Report are also to be implemented. The Hon. Minister of Health and Human Services and I, as well as others are due to meet shortly to move this initiative forward. Further, it is hoped that after an upcoming meeting of the Caribbean Overseas Territories Attorneys General working group each Caribbean Overseas Territory will be able to sign the relevant Memorandum of Agreement and also to enact the Criminal Justice Protection Bill to implement the witness protection programme among the Caribbean OTs.

We will also at that meeting be discussing the regional buy-in for the proposed forensic laboratory.

Madam Speaker, I turn briefly to the issue of human rights. There was a time when we could say that the human rights issue was an emerging issue in the Cayman Islands. Although it is no longer an emerging issue it is now an everyday issue. It is now here. It is in this regard that I wish on behalf of Government to pay regards to the excellent work of the local Human Rights Committee. They have done very well to heighten awareness and sensitise our people on their human rights. In this regard the HRC deserves our encouragement.

The Government, as is expected, will continue to examine and where appropriate take on board the recommendations contained in their various reports. There are some that can be and will be dealt with quite easily. However, there are others that require more long term policy decisions and are therefore under active consideration by government.

Finally, on the issue of human rights, it is as good a time as any to remind the Human Rights Committee that while it is readily understandable by some of us who are lawyers that their efforts will invariably seem to be concentrated on the plight of certain groups, care needs to be taken not to fall into a situation where the HRC is perceived to be only concerned about the rights of criminals in our society. If this ever happens, as is the case in some other countries, the HRC could lose credibility as the majority of our people will become very suspicious of the role of the committee. So care needs to be exercised and the HRC needs to be seen as addressing the plight of all persons in need of such attention, whether they are victims or accused.

Madam Speaker, finally I wish to briefly comment on the Government's upcoming legislative agenda. I mentioned earlier that we will shortly be debating the revised Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Bill aimed at modernising even further our anti money-laundering legislative and, by extension, institutional frameworks. When enacted, it will among other things introduce for the first time a civil forfeiture component for the confiscation of proceeds of crime even where there was no criminal conviction, but where the evidence shows that the proceeds itself flows from some unlawful conduct.

Additionally, there is currently in circulation a bill (perhaps in green form by now) that we are hoping to enact in the next couple of weeks. In short, it is a bill to legislate for integrity in public life. The anti-corruption legislation will be a revolutionary piece of legislation that will impact not just legislators, Cabinet Ministers and public officers, but also our friends in the private sector. I will endeavour to say more on the scope of it when I pilot it shortly in this House.

Madam Speaker, in the same vein I am hoping on behalf of Government to shortly bring to this House a completely revamped Police Law that will bring greater clarity to the role and functions of the RCIP. This piece of legislation will address a number of issues pertaining to superintendence and administration of the RCIP including the creation of an independent civilian complaints body that will bring greater transparency in how complaints against the police are dealt with.

I wish not to say more about the proposed legislation at this point, Madam Speaker. Suffice it to say that in due course the public will get an opportunity, as will Members of this House, to comment on the draft bill prior to its being enacted.

That piece of legislation it is also proposed to deal with powers of search and seizure, pre-detention powers, and right to counsel among others.

Madam Speaker, you have already heard from relevant Ministers on the proposed legislation to regulate smoking in public places, regulation to deal with children, regulation to deal with marine conservation, road traffic legislation, employment, education as well as others. All speak to a very ambitious, aggressive and comprehensive legislative programme for the coming months.

There are other pieces of legislation relating to the financial industry, law and order issues, the criminal justice system, prisons, parole, mode of trial for certain offences, which we are hoping to have in place in the coming months.

We are confident that to the extent that all these measures are aimed at improving our safety and our general wellbeing that they will gain the support of not just all honourable Members of this House but that of the general public at large.

Madam Speaker, I certainly thank you and honourable Members for their attention in regard to my presentation. I hope I have been able to enlighten the public at large on some of these issues that have been swirling around (for want of a better word) in the public domain. I certainly thank you all.

The Speaker: As there are only five minutes to the hour of interruption, I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

Debate on the Throne Speech and Second Reading of the Appropriation (June 2008 to July 2009) Bill 2008 (Budget Address)

(Continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am extremely happy that my colleagues who are on this side of the aisle made sure that we are quorate this morning. It is very noticeable that not one Member of the Opposition is here. Nevertheless, perhaps just like constitutional modernisation, we shall move on.

Madam Speaker, you will recall that when I delivered my policy statement at the start of this budget debate I began by quoting from the ancient wisdom of the book of Ecclesiastes, specifically chapter 3, which reminds us that there is a time and season to everything under the sun. When I drew that reference I had no idea at the time of its immediate relevance to the Leader of the Opposition. However, as fate would have it afterwards, his rambling and uninspiring contribution to this debate provided strong confirmation.

I listened very intently to everything that he had to say—his many moans and groans; his amazing fascination with the past; his absolute failure, Madam Speaker, to articulate a clear vision for taking this country into the future. Here was a golden opportunity which any serious Leader of the Opposition would have seized to convince the country that his vision represented the better option. However, as has become the norm, the Leader of the Opposition again missed the boat.

Desperation, Madam Speaker, was written all over his presentation. Over, and over, and over again he complained of being subjected to criticism as if criticism is not part and parcel of politics. And, Madam Speaker, for the Leader of the Opposition to complain about criticism, my Lord, what should I do? It seems to me that he loves being in the kitchen, but he certainly detests feeling the heat. All I can advise him is, if that is the case, then his only option is to get out!

Madam Speaker, the rambling presentation by the Leader of the Opposition painted the sad image of a drowning man clutching at straws; someone attempting a grand last stand because somehow they sense the end is near. And the Leader of the Opposition has very good reason to be concerned in his present predicament. Where his political future is concerned, Madam Speaker, the writing is very much on the wall.

His percentage of the popular vote (the statistics will prove) in his constituency has been steadily declining in each general election since 1992. That leads to the logical conclusion that a growing number of people are recognising that his style of politics is no longer relevant to their lives. It is a style of politics which is based on hand-outs, patronage. It is a style of politics which is demeaning because it promotes dependence. It is about handing out fish instead of teaching people how to fish.

No wonder those on the other side have difficulty understanding our philosophy of politics and government. It is obviously totally foreign to their way of thinking. The politics of this Government is about empowering people. It is about teaching people how to fish instead of encouraging them to ask for a fish.

Let me pause for a second, Madam Speaker, to make sure that I am not misunderstood. I know, and I live it daily and my colleagues do too. We know that sometimes people need a fish. And we do everything possible to make sure that there is a supply. But Madam Speaker the whole difference . . . we do not want our people to spend the rest of their lives in that state of mind and being. So there has to be a blend.

And Madam Speaker, do you know what else? Let me tell you the danger in that, and I really pray to my God that I am not misunderstood. But there is a clear and present danger for that because it passes on from generation to generation if the government does not take proactive steps to tool people, to make sure that the new generation has every opportunity for a good education. So you see, Madam Speaker, when he speaks to us not caring, it is just his style to play to those same minds that have immediate needs. And we understand their immediate needs. But we cannot spend all of the country's resources shoring up those immediate needs—and keeping them in need. It makes no sense!

We have to take the limited resources to assist these people but at the same time we have to look to the generations to come. That is why the new schools are being built. That is why there is a whole transformation in education today, Madam Speaker. He and his colleagues need to understand that, and they should not . . . and, Madam Speaker, some of them have good sense. They should be ashamed to come on the Floor of this House and preach that message and tell me about me being slick? Ha, ha! Madam Speaker, I cannot see any of them yet to point to who is the slickest; but I would have difficulty if all of them were here in deciding who is!

Madam Speaker, in essence, what we are doing is making every best attempt possible to create opportunity through the right blend of politics for persons to achieve their potential in the context of this free market system that we have. What this honourable House was treated to last Wednesday was a recitation of gloom and doom from the Leader of the Opposition, a string of inconsistencies and contradictions, and a copious serving of the most absurd and outrageous claims which the Leader of the Opposition has not supported with any relevant facts. He just does his usual thing.

Let me give you a good example, Madam Speaker. In describing the current conditions in the country he claimed, and I quote from the Hansards with your permission. He says, “Today our people are enduring the worst economic times in the history of this country.” [07 May 2008] You could not ask for anything more outrageous, Madam Speaker, more preposterous and more unbelievable. This, Madam Speaker, is a classic example of taking politics to the most ridiculous extreme for self-serving purposes.

If he believes that Caymanians are enduring the worst economic times in the history of this country, he is essentially saying that much of the hardships that our forefathers endured were much better than today. But he will still get up five minutes later and talk about how much we need to revere them because of the hardships they went through to make life better for us. So what is he saying?

Making such a claim, Madam Speaker, has only highlighted the Leader of the Opposition's own—and I should add, his party's—increasing irrelevance to the Cayman Islands of today. It simply portrays him as a man hopelessly trapped in the past, a man who has been bypassed by time and has become fossilized because of his refusal to recognise that times have changed and there [is need] for an adjustment in thinking—he thinks there is no need.

In the context of Caribbean politics, the Leader of the Opposition fits the description of the Hero in the Crowd—the political personality of the 50s and 60s who was the subject of Archie Singham's well-known book of the same name. That time, Madam Speaker, is gone. Long gone! The people of this country, indeed, the people of this region, are no longer interested in the one-man political shows of heroes in the crowd; in leaders who market themselves as saviours of the masses, yet in many instances cannot even save themselves.

The Leader of the Opposition is clinging to this antiquated model of leadership, when I say consensus leadership is the new model and the one that works best. Leadership by consensus is the type which this Government provides.

I am not on an ego trip, Madam Speaker, in politics, so I have no desire to be “a hero in the crowd”. I think you know me well enough, how well I like to not be seen, actually. My desire is quite simple: to make a difference for Caymanians without being a hero in the crowd. In the “hero in the crowd” model, the leader makes the decisions and the people have no input.

The leader, after all, Madam Speaker, is considered the fountain of wisdom. He acts as if he knows what is best for all the people because he contemptuously believes that they are incapable of thinking for themselves. In the consensus [leadership] model, which this Government has been practicing and will continue to practice, the people are consulted. Their views inform the policy-making process.

This is why we are planning a referendum on where we go with the Constitutional Modernization. Madam Speaker, it is too significant a national development for the people to be excluded. In his contribution, the Leader of the Opposition demonstrated utter contempt for the Government’s plan to consult the people via a referendum. He called it a “so-called” referendum and his choice of words reeks of contempt. But, Madam Speaker, nothing else and nothing less is expected from the “hero in the crowd.”

After listening intently to the Leader of the Opposition, there is only one logical conclusion which can be drawn, and that is that the political season of the Leader of Opposition has long gone. But what is most interesting, Madam Speaker, is that the Leader of the Opposition himself seems to have finally come around to recognising this reality. He made a significant comment when he was delivering his address. The comment has apparently escaped the attention of most everyone. But I tell you, it suggests to me that he has given serious thought recently to throwing in the towel and riding off into the sunset.

I am going to quote him, Madam Speaker, from the Hansard, “....it has not been an easy road these 24 years . . .” he told us last Wednesday. He went on, and I quote again: “I have made up mind that this would be my last debate for a Throne Speech. But I am not too sure that it won’t be.” Those are his exact words as recorded in the Hansard, unedited though it be. So he cannot come now and deny saying it.

“Made up my mind” means he has decided. And saying afterwards that that this would be his last debate on a Throne Speech leaves absolutely no doubt in my mind as to what thoughts crossed his mind. If he has decided that this will be his last Throne Speech, then it means he does not plan to be around for another. The statement makes it pretty clear that he is contemplating his exit from politics.

But Madam Speaker the man I know is not quite as simple as that. So, an equally important question arises. And that question is: Could this be just a clever tactic that the Leader of the Opposition is using as part of a broader strategy for survival? It cannot be ruled out. Recognising his growing irrelevance, could it be that he is merely seeking to whip up sympathy in the hope that his supporters would come rushing to him and pleading, as the song says, ‘Oh, no! Don’t go! Please stay!’ hoping this would give him a new lease on his political life.

It fits perfectly with the political personality of the Leader of the Opposition. Nothing demonstrates how divorced he is from current reality than his failure to recognise and accept that the whole world has changed—and it continues to change in fundamental ways. We cannot pretend, as the Leader of the Opposition has done, that this does not have implications for the Cayman Islands.

Fortunately, his de facto deputy, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, has demonstrated in his contribution that he knows better. But in acknowledging globalisation and its effects on the Cayman Islands, he is clearly at odds with his leader whose presentation suggested that it is business as usual. But he went down the wrong path too, Madam Speaker (that is, the Second Elected Member for West Bay), because instead of lecturing us on this side about globalisation (because there really is no need to do that, we understand that), he should be lecturing his own leader and bringing him up to scratch.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay occasionally adopts a realistic and pragmatic approach to issues that certainly sets him apart from his leader. In fact, I tend to agree with people who sometimes say they see a promising future for him in politics. However, just like me, Madam Speaker, whenever that is said, they immediately emphasise that it is conditional. They say, if the Second Elected Member for West Bay is to live up to his promise and achieve his true potential he, of necessity, must free himself from the influence of his leader. And you saw the stifling influence of his leader very much at work in parts of the contribution of the Second Member for West Bay.

As a professed born-again Christian, the Leader of the Opposition would be the first to jump up and say we must refer to and praise the Good Lord for everything and at all times. Reflecting the Christian heritage of this country, Madam Speaker, which is also part of my experience, I began my policy statement by quoting Scripture—followed by a well-known hymn. Instead of applauding us for upholding that Christian heritage at a time when there is concern about the increasing secularisation of society, we are condemned by the Second Elected Member of West Bay for doing that.

This is just another example, Madam Speaker, of the confusion in which the Second Elected Member for West Bay finds himself because of the overpowering influence of his leader.

The Leader of the Opposition also read out a hymn and called on the name of the Lord in his contribution. Doing so was perfectly fine for him, but not so for us. I want to remind the Second Elected Member for West Bay that all men are equal before God. I do not know where he makes his judgment from. He must understand that there is not one rule for Peter and another for Paul.

In speaking about the effects of globalisation in my policy statement I emphasised that Caymanians could no longer afford to see their existence in isolation from the rest of the world because of our economic interdependence. I never denied at any time that we [do] not face challenges as a result of the present uncertainty in the global economy. We are very aware of that. To do so would be to bury our heads in the sand. However, I do believe that despite these challenges we in the Cayman Islands are still better off than people in many countries and have a lot to be thankful for. And that is all I was saying; nothing more than that. I never denied the challenges.

It was against this backdrop that I said one only had to look at BBC World or CNN on television, to see how much—despite the challenges—we have going for us when we compare ourselves to many other places. That is all I was saying. And the key message I was saying was that we have our challenges, but we must be thankful for where we are. That is all I was saying. All that happened, Madam Speaker, is that I said it first. That's all that happened. I will make sure I don't say it first next time.

Madam Speaker, in an act of political mischief the Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues twisted my words and sought to convey the impression that I was dismissing the challenges that some Caymanians are facing by telling them to go and watch BBC World and CNN. All I can say, Madam Speaker, [is that] from a supposedly born-again Christian, I would expect better.

Madam Speaker, this Government is committed to doing everything we possibly can to make life better for all Caymanians. But we need to appreciate and accept that the resources are limited. The priorities are everywhere you look around, and we have to do the best we can with those resources to move the country forward while at the same time doing the best we can for the plight of those in need.

It is a balancing act, Madam Speaker. We cannot have it too much one way or the other. We cannot as a nation make that mistake. And I need everybody in this country to understand that. Those same ones who are in need to those who make millions must understand that. If we do not move the country forward, the next generation is going to really face the times that the Leader of the Opposition was talking about because we will all have missed the boat and not have the strength to swim ashore. That is what will happen to us.

But he stands up on every occasion possible and plays the game to tell those people that we do not care. And he knows better! Him! He knows better! But his success has totally depended on him playing that game every day of his life; his political success. Sometimes I believe that he has convinced himself that is so because he becomes so vehement.

Madam Speaker, the other thing, because I do not engage like he does . . . because you see, he needs the war zone to perform. He cannot get up on his feet, think on his feet, and articulate his thoughts. He needs to get into a battle to shine. Otherwise he is Joe Blow. People need to understand that. And I know that excites people, but they need to see the depth of the reasoning and the rationale. That is all they have to do.

Madam Speaker, let me provide an example of how the Leader of the Opposition trips himself up when trying to score his cheap political points. In my policy statement I emphasised the need for Caymanians to think positively in tackling the challenges facing our nation, especially against the backdrop of the current global economic downturn. The Leader of the Opposition trivialised and dismissed the idea. Yet, in his presentation, he preached the same message.

Hear him, Madam Speaker, and I am (again with your permission) going to quote him from the Hansard. He says, "I believe that when we are united in a good cause, nothing in the world can stop us as Caymanians from doing good. There is nothing we cannot do." [7 May 2008]

So, Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is in full agreement with my position about the benefits of thinking positively.

Down through history, persons have recognised the benefits of positive thinking. It is emphasised in the Bible and other ancient writings. The Roman poet, Virgil, for example, wrote: "[They can do all because they think they can.]" People have picked that up and used that for messages time and time again. So what is he saying?

Soapbox, holler, and go on. That will get some people excited, that will win him his popularity back. And that is all it is about for him.

Madam Speaker, he talks about me having the audacity? Let me tell you something. I do not know where he gets the audacity from to want to question whether I care about the people of this country or not. He needs to look at himself in the mirror.

He has only proved by his feeble presentation that Caymanians would be taking a huge gamble if they were to again entrust their future in his hands, along with the others on his side. Everything he has said suggests it would be a return to the bad old days. Fiscal recklessness, for sure, would be the norm. This Government, Madam Speaker, has produced a budget surplus for the past three years. But it is apparently a source of great annoyance to the Opposition.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay took time to talk about this. And they are always balling up these big figures and making their rounded figures. Pretty soon they will have it to how many billions of dollars . . . and then they will call it a slip of the tongue when you take them to task.

Madam Speaker, for the year ended 30 June 2006 there was a cash balance of $89.4 million, and there was an operating surplus of just under $59 million. The following year (which was last year) there was a cash balance of $101.3 million, and a $66.5 million operating surplus. What is projected for 30 June of this year, the cash balance is expected to be $111.5 million. It shows that the cash balances have increased annually. The operating surplus has not increased accordingly because the way we are doing what we are doing is sensible. We blend our borrowings with our operating cash surpluses to finance the capital projects.

So, if we have the cash and we are in compliance with the Public Management and Finance Law, we need to take some of that cash and inject that into the capital projects because then we do not pay interest on the loan that we would borrow. And we certainly are going to pay more interest than what we get with the cash in the bank.

That's simple. That is how we do at home, Madam Speaker. It is nothing more than that. It is just a bigger world: same principle. And that is what they have been arguing about and talking about reckless spending. This record does not speak to reckless spending.

Madam Speaker, if they had had any kind of plan and had been prudent and wise in their fiscal spending during the three and a half years they were there, we would not have had to pack so much in in one term. Life would have been a lot easier.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: [inaudible]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I am reminded by my very wise colleague, the Minister for Health, to give a good example of what they call prudent fiscal management. And you will remember this Madam Speaker.

They took out a bond issue. It took them almost 18 months to complete the bond issue deal. And the amount of money that had been set to borrow from the very beginning . . . by the time that 18 months had passed the government had paid down some $21 million in principal on the loans they had then, and this bond issue was supposed to pay off the loan and everything was going to be nice.

So, they did not need to borrow $21 million out of that and they were paying five point something percent interest on that bond issue. But do you know what they did? They did not say let's decrease the bond issue by this; they took all the money. They paid 5 per cent on it and then they put the $21 million in general reserves and got 1 per cent for that. You tell me that's prudent fiscal responsibility.

Then they come talking about reckless? [Hissing sound of teeth]. Madam Speaker, forgive me, Madam Speaker. I did not mean that. We just get carried away sometimes and you think and you remember what was said. So forgive me.

The Leader of the Opposition portrays himself as the man with the plan. He actually had the nerve to call me incompetent. But I am old enough, Madam Speaker, that it just blows away and I do not screw my face any more and get bad thoughts in my head as when I was a lot younger, thank God.

He mentioned a plan for prosperity but failed to provide any details for the benefit of the country. So he is not even quite talking on the surface. It is somewhere else up in the sky. He is asking Caymanians to buy his political product, but he is refusing to give them the benefit of knowing what it contains in specific terms. So, Madam Speaker, I am saying that he must reveal his hand. No one buys a chicken in a bag these days. They always want to see what the chicken looks like first. Madam Speaker, in this year of our Lord 2008, I say Caymanians surely deserve much better from the Opposition!

Madam Speaker, I am not going to respond to the emotional hype of the Second Elected Member for West Bay. He is misguided and he was simply echoing his master's voice. As I said, he is capable of much better when he speaks for himself.

The Minister of Education has already brilliantly countered the claptrap which the Leader of the Opposition made about education. It seems the Leader of the Opposition cannot comprehend the complexities of modernising education to meet the demands of the time. Interestingly, he lavished praise on our road development programme and our Minister of Works. This is a very welcome effort in light of his criticism on previous occasions.

You see, Madam Speaker, his style of politics . . . he has to try to tarnish whoever is on the opposing side. If you check his political history he has married and divorced every sensible politician that was in the Cayman Islands since he entered the arena. And every time he divorces, it is because he has to climb their shoulders to push them down so that his head can be seen above the crowd. He has never climbed it on his own! It is always because he makes someone else look bad. Christian? My . . . Christian?

[laughter and inaudible interjections] Devil . . .

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, there is no need for me to dwell on the Leader of the Opposition any more. He is a worried man. He showed particular worry—

An Hon. Member: Give him more! Give him more of that. He's not even here!

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: He showed particular worry, Madam Speaker, when speaking about corruption allegations made against him. Like me and every one else, he only has his conscience to deal with.

The Leader of the Opposition sits on the horns of a dilemma. He is caught between a rock and hard place. Every time he speaks, he does more and more damage to his already battered credibility. And he certainly did substantial damage in his contribution to this debate, Madam Speaker. I leave him to his own devices.

Madam Speaker, it is important that I address some other rather disingenuous comments from the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I will begin, Madam Speaker, by simply giving her a little bit of advice. She needs to come down from her house on the hill and spend more time in the community that she represents. She needs to end that practice of isolation, which a number of Cayman Brackers have complained to me about. If she would come down off of that hill and spend more time in the community she would recognise the growing disenchantment with her representation.

In fact, I would highly recommend that the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman occasionally play a game of dominoes and hang out with the boys as I find time to do when I am in Cayman Brac.

And Madam Speaker, she took it on her own to say that because she learned—she too learned well from her master. That is the only way they can play the game: Complain and berate people. That is all it is.

An Hon. Member: Blackgyaad!

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Blackgyaad is the right word. That's it!

They spend their time doing nothing else. They do not come with anything sensible, they do not bring any sensible propositions in the Legislative Assembly and yet still they keep talking about the bad government, the this and the that. Madam Speaker, those days are gone. People understand what politics is in the Cayman Islands now and they want representation that will work for them. And the people of Cayman Brac are no different. They want results.

Madam Speaker, I know that I am not perfect. And I know, like all of us know, the demands are great and it is physically impossible to satisfy all of those demands. I know that all we can do is do our best. But I am not spending all of my time going around telling people about them. She stood up here and she talks about she makes no apologies . . . watch me now, Madam Speaker, please.

And she says she is sick of hearing people, constituents, come in to her MLA office to tell her how the government vehicle is parked at Ed's Place after hours in the night . . . because I'm in the back playing dominoes.

Madam Speaker, I leave those things alone most times, but the whole world is going to hear it today.

Let me explain to you. I want you to think about it Madam Speaker. In Cayman Brac, Cayman Brac is still a lot more laid back than Grand Cayman. And any time after midnight is only like 25 years ago in Cayman . . . any time after midnight is a rare occasion you see a car on the road. I can tell you because I know. But she is sick of people complaining to her about seeing the government vehicle at Ed's Place after hours? Who is there on the road to see it? Tell me!

And Madam Speaker, let me explain the facts because I know you know me. I am a careful person. Where Ed's Place is there are two pieces of property. One is where the liquor licensed premise is, and there is a second piece of property behind there. That is the place where sometimes we sit and play dominoes. We do that for the same reason, Madam Speaker, that whenever the premises has to close we are not breaking the law. That's the reason for it.

Madam Speaker, I am going to tell her this: She might spread rumour, she and the bunch of them, but she or none of them will ever see Kurt Tibbetts inebriated. They will not see me gambling. And they will not hear that I drove the government's vehicle ran it off of the road, mashed it up, carried it to the airport the next morning, said nothing to anybody, jumped on the plane and came back to Cayman. They won't hear that! They will not hear that.

And she is going to come and tell me about playing dominoes at Ed's Place?

Madam Speaker, I will give you the best joke of all. Madam Speaker, she comes from a good family. Many of them I know very well. In fact, we grew up like family, and still are. That is why I have difficulty. . . but she doesn't, so . . . sometimes I can't either.

I went to the airport last Thursday evening, a week ago. I was going over to Little Cayman along with the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to have a little opening of a building where the district officer will have his own office, customs and immigration can occupy whenever they come there. And they had planned it so we said we were going to go.

I got to the airport Thursday evening, Madam Speaker, when I left this Legislative Assembly. My wife checked me in, thank God, so I was on time. I saw her good brother at the airport. I shook his hand as usual said, "Hello, how are you doing?" And we exchanged pleasantries as we always do.

And Madam Speaker, the first thing he asked me was, "Are you going to the Brac?"

I say, "Yeah man."

Do you know the first thing he asked me? "You want to play a game of dominoes tonight?"

That is the first thing he asked me. Is he a bad person? Of course he is not! There is no evil in that. But you see, they would concoct a story to make it sound like I am going against every wish that the good Lord has. That is what it is.

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, playing a game of dominoes with my friends, many of whom I grew up with, many of them are respectable citizens in Cayman Brac, they hold decent jobs, they have wife and family. They are evil? They are not! They are the same ones who vote for her!

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes!

But, Madam Speaker, because a few things are happening in the Brac, they will not speak about the “things”, they have to find fault with me, because it was not them. That’s all it is. Madam Speaker, playing a game of dominoes with those fellows has value. It allows me to mingle with people to hear what is happening.

I did not even know this, Madam Speaker, but I am being advised by one of my colleagues that playing dominoes delays Alzheimer’s coming on!

[laughter]

The Speaker: I play them.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, as this debate has heard from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Cayman Brac has entered an exciting phase of development. Nothing happens very, very swiftly in the Brac, but things are moving and that is good news because it means there will be more opportunities for Cayman Brackers. Unfortunately, the First Elected Member cannot claim credit for this good news, because it is not due to her efforts but rather the confidence of investors in response to the policies of this Government that have created the necessary enabling environment.

Madam Speaker, as I stand up here it just echoes in my mind the things she would say. She keeps trying to paint this picture, that this Government ostracises her when it comes to dealing with Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Let me tell you, Madam Speaker—and she dare not tell me that I lie because there are things that I do not often speak about that I know. And I know that you know how I am. But I am going to tell you one of them.

I heard her saying afterwards that she was not invited to something. I was standing by the person who was on the phone calling her. I was standing next to that person (but I am not going to call names) who invited her. And she turned around afterwards and said she was not invited. If she wants to confront me, she can do so. I really do not want to get that closely involved, but if I have to I will. That is the life!

You see, Madam Speaker, they sit and they concoct a plan. So here’s the plan now. The way for me to get the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman sympathising with me and regain my popularity with them is to make them believe that the Government is trampling all over me.

Madam Speaker, the district commissioner and his deputy are witnesses—and the former district commissioner who was there before Mr. Ernie Scott took over—all three of them are witnesses that I specifically gave instructions to—all three of them one by one from day one—that there should be no distance between the First and Second Elected Members of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman when it came to whatever district administration was doing, that both of them must be involved. So, if she is saying that, she is saying that it is the district commissioner and his deputy that are doing it. And I know that that is not the case. Enough of that. Finished!

Madam Speaker, the Opposition is desperate. It is written all over their faces. The bulk of their criticism of this Government’s performance can be compared to the straws which a drowning man always tries to clutch at. The stewardship of this Government can stand up to any rigorous scrutiny and pass the test and in most instances with flying colours. It is a record that we are proud of. Even with all of the battering rams that they send at us.

Of course, we would have liked to do more but, Madam Speaker, circumstances sometimes dictate that you have to be realistic. They have said that themselves.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, is this a convenient time for the morning break?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker, thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11.30 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.02 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Honourable Leader of Government Business continuing his debate.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would like now to spend a few minutes to clear up some things that were said by the Third Elected Member for West Bay about education more than anything else.

He seemed . . . and I know he is attending law school now and I applaud him for that, and I am certain that he has to read a lot which is always good for our vocabulary. But the Third Elected Member for West Bay seems to have a huge problem with the word “staggered.” In his debate he mentioned it easily a dozen times.

Somehow or the other he seemed not to understand what the Minister for Communications, Works and Infrastructure was talking about when he mentioned about staggering the building of the schools. The Third Elected Member for West Bay kept asking . . . and you see, this is part of being in the Opposition—even when you know it does not exist, you try to create doubt. He kept asking about the schools being staggered.

Now, Madam Speaker, let us understand the sequence of events. During their contributions, he and the Leader of the Opposition reminded us about a motion brought by the Leader of the Opposition some time back and talking about how they warned the Government about this “wild spending”, according to them. Madam Speaker, here are the facts regarding the schools. And people need to understand and appreciate those facts.

In the transformation that is going on with education, after having the various conferences the Minister of Education has held, he has brought together all of the stakeholders taking all of their views formulating a plan. Madam Speaker, the results of those policies that have been developed through those conferences, have said that the secondary education system in the Cayman Islands needs to be a seamless one, not a two-tiered educational system like what exists now, meaning you spend three years at what we know as the middle school, and then you matriculate to high school for the next three years. So, what will happen once that new system is put in place is that you will have full fledged high schools and you will have a five year high school course to take your external exams.

Then there will be another year, Madam Speaker, of compulsory education which moves the child either towards tertiary education or towards what they call Tech/Voc, technical or vocational training. That is geared so that you do not have 15 and 16 year olds exiting the system, can't get a job, and all hell breaks loose in their lives. That is what it is about. It makes all the sense in the world.

Now, Madam Speaker, in order to accomplish that, because of the numbers that we have (we only now have the old John Gray site as a high school), the plan is for what is now known as the middle school to be converted into that extra mandatory year and whatever other technical and vocational training will be available, whether it be made available through the University College of the Cayman Islands or whether it has a separate unit that is developed for that.

Madam Speaker, the facts are: The University College of the Cayman Islands is bursting at its seams. They have moved with numbers going from 650 to 3,600 in but a couple of years. That is good. But that creates space problems. How the University is situated now, because of the forest and because of other things, there are problems with expansion. So that has its own problems right there. So you do good, and you are still paying a price. But that's okay. So they have to work at that.

But when they move into the new system now, Madam Speaker, one year after that new system begins, you are going to have students leaving that system, because you cannot stop the whole world. So, when the whole system trips in you will have people moving in at every year into the high school. So, one year after that system trips in, you are going to have that extra year of school beginning. That is how I understand the plan.

Therefore, Madam Speaker, that means that what is known as George Hicks now is already occupied; the John Gray site is at its very end physically as the structures that exist. Some of those structures are 50 years old. They have all kinds of problems with the labs and everything else. So, luckily there was enough space for that property that the new high school can be built in between the existing high school and the UCCI campus. When those buildings are finished and they are ready to open that then they will knock down these older buildings and create the other structures and the other facilities and amenities that have to come on stream for that new high school.

We have the Beulah Smith site in West Bay and we have the Clifton Hunter site in Frank Sound for which I know, Madam Speaker, you have been fighting long before you were even elected. I thank God we are able to see that before our exit from these hallways.

So, Madam Speaker, in having a system like that, you cannot begin with one high school and wait to build the next one and the next one. Where are you going to put the children? How is the system going to work? You cannot have two different systems working all the time. You cannot have one high school operating as a full-fledged high school and then another one with a middle school and a high school and one is six years and one is five . . . I do not think I have to go any further. I think the point is made. Hence, the reason why all the high schools need to be on stream at the same time so that the catchment areas can begin to operate and all three of them will have their numbers.

The John Gray campus is going to have . . . [inaudible interjections] . . . I am lost for one word here, Madam Speaker, forgive me. Anyway, unlike the system that we have now, we have what I would have to term a module of 250 students which makes up one school. So, the John Gray site, when that is completed for instance, because that is where the largest catchment area is that will have 4 different modules of 250 students each in it. So each of the modules will be self contained with 250 students and then the facilities and amenities are common to those 4 different modules.

The Clifton Hunter site in North Side will have three, I believe. And the . . .

An hon. Member: Academies.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Academies is the right word. Academies. The Minister of Education is at a meeting inside and he immediately found that I was floundering and he did not want me to bastardise what they really were. So we are going to have academies of 250 students each.

So we will have one with 4, one with 3 and one with 2, Madam Speaker, because the projections are such that those are the needs for the immediate. And then what will happen . . . oh, by the way, it is good to see one Member of the Opposition finally arriving in the Chamber at 10 minutes past 12.

The Speaker: He sent his apologies.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, moving on . . . [addressing the Opposition Member] I'm in good form you know, be careful.

Madam Speaker, moving on to explain the system when all of the students move to the new system every student who is going to be attending secondary school will have to be in that one system and we need the three schools to be able to accommodate the number of students.

So, the academies that are in West Bay, for instance, when there is need for a new academy to be built, it is being built modular so that one academy can be added and the next one can be added. But the maximum number of students in each high school will be 1,000. When we get to that point years down line and we need another high school, then that is what is going to happen.

So, having explained all of that, Madam Speaker, I get back to the "staggering" Third Elected Member for West Bay, because he staggered all over his debate with this word "staggered".

[laughter]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What the Minister for Education had said and what the Minister for Communications and Works said when they spoke to the construction of the schools being staggered, that all had to do, Madam Speaker . . . because when we crunched the numbers, and when we determined the real cost of the schools, we accepted that it was pushing the envelope a bit far to begin the construction of all three schools immediately simply because of cost.

So, what we are doing is staggering the construction of the schools and we have pushed back the beginning of this new education regime one year. So, instead of September 2009, it is going to be September 2010. And you are going to have the schools coming on line at different periods until then. And then everything will start together. So we are simply pushing the cost into an extra financial year, Madam Speaker, so that the country can afford it.

And we have also had to take into consideration, which we immediately did once the projections were given to us, and they are very conservative, that the income the Government will have in general revenue on an annual basis for the next two years will decline. Will decline—decline meaning for the last three years Government revenue has steadily increased. And it is not going to happen all the time, Madam Speaker. It is just like everything else in life. So, because those projections came to us we realised that the sensible approach (because we cannot change the plan by way of what the objective is) was to slip another financial year into the whole affair which gives us the latitude to comfortably build the schools.

That's the stagger, Madam Speaker. And for the love of me I cannot understand what the Third Elected Member for West Bay was staggering on so much about.

The truth is, Madam Speaker, how he was speaking by innuendo. I realised what he was doing. He was trying to make it sound like because four of the five elected Members in the Opposition are from West Bay that this Government was not paying attention to West Bay and that West Bay would get everything last! That is what he was trying to say! Sure that was what he was saying in his loyally staggering way.

But that is not the truth, Madam Speaker. The truth is that the contractual arrangements allowed . . . well, not allowed, but caused difficult negotiations to take place and those negotiations have been protracted. I am told that as of this morning everything is going well and it is expected that the contract should be signed very early because the negotiations have been kind of hot and cold. But the legal representatives for both sides now seem to have it all hashed out.

So we will have the contract for the new John Gray High School and the Clifton Hunter High School signed very shortly, hopefully just a few odds and ends to tie up. And the one for West Bay will be done the same. The school in West Bay will, it is anticipated, Madam Speaker (once everything goes to plan), start in September this year which will still allow for September 2010 for it to begin in the whole system. That is the stagger, Madam Speaker.

I thought that I would explain to not only the elected Members for the district of West Bay, but to the listening public who are from West Bay, so that they will understand. There is no difference in our minds with West Bay and Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and George Town, East End and North Side and Bodden Town. The plan is a national plan. It is not disjointed. It is a seamless plan. We have just had to adjust the capital expenditure of the plan.

Madam Speaker, I trust that the Third Elected Member for West Bay will stagger no more!

[laughter]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, there is another point the Third Elected Member for West Bay made when he was speaking about budgets and year end.

Now, Madam Speaker, just allow me, and hear this carefully please. I do not know if it is the first time but I know it is not common. When we were bringing the budget here, after the Budget Address, the Throne Speech address, and my Policy Statement, before we began the debate on the budget and went into Finance Committee, we held Finance Committee for supplementary expenditure for this fiscal year. And I am going to tell you why, Madam Speaker.

Our desire was not to mislead this country and our desire was not to mislead the Opposition. So what we did was we held Finance Committee for all of the supplementary expenditure that was required by Ministries and Portfolios for the fiscal year ending 30 June 2008. And we took all of those figures into consideration in the preparation of the budget.

Many governments would have prepared the budget not basing it on that and do finance committee on supplementary expenditure afterwards so that the picture would be prettier. Not us, Madam Speaker.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay was staggering on that too, like that was wrong! Madam Speaker, what can we do right in their eyesight?

We could have . . . did he say “not much”?

[Addressing the Second Elected Member for West Bay] No, not a rough bunch . . . a very misguided bunch! And perhaps you, sir, in your own wisdom in time will extricate yourself from the wings of your leader and be your natural self to realise your potential—through the Chair, Madam Speaker . . .

Madam Speaker, this Finance Committee that I was speaking about had implications on the yearend figures. We knew that. It also had implications on what borrowings could take place next year. We knew that.

But, Madam Speaker, I have been on the receiving end of that the very first time I was elected to Executive Council. I heard them mention that too. And they finally told it half-truth this time. I am shifting gears, Madam Speaker, but that's okay. Because when they said that the first time they said it was my fault and we were just coming into the Government.

The Leader of the Opposition mentioned in his debate about us having to borrow money to fund recurrent expenditure. Sure we had to do it because that is how we found it!

So, Madam Speaker, not only because of those experiences, but those experiences helped me to know that we must not do that. And we did not do that. We did it right. But they complain again.

Madam Speaker, you may well have a final tidying up with Finance Committee after the fiscal year end, 30 June this year, but it will only be odds and ends. All of the major supplementary expenditure has been accounted for in this budget that has been presented. So it cannot be any more real than it is Madam Speaker.

I think enough of this staggering because I am beginning to feel a little bit unsure on my feet myself. Permit me now, Madam Speaker, to address some of issues related to the Ministry for which I have responsibility, that is, the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing.

As I said on April 30 in my address, this PPM Government is extremely concerned over the rising cost of living in the Cayman Islands. Indeed, the past year has brought home many reminders of the fluctuating world economy—including the cost of oil. Up until this morning early I was watching CNN and in the US the gas prices are at a new high and it seems to be happening every day.

Government, along with the private sector, has to remain vigilant and carefully watch the global economic climate to see how these complex conditions will affect our Islands.

And let me say this, Madam Speaker: Very recently we had a meeting with the merchants. And the answers (as I said on the 30th when I spoke) are not easy answers. And Madam Speaker, the Opposition will get up and rant and rave and ask ‘What are you doing about this? What are you doing about that?’ When they full well know that there are no magic answers to these world situations, these global situations. They know that!

We, Madam Speaker, have a responsibility to try to ensure to create opportunity for our people that they can make a living in these trying times and to be able to use government resources where necessary to assist those who are in need of aid. And, Madam Speaker, the budget is geared for that.

They tell us about all of this wild spending which is all within not only the legal requirements, but the spending is prudent and it is necessary. But if we had not engaged in those capital projects . . . you want to talk about people out of work? Then they will have something else to complain about then. Of course, because they do not have the responsibility they do not have to look at the whole picture. They can turn the picture sideways and just look at the edge of it and say they are seeing it too.

We have to take all of those things into consideration. And when we get complaints from one corner because the resources cannot handle it all, we had to take those complaints too. We did not create the economic slowdown, Madam Speaker. The Leader of the Opposition is speaking through the sides of his mouth when he talks about the rollover policy.

Madam Speaker, he talks about the rollover policy causing this economic downturn. Every one of them that does not get through the door is replaced by another one. So the same spending is going on. What are they talking about? Find out if the number of work permits has decreased. Not so. They have to live somewhere; they have to buy their food. What is the logic?

He ought to have thought . . . he and his cohorts ought to have thought of that when they were risking the livelihoods of so many Caymanians with that sudden influx a few years back instead of making it happen in an orderly and timely fashion as what we wanted to make happen. That is what he ought to be thinking about.

Madam Speaker, do you know the other thing? And the Second Elected Member for West Bay (who is sitting in here) is as responsible as the Leader of the Opposition is for this. They brought that 2004 Immigration Law which made into law the rollover policy. They are the ones that brought it! But then they have the nerve to stand up and be cussing us about it?

And they talk about 'so loud is the thunder' he didn't even say it right. The correct way to say it, Madam Speaker, is 'So loud is the thunder, but so little it rains.' And let me tell you something, Madam Speaker, it is parched over that side.

[laughter and interjections]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I was saying Madam Speaker, they brought that law in 2004. When we started to get a few complaints, after we looked at it as carefully as we possibly could . . . and do you know what, Madam Speaker? I will tell you what else. If they had not done that grave injustice to this country with those status grants, we may well not have had to have in force the rollover policy.

That was their answer to try to mitigate it! When they brought the law effective 1 January 2004, that was their peacemaker for the people of the Cayman Islands. That was what it was! But you know what they did, Madam Speaker? And I do not have to ask God's forgiveness because I tell the truth. They brought the law in place and they told business people not to worry. They had no intention of moving it forward and making it stay in place. As soon as the elections were over they were going to overturn that. They told business people that, because business people told me so! And not one, either.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Wow!

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Not one of them.

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, there we go, Madam Speaker. But they will get up and do their usual skulduggery and cuss us to death about this, that and the next thing. What I just told you, Madam Speaker, is as close to the truth as I could get it with words out of my mouth. And I do not believe that I have much of a problem with the Queen's English.

So, Madam Speaker, back to the subjects for which my Ministry is responsible. And I will do my best not to be distracted again.

Madam Speaker, chief among the concerns I mentioned was the rising price of food. Our neighbours in the region share this concern and there is indeed a renewed interest and awareness in the Caribbean of the importance of becoming more self-sufficient in our food production. I believe that now (and I have mentioned it before, Madam Speaker, but now more so than ever) is an opportune time to address the need to expand domestic agricultural production.

Madam Speaker, we are developing a short term plan for the Department of Agriculture to have outreach programmes. We have most of the evidence collected, Madam Speaker. There is a local market for many things. And the more we can produce for ourselves . . . I have high aspirations, but it would be foolhardy of me to say that in the near future we could become self-sufficient with agriculture production. That would not be the truth. But, Madam Speaker, we can do plenty better which would not only increase the earning power of the farmers, but it would allow our own people to get more of their local fresh produce. And once we can increase the volume we can stabilise prices so that the prices will not be higher than the stuff that we import. Not all of it, but some of it. And of course, it is a lot healthier. We know that.

And we have people coming to that Saturday Market at the Grounds, Madam Speaker, who are so pleased that they can get up on a Saturday morning and come and buy almost an entire meal and go home and cook. They can get their fresh fish; they can get fresh juices, fresh produce, fresh fruit . . . O, Madam Speaker it's wonderful! And we, the Government, have talked about it. And the Government is committed to putting programmes in place to induce the farming community to spread their wings.

Madam Speaker, I know you know because I have come to North Side on occasion and sat down with some people that you know very well and talked about it. They are receptive and I believe that once everybody gets into the groove we are going to see a lot better, a lot different.

This year, the Department of Agriculture will accelerate their efforts in encouraging and supporting farmers to expand production so that we can all eat more of what is produced locally. And that same Saturday's 'Market at the Grounds' which is nearly a year old, our local producers, vendors and the Cayman Islands Agricultural Society have this new outlet for selling their goods and also the supermarkets are much more receptive now to having local goods on the shelf. So the market is there.

Capitalising on this success, and expanding domestic food production, is a major goal during the new fiscal year. In terms of focus areas, food crops, livestock, horticulture and aquaculture have been earmarked for special attention. The Department of Agriculture supports our farmers by providing services, technical assistance and training in order for them to not only enhance volume, but also to diversify products.

These interventions are aimed at helping farmers gain the best value from their products during processing, marketing and promotion. We are also going to place special emphasis on encouraging farmers to adopt a more business-oriented and technology-driven focus. Each farm business is unique and the department will shape its approach to suit clients. We are going to promote agri-business techniques and introduce enhanced production systems, including lower capital cost greenhouses.

The department is continuing to implement projects to upgrade the physical infrastructure of the agriculture sector, including building roads to access farmland, and the Minister for Communication and Works is working in tandem with that. We are going to strengthen the human resource capacity within the department itself to be able to more efficiently deliver services to our clients.

Madam Speaker, apart from our work with the farming community the department remains vigilant in its efforts to prevent the introduction of new pest and disease organisms. These represent a threat to the health of local plants and animals, as well as the human population.

Madam Speaker, here is an opportune time to congratulate young Tiffany Scott, who is a former Miss Teen Cayman Brac. She went to school in the Brac. She was successful with 10 subjects in her CXC and GCSE Exams. She is now enrolled in Middle Tennessee State University where she is pursuing her bachelor's in Animal Science doing a minor in entrepreneurship.

The other spinoff from all that I have been saying is encouraging young Caymanians to realise their potential and to get involved in that industry because there is now scope in that area.

The department is also providing technical and logistical support to major national events, such as, the Annual Agriculture Show and the Sister Islands Agricultural Show. Madam Speaker, I have to say here that the team works hard both here and in the Brac for those shows to be successful. I can safely say that during my tenure every year both of them have been better. And I am not saying that for me. I am saying that those events are going from strength to strength because there are many committed people who go way beyond the call of duty to make sure that the public enjoys those wholesome events.

Madam Speaker, the Mosquito Research and Control Unit . . . we are concerned with monitoring the regional and worldwide increase in the incidence of mosquito transmitted diseases. This year, we are going to increase our efforts on house-to-house inspections to target specific disease vectors, to combat a possible outbreak of Dengue Fever. Countries in Latin America and the Caribbean have seen outbreaks of this disease and we are monitoring the few cases that we have had over the past year.

Again, that department is extremely vigilant and very proactive. I have to say that they certainly are doing the job producing the outputs that we pay them for.

So far, thanks to the excellent work, the Cayman Islands have been very fortunate that there has been no evidence of any local transmission of Dengue Fever. However, we cannot afford to rest on our laurels. Here on Grand Cayman, the MRCU's disease prevention programme utilises an integrated pest management approach to target geographical areas where mosquitoes are a concern to our population.

Over in Cayman Brac, the new MRCU facility is scheduled for completion in August of this year. And it is taking real good shape, Madam Speaker. Certainly that is going to be much benefit to the people of Cayman Brac. It is going to include laboratories, the necessary offices, workshops, as well as a purpose-built pesticide storage and evaporation basin to ensure an environmentally clean site. This facility, as I said, is going to greatly enhance MRCU operations on Cayman Brac, improve working conditions for staff and provide modern methods of pesticide storage and handling.

So you see, Madam Speaker, it is about planning. That facility now will serve Cayman Brac for years to come. But at least when we built it (and it is over), we can look to something else. It is not about this Band-aid approach. And I am happy to have received support to be able to complete this set of capital works.

Another concern on many residents' minds is housing costs. The Leader of the Opposition, when I spoke about the GGHAM (Government Guaranteed Home Assisted Mortgage), when he made his contribution, he was speaking about me taking away his programme and claiming glory for that. I am not claiming glory for anything Madam Speaker. But the truth is, if he were to say it, the programme had died. And the programme that we have put in place is a different programme. And it has many more safeguards for the homeowners than the other programme had.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, is this a convenient time to take the luncheon break?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.45 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.20 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Honourable Leader of Government Business, continuing his winding up.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we broke, I was on to various subjects under my Ministry. I want to move on to the Islands of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

District Administration continues to provide excellent services to the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. At the top of their infrastructure checklist is the upgrade and expansion of the Islands' roads network. We will also enhance the public beach and park facilities on both islands this year to better suit the needs of residents and visitors alike.

Our partnership with the Ministry of Education has helped us to construct a sports playfield on the Bluff in Cayman Brac. The field itself was built and completed to FIFA regulations and we are going to do everything possible to host our first international soccer match there in the summer of next year. This new sporting venue will vastly expand the Sister Island's capability to host inter-island events. Local athletes will certainly get a boost from this field and we also hope to offer the space to teams from overseas who are seeking a training venue.

There are funds in the budget for the next fiscal year to continue the construction of this facility. Indeed, the trickle down effect of sports tourism we believe will benefit the Islands greatly. I can very well envision Cayman Brac becoming a popular option for overseas sporting teams seeking a unique training experience.

District Administration is also working with the Department of Tourism to develop an enhanced domestic tourism plan that responds to the needs of the businesses and the residents there. In the Sister Islands, a holistic approach is being taken in discussions regarding land use and sustainable development to determine what suits the unique needs and environmental concerns of both those islands.

Very shortly too, Madam Speaker, we will release another document of national importance, that is, the proposed revisions to the Development Plan. This long-range comprehensive document to guide land use and development on Grand Cayman is vitally important. It sets out strategic goals as well as specific implementation strategies including the supporting legislation. The Planning Department's Policy Development and Research Team, the Central Planning Authority, government agencies and the private sector have worked together to draft this document. Its suggestions certainly are worthy of careful consideration.

Also hard at work is the Lands and Survey Department, one of Government's most technologically advanced agencies. In an effort to offer the public the most up-to-date land information, this department is completely redeveloping the CaymanLandInfo website to make it more user friendly. They will also issue an up-to-date version of the popular street atlas and are slated to host URISA's 4th Caribbean GIS (Geographical Information Systems) Conference in August of this year. This is a major technical event which presents a tremendous opportunity for us to showcase the excellent work of the Lands and Survey Department.

URISA, Madam Speaker, by the way, is an acronym for the Urban and Regional Information Systems Association.

With every government department striving to secure data and ensure disaster preparedness, the Lands and Survey Department is diligently working to scan all of its survey documentation and integrate it with a document management system. Besides assisting Hazard Management Cayman Islands (HCMI) in the further development of the Taos Storm Model across Government, they are designing a user-friendly GIS interface for this state-of-the-art storm modeling software.

In the area of Geographical Information Systems (GIS), the department is putting its efforts into ongoing development and marketing of applications and other related systems. Our marketing efforts recently bore fruit when the Turks and Caicos Islands and the Cayman Islands Governments signed a landmark agreement. It provides for the Lands & Survey Department to develop and implement a fully computerised Land Registry system and related GIS (Geographical Information Systems) system for the Turks and Caicos Islands Government.

Our vast experience in modernising our own Land Registry system gives us a voice of authority in the region. We are confident that similar relationships can be made with our fellow Overseas Territories to accelerate the standards of lands information and GIS data in the region.

I just take a moment here, Madam Speaker, to say that in discussions with fellow heads of government in the Overseas Territories in the region they are gung-ho to get our assistance and they are our brothers. So we are quite happy to do so. But just so that everybody can understand, they are doing so at a cost. So it is not costing the Government; rather, the government is actually contracting, the department is actually contracting with these other governments for a given fee.

As part of Government's hurricane/disaster mitigation plans the Petroleum Inspectorate has been working on the ground to ensure district fuel storage tanks for emergencies and disasters are being installed in Bodden Town, North Side and East End prior to this hurricane season.

The Petroleum Inspectorate requested that Industry should hold emergency drills and desktop drills in the interest of public safety. The first of these was completed by Caribbean Utilities and Cayman Brac Power and Light earlier on this year. We expect various types of exercises will be conducted by other companies later on this year.

Madam Speaker, in order to further protect the wellbeing of the general public, legislation on the safe transport of hazardous materials and a general regulation on compressed gases will be presented to the Cabinet shortly. As part of their regular inspection process, the Inspectorate will continue to monitor sites storing dangerous substances. They will also ensure that consumers get the correct amount of fuel paid for at petrol stations through annual pump calibrations.

In addition they will witness hydrostatic testing of pipelines and tanks to prevent spills, and make sure that petroleum tanks are installed properly through the planning approval process.

Madam Speaker, as I come to the conclusion, I will mention that the Project Management Unit in my Ministry is overseeing construction of the new Government Administration Building. Construction is proceeding as scheduled and we are now looking at an anticipated completion date of January 2011.

Every day I pass the huge construction site I am reminded of the importance of this project to the Cayman Islands. This new government administration building is the largest civil works project ever undertaken by the government in the history of our islands.

The new complex represents a leading example of energy-efficient building practices and environmental performance. It will accommodate 34 government agencies and provide hurricane resistant, secure, healthy and attractive accommodation to allow the government to serve the public with excellence. For our islands, this new building symbolises a new phase in the development of Government infrastructure and a new way of thinking of the Civil Service.

And, Madam Speaker, for the nay-sayers let me repeat once again, of all the capital works projects that this Government has undertaken, this is the one capital works project that is going to be self financing. The project itself is going to be at a cost of approximately $75 million. And that is a turnkey operation. That includes the demolition of the Glass House which now exists.

There are those who have said to me that the Glass House represents history in this country and we should let it remain. Unfortunately, Madam Speaker, the numbers tell us otherwise. It is one of the most expensive accommodations operational wise that the government occupies. It simply costs too much on a daily basis to continue to operate.

When we looked at the cost of refurbishing this existing building, Madam Speaker, the new construction cost was approximately $300 a square foot and the refurbishing cost was almost $280 a square foot. So, really, it was a no brainer and there was no choice.

Besides that, Madam Speaker, there are but few green areas in the Capital, the district of George Town. And that area will be a park area along side the new Government Administration Building when that building is completed.

Those agencies that will occupy the new building when it is completed at present are paying close to $7 million a year in lease payments. It is anticipated, Madam Speaker, given all of the statistics that we have available that by the year 2013, if the Government were leasing space for these agencies it would be costing Government $10 million a year for those leased premises. So, in essence, we will have much less operational cost because of the way the new building is being built, that is, all the electricity bills and everything else Government pays for these various agencies in their rented premises; and, at a cost of $75 million, by the end of 2016 the building will already have paid for itself. So it has to make sense.

It is not one of these things that may make sense for someone to ask 'Why are you spending the money now?' The fact is the Glass House itself is unsafe as it is now. His Excellency the Governor moved out for the same reason on the instructions of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. And while we occupy the building now and will continue to do so until such time as the new building is built. Certainly, Madam Speaker, we could not remain as we were. So I just wanted to explain to the public that point about the fact that it is self financing.

Finally, Madam Speaker, I would wish to thank Members on this side for their contributions, and, Madam Speaker, on the other side as well. A challenging but an exciting year lies ahead. This Government remains focused, we are highly motivated to continue delivering on our promises, and we will not be distracted from doing what is right to make life better for Caymanians.

We ask the residents of this country for their continued prayers and support.

Madam Speaker, our record shows that we have kept the faith and we are securing the future. Certainly, the Cayman Islands is a better place now than when we took office in 2005. And, Madam Speaker, I dare say, the best is yet to come!

Thank you very much Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Madam Speaker, there has been a robust and spirited debate of the Throne Speech that was delivered by His Excellency the Governor, the Policy Statement by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, and the Appropriation Bill now before this honourable House. The Schedule to the Bill is commonly referred to as the Budget and in this case it is in respect of the Government's 2008/9 financial year that will start on 1st July 2008 and end on 30th June 2009.

The contributions by Honourable Members have been centered on policy decisions that have been made by the Government.

Honourable Members of the Opposition have scrutinised Government's policies whilst Honourable Ministers supported by backbench Members have explained why the policies of the Government are beneficial to the Cayman Islands. It would be unproductive for me to rehash these many discussions.

Madam Speaker, there have been fleeting remarks made about the financial statements in respect of the 2008/9 financial year. I will, therefore, concentrate my contribution on the Bill to matters that pertain to the financial statements for the 2008/9 year and the Principles of Responsible Financial Management.

Madam Speaker, when we make contributions and remarks in this honourable House we have two audiences: Members of the Legislative Assembly and the listening public. I deliberately try to use simple, everyday language so that the listening public can understand the Government's Budget. What is the Government's Budget?

Madam Speaker, Government's Budget is a list of items and their accompanying dollar value amounts that Government wishes to spend in each of its financial years that run from 1st July through to the following 30th June. The vast majority of items on which the Government wishes to spend, can be put into two broad categories: Operating Expenses and Capital Expenditures.

Operating Expenses, a good example of which would be wages and salaries costs, are those items of expenditure that are expected to be incurred each year, but the benefit of such items does not last longer than a year.

On the other hand, specific items of Capital Expenditures—good examples of which would be the construction of buildings and roads by the Government—are not expected to be incurred year after year repeatedly but, once finished, the benefit of these items will last for more than a year.

Operating Expenses and Capital Expenditures can be paid for by any combination of revenue (or Income) that the Government receives during its financial year, borrowing, and by using its existing cash balances.

Madam Speaker, I must very quickly point out that the Public Management and Finance Law, the (PMFL) does not allow the Government to borrow funds in order to pay for operating expenses. The PMFL specifies that operating expenses must be paid for solely from Government's revenue and not borrowings.

Madam Speaker, the operating expenses requested in the 2008/9 Budget can only be met if revenues are sufficient to do so. The fair and reasonable question to ask is therefore, 'how realistic are the revenue forecasts in the 2008/9 Budget?'

On page 293 of the Annual Plan and Estimates document for the 2008/9 financial year, we see that revenues forecast for the year to 30th June 2009, is approximately $528.2 million. Operating expenses are forecast to total $501.3 million and the interest expense forecast on Government's borrowing is approximately $13.4 million. When we subtract these two expenses from the forecast revenue figure of $528.2 million, the resulting operating surplus forecast for the 2008/9 financial year is $13.5 million.

So, Madam Speaker, to repeat the previous question with a bit more precision: How realistic is the $528.2 million revenue forecast for 2008/9?

Madam Speaker, the Portfolio of Finance and Economics has done a tremendous amount of work in order to arrive at the overall revenue estimate of $528.2 million for the 2008/9 year. Forecasting the 2008/9 revenue figures took into account data from the Economics and Statistics Office, actual and historical data from the Treasury Department, statistics from the Department of Tourism, as well as consultations and discussions with the heads of major revenue collecting agencies such as Customs, the Monetary Authority, General Registry, Immigration and Lands and Survey. These agencies collect approximately 85% of Government's total revenues.

The Government is forecasting to collect $528.2 million in revenues during the 2008/9 financial year. When compared to the $523.3 million shown in the latest forecast for the 2007/8 year, the 2008/9 forecast represents a modest and conservative growth estimate of approximately 1%. This 1% growth in revenue for the 2008/9 year is even more conservative than the 1.7% real GDP growth forecast for the Cayman Islands for the 2008 calendar year and the 1.4% real GDP growth forecast for calendar year 2009.

Madam Speaker, I would like to take a few moments to further dissect the major components of the various Government revenue streams and explain some of the bases on which the 2008/9 forecasts were made.

If, for example, one were to take the current financial year, that is, the 2007/8 year, and look at the classification of the major revenue streams, the results would show that approximately $120 million (or 23% of entire revenue) is derived from Financial Services in the form of fees collected by the General Registry and the Monetary Authority.

Madam Speaker, in my main address on the 2008/9 Budget, I outlined a set of facts and figures that spoke to the continued strength of this sector of the economy and cited current statistics to support that position. These included references to the General Registry which saw a net growth of 5% in total company registrations in the 12-month period ended 31st March 2008.

I also spoke on the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority revenue collections which were bolstered by a 14.7% increase in the number of registered mutual funds for the year ended 31st March 2008.

Other impressive performers in the financial services sector included the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange which recorded a 43% increase in its total listings for the 2007 calendar year—an increase of 51% in market capitalisation.

Again, Madam Speaker, looking at the current financial year (that is, the 2007/8 year), the financial statements show that the Government forecasts to collect $182.1 million, or approximately 35% of the forecast total revenue from levies on international trade and transactions. These come in the form of duties on imported items such as motor vehicles, fuel, alcohol, tobacco, construction materials, food and clothing, et cetera.

While it is true that the United States is by far the largest trading partner of the Cayman Islands and while it is also true that its economy is currently experiencing significant challenges, one has to look further in examining how the revenue the Government collects is derived in order to understand the effects of a slowing US economy upon the Cayman Islands.

A major source of Government's revenue is obviously derived from items that are imported from the United States. As long as our local economy remains stable, our ability to continue to buy from the US should not be detrimentally affected by the slowdown in the US economy. We will undoubtedly see some impact from the US economy slowdown (and the revenues have been adjusted in 2008/9 to reflect that), but the effects are unlikely to be catastrophic.

Another area of significant revenue for the Government is tourism. Tourism accounts for $28 million approximately, or about 5% of Government's revenues through tourist accommodation charges, cruise ship departure taxes, hotel licences and environmental protection fund fees.

When we look at the tourism sector, we see that air arrivals have consistently increased over the past three years. Figures for the 1st quarter of 2008 already show a 9% increase when compared to the same period last year. The Government realises, however, that there will be pressures placed on the travel industry through higher fuel costs. Therefore, while the current outlook is positive, we have taken a conservative approach and have lowered our revenue projections in this area for the 2008/9 financial year.

The Government expects to collect $43.8 million approximately, or approximately 8% of total revenues for the current financial year from levies on property. These include stamp duty on land transfers, share transfer charges and infrastructure fund fees.

Madam Speaker, very few people are able to afford property purchases solely through their savings. Most property acquisitions are financed by borrowing from a financial institution. One of the key impediments to borrowing and, therefore, to property ownership, is one's ability to afford a mortgage.

Based on an aggregate decrease of 3.25% in interest rates over the past 9 months, the Government believes that more people will now be able to afford mortgages and loans and realise their dreams of owning property. Factors such as decreasing interest rates, continued property development, stable employment and the continued attractiveness of the Cay-man Islands should allow the real estate sector to remain vibrant in 2008/9.

Immigration-related revenues are expected to contribute $46 million approximately (or 9%) to Government's total revenues in the current year 2007/8. As is the case in most countries of the world, a strong economy requires skills and expertise, not all of which are available locally. With a strong and growing economy, the Government believes that there will be a continued need for imported labour for the foreseeable future and does not expect any major declines in immigration-related revenues for 2008/9.

Madam Speaker, since I have stated that the 2008/9 total revenue forecast of $528.2 million seems reasonable in relation to the $523.3 million that is forecast for the current year that will end on 30th June 2008, the sensible question to enter one's mind is, how realistic is the current year's estimate of $523.3 million?

The actual revenue collected by Government in the 10-month period from 1st July 2007 to 30th April 2008 was approximately $453 million. In approximate terms this means that the average monthly revenue earnings is $45 million. To get from actual revenue earned for the 10 months to 30th April 2008 of $453 million to the forecast total revenue for the year of $523.3 million, means that revenue must be earned in the remaining two months of the year, May and June, of $70.3 million. If the average monthly revenue earned to 30th April 2008 is $45 million, we believe that the $70.3 million required to achieve the year's total revenue forecast of $523.3 million, will be accomplished in the May and June 2008.

Madam Speaker, during the course of a financial year we will monitor the actual receipt of revenue and we also frequently revise our forecast revenue estimate for a financial year. We shall do the same for the 2008/9 year. If we find that it is necessary to decrease our $528.2 million forecast figure for 2008/9 we will do so and, expenditures will have to be adjusted accordingly.

Madam Speaker, an important requirement of the PMFL that is often not emphasised enough is the fact that Government must not only achieve a surplus from its own activities—meaning that Government's own revenue must be greater than its operating expenditures—but Government must still achieve an overall surplus even after bringing into Government's own books the performance of all its Statutory Authorities and government-owned companies.

Madam Speaker, we see from the Government's Income & Expenditure Statement on page 293 of the Annual Plan & Estimates document that when the surpluses and deficits of statutory authorities and government-owned companies are added together, there is a resulting net deficit arising from their activities of $11.6 million that is forecast for the 2008/9 year. Further details of the performance of individual statutory authorities and government-owned companies are provided on page 306 of the Annual Plan & Estimates document.

We see from Government's Income & Expenditures Statement that because the cumulative result of statutory authorities and government-owned companies' performance is a forecast deficit of $11.6 million, this figure is shown as if it were an actual expenditure of the Government.

The forecast surplus for the 2008/9 financial year of $13.5 million is after taking into consideration an overall forecast net deficit in the performance of statutory authorities and government-owned companies. If these public entities were forecast to break-even in 2008/9, Government's own forecast surplus would have been $25.1 million instead of the $13.5 million that we are forecasting for 2008/9.

Therefore, Madam Speaker, the important and often understated point is that Government, by the Public Management and Finance Law, is required to comply with a very exacting and all-encompassing financial performance regime.

Madam Speaker, the point was made by an honourable Member of the Opposition that an initial Budget that is brought to the Legislative Assembly before the start of a financial year will normally show a surplus but during the course of that year there will be Supplementary—or additional—expenditure requests that call into question or doubt the surplus that was stated in the initial Budget submitted to the House.

Madam Speaker, each time that the Government brings a supplementary expenditure request to the Legislative Assembly for approval it must present a set of financial statements that show the results and position of the Government if the supplementary expenditure requests are approved. These most current financial statements do not abandon the details and the forecasts made in an earlier set of accounts—rather it builds on, and updates, those earlier financial statements.

Madam Speaker, the need for the Government to maintain an operating surplus isn't just restricted to the initial Budget documents that are presented prior to the start of a financial year. The Government must maintain an operating surplus throughout an entire financial year and the emergence of supplementary expenditure requests during the course of a year do not alter this legal requirement.

Madam Speaker, I wish to conclude this part of my contribution by stating that the very foundation on which a realistic and affordable budget rests, is having a set of revenue forecasts that are robust. The Government has done its best in presenting revenue forecasts that are realistic and, as a consequence thereof, there is adequate support for the expenditure requests that are contained in the Bill before this House.

Madam Speaker, I will now turn to the Principles of Responsible Financial Management that Government must comply with because they are contained in the Public Management and Finance Law.

In very simple language the Principles are rules that Government must abide by in the conduct of its financial affairs and those Principles or rules are intended to cause governments to achieve and maintain financial results and positions that reflect sound financial management. There are five main Principles that the Government must comply with.

Firstly, the Government is required to achieve an Operating Surplus. I have stated previously that this is not just restricted to Government's own activities but it must also include or take account of, the financial performance of all statutory authorities and government-owned companies. There is compliance with this Principle because the Government is forecasting an overall surplus for the entire public sector of $13.5 million for the 2008/9 year.

Secondly, Government is required to have assets that have a total value which exceed its total liabilities. Once again this Principle does not just restrict itself to central government's own position it looks at the entire public sector—which includes the position of statutory authorities and government-owned companies. When we look at the balance sheet shown on page 294 of the Annual Plan & Estimates document we see that included in that balance sheet is the net worth of public authorities, at a figure of $208.7 million. The Government and the entire public sector therefore satisfies this second Principle because the value of total assets are expected to exceed total liabilities by $532.6 million.

The third Principle requires that the cost of servicing Government's borrowings (and such cost is defined as principal repayments and interest payments) that those costs combined should not exceed 10% of Government's revenue.

The Government's forecast interest cost for the 2008/9 year is $13.4 million, and its forecast principal repayments are $27.2 million. Those two figures combined, Madam Speaker, give us the total cost of $40.6 million forecast for the 2008/9 year. And when this figure is divided by the expected revenue figure of $528.2 million, we get a debt service ratio of 7.8% which is below the 10% limit. Therefore, Madam Speaker, there is compliance with this Principle.

Madam Speaker, I should also point out that our definition in the Cayman Islands of debt service ratio is more exacting than the normal international definition of debt service cost—which is ordinarily restricted to just principal repayments. If we applied this international definition to the Cayman Islands, our debt service ratio would be 5.1%.

Madam Speaker, the fourth Principle requires that the net debt position of the Government at the end of each financial year should not be more than 80% of central government's revenue. The net debt position refers to the debt balances of central government plus a portion of the debt balances of statutory authorities and government-owned companies that have been guaranteed by central government and from that combined figure we then subtract the value of central government's cash balances.

Central government's debt position forecast at 30th June 2009 is $412.8 million and we see from pages 297 and 298 of the Annual Plan & Estimates document, that the position of statutory authorities and government-owned companies debt that has been guaranteed by government, and brought into the net debt calculation, is $89.5 million. These two figures therefore sum to $502.3 million, and when we subtract the central government's forecast cash balances at 30th June 2009 of $118.5 million, the net debt figure is $383.8 million. And when we divide this amount by forecast operating revenues of $528.2 million, we arrive at a net debt ratio of 72.6%. As this is less than the limit of 80%, there is compliance with this fourth Principle.

Madam Speaker, once again we see that the regime which Government must comply with is exacting and wide ranging in its outlook to include statutory authorities and government-owned companies.

One second, Madam Speaker. [pause]

Thank you, Madam Speaker. I was looking for some information on the total value of borrowing and therefore debt of statutory authorities and government-owned companies have incurred which has been guaranteed by the government. I was looking for the precise figures, but I do not have that on hand. Certainly from memory, I recall the figure is somewhere between $110 million and $115 million, that is the value of borrowings of debt by statutory authorities and government-owned companies that the government has provided a guarantee for. What we have done in the net debt calculation is that we have brought into our own calculation approximately $89.5 million of that $110 million to $115 million guaranteed by government. So in percentage terms, we have brought into our own calculation approximately 75 per cent of what the government has guaranteed in respect of statutory authorities and government-owned companies. We have brought in approximately 75 per cent of that figure into our own calculation.

The fifth Principle requires that Government must have a level of cash balances at 30th June 2009 that is sufficient to cover 90 days of Government's expenditures. The daily cost of operating Government now is approximately $1.3 million. A 90-day expenditure coverage level would therefore require a cash balance at 30th June 2009 of $117 million. As the Government forecasts to have a cash balance at 30th June 2009 of $118.5 million, there is also compliance with this Principle.

Madam Speaker, the 2008/9 Budget therefore complies with all of the Principles of Responsible Financial Management.

Before I conclude, I would like to answer the query raised about the cost of the new high schools. Madam Speaker, the Central Tenders Committee (CTC), acting upon recommendations of the Ministry of Education, has approved the award of contracts to construct the Clifton Hunter Campus at a price of approximately C$56.7 million. And it has approved the award of the contract in respect of the John Gray Campus at a price of approximately C$59.0 million.

I understand that the CTC have already met, or will be meeting this afternoon with officials from the Ministry of Education to consider awarding a contract to construct the Beulah Smith Campus in West Bay.

In conclusion Madam Speaker, I would end by noting that the 2008/9 Budget, which is essentially the Schedule to the Bill now before the House, is fully compliant with all of the Principles of Responsible Financial Management that are specified in the Public Management and Finance Law. The Bill is supported, in the Government's view, by revenue forecasts which have been robustly prepared and we believe, realistic.

AND OF REPORTS

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

MOTION TO DEFER BUSINESS UPON THE ORDER PAPER

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, the Report of the Standing Finance Committee [on the Appropriation (July 2008 to June 2009) Bill, 2008] has taken us just about all day. It is almost 4.20 in the afternoon and the Order Paper was prepared, but in consultation with other Members of the Legislative Assembly, we are in agreement and in discussions with your good self, I would move to defer all other business on the Order Paper except the business of Statements by Ministers of the Government. And I would move the deferral of all of that business until we resume on Wednesday.

The Speaker: The question is that the Presentation of Papers and of Reports, as well as Questions and Government Business be deferred to the next sitting of the Legislative Assembly. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Presentation of Papers and of Reports, Questions and Government Business deferred to Wednesday 25th June 2008, with the exception of Statements.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MEMBERS AND MINISTERS
OF THE CABINET

Correction to Cayman Net News publication of 19th June 2008 in respect of matters concerning the Referendum

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, yesterday on the 19th of June 2008, the local publication, Cayman Net News, carried as its headline "Referendum Vote Set for 30 July". I must tell this House and the wider community that the headline and much of the story that follows is simply untrue. Government has thus far set no date for the proposed Referendum on Constitutional Modernization. We expect to make an announcement with regard to that matter very shortly.

The Cayman Net News story claims, and I quote: "The assembly opened debate on the changes and launched the required three readings of the bills [meaning the Referendum Constitutional Modernization Bill and the Elections (Amendment) Bill] yesterday. After the expected rapid approval, the bills will go to the Governor for his assent, then be finalised in a White Paper well in advance of the polling date."

As this House and all Members will be aware, this is simply untrue. The two Bills in question were delivered to the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly on May 22, and circulated to Members shortly thereafter. They have not been placed by the Business Committee of this House on any Order Paper and have not been dealt with in any way by the House.

To say that the House has opened debate and launched the required three readings of the Bills yesterday is complete and utter fabrication. Indeed, the House has been in Finance Committee for the past month, and so has had no opportunity to deal with Bills.

Madam Speaker, I felt it was important to set the record straight on this important matter and to assure the country that when we are ready to make a statement regarding the proposed referendum we shall do so publicly. And, as I said earlier, we expect to do so very soon.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: That concludes the business of the Orders of the Day. Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I move the adjournment of this honourable House until Wednesday at 10 am.

The Speaker: The question is the adjournment of honourable House until 10 am on Wednesday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. This honourable House now stands adjourned until Wednesday morning.

At 4.22 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Wednesday, 25 June 2008.

PRAYERS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Almighty God, from whom all power and wisdom are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of the Cayman Islands.

*We pray your blessings upon our Monarch Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. AND OF REPORTS

Report of the Standing Finance Committee on the Appropriation (July 2008 to June 2009) Bill, 2008

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Report of the Standing Finance Committee on the Appropriation (July 2008 to June 2009) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Yes, thank you, Madam Speaker, just some brief remarks.

The Committee met to consider the Appropriation Bill for the 2008/9 financial year and the Committee started its deliberations on the 26th of May 2008, and it had its last meeting a short while ago today, the 25th of June 2008, to consider and finalise the Report that has just been tabled.

The Committee was obviously principally concerned with consideration of appropriation items that were contained in the Schedule to the Bill. The Committee approved three changes to the items in the Schedule to the Bill. It renamed one of the appropriations and it changed two of the appropriation amounts, but the net effect of those changes was to leave the total appropriation amount unchanged. So, there was no increase in the appropriations overall sought by the Government.

Madam Speaker, the Committee also considered six motions that were raised in the Committee. And I think those are obviously all well-known to Members of the House. And all of the deliberations of Finance Committee have been broadcast and continue to be broadcast by Radio Cayman.

Madam Speaker, the Committee agreed that the Report that has just been tabled be the report of the Standing Finance Committee on the Appropriation (July 2008 to June 2009) Bill, 2008.

Thank you.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Madam Speaker, with your permission, I would move on behalf of the Government that the Report of the Standing Finance Committee that has just been laid on the Table be adopted.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Bill has been duly reported and is set down for a third reading.

I don't know where we are at. Madam Clerk, next item please.

Report and Recommendation of the Minister Responsible for Lands – Vesting of Crown land Block 106E Parcels 44, 48, 49, REM 1, 103, 141, and 175 to the Sister Islands Affordable Housing Corporation

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Minister responsible for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Report and Recommendation of the Minister Responsible for Lands – Vesting of Crown land Block 106E Parcels 44, 48, 49, REM 1, 103, 141, and 175 to the Sister Islands Affordable Housing Corporation in accordance with section 10(1)(b) of the Governor Vesting of Lands Law (1998 Revision). It is also accompanied by the documents required pursuant to section 10(2) of the said Law which contains the details of the proposed vesting.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to speak thereto?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, simply to confirm that as required by the Law, the details of this land matter have been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette issue No. 6/2008, dated February 25, 2008; also in a local newspaper, namely the Cayman Net News on 25 February 2008. Also, as required by Law, three valuations have been carried out on the subject property, each valuation report forms part of the overall report and provides a general indication of the value of the property that the Government now proposes to vest.

Madam Speaker, the report deals with the vesting of Crown land located in the vicinity of Tibbetts Turn Road, Watering Place, Cayman Brac. The six parcels are being donated by the Government specifically for the purposes of facilitating the construction of two and three bedroom homes for sale to those Cay-manians who may not otherwise have the opportunity to afford their own homes. The land at Watering Place will enable the construction of approximately 15 buildings.

The recipient of the vesting is the Sister Islands Affordable Housing Development Corporation. The Corporation is a government-funded, non-profit company established in 2006, tasked with facilitating the construction and sale of good-quality affordable housing in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to those Caymanians who may not have ready access to traditional residential mortgage funding as offered by the commercial retail banking institutions in the Cayman Islands.

The corporation will assist successful applicants in securing financing from a funding institution. Government is further assisting with a supply of project management expertise to the corporation for the planning and construction phases.

I am pleased to report that Government seed money of C$800,000 to fund construction of the first phase of homes in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is in place, 10 successful applications have been received on Cayman Brac. Construction has already commenced on 4 of the homes and construction on 4 more is anticipated to begin very shortly which means that within the next 6 to 9 months we will have provided homes for 80 per cent of the successful applicants in Cayman Brac.

Suffice it to say, Madam Speaker, that the other two, if it is possible, will certainly be done along with the second phase. It is just that the original plan was four plus four. But, certainly, as I see where two more have been successful, I am certain that can be adjusted.

It is in the best public interest to vest this land to the corporation to ultimately ensure as many Caymanians on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as possible are given the opportunity to enjoy home ownership.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Freedom of Information (Information Commissioner) Regulations, 2008

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Minister responsible for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Freedom of Information (Information Commissioner) Regulations, 2008.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to speak thereto?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, this honourable House will recall that the Freedom of Information Law, 2007, was passed in August of last year, which set the stage for a new era of openness and transparency in Government and this Law legislates the public's right to access information held by public bodies, such as government departments and ministries, statutory authorities and government-owned companies.

This Freedom of Information Law establishes the post of Information Commissioner, which is an independent oversight body with responsibility for the following key activities:

- To hear, investigate and rule on appeals filed under the Freedom of Information Law.
- To monitor and report on the compliance by public authorities with their obligations.
- To make recommendations for reform, both of a general nature and directed at specific public bodies.
- To refer to the appropriate authorities cases where it appears that a criminal offence has been committed.
- To publicise the requirements of the Freedom of Information Law and the rights of individuals under it.

Madam Speaker, the Freedom of Information Law, 2007, provides that the Information Commissioner shall have all powers direct and incidental as are required to undertake the functions as provided under the Freedom of Information Law, and that in the exercise of his powers the Commissioner shall be responsible for the Legislative Assembly.

The Freedom of Information Law also provides that the Information Commissioner shall be appointed by the Governor after consultation with the Cabinet and after a process which is conducted in accordance with the following principles:

- 1) Participation by the public in the nomination process.
- 2) Transparency and openness.
- 3) Publication of short-listed applicants.

The Freedom of Information Law also provides for the appointment of the Information Commissioner to be in accordance with such procedures as may be provided for in regulations made by the Governor in Cabinet.

Madam Speaker, accordingly, the Freedom of Information, Information Commissioner Regulations 2008, provide for various aspects of the process of appointing the Information Commissioner including the appointment of a selection panel, application and public nomination process, advertising, short-listing, and the interviewing of candidates. Please note also that the regulations provide that the selection panel shall consist of one member of the public and one member of the official Opposition.

Madam Speaker, the process of selecting an Information Commissioner is expected to commence very shortly with the publication of advertisements and the detailed job description. So, I would urge the public to become involved in the nomination process using the requisite forms which are the schedule to these regulations. It should be noted that persons may nominate themselves. However, in all cases the person being nominated must sign the form agreeing to be nominated.

So, Madam Speaker, in accordance with section 57 of the Freedom of Information Law, 2007, I submit the Freedom of Information Information Commissioner Regulations, 2008, for affirmative resolution of this honourable House.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Report and Recommendation of the Minister Responsible for Lands – Vesting of Crown Land to St. Matthew's University - Block 32B Parcel 221 REM 1 (Part)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Minister responsible for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Report recommending the Vesting of Block 32B Parcel 221 REM 1 for the purposes of constructing a veterinary medicine teaching/surgery centre to St. Matthew's University in accordance with section 10(1)(b) of the Governor Vesting of Lands Law. And it is accompanied by the documents required pursuant to section 10(2) of the said Law which contains the details of the proposed vesting.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to speak thereto?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

First of all, let me confirm that, as required by Law, the details of this land matter have been published in the Cayman Islands Gazette issue No. 9/2008, dated April 11, 2008; also issue No. 10/2008, dated April 15, 2008, and also a local newspaper, namely, the Cayman Net News on April 15, 2008. Also, as required by Law, three valuations have been carried out on the subject property. Each valuation report forms part of the overall report and provides a general indication of the value of the property that the Government now proposes to vest by way of lease.

Madam Speaker, the Report deals with the vesting of .86 of an acre of undeveloped Crown land to St. Matthew's University by way of a 15-year lease term. Although the land is only being leased to the University, the Law states that the grant of a lease for a period exceeding 5 years is deemed a disposition, which must follow the same vesting process as applies to a conveyance of freehold land. So, because that is the way the Law reads, hence the process we are following now. But I want to make it absolutely clear that the Crown is not vesting this land to St. Matthew's University, but it is simply engaging in a 15-year lease to the University for the purposes of them conducting the business of a veterinary college so to speak.

This site forms a very small part of block 32B Parcel 221, REM1, on Agricola Drive in Lower Valley to the rear of the John A. Bothwell Department of Agriculture Building. The University is to use the site to construct . . . and I have to say, Madam Speaker, the building is already constructed. So the site is to hold a 6,000 sq. ft. veterinary medicine teaching and surgery centre with associated car park.

Indeed, Madam Speaker, as I said the work has been completed and the centre has already formally been opened and is now in use. Its location will enable the University to work very closely with the Department of Agriculture staff and, Madam Speaker, I can report that as we speak, this is exactly what obtains.

In providing the site to the University in turn for a peppercorn rental, the Government is assisting the University to expand the scope and scale of veterinary teaching facilities available in the Cayman Islands. The facility certainly will encourage more students to study at St. Matthew's University School of Veterinary Medicine in this country as well as benefiting the people of the Cayman Islands and the local animal population.

Madam Speaker, in return for leasing the land for this building project to the University, there are some more specific benefits to the country. In particular, St. Matthew's has agreed to provide CI$225,000 funding towards the construction of a new animal feed storage warehouse. Furthermore, the University has also graciously agreed to enter into a memorandum of understanding with Government for the duration of Agriculture technical staff at no cost; to develop cooperative programmes with the Department of Agriculture whereby veterinary care and related animal health research may be offered to the veterinary and farming community here in Cayman; and also to offer up to two scholarships per annum to Caymanian students for St. Matthew's University courses.

Madam Speaker, in tabling this report, certainly I believe that the decision to engage in this lease is beneficial to both parties.

Thank you.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MINISTERS AND MEMBERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I recognise the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 1

No. 1: Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden asked the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the Minister responsible for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing, How many families and other persons are living in trailer homes and where are they located?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker, the answer: The official number of persons currently living in the Government trailer homes is 122. Currently 44 trailers are occupied island-wide broken down as follows—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, could you wait one moment until I get a copy of the answer, please?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, would you continue your reply?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker, with your permission, I had only read just about a sentence, so I will start from the very beginning. Thank you.

The official number of persons currently living in the Government trailer homes is 122. Currently there are 44 trailers which are being occupied island-wide broken down as follows:

Fairbanks site, 18 trailers with 53 persons.

Bodden Town, 13 trailers with 38 persons.

West Bay, 6 trailers, 18 persons.

Private sites, 7 trailers, 13 persons.

On the private sites, 2 are in North Side, 2 are in Lower Valley, 2 are in West Bay and 1 is in George Town.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries?

Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Minister say what are the medium- to long-term plans for the trailers and occupants, especially those located on the main sites?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, the Member will be familiar with the fact that property has been identified, finally, for just about every one of the districts for the Affordable Housing Initiative and the occupants of the trailer homes are presently being invited to be processed to see which one of the four available options they can fit in. In the medium term it is expected that the Housing Initiative will assist.

Madam Speaker, it is my belief that there will be a few who will need assistance and plans are afoot to provide that assistance. 'Who will need assistance' meaning assistance above and beyond the ordinary with regard to their housing needs. They are part and parcel of one of the four initiatives. So, the land being identified, sub-division plans have been submitted for the various sites. Once Planning approval is granted construction of the homes will begin. It is just the administrative process that we are now awaiting, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there further supplementaries?

Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we finally have the trailers empty, could the Minister say what the plans are for the trailers, whether they will be shipped off, kept, and how will they be secured if they are kept?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, that is outside the original question, but if you are in a position to reply . . . Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

There have been many thoughts expressed with regard to what should be done with these trailer homes. The firmest view at present is that a site has been identified in the interior in the East End district where these trailers can be properly stored once they are not in use. The truth is, it is not the view of any of the parties concerned that . . . and I do not speak of the occupants, I mean those responsible, the agencies responsible. It is not the view of any one of those agencies that these trailers should be sent off island because the fact of the matter is, while we pray not, there may be occasion for the need of some of them again at some time in the future.

So, the plan is to have this site properly prepared and as we are able to relocate the families who are in these trailer homes, then we will simply store them securely. The truth is, what we do not know is how long they will last once they are in storage. But that is something we will just have to see.

So that is the plan.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? [pause] If not, we will move on to the next item.
Honourable Minister of Education.

Miss Teen Achievements—Yentel McGaw

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I just wanted on behalf of Government, and I believe on behalf of this honourable House, to offer our warmest congratulations to Miss Yentel McGaw, who has just returned from Trinidad and Tobago having won the . . . Miss McGaw is, of course, the current Miss Teen Cayman Islands, and she has won Miss Teen Caribbean, which is a first for Cayman. She was also the second runner-up for the title of Miss Teen Worldwide and finished by also winning the Miss Popularity award. Those are marvellous achievements. And in addition to that, she graduated from the John Gray High School yesterday evening.

So, I wanted on behalf of the Government, and I said, as I believe, on behalf of all Members of this honourable House, to offer her our warmest congratulations.

The Speaker: Thank you, honourable Minister.

BILLS

FIRST READING

Cinematograph (Amendment) Bill, 2008

The Clerk: The Cinematograph (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for second reading.

SECOND READING

Cinematograph (Amendment) Bill, 2008

The Clerk: The Cinematograph (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Communication, Works and Infrastructure.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to move the second reading of the Cinematograph (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Honourable Minister responsible for Communications, Works and Infrastructure.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I will not be long in the introduction of this amendment, but I am pleased to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Cinematograph (Amendment) Bill, 2008 . . . to sponsor, Madam Speaker.

The Cinematograph Law was enacted in 1963 and from its inception the Cinematograph Authority specifically referred to a Board consisting of the Governor, as Chairman, three elected Members of this honourable House, and one other member nominated annually by the Governor. For the most part the principal Law has remained the same with a few minor amendments over all these many years, some 40-odd years. It has served the country well over those many years as the number of the Cinematograph exhibitions operators has been very small. They have been miniscule to tell the truth. There has only been one set of cinemas here for quite a long time. There were some prior to that and they have all fallen by the wayside. People have gone out of business and the likes.

Like any other piece of legislation, sections of the principal Law now require updating to ensure the Law remains useful and practical for its intended purposes.

Madam Speaker, these amendments seek to effect change in an effort to ensure the Board provides responsive governance and effective oversight.

Madam Speaker, I think I should pause here before going through the clauses (which there are not many) and reflect on an editorial that was written recently by the Caymanian Compass on this particular amendment. I think the Caymanian Compass was wrong in its assertions and positions, and its opinion taken in the change in this, making amendments to this Law. I think it is necessary that the public have another perspective on why this Law is being changed.

The Editorial on 15 May, spoke about how “The government wants to allow Cabinet to make all five appointments to a new Cinematograph Board, with the caveat that at least one of the members must be a minister of religion.”

What I was concerned about in their Editorial was in one paragraph it went on to say, “On the surface, it would appear that government is merely choosing to replace a board made up of a majority of politicians with one that is appointed by politicians, removing the appearance of elected officials interfering with the censorship process.”

It went on to say, “However, we wonder what will occur when appointees who owe their position to the elected officials are required to make controversial decisions about banning films or editing their content so that it is suitable for viewing in a public theatre.”

“Those board members are only accountable to the Cabinet members who appointed them, not the public. They are essentially free to make decisions to censor films that a politician would not dare to make because of public backlash.”

I want to go on record to disagree with the Caymanian Compass in that position they have taken.

They also went on to talk about the Commission of Enquiry by Sir Richard Tucker and they quoted a section of Sir Richard Tucker’s Report and I read: “If...the non-executive directors (of appointed boards) feel that they must ‘support the minister’ who appointed them, with the result that they are reluctant to bring their own skills, expertise and judgment to bear upon the matters at hand, the board of directors of the statutory authorities and government companies will serve little useful purpose.

“Sir Richard’s comments were made in relation to organisations like Cayman Airways’ Board of Directors or the Boatswain’s Beach Board of Directors. But we think they could just as easily apply to members of this new Cinematograph Board.

“Political appointees, attending a closed-door meeting, could easily act upon the marching orders of the politicians who appointed them and ban whatever films it is considered politically expedient to ban at the time.”

Well, Madam Speaker, I can say that I do not know. I have not had the privilege of directing of any of those that I put on any boards. I can assure them of that. But what concerns me about that particular thing, and I want to be critical constructively, is that on one hand we do not want the politicians in these positions because they have too much power. It gives them too much power. On the other hand, when we appoint good citizens to these boards we say that they kowtow to the politician. I disagree with that. I have not had that experience in being a Minister.

Madam Speaker, the Governor who happens to be Chairman—and I have gotten permission from the Governor to say this, the Governor who happens to be Chairman brought it to my attention when I told him that he was the Chairman—that there is no way it is a waste of the Governor’s time. It is a waste of the Governor’s time to be chairman of this thing that . . . it really hardly ever meets. By Law the Governor is Chairman.

Now, he agrees with me that the Chairmanship of this thing should not be under the Governor. It should not be the Governor. Thus, Madam Speaker, we are changing it. In addition, there are three elected Members from Parliament who are members, and then another member appointed by the Governor on an annual basis. Then we have to bring it here and confirm it in the Legislative Assembly every year.

Now, all of the boards, Madam Speaker, are appointed. I just do not see any need to not make this board the same as others, that is, by members of the community being a part of this governance. Who left the politicians as the only word of morality in this country? I do not know. But certainly, there are Members in this honourable House who do not necessarily want to be appointed to this board either. And it is censorship. Everywhere else in the world there is a regulatory body, and that is what we are trying to develop here.

Now, Madam Speaker, I will agree that this Law needs a total revamping, thus the reason why if these proposals are accepted we will get the Board to go and make proposals to change the rules that govern the Board and the Law as well so that at some stage we can have things like the ratings included in the Law so that there will be proper guidelines to go by.

We spoke recently of the behaviour of young people in public. I think this all ties into it and I really believe it is timely. So, I would like to go on record to disagree with the Caymanian Compass in that people take seriously their appointments on these boards, whether they are political or otherwise. They see it as a means of making their contribution to their country. And I believe, Madam Speaker, it is a little disrespectful to say that those people do not have a mind of their own. That is disrespectful and we are polarising our country whereby people in this country are refusing, independent minded people are refusing to go on these boards because they are criticised so much. We are soon going to have boards without members.

Stop the criticism. I can appreciate questions being asked, but they continue to criticise people who dedicate their time to the betterment of their country. Get the politicians, sure. But come on, we have people who are decent people who volunteer their time. They lose money from their businesses to sit on these boards. But there is the constant barrage of criticism against these people and we need to start looking at it from a different perspective. We need to start thinking about those people. They have families.

I cannot see someone with their patriotism and families sit on a board just to be criticised for no reason or for reasons that are unfounded because no one took the time to go and investigate it or ask the people of the board for information.

Anyway, Madam Speaker, I would challenge the media to be very careful with that especially those same people who go on those boards are just like those people who are forming an opinion—they are family people, they are members of this society, they are concerned about their society, and they want to make their contribution.

You want to beat up the politicians? Go ahead. That is what we are about, being beating sticks! And then we can clarify ourselves. But, for God's sake, I beg, I pray that we do not unjustly criticise the people who have come forward and used their time, their money, their expertise, their experiences to make this country one tiny bit better. It's wrong.

Anyway, Madam Speaker, let me just go through the clauses of this Bill please, with your permission.

Madam Speaker, clause 1 of this amending Bill provides for the Short title and commencement. Clause 2 provides for an Amendment of section 2 of the Cinematograph Law (1995 Revision), which is definition, whereby the definition Cinematograph Authority "the Authority" in section 2 be removed and replaced by a new definition called "the Board".

As I stated previously the Law defines the Cinematograph Authority as the Board consisting of the Governor, three elected Members of the Legislative Assembly nominated annually by the Legislative Assembly and one member nominated annually by the Governor. The use of the words "Cinematographic Authority" to describe a board is misleading. The intent of the original and current Law is simply for a board to provide oversight. It was never intended to establish a true "Authority".

Madam Speaker, as you and Members are aware, a statutory authority is required by the Public Management and Finance Law (2005 Revision) to satisfy certain requirements, particularly administrative and financial procedures. The primary purpose of the Cinematograph Law is to state the board's function and create offences for breaches under the Law. There are no provisions for its administrative and financial operations. In practice, the "Authority" always functioned as a board rather than as an authority. And this has only been since the Public Management and Finance Law has come into place. It defines "Authority" as a completely different entity.

The Board was intended to function as a board rather than an authority as it receives administrative and financial support either from the Governor's office or the Legislative Assembly, or both.

Clause 3 provides for the establishment and constitution of the Board in section 2 of the Cinematograph Law. The elected Members of this Government do not believe that Members of the Legislative Assembly should chair or be members of statutory boards. If this Bill receives successful passage, the Cinematograph Board will consist of members of the public appointed by the Governor in Cabinet. And one of those members should be a minister of religion.

Madam Speaker, I should again point out that under the accompanying regulations, the Cinematograph Rules (2003 Revision), there is a reference in section 3 that the Governor is Chairman of the Board. Under these proposed amendments, the Governor in Cabinet would now appoint the Chairman and other persons to the Board. As I said earlier, the Governor has been consulted and he agrees with these changes so that no governor, not particularly the current Governor, but a governor, should not be chairing a Cinematograph [Board].

In 1963, maybe, when there were not that many people here, there weren't that many cinemas, it was not more than daytime, maybe. Yes, the Governor, the Administrators in those days did not have much to do and it just turned into "Governor" by virtue of change in nomenclature. But, Madam Speaker, the Governor has other things to do, more important things as head of state to do in this country than decide what rating a film has or whether the license is renewed because they did not conduct themselves in the proper manner. This Governor, this one in particular I do not know, but most governors probably do not even go to the movies in the Cayman Islands. So, there are people out in the community who understand that whose peers talk to them and that is what it is about, peers expressing their concerns and their wishes about how their country should be governed. Everybody does not go down to the Governor's house and make representation to him. But, of course, they go and talk to their peers. And that's who should be part of these boards.

Thus the establishment and constitution of the Board is inserted in section 2A of the Cinematograph [Law] and would comprise of five members appointed by the Governor and, as I said, with one of these being a minister of religion. It also provides for appointment of the Chairman of the Board by the Governor in Cabinet and for the Board to adopt appropriate procedures.

Clauses 4 and 5 provide for the word "Authority" to be removed from all sections of the principal Law and replaced by the word "Board".

Madam Speaker, I would like to personally commend this Bill to honourable Members and ask for their support. Certainly I will listen to the debate, and if there is I will reply whenever the time comes.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Minister wish to exercise his right of reply?

Honourable Minister responsible for Communications, Works and Infrastructure.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, just to say thanks to all honourable Members for their support. I have discussed this matter with a number of the Members. The most important thing is that when I tried putting it together recently to consider the Hollywood thing I couldn't get any members in here who wanted to sit, really, because of the same thing. They were the ones who also encouraged me to try to change it. And that is expressed today in their silent support for this amendment.

I thank them very much, and I look forward to the amendment being part of the Bill and we will move on and appoint some people there who can watch over that aspect of the development of this country.

Thank you.

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that, Registration Section, East Interior, Block 63A Parcels 30-34 [inclusive], and High Rock Block 64A Parcels 34 and 36 be rezoned from Agricultural / Residential to Low Density Residential.

Madam Speaker, in 2006, as I mentioned in the Motion itself, the CPA received an application from City Services (Cayman) Limited for the rezoning of the parcels which I just mentioned.

The proposed rezoning encompasses approximately 288 acres and is located on Seaview Road just west of High Rock Drive. The proposal calls for the parcels to be rezoned from the current zoning of agricultural/residential to low density residential and, Madam Speaker, the remaining facts are contained in the “Whereas” section of the Motion itself. All of the necessary procedures have been followed and therefore my duty is simply to recommend the Motion itself to this honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to exercise his right of reply?

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, once again just to thank Members for their rather quiet support.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to move Government Motion No. 4/08-09—Amendment to the Development Plan 1997—Proposed Rezoning—Desmond Kinch.

The Speaker: The Motion is duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to speak thereto?

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, the Motion reads:

WHEREAS in 2006, the Central Planning Authority (CPA) received an application for the rezoning of Block 25C Parcel 165 (sic) from Beach Resort/Residential to Public Open Space and Block 25C 167 from Public Open Space to Beach Resort/Residential.

AND WHEREAS on February 7th 2007, the CPA again considered the application in light of the public review process (CPA/04/07 Item 4.1) and it was resolved to forward the rezone application to the Ministry of DPAH with the recommendation that the proposed amendments be forwarded to the Legislative Assembly for approval;

AND WHEREAS on March 5th 2008, Cabinet approved the rezoning application and further that the matter be referred on to the Legislative Assembly;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with section 10 (2) (b) of the Development and Planning Law (2005 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map are attached hereto;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, Spotts Landing, Block 25C Parcel 165 (sic) from Beach Resort/Residential to Public Open Space and Block 25C 167 be rezoned from Public Open Space to Beach Resort/Residential.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, just for clarity, did you say Block 25C Parcel 167? Or is it 307?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Parcel 167.

Madam Speaker, just for clarity, what is really happening is that Block 25C Parcel 165— it is being sought for that parcel to be rezoned from Beach Resort/Residential to Public Open Space.

The Speaker: Mm-hmm.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: And then Block 25C Parcel 167, the direct opposite—it be rezoned from Public Open Space to Beach Resort/Residential. And I will explain.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business I understand that very clearly, but the Motion I am holding in my hand has no mention of Parcel 165. It has Parcel 307.

[pause]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I have to apologise.

When the original advertising was done, it was 167 (sic). Since then there has been a subdivision and the new parcel number is 307, I think you said? That is the new parcel number. So I apologise. We are dealing with the same matter.

Madam Speaker, just so that it can be clearly explained, this seems to have been one of those—I can't even say it was a Freudian slip because it was on paper! Whereby—to tell the House where the exact location is, this is just going east directly from the Spotts' Dock to Government property where Spotts Landing is. There are several individual parcels. A subdivision was created there. And some time ago, where the public open space was created [it] was created in between several of the parcels, when in truth and in fact the original intention was for the public open space to be created at the end of the subdivision adjoining the Port Authority's property so that there would not be public open space in between the lots. And it would also give the Port Authority the leverage at some point in time in the future for any open area or public use areas that needed to be created.

This is just right east of where the bathroom block is, Madam Speaker. Somehow or the other when the lots were created there was some mistake made and it was discovered sometime later.

The purpose of this rezoning exercise is just to switch the two parcels, the public open space back to where it should be and the residential lot where it is supposed to be. That is the whole purpose of this specific application.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to exercise his right of reply?

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I would ask that you simply take the vote please.

The Speaker:<sup>1</sup> The question is: BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with section 10 (2) (b) of the Development and Planning Law (2005 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map are attached hereto;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, Spotts Landing, Block 25C Parcel 307 from Beach Resort/Residential to Public Open Space and Block 25C 167 from Public Open Space to Beach Resort/Residential.

Agreed: Government Motion No. 4/08-09 passed.

Government Motion No. 5/08-09—Amendment to the Development Plan 1997 - Proposed Rezoning – LR Development Ltd.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to move Government Motion No. 5/08-09—Amendment to the Development Plan 1997 - Proposed Rezoning – LR Development Ltd.

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to speak thereto?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

First of all to read the Motion itself:

WHEREAS in 2007, the Central Planning Authority (CPA) received an application for the rezoning of Registration Section, West Bay Beach South, Block 13C Parcel 19 from Low Density Residential to Neighbourhood Commercial;

AND WHEREAS the CPA originally considered the application on May 2, 2007 (CPA/12/07 Item 4.2) and resolved that the rezone application be put out for public comment;

During the comment period no letters of objections were received;

AND WHEREAS on July 25, 2007 the CPA again considered the application in light of the public review process (CPA/23/07 Item 4.1) and it was resolved to forward the proposed amendments to the Ministry with the recommendation that the proposed amendments be forwarded to the Legislative Assembly for approval;

AND WHEREAS on February 26 2008, Cabinet approved the rezoning application and further that the matter be referred on to the Legislative Assembly;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with section 10 (2)(b) of the Development and Planning Law (2005 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map are attached hereto;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, West Bay Beach South, Block 13C Parcel 19, rezoned from Low Density Residential to Neighbourhood Commercial.

Madam Speaker, this property, as I understand it, is located on the Esterley Tibbetts Highway. It is approximately 6.05 acres. It is just south of Lawrence Boulevard. Given the surrounding development in the immediate area it is simply that the owners of the parcel do not believe that a low density residential development would be in keeping with the development that surrounds it from all directions. They are simply seeking for it to be rezoned to neighbourhood commercial for it to be in a more compatible position for the type of development that has taken place thus far.

So, Madam Speaker, I recommend the Motion for approval to this Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, just to say that I am at least confident that I will not get any surprises with this one either.

The Speaker: The question is BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with section 10 (2)(b) of the Development and Planning Law (2005 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map are attached hereto;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, West Bay Beach South, Block 13C Parcel 19, be rezoned from Low Density Residential to Neighbourhood Commercial.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Government Motion No. 5/08-09 has been duly passed.

The Speaker: I would like to go off the microphone for one minute to ask . . . [inaudible]

I guess, Honourable Leader of Government Business, out of an abundance of caution I could re-read the resolve sections, if Members will allow me to.

Government Motion No. 4/08-09
Resolve sections re-read

The Speaker: <sup>2</sup>The question is: BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT in accordance with section 10 (2)(b) of the Development and Planning Law (2005 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map are attached hereto;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that Registration Section, Spotts Landing, Block 25C Parcel 307 be rezoned from Beach Resort/Residential to Public Open Space and Block 25C 167 be rezoned from Public Open Space to Beach Resort/Residential.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Government Motion No. 4/08-09 passed a second time.

The Speaker: The question that I just put was in respect to [Government] Motion No. 4/08-09

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [off microphone] No. Wait which one of these changes . . . give me one second.

Yes, but that's what I am not sure about.

Is it 167? Or your thing has 307 and 167?

Okay. That is right. Yes.

The Speaker: The clarification that I was seeking was in relation to Government Motion No. 4/08-09.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, that concludes the business on the Order Paper today, just to advise Members that tomorrow is Private Members' Motions so we do intend to deal with the two Private Members' Motions. But since there are only two and we are not sure whether that will take the full day, the Business Committee will meet as soon as we conclude this [sitting] and we will also put some Government Business on to make sure that we have a full day's Order Paper tomorrow.

So, I move the adjournment of this honourable House until 10 am tomorrow.

The Speaker: Before I put the question I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

RAISING ON MATTER OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE (SO 11(6))

Constitutional Change and Advancement— Referendum

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I want to thank you for the opportunity to raise this most important matter, which—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, could we just state the Standing Order you are rising under? It is 11 (6).

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Yes, Standing Order 11(6) to raise this matter of national importance.

Madam Speaker, the matter of constitutional change and advancement is one very important matter facing these Islands. It is one that will affect every person living in these Islands—for good or for bad is debatable.

The matter of determining what people want is by referendum. The Government is proposing to hold such a vote. Madam Speaker, it is my considered opinion that a travesty in the democratic process is occurring. Much has been said in this House, the Government's weekly press briefing and in the media houses, in particular the Caymanian Compass and Cayman Net News about a date when the Government will hold such a vote. So much so that the Leader of Government Business has had cause to raise a statement here denying a report in the Net News about a possible date of July 30.

Well, I can tell him that I heard that date myself. However, a date was announced by the Leader of Government Business, back in May of this year, that it would be held in the latter part of July.

From then to now (today, 25 June), all we know is that a Bill for holding a referendum was sent to this honourable House but has not been set down for debate. Also, a motion which will give the Government permission to bring the referendum law was given to Members of this honourable House but has not been made public, nor has it been set down to follow procedure in this honourable House.

For a vote by the people of these Islands to be taken in late July and all of the various important constitutional matters to be completed including the procedures of this honourable legislature the Opposition and, indeed the wider populace, is at a total loss to say the least as to how the Government expects us to take part in a referendum just about one month away.

Madam Speaker, let me point out a few things:

1) July traditionally is off-island vacation month and many eligible voters would have already made holiday arrangements.

2) Churches and other organisations have planned Vacation Bible School camps, et cetera, for the month of July.

3) MLAs, Members of this House have been here for at least another week and will not have sufficient time for MLAs to properly ensure that all eligible citizens fully understand the pros and cons of a referendum, the binding and non-binding aspects of the proposed referendum.

4) That the voting alternative re: the proposed referendum are understood both literally and that the ramification constitutional socially religious way of life politically and economically are understood by one and all.

5) A referendum should be an instrument to gauge and receive the widest possible mandate from the voting public.

I see where the Government says that if 7,000 people come out and they get 3,500 then that means a go for them. It means they can go ahead and put the proposals in place. That is, Madam Speaker, out of 3,500 out of 1,400 voters maybe—

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Sorry, 14,000 voters, that [means] 11,000 people not voting for it, yet they propose to put the proposals in place.

Madam Speaker, the date and the process should not now be in a shroud of secrecy. Madam Speaker, the United Kingdom has told us there needs to be consensus between the Government and ourselves, the two parties. The Government has had the funding, the benefit of funding by the Treasury behind them to, as it is, put forward their proposals in every shape and form that they want—radio, papers, television, internet, people getting up saying their constitutional champions. And I see more misinformation out there, Madam Speaker, that would wreck our history book.

As the loyal Opposition in this legislature, we asked the Government months ago, and also just a few weeks ago in written form, to give us assistance to get our discussion paper to the people. To this day, we have not heard from the Leader of Government Business, yet they propose a vote for July, next month.

How is this going to work, Madam Speaker?

They are going to take a vote. They want consensus, or they want us to sit down and discuss it with them? All of this for when? For when? We have not heard of a date for a vote to be taken.

Couple that, Madam Speaker . . . I see a new Election Bill before us. I do not know if that is meant for the referendum or not, but that proposes to change how people vote too, not by postal voting by a mobile voting, a new way of voting. So, Madam Speaker, we feel it our strong duty to demand today from the Government to tell us now what date the vote will be taken. Tell the country now when the Government will take a vote. What date the Government proposes to have the referendum. There is far too much confusion existing. Give us a date today—which the Leader of Government Business must, must, must know by now. It is late enough, Madam Speaker, but a further delay of announcing their date, which is expected to be in July—a month away!—is a mockery of the democratic process.

Therefore, I am asking the Government, I call upon the Government, I beg the Government to tell us when this vote will take place.

The Speaker: I will read the relevant Standing Order 11(6). It says, “(6) On a motion moved under paragraph (5), a Member who is not a Member of the Government and who has obtained the right to do so, may raise any public matter for which the Government has responsibility, in order to elicit a reply from a Member of the Government responsible for the matter.”

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I have listened very carefully to the Leader of the Opposition and, for the most part, I agree with the logic he has prevailed upon. He said, just before he was winding himself down, that I must, I must, I must know the date by now. And he intimated that I was keeping it a secret.

That is not a fact, Madam Speaker. We have deliberated on the matter much and there is just a bit more deliberation and some more communication to take place and we will be making an announcement regarding the referendum in a few short days.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

At 3.26 pm the House stood adjourned until 10 am Thursday, 26 June 2008.

OFFICIAL HANSARD REPORT
THURSDAY
26 JUNE 2008
11.00 AM
Fifteenth Sitting

The Speaker: I will call on the Honourable Third Official Member to say Prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady, Queen Elizabeth II; Philip, Duke of Edinburgh; Charles, Prince of Wales; and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth, that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Cabinet and Members of the Legislative Assembly, that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office. All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake.

Let us say the Lord's Prayer together: Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace, now and always. Amen.

Suspension of Standing Order 10(1)

The Speaker: Please be seated.

But before I deal with the Orders of the day, I would like to read Standing Order 10 (1). It says, "10. (1) Every sitting shall, unless the Presiding Officer otherwise directs, begin at 10 a.m."

Can I have a motion for the suspension of that Standing Order, as I have not directed us to begin at 11.00?

Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I so move.

But in moving, and it is a motion that I am moving so I want to speak to it . . . Madam Speaker, I take a dim view, but as many days as we have been sitting we have started nearly an hour late every day. Even in the course of Finance Committee.

And the other matter that I am drawing to the attention of this honourable House is the fact that questions—even laid over from last year—are still not on the Order Paper—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, would you move the motion to suspend Standing Order 10(1)?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I was drawing as a matter of procedure.

Madam Speaker, I so move the relevant Standing Order.

The Speaker: Could I have a seconder please?

[inaudible interjections]

An Hon. Member: Madam Speaker, I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Thank you.

There is grave concern for the lack of persons being on time, as well as Order Papers. I was given the Order Paper less than five minutes ago. I think we have to improve everything in order for this Parliament to function properly.

Madam Clerk.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker—

The Speaker: Yes, sorry.

The question is that Standing Order 10(1) be suspended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Standing Order 10(1) suspended.

Proceedings resumed at 11.10 am

READINGS BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have no messages or announcements.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Annual Report 1st July 2005 – 30th June 2006

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority Annual Report in respect of its financial year ended 30th June 2006.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Yes, thank you, Madam Speaker. Just some brief remarks.

The narrative in the Annual Report, that provides details on the activities, the results and the position of the Authority for the year through 30th June 2006, runs for approximately 60 pages and the financial statements component of the Annual Report is 17 pages.

Madam Speaker, I shall concentrate on the financial statements component of the Annual Report.

The total assets of the Authority at 30 June 2006 were approximately CI$98.8 million, and the largest component of those assets are short term and long term investments which were valued at $86.5 million at 30 June 2006. These assets, that is, investments along with other assets, provide a backing for the Cayman Islands dollars that are in circulation.

The total currency in circulation at 30 June 2006 was $70.6 million. This figure is further broken down as follows: Currency notes in circulation $62.7 million; and coins in circulation $7.9 million, for a total of $70.6 million of currency in circulation at the end of June 06.

Madam Speaker, after meeting its general reserve, currency issue reserve, and capital expenditure reserve requirements, the Authority established the equivalent of a dividend payable to the Government of approximately $3 million. This was paid over to the Government after the end of the financial year, the 30th June 2006.

The Authority has also exceeded the minimum 115 per cent of demand liabilities being backed by assets of the Authority. In addition to satisfying all its legal reserve backing, the Authority has a paid up capital of $9.725 million at the end of June 2006. And the goal is to reach a minimum of $10 million. Therefore, the goal is substantially completed by 30 June 2006.

Madam Speaker, the Authority has had a robust performance during the year to June 2006, and a compliant position at the end of 30 June 2006. There is much detailed information in the Annual Report pertaining to, for example, the number of licensees at the end of the year, and the number of licensees that arrived during the course of the year. There is much detailed information about the activities and the results of the Authority. I would encourage all members of the public to obtain the Annual Report and to review it for their knowledge.

I thank you, Madam Speaker.

Third Annual Report of the Law Reform Commission – 1 April 2007 to 31 March, 2008

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I crave leave of this House to lay on the Table the Third Annual Report of the Law Reform Commission – 1 April 2007 to 31 March, 2008.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Second Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: No, Madam Speaker, except to say that the Report itself is self-explanatory and user-friendly. I would commend the contents to honourable Members of this House and the wider public.

Thank you.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MEMBERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received no notice of statements by Honourable Members or Ministers of Cabinet.

MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Private Member's Motion No. 1/08-09 Organ Donor and Transplant Programme

The Speaker: I recognise the Fourth Elected Member for the district of George Town.

[pause]

Standing Order 39

The Speaker: I would like to bring to Members' attention Standing Order 39, "39. Members present in the Chamber during a debate shall -

- (a) enter and leave with decorum;
- (b) not read books, newspapers, [telephones] letters or other documents unless they relate to the business before the House;
- (c) maintain silence while other Members are speaking, and not interrupt except in accordance with Standing Orders; and
- (d) in all other respects conduct themselves in a seemly manner."

So could we put away the telephones until proceedings are completed today please? Thank you.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Boy she's hot stuff today!

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would like to move Private Member's Motion No. 1 of 2008/9, entitled, "Organ Donor and Transplant Programme."

The Motion reads:

WHEREAS the population of the Cayman Islands has substantially increased over the last few decades;

AND WHEREAS the need for the transplant of organs has similarly increased;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government considers the establishment of an Organ Donor and Transplant Programme for the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: I beg to second this Motion.

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved and is open for debate, does the honourable mover wish to speak thereto?

Fourth Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Transplants transform lives. Transplants are one of the most miraculous achievements of modern medicine. They involve the donation of organs from one person to another and in the UK, for instance, enable about 2,700 people to have a new lease on life each year. Transplants are the best possible treatment for most people with organ failure.

Madam Speaker, kidney transplants are the most commonly performed. Transplants of the heart, liver and lung are also regularly carried out. As medicine advances other vital organs, including the pancreas and small bowel, are also being used in transplants. Tissues, such as corneas, heart valves, skin and bone, can also be donated.

The increasing effectiveness of transplantation means that many more patients can be considered for treatment in this way, but there is a serious shortage of donors. For some people this means waiting sometimes for years and undergoing difficult and stressful treatment. For all too many, though, it means they will die before suitable organs become available.

Madam Speaker, each organ and tissue donor saves and improves the lives of as many as 50 people. Giving the gift of life may help lighten the grief of the donor's own family. Many donor families say that knowing that other lives have been saved helps them cope with their tragic loss.

In the US, each day about 77 people receive organ transplants. However, 19 people die each day waiting for transplants that cannot take place because of the shortage of donated organs.

Again, some statistics, Madam Speaker: On waiting list (candidates as of yesterday) 99,094 individuals were waiting on transplants in the US. Between January and March of 2008, 6,623 new patients were added to that waiting list. In contrast, between January and March of the same period, only 3,374 new donors came on line. So it is clear that while the need for organ transplants continually increases, those who are willing to donate are not keeping up.

Madam Speaker, here in the Cayman Islands we have been fortunate enough, and unfortunate in some circumstances . . . we have had individuals who have been the recipient of organ transplants and I dare say that we have even had a few cases of donors from the Cayman Islands. But usually this is between families.

I would just like to speak briefly to some of the historic dates involving organ donation and transplants. And to say that in 1918 blood transfusions became established. Blood donation is something that is part of all societies nowadays, and may be something that we take for granted; but we can see how necessary and how many lives that continues to preserve and helps to improve. I am sure that at some point in time, Madam Speaker, that too may have had its difficulties being accepted by the wider community.

- 1954, the first successful kidney transplant operation was performed in Boston, USA.
- 1960, the first UK living donor kidney transplant was performed in Edinburgh.
- 1963, the first liver transplant was done in Denver, USA.

I am giving these statistics so that we can make sure that our people understand that the things we are trying to do here today are programmes that have been tried and tested and are well established throughout the world.

- 1965, the first kidney transplant in the UK Using organ donated from a dead person.
- 1967, first heart transplant operation performed by Dr. Christian Bernard in South Africa.
- 1968, first heart transplant in the UK.
- 1968, first UK liver transplant performed at Addenbrooke's [Hospital] Cambridge.
- 1971, Kidney donor card introduced in UK.
- 1981, UK kidney donor card changed to multi-organ card including kidneys, corneas, heart, liver and pancreas.
- 1983, UK liver transplant programme begins.
- 1983, first combined heart/lung transplant in the UK.
- 1985, lungs added to UK donor card.
- 1986, establishment of the Bristol Eyebank.
- 1987, first domino UK heart transplant where a patient receiving a heart and lung transplant donates their healthy heart to another (I'll explain that a little later on).
- 1994, first living donor liver transplant in UK.
- 1995, first living donor lung lobe transplant in UK.
- 2005, first partial face transplant carried out in France on November 27.

Madam Speaker, in the UK, roughly 25 per cent of the population are registered organ donors. Incidentally, again in the UK, they are celebrating their 18th National Transplant Week. National Transplant Week will be launched on July 8 of this year at the London Transport Museum in Covent Gardens. The donor programme in the UK will be 60 on 5 July. Since its creation in the summer of 1948, there have been constant developments in patient care and it has been responsible for saving millions of lives.

Some of the significant transplant milestones that have happened over the last 60 years include:

- By December of 2007, 5,328 heart transplants have been carried out in the UK.
- David Lomas, age 20, donated a part of his liver to his father, Stephen, in 2007 in the first living liver donation operation to happen in the UK.
- Transplants are now so successful in the UK that by a year after surgery 94 per cent of kidneys in living donor transplants are still functioning well.
- Eighty-eight per cent of kidneys from people who have died are still functioning well.
- Eighty-six per cent of liver transplants are still functioning well.
- Eighty-four per cent of heart transplants are still functioning well.
- For lung transplants, the figure is 77 per cent, while 73 per cent of heart/lung transplants are still functioning well.

Madam Speaker, individuals born with the killer disease cystic fibrosis now have a chance to live longer, productive lives thanks to organ donors who can give a new set of lungs. Cystic fibrosis is a disease that is not new to us in the Cayman Islands. As a matter of fact, I know a few people who are suffering from that right now.

What can be donated? The organs of the body that can be transplanted at the current time are kidneys, heart, lung, liver, pancreas and the intestines. Kidney/pancreas transplants, heart/lung transplants and other combined organ transplants are also performed. Organs cannot be stored and must be used within hours of removing them from a donor's body.

Most donated organs are from people who have died, but a living individual can donate a kidney, part of a pancreas, part of a lung, part of a liver, or part of an intestine. Tissues, corneas, the middle ear, skin, heart valves, bone, veins, cartilage, tendons and ligaments, can be stored in tissue banks and used to restore sight, cover burns, repair hearts, replace veins, and mend damaged connective tissue and cartilage in recipients.

Madam Speaker, blood and platelets are formed by the body. They go through a life cycle and are continuously replaced throughout life. This means that you can donate blood and platelets more than once. It is safe to donate blood every 56 days and platelets twice in one week, up to 24 times a year.

Blood is stored in bloodbanks according to type A, B, AB, or O, and Rh factor positive or negative. Blood can be used whole or separated into packed red cells, plasma, and platelets, all of which can have different life-saving uses. It takes only about 10 minutes to collect a unit pint of blood, although the testing and screening process means that you will be at the donation centre close to an hour.

Platelets have tiny cell fragments that circulate throughout the blood and aid in blood clotting. Platelets can be donated without donating blood. When a specific patient needs platelets, but does not need blood, a matching donor is found and platelets are separated from the rest of the blood which is returned to the donor. The donor's body will replace the missing platelets within a few hours.

I mentioned cornea allocation before, Madam Speaker. The cornea differs from other organs offered for transplant because there is no upper age limit to donation. It can be retrieved up to 24 hours after death, can be stored for short periods before use, and can usually be transplanted without having to match blood groups.

There are two cornea transplant service eye-banks in Bristol and Manchester where donated corneas can be kept in carefully controlled conditions for between 10 to 30 days. This enables staff to ensure that there is no infection or other problem that would preclude their use. Each cornea is examined before being sent out to check that it is of suitable standard for transplantation. Patients who are closest in age to the donor are usually selected as recipients wherever they live in the country. Tissue typing and blood group matching is used in a small number of cases where there has been a rejection over previous grafts.

I would also like to mention that we have an organisation here in the Cayman Islands, and I think we all know of them throughout the world and in the United States, in particular the Lions Club movement, as a service club whose main aim and main function is to preserve sight. The Lions also have an eyebank which was established in 1986 by the Lions Save Sight Foundation. This Lions eyebank also maintains a wait list of patients who require cornea graft operations.

Through this system about 100 corneas are provided to the eyebank for transplant each year. Corneal transplants enjoy a very high rate of success; however, Western Australia continues to suffer from a shortage of human donated eye tissue. Again, anyone can become an eye or tissue donor. Anyone.

Madam Speaker, most people can donate organ and/or tissue. All people of all ages should consider themselves potential organ and tissue donors. There are few absolute exclusions—HIV positive, active cancer, systemic infection—and no strict upper or lower age limits. Potential donors will be evaluated for suitability when the occasion arises. You are never too old, Madam Speaker. No one is too old or too young, both newborns and senior citizens have been organ donors. The condition of your organ is more important than age. Someone, for instance 35 years old with a history of alcohol abuse, may have a liver that is in worse condition than someone who is 60 years old who never consumed alcohol.

In addition, people on the waiting list may need to be transplanted with an organ that is less than ideal if there is no other suitable organ available in time to save their life. Doctors will examine your organs and determine whether they are suitable for donation if a situation arises. Usually, Madam Speaker, if one is under 18, one will require parental consent to donate organs. A lot of people believe that they have medical conditions that may rule them out. But that should not be a decision that one takes on one's own. You should consult your doctor. Although you may have what you consider serious medical conditions, you may still be able to donate your organ. Doctors will evaluate the condition of your organs when the time arises.

The transplant team's decision will be based on a combination of factors, such as the type of illness you have, your physical condition at the time of your death and the types of organs and tissues that will be donated.

As usual, Madam Speaker, in things like organ donor transplant programmes there are some religions that may not find this to their liking. I have done as much research as I could on the Internet and I have come up with a few of these church groups.

For instance, the Baptists. Although Baptists generally believe that organ and tissue donation and transplantation are ultimately matters of personal conscience, the nation's largest protestant denomination (and there are US statistics) the Southern Baptist Convention, adopted a resolution in 1988 encouraging physicians to request organ donation in appropriate circumstances and to encourage volunteerism regarding organ donation in the spirit of stewardship, compassion for the needs of others and alleviating suffering. Other Baptist groups have supported organ and tissue donation as an act of charity and leave the decision to donate up to individuals.

Again, I am only giving these statistics to bring our people up to date. But the same fears that they may have are fears that others have encountered along the way and have found ways of solving them.

Catholics view organ donation as an act of charity, eternal love and self-sacrifice. Transplants are ethically and morally acceptable to the Vatican. Pope John Paul II stated, "The Catholic Church would promote the fact that there is a need for organ donors and that Christians should accept this as a challenge to their generosity and eternal love so long as ethical principles are followed."

Christian Church Disciples of Christ. The Christian Church encourages organ and tissue donation stating that we were created for God's glory and for sharing God's love. A 1985 Resolution adopted by the General Assembly encourages members of the Christian Church, Disciples of Christ, to enrol as organ donors and prayerfully support those who have received an organ transplant.

Church of Christ Scientists do not take a specific position on transplants or organ donation. They normally rely on spiritual rather than medical means for healing. Organ and tissue donation is an issue that is left to the individual church member.

Jehovah's Witnesses believe donation is a matter best left to the individual conscience. All organs and tissues, however, must be completely drained of blood before transplantation.

The Moravian Church has made no statement addressing organ and tissue donation or transplantation. Robert E. Sawyer, President, Provincial Elders Conference of the Moravian Church of America, Southern Province, states, "There is nothing in our doctrine or policy that would prevent a Moravian pastor from assisting a family in making a decision to donate or not to donate an organ. It is therefore a matter of individual choice."

Just a few more short ones.

Pentecostals leave the decision to donate up to the individuals.

Presbyterians encourage and endorse donation. It is an individual right to make decisions regarding his or her own body.

The last one I will read, Madam Speaker, is Seventh Day Adventists. Donation and transplantation is strongly encouraged. Seventh Day Adventists have many transplant hospitals including Loma Linda in California, which specialises in paediatric heart transplantation.

I am making those points known publicly to help us move this through in a smooth and efficient manner where we do not necessarily get roadblocks from areas that have already been tried and tested. If we can help in providing the general public with as much of that information as possible, I believe they will more easily accept what we are trying to do here.

Madam Speaker, organ and tissue donation for living donors. While most solid organ and tissue donations occur after the donor has died, many organs and tissues can be donated while the donor is alive. The first successful transplant in the US was made possible by a living donor and took place in 1954. One twin donated a kidney to his identical twin brother.

As a result of the growing need for organs for transplantation, living donations have increased as an alternative to deceased donation; and about 6,000 living donations take place each year. Many living donations happen among family members or between close friends. Some living donations take place between people unknown to each other.

Solid organ donations: Living individuals can donate one of their two kidneys and the remaining kidney provides the necessary function needed to remove waste from the body. Single kidney donation is the most frequent living donor procedure.

Madam Speaker, depending on the age of an individual when they donate a kidney, it has been proven that if it's a relatively young person the remaining kidney will gradually increase in size to make up for the capacity that the two kidneys were able to manage. Scientists and medical doctors are still not able to successfully say why the body has two kidneys when it can really function with one.

A living donor can donate one of two lobes of their liver. This is possible because just as skin cells grow new skin, liver cells in the remaining lobe of the liver grow or regenerate until the liver is almost its original size. This re-growth of the liver to near its original size occurs in a short period of time in both the liver donor and the liver recipient.

It is also possible for living donors to donate a lung or part of a lung, part of a pancreas, and part of the intestines. Although these organs do not regenerate, both the donated portion of the organ and the portion remaining with the donor are fully functioning.

Surprisingly, it is also possible for a living person to donate a heart, but only if he or she is receiving a replacement heart. This occurs only when it is determined that someone with severe lung disease and a normal functioning heart would have a greater chance of survival if he or she received a combined heart and lung transplant. As a result, the heart/lung recipient's own heart, if it is in good condition, is then donated to an individual who needs only a heart transplant. That's what I referred to earlier. In the UK that is referred to as the domino transplant.

Suitability to donate: Each potential living donor is evaluated to determine his or her suitability to donate. The evaluation includes both the possible psychological response and physical response to the donation process. This is done to ensure that no adverse outcome either physically or psychologically or emotionally will occur before, during, or following the donation. Generally, living donors should be physically fit, in good health between the ages of 18 and 60, and do not currently have or have had diabetes, cancer, high blood pressure, kidney disease or heart disease.

The decision to be a living donor must be weighed carefully as to the benefits versus the risks for both the donor and the recipient. Often, the recipient has very little risk because the transplant will be life saving. However, the healthy donor does face the risk of an unnecessary major medical procedure and recovery. Living donors may also face other risks, for example, a small percentage of patients have had problems with maintaining life disability or medical insurance coverage at the same level and rate, and there can be financial concerns due to possible delays in returning to work because of unforeseen medical problems.

Madam Speaker, systems are in place for follow ups. Institutes are in the process of conducting studies to collect information on the outcomes of living donors over time. At present, follow up reviews of living donors by some transplant centres show that the living donors on average have done very well over the long term; however, there are some scientific questions regarding the effects of stress on the remaining organ.

There could be subtle medical problems that do not develop until decades after the living donation(s) that are not known at this time because living donation is a relatively new medical procedure. To ensure the safety of all living donors it is critical that long term results of the effects of living donation are studied further.

The decision to be a living donor is a very personal one and the potential donor must consider the possibility of health effects that could continue following the donation. In most cases, that decision must also take into consideration the lifesaving potential of a loved one, the transplant recipient. I am sure that nobody takes organ transplant for a joke and they understand the seriousness of it. But at times when people are faced with the possibility of losing a loved one, I am sure that that need usually outweighs any fear there may be.

Because of all the effect, Madam Speaker, especially the long term effects to the donor that are not known at this time, the Federal Government does not actively encourage anyone to be a living donor. The Federal Government does recognise the wonderful benefit that this gift of life provides to the patient awaiting a transplant and has several ongoing programmes to study, support and protect the living donors who chose to give this gift.

Madam Speaker, in our own little country we have an extremely high level of diabetes and heart disease, a very high percentage of our population suffers from diabetes and high blood pressure, quite a bit of lung disease, some serious cystic fibrosis, and a lot of smoking-related illness with lungs and so on.

I believe that an organ donor programme is one that I won't say is long over due, nothing happens before its time; but I believe that this programme has been mentioned many times in recent years in the country. I believe that it is now time for us to look at it seriously. My request here is for the Government to simply look into the programme to consider whether or not it is feasible for us to do so.

I imagine that whatever system is employed, whatever system of harvesting we decide to engage in must be one that will yield the highest potential to assist our people. I do not know whether or not a local transplant programme is possible. I believe that we will probably have to look at partnering with some entity in a neighbouring country to make this viable. Again, I leave that up to the Government to make their decision. But I do believe there is great potential in looking to partner with somewhere else.

Because of our size I do not know that we would necessarily have a waiting list for all of the possible organs that could be harvested at any point in time. For instance, we could have a programme where if we do not have a waiting list we can donate those organs to somewhere else that has a waiting list for those organs, and in turn we work out a system where the same thing applies for us where our citizens can be put on a list or moved up a list because of our donation to that jurisdiction.

Again, I do not know whether or not we may want to consider developing our own niche market in transplants here in the Cayman Islands. It is something to think about. I believe that the time has really come for us to consider this and to make sure that we now put ourselves in a position where we can help our people a whole lot more. We have a tremendous number of people right now on dialysis, people with serious heart conditions, additional liver and kidney problems. I believe that we can get over the phobia of donating our organs or assisting people after we are gone.

I also believe that because we are such a small community we may develop a problem where it is more difficult for people to become donors or even recipients because they know the individual that the organ came from. And what I just said about teaming up with some other jurisdiction may help alleviate that problem.

Also, Madam Speaker, while I gave the two different possibilities of organ donation (that is, of a living donor) I believe that what we are encouraging here is the donation of organs after people have deceased. Whether or not someone is hooked up to a machine you would not make that decision to use the organs until all efforts have been made to save the person's life. But organ donation is usually done through accident victims and it is a really simple procedure once we have the system in place.

Our drive would be to encourage our citizens to understand that they can make a difference in someone else's life after they are gone. Remember what I said earlier, that one donor one person who will agree to donate his organs can assist 50 individuals in improving their lives.

So, Madam Speaker, I don't think I can say any more at this point. I trust the Government will see it fit to accept the Motion. I simply wait to see what other contributions are going to be made to it. But, as for now, that concludes my contribution to the Private Member's Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am pleased to stand and offer my short contribution on Private Member's Motion No. 1/08-09, Organ Donor and Transplant Programme. The resolve section: BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government considers the establishment of an Organ Donor and Transplant Programme for the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, before I make brief comments, I would like to take this opportunity to compliment the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. I believe that bringing this Motion is timely for the development of our country as a whole. I also compliment him on the contribution he has just made. He has done an extremely fine job of outlining the history of transplants. He outlined the medical requirements, procedures of transplants and he also brought us a global perspective of transplants and how that has moved through history, which should give us a sense as a country for why I said it was timely.

I want to talk about the local organ transplants that I believe all of us know a little bit about. I believe it is a contribution that can complement what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town brought because I am not really sure there is too much more that I can add to the history and medical procedure in the global perspective as he has quite ably outlined in his presentation.

Madam Speaker, the need for transplant organs deeply touches me, and it also touches the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. When one has close friends or family members who have been blessed by the giving or receiving of transplant organs, or when one has personally witnessed the feelings of despair when a loved one is placed on a transplant list with no donor in sight, it is easy to understand the importance of this Motion. I think it is incumbent upon me, Madam Speaker, to just give a few examples of how this has touched me personally and the community that I live in.

There is a young man in Cayman Brac that is a living example of a productive citizen after transplant. The young man is a husband, a father, a son, he is a brother; he is a young entrepreneur, a fine tradesman who has a well established business. This young man received a kidney from his sister. But I believe the importance of this Motion is what would have happened if his sister was not the match for this young man. How would he have had the ability to look and maybe find someone in the Cayman Islands who could have put him at the top of the donor list? He could have been placed on a list and not received a kidney.

So, the search for this vital organ was ably met by a family member, but quite often it is not. I believe that is what this Motion speaks to for all of us here in the Cayman Islands. It gives this young man, and quite possibly other people, the ability to live a healthy and purposeful life.

Madam Speaker, that was a success story that was on the receiving end. But we always think what is the success story on the giving end? What of the person who has passed away and at his death the organs were given? That is why this Motion is extremely meaningful to me. I have comments here that were made by the wife of my late uncle, Trevor Foster, who sat many days and many years in this honourable House as a well-known parliamentarian of the Cayman Islands. I asked my aunt Mary Lou if she would like to make a comment on this Motion itself, he being a donor.

I quote: "Mose, your Uncle Trevor's desire to give back and advance humanity continued up until his death and even after. He became an organ donor at death. Our family has learned over the years that his eyes helped others to see and several more of his vital organs were given to those in desperate need of them. We feel honoured to know that since he could no longer be with us that a significant part of him lives on in others."

At Uncle Trevor's expected death, it was the unselfish but difficult decision made by his grieving family that allowed other hurting people to get a second chance at living. If the Cayman Islands had an organ donor and transplant programme in place, we could make an informed personal decision to be organ donors in our own country to help our friends, neighbours and family. This thoughtful personal decision can spare grieving family members from being faced with the difficult question that always comes immediately after a loved one passes on.

Madam Speaker, I can tell you from experience, that as you sit in that room at Baptist Hospital, or wherever, grieving at the loss of a loved one that has not made a decision in their life to be an organ donor, a team in white jackets comes in and they sit down with you and say 'Would you be willing to donate your loved one's organs to our transplant programme?' And as you huddle there you are tortured with the right thing to do (the donation), but what did my husband or my father really want me to do? I believe that the timeliness of this Motion would help from both sides—the one that receives, the one that gives, and also the family, so they would know the right thing to do.

Madam Speaker, these two examples briefly illustrate the local need because these are our own people that have benefited in giving. The local need, I suspect, is much more than what I have outlined. I believe that each one of us here has examples running through our minds now as we speak. These examples demonstrate the good that is achieved not only for the recipient and their family, but for the donor family as well and how it helps them bear with the loss of a loved one.

I believe the importance of these comments is that it brings it home to us. Sometimes when Motions come to this honourable House and they are global in perspective, the importance for us is to understand how it is going to affect us in our daily lives and affect our community. That is why I wanted to take this opportunity to really bring this to a localised level of why I think it is so important.

Madam Speaker, I again want to say that I am very pleased to have seconded this Motion, and I also want to say that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town did a good job in bringing overarching understanding to the need for this transplant programme for this country.

So, with those few words, I speak in support of the Motion and look forward to the Government's reply.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

Third Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to support the Motion brought by my colleague, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, on Organ Donor and Transplant Programme and to say that although it is not a bombastic Motion that we could get a lot of kudos for, it is a very, very important one.

I just draw reference in my short response here to when I take people to the dialysis centre in the hospital or I pick them up, and when I see them having their blood transferred, I am wretched with pain for them and I know that somewhere out there is an answer for them. There is an answer, to replace a kidney.

We have seen from our own experiences people who are able to afford to go to the United States to have a kidney transplant. We have seen several persons get a new lease on life. But those donors have been their families.

I believe what the Fourth Elected Member is trying to do for us in the Cayman Islands is to set up a sort of . . . I am sure the Government will look at the details of that. But I think it is such a very important motion that we can give a hope, not just in kidneys, but as he mentioned all other organs of the body.

We have seen a lot of miracles in our lifetime in terms of heart transplant, in terms of liver transplant. I have personally known persons. We have seen people who have had their eyes . . . that is certainly a big thing here in the Western Hemisphere. And Madam Speaker it really touches my heart to know that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town would bring this Motion so that we can give others a chance to live better.

I also want to thank the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who revealed (which I did not know) that his uncle had been a donor. That is very noble of him to have done that. I am sure he has helped many, many persons as a result of that.

So I wish to support the Motion and to say kudos to the Fourth Elected Member for George Town for bringing such a motion.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As has already been said, this is one of those motions that perhaps does not reach very high on the scale when it comes to political bang, but as already been outlined by the mover the seconder and those who have contributed, the Opposition does recognise the merit in the Motion and not only the actual content of the Motion but, certainly, bringing more awareness and consciousness.

As the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said, this is not something that from a cultural standpoint a lot of Caymanians think about and consider especially when a loved one is going to inevitably pass on in a relatively short period of time who may have a lot of healthy organs and parts to their body that could help others. It is not necessarily planned. But, certainly, we do need to encourage, and I know this has already been mentioned, but we need to continue the education and the promotion of organ donation to allow people to really take that step because it is an important one.

The mover of the Motion outlined many of the religious denominations and their stance on this. I know there are still some people and some denominations that do not agree or support this—that is donating parts of one's body. But I do believe, from what has been presented, that the majority of persons in the community in terms of sheer numbers would have been covered by the research done and the presentation by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. We do need to continue to encourage, to raise that awareness, so that those decisions can be made.

A lot of us will have had members of our families who would have passed on and really were healthy, for example in auto accidents, et cetera, who would not have gone down this path.

Madam Speaker, with those few words I do support the Motion. I think it is timely and it is something that needs to have front burner consideration of the Government.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Health and Human Services.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to respond to the Motion before the House.

I would like to commend Fourth Elected Member for George Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for the comprehensive manner and for the research that has been done by Fourth Elected Member for George Town. It is such a good framework for this to be looked at.

Madam Speaker, I just wanted to give some specifics on Cayman's current situation as it relates to persons being referred overseas for organ transplants. Of those patients referred through the government hospital over the last five years (that is from 2003 to 2008), I am advised that a total of 18 persons have received transplant surgery. The most common cases involve transplant of the kidney, liver, cornea, heart and pancreas.

Madam Speaker, what I find more disturbing is the number of patients registered in the dialysis programme within the hospital, as alluded to by the Third Elected Member for George Town. There are around 40 people now undergoing dialysis there. And we are looking at having to expand.

It was found that out of this number, nine patients have been evaluated and determined candidates for transplant. Hence they are currently enrolled in the kidney transplant wait list. However, as it remains, the shortage of organs is particularly great for kidneys. Therefore, this usually results in patients being placed on a two-year waiting list and many of them are kept on dialysis for years before one becomes available. What is most disheartening, however, is that some are not fortunate to live long enough to be granted the opportunity to receive the transplant.

There is no doubt that we are presently faced with a global crisis as alluded to by the mover. There is a worldwide shortage of human body organs available for donation. In fact, the demand for donors has become so immense that people living in poverty stricken countries have been known to go to the extreme of selling their own organs out of financial desperation.

I remember hearing the story that in some of these countries the police would go into an alley and find these people, some without a kidney. They don't even take them to a hospital—they just cut the organ out which is unfortunate. But that just shows what happens when people get desperate.

Whilst the Cayman Islands is currently benefiting from the US Organ Transplant Programme it is not contributing to the organ pool. I am pleased to say that in 2005 a local organ donation committee was established to address this issue. I would also like to mention that some time ago Lion, Andrew Eden, and other Lion Club members, talked about this for some time. The mover is also a member of the Lions Club, especially in the area of eyesight programmes. I must salute them for the efforts they continue to put forward year after year.

To explain, the committee pursued efforts to form an association with an organ-sharing network. To date, I have been informed that the committee continues to discuss the legal issues attached to such a programme including various implications surrounding the introduction of a brain death law.

Madam Speaker, under this law, before a legal brain death diagnosis and organ removal can occur, both the donor's prior declaration and family consent must be obtained. However, I would ask that Members of this honourable House take into consideration the ethical issues that a law of this nature entails. That is, we have to question whether the turning off and removal of organs from a loved one for transplanting would be acceptable within the Cayman culture. This has been alluded to by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and also the Second Elected Member for West Bay. As we know, this is something that we have to look at closely and it is a matter of a culture adjustment.

One may ask how this can be achieved. I would strongly recommend the promotion of public awareness to educate the people of these Islands about the urgency of becoming a donor. I have just seen in the last few years, especially in motor vehicle accidents where so many of our young, healthy people have died, they certainly would have been in a position to donate.

I would also like to add that health promotion schemes and disease prevention programmes that shed light on the diseases and negative lifestyle choices that may increase the need for organ transplants should also be included within the public awareness campaigns. For example, diseases such as diabetes, hypertension, and behaviours including alcohol and substance abuse, poor nutrition, a lack of exercise, are all risk factors for diseases that can cause permanent or irreversible damage to organs and tissues. Hence, such health promotion initiatives and lifestyle coaching is a reflection of the message that my ministry is currently conveying to the public and one that I adhere to.

Furthermore, while I note that we have seen a substantial increase in the population of the Cayman Islands in the last few decades, I do not speculate that the number of persons requiring transplantation has subsequently increased.

Madam Speaker, as the Minister for Health and Human Services, I fully endorse the initiative to establish an organ procurement programme which will grant Caymanian patients access to a growing pool of donated organs. In return, the advantages of implementing an organ donation system will prove to be rewarding as it will allow Caymanian patients greater access and shorter waiting times for organ transplantation and increase their chances of receiving an organ.

Finally, I would like to once again thank the mover and seconder for bringing forward this Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. W. Alfonso Wright: Thank you, Madam Speaker, briefly, just to express my gratitude to the seconder of the Motion, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the Third Elected Member for George Town for her valuable contribution, and also the Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay for making his very valuable contribution.

I do thank the Honourable Minister of Health for accepting the Motion and also I am extremely grateful for the facts that he provided. I believe that together we should be able to move forward on this in good time to help guide our country to make this of real benefit to our citizens who, as he outlined and the statistics prove, that patients are waiting for up to two years for what is now considered the simple transplant, that of kidneys. And because of where we are, out here kind of on a limb by ourselves, our citizens are not able to get on real donor lists. If we are connected to a country the size of the US with the number of citizens they have on the list, I believe that we are placed at a considerable disadvantage.

Having our own donor programme should make that better. It will not alleviate our problems completely, but it will put us in a better position to give our people a little more hope when we have our own people who are dying because of failed organs and to help create awareness in our own people that they too can make a contribution to save some of these lives. It is something that we have just not paid much attention to.

I would probably venture that the majority of our people have not even considered donating their organs because it is not something that we talk about locally.

The Honourable Minister made the point of us having 18 transplants done in the last 5 years; but at the same time we do not contribute to the pool. I think that we need to do something about that.

I also want to say, Madam Speaker, that I am a God fearing person. I believe that there is a Supreme being and that we should not attempt, this is not an attempt to replace people's faith in the good Lord and his ultimate power to heal, and that we should continue to pray in times of sickness and also in good times, and to understand that that should be your first and foremost call should always be to ask the good Lord for His healing hand to be laid upon us.

But I do believe that He has also given wisdom to man to help themselves. In cases such as this, I believe we should do what we can to assist ourselves.

That said, Madam Speaker, again I thank all honourable Members for their support.

The Speaker: The question is BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government considers the establishment of an Organ Donor and Transplant Programme for the Cayman Islands. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Private Member's Motion No. 1/08-09 passed.

Private Member's Motion No. 2/08-09 Shortage of Burial Chambers

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, Motion No. 2 stands in my name and reads as follows:

WHEREAS it is evident that there is a shortage of burial chambers throughout the Islands;

AND WHEREAS in the district of West Bay there exist three main cemeteries with severe shortage of burial space;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government considers purchasing additional suitable property, where available, and utilizing existing Government property, where available, throughout the Islands for the use of cemeteries;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government give immediate consideration to a different type of burial, to that of the existing traditional way, such as two caskets in one vault and above-ground burial chambers.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

Fourth Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the honourable mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Motion before the House seeks to address a very important and dire need—that of the present and future burial space. Madam Speaker, I do not know of all the cemeteries in other districts. And when I visit to attend a funeral in the other districts I notice also there is a shortage of space. But in West Bay we have three main public cemeteries, the space available in all three of them is now limited.

Northwest Point does not have room for additional spaces. It is just about maxed out.

We have been talking about improving Boatswain Bay and there is property available for the purchase of parking and for burial space to the east of the Boatswain Bay Cemetery, and I think it would be to the south, on the Powery side, for parking.

The main cemetery in West Bay is a lot more problematic. There is no more property for expansion adjoining the present cemetery. In fact, the last group of vaults that were built, I had asked that no more walls be built because we really do not have parking space and we could have utilised some of that for parking space when we have funerals. But like most cemeteries in Cayman, everybody has to park on the main road.

However, across the road on the swamp side of the main cemetery, specifically on the south side, that is the George Town side of the fire station, there are a couple of acres available. As I said, Madam Speaker, it is swamp and would need to be filled, but it is available. Probably expensive, but I do not know where else, I know of no other property in West Bay that might not draw objections from the general public. Not everybody wants a cemetery alongside of them.

Well, that's how it is.

Madam Speaker, as I said, a similar situation exists in other districts and I believe that there are also private interests that are trying to develop private cemeteries. I believe Government should encourage and support that, for the population is growing.

Madam Speaker, the Motion also asks Government to consider permitting other forms of burying of our loved ones. There is a chamber above ground, we have seen them in other countries—all of us have travelled. Also, putting two people in one vault: I believe we should consider that where that can be done.

Also, there is a possibility that someone might have a sizeable plot of land and he is capable of building private chambers for himself, spouse, or other families. Once there are proper regulations in place giving consideration to all concerned, I see no reason why Government could not allow it.

The budget contains some funds for cemetery expansion in some of the other districts. I spoke to the Minister concerned and I believe he must have already done some work on this matter. I wish, however, that Government would consider those other points I raised in connection with West Bay and other ways to bury people when that time comes.

The fact is that the population has grown and continues to grow. The other fact is that there will be a need. We are not here forever.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

Honourable Minister responsible for Communication Works and Infrastructure.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Madam Speaker, I thank you.

I would appreciate if you could consider us going to lunch at this time. There are some statistics forthcoming that I would like to give to honourable Members and they should be here within the half hour. If that is convenient for you.

Other than that, I can start, but I wouldn't have that statistical data for Members.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2 pm.

Proceedings suspended at 12.30 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.39 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed.

Honourable Minister responsible for Communication, Works and Infrastructure continuing his debate.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to speak on the Motion before this honourable House, brought by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition. I rise to speak on that and reply on behalf of the Government.

Madam Speaker, I know in the introduction of the Motion the Honourable Leader of the Opposition touched on a number of things. Particularly he addressed the West Bay situation. I would like to touch on that in a little bit, but I will also touch on the entire country as I go on.

First of all let me say that when I came into office as a Minister, I was faced with a number of issues that had been neglected for many, many, many, many, many years. One of those issues was that the provision for burial had not been looked at for a very long time; or if it was looked at, nothing was done about it.

I set out immediately to look for properties in the country and different methods and means of disposal of human remains. The Ministry staff and I have worked very hard to try to alleviate this problem that we inherited. I can say, Madam Speaker, that I believe we have been successful to a great extent in alleviating that problem and I can report that there are only two districts in this country that do not have sufficient space for the foreseeable future at this time, that is capacity. Madam Speaker, those two districts just happen to be Bodden Town and West Bay. That is not to say that I have failed in my responsibilities. It is only that in those two areas we are having extreme difficulties in finding lands suitable for cemeteries.

Madam Speaker, I think I should start with West Bay since the Leader of the Opposition spoke on that. But I noticed that this Motion was brought and, certainly, I do not want the country to believe that I have not spoken on this issue on many, many occasions. As a matter of fact, Thursday, on 15 May 2008, was my last time speaking on it in my contribution to the debate on the Throne Speech where I said that we had bought land in North Side to expand the cemetery, how there was sufficient space in East End for quite some time; and one of the things that I said on the 15th of May 2008 was that we were going to create a paradigm shift in that we had already designed double vaults and that we had consulted with the burial homes and they were all on board. And we were doing a pilot programme with it in order to see how receptive the people were to it, and that that pilot programme would be starting in this coming financial year which we hoped would get positive response from the populace and we would extend the capacity that we currently have.

I also spoke on that day about cremation and that we were in the process of looking at the laws to ensure we make it a legal way of disposal, certainly not for Government to get into the business of building crematoriums, but, certainly, anyone in the private sector who wanted to do that could do it because currently there are no provisions for disposal of human remains in this country in that manner. However, more and more people are choosing that method and the remains have to be sent overseas for it to be done. That is usually in Miami, or in Florida. I don't know exactly where.

One of the other means that we have available for us is burial at sea, which is being monitored by the Department of Environmental Health on a regular basis. We would be surprised to know how many people ask that their remains be buried at sea in this country.

So, there are different means and methods.

I also said on the 15th of May, that we are fast running out of space for the disposal of human remains. But we were working on it.

Also on 10 May in 2007, I spoke . . . that was during that financial year, the beginning of the 2007/8 financial year, that in that year (which is the current financial year we are in) that I would be working on the purchase of land for burial. So, in two years' time and in the period of one year, that was what we were working on to try and acquire property.

Now, Madam Speaker, let me go on to say what success we have had. But I warn this honourable House that I am not prepared to explain what those evaluations are because we are in the process of negotiating with these property owners and, of course, it is commercially sensitive and I am privy to that information, but certainly until Lands & Survey has completed their negotiations and the Government decides to purchase or not purchase then I will not be disclosing those numbers.

But I can tell this honourable House that on the Boatswain Bay Cemetery there is current capacity at that cemetery up until (that is based on single vaults being built) the year 2058. However, we have not discussed this with the four elected representatives from West Bay and having visited that site with them we all agreed that there was a need for parking. I believe the Leader of the Opposition spoke of that. We engaged in looking at the possibility of purchasing property adjoining for parking and eventual expansion of that cemetery.

I can say to this honourable House that we are in the middle of negotiating those properties and I am not going to go any further than that with what we estimate the price to be.

In essence these capacities are all based on the death rate in the country which happens to be somewhere around 4.3 per thousand as it stands. That's the only measure we can use, so that is what we have to do our projections with, with a little provision for other things.

Madam Speaker, on the Northwest Point Cemetery, there is capacity, based again on the death rate and building single vaults, up until the year 2021. That is based on using 47.3 square feet of land per vault which makes provisions for sidewalks and spacing and the likes. So it's based on how much land is left. There are currently 33 vaults left there to be built on the space that is there. If we do 30 per cent double on it, it will go up to 43 and we would exponentially get more years out of it.

Madam Speaker, on the West Bay Cemetery is where we are having our difficulties. Currently there are 35 standard vaults available in the West Bay Cemetery and there is 1 oversized and 10 infant vaults available. However, we can appreciate, based on the requirements of 36 per year, or there about, we can anticipate that the West Bay Cemetery will only last . . . we have I think about 94, the capacity there. The current capacity is 94. We have 35 plus those other ones built, plus those that can be built and by the year 2011 it will be closed based on the death rate and the use in West Bay proper of that cemetery.

Now, Madam Speaker, I spoke to the Leader of the Opposition a few months ago and he really brought to my attention the urgent need about this cemetery. I explained to him that we had been actively looking throughout West Bay for property to acquire and he made a suggestion to me about a piece of property next to the fire station, which I think he alluded to when he introduced the Motion.

Madam Speaker, I followed his advice and got Lands & Survey to look into that possibility to do evaluations on that and other surrounding property. In March of this year, they sent their reports to us. That piece of property the Leader of the Opposition pointed me to is about 11.7 acres. The cost . . . I cannot make the decision on purchasing that from the Ministry. That has to be a policy decision. So, I am in the process of getting that information ready to take to Cabinet before we instruct Lands & Survey to do it because certainly in addition to the cost, we will also have to fill it in. Certainly, I totally agree it will last for a very long time for the district of West Bay.

There is other land in that area which of course is smaller and we have some estimated valuations on what the Lands & Survey figure would be – the starting point to start bargaining. Those are about 2.1 acres. So we are looking at all of those and we will see exactly what happens. But, as I said, I am not prepared to disclose those prices now, those valuations at this time.

Madam Speaker, let me just go on to Bodden Town. Again, ever since coming into office I have been looking at properties in Bodden Town. We looked at a total of six properties in Bodden Town. They range from .76 acres, 4.4 acres, 1.5 acre, .37 of an acre, 3.75 acres, .8 of an acre. And these are all adjoining properties so it would make up one big piece on a number of those for us to do this with.

I think the Leader of the Opposition in his introduction said that it is like a garbage dump—nobody wants it in their backyard. People are not overly excited about cemeteries, but I believe those are the best neighbours to have around you. At least they won't see into your place and won't talk about what's going on in your home!

Madam Speaker, we are still working on it. All I can say is that we have come upon some serious roadblocks to get properties. So, having said that, again I am not going to disclose the instructions that were given to Lands & Survey and the prices we instructed them to try and negotiate for these properties.

We have had some success stories, Madam Speaker. I announced in here that we bought two pieces in North Side, one was .85 of an acre, and the other piece was . . . I don't remember the exact size of that. But it was advertised (I can say what those were) for $575,000 and it was adjoining the cemetery in Old Man Bay. We got it for $475,000 because the gentleman recognised what we wanted it for and reduced it by $100,000 after he realised that we wanted it back for the country. So, we don't have any concern with capacity in North Side.

In the other area, down in what we call Big North Side, now—

The Speaker: Old Man Bay, North Side.

Hon. V. Arden McLean: —Old Man Bay area, we certainly have capacity there also.

In North Side we are talking about capacity of, in Old Man Bay, the year 2113. I'll be around then, Madam Speaker, but . . .

And then Big North Side is about 2178. So, we are not overly concerned about North Side. That will be another generation that has to be concerned about that.

On the issue of East End, we are way into 21-something as well. East End and Gun Bay together have properties purchased there and we have now secured that because it is on the water with the wall and we have sufficient capacity there.

On the issue of George Town, as we know the Dixie has been closed. South Sound still has some capacity, but it's small.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. V. Arden McLean: Very few. But up at Prospect we have quite a lot of properties there. There are some two or three acres on the back part of that. So the capacity there is way into 2020 or 2025, something in that region. At least we have some time before we require additional capacity at the Prospect Cemetery.

So, Madam Speaker, it is basically West Bay and Bodden Town that we really, really need to work on urgently. As I said, we are in the middle of negotiations with those two districts to acquire additional property.

One thing that we need to start thinking about seriously and which I have asked the Ministry to start looking at is the provision of cemeteries inland. I know that conjures up a number of things because hitherto we buried on the beach, because it was easy to handle. But with the advent of machinery and other means of pulverising the rocks, I think it is time now that we started looking inland. And it has some benefits. It is protected from the shoreline and the like, so that is one of the things that I have them looking at—how we would do it, and the like.

I know the Leader of the Opposition spoke about above-ground vaults and burial. I know it is done in other countries. But, of course, I do not particularly like that except if it is just two or three feet above ground or something like that. But there is nothing wrong with us looking at it. That is why I said that we are looking at the possibility of what it is going to take to do inland where it is hard rock and the like so we can have some inland.

And he also spoke about private people burying in their own estate, or whatever, their own property. That has always been. We have always done that in this country. But, certainly, over the last few years it was stopped because there were no controls on it. We are in the process of rewriting the laws to facilitate the crematorium and the like and different methods. That is one of the things we have also included and are reviewing the possibilities of doing that because families can do their own if they keep the property within their families and eventually they preserve it as well.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition also spoke about private interests creating cemeteries, and the Government should encourage that. I certainly do. I know in recent years we have had about two private cemeteries commissioned and people want to do that. That is fine as long as it is understood that it must be done in the proper manner and regulated by the Department of Environmental Health.

To that end, Madam Speaker, I recently received a very lengthy proposal from a gentleman. His proposal was that he and Government do a national cemetery. Well, Madam Speaker, while that may be a good idea, the Government maintains individual cemeteries within the districts which has been traditional, which is a cultural thing. Therefore, my reply to him was that if he wanted to engage in the private thing he had to go through Planning, he had to go through Department of Environmental Health and the Water Authority to get all those permits and approvals prior to doing it. But I encouraged him in his endeavours to create a private cemetery, if he so chooses, to go right ahead. The more others do, the less will have to be done by Government, as long as all the provisions are made.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition said that we have been talking a lot in this country for a very long time about cemeteries. I agree with him. I totally agree with him. We have talked, talked, talked, talked, talked. No work, no work, no work; nothing done, nothing done, nothing done. That's exactly what I found when I got in!

Now I am going to do, do, do, and I am hoping that our negotiations will be successful. I am really hoping that within the next few months we can have something concrete for Bodden Town and West Bay so that we can commence. And the budget has money in here for purchase of cemeteries and upkeep of cemeteries and the likes. So much so I have done that we created the RPCU (Recreation, Parks, Cemeteries Unit). And if we look at the cemeteries now a days we will see that they are much, much better kept, and will be much better in the future as this unit develops.

All of the provisions for cemeteries, parks, beaches and the likes were scattered all over the place under different ministries. So we've brought them all together under one unit. Now the cemeteries are being taken care of and they are managing these cemeteries.

So, Madam Speaker, we have done much on the provisions for cemeteries and taking care of our loved ones. And the Government has done much. I just beg of the people to come forward and sell their property to us in order that we can make provision for the future for the disposal of all our loved ones because the Leader of the Opposition said that is the great equaliser—death.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to offer my short contribution on Private Member's Motion No. 2/08-09—Shortage of Burial Chambers.

The Motion states: WHEREAS it is evident that there is a shortage of burial chambers throughout the Islands;

AND WHEREAS in the district of West Bay there exist three main cemeteries with severe shortage of burial space;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government considers purchasing additional suitable property, where available, and utilizing existing Government property, where available, throughout the Islands for the use of cemeteries;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government give immediate consideration to a different type of burial, to that of the existing traditional way, such as two caskets in one vault and above-ground burial chambers.

Madam Speaker, following behind the Minister responsible for this area, I have to agree with him that a lot has been done since he took office to try and secure property in and around the Island. In particular, I can speak to the Bodden Town situation and I know a similar shortage exists in West Bay.

Madam Speaker, although we may not have an acute shortage in the other districts, dare I say that if we do not do the right thing in this area we will end up in the same position we are with Bodden Town and West Bay, where the need is a lot more serious at this time.

We have traditionally buried our loved ones on our beaches. There were a number of reasons for this. First of all, the settlement of these Islands was on the coast lines in the early days, and, of course, it was a lot easier to dig in sand than to dig in cliff rock or to try and do anything in a swampy area. So, it made good commonsense back then to have our cemeteries where they are historically located. But certainly going forward, as the Minister said earlier, the need to look inland and the practicality of it is a lot more easily facilitated.

Finding cemetery property is difficult and to just limit it to beach property, well then it becomes even more difficult. I know, because I have been working hand-in-hand with the Minister in Bodden Town in trying to secure property and it has been a task and ongoing as we speak.

Certainly we can find property inland now and create cemeteries such as what was done there on I think it's Old Prospect, where that was previous marshland, which was excavated, filled and turned into a nice cemetery. So, that can happen throughout the Islands. And, yes, it may take some getting used to but when you drive around the rest of the world we will see that cemeteries certainly . . . I think we must have some of the few cemeteries that are on the beach.

We can grass them and do all the nice aesthetics that will certainly make them attractive and be just as proud of them as they were in the white sand that was well kept and well flowered.

I agree with the Motion that, yes, we need to secure property. As has been said by the Minister, we have been working very hard to do this. And not just in the West Bay district, as the Motion says, but an all Island requirement.

I know also that the Motion's second resolve section refers to the type of burial, two caskets and above ground. This has been indicated on a number of occasions by the Minister as something that he was prepared to look at. I certainly would encourage that. It is something I do not think you could impose upon a family, but I think the ability to do it, if one so desires, should be there. Husband, wife, children, whatever the family relationship is— I think we have a while to go before we find strangers being buried on top of one another. But, certainly, this is something that I believe families would certainly welcome.

In many cases right now, we have husbands and wives that have secured vault space right next to each other. Laying one on top of the other . . . you may have an argument on who goes on top, but I don't think you'll have much more than that.

My personal view is too that you could go one level up above ground. Again, I don't have a major problem with that. I would not like to see two and three stories above ground, but one, as you had in the old days with tombs that we had that protruded above the ground. I think if it were done in a very nice way it would be something that would become quite attractive. Tourists actually come to the Islands, and I guess it's a morbid reason, but it is something that tourists like to do for some reason. They go around and look at grave sites and how you bury your dead and how you look after your graveyards.

Whatever we do, we have to preserve that nice look that we have been famous for. It is only respectful and right that we do so as well. Caymanians take great pride in their white vaults and their flowers and the grounds being well kept. In fact, I remember after Hurricane Ivan, after we had so much damage at the Bodden Town Cemetery, the many calls that would come in about this and that not being right, and the fact that Mr. Watler was no longer there, and in fact he himself would call and complain about the state of the cemetery. That is something that Caymanians hold near and dear to their hearts. So we have to be very cognisant of that in whatever we do for burial grounds.

I know too that there are individuals, as the Minister said, out there who are interested—in fact there are some private cemeteries now—in developing these further. Certainly, we have to work with them. And whether it is a national cemetery or a simple private one for a particular district we have to do our best to work with these individuals to take some of the pressure off Government having to find the property which, as I have said, is quite difficult to do.

Although the Motion does not call for it, the whole idea of a crematorium in the Cayman Islands is something again that the Minister has mentioned and would be an option. But I think legislation is required to make that possible. It is not possible to do it at the moment. A lot of people choose this form of disposal for the remains of loved ones, and individuals request this for their remains. As it stands now, it has to be done off Island, most commonly in Florida.

We have a number of issues concerning burials and the way we deal with our dead loved ones. We have certainly . . . I think it is one of those things that people just do not like a cemetery next to them. So, while we still have a lot of unoccupied land in this country, there is a lot of spare land on the interior of this country, undeveloped land that I think now is the time to secure so that when the time comes you are not putting the cemetery next to someone. They will have the choice to come and live by you or not. It is forward planning and it's only right that we do so.

I simply want to say that a lot of work . . . I just want to agree and support the Minister in this area because I know how much he has talked about it and how much work has gone into this area. I want to commend the mover of the Motion as well. It is timely. We certainly have no problem, I certainly have no problem supporting the Motion, but it is important that we let the public understand that this is not just starting today; a lot of work has gone into it.

Madam Speaker, with that short contribution, I support the Motion before the House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, actually, I had not prepared to make any comments after what I thought would have been a simple reply by the Minister to say what was being done and to get an undertaking to address the areas I wanted addressed. But, of course, the Government can't get up and address any matter unless they lay blame somewhere against somebody. That was evident in the Minister's remarks and in the closing remarks by the Member for Bodden Town who just sat down.

No one was saying that something was not done. What I do know is that a lot of things need to be done and we need to plan for the future. For the Minister to say there was only talk and then he did all the work is just not right.

You see, Madam Speaker, when he said he created a unit and he put these things together, it made one believe that nothing was done. Yet, he could say they were spread all over the place. Yes, they were. So you can't leave the impression that something was not done because all these years something has been done and in each cemetery some expansion was made. From the time I came in 1984 they told me I couldn't do anything with Northwest Point Cemetery. Well, we addressed the matter and certainly my great-great grand uncles and other family members are buried in a place that now other people can be buried. I just had an uncle, two uncles not so long ago, who were buried in the Northwest Point Cemetery.

So, things have been done over the years. Let's not just give an impression that something only started when this Government got in. If you left the PPM alone, they would make the Islands believe that the Islands didn't exist until the PPM got started and the PPM got elected! They would want the people to believe that. So let's not get there, Madam Speaker.

I believe that Government needs to purchase lands for the future to deal with some of these things. We must bear in mind that we also need to be prepared if anything should happen (God forbid) that we need a mass grave. So, space is very limited.

I will have to recheck to see the number of vaults in the Northwest Point Cemetery to see that it can last another 11 years, roughly. I cannot remember the year he said it would have no space. Anyway, I need to check that, and I am going to do that also.

Madam Speaker, I know Government gets criticised, particularly when Members call for Government to buy land, because people easily jump on that and like to think the worst. I cannot forget that when I was Minister of Sports back in the 1990s that I was criticised on the Floor of this House bitterly, and accused bitterly, and probably some of the accusations started back then, when we exchanged a piece of property of the Crighton family for bills, an exchange. They owed us money and we took the property. I was criticised. But what do we have there today? That is where the Prospect School is located. And good thing it was in the hurricane or we would have been that much worse off. It is now where the football centre is going to go. It made sense then and certainly it makes sense for the future.

Madam Speaker, I hope that Government will proceed to purchase the property in West Bay because I know that people do not want cemeteries close to them. The Minister spoke about people not wanting anything next to them. When I was Leader of Government Business, I wanted to move the airport and port to East End where it makes sense to put it when thinking about national development and when you really should be planning for the future. Putting the $93 million airport where it is, Madam Speaker – God forbid (as the United Nations Report has told us) if something happens! That money will go down the drain. It makes no sense to rebuild the airport where it is; it should go east.

But Madam Speaker, the Minister just said people don't want things there and he was one of them who ranted and raved and carried on in this House about not wanting the airport up in the east, not wanting the port. So what do you think? People are going to want cemeteries by them? Where the cemeteries are located, if you can get any property, it will cost a little bit more to build on the swamp side, but it can be done. George Town showed that when they built that cemetery where it is. Well, the one in the Prospect area. And George Town hasn't really anywhere else to go except for a few families who have their private cemeteries. Dixie Cemetery is maxed out and if you look at the cemetery in Prospect you can believe there is not a lot of space there and George Town has 20,000 people.

Bear in mind that there are people coming from other districts to bury their family in West Bay. And I believe maybe North Side, I think other districts, wherever they can find space it seems like, for George Town is in a dire situation. So, when I hear the Member carrying on his little politics and the Third Elected Member for George Town cackling because he carried on his little politics, she had better bear in mind that her district is not in the best shape when it comes to burial space.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, the Minister did say there is about 4 acres to that property at Old Prospect Road on the landside for George Town.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: On the Old Prospect? The same where the present one is?

The Speaker: Yes.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Over in the swamp. See what I am saying? So, when it comes to West Bay, Madam Speaker, it is the swamp. You will have to look to . . . and Cayman had better understand that because there has been this talk about not removing the swamp, not doing this thing and the next thing. Better realise just how much of this Island is and was swamp. We would not have had anything, and the mosquitoes would have eaten us to pieces, if we had kept it all.

Let no one say that I am saying that we have to tear it all down because there are environmental aspects that we want, as far as the environment is concerned, to preserve. But they better bear in mind that some we have to give away to the extent that we will have to use it for something else.

So, Madam Speaker, I hope it will not come down to a matter of money because as I said it is not something that we are going to run from. We are going to have the need for the space. I see that we are building more and more roads, that same Minister, more and more people will get killed. And if you are going to spend millions of dollars to purchase the land through the swamp to build the road, you are going to have to buy property for the cemetery. It is as simple as that.

We spend money on box and matches to cater to the wrong target market for tourism, so, Madam Speaker I do not see that the matter of an expense, once it is not so outlandish, is going to or should be difficult for the Government.

Madam Speaker, I certainly want to thank the Minister for moving on some areas, but let us not say that some things were not done for West Bay. We have been talking a long time and I have just been sitting back quietly waiting until we can get something done. And when other properties are purchased for other districts I simply quietly said let the other districts get and we will soon get. I did that with the post offices. But now, really, they should move to purchase those properties in Boatswain Bay and the one in West Bay central where the main cemetery is so that we can have it for the future.

I believe he said he was accepting. I am not sure whether he said that. But I hope they do.

Thank you very much Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government considers purchasing additional suitable property, where available, and utilizing existing Government property, where available, throughout the Islands for the use of cemeteries;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government give immediate consideration to a different type of burial, to that of the existing traditional way, such as two caskets in one vault and above-ground burial chambers.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. Private Member's Motion No. 2/08-09 passed.

SECOND READINGS

Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2008

The Deputy Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2008. Second Reading.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to move the second reading of a Bill shortly entitled The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The motion is duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Yes, thank you, Madam Speaker, just to make a brief contribution to the Bill.

Madam Speaker, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2008, deals with a number of regulatory and commercial matters. The regulatory matters are dealt with in Clauses 4 and 5 of the Bill which clarify certain provisions in section 14 and 15 of the principal Law.

Clause 4 of the Bill clarifies the section 14 provision on the permitted net worth gearing for banks, clarifying it to make it clear that it only relates to banks incorporated under the Companies Law and that it only applies to beneficial interests held by the bank as separate and distinct from where the bank has a legal interest derived from its conduct of normal banking activity. For example: where it holds an interest as a security or in the capacity of a custodian trustee agent or nominee.

Clause 4(c) also copies into the Bill a protective provision from the Securities Investments Business Law to preserve due enforceability of agreements or contracts.

Madam Speaker, Clause 5 repeals section 15(1)(a) of the principal Law relating to segregation of assets and liabilities of trust companies as it has the unintended effect of overwriting the established and settled duties of trustees in a way that both confuses and undermines the existing and already satisfactory segregation standards. Appropriate segregation standards are therefore not compromised in any way by the repeal.

In addition, Clause 5 of the Bill refocuses the Authority's powers in section 15 of the principal Law under review of indemnity insurance coverage arrangements for trust companies so that the initial determination of what coverage is appropriate properly remains the responsibility of the trust company itself.

Madam Speaker, the commercial matters are dealt with in Clause 2 of the Bill. Clause 2(a) enables regulations to be made providing generally for licensing exemptions in appropriate circumstances. In the immediate term, this provision will enable a registration regime to be introduced by regulations for private trust companies, private trust companies being those trust companies that only deal with assets of parties within a defined family relationship and not third party assets as contemplated under the principal Law; and to enable the regulations to be made to better protect the status quo in relation to Sukuk structures, that is Islamic finance vehicles.

Madam Speaker, Clause 2 (b) and (c) provides for a measured expansion of permitted activities of a controlled subsidiary while still keeping the vehicle within the regulatory control via the parent and maintaining the low risk regulatory profile as before as a subsidiary will not be able to conduct any business that is not directly linked to the business of the parent trust company. Thus the primary commercial driver is the use of controlled subsidiaries for risk management purposes of the parent. It should be noted that where a controlled subsidiary seeks to be covered by the parent's fund administration license, an additional fee will be charged which will be provided for by an amendment to the Banks and Trust Companies Licence Application and Fees Regulation.

Madam Speaker, I would respectfully ask all honourable Members to support the Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2008, that is presently before this House.

Thank you.

I beg to move the second reading of a Bill shortly entitled The Trusts (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The motion is duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Yes, thank you, Madam Speaker, just a very brief contribution.

Madam Speaker, the Trusts (Amendment) Bill, 2008, makes a very small amendment to the existing principal Law, that is, the Trusts Law, as a companion to the regime for private trust companies to be introduced under the Banks and Trust Companies Law as the proposed to be amended Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Bill would seek to amend section 105(2) of the Trusts Law to enable private trust companies to act as trustees of the Special Trust Alternative Regime, also known as Star Trust, and also generically known as Purpose Trust. It is exactly the same obligations as other permitted trustees.

Madam Speaker, I respectfully ask all honourable Members to support the Bill before the House.

The Speaker: The motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable Second Elected Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, thanks Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, the Bill before the House seeks “to repeal and replace the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law (2007 Revision); to consolidate [and harmonise the various money laundering and confiscation regimes which presently exist as well as to enhance] the law relating to the confiscation of the proceeds of crime and the laws relating to Mutual Legal Assistance in criminal matters and for incidental and connected purposes.”

Madam Speaker, at present there are two main statutory regimes which deal with confiscation of proceeds of crime. There is one under the Misuse of Drugs Law and, of course, the related Misuse of Drugs (Drug Trafficking Offences) (Designated Countries) Order 1991. Those two together provide a regime for dealing with the proceeds of crime from drug offences and also contains provisions for assisting countries that are signatories to the 1988 Vienna Convention.

The second regime is the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law, which was first enacted in December 1996, and which deals with the proceeds of crime from non-drug indictable offences. And, Madam Speaker, for completeness may I just add that there is also the Terrorism Law which deals with proceeds from or intended for the use in the commission of terrorism offences.

Since the enactment of the PCCL, it has remained relatively unchanged with the exception of changes relating to the establishment and functions of the Financial Reporting Authority (FRA) set back in 2003, I think it was. Over time, however, it has become apparent that there is need for modernisation of this Law, including the need for harmonisation of its provisions with those of other related laws.

For example, the PCCL, which establishes the FRA, provides for suspicious activity reports to be received in respect of suspected proceeds of crime or suspected money laundering, not including drug offences; whereas the Misuse of Drugs Law, which was passed before the establishment of the Financial Reporting Authority does not provide for the reporting of suspicious activities relating to proceeds of drugs transactions.

And the IMF, in its review of the Cayman Islands in 2003, and which was published in 2005, identified a number of weaknesses in the Cayman Islands Anti Money-laundering Statutory Regimes and accordingly made certain core recommendations. These include the recommendation that the PCCL be modernised and modified to clarify disclosure by the FRA to foreign financial intelligence units in drug matters.

It also recommended that Cayman should consider harmonising the standard for reporting in drug trafficking and terrorist financing and other drug cases. Another recommendation was that the Cayman Islands should consider civil forfeiture scheme based on the UK Proceeds of Crime Act, 2002, subject of course to ensuring third party rights to property.

We all recall that similar recommendations were made by the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force in the more recent evaluation in 2007.

The current PCCL is modeled broadly on the UK Criminal Justice Act, 1980, in particular part 6, which itself has undergone a number of changes to date. So this Bill, the resulting product of it, with the exception of the harmonisation of the Cayman Islands law follows closely the provision of the UK Proceeds of Crime Act, 2002, and in some part tends to reflect some changes that were made in the UK by the Serious Organised Crime and Police Act, 2005.

The purpose and contents of the Bill are set out in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, and the Bill itself seems quite formidable. But I wish to remind all honourable Members that it contains provisions from the current Law. So this is not all new material.

Just to touch briefly, with leave of the House, on a couple of the provisions. Part 2 of the Bill deals with the contribution of the Financial Intelligence Unit which is called the Financial Reporting Authority and which also establishes the Anti-Money Laundering Steering Group. The provisions with respect to appointment, powers and functions remain unchanged in the present Law.

Of note is the clarification in Clause 4(2) of the Bill for an avenue for the FRA to request additional material for the purpose of amplifying or clarifying information which has been disclosed to it and for responding to overseas FRA requests.

Part III of the Bill deals with confiscation orders. Clause 15 sets out the circumstances in which confiscation orders under Part III of the legislation can be made. It says that these orders may be made in the Grand Court or the Summary Court, which is of itself a new development following a conviction. The confiscation procedures are now mandatory, that is, where the Court is asked to do so, or where the Court believes it is appropriate then it shall be done.

Clause 68 sets out in detail the criteria that govern whether or not a person has a criminal lifestyle and this is following on Clause 16 which deals with the issue of general criminal conduct and/or particular criminal conduct. The question of whether a person has a criminal lifestyle is essential to the operation of Part III of the Law because it determines whether the defendant is subject to confiscation of benefits from his particular criminal conduct or his general criminal conduct.

Madam Speaker, it is sort of difficult to put all of this in layman's language, but general criminal conduct means any criminal conduct of the defendant whenever the conduct occurred and whether or not it has ever formed the subject of a criminal prosecution. Whereas, a particular criminal conduct means the offence for which the defendant is convicted and any others that were taken into account for this sentence.

And the criminal lifestyle argument in the Law is based on the principle that an offender who gives the authorities reasonable grounds to believe that he is living off crime should be required to account for his assets and should have it confiscated to the extent he is unable to account for their lawful origin.

Madam Speaker, moving on very quickly, Clause 44 of the Bill provides that a Grand Court may grant restraining orders over property if certain conditions are satisfied and that such an order would by virtue of Clause 45 have the effect of freezing the property that would be liable to confiscation following the trial and the making of a confiscation order.

Madam Speaker, Clause 61 of the Bill provides the Summary Court with the new power to order any realisable property in the form of money in a bank or a building society account to be paid to the Clerk of the Courts in satisfaction of a confiscation order. The power, of course, is only available where a confiscation order has been made by the Court, the time to pay has been expired, the confiscation is being enforced by the Court and the money is subject to a restraint order.

Clause 65 provides for compensation to be paid to a person whose property has been affected by the enforcement of the confiscation order and which is largely based on the present legislation except that the provision has been extended to cover the situation where an investigation is started but proceedings are never brought. Under the legislation it would be possible for a restraining order to be made as soon as criminal investigation has been started and so on.

Therefore, compensation will in future be payable subject to criteria including the serious default test from the beginning of an investigation and not limited only to where proceedings have been commenced.

Madam Speaker, Clause 69 of the Bill defines Criminal Conduct as any conduct constituting an offence in the Islands or which was committed abroad but would constitute an offence if it was committed within the Cayman Islands and there would no longer be any restriction to type of offence. The Bill would therefore apply to both drug and non-drug offences, indictable offences, as well as Summary offences which generate proceeds of crime and therefore under the legislation the Grand Court would only need to consider whether the defendant has benefited from any conduct which would be contrary to the Criminal Law of the Cayman Islands.

Part IV of the Bill deals with Civil Recovery. This is a new and significant provision and came about, as I said, for a number of reasons including a recommendation from the IMF and the CFATF, but also from the need to modernise our own legislation as well to make it as contemporary as possible.

So, Part IV deals with Civil Recovery of the proceeds of unlawful conduct. And Clause 77 (1) provides that this Part of the legislation has two purposes. One is to enable the Attorney-General to bring civil proceedings in a Court to recover property that is or represents property obtained through unlawful conduct (that is, civil recovery). This is an entirely new right of action. The UK as well as the US experience has been that this single approach of confiscating assets through criminal prosecution is insufficient and woefully inadequate to deal with the sophisticated criminal who distances himself from the crime and, therefore, the civil procedures also needed to be utilised.

For what it is worth, Madam Speaker, it is important to note that "unlawful conduct" is defined in Clause 78 to be conduct which is "unlawful under the criminal law of the Islands" or would be, if it had occurred here. In tandem with the ability to make an application for civil recovery is an application that is to be made to the Grand Court for a property freezing order pending the outcome of those proceedings.

Clause 110, and following on, deals with the powers of search. "Clause 111 provides the safeguard that the search powers in Clause 110 may only be exercised where prior judicial authority has been obtained . . . If judicial approval is not obtained prior to a search [and, for example,], cash is either not seized or is released before the matter comes before a court, the constable or customs officer concerned must prepare a written report and submit it to an independent person appointed by the Governor."

"This report [is meant to deal with the details as to] why the constable or customs officer considered that he had the power to carry out a search and why it was not practicable to obtain judicial approval before the search itself was conducted.”

Part V of the Bill basically sets out what the existing provisions are in the current Law, that is, it sets out the offences of money laundering, concealing and disguising, entering into an arrangement which facilitates acquiring of illegal property which is criminal property. So it is really nothing new in that regard.

Part VIII deals with international cooperation. Clause 187 provides for a schedule similar to that under the present Law with respect to foreign proceedings and under the current legislation assistance in freezing property and enforcing overseas orders may only be granted to countries and territories which have been designated for that purpose. And there is some provision in 187 and the schedule now dispenses with a designation procedure in that respect.

Madam Speaker, in April 2007 Cabinet passed an amendment to section 21 of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law which empowers the Governor in Cabinet to make regulations prescribing measures to be taken to prevent the use of the financial assistance for the purposes of money laundering. And the definition of “money laundering” expands itself to include an act which constitutes certain offences under the Terrorism Law. That was an exercise in tying the provisions of the PCCL back to the Terrorism Law as the Terrorism Law was passed much later than the PCCL.

These offences relate to the soliciting of terrorist property, the use of property for the purposes of terrorism and arranging for property to be used for terrorist purposes and money laundering. Thus the Bill will expand the making of money laundering regulations to prevent the use of financial assistance for the purposes of financing terrorist activities. This was one of the issues that was picked up by these international review agencies when they looked at our money laundering and combating financing of terrorism framework.

Madam Speaker, just to say that the Government has provided the public with maximum opportunity to comment on this Bill. It has been a work in progress that has been going on for the better part of two years and just about all of the relevant stakeholders have been consulted and have made very invaluable input into the exercise—the accountants, lawyers, company managers, just about everybody. On behalf of Government, I would like to thank them for their invaluable input into the exercise.

Madam Speaker and Members should note that the intent of this proposed legislation is that the Cayman Islands will have a modern and harmonised money laundering regime which is robust and effective in identifying and confiscating the ill-gotten gains of criminals such that it becomes a deterrent to would-be money launderers and in accord with international standards and best practices. The Bill seeks to do just that. And when it is enacted into law it will further allow the Cayman Islands to say without fear of contradiction that our anti money-laundering and combating financing of terrorist regimes are as robust and generally if not entirely equivalent to just about all the major countries that are on the most recent EU White List.

Madam Speaker, I commend this Bill to honourable Members of this House. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] If not, does the Honourable Second Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Just to say that I appreciate the support from all honourable Members of this House. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled the Proceeds of Crime Bill, 2008, be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed. The Proceeds of Crime Bill, 2008 given a second reading.

Anti-Corruption Bill, 2008

The Deputy Clerk: The Anti-Corruption Bill, 2008, second reading.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, before I seek leave of the House in that regard, may I just put the House on notice that in respect of the Proceeds of Crime Bill, 2008, I intend to move certain committee stage amendments.

Madam Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled the Anti-Corruption Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable Second Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Yes, Madam Speaker, thank you.

This Bill seeks to give effect through the United Nations Convention Against Corruption (UNAC) and the OECD Convention on Combating Bribery of Foreign Public Officials in International Business Transactions and I might have mentioned before at some stage that this Bill, if enacted in its current form, is going to be a revolutionary piece of legislation and I urge all honourable Members of the House and the private sector to read it carefully and make sure that they understand the import of the Bill itself.

I will attempt, Madam Speaker, to highlight some of the more salient provisions of the Bill as quickly as possible.

The two conventions that I mentioned are two international instruments which are the real starting point in any debate about legislating for integrity in public life. The OECD Convention deals with the criminalisation of bribery by or of international foreign public officials. It criminalises acts of offering or giving bribes, but not of soliciting or receiving bribes and it covers only bribery aimed at public officials, not bribery involving private sector representatives or political party officials.

The UN Convention, on the other hand, is much wider than the OECD Convention. The UN Convention deals with the following: It deals with the prevention of corruption and it calls for the establishment by countries of measures for the prevention of corruption. This includes such measures as the establishment of an anti-corruption body, enhanced transparency in the financing of election campaigns and political parties, and that such measures must address both the public and private sectors. In short, it seeks to promote and strengthen measures to prevent and combat corruption more efficiently and effectively.

It also deals with the expectation that states' parties are required to establish criminal and other offences to cover a wide range of acts of corruption. This includes not only basic forms of corruption, such as bribery and the embezzlement of public funds, but also trading in influence and the concealment and laundering of proceeds of corruption.

It speaks to the issue of international cooperation as well, in that it seeks to promote, facilitate, and support international cooperation and technical assistance in the prevention of and fight against corruption including asset recovery.

So, Madam Speaker, the Convention binds state parties to render specific forms of mutual legal assistance in gathering and transferring evidence for use in court and to extradite offenders. And states are also called upon to undertake measures to support the tracing, freezing, seizure, and confiscation of proceeds of corruption. And it also contemplates measures under the Convention to deal with the prevention and detection of transfers of illicitly acquired assets.

Madam Speaker, at present the general corruption laws of the Cayman Islands are set out in the Penal Code (2007 Revision). And those provisions deal with corruption only by public officers and would therefore to that extent be inadequate for the purposes of implementing the UN Convention which calls for the criminalisation of corruption in the private sector as well.

There would also be deficient for purposes of implementing the OECD Convention as I mentioned earlier. This Bill also seeks to establish an Anti-Corruption Commission. In an earlier presentation I made in this House on this draft legislation, I noted the publication of an anti-corruption organisation, Transparency International, called Confronting Corruption. I mentioned then that the elements of a national integrity system in which Transparency International had noted that to operate successfully an anti-corruption agency must possess the following: It must have committed political backing at the highest levels of government; it must have adequate resources to undertake its mission; political and/or operational independence it must enjoy in order to investigate even the highest levels of Government. There must be adequate powers of access to documentation, and for the requesting of witnesses. There must be user-friendly laws including the criminalisation of illicit enrichment. And there must be leadership which is seen as being of the highest integrity.

It is my belief that this Bill creates an agency which satisfies all of the above criteria. It is proposed that the Commission will now comprise of the Commissioner of Police, as chair; the Auditor General, the Complaints Commissioner, and two members appointed by the Governor. The two members will be selected from the following categories of persons: retired judges of the Grand Court or the Court of Appeal, retired police officers, retired magistrates or justices of the peace, or retired attorneys-at-law.

It is contemplated that the Commission will have the necessary support staff to assist it with its work and it will be responsible for the administration of this legislation and will have the power among other things to receive and consider any report of alleged offences and to investigate such reports subject to the parameters of the legislation. But it will also be empowered to receive and, as permitted, request, analyse and disseminate any information concerning corruption offences or suspected offences.

Of course, Madam Speaker, for completeness, it is also contemplated that the Commission will be able to give mutual legal assistance to overseas anti-corruption authorities in their investigation of similar offences.

The Bill provides in Clause 6 that the Governor will have general oversight of the anti-corruption policy of the Government and will be responsible for overseeing and inspecting the work of the Commission. And the Bill provides that the Commission is mandated to provide annual reports on its activities.

Madam Speaker, when enacted into law, the Bill will widen the range of corruption offences and such offences will include bribery of foreign public officials (and that is to be found in Clause 22), bribery of public officers and Members of the Legislative Assembly, which includes Cabinet members (Clause 10), frauds on the Government (Clause 11 at page 28), deals with illegally subscribing to an election fund (Clause 12). It deals with breach of trust by public officers and conflict of interests offences (Clause 13). It deals with selling or purchasing public office (Clause 14). And I mentioned conflict of interest offences is in Clause 19. False claims by public officers (Clause 16), abuse of office (Clause 17), and issuing of false certificates by public officers, which is covered in Clause 18 of the Bill.

Madam Speaker, as will be seen in Clause 12 a person could conceivably commit an offence of illegally subscribing to an election fund where “ . . . in order to obtain or retain a contract with the Government, or as a term of any such contract, whether express or implied, he directly or indirectly subscribes or gives, or agrees to subscribe or give, to any person any loan, reward, advantage or other benefit- (a) for the purpose of promoting the election of a candidate or a class or party of candidates to the Legislative Assembly; or (b) with intent to influence or affect in any way the result of an election conducted for the purpose of electing persons to serve in the Legislative Assembly.” I mentioned earlier about conflict of interest. It is helpful to point out that the legislation in Clauses 19 and 20 also provide that: “19 (2) Where- (a) a public officer; (b) a member of the Legislative Assembly; or (c) a member of the family or an associate of either the public officer or the member of [Cabinet or] the Legislative Assembly, has a personal interest in a decision which a government entity is to take, [that] public officer or member of the Legislative Assembly shall forthwith disclose, in writing, to the government entity the nature of that personal interest.”

“(3) A public officer or member of [Cabinet or] the Legislative Assembly who fails to disclose [such] interest . . . and who votes or otherwise takes part in proceedings of the government entity relating to such interest [may have committed] an offence and [would be] liable on conviction on indictment to imprisonment for a term of [up to] five years.”

Madam Speaker, I mentioned earlier about offence of bribery of foreign public officers. That is in Clause 22. The Bill provides that a person commits such an offence where that person “ . . . in order to obtain or retain an advantage in the course of business, directly or indirectly promises, gives, offers or agrees to give or offer a loan, reward, advantage, or benefit of any kind to a foreign public officer for his benefit or for the benefit of another person or to any person for the benefit of a foreign public officer . . .” and it becomes an offence where it is given as a “ . . . consideration for an act or [omitting to do something] by the foreign public officer in connection with the performance [of his official] duties . . .” or it was given “ . . . to induce the foreign public officer to use his position to influence any acts or decisions of the foreign country or public international organisation for which the officer performs [his] duties or functions . . .”

It should be noted that a person is not guilty of an offence of bribing a foreign public officer if the loan or reward or the advantage or the benefit was a facili-tation payment. A facilitation payment is a payment which is permitted or required under the laws of the foreign country, or public international organisation for which the foreign public officer performs his duty, and was made to pay the reasonable expenses incurred in good faith in carrying out those functions, or for the promotion, demonstration or explanation of the person's products or services.

It should also be noted that the penalties under the legislation are quite high. Penalties range from imprisonment of 2 years to as high as 14 years.

The Bill noticeably expressly makes reference to Cabinet Ministers as distinct from Legislative Assembly Members. And this is to clarify in the public's mind that it is not just Legislative Assembly Members, but those who are also in Cabinet that are covered by the legislation.

The Bill also places a duty on a public officer and a Member of Cabinet or Legislative Assembly to report to the Commission or to a police officer that someone has offered him or her a bribe that another public officer or Member of Cabinet has solicited or accepted a bribe. Failure to disclose may be an offence which carried a penalty with a fine of $20,000 or imprisonment for 2 years.

The Bill, in Clause 37, seeks to protect informers and provides that, “37. (1) Where a person discloses to the Commission or to a constable information concerning proceeds or suspected proceeds of corruption offences the disclosure shall not be treated as a breach of any restriction upon the disclosure of information by any enactment or otherwise and shall not give rise to any civil liability.”

Madam Speaker, the draft Bill will extend the application of the PCCL (I just dealt with that revised one) to provide for the freezing, tracing, forfeiture, and return and the disposition of proceeds arising from corruption offences. And the Bill also makes it clear that a corruption offence is an offence to which an extradition law of these Islands will relate or will bite.

Finally, Madam Speaker, I wish to point out that the lifestyle of an accused person will be taken into account in criminal proceedings under the legislation. In other words, as Clause 26 provides, in the trial of an offence under the legislation, “26, Where, in proceedings for an offence under this Law, it is established that the accused (a) was maintaining a standard of living which was not commensurate with his emoluments or other income; (b) was in control of property to an extent which is disproportionate to his emoluments or other income; or (c) held property for which he, a member of his family or his associate, is unable to give a satisfactory account as to how he came into its ownership, possession, custody or control, that evidence shall be admissible to corroborate other evidence relating to the commission of the offence.”

It is not unusual to take account of such factors in these types of offence.

In other words, Madam Speaker, the mere lifestyle itself, the evidence of that is not an offence; but where there is other supporting evidence that there were corrupt offences and lifestyle issue becomes relevant, then evidence of the lifestyle will be admissible in evidence to support the other evidence of corrupt activities.

Madam Speaker, I have sought to cover all the requirements of the two Conventions as they relate to legislating for integrity in public life. There is a wide range of corruption offences and provisions for the establishment of the Anti-Corruption Commission. There is provision for the asset recovery; there is provision for extradition and mutual legal assistance. I am confident that this as I referred to it as a revolutionary piece of legislation will be a vital tool in our ongoing commitment to transparency, better governance and our ongoing commitment to partner with our international partners—other countries—in fighting international criminal activity and I commend the Bill to honourable Members of this House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If not, does the Honourable Second—Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I intend to be very brief indeed, I just want to thank the Second Official Member for bringing comprehensive legislation to this honourable House. He mentioned before that it was in the works; therefore I am happy today that it is comprehensive. As I said in the debate on a motion that I brought some months ago, that those persons in the community who continually point their fingers at Members of this House and accuse Members of this House, they themselves, Madam Speaker, will have to be frank and forthright about their business, whatever they do.

And so, Madam Speaker, I can readily accept this legislation that is before us and look forward to the committee stage where we can ask more questions in detail.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] If not, does the Honourable Second Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Thanks to all honourable Members of this House for their support of the Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that the Anti-Corruption Bill, 2008, be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it..

Agreed: The Anti-Corruption Bill, 2008, given a second reading.

Mutual Funds (Amendment) Bill, 2008

The Deputy Clerk: The Mutual Funds (Amendment) Bill, 2008, second reading.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to move the second reading of a Bill shortly entitled The Mutual Funds (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The motion has been duly moved and is open for debate, does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Yes, thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Bill before the House is a very short Bill designed in consultation with the private sector here in the Cayman Islands and the Monetary Authority to achieve two main objectives.

First, Clause 2 of the Bill ensures that Sukuk Structures, which are termed under the Bill “alternative financial instruments” remain outside of the definition of “equity interest” in the Mutual Funds Law, the principal Law, and so do not inadvertently be required to be registered as mutual funds under that Law since Sukuk Structures are not mutual funds. This is to ensure that we remain able to compete in the Islamic finance sector, an area in which Cayman has had some success to date.

Second, Clause 3 of the Bill returns the principal Law's section 16(1)(c) to its original scope so that it applies only to mutual funds administered in the Cayman Islands. It also enables administrators by an amendment to section 16(1)(d) of the principal Law to administer funds from foreign countries not specifically on the Authority's list of approved jurisdictions if the funds are in any event otherwise regulated by the Authority.

Madam Speaker, I therefore respectfully ask all honourable Members to support the Mutual Funds (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If not, does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker, just to once again thank all honourable Members for their support of the Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that The Mutual Funds (Amendment) Bill, 2008 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: The Mutual Funds (Amendment) Bill, 2008, given a second reading.

Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2008

The Deputy Clerk: The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2008, second reading.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable First Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Just some brief comments.

This Bill, entitled A Bill for a Law to Amend the Elections Law (2004 Revision) to Further Refine the Election Legislative Scheme of the Islands; and for Incidental and Connected Purposes, seeks to provide for mobile voting also known as advance polling.

“Clause 1 of the Bill provides the short title of the legislation.”

“Clause 2 amends section 2 to provide for [the] definition of “mobile station”. Clause 3 addresses the issue of mobile voting.”

Turning to Clause 3, which deals with mobile voting, this clause inserts new sections 49A and 49B will allow those who are physically challenged to for the first time in the Cayman Islands vote in the privacy of their homes, hospital bed or rest home, as if they were at a polling station. In essence, the polling station will be brought to them elector rather than the elector having to make his or her way to the designated district polling station.

With the introduction of mobile voting, physically challenged electors will also be assured that their ballot reaches the ballot box marked for the candidate or candidates of their choice. Whilst the Elections Office provides accommodation at district polling stations to accommodate physically challenged electors, this mode of voting is preferred as it removes the hassle associated with getting to a polling station and being processed in the conventional manner.

At a conventional polling station, any elector wishing assistance in marking his or her ballot paper may request it. Should that elector wish to have a friend attend to witness the marking of the ballot paper by the presiding officer, this will be allowed. Both parties will have to take the requisite oath.

The whole process of postal voting is both time consuming and quite onerous particularly at the count. The procedures for processing postal ballots at the count can take hours where large numbers have been received. By introducing mobile voting the time spent at the count can be reduced significantly.

Postal voting as shown in Clause 4 with the repeal and replacement of sections 50 and 51 will still be allowed to accommodate students and other electors who will be unable to go in person to a polling station due to his/her absence from the Cayman Islands for whatever reason. However, the number of applications to be treated as an absent elector voting by post will be reduced significantly by the introduction of mobile voting.

Mobile voting eliminates allegations of fraud and ensures enfranchisement of electors. Over 45 countries worldwide allow this practice, including the United Kingdom, Australia, Bermuda, Canada, and the Bahamas and Switzerland.

Clause 5 of the Bill “amends section 107 of the principal Law to enable the Governor in Cabinet, acting on the recommendation of the Supervisor of Elections, to make rules relating to the taking of votes at a mobile polling station.”

And finally, “Clause 6 amends the Third Schedule to provide for the insertion into the principal Law of an application form for use by a person seeking to be treated as an absent elector voting at a mobile polling station.”

These essentially are the provisions of the Bill that is in front of honourable Members and I commend this Bill to this honourable House.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If no other Member wishes . . . Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Elections Law (Amendment) Bill, 2008, seeks to replace the current postal ballot voting system for those approved as absentee voters with the use of mobile voting stations, except for absence due to travel.

Travel, I do not know whether that covers someone who is going off on holiday and will be away on Election Day, or whether that is just students who are overseas, or someone whose work takes them overseas and they are there because they have to work overseas. I can't think of any examples except the one that we have in London working there because her work takes her there.

So I hope at committee stage we can examine that area.

Madam Speaker, the provisions for absentee voting is to allow—as it was in the past and I believe should remain—for greater participation by the voting public into the decisions of the country. Where the Member said that it enfranchises the voters, I doubt that very much. But I am not going to take my good friend to any kind of task, for one Financial Secretary came here some years ago when he did not appreciate the budget that he was about to deliver he said, “Madam Speaker the Government asked me to bring this budget.” I believe I can justly say that for the Third Official Member—

The Speaker: First.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: —First Official Member, that is (sorry), that this is not his making.

As I said, Madam Speaker, the provision for absentee voting is to allow for greater participation by the voting public into the decisions of the country.

The Islands can boast of a healthy voter turnout. Better than most countries in the world except for those countries, some in the Commonwealth, which have mandatory voting.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I have the discretion to have a short deferment, but if you are going to speak for some length of time I need to ask the Leader of Government Business to suspend Standing Orders so we can go beyond the hour of 4.30.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I will come back tomorrow, Madam Speaker. When I asked the Leader earlier, he had a commitment at 5 o'clock. So I will sit down at this point.

The Speaker: But you will continue your debate tomorrow?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh yes.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move the adjournment of this honourable House and, as I did consult with you, we will resume tomorrow. Everyone can come and have lunch and we will begin at 2.00 tomorrow.

So I move the adjournment of this honourable House until 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon.

The Speaker: I will ask the Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town to say Prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

READINGS BY THE HONOURABLE
 SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
 AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have no messages or announcements.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
 MEMBERS AND MINISTERS
 OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I have received notice of statements from the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Constitutional Modernization—The way forward

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, the first statement is regarding the Constitutional Modernization, the way forward.

Since the publication of the Government's revised proposals for Constitutional Modernization on the 22 day of May this year, we have carefully monitored feedback from the general public and we have also paid attention to the objections raised by the Opposition to the Referendum being held next month. The issues and objections raised can be summarized as follows:

1. More time is needed to consider the matter of constitutional modernization.
2. That there remain concerns about the impact of a Bill of Rights on Cayman's culture and way of life.
3. People who wish to approve the final constitutional document, in particular the Bill of Rights chapter. Therefore the referendum should be held on the Draft Constitution and not on the revised proposals.
4. The thought expressed that July is a bad time for a poll to be held because many people would be away on vacation.
5. Concerns about a low turnout for a referendum being held now, and it might then be said that the result of the referendum would not be representative of the will of the people of the country.
6. Also it has been said by some that the referendum should be made to coincide with the general elections in May of next year.

Constitutional modernization is a matter of the greatest national importance. It is critical to the future of this country. It is not about what the Government wants or what the Opposition desires. Madam Speaker, this Government has always proceeded on this basis, and we continue to adhere to the view, that there must be general support by the electorate for constitutional change. And the electorate should not be pushed into a decision before it is ready to vote. Therefore, after careful consideration of the various issues and objections that I have just outlined, and in discussions with His Excellency the Governor, we have today announced a change in the Constitutional Modernization process. We have decided to defer the holding of the referendum until the conclusion of constitutional discussions with the United Kingdom Government and the production of a Draft Constitution.

We have asked the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, the arm of the United Kingdom Government which has responsibility for the Overseas Territories, to commence these discussions as soon as possible. They have indicated that they are willing to begin these discussions in September of this year. The objective is to have a Draft Constitution available for public discussion by the end of the year, or very early in January next year, with a view to a referendum being held on that Draft Constitution to coincide with the general elections on 20 May, next year. We expect that more than one round of discussions will be necessary on a matter of such complexity and importance.

I am happy to say that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has agreed that at least the first round of talks will take place here in Grand Cayman. The Cayman delegation will be made up of members of the Government and the Opposition. And we will also be proposing a number of representatives from non-governmental organisations, such as the Chamber of Commerce and the Cayman Ministers Association. That, Madam Speaker, is to ensure balance and full transparency of the process. I have today written to the Leader of the Opposition advising him of the foregoing.

Madam Speaker, despite the failure of the Opposition thus far to participate constructively in the Constitutional Modernization process—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: That is your point of view.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: —we are hopeful that they will now properly engage in the process and carry out their duty as Members of the Opposition. In particular, we hope that the Opposition will at last make clear what changes they would like to see in the Constitution, and then we can deal with our differences in a sensible and open fashion.

[inaudible interjection by the Leader of the Opposition]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: It is now almost six months since the Government first published its proposals for Constitutional Modernization, but to date the country is still waiting for the Opposition to state their position on what a new constitution should contain. All that the country has seen from them is a document which raises questions, but provides very little insight into their position on the important constitutional issues. The Opposition are now saying that they want to carry out their own public consultation process at the country's expense before expressing their views on what the Constitution should contain. This, Madam

Speaker, is simply a delaying tactic. We know that the Opposition have their own views on what the Constitution should contain and they had no hesitation in telling the country about them in 2004. They have had since January of this year to discuss with the public what they now have in mind. They have attended meetings convened by the Secretariat and they have called meetings of their own. At these meetings they could and should have put forward whatever they had in mind. I hope that they will now do so without further delay.

We also hope that the Opposition will be prepared to meet with the Government and the NGO representatives in advance of the September discussions with the FCO (Foreign and Commonwealth Office) so that we may understand their position on the issues and hopefully narrow the differences between us before we go to the table. Certainly, the public will be kept apprised of developments in this regard.

[inaudible interjection by the Leader of the Opposition]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Having stated the way forward, I need to remind you about what has really been going on.

In our 2005 Manifesto we said that any significant constitutional change should require the people's approval at a referendum. We were disagreeing strongly and fundamentally with the United Democratic Party Government's position, which was doing its best to have the Constitution changed without a referendum.

An Hon. Member: Yes!

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: There was a fundamental difference between us at the last election and there still is. We stand for democracy—real democracy. The Government should serve the people. We advocate a constitution that will ensure that in future the elected representatives of the people will not be able to take the same crude and cynical approach as the United Democratic Party did.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: My God.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: As we said in our 2005 Manifesto, we need more checks and balances on the powers of the Government. We need freedom of information and the constitutional guarantee that it will not be taken away from us. The people should have a constitutional right to demand a referendum on any issue. And the Constitution should itself say that any significant further change to that Constitution would require the people's approval at a referendum.

Madam Speaker, voters at the 2005 General Election rejected the UDP approach to Government and expressed their desire for real democracy.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh my!

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: So, the new Government set about the process of obtaining a constitution that would secure true democracy. It was obvious from the outset that this was not going to be simple or easy. The Constitution is complicated. Not many people have enough experience of the Constitution and of Government to form unaided their own opinion on what exactly the new constitution should say. People naturally look to their political leaders for explanation and guidance. Furthermore, though everyone knows that the Constitution is important, not everyone has the time and inclination to get fully involved in its details.

Referendums are not easy either. A basic question which we and our advisors considered at the planning stage was whether we should go to the people at the beginning or at the end of the process. We decided that we ought to do so at the beginning. In other words, we should have public consultation and a referendum before drawing up the final proposals and giving them to London.

The alternative was to draw up proposals along the general lines indicated in our Manifesto, invite London to prepare a draft on that basis and then, at the end of the process have public consultation and a referendum to prove London's draft. We felt that Caymanians should have the opportunity to make their comments and suggestions at the beginning of the process so that they could influence the proposals given to London. Under the alternative approach Caymanians would only have a choice at the end of the process and would then be under some pressure to approve London's draft even if it contained features that they did not like, knowing that if the draft was rejected, then we would be back to square one.

Another reason for our decision was that it would put pressure on London to agree to our proposals if they were seen to be the result of a process of public consultation and were endorsed by a strong vote in a referendum. And there was good reason to think that we could develop in the consultation process a set of proposals that the whole country would feel comfortable with and want to endorse. The possibility of a second referendum to approve London's draft was not ruled out, but we indicated that it would only be needed if the draft was inconsistent with the proposals approved by voters at the first referendum.

The public consultation process has achieved most of its goals. It kicked off in January when we put on the table for discussion a set of outline proposals and explanatory notes. Since then there has been an unprecedented programme of meetings, broadcasts and discussions arranged by the Secretariat, and a number of constructive meetings and events organised by others. All Caymanians have been given the opportunity to hear the proposals explained and discussed, and to express their views and concerns. Many individuals and bodies have done so. The proposals have been revised accordingly, especially as regards the proposed Bill of Rights.

The revised proposals also take into account the few specific proposals that the Opposition have made. In these respects the consultation process has been successful and valuable. I am sure that most Caymanians see the Opposition's campaign for what it is. You only have to compare what the Opposition are saying now with what they said and did when they were the Government. You only have to think about their slogan: "If you don't know", they say, "vote No." It is clear enough what they are trying to do, but it is nonetheless disquieting and confusing for voters. People are not entirely sure that they can disregard the scary things that the Opposition and their friends have been saying.

Madam Speaker, I am not criticizing the Opposition for disagreeing with the proposals we put on the table. On the contrary—

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Oh?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: —we wanted them to do so and we knew that there were some points of difference. We wanted the public to see what its political leaders agreed on and what they disagreed on. Public discussion could then focus on the points of disagreement and we could try to resolve them in a sensible way.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Oh God.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Failing compromise, we intended then to put the contentious points to the Referendum. But it has turned out that the Opposition are more interested in political warfare and undermining the process than in getting the best Constitution for the country. So, they have ducked and weaved to avoid saying what they think the Constitution should say.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Boy, you're not ashamed of yourself to talk about [inaudible] . . .

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Confronted by the record of their own proposals made to the Legislative Assembly in 2004, they claim to have had second thoughts; but we are all still waiting to hear what they might be.

Voters are now in the difficult position of needing to make an important decision on complicated constitutional proposals without having any real understanding of what the objectors are objecting to, or why; and without knowing what the objectors proposed. The indications are that under these circumstances voter turnout at the referendum is likely to be low, especially as many voters are currently and understandably more concerned with immediate questions, such as, the cost of living.

If we went ahead now with the referendum, Madam Speaker, and there was a low turnout, the referendum result would make little or no impression in London and it would not deter the Opposition's rep-representatives at the discussions in London from pressing for something different. There would be a strong probability that we would need to hold a second referendum to make the final decisions. In other words, a referendum at this stage would be a waste of time and money if we did not get a good turnout, and voters cannot be compelled to vote before they are ready to do so.

This is why we are asking London to commence the constitutional discussions as soon as possible. We will put forward the revised proposals and emphasize that they were arrived at after extensive public consultation. The Opposition representatives at the discussions will, we hope, feel constrained at last to voice and express their objections. This should enable the process to move forward in a sensible way.

When London has drafted the new constitution there will need to be a further period of public consultation leading to the referendum.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh boy!

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not happy that this change of plan has become necessary, Madam Speaker—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Not happy at all . . . [Inaudible comments continue]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: —but I am sure that it is now the best way forward. As in all things, Government needs to be firm in its objectives, but flexible in its methods. The objective is to get the Constitution that the country wants. There is no change on that and we are determined to get it done.

I have no doubt that we were right to start with the public consultation. This has been very worthwhile and the expense fully justified, though, obviously, it would have been better if the Opposition had participated in a responsible way and had not conducted its campaign of scaremongering and confusion.

[Inaudible interjection by the Leader of the Opposition]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: A referendum now, before we talk to London, would be best for the country if the country were ready to vote. But, Madam Speaker, thanks in large part to the Opposition, it seems that the country may not yet be ready and a referendum with a low turnout would be a waste of time and money. So, we need to change the order of events and get started on the talks with London. This will tell the country what London thinks about the revised proposals—

The Speaker: Honourable Members, could we, please . . .

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I hope you give me my chance.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: —and it will give the Opposition their final opportunity to explain what they think the Constitution should say.

We will keep the country informed. When the talks are finished and London produces the Draft Constitution that it is willing to give us, the Draft will be published and there will be a final period for public discussion before the voters are asked to make their decision at a referendum.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yep!

Term Limits – Immigration

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, the second statement is an update on term limits.

In 2004, Madam Speaker, the previous government, with the unanimous support of the Legislative Assembly, introduced a new approach to managing migration. For the first time limitations were placed on the length of time that a foreign worker may remain in the Islands. At the same time the new policy provided a gateway to permanent residence and ultimately the right to be Caymanian for those workers who were considered ‘key’ to a company or business. There were also provisions in the law to deal with persons who had been living in the Islands prior to the introduction of the term limit policy.

This change in policy was necessitated to address a situation which had come about over many years of inaction where large numbers of foreign workers had been able to reside here for many years on work permits and who had acquired a legitimate expectation of being allowed to reside here permanently.

When the Government introduced a number of amendments to the immigration legislation in 2006, I reminded the House of the consequences of allowing this problem to continue, and the critical importance of the term limit policy. I quote: “. . . the Government, after the most careful consideration, has concluded that the choice for Cayman is stark. Either we retain a system designed to reduce the number of people who are able to stay here indefinitely and become part of the permanent population—with all the attendant rights and privileges that must go hand-in-hand with long-term tenure—or we concede that in ten years, or perhaps less, the control of the destiny of these three beloved Cayman Islands will be vested in persons who were not [born here]. For this Government and, we believe, for the vast majority of Caymanians, the latter result is [wholly undesirable and unacceptable].” [2006/7 Official Hansard Report page 284]

Although the introduction of a term limit policy had national support for almost ten years prior to its introduction, and it had been recognized by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office that our immigration dilemma stemmed from the lack of a policy regarding work permits, this change and approach gave rise to considerable debate at the time. The debate continues today as to the true effects of the term limit policy.

Critics held that it would negatively impact business, that it would force businesses to move elsewhere, and that there would be a brain drain. Our own assessments and data suggest otherwise, however, and, in fact, point to the term limit policy achieving its goal—namely, to reduce the number of persons who qualify for permanent residence while at the same time allowing personnel who are key to a company's operations to be able to remain longer and become eligible to apply for permanent residence.

Statistics made available by the Immigration Department indicate that the term limit policy has not resulted in an exodus of businesses or a brain drain of professionals. In fact, Madam Speaker, the statistics show that quite the opposite has occurred.

Since the introduction of the term limit policy in 2004, the number of work permits issued to persons employed in professional occupations has increased from 2,009 to 2,865, which is an increase of some 42.6 per cent. I should clarify that you may recently have heard the Chief Immigration Officer refer to an increase of 49 per cent. The reason for that difference is that his figure included government employees whilst the figure I have just stated, does not.

With respect to accountants alone, the number of work permits in effect have increased from 365 to 709 in the same period, which is an increase of 94 per cent. With respect to lawyers there has been an increase from 189 to 291 since 2004. And in the case of professional managers, there has been an increase from 603 to 745 in the same period.

The key employee mechanism, which paves a way to long term residency, or which was doubted by many, is also working effectively. Since the introduction of the key employee provision in 2004 the Business Staffing Plan Board has approved 79 per cent of its applications. Key employee status has been granted not only to professionals but also to lower end workers in some cases.

To give some examples of the range of occupations in which employees have been granted key employee status, I want to cite the following: dive instructor, carpenter, executive chef, financial controller, teacher, pharmacist, dentist, bartender, baker and domestic helper. You will see that the range covers all of our key industries. This recognises that the critical issue is the importance of the worker to the particular business or employer, rather than the fact that they are, or are not, a professional.

I mentioned earlier that the change in policy in 2004 introduced a gateway to permanent residence for those who reached year 8 via the key employee mechanism. But it was also recognised that there should be special arrangements for those persons who had been living here for many years prior to this change of policy. To this effect, the legislative changes included transitional provisions that gave those persons the opportunity to reach year 8 and become eligible to apply for permanent residence.

Between 2004 and 2007, 3,788 applications for permanent residence were received. This accounted largely for persons who had been resident here for long periods prior to the change in the law and who fell into the transitional provisions. Since then, there have been only 162 applications in 2008. This points as it was intended to, to the fact that the term limit policy is now restricting the number of persons who are becoming eligible to apply for permanent residence each year.

As you are aware, Madam Speaker, the current immigration policy creates a graduated system of rights leading ultimately to the grant of the right to be Caymanian. You will have heard the Chief Immigration Officer, in this honourable House recently, say that since this Government has been in power the right to be Caymanian has been granted to 1,303 persons. This statistic can be broken down to 669 persons being granted the right to be Caymanian on the grounds of marriage; 383 on the basis of being the child of a Caymanian; 198 on the grounds of descent; 39 on the grounds of naturalization and 14 on the basis of being a surviving spouse of a Caymanian. It cannot be said, therefore, that this Government is not committed to giving complete security of tenure to those persons who are deserving, either as a result of a close Caymanian connection, or to those who have progressed through the graduated system of rights set out in the term limit provisions of the Immigration Law.

In light of these factors, Madam Speaker, the Government firmly believes that the term limit policy is critical for the continued prosperity of the Cayman Islands. We are also satisfied that the predicted negative ramifications have not materialized. At the same time, however, we acknowledge that the term limit policy cannot please everyone. We will continue to engage in consultation with industry partners to identify improvements or to address particular concerns, but at the end of the day we remain committed to the goal of protecting the rights of Caymanians whilst at the same time building for a continued economic prosperity for future generations.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Motion for the Leader of Opposition to make a Statement

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I have made you aware—because of the nature of the statement on the referendum and the way forward, and because it is so important for the country that I be given an opportunity to make a short statement also.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I have made my ruling and I have told you that there is no provision in these Standing Orders for the Leader of the Opposition to make a statement in answer to a Minister's statement.

Standing Order 88: yes, we do use the orders of the Commons House of Parliament of Great Britain, but they must not be inconsistent with the Standing Orders of our Parliament. Standing Order 14 gives us the orders of the day and we have statements by Members of Government. Standing Order 30 allows a Minister to make a statement and Members, at the discretion of the Presiding Officer, may ask short questions for clarification, and that is my ruling.

If there is any Member who wishes to ask a short question for clarification I will entertain that at this time.

Hon. W. McKeewa Bush: Madam Speaker, therefore, since I am prohibited from making even a personal statement, I will draw your attention to Standing Order 24 (9) which says that: "The following motions may be made without notice— (h) arising out of any item of business made immediately after that item is disposed of and before the next item is entered upon."

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I have made my ruling as the Speaker of this House. If you are going to move a motion to be debated—Would you sit down please?—that the leave of this House be granted for that motion to be brought, well then, you can move that motion. We can debate that that motion be brought.

Hon. W. McKeewa Bush: Madam Speaker, under Standing Order 24 (9) (h) I move that, at this point, I, the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, be allowed to make a short statement related to the statement just completed by the Leader of Government Business, which relates to the holding of a referendum and the way forward.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House approves the Honourable Leader of the Opposition—

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Sorry—making a short statement in reply to the statement made by the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. W. McKeewa Bush: Madam Speaker, before Members vote I certainly have the opportunity to move my reason.

The Speaker: I am asking to move the Standing Order to allow this House . . . because there is no Standing Order allowing a statement by the Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeewa Bush: Madam Speaker, I draw your attention to a Standing Order that allows me to make a motion and to debate and make my statement. And that is the motion that is before the House. The reason why I have done that is because I cannot make a personal statement and I think after what the Member has said I certainly should be given the right to make a short statement.

However, that is not possible as you have said, therefore, I move (under this relevant Standing Order) to make that motion.

Now, Madam Speaker, there is to be no suspension of Standing Orders. I'm not asking for suspension of Standing Orders. Our Standing Orders give a Member the right before any other item of business is entered upon to move a motion, and I have done that. And I can tell you, Madam Speaker, my statement is going to be brief. But I think in a democracy, such as we propose to have, I should have that opportunity.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, the Standing Order that you are quoting says, "The following motions may be made without notice— (h) arising out of any item of business made immediately after that item is disposed of and before the next item is entered upon." It says, ". . . immediately after that item is disposed of and before the next item is entered upon."

May I hear your motion please? And I am asking you not to make a statement. I am asking you please to move a motion.

Hon. W. McKeewa Bush: Madam Speaker, I have moved a motion. That motion reads, again, since I need to do so—that I move that, at this point, I, the Leader of Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, be allowed to make a short statement related to the statement just completed by the Leader of Government Business, which relates to the holding of a referendum and the way forward.

Madam Speaker, the motion was moved and seconded. Can I speak to what I am moving?

The Speaker: Yes, Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeewa Bush: Madam Speaker, it is important that I be given an opportunity to, as it is, put on record the Opposition's views at this time in relation to what has just been said.

Firstly, if it was just purely based on the referendum, fine, I would wait, go to Radio Cayman, the newspapers and the television station. However, the Member strayed far from what would have been that normal statement to make political attacks. And, Madam Speaker, to give wrong information. But, of course, to lay blame where he chose without accepting blame himself, which is his long suit. I believe that it would be good to just have my point of view on the Constitution, the referendum, as he has spoken.

So, Madam Speaker, I recognise that I do not have the Members to carry the vote and I recognise too that the Honourable Speaker of this House is not going to allow me to do so any further. So, I will sit down.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, you have a right to move your motion that you be allowed to debate and let the House make the decision, not me.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I saw you come to the microphone so I was expecting that you were going to stop me.

Madam Speaker, the PPM Administration today deemed the effort of the Opposition during the Constitutional Modernization process as hypocritical. They deemed it scaremongering; misinformation, he said, without giving any evidence of any such misinformation. That's making an accusation, Madam Speaker, which is not right in this honourable House.

It is highly unfortunate that Government launched such a venomous attack on the Opposition rather than simply saying the way forward and accepting the failure of their process as being the genuine expression.

Madam Speaker, I am not going to be intimidated by the Speaker, and I see your positioning while people listening to me cannot. I am not going to be.

An Hon. Member: Hush!

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: The Government—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition—

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: —has now recognized—

The Speaker: Excuse me.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Yes.

The Speaker: Would you please move a motion?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I did that.

The Speaker: Well, will you speak to the motion?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I am doing that also, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: And stop attacking the Chair.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, you see I know that the Chair would like people to believe that I am attacking her because they can't see you manoeuvring in this House. But I see it!

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, the Government has now recognized that what we have been saying from the start—the people of this country do not support the proposals being advanced by the Government. And if the referendum was to take place, it would have clearly demonstrated the will of the people through a resounding—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition—

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: —No vote on the proposed—

The Speaker: —please!

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: —Constitution.

The Speaker: That is the statement that I told you I could not accept.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: And that is the statement that I am going to debate—

The Speaker: Could I have a resolution for a motion?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I gave you the resolution, Madam Speaker. I am speaking to the resolution.

The Speaker: That you be given the opportunity to make a statement?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Yes.

The Speaker: But you are making a statement.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Well that's the resolution,

The Speaker: The resolution is for you to be able to make a statement?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: That's the resolution, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: That's not the resolution.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Anyway, Madam Speaker, as I said, I have . . . I [knew] that I would be harassed—

An Hon. Member: Sit down.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: —as I am being because I can't make a statement.

An Hon. Member: Sit down.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I will not sit down! The bunch of you need to be good leaders.

[inaudible interjection]

An Hon. Member: Sit down! Sit down!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I'm not scared of you, don't worry about that. I will have a chance to reply also, so let's see what the bunch of you are going to say.

An Hon. Member: Sit down!

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I will stop, Madam Speaker, because you told me to stop.

The Speaker: The question is that the Honourable Leader of the Opposition be allowed to make a statement in reply to the statement by the Honourable Leader of Government Business. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes and Noes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, can I have—

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: That's it. The Ayes have it.

[inaudible interjections]

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: She said the Ayes have it.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, the Ayes have it. I agree.

The Speaker: The Noes have it. I'm sorry.

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, can I have a division?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Arden, stop carrying on your foolish ways!

Division No. 1/08-09

Ayes: 3

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush

SECOND READING

Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2008

(continuation of debate thereon)

The Speaker: The Honourable Leader of the Opposition continuing his debate on the Elections Amendment Bill 2008.

[inaudible interjection]

An Hon. Member: [Where is it?]

The Speaker: It is on mine.

We are into the Second Reading, and the Honourable Leader of the Opposition was speaking when we took the adjournment yesterday. That's why I said he is continuing his contribution to the Second Reading.

[inaudible interjections]

The Speaker: Maybe I used the wrong word—continuing his contribution to the Second Reading of the Elections [(Amendment) Bill].

Honourable Leader of the Opposition, were you not speaking yesterday and [you] said that you would continue today?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I was speaking yesterday and I would have loved to speak a bit longer earlier too, but it is all right.

[laughter]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I think what the Deputy Speaker is drawing attention to is that usually on the Order Paper it would say, "the Member continuing" but that is not there. Madam Speaker, let's continue before I get stopped. May I?

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I called upon you to continue.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, yesterday I said when we took the adjournment that our system of voting over the years has been a good one, that it has been better than most countries in the world, particularly in the Commonwealth except for those countries which have mandatory voting. And I went on to point out that in the last general election the voter turnout was 80 per cent and of the 10,000-plus voters only 859 voted by postal ballot; less than 10 per cent.

Madam Speaker, the current system of voting has proved to be effective at maximizing the participation of Caymanians in choosing their representatives. And I noted that the Mover said this was going to enfranchise voters. But, as I said, I recognise that this is not the Mover's Bill; that this is Government policy and he might have (and I would not advise him to do so) to say what one Financial Secretary said some years ago which was, "Madam Speaker, in moving the budget, the Government asked me to bring this budget." But I would not advise him to do that. I do not believe that this is enfranchising voters.

Madam Speaker, over the years every time there is an election somebody loses, of course, and makes accusations here and there. And that has been from processes over the many many years we have been holding elections. Some have challenged the integrity of the postal ballot system. It is correct that any system of voting outside of the designated voting stations have some challenges in it to preserve the integrity and confidentiality of the vote.

I find that the election office has formulated a system for postal ballots that is sound and secure. It got better and better over the years after various amendments to the Bill.

Madam Speaker, the Bill before the House proposes that this system be partially eliminated and replaced by carrying the voting station to the individual. Only those individuals who will be off island at the time of the general election will be allowed to vote by postal ballot. That is still something I am waiting for to be cleared up. And, as I said, when we get to Committee, or in his reply the Honourable mover, the Chief Secretary, will do that. I did speak to him earlier and I believe he said that section 49 (8) is going to deal with that.

So, I wait to have that formula on the floor, but maybe I have been misled about this. Not by him, Madam Speaker, but by when I misread it, so I should not have said 'misled', I should have said 'when I read it'.

The Bill before the House, Madam Speaker, proposes that this system we have be partially eliminated and replaced by carrying the voting station to the individual. Only those people at home will get the mobile station. Over the years there has been only limited concern over the issue of postal ballots, and I would urge Government to work on ways of improving the system rather than throwing out the baby with the bath water.

The proposed mobile voting has many serious limitations, not the least (from my standpoint) being cost and the administrative nightmare of administering it. Additionally, it will increase legitimate fears of the voters over the secrecy of their vote.

Madam Speaker, I know some will say that when you send out a postal ballot you do not know who that person has marking it. The fact is that that person gets the ballot and, if that person gets the ballot and they cannot do it themselves, they chose someone that they know and feel they can trust. And I know because my own mother is in a wheelchair and cannot get to the polls, but she is going to do her own voting. Naturally, Madam Speaker, she will vote for who she wants. There is no pressure on her to vote for anyone else. Of course, I expect her to vote for me and anyone with me. But the foundation is that if they need someone to help them they will choose that person.

We all know how important the preservation of a secret vote is in the Cayman Islands, being so small and everyone knowing everyone. This system that is proposed could ultimately result in a reduction in participation and consequently dilute the democracy in the process.

Madam Speaker, let us strive to preserve the integrity of the voting system while ensuring maximum participation of voters. The proposed Bill, I believe threatened both of these components of an effective voting system. Many Caymanians who traditionally pride themselves on their ability to continue to participate in the direction of their country despite their limitations to physically attend the voting stations, I believe, will not be receptive and trusting of a system that involves elections officers and numerous agents—who would be strangers visiting their private homes and recording their vote in a manner that will make the particular ballot identifiable.

And this is the problem I have with it. It would be identifiable because there is a ballot number and when the ballot is called and read at the polling station, as it would have to be, that number would be recognised. All of the persons sitting in that room . . . the ballots can be shown and are identifiable when the Government's agent (I can't remember the terminology . . . anyway the person who is calling—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: But everyone, but this in particular, we are dealing with. We are not dealing with anyone now.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: You get up and debate behind me and do what you usually do.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yeah, you wait. That's all you could say. And if you could really harm me I would lose weight. Look at me, I can't lose any weight.

[inaudible interjection]

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, please allow the Honourable Leader of the Opposition to continue his debate.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I understand their pain today, Madam Speaker. I understand their frustration. It is all right. Thank you for your protection.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes.

And so, Madam Speaker, that agent will have to go to ensure because every candidate will want to send an agent and nobody is just going to rely on the Government's agent to go into anyone's home to mark a ballot. We do not know who is going to be who and who is going to be appointed. So, every agent is going to want to send an agent to that home to make sure the right thing happens.

I do not agree with this, Madam Speaker. If we find that there are problems with the way it is handled—and I believe that the way it is handled is much better than the way it is being proposed. I believe because of how—and this is mostly our elderly people—this will reduce the participation and for those who do participate it will increase the grounds for questioning the secrecy and integrity of the system.

Madam Speaker, we must also consider the cost and administrative burden of the system and what is the justification for it—with relatively little legitimate claims, if any, against the current system. As I said, we heard over the years people saying things, but losers after an election will try to make a case if they can. But we have not had any big problems with it. Those that we found over the years have been corrected over the years to where, I think, pretty well in a state that no tampering can take place with it. It is my view that the current system . . . as I said, may be it can be improved upon, but not in a manner that is called for in this Bill.

Firstly and foremost, for instance, the residents of Little Cayman are deserving of the establishment of a voting station on the Island. This would reduce the need for the residents of this Island to either travel to Cayman Brac to vote or to vote by postal ballot. This is easily implemented and would not cost a lot.

Secondly, Madam Speaker, the design of the ballots, I believe, should be made bigger with bigger and bolder lettering to allow for those with vision impairment to read the ballot.

Thirdly, where a mobile voting station could be set up at the retirement homes and hospitals on the Islands where there is a large congregation of potential absentee voters, I believe that we could have a hybrid of the two systems. I believe that it would be manageable and could be better controlled having multiple voters in the same location. It would certainly reduce the concerns over single voter's ballots being identifiable and voting choices known—because that is what is going to happen—while allowing those who cannot attend the designated voting stations because they are geriatric at home to vote by postal ballots.

The Bill before the House, I believe takes the Islands in a dynamically opposite direction from the global trend. Countries such as the United States are looking for less restrictive methods of voting to increase participation. They are even accepting text message voting in some states; internet voting in others, and, Madam Speaker, postal voting continues internationally. And so without tangible justification for abandoning a system that has not failed us, I am not able to support the Bill as it is currently presented.

Madam Speaker, it was brought here, I believe, by way of motion before. And so I expect that those on the opposite side are going to do their will. But that does not stop me from believing that it is the wrong thing to do. We are small enough to improve the system and to continue it being a good one as is.

Madam Speaker, if anything, one thing that could be looked at is [the time] we send off postal ballots. [We should try to get them and send them as early as possible] so that we can get them back in time. I know that has been some problem before. And so, Madam Speaker, I do not believe that this is good democracy. I also do not believe that it is going to help the system, in particular, our elderly—who are fussy about voting [and] not going to want to see loads of agents and strange people come to their doors and give them a piece of paper and where they can't help themselves they are going to have to help them. Strangers! I do not believe that that is right.

So I await to hear further from the 'gods' now why this will make us better.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Training, Employment, Youth and Sports.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, I regret to say that I was not here yesterday afternoon and, therefore, I did not have the benefit of the Leader of the Opposition's observations in relation to this important Bill, which proposes an amendment to the Elections Law to allow for mobile polling stations to be established and for advance voting to occur in the event of a general election; by-election, or indeed, in the case of a referendum. But, Madam Speaker, unless there was some substance in what he said yesterday evening, which I did not have the benefit of—and I am being told by my colleagues that there was at least as little yesterday as there was today—I am at a loss as to the basis for his, and I presume the Opposition's, objection to this very logical, sensible and progressive provision which will improve the polling process.

[It will] increase participation, and increase and improve secrecy. It will also reduce the possibility of tampering and of fraud in the event of elections.

I have stood successfully in two elections, Madam Speaker. I have been around the process since I was a boy. My father was the returning officer on a number of occasions in years past, and I have always been around politics and the system of elections. I have never known (since I have come to knowledge) of one election where there were not allegations of 'shenanigans' (to use the Leader of the Opposition's favourite word) in the case of postal voting.

Madam Speaker, there have been allegations of persons who are dead voting in advance of the elections through postal voting. And I can tell you from personal experience which I had in 2000, that it is very possible to identify who the voter is if you know enough about the particular situation using postal voting alone.

There was an old lady in George Town who I knew very, very well. She worked for us for many, many, many years and she called me and said that she wanted to vote but she was then in her late 90s. So, we ensured that whatever arrangements had to be made for her to be able to vote by postal ballot were made available to her, and, indeed, she voted. She died a few days before election day. That would not have invalidated the vote by any means. But I recall sitting up at the Red Bay Primary School and when the postal ballots were being counted, I knew which ballot was hers. I knew which ballot was hers because of the witnesses to the vote and because I know who lived in the house. So, there is absolutely no substance to the argument that reducing the occasions for the use of the postal ballot and that advance voting is somehow going to make the system less secret.

Madam Speaker, that is not the case and if anyone ought to know the possibilities in relation to shenanigans with postal voting, it ought to be the Leader of the Opposition because he has been around this process for at least 28 years.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thirty-six.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thirty-six he says. So, he knows full well what can happen in the case of postal voting.

Now, Madam Speaker, this process that is proposed is going to be introduced. The process of mobile voting is not throwing out the baby with the bath water, as the Leader of the Opposition has asserted. This is an additional aide that is being provided because the process of postal balloting is still very much available. Nothing that is being proposed in this piece of legislation in any way undermines or prevents that process from being used. But what is being proposed is simpler, more straightforward, a system which improves secrecy and accessibility to the polls; avoids or limits the possibility for fraud, shenanigans, interference by candidates and others in the process.

Now, what possible legitimate objection can the Opposition have to this provision? And it is not a new objection. This was proposed by the elections office years ago. It actually came down to this House—I can't remember whether there was a bill or a white paper because it is five years ago. But the Leader of the Opposition refused to allow the bill to proceed on that basis, and I moved a motion on the Floor of this House (seconded by my colleague, the Elected Member for East End now, the Minister for Communications and Works) for advance polling to be part of the bill, and the Leader of the Opposition and his UDP Government killed it then, but they won't kill it this evening. That is for sure.

But, Madam Speaker, anyone who has been around the process—and we really have to applaud the patience of the supervisor of elections and his team who have to bear with the process of postal ballots and the voting. Madam Speaker, I am trying to find the pages—because I have to use the plural—that relate to the operation of the issue and receipt of postal ballots and the counting of those ballots in the Elections Law. It runs for one, two, three, four, five, six, seven full pages. It takes hours, Madam Speaker—hours!—to count the postal ballots, because of the particularity that has to be observed in relation to each and every step of that process. And at the end of the process it is still possible, as I explained earlier, to identify who voted.

And so, Madam Speaker, as I say, it remains to be seen . . . and I certainly don't want to cast aspersions but it leaves me with some suspicion as to the motive of the Leader of the Opposition in seeking to prevent this provision from coming into effect. All of the necessary protections that one could want, all of the necessary protections that are available in the main stream process of voting are provided for in the case of advance polling, right down, Madam Speaker, to each and every candidate being entitled to have an agent present when the vote is being cast.

So, Madam Speaker, I really hate to think that this could be considered something that is somehow undermining the democratic process, is somehow opening the process to fraud or tampering by anyone when that is not the case.

What is being done here, Madam Speaker, will reduce the number of postal ballots that are issued, reduce the length of time it takes to count the ballots when the poll is over; will make accessible to more people without the complicated process of having to apply for and receive a postal ballot, have it marked, witnessed, have it sent back and make sure you get it back in time before the election is held and the poll is required. What this is about, Madam Speaker, is more democracy because we are making the process available to more people. It is increasing secrecy, reducing the possibility of tampering and potential for fraud; and it is generally making the whole system more convenient for those who have to utilize and operate it.

And so, Madam Speaker, for the life of me I cannot understand what the possible objection to this is. I can't even say because the Government brought it. I understand it is a more fundamental issue with the Leader of the Opposition because even when he was in government and the team proposed it to him and it came here, he opposed it then. So, he obviously has a fundamental, but yet a properly unarticulated concern about why we should have mobile voting and thereby reduce the opportunities for postal balloting.

Perhaps, Madam Speaker, in the fullness of time it will become apparent and his reasons for objecting to this will become clear. And so, Madam Speaker, for those reasons I give this Bill my full support and I urge my colleagues on both sides of this House to support what is a progressive, important, useful democratic proposal to improve our system of elections.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, thank you very much.

Madam Speaker, I would like to say thanks to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and the Honourable Minister for Education for their comments. I will not comment on the political exchange. It would not be advisable for me to do so. However, Madam Speaker, I would like to make two points.

Madam Speaker, there is a Committee stage amendment that has been circulated, and I trust that by now honourable Members of this House would have had an opportunity to peruse it. It is a simple straightforward amendment and it makes provision for persons, such as police officers and election officers, who will not be able to go to a polling station on Election Day to participate in the election process by way of advance polling. So, this is the provision.

And if we were to look on page 6 of the Bill that is in front of us, there is a new provision under 49A(1)(iii) which makes provision for such persons to vote by way of mobile voting. And also section 49A (7) is amended as well to facilitate this process.

Madam Speaker, yesterday a question was posed as to whether persons traveling overseas would be allowed to vote, other than those who are residing overseas (such as students and other persons). And the question, if it is constructed as follows . . . I will pose the question. In the event an elector has to travel outside the Islands and no arrangements have been made to vote by postal ballot, can the elector vote under the mobile voting provisions? And, Madam Speaker, there is provision for this to take place. But it was not clear yesterday when the Bill was presented and, subsequently, with the assistance of the Cabinet office and the elections office, clarification has been given for this.

This provision can be found under clause 3, again, which makes provision for mobile polling stations—49(A)(1)(b) which is a catchall phrase, and 49A(1)(a) reads: “Subject to this section, where - (a) an elector is unable or likely to be unable - (i) to go in person to the polling station because he is or is likely to be in a hospital, rest home or other similar institution, or because he is a geriatric at home; or (ii) by reason either of blindness or any other physical incapacity to go in person to the polling station or, if able to go, to vote unaided; . . .” And with the provisions that will now be made by way of the amendment that we have got in front of us, (iii) will read: “to go in person to the polling station because of the general nature of his occupation, service or employment”.

And item (b) now reads, “that elector is not entitled under section 50 to vote as an absent elector”. But when we look at section 50, Madam Speaker, section 50 reads, “Subject to this section, where an elector is unable or likely to be unable to go in person to the polling station due to his absence for whatever reason outside the Islands, that elector may vote by post if, in the prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, he applies to be treated as an absent elector and furnishes an address in the Islands or overseas to which the ballot paper is to be sent for the purpose and if his application is allowed by the registering officer under section 51.”

So, where a person has to travel overseas as was posed through the question I raised earlier, and does not meet the criteria for postal voting, such person can opt to vote by way of mobile voting. And to be more specific, the response to that question is as follows . . . I will pose the question again. In the event an elector has to travel outside the Islands and no arrangements have been made to vote by postal ballot, can the elector vote under the mobile voting provisions? The response: The category of persons entitled to vote under the mobile voting provisions is found in [clause] 3 of The Elections (Amendment) Bill, 2008. This [clause] creates a new section to the Elections Law, namely section 49A, under the heading of Mobile Polling Stations. Section 49A (1) is broken into two sub-sections. Subsection (a) entitles an elector to vote at a mobile polling station if the elector is unable or unlikely to attend the polling station on polling day because he or she is [subsection (i)] likely to be in a rest home, hospital or other similar institution, he or she is geriatric home; [subsection (ii)] he or she suffers from blindness, or he or she suffers from other physical incapacity.

Alternatively, Madam Speaker, sub-section (b) of 49A entitles an elector to have his vote taken at a mobile polling station if the elector will be absent from the Islands on polling day. The wording of sub-section (b) is such that it entitles the elector who will be absent from the Islands on polling day to vote under the mobile voting scheme as an absent elector if the elector does not meet the requirements to be considered an absent voter and to receive a postal ballot under section 50 of that Law.

Section 49A(1) states: “Subject to this section, where- (b) that elector is not entitled under section 50 [arrangements for postal voting] to vote as an absent elector, that elector is entitled to have his vote taken at a mobile [polling] station if, in the prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, he applies to be treated as an absent elector voting at a mobile station and if his application is allowed by the registering officer under section 51.”

Section 51 (1), Madam Speaker, of the Bill, allows for an elector to be treated as an absent elector once an application is submitted to the registering officer and once the registering officer believes that the elector meets the criteria of an absent voter under section 49A or 50 of the Law.

Accordingly, Madam Speaker, in response to the question which was raised by two Elected Members yesterday, the answer is yes, an elector who will be off Island on polling day but who has not made arrangements to cast his vote through postal ballot can, indeed, be considered an absent elector under the Law and can cast his vote under the mobile polling scheme once the necessary applications have been submitted in advance.

With these comments, Madam Speaker, I would like to thank you for allowing the debate on this Bill.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled The Election Amendment Bill, 2008, be given a second reading. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Public Accountants (Amendment) Bill, 2008

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill that is shortly entitled The Public Accountants (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable mover wish to speak thereto?

Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I will be making a brief contribution to this Bill because it is relatively straightforward.

The Bill has six clauses:

Clause 1 gives the title of the proposed law if this Bill is passed into law.

Clause 2 consists of two parts: Clause 2 (a) seeks to amend the definition of "approved institute" that is given in section 2 of the principal Law. The present definition in the law states that an "approved institute" is an institute, society, association or other body specified in Schedule 2. When you look at Schedule 2 the institutes that are stated there are quite finite and limited. Therefore, in order to give increased flexibility the Bill proposes to delete the reference to Schedule 2 and to replace it with "approved by the Council".

Clause 2 (b) makes a minor proposed change to make it clear that compilation services are not meant to fall within the ambit of the principal Law.

Clause 3 would remove section 9 (5) of the principal Law because when considered in relation to clause 2 (a), section 9 (5) of the principal Law would become unnecessary.

Clause 4 of the Bill makes it clear that the need to be licensed by the Council of CISP (Cayman Islands Society of Public Accountants) or the society, applies to persons who are engaged in public service "from or within the Islands".

Clause 5 would result in the majority of the disciplinary tribunal being made up of persons who are not members of the Council of CISP.

Clause 6 is connected with Clause 2 (a) and its effect would be to delete Schedule 2 in the principal Law.

Madam Speaker, I would respectfully draw to Members' attention that I intend to raise an amendment in the Committee stage to the Bill.

I thank you and Members for their attention to my contribution on the Bill and I would respectfully seek all honourable Members' support for the Bill.

Thank you.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I am obliged to the Chair. Thank you.

I beg to move the following amendment to Clause 37: That Clause 37(1) of the Bill be deleted and the following substituted: "Where a person discloses to the Commission or to a constable information concerning a corruption offence, or the proceeds or suspected proceeds of a corruption offence the disclosure shall not be treated as a breach of any restric-

Ayes.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

Clause 37 as amended passed.

The Deputy Clerk:

- Clause 38. Proceedings in the Legislative Assembly.
 Clause 39. Territorial requirements.

The Chairman: Honourable Second Official Member, if you could just elaborate just one little bit on this Clause 38 it would be appreciated, so that I can understand it much better as the person who now holds under the Immunities Privilege Law the right for Hansards and so forth to be used in the Courts.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Chair.

Just to put this in perspective, Clause 38 of the Bill now reads that "No written law or rule of law preventing proceedings in the Legislative Assembly being impeached or questioned in any court or place outside of the Legislative Assembly shall prevent any evidence of words, spoken, or acts performed, by a person alleged to have committed a corruption offence as a Member of the Legislative Assembly being admissible (a) in proceedings for that offence against that person; or (b) in proceedings for a corruption offence which arises out of the same facts."

Those words have a direct bearing on section 11 of the Legislative Assembly Immunities Powers and Privileges Law (1999 Revision) and some, although less, direct bearing on section 3 of the said Law. And just to put it in perspective as well, section 11 says "No evidence relating to (a) debates or proceedings in the Assembly; or (b) the contents of the minutes of evidence taken or any document laid before the Assembly or a committee or any proceedings of or before, or any examination had before, the Assembly or any such committee, is admissible in any proceedings before a Court or person authorised by law to take evidence unless the court or such person is satisfied that permission has been granted by the Speaker for such evidence to be given.”

In other words, Madam Chair, section 11 of this Law says that before anything that is said or done here in this Chamber, in this House, can be admissible in Court or in any such tribunal, the Court has to be satisfied that the Speaker has given the necessary permission for it to be admissible in evidence.

The wording of Clause 38 would in effect trump the language—in a limited way, of course—but still trump the provision in section 11. And I will explain a little bit further, but also section 3 of the said Law (The Legislative Assembly Immunities Powers and Privileges Law) provides “No civil or criminal proceedings may be instituted against any Member for words spoken before or written in a report to, the Assembly of which he is a member, or to a committee thereof or by reason of any matter or thing brought by him therein by petition, bill, resolution, motion or otherwise, nor shall any such proceedings be instituted against any person in respect of such words broadcast or rebroadcast by any broadcasting station licensed under the Broadcasting Law, or wholly owned by the Government [of the Islands.]”

This section 3 provides what we call the necessary immunity from legal proceedings to Members of the Legislative Assembly.

I said that the Clause 38 sort of affects section 3 in a very limited way because the wording in Clause 38 as currently crafted does not strip Members of the House of that immunity from suit for defamation. It does not. What Clause 38 does is effectively make the words spoken here admissible in a Court without the prior written approval of the Speaker.

The Chairman: If it has to do with corruption.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Only in corruption offences.

The Chairman: All right.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Nothing more. It does not address any other offence or anything else. It is only in respect of that person—things said by that person—

The Chairman: Mm-hmm.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: —and in respect of a corruption offence. It does not affect, for example, a witness who gives evidence in a committee in the House as well. So, it is in that limited sense.

The Chairman: All right. Thank you, Honourable Second Official Member.

The Deputy Clerk:

- Clause 38. Proceedings in the Legislative Assembly.
- Clause 39. Territorial requirements.
- Clause 40. Authorisations by the Governor for the security of the Islands.

Heavenly Father, we lift up to you the proceedings of this Legislative Assembly today and we ask your special anointing and blessings upon the Speaker, the honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, the staff of the Legislative Assembly, for His Excellency the Governor, for all peoples of the Cayman Islands, for Her Majesty the Queen.

Father God Almighty, we ask you to focus our minds, help us to be mindful that we are stewards of the gifts and positions in which you have placed us. Help us, heavenly Father God, to act in a way whereby we recognise that we are accountable to you and give us grateful hearts.

We pray that you will have mercy upon us during this hurricane season, and we pray for the Caribbean community at large, that you will have mercy upon all countries.

Father God Almighty, we thank you for this wonderful and beautiful day. We thank you once again for the gift of life; we thank you for the love of your Holy Spirit; we thank you for the presence of your Spirit and the love of your Son, Christ Jesus, who taught us to pray by saying:

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive those who trespass against us. Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

Maritime Authority of the Cayman Islands Year in Review 1 July 2005 – 30 June 2006

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House, the annual report of the Maritime Authority of the Cayman Islands (MACI) for the year ended 30 June 2006.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Yes, thank you, Madam Speaker.

I will outline the relevant highlights from the 2006 annual report.

In accordance with section 17 of the Maritime Authority of the Cayman Islands Law, and section 51 of the Public Management and Finance Law, a copy of the 2005/6 annual report of the Maritime Authority of the Cayman Islands has just been laid on the Table of this honourable House.

The report covers the 12 month period from 1 July 2005 to 30 June 2006. This is the first annual report of the Maritime Authority (MACI) since the reorganisation of the Cayman Islands Shipping Registry (CISR) under the new Maritime Authority of the Cayman Islands, which was established on 1 July 2005.

Financial statements as at 30 June 2006 were prepared in accordance with international public sector accounting standards and have been certified by the Auditor General.

The financial statements reflect MACI's first year of operation. Prior to 1 July 2005, the Cayman Islands Shipping Registry was under the Portfolio of Finance and Economics and, therefore, a realistic comparison with the previous financial year is not practical.

Total assets of MACI at 30 June 2006 were CI$1.43 million, and total liabilities amounted to CI$966,000, resulting in a net worth of CI$464,000.

Total fees collected for the year were CI$4.94 million, and total expenses equalled CI$5.14 million, resulting in a small net deficit from operating activities of CI$203,000. And a smaller overall net deficit of $181,000 resulted from a slight gain of $22,000 on foreign exchange.

Madam Speaker, the Auditor General has issued a qualified opinion on the financial position of MACI at 30 June 2006. However, by way of a brief update I am pleased to report that as at the end of the financial year 30 June 2007, the next year on, all of the Auditor General's qualification points have been resolved and have been removed.

The Cayman Islands Shipping Registry is a category 1 British Registry, and, as such, is able to register vessels of any size, age and type, from small yachts to super tankers, provided quality standards are met.

During the reporting period, the register increased by 11.6 per cent as compared to the previous fiscal period of 2004/5.

At 30 June 2006, the number of vessels on the register totalled 1,500, of which 350 were commercial or merchant vessels. This represents an additional 500,000 gross tonnage to the register, bringing a total tonnage to the register to 3.14 million tons at 30 June 2006.

Apart from the financial information, I should like to inform this honourable House that there was a smooth transition during the reorganisation's changing of the watch as the 100 year old Cayman Islands Shipping Registry evolved into the modern Maritime Authority of the Cayman Islands. During its first year of operation, MACI continued offering world recognised professional and client focus services to its global market while manifesting its strength to adjust to the new and evolving responsibilities that this new level of independence from the Cayman Islands Government presented.

There were several major contributing factors to ensuring the efficient and dependable delivery of global services to a very sophisticated clientele. These factors included a successful combination of MACI's highly qualified and experienced multicultural workforce, increased technological resources, competitive rates and the strategic placement of representatives worldwide.

During that time period, MACI witnessed a growing awareness of the vital role of the shipping industry to Cayman and to the international economy, and a growing understanding of the role and functions of the Maritime Authority, largely due to its extensive promotions and coverage in the press. As a result, MACI hopes that more Caymanians will be encouraged to join the ever-evolving industry and appreciate the fascinating and challenging opportunities it provides for Cayman's young men and women. The traditions which our (and their) fathers and grandfathers were so proudly a part of, are carried forward as growing job opportunities become more widely available for our young people through maritime administration.

The guiding principle of the CISR and MACI reorganisation was increased efficiency with superior service. This was supported by a focus on fee-for-service activities, including the placement of marine survey, registration and advisory services closer to MACI's clients. This was achieved whilst maintaining MACI's pre-eminence in large yachts along with its excellent commercial shipping record in safety, security and marine environmental protection.

Within its first year of operation, MACI made great strides in augmenting staff skills, technology and resources to operate efficiently and, consequently, to uphold its reputation of quality and high responsiveness.

The launch of MACI's redesigned website (www.cishipping.com) was the first phase of the Virtual Office Environment (VOE) project as the organisation moved to restructure business by introducing an online marketplace to better service existing clients and attract new ones.

Much gratitude goes to the MACI Board of Directors for their continued guidance and solid support, especially during that critical changeover period. Their expertise and knowledge were driving factors for the quick advancement of the Authority. The untiring efforts and steadfast commitment of the staff were also key elements of the growing success of the organisation. Maritime industry partners and their stakeholders' resolute assurance and keen interest were invigorating. It was an auspicious beginning for MACI to continue to build on its success as a first-class maritime administration and globally-recognised flag state.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House, the Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Report of the Auditor General—Summer 2001 of the Cayman Islands' Government.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: No thank you, Madam Speaker.

Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Reports of the Auditor General on the Financial Statements of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the Years Ended 31 December 2001 and 2002

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Once again, I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House, the Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Reports of the Auditor General on the Financial Statements of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the Years Ended 31 December 2001 and 2002.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: No thank you, Madam Speaker.

Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Report of the Auditor General on the Financial Statements of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the six-month period ended 30 June 2003

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Finance and Economics.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House, the Government Minute on the Report of the Standing Public Accounts Committee on the Report of the Auditor General on the Financial Statements of the Government of the Cayman Islands for the six-month period ended 30 June 2003.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Madam Speaker, only to say, for the benefit of the listening public, that the normal course of events is that the Auditor General will present a report on the financial statements of the Government. The next step in the chain is for that report to be considered by the Public Accounts Committee.

The Public Accounts Committee, based on evidence it has taken from various witnesses that it speaks to, then produces its own report with recommendations. The Government Minute essentially represents the last matter in that chain, and the Government Minute is the Government's response to the recommendations contained in the Standing Public Accounts Committee [report].

Madam Speaker, I would just conclude by saying that the last report, the last Minute that has just been tabled, would bring the Government Minute up to date in respect of the most recent Public Accounts Committee.

Thank you.

Public Passenger Vehicles (Amendment) Regulations, 2008

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for the Ministry of Tourism, Environment, Investment and Commerce.

Hon. Charles E. Clifford: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House, the Public Passenger Vehicles (Amendment) Regulations, 2008.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Charles E. Clifford: Thank you, Madam Speaker, just briefly.

Up until this point the Public Passenger Vehicles Regulations prohibited persons older than 70 years of age from continuing to hold or applying for public passenger vehicle licenses, including taxi licenses. This Government took the view that we should not be discriminating on the basis of age and, therefore, we have brought this amendment and approved it in Cabinet.

What it does require now is for individuals older than 70 years of age to undergo annual medical examinations which include eye examinations, and to be certified by a licensed practitioner as being fit to drive passengers for hire or reward. We believe that this was the equitable thing to do and, as I said, we should not be discriminating on the basis of age.

Madam Speaker, this Regulation will pass by negative resolution. Twenty-one days from today it will come into effect unless some Member of this honourable House chooses to move a motion to debate it.

Thank you.

Financial Statements of National Housing Development Trust for the years ended 30 June 2006 and 2005

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business, Minister responsible for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, agriculture and Housing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Financial Statements of the National Housing Development Trust for the years ended 30 June 2006 and 2005.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, with your permission, I would lay the other statements and speak to both together.

The Speaker: All right.

Financial Statements of National Housing Development Trust for the years ended 30 June 2007 and 2006

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business, Minister responsible for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House Financial Statements of National Housing Development Trust for the years ended 30 June 2007 and 2006.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader, if I could ask a question, the one you just laid said it was ended the 30 June 2006 and 2005, and you are doing the same thing ended 2006 again?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: [inaudible]

The Speaker: So ordered.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, I will not speak at length regarding the reports, as I believe that their title and content speak for themselves. I am pleased to report that honourable Members will find that the Auditor General has rendered a positive opinion in both reports.

If I may, I would like to call Members' attention to page 2 of the reports where the Auditor General provides his opinion. In both reports, the Auditor General states that: ". . . the financial statements present fairly, in all material respects, the financial position of the National Housing Development Trust . . . and of its financial performance and cash flows for the year then ended in accordance with International Public Sector Account Standards."

I would also like to say, Madam Speaker, that I applaud the Chairman and the General Manager of the National Housing Development Trust for their efforts to bring the NHDT's audited financials up to date. Furthermore, I would like to advise this Honourable House that the NHDT is currently working with the Auditor General's office to compile and complete the audit of the Financial Accounts of the NHDT for the 2007/08 Financial Year, and I anticipate I will be tabling that report at the next sitting of the Legislative Assembly.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Review of the Legal Aid System in the Cayman Islands – Final Report No. 4 – July 2008

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for the Portfolio of Legal Affairs.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Review of the Legal Aid System in the Cayman Islands—Final Report No. 4—July 2008. It is a report by the Law Reform Commission.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Second Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I do.

I just laid the report, which is report number 4, on a Review of the Legal Aid System in the Cayman Islands, as conducted by the Law Reform Commission. The objective of this exercise is that the report itself seeks to apprise this honourable House of the conclusions as a result of research undertaken on the operation of legal aid systems in other jurisdictions and from a wider consultation process.

In 2004, in response to complaints regarding the rising cost of legal aid in the Cayman Islands, the Attorney General at the time directed the Legislative Drafting Department to review the existing legislation and to prepare needed amendments where necessary.

In 2005, the Law Reform Commission was requested to carry out a further consultation and more in-depth research into the operation of the legal aid system within the Cayman Islands. However, concerns regarding legal aid continued to be the subject of debate in this Legislative Assembly as well as in the wider public.

Of particular concern are the perceived high costs and whether or not too many legal aid cases were being conducted by foreign lead attorneys. Therefore, the Commission was requested to give priority to these issues and to prepare a report on its findings.

In the Commission's final report it properly notes that the primary purpose of a legal aid system is to provide legal assistance to persons charged with certain offences wishing to bring or defend a legal action, but unable to do so because of lack of funds. Further, it noted that access to legal aid is an integral aspect of the administration of justice in the Cayman Islands and, consequently, the delivery of appropriate and cost effective legal aid in both the criminal and civil areas is essential. The existence of a modern and transparent system of legal aid not only provides access to justice to those who need, but enhances the image of the Cayman Islands as a sophisticated democratic and stable jurisdiction.

Again, the Commission noted that concerns seemed to focus mainly on the high cost and the fact that too many of the services were being provided by leading foreign counsel. However, the Commission considered that the present system of provision of legal aid services in general offers good value for money.

Though it might not necessarily result in reduced cost, the Commission's view is that a more transparent and efficient administration of legal aid could serve to more readily demonstrate that funds are being appropriately spent, thereby satisfying the objective of accountability inherent in the legislators' concerns.

Madam Speaker, the Commission noted that there were a number of variables which made comparison to cost in other jurisdictions difficult. Some of these jurisdictions do not have a structured legal aid scheme. The Commission nevertheless did examine the cost of legal aid in Bermuda, Barbados, Gibraltar, as well as some other jurisdictions and concluded that it is not persuaded that the cost of legal aid for standard cases in the Islands are unduly high.

The Commission considered a range of issues as being critical to the determination as to whether the legal aid system was functioning with efficiency. These are:

- 1) Whether the legal aid system may be reformed simply by improving the investigative and assessment process relating to the grant of legal aid.
- 2) Whether the system should be administered by a court-based legal aid administrator and other support staff.
- 3) Whether it would be more cost effective to establish other means by which legal aid could be provided, such as by a legal aid clinic or a public defender's office or a mixture of clinic, public defender and the private bar.

Madam Speaker, they also considered whether the recovery system, where certain persons who are granted legal aid are liable to pay the legal aid fund back, should be improved. They considered whether legal aid fees are too high and should be capped, and they also considered whether pro bono work should be mandatory in order to give the public access to more legal services.

The Commission concludes that while there is a positive need for change to the system, every effort should be made not to increase administrative costs in so doing. In many key areas small but important changes would make a significant difference to efficiency.

Madam Speaker, the Commission makes recommendations in respect of eight areas, as follows: The appointment of a legal aid administrator. It is recommended that the current court administered model of legal aid be maintained in order not to add additional administrative cost, but that efficiency be improved by the appointment of a specially designated legal aid administrator. This administrator should have adequate support staff and resources to administer legal aid.

The Law presently provides for all applicants to be means tested and for probation officers to assist in providing information on the means of applicants. The present legal aid office of the courts does not have the manpower to carry out such tests as it consists of one staff member only.

The proposed administrator would be part of the judicial administration according to the Commission, but would be the person solely responsible for deciding on legal aid certificates. Applicants who are dissatisfied with a decision of the administrator would have a right to appeal to the Grand Court.

According to the Commission, the further duties of the administrator would include the preparation of the roster of attorneys and establishing guidelines, procedures and requirements pursuant to which legal and other services may be made available under the Law.

Another recommendation is amendment to legal aid rules. The Commission recommended that following the Bermuda model these rules be made more precise as to who is eligible for a grant of legal aid. Examples include the express requirement for a merits test. The Commission reports that local stakeholders are against such a test on the basis that cases should not be prejudged. However, the research of the Commission shows that many jurisdictions do use a merits test in determining civil legal aid. The Commission is of the view that use of merits would be invaluable in determining eligibility and preventing abuse of the legal aid system, and recommends the revision of the Law and rules to expressly provide for this.

The Commission is also of the view that the Law should be reviewed to incorporate a comprehensive means test for each applicant to be conducted by an independent assessor. While there is provision for a means test under the rules, they do not presently define or provide a method of calculating disposable capital or disposable income of an applicant. Such a test should set realistic limits in order to ensure that those on relatively low incomes are not disqualified from receiving legal aid.

I should add, Madam Speaker, understandably, that those who are in a position to afford are not granted legal aid.

Required contributions: Another recommendation, Madam Speaker. The Commission recommends that the Legal Aid Law and Rules be amended to make it clear that contributions may be required of persons above a certain specified income, that the Government may require a charge on property as a condition for legal aid in certain circumstances and that such contributions will be recoverable and enforceable by Government through the Courts.

While there are presently general provisions, there are no guidelines as in some other jurisdictions as to the amounts which should be repaid. The Commission was told that the readily ascertainable lack of means on the part of most defendants has led to the development of a general practice not to require contributions in criminal cases, although this is regularly done for civil cases.

The Court Administrator has confirmed that a system for the recovery of contributions is not vigorously enforced, although new guidelines have recently been put in place by the courts.

The Commission also touched on the establishment of a civil legal aid clinic. The Commission has been advised of the proposed establishment of a legal aid clinic connected to the Cayman Islands Law School and notes that the cost of civil legal aid could be reduced by the introduction of such a clinic modelled along the lines of those which are operated by the Hugh Wooding and Norman Manley Law Schools, located in Trinidad and Tobago and Jamaica, respectively.

A significant conclusion of the Commission is in the area of complex cases. It concluded that notwithstanding the fact that local legal aid costs are not excessive, costs can be better contained by capping the costs of long and complex cases. This could be effected by implementing a tendering process and selecting specially qualified attorneys to undertake such cases. The cases would be managed through individual case contracts based on case plans and estimates agreed by the legal aid administrator after consultation with the attorneys. The alternative would be to impose fixed fees for such cases and provide that there is a right to request a review of a decision for remuneration only in extraordinary or exceptional circumstances.

The Commission also believes that fixed fees could be implemented for duty counsel at police stations.

Madam Speaker, staff for taxation of costs. The Commission is of the opinion that in order to ensure that lawyers are being appropriately paid, and that is not being overpaid or underpaid for their services, that the courts should have staff dedicated solely to taxing of legal aid costs.

The Commission recommends also that the legal aid system can be enhanced by providing for the appointment of duty counsel for all types of criminal offences to which legal aid applies. The duty counsel service would help reduce the high costs of administering criminal justice by assisting clients to identify at the earliest possible opportunity matters where a plea of guilty is to be entered and then representing them on their plea of guilty. Duty counsel would also be able to provide legal advice on available legal options.

Madam Speaker, the Commission has considered, but does not recommend, making pro bono work mandatory, and is of the view that legal aid is an issue of social justice and, therefore, a matter for society as a whole and not any single profession. So, no recommendation by the Commission has been made on the issue of requiring contributions from law firms. However, the Government is going to require a further look at these two issues.

In conclusion, Madam Speaker, by tabling this report the Government is seeking input from all honourable Members of this House as well as any further suggestions from the general public on any potential reform of the legal aid system of the Cayman Islands as presented in this report by the Law Reform Commission.

I thank you.

BILLS

FIRST READING

Marriage (Amendment) Bill, 2008

The Clerk: The Marriage (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for second reading.

SECOND READING

Marriage (Amendment) Bill, 2008

The Clerk: The Marriage (Amendment) Bill, 2008.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.
Madam Speaker, the Marriage Law, 2007—

The Speaker: I beg to move . . .

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Forgive me, Madam Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of a Bill for a Law to amend the Marriage Law (2007 Revision) to expressly provide that a marriage is a union between a man and a woman; and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: The motion has been duly moved and it open for debate. Does the honourable mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker, I was a little bit anxious this morning to speak to this Bill.

The Marriage Law (2007 Revision) has in its definition section the definition of “civil registrar and marriage officer” and “general register office” and “registrar general”. What it does not have presently is a definition for the word “marriage”.

This Bill, seeks to amend the Marriage Law (2007 Revision) by inserting a definition of the term “marriage”. This definition will expressly provide that a marriage is a union between a man and a woman. So the amendment itself is a simple one.

The purpose of this amendment is to confirm and clarify what the Marriage Law has always meant in our Caymanian society. It is certainly not the purpose of the Bill to criticise other jurisdictions that may have recently changed their definitions of marriage. Such jurisdictions are free to make their own choices according to their own democratic systems and the views of their electorate. But, by the same token, the Caymanian society exercises a similar freedom and so chooses its own path.

Through this amendment the people of the Cayman Islands are sending a clear signal that they do not wish to change the meaning of marriage that has always existed in these Islands. The wording of the amendment is plain and simple, because the point that it makes is plain and simple, namely this: Whatever choices may be made by others, we here in the Cayman Islands do not wish to alter the meaning of marriage in the Cayman Islands.

Marriage, as a union of a man and a woman, has been a core value for Caymanians since these Islands were settled more than 300 years ago. It has been and remains a foundation stone of our society. It is an organic and indispensable part of our Caymanian heritage.

Some may say that this amendment is about avoiding the present, turning away from the future, and maybe even hiding in the past. But nothing could be further from the truth.

As a country, over the past 40 years Caymanians have proven that they can modernise in every area in which they have chosen. The remarkable development of these Islands shows that Caymanians have not simply adapted passively to changing times, they have steered their ship of state through very challenging waters, achieving a high level of success in the late 20th and early 21st Centuries, embracing change whenever and wherever we have felt necessary.

We have been agents of change when and where we have chosen to be. However, in the midst of this highly developed modern society, Caymanians also know that there are certain aspects of our culture and heritage which we do not wish to change. Such aspects include the importance of family values, and, Madam Speaker, the meaning of marriage.

More broadly in the local community, almost 60 per cent of those responding to a Caymanian Compass poll in July of last year said that Cayman's legislators should define marriage as being between a man and a woman. That was the Caymanian Compass edition of Thursday, 26 July 2007.

For some years now, there has been mounting concern here in Cayman over the choices made by some other countries and states in the area of sexuality. Seeing the challenges and battles going on in other jurisdictions, we here in the Cayman Islands have been concerned that our own Marriage Law—which has always been understood to be marriage between a man and a woman—might have a different interpretation imposed on it, an interpretation at variance with values that are deeply held by this society. So it seemed wise to bring this amendment to clarify and confirm core values and beliefs in this area.

The amendment also ensures that what has always been seen as a straightforward law does not become subject to an interpretation that would be completely unacceptable to us here in the Cayman Islands. The amendment has been under discussion by us since 2006, pending advice on the best legal and technical approach to this issue led by the Honourable Second Official Member and his team in the Attorney General's Chambers.

One possible model that we examined was that of the British Virgin Islands, which relies on an enabling provision on the subject within its new Constitution. In the case of us here in the Cayman Islands, it was eventually accepted that it would be appropriate to make a simple amendment to the local legislation without this enabling provision, and this was chosen as the best way forward.

Madam Speaker, that is not to say that even with this amendment, which I am confident will have safe passage through the House, that in any new constitution which may be crafted that such a position would not be included in a new constitution.

Madam Speaker, I want to speak briefly to what this Bill does not do. It does some things, but there are some things that it does not do. The Bill does not seek to criticise or offend others of a different persuasion. Nor does the Bill in any way seek to infringe upon the privacy of individuals who either visit our shores or who reside here.

Caymanians are well aware that people of a different persuasion sometimes come to our shores as visitors, and they have been welcomed to our shores. It is not the purpose of this Bill to take issue with such individuals. Its purpose, rather, is to protect the institution of marriage and family as a part of our Caymanian way of life.

All Caymanians would ask of such individuals is that in visiting Cayman they have due respect for the local culture and our way of life here. Some may say that the position taken by this Bill poses something of a financial risk for us here in the Cayman Islands. They may say that Caymanians are well aware of the influence of what is termed by some as the “gay dollar.” But we need to understand that the basis of this Bill is not with financial calculations. We do not select our family values based on how much profit they may or may not bring us. Madam Speaker, in simple terms, that would make a nonsense of our moral values. The Bill is an expression of what this society believes marriage to be, rather than the result of any calculation of financial consequences.

But Caymanians are not naïve. While we do not seek to offend those of a different persuasion, but welcome them as visitors, we also know that many visitors to our islands share our own outlook on marriage, that such visitors are attracted to these islands partly by the traditional family values they find when they visit here, and Madam Speaker I am certain that those values they experience will continue to attract them to our shores.

For us here in the Cayman Islands, the significance of this Bill does not hang on whether it turns out to be a financial impediment or a financial incentive for our economy. Its meaning has everything to do with deeply held family values and a firm understanding by us of the definition of marriage.

Going back in history, marriage and family values, our Christian heritage, have been rooted in Caymanian society since the 1700s, from the days when our first settlers numbered only a few hundred. As early as 1773, history tells us that Caymanians formally expressed their desire for a resident “clergyman”—one of the main reasons being that he could perform local marriage ceremonies. For a generation or two, Caymanians had to sail to Jamaica for this purpose, that is, to get married. Eventually this function was undertaken by locally appointed magistrates, such as (and history calls names), William Bodden, James Bodden and James Coe. Then, in time, marriage ceremonies became a core function of the numerous churches that came to Cayman during the 1800s, including the Anglicans, Wesleyans, Methodists, Presbyterians, Baptists and Seventh Day Adventists, and in more modern times, a myriad of other Christian religions.

So, Madam Speaker, with all of that having been said, I think the amendment is one that is clear, it is simple, it is basic and it is timely. I think it will give much comfort to our people here in the Cayman Islands knowing that our own legislation gives a clearly defined rationale of what marriage is to us and also clearly makes it known by law that it is the union of a man and a woman.

Madam Speaker, I certainly recommend and give full support to the Bill that I am proposing. I trust that all Members of the Legislative Assembly here will support it also.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to offer a few thoughts on the Bill. But let me start off by saying that we certainly do support the Bill and know the local conditions as to why the Government has brought the Bill forward.

Madam Speaker, as said by the Honourable Leader of Government Business, the family is the key foundation and cornerstone upon which our society is built, and, I dare say, any society that is similar to ours. Research tells us that strong families with strong parental leadership produce the type of citizen required to build the type of Cayman that we want not only today but in the future.

Madam Speaker, during some of the recent public meetings that have been held in regard to constitutional modernisation, we know this has been one of the key issues that our people have been concerned about. One of the concerns raised has not only been surrounding the definition of marriage, but, indeed, how the term “man and woman” can be interpreted. In modern times science has allowed man to do some rather extraordinary things, one of which is to change the sex of an individual.

The Opposition would like to inquire of the Government as to whether or not we may need to consider going a bit further with this definition to insert the term “born”, that is, that marriage is a union between a person who is born a man and [a person who is] born a woman. Certainly, if (and I stress if) we had circumstances where a person were to have a sex change operation, and were to reside within our country, whether or not the spirit of this amendment may be avoided and leave us as a community in a bit of a dilemma that we may not anticipate. I believe that that would not be the type of situation that Caymanians would look favourably upon and be accepting of.

As the Leader of Government Business pointed out during his contribution in piloting this Bill, there are those who might be upset or offended by these sorts of amendments. However, I believe that in this day and age and in this world that we live in, the vast majority of people would see the logic and sense of this amendment. As was said earlier, this is not traversing and intruding upon people's behaviour and practices within their own homes and behind their own closed doors. But, from a legal perspective, we are saying as a community that this is how we believe the legal institution of marriage should be conducted and enabled by the Government, by the State.

Madam Speaker, another question that comes to mind is the legality of other forms of union, and whether or not anything needs to be done to ensure that there is no legal recognition of other types of same-sex unions within Cayman. I use a small example. I believe that the majority of people within our community not only look at this issue from the technical side of things, as far as a marriage ceremony is concerned, but also the other ancillary benefits that flow from a marriage.

We would like to ensure that this amendment will address those points as well so that we will not have a circumstance, for example, where persons in another type of union other than a marriage, enjoying the same benefit that ordinary married people enjoy and therefore may not see the need then to get married because their union is recognised by other pieces of legislation and practices that would then allow them to simply live the life they want to live. And, yes, they may not get the marriage certificate, but they see themselves as having won the battle because there would be nothing preventing them from enjoying, for example, insurance benefits, et cetera, out of a same-sex union.

I know that the Honourable Leader of Government Business, when he said that he believed this was a straightforward amendment, chose his words very carefully. I agree with him. It is straight, and it is forward. But we want to make sure it is forward looking so that we avert any of the other types of dangers and moral pitfalls that our people would be very, very concerned about. We see the cases beaming through the TV signals coming into all of our living rooms, so we have seen what has happened in North America. Our people are very concerned about those same sorts of things happening here outside this legal, technical definition of marriage.

With those few comments, I await the response of the Government.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you very much, indeed, Madam Speaker.

I rise to make a brief contribution on the amendment before the House, put forward by the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Madam Speaker, first let me say that, on the face of it, I can join with my colleagues on the Opposition in saying that I support the efforts by the Government in putting forward this amendment to the Marriage Law. However, I wish for a number of assurances.

First of all, I wish to be assured by the Leader in his winding up, or via delegation by one of his other colleagues, whether or not confirmation has been received from His Excellency the Governor as to the assenting of this amendment, seeing that it is that which will give it its life. I also realise that it would have gone through Cabinet, but we who have been there know how Cabinet also works.

I would wish to ascertain whether or not the Government, whether official and/or elected Members, sought assurance or comfort of mind from His Excellency the Governor, firstly that he would be assenting to this amendment. Madam Speaker, that is of concern to me because one would recognise the very liberal approach that the United Kingdom Government and the European countries and communities, and it seems the rest of the world, have taken to the issue of marriage and what comprises a legal marriage, and when a marriage should be recognised. In fact, I believe more time is spent on evolving and devolving what a marriage should be than, perhaps, any other issue, save Global Warming, on the world stage.

Secondly, Madam Speaker, I wish to seek assurance from the Government side whether or not the Government sought advice from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office as to its position, seeing we are an Overseas Territory and, obviously, what we do they will only consent or [accede] to if it does not in any way contradict or override their international obligations.

If that is the case, then the last assurance I would like to receive, Madam Speaker, through the voice of the Government, would be—if the first two are in the affirmative—whether or not by the process of deductive reasoning we could then seek to move, whether in the wholesale amendment with the advancement or modernisation of the Constitution or by an isolated act, move on then to make this or a similar amendment to our Constitution, which is the overarching legislative framework within our country.

I am happy, Madam Speaker, from the standpoint that Government is taking the initiative to clarify or stop any innuendo or questioning the fact that it is not explicitly explained in our definition section in the Marriage Law, and one can appreciate that when this was written, Cayman was nowhere near as liberal as it is today.

I took some cognisance, though, of the almost divide in the attempt by the Government to give reasons or justifications from a historical perspective as to Caymanian culture, our conservative nature, yet, at the same time almost reach out to the liberal arm. Obviously, the Government of the day can do whatever it wants, but from my personal perspective, I wish to stand here today in this honourable parliament and say without any avoidance of doubt or misunderstandings or innuendo that as far as my constituency is concerned, and certainly the representation that I have received (and we have two representatives, and I am sure he can say whatever he wishes at the relevant juncture), but by far the majority of constituents within Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are conservative by nature. And in no form or fashion, or in any misconceived way or manner, whatever, wish to see any other type of marriage within this jurisdiction except that of a man to a woman. And, that said, from the background of my colleague from West Bay, based on the sex at the time of birth.

Madam Speaker, I think that this is a move in the right direction. I think that once those assurances are given, that we cannot stop there. If we truly believe that that is the Caymanian culture, and we are able to stand up regardless of what is being said, I think we need to look at this issue as a continuous issue, and continue to seek legal advice and continue to be well informed and well read. Already so much of our culture has been eroded and I believe that this is yet another way. If we are not on the cutting edge of information and informed in season and out of season then we are going to see another aspect, a very integral part of our Caymanian culture, just go out the window.

Madam Speaker, there must be something left of things that are Caymanian, and what better thing than the institution of marriage. Yes, there are always overriding factors that may come up that may destroy marriages, that may be reasons for irretrievable breakdown that the courts will recognise either through legal separation or divorce, but the institution based on the definition itself must not be touched. I make absolutely no apologies about that, cost me what it may—my political career or not—because if we say that in God we trust, we must mean that. And the God that I trust has set down specific guidelines and we in the Cayman Islands ought to take heed and do everything possible. Regardless of what our constitutional status is we must be abundantly clear that there are certain things that we are going to stand for, and certain things we are going to fall for. And, this is not one issue I wish to fall for, may it please you. Thank you for your indulgence.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Health.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I have been told that as the “Chaplain” I need to say a few words on this, and I share quite a few of the words of the last speaker.

[The Hon. Minister, in jest, uses Caymanian slang] I just want to warn my colleagues, Madam Speaker, to “guard” their loins “because” . . .

[laughter]

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: . . . when our Human Rights Committee sees what “us” legislators want to do to preserve our Cayman Islands, without a doubt you will be hearing comments! But that is their democratic right. As long as we are a democratic territory, they must be able to do that.

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: My aspect will be based on biblical quotations. If you do not believe in the Bible then you [will] just disregard what I am saying. I am a firm believer in that.

In reading my little book this morning, it is quite interesting that two different sections of the Bible, Ephesians 5:31 says “For this reason the man shall leave his father and his mother and shall be joined to his wife and the two shall become one flesh.”

Then in Matthew 19:5, once again it is repeated: “For this reason a man shall leave his father and mother and shall be united firmly to his wife and the two shall become one flesh.”

Now, you note in that verse it did say “to his wife” not a man to Peter, not a man to Paul, or Steve or whoever! He says to his “wife”!

My 63 years, that is how my family brought me up and whatever days He sees left for me in these Islands as I represent the people . . . and, yes, for 36 years with my wife.

I also note Genesis 2:24, which says, “For this reason a man will leave his father and mother and be united to his wife and they will become one flesh.” This is an admonition to husbands: “Husbands, love your wives and do not be harsh or bitter or resentful toward them.” Once again you note, Madam Speaker, He is not telling the husbands to hug up the male counterpart—he says the wife!

Proverbs 18:22 says . . . and this is wonderful. Madam Speaker, Proverbs is one of the sweetest books in the Bible. I have read through it, now going into four times, and every time I read Proverbs, it is an exciting book. He says, “He who finds a true wife finds a good thing.” And listen to this, “. . . and obtains favour from the Lord.”

Madam Speaker, the last verse I will quote from, Ephesians 5:25, “Husbands, love your wives . . .” And listen to this, this is the key about this whole thing we are talking about: “. . . as Christ loved the church, and gave himself up for her.”

No matter what some of these fool-fool pictures that come out of Hollywood portray, my Jesus, my heavenly Father, whatever way, my vision, my perception, my understanding of Him, “husbands love your wives as Christ loved the church.” I can assure you if we are going to love our wives the way Christ loved the church, it is not suggesting what he was.

Madam Speaker, I agree. So many changing things in this world around us! The great United States, how they have come from literally taking just about everything out of the schools that refers to the Bible and religion. I am proud to say that the legislators that I work with in this Legislative Assembly have certainly indicated that we will not tolerate that in our Islands.

When you look around and see what is happening, believe it or not we are heading speedily toward the end times. Once again, these little Islands—my little Islands, your little Islands—were blessed just a few weeks ago through the grace of God. Cayman Brac had a little rough time, but nothing compared to Ivan. I am eternally grateful for that. But if we do not listen to His commands, and do what He says . . .

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: A very good example, Mr. Minister. Sodom and Gomorrah.

Just to draw you and this House back to that time, Madam Speaker. Remember the history of Sodom and Gomorrah when Lot was leaving those perverts told him to throw out his sons and things, his daughters. We know what was happening.

The Lord said if he could find 10 people there he would save it. But, no, it did not happen. As they walked away even his wife, who wanted to look back and see one last time, according to the Bible she became a pillar of salt. When they got some distance away, Jesus said, 'we'll have a little fire burn now.' Madam Speaker, I am told that up until this day no one knows where the site of Sodom and Gomorrah was.

Madam Speaker, I guess I can get carried away and very emotional when we come to talk about these things and every one of my colleagues on this side and that side, and my colleagues in Cabinet know the conservative way that I think. I have no intention of changing that as long as the people of Bodden Town ask me to represent them. I will carry forward that message if they said no; they did not want me to talk like that. That's fine. There are younger ones coming up. Some fine, fine young people coming up. And whatever happens, so be it.

Madam Speaker, back to the situation. We need to preserve some of our culture. We really do. I ask that as we go forward we think more about our families. We bring in all of these experts and this and that, and police and whatever. But it simply boils down, Madam Speaker, it is about the family.

An hon. Member: What about the Human Rights Committee?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I have to be careful there, Minister. They have their democratic right.

You see, Madam Speaker, if the family stays close together, if fathers, especially, do what they are supposed to do . . . I can tell you many of the difficulties that we now experience with our young people are because of the lack of the paternal more than anything else. I see some of these women, wonderful human beings, working their chops off to support one, two, three, four children. Madam Speaker, let us come back together. There is nothing scientific about this whole thing.

Remember where we came from. Yes, the fathers were away at sea most of the time. But the mothers did discipline those children. I am advocating that we start to get back to those areas. We take back control of Cayman. Let's get rid of the criminal element. Let's get rid of the drugs and whatever that is ruining these Islands. And we can do it if we stick together, you know. But we have a standard that we must go by. We cannot, we must not compromise the way that we have been brought up for the past 500 and something years and have other people come here and tell us let's do it this way, it's a lot more fun. I do not agree with that.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If no other Member wishes to speak . . . Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Samuel W. Bulgin: Madam Speaker, understandably, I would not in any way seek to emulate the very stirring and moving discussion by the Honourable Minister of Health. We are all aware of his passion. I do not have that gift, even though I would like to be associated with his remarks.

Madam Speaker, just briefly, the Second Elected Member for West Bay spoke about the need for an expansive definition (if I may put it that way) in the legislation to capture the sex of the person from birth. I only wish to say at this stage that, given the scope of what is being suggested, that is something clearly that Government understandably would want to have a careful look at to ensure that if such an amendment is to be accepted there are no sort of other ramifications, unintended consequences or unforeseen pitfalls associated with that.

So, the approach at this stage, in our view, is that the definition that is currently before the House is sufficiently wide enough, at least for the time being, to capture the concerns of the general public and to provide the sufficient safeguards bearing in mind what the objective is. Not in any way discounting what the honourable Member is saying, except that, because of the scope of it, it is only fair that Government takes time to consider the extent of it.

On the issue of whether we have upfront authorisation from the United Kingdom, well, we never usually ask the UK up front whether it is in order for us to enact a particular piece of legislation, though I can think of instances where it might very well be desirable to do so. In this particular case we have no express prior authorisation to go down that road. But I am sure that honourable Members of this House will recall that during the recent visit, the last visit of Minister Meg Munn from the United Kingdom, she was asked expressly at the Chamber of Commerce forum whether the United Kingdom would have any objections to such a proposed amendment. She made it quite clear that that was a matter for the local legislature.

She went on to explain that what was done in the UK was, certainly in respect of certain couples, there was a Civil Partnership Act that was enacted to address the issue. But the tenor and tone of her answer was in effect that if the Cayman Islands legislature is minded to go down that route, it is entirely a matter for us. So, what we extrapolated from that was that there is no reason to believe that there is going to be any power of disallowance as it relates to this particular amendment.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Like my colleagues on this side, I also give notice of my support of the amendment, even though we just heard the response from the Second Official Member concerning the concerns and further consideration for a further amendment to further define “man and woman at the time of birth”. We would be more comfortable getting some commitment as far as that was concerned.

Madam Speaker, in general, the amendment does not really cause any concern. Where I do have a bit of concern would be where the Leader of Government Business made the comment that the purpose of this amendment and the intent was to bring some comfort, and protect the traditional norms in Cayman, giving the Caymanian public a feeling that in some way this amendment would ensure that norm continued.

When my colleague, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac asked the question as to whether there had been any confirmation sought from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, obviously it was with the mindset that while we are allowed to pass legislation here in Cayman, we are ultimately answerable and accountable under other provisions and requirements on an international basis. It is very similar to when we discuss and talk about the Constitution and putting in a preamble.

While we recognise that the UK will allow us to put in any preamble that we want, or say anything that we want, ultimately there are requirements. If we fall afoul of those, regardless of what our preamble may say (and in the same way, whatever our laws may say), we have international commitments that we have been committed to first off by our association with the United Kingdom and, more specifically, we have the case where Minister McLaughlin signed us up to the protocols in 2006.

I see the European Commission—

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Point of Order, Madam Speaker.

Point of Order

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education, may I hear your point of order?

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: A direct and, I believe, a deliberate misrepresentation of the truth.

Minister McLaughlin, much as he might want to, has no power to sign the Cayman Islands up to anything at all, a matter of which I am sure the Third Elected Member for West Bay is fully aware.

If he wants to refer to the matter which I know he is referring to, he must do so correctly and truthfully, not misrepresenting the facts, and not misrepresenting my role in them.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay, I do not think that you should continue. The Honourable Minister does have a point of order. So would you continue with your debate?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, not questioning your ruling, but he said he knew what I was referring to and I must do it correctly. I have not heard him say what I did incorrectly.

Can you clarify what I did incorrectly, since it is a point of order, Ma'am?

The Speaker: I gathered from the Honourable Minister that you were saying that he had signed the Cayman Islands up, and he is saying that that is totally incorrect.

So, would you please continue with your debate?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: And, Madam Speaker, am I to take it that you are agreeing it was incorrect?

The Speaker: Well, honourable [Third Elected Member for West Bay], if the Minister is saying that you are saying that he signed us up to a particular European convention, or I do not know what it is . . . well, would you continue your debate?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I just want to make sure. Am I allowed to continue? Are you now saying that it was not a point of order, so I am allowed to continue?

The Speaker: I would like you to continue your debate outside of this accusation of the Minister signing the Cayman Islands up to any particular convention, please.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, hopefully you will find it satisfactory for me to say that the country was signed up during this Government's administration.

I am not sure if that finds favour with you or not, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Elected Member, you can continue, but you said in the beginning that the Honourable Minister signed the country up.

So, would you please continue?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, that's fine if it satisfies . . . so, correcting: the Minister, this Government in 2006 signed us up to . . . and I made the point (if I am going back to the point) that through our relationships with the European Union and, specifically with the UK, we have international obligations and those obligations have been further extended under this Administration. Madam Speaker, it is a concern that says—

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, a point of order again.

Point of Order

The Speaker: Honourable Minister of Education.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: The Third Elected Member for West Bay has been going on now for about five minutes. He still has not told this House or the broader listening community what it is that he alleges this Government has signed us up to.

We have signed up . . . we don't have the capacity—as he ought to know—as an Overseas Territory to sign up to anything. So, if he wants to represent what the Government has done, he must get his facts in order and articulate them in an honest, open and correct way. Then we can deal with them. But, we cannot, Madam Speaker, allow an elected Member to stand here and make broad, vague generalisations and misrepresentations and have the broader listening community either confused or believing that the Government has done something bad to them.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for the District of West Bay, would you say what this Government has signed the Cayman Islands up to?

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I am pretty sure you do not expect me to stand here and relate everything that has been signed from 2004, as far as international regulations.

The Speaker: But—

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: I make the point, Madam Speaker—

The Speaker: Third Elected Member—

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: —that when the Minister is saying, if he wants us to stop and research all of the . . . but I think that is an unfair expectation. I said that the Government signed us up to additional obligations during that term. If he is saying that the Government has done no such thing during that term, then I stand corrected, but I think—

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay, you have said on one occasion that the Honourable Minister . . . you have said on one occasion in your debate that Honourable Minister McLaughlin, I think you said, had signed the country up. You have now said that under "this Government" that we have been signed up to extended obligations.

What are those obligations?

And what have they extended?

That is all I am asking you so that you can continue your debate.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, we have many. We have financial obligations that we have extended, reporting obligations . . . my point was, Madam Speaker, that—

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay, please. I made my ruling. Would you continue your debate in a different stream? Thank you.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

So, Madam Speaker, based on the obligations that we have as an Overseas Territory, it is important for us to recognise, and I know the Government recognises, that regardless of what domestic legislation is passed, we still have overriding obligations that supersede that domestic legislation.

So, as my colleague mentioned earlier on, the issue as far as civil unions and the recognition of civil unions in Cayman, when we talk about bringing some kind of protection or comfort level to the average Cayman person, what this is protecting is that we do not see a marriage taking place between a man and a man, and a woman and a woman. But the concern that has been expressed to me by the people who I represent, is not that they are going to go to a wedding and see the wedding ceremony taking place between a man and a man, or a woman and a woman, except that they are going to be exposed to the lifestyle arrangements that go along with the legal unions between individuals. That is the protection and concern that they would like to have. They would like the recognition of that tradition.

So, when we see an amendment saying that there will be no weddings between a man and man, and a woman and woman . . . we heard the Second Official Member just get up and say that the way that the United Kingdom also gave that protection was by giving the ability for civil unions. So, giving a legal right to two men and to two women—because, again, even though they would like to protect for their historic norms the obligations that they have, being a part of the wider European Union community ensures that those individuals must have that right recognised. So they could not bring legislation that could then be challenged to say that it had removed the individual rights of those individuals because there is historic precedent set to show that we have seen domestic legislation, even constitutional legislation challenged at the European Union level, and now we see that we have domestic legislation coming that is supposed to, in the expressed intent of the Leader of Government Business, give comfort to those individuals.

Madam Speaker, my concern would be very similar to the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Can the Government say that they have determined what will occur, even after this amendment is passed, if we do have a challenge taken through the legal systems in the Cayman Islands and carried on further into the United Kingdom, or to the European Union? What would occur in terms of a decision or a hearing based on the advice that is given from a legal standpoint?

Madam Speaker, even a bit more complex: What would happen, not only with the recognition of a civil union here in Cayman, but what would occur if a civil union took place in the United Kingdom? What recognition or respect would be given to those individuals upon their arrival in the Cayman Islands?

Based on their civil union, would those people then be recognised [and] conduct life in such a fashion as man and wife?

For example, if those two individuals living here and residing here had a recognised legal union in the United Kingdom, would they then be allowed, for example, to make an application for the adoption of children? Would they be able to do joint accounts? Have pension benefits? Has any investigation been made to give comfort to the Caymanian people as to what would occur in that event two individuals formed a union outside of the Cayman Islands?

Now, this amendment is meant to give some comfort because, as was said earlier, we know there is a lot of discussion as far as the human rights aspect of the Constitution. And we are getting into a human rights discussion hopefully in a few days when we are talking about a new Constitution. I know the Government's attempt—just like the attempt with the preamble—is to say (and I have heard this before) Oh, we can personalise our Bill of Rights. We can personalise and localise our rights in some fashion to give the impression that yes, it's rights for all humans; but we can make those rights unique to the Cayman Islands.

Now, I think the Cayman people have seen through that and recognise that, again, due to the international obligations that we have, a bill of rights for humans is just that: they are rights going across, regardless whether it is rights in Cayman, or rights in liberal United Kingdom or in the rest of the European Union community. But, in the same way we had that attempt made at that time, Madam Speaker, of giving some false protection that we are going to be able to localise our rights, what we are concerned about, Madam Speaker, is that while this has its place, while there is no problem with defining marriage as far as this amendment, unless we have received those assurances it should not be seen as some level of protection against other ramifications and possibilities that could go against the norms.

With those brief remarks, Madam Speaker, I conclude my contribution.

The Speaker: I will take the luncheon break at this time, until 2 pm.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Does any other Member wish to speak?

Honourable Minister responsible for Education.

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Marriage is an ancient and honourable institution. It is an institution which has existed for millennia and stretches across civilisations all over the world in one form or another. To the best of my knowledge, it has always been an institution in which the partners were persons of the opposite sex.

It is recognised, as some of those who spoke before me said, in the Bible. It is recognised in the holy books of religions other than Christianity. And it is recognised even in places where there is no accepted religion. I believe that principally the reason why it has been recognised as an institution between a man and a woman is because its principal purpose is procreation and the care of the next generation.

It has been taken for granted for so many years that this union, this contract, is one between a man and a woman that our Marriage Law does not currently specifically define who the parties to a marriage can be. It speaks about what age they have to be and so forth, but it does not say what sex, what gender the parties to the marriage are to be.

In more recent times and in other places beyond these shores there have been petitions, there have been movements to accord to persons of the same sex who live in relationships something akin to the status of marriage. In some States, notably in some of the United States, they now have formal contracts which are described as "Gay Marriages." So, Madam Speaker, understandably there have been and continue to be concerns within these shores that somehow a marriage officer may be asked, requested, required, to carry out a ceremony between persons of the same sex.

Madam Speaker, my own view is that even as the Law currently stands, they could lawfully refuse to carry out any such ceremony and, further, that even if such ceremony were carried out, arguably it would be void because the Common Law definition of marriage, the Common Law understanding of marriage (as I outlined when I started), is that it has always been a contract between a male and a female person of required or above a minimum age. But, no one—particularly in these times—wants to leave things to chance, wants to deal with the uncertainty of the outcome of a court case.

Madam Speaker, concerns about this provision in Cayman are not new. They stretch back quite some years. It was interesting to me to hear the three most articulate Members of the Opposition talk at length about this issue and their grave concern about it. I guess that they must have had those concerns when they were in office, but lacked the will or where-withal to do anything about it.

The Bill is now here. The proposed amendment to define marriage has been brought by this Government, brought in the context of the ongoing debate about constitutional change and particularly the inclusion for the first time in a Cayman Islands Constitution of a Bill of Rights.

Madam Speaker, there are those who do not believe that we should limit the marriage contract to persons of the opposite sex. We have seen and will continue to see opinions written by various persons and opinions articulated by persons in the various media. There are some who will say, even some on my own side, that my own views about things that I consider matters of personal choice are liberal. And I am, Madam Speaker, by and large, a person who believes that the way individuals want to conduct their lives, the churches they wish to go to, or whether they do not wish to go to church, whether they want to be Christian or Muslim or nowhereians, is really a matter of personal choice.

There are those who will say that we should rail against things like homosexuality and homosexual conduct. And everyone is entitled to their own view about those things. My own 'educated' view, and I say that because I have done the research, is that homosexuality has been around as long as mankind has been around. So, whether it is right or wrong, whether the Bible condemns it or does not condemn it, it is a reality of life.

The Good Lord made us all with judgment, the ability to decide what we wanted to do—free will to choose right, to choose wrong. Homosexuality is not the only wrong in the world. If one accepts that it is wrong.

I make no judgment about any of those things. I just want to acknowledge that these are some of the realities of life. But this much I believe, this country—wherein my roots lie—has always held the institution of marriage as a solemn contract between a man and a woman. That is part of our cultural social religious fabric. To those that like that or do not like that, it is a matter for them.

This is a country a society very much in transition, very much in a flux. It has been the case for 40 years. But certainly in more recent times the numbers of immigrants have increased by four- or fivefold. Obviously, they come with their own preconceived views and notions, ideas and cultures, and that is fair and that is to be expected. But I still believe that those who rail against the Caymanian expression of what their culture is and what the mores of this country were, arguably still are and should be, those who rail against those things, when you look at the opinions expressed in the various media—and I do, very carefully—almost without exception, those who rail against these things have come from somewhere else. So their perspective is not the Caymanian perspective.

I know with every part of my being that the moral compass of this country is still pointed absolutely clearly, directly in favour of preserving marriage as an institution between a man and a woman. It is our job, our responsibility as legislators, to ensure that what is regarded as the social standard, what is regarded as the social values of this country, are preserved to the best that we can do.

I do not try to say that by making this amendment and by doing what we do that we shall forever preserve what we consider today to be the Caymanian value system and way of life. I say with some regret that I believe that that is going to change; and if I live the natural span of my life, probably within my lifetime. But that will be for other legislators, for another House in another time.

What we are seeking to do here today is to put beyond doubt what the marriage contract means; to define the marriage contract clearly as one which can only be executed between people of the opposite sex. That is what this is about. I have said what I have said in the way I have said it because everyone in this House, in fact everyone in the world is entitled to his own view. And some of my colleagues on this side, and some Members of the Opposition on the other side have more fundamental beliefs and may be more judgmental about those who do not accord with their fundamental beliefs. That is a matter for them.

The position I take is not based on my personal belief alone. I believe everyone is entitled to his own choice. But the standards, the values of a country must reflect what the people of the country in large part believe. Otherwise, the system cannot work.

So, Madam Speaker, I am passing no judgment on persons of the same sex who live together who carry out their lives in a lifestyle which does not accord with my lifestyle, or, indeed, carry on a lifestyle which many would condemn. I am not joining the list of those who condemn them. I am simply saying that I believe it is our obligation as legislators to reflect what the majority of the people of this country—and by that I mean the Caymanian people—believe, and believe firmly.

The Christian religion has been the principal religion of these Islands ever since there was settlement here. It is still the principal religion of these Islands, but there are now many others. But taking the position we take I do not believe in any way offends any of those other religions because all of the religions of which I am aware promote the marriage contract and promote it only as a contract between persons of the opposite sex.

Now, Madam Speaker, there has been raised the spectre of civil unions, particularly in the context of this debate. While I am trying to restrain myself from any real criticism of the Opposition, I have to say that in this case what they have done here today, again, is to simply continue the scaremongering that has been part of their campaign to prevent us getting through with needed, urgent constitutional change over the course of the past year.

Madam Speaker, we know, because the UK has told us specifically, that we must have a bill of rights. I have always believed that a bill of rights is a good thing. In Cayman, in a large part due to the exploitation of fears by the Opposition and others, human rights have been painted as something terrible. Have those who opposed the concept of human rights and an inclusion of a bill of rights had any regard to the amount of blood that has been shed so that people could live out their lives making personal choices free from torture, from slavery, from the whim of an evil government—that is, at its core, what a bill of rights is about. It is about protecting the rights of the individual from invasion by an evil or, even if they are not evil, by an oppressive government. That is what a bill of rights is about.

What has happened over the course of time is the growth of the sort of horizontal growth of legislation protecting or seeking to protect different forms and types of behaviour under the general umbrella of human rights. And, without a doubt, in some places, Canada and Europe, it has resulted in the most bizarre decisions. And it is these decisions which have caused real fear in many instances. By and large in the context of what is being proposed for Cayman, those fears are unwarranted, but I do not blame people, particularly people who have not the knowledge, or who have not had the situation properly explained to them, I do not blame people from being fearful of what they believe is a bad thing.

But I do blame the Opposition—who ought to know better, if they do not know better—from exploiting those fears and creating a situation where people believe that the mere mention of human rights or a bill of rights is going to somehow ensure that the Cayman Islands becomes Sodom and Gomorrah and is headed for eternal damnation, because that is where we are in many instances.

Madam Speaker, this situation of a civil partnership . . . I want to address some of the issues raised by the Second Elected Member for West Bay when he talked about civil partnerships, when he talked about worries and concerns that, he says, Caymanians have that persons who are in same sex relationships are not accorded the same rights and privileges that flow from the marriage contract. Only under a marriage contract do certain rights automatically follow—rights of inheritance, rights to pension, various other rights that have come to be known as flowing from the marriage contract.

To give persons who are not married to each other those rights requires separate and specific legislation. Hence, the need in the United Kingdom to pass the Civil Partnership Act, because under their Marriage Act or whatever it is called, I am not sure . . . I think it is called the Matrimonial Causes Act, I have forgotten the specific title. But it does not matter. Under the Marriage Law which allows persons of the opposite sex to become joined in holy matrimony in the United Kingdom, only persons of the opposite sex are able to do that, and only then are they able to acquire the rights and privileges flowing from a marriage.

So, to give to persons of the same sex who are in a relationship any of the usual rights and privileges that flow from the marriage contract requires separate, distinct legislation. Even in a country that we believe to be as liberal as the United Kingdom, they did not promote the civil partnership relationship to the status of marriage; hence the separate piece of legislation.

Under that legislation, persons of the same sex who are in longstanding relationships are able to have rights of pension, succession, health insurance and so forth, which would normally only be available to persons under the marriage contract. So they passed a separate piece of legislation to deal with that.

Now, the only way any of that could impact the Cayman Islands would be in one of two ways: The first, and obvious, is that if this Legislative Assembly came to the view that this was right and proper and passed something akin to the Civil Partnerships Act in the United Kingdom and gave persons of same sex relationships those rights and privileges. I do not think, at least in the presently constituted House, there is much fear of that. The other way would be if the United Kingdom extended to the Cayman Islands the provisions akin to those in the Civil Partnerships Act.

Madam Speaker, when Minister Meg Munn was here earlier this year, and, indeed, when she returned to the UK and gave evidence before the Foreign Affairs Committee, she gave assurances that the UK had no intention or desire to apply the Civil Partnership provisions or extend them to the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, if I might just quote from a publication in Cayman New News and in the Caymanian Compass following her visit here earlier this year, she said (just a moment, to make sure I quote the right paragraph) . . . from the Caymanian Compass, Tuesday, 15 April 2008. “UK Parliamentary Under-Secretary of State Meg Munn previously said Brit- ain has no intention of forcing Cayman to accept civil unions or civil partnerships, even though she is personally in favour of allowing such arrangements to exist."

And then when Ms. Munn and others were summoned to give evidence to the Foreign Affairs Committee on, I believe it was the 26 March, this year, she said (and this is a direct quote), "We do not intend to say that territories must enact, for example, civil partnerships. That is not something we have gone that far with currently. It is an issue that I was questioned about at great length when I visited Cayman, which expressed concern that signing up to human rights within its constitution would automatically mean that it would have to have civil partnerships. That was not our view," she emphasised."

So, Madam Speaker, that is, to the best of our knowledge and belief in Government, the current UK Government's current position on that matter. But I hasten to add that that guarantee is as good as the particular state of mind of those who have given it at that particular time. The view of the UK Government could change. Indeed, the UK Government itself, like all other governments, could change. And it is possible that the United Kingdom could extend to the Cayman Islands or insist that the Cayman Islands recognise civil unions. I believe everyone on the other side of the House is fully aware that not only can the UK do that, but we have some precedents for them dealing with such matters by Order in Council, if they feel that it is that important; or if they feel, they believe, or if they are told that any of the EU conventions require them and, consequently, their Overseas Territories to comply in that respect.

That is a reality, Madam Speaker. The removal of capital punishment from our law books, and the legalisation of homosexual acts in private are two fairly recent examples of the UK taking that position.

But, knowing what our constitutional status is, knowing that however we dress it up we are still a colony—whether we call it a territory or not—of the United Kingdom and ultimately subject to their decision making under the present constitutional arrangement, that is a reality that we have to face.

The only way to retain our status as a British Overseas Territory, but to restrict the UK's ability to extend legislation or conventions to us, is if we have the requisite changes agreed to and made to the Cayman Islands Constitution. Madam Speaker, that is a point we have been making on this side for upwards of a year—a point which seems to be lost on the Opposition who every time there is an issue relating to these matters tends to do, as the Third Elected Member for West Bay did this morning, [and that is] to set out all of the concerns and ask for assurances from the Government that various things will not happen when he and they know full well that we have no ability under the present Constitution arrangement to offer any guarantees to anyone. We are not ultimately in control of the decision-making in relation to such matters under the present Constitution. And that, Madam Speaker, is why we have been pressing for constitutional change, while the process which has been frustrated time and time again by the foot-dragging and deliberate hurdles placed in its way by the Opposition is doing this country such a grave disservice.

But they come here, Madam Speaker, and on a matter like this get up and talk, like the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has done, about the Christian virtues and values and how we need to ensure and we'll go down in flames, and I don't care what happens to my political career, but I am going to stand for this . . . if you want to stand for it, you have to do something about it—something more than talk! You have to get with the programme, work with the Government to get the requisite changes to the Constitution which will restrict the ability of the United Kingdom to legislate for us in matters such as these.

And they have the gall, Madam Speaker, to come here today to talk about this matter of such critical importance and how it will destroy the fabric and value system of the Caymanian society if we do not ensure that marriage is preserved for those persons of the opposite sex. That's fine. But what are you doing to help ensure that we preserve it?

What you are doing is what the Leader of the Opposition did just this week—refuse to cooperate with the Government, even to sit down to talk with us about how we can present a concerted position to the FCO when they arrive on 29 September.

Where is he?

He spends more time off the Island than he does here. He is not here today—knowing full well, weeks ago, that the House was to start on 5 September.

Madam Speaker, this is serious business. We must take the business of this country seriously. Grandstanding here, making nice, fancy speeches, which, if they have any substance, certainly do not have any sincerity. That is not good enough. The country is being sold short.

Whatever they say about us, this Government is a Government of action. We work. We research. We try to move the agenda forward. It has taken us many months to get to this point to propose an amendment that is one line long—marriage means the union between a man and a woman as husband and wife. Why? Because we wanted to understand the ramifications, the implications of what we were doing before making this proposal to this honourable House.

I heard the Second Elected Member for West Bay get up and say, Well, it doesn't go far enough. We need to define that it is a male or female from birth. Did he think we did not consider that point?

Does he even begin to understand the area that we are walking into now, an area that no country in the world has yet satisfactorily come to grips with? It is a huge ethical issue about gender change.

Madam Speaker, I do not have the answer to this. I do not have the answer, and I am not pretending that I do. I am just saying that I want the Second Elected Member for West Bay—who is my good friend, of which everyone is aware—to think about this. In fact, Madam Speaker, I believe that he could be redeemed. But he has to choose better company!

[Laughter]

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: But, Madam Speaker . . . a light moment, Madam Speaker, in a serious argument, serious debate.

Madam Speaker, think of this: someone was born a male. Through gender . . . what do they call that, again? There is an expression, which now escapes me. But through a sex change (let me just use the basic) they change their gender, and to all intents and purposes and to all appearances they are now female. The Second Elected Member for West Bay suggested that we should ensure that in the definition we say that marriage means the union between a man so born, and a woman so born, as husband and wife.

So, this individual who comes to be married was born a male but is now a female. And so, if we write it the way the Second Elected Member for West Bay wants it written, that person born a male, now a female, cannot marry who? Cannot marry a male. So what are we saying then, that the person born a male—who is now a female—could marry a female?

Those are the kinds of difficult questions that you have because . . .

[inaudible interjections and laughter]

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Those are the very, very difficult, ethical questions that arise in those circumstances.

Madam Speaker, we have taken the position on the basis of advice that we should stick to the simple definition of marriage as a union between a man and a woman as husband and wife.

I hope, because I saw them all get up and walk out . . . I did not mean to run them. But, the Second Elected Member for West Bay still soldiers on.

I do hope that when we come to the vote that these concerns and issues that the Opposition has raised will not prevent them from voting in favour of this amendment. But, more broadly speaking, the Opposition really must get behind the constitutional modernisation process. They must come and sit down with the Government for us to do as best we can to iron out what I believe are few differences between us in relation to these changes. Almost every day we are faced with instances which scream out for constitutional modernisation because, as a country, as a Government, as a people, we have moved way beyond in practice and in expectation the Constitution of 1972.

At the risk of digressing, what transpired yesterday in relation to the ill-fated police helicopter is another example, Madam Speaker, of why the present Constitutional construct does not support the way things need to be done. And so, as I said earlier, if we are to have greater control over what happens to this little place, not just in relation to changes to financial regulations and conventions, but what happens to the social fabric and mores of this place, we have to have a Constitution which limits the ability of the United Kingdom to impose or extend certain provisions to us. That is the reality.

Above everything else that needs to be done to ensure that we have a modern Constitution in keeping not just with this time, but which is forward-looking and able to deal [with] and support the changes which are to come, above all else the Cayman Islands itself needs greater control. The United Kingdom needs to be restricted in what it can do to us, what it can extend to us, and what it can force us to comply with.

And so, Madam Speaker, this little amendment—one line long—I believe provides an excellent example of why real constructive, progressive, constitutional change is required. So, my final plea to the Opposition is to broaden their view and to look beyond tomorrow or the next election and come together with the Government. Let us do something truly honourable, something that is truly statesman-like, something that we can all in time to come look back and say I was proud to be part of that legacy.

Let us leave for the people of the Cayman Islands a Constitution that is worthy of us—our aspirations, our hopes, our dreams; one which continues to preserve our cultural, social values, and which provides the basis for a brighter future, a brighter tomorrow for these Cayman Islands.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the Honourable Leader of Government Business wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am told by my colleagues that all I should do is get up and say Amen!

[laughter]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, it is good to have listened to the debate from both sides on this Bill before us. In my introduction I said it was simple and straightforward. Many of the points that have come out are points that we deliberated on for quite some time before coming to the conclusion that the amending Bill in front of us should be crafted in the way that it has.

Madam Speaker, my colleague, the Minister of Education, and also the Second Official Member, addressed the vast majority of the issues raised. It is important to note, as my colleague has just said, that the one real issue that we do not find ourselves with an easy answer for is the issue of individuals who may have undergone a sex change.

Many years ago we only used to hear about that in the Enquirer. I am sure all of us remember that tabloid. I can remember when I was much younger, and sneaking to read that. I was trying to understand how that could ever happen. But it does. Thank God it is not something that is heard of very often. But it does create some difficulty, and the fact of the matter is that there is not an easy answer for that. The truth of the matter is, in order to be able to deal with it the best way we know how is when we speak to the definition of marriage, and it being the union of a man and a woman.

Madam Speaker, there were questions raised about whether this Bill, once passed, will be assented to. I do not want to go down the road [where] every bill the Government brings forward the question needs to be asked, Do we have the assurance of the Government that it will be assented to by the Governor?

The fact of the matter is that in 2007 very similar legislation was passed in our sister Overseas Territory of Anguilla. That legislation was assented to and that is now law in the Overseas Territory of Anguilla. So, that in itself is clear indication that there would be no problem. And, of course, we know the process. The Honourable Second Official Member prepares a report on each bill passed in this Legislative Assembly to advise His Excellency the Governor, which predicates his assenting to the bill. Certainly if our Second Official Member had any intentions of not advising that it should be assented to, it certainly would not have come to Cabinet and been approved. So, there should be no problem in that regard.

Madam Speaker, the question was also asked as to whether we could ascertain the disposition of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on this issue. I am not 100 per cent sure whether my colleague specifically addressed this, but we have a few quotes from Ms. Meg Munn when she visited us not so long ago. One of those quotes, Madam Speaker, with your permission—

The Speaker: He did that.

Go ahead.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am realising that it was quoted, but I just want to repeat with your permission.

She said: “We do not intend to say that territories must enact, for example, civil partnerships. That is not something we have gone that far with currently. It is an issue that I was questioned about at great length when I visited Cayman, which expressed concern that signing up to human rights within its constitution would automatically mean that it would have to have civil partnerships. That was not our view, . . .”

Madam Speaker, she was also asked (and I do not have the quote) about same sex marriages. She said very clearly that that was a matter for each individual territory. She made that very clear to us. We have our position and we are now making the amendment to our legislation, which is all we can do at present.

In doing this now, assuming safe passage, as my colleague the Minister for Education mentioned in his contribution, the next step to ensure that all of these questions about giving assurances are taken care of, is to ensure that a new constitution contains the necessary wording.

I want to use the example of the Constitution of the British Virgin Islands, which is a fairly new constitution. It is titled the Virgin Islands Constitution Order 2007. If memory serves me right, it was enacted in July 2007.

Section 20 of that Constitution, under the heading “Protection of the right to marry and found a family” subsection (1) “Every man and woman of a marriageable age [I am going through it slowly. Marriageable age is whatever our own local legislation dictates.] has the right to marry and found a family in accordance with laws enacted by the Legislature.” That is, their own legislature.

Subsection (3) says “Nothing in any law or done under its authority shall be held to contravene subsection (1) [which is the section I just read] to the extent that it is reasonably justifiable in a democratic society— . . . (b) for regulating, in the public interest, the procedures and modalities of marriage;”

So you see it is obvious that London, or the FCO, approved this new Constitution last year for the British Virgin Islands. Absolutely in 2008 they are not going to argue with that, hence my colleague’s call to the altar for the Opposition to let us get on with it. It is but one example of why we need to engage and complete the modernisation process with our Constitution. Any assurance that they wish, this British Virgin Islands Constitution gives all of the evidence that is needed to prove that we can have that assurance.

My colleague went on a little bit further, and he did not stay with it to make it one of his pounding issues, but beyond having this in our new Constitution is also the restriction in a new Constitution for the United Kingdom to be able to extend certain legislation to us, or the manner in which it is done by Order in Council.

Madam Speaker, I wanted to simply reiterate those points so that the fears that have been expressed . . . we know the path to cause those fears to be unfounded; we simply have to follow it.

The last point I want to make, Madam Speaker, is the Third Elected Member for West Bay was coming on in his own way, and just [the way] I hear him on the radio talking about the right to individual petition. The facts are that the right to individual petition, that is, the right to individual petition to the European Commission of Human Rights (ECHR), that is where that argument is all centred. That has existed with us from a very long time ago. Here are the facts: It has existed with everyone who has signed up to it. And that includes Her Majesty's Overseas Territories. Some of us have had it extended forever more; others have had it extended for finite time periods. It so happened that one of our extensions lapsed. No attention was paid and it was brought to our attention. But it is not for the Third Elected Member for West Bay or anyone else to try to make it seem that the Government in 2006 took it on their own to sign up to this thing. That is not how it was.

Madam Speaker, you know as well as I what it is to be in the Opposition. It is our job to make sure that they are not left alone going down their curving paths when they know better and the facts need to be known. So the facts with that issue are that the individual petition, the right to individual petition, is simply something that was re-instituted, which had existed and had lapsed. It was almost like a lease and you are still in the building, and the lease lapsed and you need to regularise the situation. That is really all that was. Because there were many individuals in this territory who were saying the whole world has this right and if any individual here is not satisfied going through our system, and everybody else has this recourse, why are we not having the recourse? My question to them is, should an individual not have that recourse? That is, the individual right to petition. That is the way it seems they are saying it should be. Madam Speaker, we cannot take that position as a government. People have their rights.

Now, that has nothing to do with this Bill itself, you know, because they are trying to tie that in. And when I say it has nothing to do with it, what I mean is that they are trying to tie that in to say that if we have our own legislation like this . . . let me tell you what they are trying to do: If we have our own legislation with the definition of marriage (as is being proposed now in this), and some persons are not satisfied, that, because they have the right to individual petition, they could go to the European Court of Human Rights, make a petition against our own legislation, and who knows what they might say. They might come back and say, yes a man and a man can get married. That's what they are saying.

But, Madam Speaker, I am saying to you that once our Constitution has what it has to have in it as it should, and as we are going to propose it—and I hope the Opposition does not argue against that one—then what are we worrying about? So let us not try to confuse the issues.

This, Madam Speaker, is what is right to do. This is all we can do at this point in time. But let us at least try to get on as quickly as we can to do the next step, which will put away all the fears that people may have.

Madam Speaker, I want to thank you for your indulgence. I want to also thank all colleagues on both sides of the House for the stirring and lively debate on the points that have been brought out. I am quite sure that all of us understand the issues that are at hand with this and I am confident that the Bill will have safe passage.

Thank you.

MOTIONS

Government Motion No. 6/08-09—Amendment to the Development Plan 1997—Proposed Rezoning National Housing Development Trust

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business, Minister responsible for the Ministry of District Administration, Planning, Agriculture and Housing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In moving this, with your permission I will move it and read the Motion at the same time.

Thank you.

Madam Speaker, I beg to move Government Motion No. 6/08-09 entitled Amendment to the Development Plan 1997—Proposed Rezoning, National Housing Development Trust, which reads as follows:

WHEREAS in 2008, the Central Planning Authority received an application for the rezoning of Registration Section, South Sound, Block 15C Parcel 28 from Institutional to Low Density Residential and Institutional;

AND WHEREAS the CPA originally considered the application on April 16, 2008 (CPA/15/08 Item 4.1) and resolved that the rezone application be put out for public comment;

AND WHEREAS the proposed amendments were advertised in the Caymanian Compass on April 28, 30, and May 6 and 9, 2008, in accordance with section 11(2) of the Development and Planning Law (2008 Revision) and the application was placed on display in the Planning Department. During the comment period no letters of objections were received.

AND WHEREAS on July 30, 2008, the CPA again considered the application in light of the public review process (CPA/26/08 Item 4.1) and it was resolved to forward the proposed amendments to the Ministry with the recommendation that the proposed amendments be forwarded to the Legislative Assembly for approval.

AND WHEREAS on August 5, 2008, Cabinet approved the rezoning application and further that the matter be referred on to the Legislative Assembly;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED that in accordance with section 10 (2) (b) of the Development and Planning Law (2008 Revision), the Central Planning Authority hereby recommends and submits to the Legislative Assembly the following proposal for alteration to the Development Plan 1997, a summary and map are attached hereto;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that, Registration Section, South Sound, Block 15C Parcel 28, be rezoned from Institutional to Low Density Residential and Institutional.

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved. Does the mover wish to speak thereto?

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In 2008, as the Motion says, the Central Planning Authority received an application for the rezoning of registration section South Sound Block 15C Parcel 28 from Institutional to Low Density Residential and Institutional. The proposed rezoning encompasses a total area of approximately 28 acres and is located off Fairbanks Road adjacent to the L'Ambience Apartment development.

The proposal calls for the parcel to be rezoned from the current zoning of it being entirely institutional to a zoning which would place a portion of it to remain institutional and the other portion of it to be rezoned to low density residential.

The CPA considered the application, as the Motion says, and resolved to commence the 60-day notification and advertising phase. This was done. It was advertised as is required by law. In addition to that, the application was placed on display in the Planning Department, and during that comment period no letters of objections were received. So, when the CPA reconsidered it on July 30, it was resolved to forward this application. On 5 August, Cabinet approved the rezoning application and it has been brought down to the Legislative Assembly.

Madam Speaker, there is a written summary of the rezoning application and there is a map illustrating the location of the proposed rezone.

And just to say what it is all about, Madam Speaker, this entire parcel of Crown land was zoned institutional because that is where the Fairbanks Prison site is. The Fairbanks site and also the detention centre for the refugees are located there. But it does not use up a tremendous amount of the Crown land that exists. It is one of the locations that the National Housing Development Trust intends to use for one of its four programmes.

The site is such that a retention pond is going to be created and the portion that will be rezoned to low density residential is going to be raised to either five or six feet above sea level to make sure that the ground is quite high enough to create the subdivision to build these homes. That is the whole purpose of the exercise.

Madam Speaker, we searched far and wide, not only for Crown land, but land that could be acquired that was suitable. This was the most suitable area that could be found outside of other land that the National Housing Development Trust owns. So the purpose of this entire exercise is to now create by law the proper zoning for this parcel so that the application for the subdivision may be entertained by the Central Planning Authority that we can move the programme forward so that we can begin construction of these homes in the district of George Town.

I commend this Government Motion to this honourable House and I trust that it will receive approval by all Members.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND OF REPORTS

Cayman Islands Annual Economic Report 2007

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House, the Cayman Islands Annual Economic Report 2007.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Does the Honourable Third Official Member wish to speak thereto?

Hon. G. Kenneth Jefferson: Yes thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, the 2007 Annual Economic Report is a comprehensive report of the domestic economy based on data and other economic information for the 2007 calendar year. The information in this report is as collected by the Economics and Statistics Office, and that is that the information in the report is as of 30 June 2008, but it relates to the 2007 calendar year.

The report also includes an overview of the global economic environment based mainly on published updates from the International Monetary Fund and the World Tourism Organisation, as of the same cut off date, 30 June 2008.

Madam Speaker, the 2007 Annual Economic Report contains an executive summary and a summary indicators sheet, which are intended for easy reference of the key economic developments during the year. I will provide details of the international and regional economic environment in 2007 as compared to 2006, and then I will proceed to summarise our own domestic performance in 2007 as compared to 2006.

The International and Regional Economic Environment

Madam Speaker, the Cayman Islands economic performance in 2007 was recorded against the backdrop of a global economic standstill, particularly for the United States of America. The global economy grew by 4.9 per cent in 2007 compared to 5 per cent in 2006.

The advance economies, which provide most of the demand for our financial and tourism services, also grew, albeit at a slower rate of 2.7 per cent in 2007 against the 3 per cent increase in 2006. This performance occurred amidst growing financial difficulties, specifically in the United States, and to a lesser extent in Western Europe. The mortgage crisis in the US spread to global financial markets while the commodities market was increasingly challenged by increases in food and oil prices. During 2007 the US grew by 2.2 per cent as compared to 2.9 per cent in 2006.

In 2007, the Caribbean recorded a strong growth performance, although this was also modest compared to 2006. In 2007, growth of Gross Domestic Product (GDP) in the Caribbean averaged to 5.7 per cent as the region benefited from growth in visitor arrivals and construction. Growth in the Caribbean in 2007 was, however, lower compared to the 7.8 per cent increase registered in 2006.

The Cayman Islands being dependent on imports from abroad benefited from lower growth in consumer prices in advanced economies, as inflation in these countries averaged 2.2 per cent in 2007, slightly lower than in 2006.

Madam Speaker, inflation in the United States moderated as demands for goods and services weakened. In the latter half of 2007, however, the Federal Reserve Board aggressively decreased interest rates to boost consumer spending. The US Federal Funds Rate reached 4.25 per cent at the end of 2007 from 5.25 per cent in 2006.

The global financial markets have been in turmoil since August 2007 due to deepening defaults on sub-prime mortgages in the US, which extended to other advanced nations exposed to the housing financial crisis.

The financial crisis also affected the foreign exchange market as evidenced by the falling real effective exchange rate for the US dollar since mid 2007. This is attributed to the dwindling of foreign investment in US bonds and equities, and the dampening of the US growth prospects and the consecutive interest rate reductions.

The global tourism market expanded in 2007 as the volume of international arrivals rose by 6 per cent, which was led by the Middle East with an estimated 13 per cent increase. Overall, the industry remained buoyant despite various factors impacting it during the year. These factors range from airline fuel surcharges, exchange rate fluctuations due to a weakened US dollar, and the US economic slowdown and credit crisis.

Within the Caribbean region mild increases in stay over arrivals were noted for destinations such as Barbados, which experienced a 2.1 per cent increase;

Jamaica, a 1.3 per cent increase; and the Dominican Republic, which had an increase of 0.4 per cent. The exceptions are Cuba and the Bahamas, which suffered losses of 3.1 per cent and 5 per cent respectively. Meanwhile, the Caribbean cruise tourism business had a mixed performance in 2007.

Domestic Economy

Turning now to the Cayman Islands specifically, I am pleased to report that the Cayman Islands achieved a respectable growth in 2007 despite global economic challenges. In summary, at prices existing in 2007, per capita income or average Gross Domestic Produce at the end of 2007 recorded a modest increase of 2.8 per cent to reach $40,242 as compared to $39,137 in 2006. This increase was achieved amidst an upturn in the inflation rate.

Gross Domestic Product (GDP) was estimated to have expanded in real terms by 2.2 per cent in 2007. In nominal terms GDP grew by approximately 5.2 per cent in 2007 on account of higher average inflation.

The Consumer Price Index (CPI) inflation rate was recorded in 2007 at 2.9 per cent as compared to 0.8 per cent in 2006.

Inflation in 2007 was impacted by higher international prices for food, and oil and petroleum products. International prices for corn, wheat and rice all contributed to higher food prices. Consequently, food which accounts for approximately 12 per cent of the household expenditure basket went up by 5.2 per cent.

High and volatile oil and petroleum prices also impacted the average prices of transport and communication services which increased by 2.6 per cent.

The overall price index for housing fell by 0.2 per cent.

All of the categories in the CPI basket recorded positive increases: household equipment by 7.8 per cent; personal goods and services, 6 per cent; clothing, 3.8 per cent; alcohol and beverage, 2.2 per cent; and education and medical services, 1.8 per cent.

The economic growth in 2007 in the Cayman Islands was supported by a robust performance of the financial services sector: Growth in stay over arrivals, higher public consumption expenditure, as well as strong performance of the utilities sector.

Madam Speaker, some of the highlights of the economic performance in these sectors are as follows: In the financial services sector, Moody's Investors Services, one of the top two international commercial providers of independent credit ratings, issued its report on the Cayman Islands in February 2008. In general the report was upbeat and gave the country the highest country ceilings for long term foreign currency obligations; short term foreign currency obligations and short term foreign currency deposits. Overall the sector recorded positive growth in 2007.

With the exception of the Banking and Trust sector, increases were seen in insurance, company licences, mutual funds, stock exchange listings and capitalizations, and company registrations.

Madam Speaker, the tourism sector experienced a mixed performance in 2007 after an unusually strong growth in cruise tourism in 2006. Total visitor arrivals stood at 2,007,172 in 2007, which was an 8.7 per cent decline compared to the performance in 2006 on account of the downturn in cruise arrivals.

Air arrivals accounted for 291,506 visitors, an increase of 9.1 per cent from the 2006 level. Cruise arrivals reached 1,715,666 persons, which represented an 11.1 per cent lower movement than in the previous year. The impressive growth in the stay over market arrivals was quieted by the decline in cruise arrivals and resulted in the reduction of overall tourist expenditures of $399.1 million in 2007, as compared to $427.4 million in 2006.

Madam Speaker, in construction, building permits and project approvals for houses declined during the year, although building permits for government projects increased during the period.

Consistent with the growth in consumption spending, demand for utilities surged in 2007 over the previous year. Growth in electricity demand rose by 8.7 per cent despite increases in electricity rates due to pressures on global oil prices. Meanwhile, demand for water accelerated in 2007 as it jumped by 6.2 per cent compared to 2006.

In 2007, the supply of labour based on the results of the 2007 Fall labour force survey, rose marginally by 1.4 per cent and stood at 36,476 persons. Total employment in 2007 reached 35,081 persons, slightly higher than in 2006. The unemployment rate increased to 3.8 per cent in 2007, from 2.6 per cent in 2006.

Despite the easing of construction activity this sector remained the largest employer in 2007, as it accounted for 16.1 per cent of employment, although this year is slightly lower compared to the 18.1 per cent it enjoyed in 2006.

Other major employers were business services, 12 per cent of the labour force; wholesale and retail, 10.3 per cent; restaurant, bars, hotels and condominiums, 10 per cent; and financial services, 9.5 per cent of the labour force.

Madam Speaker, I would like to conclude my contribution by mentioning that we have been consistently trying to improve the content of the Annual Economics Reports. The Report for 2007, which has just been tabled, contains three feature articles on topics that are relevant, not only to the economic performance in 2007, but also to those over the longer term.

The first article is found in Box 1 on page 16, which presents a decomposition of the inflation into food and non-food items, and possible causes of the high prices.

The second article in Box 2 on page 25 in the report features an explanation of money supply indicators.

The third article is found in Box 3 on page 36 in the report and presents the legislative changes in the financial sector.

The fourth article in Box 4 on page 57 looks at the latest Government bond rating.

Madam Speaker, the 2007 Annual Economic Report will be circulated to the general public via the website of the Economic and Statistics Office (that is, www.eso.ky).

Finally, Madam Speaker, I would strongly urge public and private business entities, and the wider public at large, to obtain a copy of the 2007 Annual Report either in hard copy format or to read an electronic copy because the Report contains a wealth of factual information about the performance of Global and Regional Caribbean Economies as well as our own local domestic economy.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MEMBERS AND MINISTERS OF THE CABINET

Post Hurricane Ike Assistance to the Turks and Caicos Islands

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, this time of year is always one of trouble for, not only many of us in the region, but our brothers and sisters further afield. Tropical disturbances becoming hurricanes, cyclones and everything else do have some serious impact on us. And in very recent times we have seen that this hurricane season itself is one of the most active that we have seen in several years. About a week ago we experienced to a certain degree the effects of hurricane Gustav. And our brothers and sisters around the Caribbean, many of them, Madam Speaker, have been facing more terrible times. We have the small island nation of Haiti, and from all indications they are in dire straits. We have seen our neighbours in Jamaica also face some very serious damage and loss of life as was experienced in Haiti, and our hearts go out to them.

Madam Speaker, after passing us Gustav went across the western side of Cuba and many of our friends, and in some instances extended families, in the Isle of Pines experienced severe devastation and there are moves afoot to try to get some assistance to them.

Madam Speaker, just a couple of days ago our fellow overseas territory, the Turks and Caicos Islands, experienced the devastation of hurricane Ike. And in speaking to Premier Misick, as recently as about an hour ago, he was over in Grand Turk and Grand Turk and South Caicos, as I understand from him, were the two islands that received the most damage. And from his description it seems like those two islands are somewhat similar to what we were right after hurricane Ivan.

So, Madam Speaker, I just wanted to take the moment to make sure that everyone understands that we, the legislators and, indeed, the Government, are conscious of our friends and the trouble that they face. In fact, I'm sure it brings back memories of, especially, hurricane Ivan. For some of us it brings back memories that go further back. And we will be considering whatever is practical and possible for us to do.

Our resources, Madam Speaker, are limited. But when we faced our peril our friends, many of them, were willing to assist us with whatever they could, and it is our duty to do the same. As soon as we are with a better handle on what works best and what will benefit best, Madam Speaker, the Government will be looking to assist wherever we can, however we can. It is difficult to be very specific now because we need to get communication from our friends and neighbours to find out exactly what needs are most critical. But as soon as we know that we will certainly do all that we possibly can. And I would ask the people in the Cayman Islands to make sure that we say a little prayer for our friends and neighbours during these times.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Private Member's Motion No 5/08-09—Cuban Caymanian Family Connections

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, before I move the Motion I want to associate the Opposition with the remarks of the Government. We, too, are very conscious of the plight today of our neighbours and colleagues, and those whom we know in the region that has been damaged, in particular the severe damage done to the Turks Islands, Grand Turk. And while other countries have been [damaged], as I said, we can be associated with them because we know them so well. And they themselves are an Overseas Territory.

I cannot help but remember the many messages of support and friendship I received (as the then Leader of Government) from the region and the wider world and, in particular, the support of the Honourable Floyd Hall, who is the Deputy Premier and Finance Minister of the Turks and Caicos. And it is his home island and constituency, Grand Turk, that received the hardest hit, with about 80 per cent of the homes severely damaged.

So, we want to remember them in our prayers. I have already texted him a message and he has responded, Madam Speaker. But, of course, we want those remarks to be associated to all of the islands.

Before I go further, Madam Speaker, I would like to say that Motion No. 6 on today's Order Paper is seconded by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, Mrs. O'Connor-Connolly, who is unable to be here today for reasons we all know. And I know she wants to debate that Motion. I would ask the House to defer it until the next sitting.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, could we do that when we reach that?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: And I would say, Madam Speaker, that Motion No. 7/08-09 will not be ready today as well, but when I get there.

Madam Speaker, Motion No. 5 standing in my name reads as follows:

WHEREAS in the mid 1990's the then Government recognized the Caymanian family connections of many Cubans still in Cuba;

AND WHEREAS many of these said individuals were allowed to return to the Islands and legally remain in this jurisdiction;

AND WHEREAS these individuals were given permission to remain and work;

AND WHEREAS many of these individuals are experiencing difficulties regularizing their immigration position in the Islands;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government take the necessary steps to assist these persons by regularizing their legal position in the Islands.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

Third Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Cline A. Glidden, Jr.: Madam Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the Honourable mover wish to speak thereto?

Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, many, many years ago Caymanian families migrated to Nicaragua, the Bay Islands in Honduras, and the Isle of Pines in Cuba—to name a few places—to make a better life for their families. There was good trade between these Islands. And that group (maybe I should say the diaspora) assisted too in the Caymanian economy at that time in various trade.

Madam Speaker, as we all know, the economies and political turmoil in that part of Central America caused many of the families, grandchildren and their families, to return to these Islands over the years.

Today there is free travel, at least between Nicaragua and the Cayman Islands, and Honduras and these Islands.

In the 1990s, while serving my first term in the then Executive Council, representation was made to me by many Caymanian Cubans living and working in these Islands.

Recognising at that time we were importing people on work permits from all over the region, and indeed the world, to come here to work, I laid the initiative to bring Caymanian families from Cuba. It was accepted by Government at that time, Madam Speaker. The present Minister of Health was part of [that Government], and the Speaker herself, was then part of that Government. It was accepted by Government and many people with Caymanian family connections, grandchildren and great grandchildren of those who left these shores many years ago when Cuba was the gem of the Caribbean, came and made these Islands their permanent home, leaving Cuba behind with nowhere else to go.

At that time what was decided by Executive Council was that the Immigration Department would land them and give letters that would enable those people to live and work here without having to get a work permit.

Some of those letters said (and I want to quote at least two of them):

"Dear Sir,

"This is to advise that His Excellency, the Governor, has authorized that you be permitted to reside in the Cayman Islands. However, should you remain in the Cayman Islands for a qualifying period of time [six months at that time] you should contact the Immigration authorities to determine your eligibility to apply for the grant of permanent residence.

"In accordance with section 26 (1b) of the Immigration Law, 1992 [the old Law] you have also been granted the right to work in skilled or unskilled jobs.

"A copy of this letter is being dispatched to the local Immigration authorities for their records." That was signed by the officer "Assistant Secretary to the Chief Passport Officer" at the time.

Another letter said:

"Dear Sir,

"This is to advise that permission has been granted for you to reside temporarily in the Cayman Islands at the pleasure of the Governor in Executive Council. However, should you remain here for a qualifying period of time you should contact the Immigration authorities to determine your eligibility to apply for the grant of permanent residence."

It went on to say: "In accordance with section 26 (1b) of the Immigration Law, 1992, you have also been granted the right to work in skilled or unskilled jobs. This permission is being granted subject to you submitting a medical examination report to this office within the next two weeks.

"A copy of this letter is being dispatched to the local Immigration authorities for their records." Signed by the same person.

Another letter said, Madam Speaker:

"This is to advise that His Excellency, the Governor, has approved that you should be exempted the requirement of obtaining a work permit for an indefinite period. This exemption is in accordance with section 26 (b) of the Immigration Law, 1992.

"A copy of this letter is being dispatched to the local Immigration authorities for their records."

Another one said:

"Dear Sir,

"I write to advise you that the Governor, acting on the advice [that was even before, in the 80s; this is an older one, 1988. So, it goes way back for some people] of the Executive Council, has agreed that you should be exempted, in accordance with the provisions of section 23 (b) of the Caymanian Protection Law, 1984, for the requirements of having to obtain a work permit gainful occupation licence. Because of your connection with these Islands the Government has given you permission to take up residence here and this exemption is to enable you to work while here.

"I am sending a copy of this letter to the Immigration authorities for their records."

Madam Speaker, many of these types of letters were sent to various individuals who came here back in those days, in the mid 1990s. I would think, Madam Speaker, that well over 200 people took up the opportunity to come here and did satisfy the Government's intention of having [fewer] work permits to hand out.

Madam Speaker, what has happened over these last 14 years is that some of these people got their immigration position regularised and received permanent residency and/or Caymanian Status. Some, however, did not for whatever reason. However, they went ahead and built homes or purchased land and some are in the process of building their homes after purchasing their properties. Some of them have children.

In other words, Madam Speaker, since the 1990s they have lived here among us believing to be legally amongst us; lived and moved and had their being in these Islands. This is their home. They have no other home. Their children know no other home but these Cayman Islands. Some of them were born here.

However, what is happening now is that those who did not get their position regularised are attempting to do so by applying for permanent residency. Meanwhile, the Law has changed, and we all know what that is. They are applying, but those persons—many, maybe all of them, I don't know, but many contacted me—are being denied by the Board.

Representation has been made to me and other Members of the Opposition by some of these individuals. And I can see no reason why they are being denied permanent residency, even if the Law has changed. Some of them are now told that they have to get work permits. They certainly have been here for a long time—as I said, some over 14 years.

I believe the Government can find a way to remedy the situation, even if there has to be an amendment to the Law, and that is what this Motion is requesting of the Government. These individuals are here—they have families, they have purchased property or built a house and are law abiding. Hopefully, the Government will accept the Motion. That is all I am asking them to do. If it means an amendment, well, that should be done.

Thank you, Madam Speaker. I do ask the Government to support the resolution.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Madam Speaker, whether by coincidence or whatever other means, the fact of the matter is that I too have had, I believe if memory serves me right, three different individuals come to my MLA office to speak to me about their individual dilemma, but being part and parcel of exactly what the Leader of the Opposition's Private Member's Motion is all about.

About three weeks ago, I had a fairly extensive conversation with the Chief Immigration Officer because I wanted to get a clear understanding of what had transpired and what had brought the situation to where it is now. And the Leader of the Opposition is quite right. As he explained, when those people were allowed entry into the country they were given certain exemptions with regard to work permits.

But, at the end of the day, there was nothing that really regularised their status here. It was left for them, once they remained here for more than six months, to make their applications. A lot of them have done that and have since been regularised, but there are some of them now who are not, and it is a difficult situation for them.

When I got to understand the difficulty . . . some of them have children at this point in time. Some of them are engaged in the institution of marriage. Some of them, like life would have it, have had to be divorced. And there are no travel documents for some of them, such as a Cuban passport, right now, and they certainly can't get any other kind from the Cayman Islands at present. So, it really is a most difficult situation.

I asked the Chief Immigration Officer to look to see what the most seamless means are by which we could get the matter resolved. So, the Government does not have any difficulty in accepting the Motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition and seconded by the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Madam Speaker, in speaking to the Chief Immigration Officer on Friday, he is now going to turn his mind towards it, and we will see whether it is an amendment to the Law that is the most speedy resolution to the problem or what other means, whether [or not] there is a directive that can work. The Chief Immigration Officer is looking at that.

What I want to say, though, which I think is very important, is that these individuals (and perhaps children by now) who find themselves in this particular circumstance, whatever resolution is found, they need to act on it. What we are going to not be able to do is create a directive or make an amendment to the legislation and have it left like that ad infinitum. It is just physically impossible for us to do that. A reasonable window of time would be allowed for these individuals to come in and get their situation dealt with.

I want to say (although we would not term it like that) it would be something similar to an amnesty for a fixed period of time.

You see, Madam Speaker, as the Law has evolved, some of these people at this point in time find themselves with (under normal circumstances) the ability to qualify by points for permanent residence. That is one of the difficulties. And then, the other difficulty is that the way the Law is right now, as it came into force 1 January 2004, individuals who were ordinarily resident here in the country (that is, the Cayman Islands) for a period of 15 years by 1 January 2004, permanent residence was almost automatic. You had to go through the process, but it was with a view that they were not seeking 100 points, that tenure of 15 years of ordinary residence here sort of grandfathered everyone in when we dealt with it.

Many of these people, by 1 January 2004, had not been here that long, so they cannot qualify under those conditions. As a result, the way the Law is now and the way it has to be administered and exercised, is that there is no special consideration for these people, and many of them simply do not qualify under the system.

So, the Government is happy to accept the Motion. The Chief Immigration Officer is acutely aware of the exact circumstances these people face, and we now are awaiting his recommendations. He knows that we want to resolve the matter fairly speedily, so as soon as we can get a firm recommendation from the Chief Immigration Officer as to which way forward is the best way, then, certainly, the Government will act. If we have to deal with legislation we will bring the legislation forward as quickly as we possibly can.

So, again, Madam Speaker, the Government is quite happy to accept this Motion.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise . . .

The Third Elected Member for the district of Bodden Town.

Mr. Osbourne V. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, the Motion on the Floor in relation to Cuban Caymanian Family Connections, I believe, as the Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of Government Business said, is something that we need to deal with quite quickly to resolve a lot of difficulties that these individuals are having. I certainly empathise with their situation at this time.

Madam Speaker, the Motion speaks specifically to Cuba and Cubans. But, as the Leader of the Opposition alluded to in his introduction, we do have other nationalities that are also having difficulties under the Law as it stands, and these are people who have very close ties with these Islands. So, although the Motion does not specifically relate to them, in particular, I have had experience with a lot of people from the Bay Islands in Honduras. These are our people, Madam Speaker. In many ways they even talk like us and they are talented and hardworking people.

I do not know, but it seems as if when the migration took place a lot of people from the Western end of the Island, West Bay in particular, went to Cuba. And on the eastern end I find a lot of the Bay Island people are associated with Bodden Town and East End, in particular. I guess that is the reason I can speak to that specifically.

For instance, this thing where people have to get a visa to come here, I find that . . . and I do understand the need for background checks and whatnot, but you know, it is sort of painful when you know that these are your people—these are your people who have Caymanian parents or grandparents and have long lasting relationships with us. The bond between the Islands still exists today, and yet these people are subject to very restrictive immigration controls.

I daresay that they are here, I guess in many cases not having some of the difficulties that the Cubans particularly find themselves in because of the representations that were made to them and the unique situations as it relates to Cubans. But we certainly do have other situations where people need to be embraced. And these people can help to build our society. And they should be allowed to come here and get regularised quite quickly rather than having to go through . . . Some of them can't even find the where-withal to get visas or whatever to get here.

So, I am happy to hear that we are looking at this in these Islands to, as it were, embrace some of our people who left these shores for whatever reasons many, many years ago. And, yes, Cayman in many ways is better off than a lot of the countries they find themselves in now, but I feel, Madam Speaker, that they are a part of us and I would like to see something done from the immigration standpoint in relation to sorting out the paperwork in relation to these individuals.

So, Madam Speaker, with those brief comments I too support the Motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I do want to thank the Government for recognising that there are problems being faced by these individuals, and [for being] prepared to find a way to regularise their immigration position in these Islands.

Madam Speaker, I did mention other people having difficulties, and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, I think, highlighted it appropriately to some extent—not all of it, but some of it. There are others. For instance, born Caymanians who live and work here now and have children who were born in America who are having great difficulty in getting these children here in Cayman, for whatever reason.

Again, I don't know what the position is, but I know that one person (and I know others, but this one particular person) has even been on the radio complaining about having children born in the United States. He is a Caymanian and is here now, but he is having difficulty in getting them here. It is costing him a whole heap of money, which he does not have. And I believe that Government—and [while] the Leader is not in the Chamber, I know he is still in the House. And if he is not hearing this maybe the Minister or other Members who are here will bring it to his attention.

I see the Chief Secretary is here and I really want them to get that point because these kind of points can be missed, Madam Speaker, when you're only dealing with a substantive motion. This is not in the Motion, but there are, as I said, born Caymanians who have children in America, for instance, trying to bring them here and it is costing them a heap—one said, well over $10,000 he spent. I don't know why, but it seems to be some problem. I hope that the Chief Secretary would be able to look at that point when they look at the other situation with the Cuban Caymanians and the others spoken to by the Member for Bodden Town.

Madam Speaker, as I said, I thank the Government for accepting the Motion. Hopefully a remedy will soon be found because these persons now really have no immigration status and are working—some of them in decent jobs, even in the financial industry, and can be moved up—and are having difficulty because they were hired to do a specific thing and if they change now they are being told, 'look, you can't change because your immigration situation says this'. A lot of it—and when I say a lot I don't want to, you know, make a mountain out of a mole hill, but it is a mountain for those people. And there are some cases to that extent.

So, this matter needs quick attending to, Madam Speaker. And I do thank the Government for, at least, recognising that there is a problem.

The Speaker: The question is: BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government take the necessary steps to assist these persons by regularising their legal position in the Islands. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Private Member's Motion No. 5/08-09 is duly passed.

Agreed: Private Member's Motion No. 5/08-09 passed.

Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09—Scientific Study to Ascertain Cancer in the Islands (Deferred)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, as I intimated earlier, we are not ready. I did speak to the Minister of Health and we are having some discussions on the Motion. I would ask that it be deferred to the next sitting, and I so move, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Madam Speaker, I beg to second that motion.

The Speaker: The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09 be deferred to the next sitting. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09 deferred to the next sitting.

Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09—Assistance for Hurricane Shutters (Deferred)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Again, Madam Speaker, as I intimated earlier, for reasons all of us now know, I ask that this Motion be deferred to the next sitting.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

The Second Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. Rolston M. Anglin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Madam Speaker, I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09 be deferred to a later sitting. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09 deferred to a later sitting.

The Speaker: That concludes the orders of the day. I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MEMBERS AND MINISTERS
OF THE CABINET

Post Hurricane Ike Assistance to the Isle of Pines

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Just a follow up this morning to my statement on Monday and to let everyone know that, first of all, with regard to efforts by private citizens to gather help and aid for the citizens of the Isle of Pines, the Government is awaiting word from the Governor of the Isle of Pines. We have decided that if it is an acceptable proposition, we are going to be sending along with the other material that has been gathered, as many of the trailer homes that we have that are not in use, along with the barge. We are just awaiting word on that.

Also, Madam Speaker, in Cabinet yesterday the Government approved funds and the material is being procured (that is building materials) to accompany the barge that is going up. We are not sure when that is leaving, but as soon as the weather clears and they have all of the stuff put together. So, we have been able to be of assistance in that regard.

We have also been following up the situation with our fellow OTC, the Turks & Caicos Islands. Cabinet also approved funds to procure food supplies, water, tarpaulins and generators, and Cayman Airways is, as we speak, organising a cargo flight which will leave this morning to go directly to Grand Turk with that aid.

After we are finished with that, we will continue to be in contact with Premier Misick and other members of his team. If there is any other assistance we can render we will do so.

Madam Speaker, both of these territories have faced devastation. In talking with them this morning over in Turks & Caicos they were asking me what did Ivan look like, because they believe that they were under similar circumstances. And I do believe that they are under similar circumstances. Those of us who can remember will remember how terrible that was. I am only grateful to God that the country is in a position to be of help as those who have helped us in times past. We will continue to monitor the situation.

The Royal Cayman Islands Police Service, as I understand it, has also sent a contingent over to assist during this time, just as Turks & Caicos did during our time with Hurricane Ivan.

So, we continue to pray for them, and I would ask everyone to keep them in their prayers and thoughts as the days and weeks go by and they do everything that they can to recover.

Thank you.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09—Scientific Study to Ascertain Cancer in the Islands (Deferred)

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09 is being amended, and that has to come to you. So, we can move to Motion No. 6, which is assistance for Hurricane Shutters.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I appreciate your letting me know that the Motion is being amended—because I had no knowledge whatsoever that the Motion was going to be amended—and it would have to be a question for the House to move to the next Motion.

The question is that we move to Private Member's Motion No. 6/07-08 on the Order Paper. Those in favour please say Aye—

Ayes.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Those against No.

We will proceed to Motion 6/08-09 on the Order Paper.

Agreed: That the House move to Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09 on the Order Paper.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Speaker will know about the amendment when the Speaker receives the amendment. That is when the Speaker usually knows about an amendment. And, Madam Speaker, that is why I decided to put it off. I would have had to ask to have it amended on the Floor, but it would have to be typed and sent to the Speaker. That, I think, is the normal process.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I totally agree with what you just said, but if you read the Standing Orders, it says “not less than two days’ notice shall be given of an amendment.” So I really should have been aware earlier this morning that it was going to be moved on the Floor of the House. But, be that as it may, we move to Motion No. 6/08-09.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Madam Speaker. If I may, I cannot allow that to stand. I have to explain. The course of the motion is that we type the amendment, send to the Speaker and ask her for waiver of the required notice of two days—

The Speaker: I only—

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: —then it will go. That is the normal process.

The Speaker: It is not.

Honourable Leader [of the Opposition], would you continue with your debate on Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I think that is the normal process of the Standing Order.

The Speaker: Not according to the Standing Orders.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Read what the Standing Order says, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I have no more to say. Would you please proceed with Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I do not know why you are being so . . . anyway, Madam Speaker, we are not in a political arena, I want you to know. You should keep out of it.

Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09—Assistance for Hurricane Shutters

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09, standing in my name. And, in fact, this is Motion No. 6, which I thought would be coming next on the order in any event, and cancel Motion No. 7 . . . anyway, Madam Speaker, I think the House will be ready to debate both.

Motion No. 6/08-09, standing in my name, Assistance for Hurricane Shutters:

WHEREAS the Islands are subject to hurricanes;

AND WHEREAS climatic conditions are worsening making small Islands more vulnerable;

AND WHEREAS here in the Cayman Islands there are many people who are not able to afford shutters for their houses;

AND WHEREAS many people depend on the Government to supply them with plywood during the threat of a hurricane;

AND WHEREAS in recent times the Government has been supplying individuals with plywood at a great cost;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government consider securing the homes of indigents with a permanent and adequate shuttering system;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, in its hurricane preparations, the Government consider securing the properties of all front line public servants;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers establishing a programme to provide access to adequate funds to allow qualified individuals to obtain hurricane shutters;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers removing all duty on hurricane shutters and related materials.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder?

First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to second that said Motion.

The Speaker: The Motion has been duly moved and is open for debate. Does the honourable mover wish to speak thereto?

Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, today I am moving a number of resolutions relating to the provision of assistance for hurricane shutters, seconded by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Cayman Islands hurricane season [is] from 1 June to 30 November each year, sometimes extending beyond that date. In that regard, this country has been somewhat fortunate for a large part of its modern history—with the exception of the devastating impact of Hurricane Ivan in 2004. Modern history would say that, certainly after the devastation of [1944] hurricane and the 1932 which devastated Cayman Brac.

Nonetheless, as an economy and as a wider community we are all faced each year with additional burdens and interruptions in order to be prepared as much as possible for the hurricane season and to minimise any potential impact and critically any loss of life.

There are two observations I wish to make in this regard. The first is that we are not all equally able to deal with this burden. The second is that our policy framework should not only enable us to be better prepared in terms of the country's national disaster management responsibilities, but this policy framework should also directly address the needs of the wider community given the fact that we have an established period during each year where we are threatened by a serious major natural disaster.

In dealing with the first observation, while the country has been providing some assistance in the form of plywood resources to individuals, improving shelters and information to better preparedness of the community at large, also recently I think in the housing programme they are beginning to shutter them. Nevertheless, the current policy framework still falls very short of what is fully required to adequately assist those who may not be in a position to help better protect their homes, their families and the possessions they have worked hard to acquire.

In order to better understand the context of all of this, Madam Speaker, allow me to briefly summarise the past few years of hurricane activity since Hurricane Ivan in 2004.

The 2007 Atlantic hurricane season was by all accounts a very active period. It gave us a total of 15 tropical storms, 6 hurricanes and 2 major hurricanes that formed during the period.

Last year, the hurricane that gave us the most concern was, of course, Hurricane Dean, which was also the most intense hurricane and the seventh most intense Atlantic hurricane ever recorded, as well as the third most intense Atlantic hurricane that made landfall. In fact, last year was one of only four on record for the Atlantic with more than one category 5 storm.

In 2006, the year was notably less active and in the end posed little threat to the Cayman Islands. Experts relate this lower activity to an El Niño event and other factors. The contrast between the 2007 and 2006 seasons is a reminder of how unpredictable hurricane seasons can be, and that one cannot take comfort in comparison from previous years when considering the level of preparation for the current year.

In 2005, the Caribbean experienced the most active Atlantic hurricane season in recorded history. Reports are that the 2005 season caused at least 2,280 deaths and recorded damages of over US$128 billion in the Atlantic. The season's major hurricanes, Dennis, Emily, Katrina, Rita and Wilma were responsible for most of the destruction.

More recently in 2008, the Cayman Islands were hit but thankfully spared somewhat, with the exception of the Sister Islands. And we still have another two months before the season officially ends. As I said, sometimes it can go well into December as we remember that that, I believe, is when the 1932 hurricane struck.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: November?

Well I know, Madam Speaker, that it stretches at times. We get storms and hurricanes at times in December.

Each year, though, we witness a familiar series of events when the potential onslaught of a major hurricane surfaces.

Before I move on, Madam Speaker, just look at what happened to Turks & Caicos, who were bragging somewhat, that they were out of the belt to some extent. They were not out of the belt at any point. But look at the damage [that] has taken place on Grand Turk where the whole Island—which is flat, perhaps flatter than Cayman—was covered in water. One resident explained that he thought he was going to drown. Thankfully, he had bought a life vest some days or weeks before that. I understand that there is all but three . . . you get different reports that are not official reports, because I have only had contact through text messages to the deputy premier, which is, as I said the other day. Grand Turk is his constituency. But I understand that all but three buildings were damaged seriously.

We have a lot to thank God for, so far. Keep on praying for all of us that He spares us.

I remember the last report when Dean was heading this way. We were told that where I live, which is a high part of the district of West Bay, I would have had four feet of water (according to that last cone projection) in my house. That night, I had four people who were over the age of 80, including my mother who is in a wheelchair. I thought, my God, if this hits what I am going to do. But God is merciful, and has spared us. And, as the Leader of Government Business has said, we must continue to pray for the balance of the season and continue to pray for those that have been hit. We empathise and sympathise with the rest of the region and, in particular, our friends on Grand Turk and the other islands who got so seriously damaged.

I recall the many messages I received in 2004 from all over the world, but I think [from] every country in the region. I recall those who were keen to assist, Turks & Caicos being one. But one thing that I recall after the hurricane, was waking up that morning getting to my aunt (90-odd years old) who had refused to move from her house, and inspecting the house. That old Caymanian house never had not even paint lifted from it. And she jokingly said, I told you, "Not even Cooley moved me, much less Ivan!" That was her late husband.

And then going on to the police station, but not having any information, they too hearing that there were so many deaths on the Island that we could not confirm. And then taking nearly two hours to get from West Bay, at that point having to go through the swamp and make roads to get to central fire station where the Governor was, the Central Command at the time, and finding him in such a shock that he broke down in tears, which moved me and others as well. But to realise what we had to contend with, how bad this country was, why we did not have—thankfully—loss of life, the kind of damage that we had to face on that 13th day of September. So we can empathise with our neighbours.

Each September this time I wake up each morning thanking God that he spared us that devastation. I remember the mayor of one of the Bay Islands, Mr. Jerry Hinds, who had just buried his son two weeks earlier, piloting a boat himself. He is a good friend of mine and he has many friends here in Cayman and, of course, close Cayman connection with the Bay Islands. Mr. Hinds, now a member of the congress, piloted that boat himself to bring supplies, water, supplies for Honduran residents here, and supplies to be shared among the people here.

These are the kinds of things that I remember most. Thank God for that kind of friendship. I am glad that we ourselves are today in a position to help somewhat in the region.

Madam Speaker, one of the events which is being addressed today by the Private Member's Motion is the protection of homes with plywood. This approach, while effective, has several drawbacks. I believe it is high time that we look at improving this particular aspect of the preparation by the wider community. I say look, Madam Speaker. Not that we have not looked, but actually to move forward.

The alternative to putting up sheets of plywood in homes in each year is to have properly constructed hurricane shutters instead. This would greatly enhance the ability of families to prepare their homes in the event of hurricane or a serious storm. The fact that so many homes remain without hurricane shutters is proof that not everyone can afford them. Assistance with plywood is provided by the Government each year, but this approach to assist has several drawbacks, as I said.

One, the need to source and install sheets of plywood is time consuming and for some, such as the elderly and those with special needs, it is virtually impossible to prepare the home properly. We, as representatives, are expected to help. We get cursed, we get talked about, we do not get enough plywood and no matter how many times you give some of them you still get cursed, you still get talked about, they still get on the radio show and lambaste you. I have to think about it each time.

Then, as representatives too, Madam Speaker . . . and I know that I can't be a representative unless I deal hands-on at this kind of time and be prepared to actually help people in their homes. Yes, I can stand out there and ensure that the plywood is distributed, but as a representative, I have a greater duty as far as I am concerned. And I have always done that from 1988 when I was in this House and got struck somewhat by Hurricane Gilbert. I never had any help from Government. If they helped they must have helped themselves. So I had to go to beg things to help people with at that time, put it up and come see me out there with a sheet of plywood and a hammer pounding my fingers, helping some people. But I feel, and as long as I am a representative I will continue to do that sort of thing. We are expected to do it.

That time could be used to do other constructive things, not that that is not constructive, but we could be doing other things. Some people expect us to do, others do not. And some people need, but some people do not have anybody that they can call on. Let us not fool ourselves. Let us be frank about that.

Number two, plywood is not indestructible. It needs to be properly stored after the hurricane season has ended and this is not always possible or convenient for numerous reasons. As a result, it is common to see some homes with sheets of plywood remain on them for many months after the season and in some cases even throughout the year.

Madam Speaker, number three: By continuing to supply sheets of plywood, we are not promoting the more convenient and safer option of hurricane shutters. As far as I am aware, this was the first year we might have some accounting system to ensure that all sheets of plywood are accounted for or, equally important, that such plywood will not be wasted after the season has ended. I do not know if we can stop that part of it, but I believe we might have some management system in place to know how much went out and to whom.

When you have 200 and 300 people down on you and not a lot of volunteers, because everybody at that time is doing their own thing, or most people are trying to get the plywood to get back home. Some are not even getting off work in time and missing that because that happened to a lot of people this time. As much plywood as we gave out on the first day, the second day I had to go back to that hurricane meeting we were having, that was Friday, I guess, and get back down to get some more plywood. As I said, we are expected to do so.

I tell you this, one thing that we can consider and look at (and we can say what we want to say about it), there are many, many, people here on work permits who are not assisted. I know one department helped where they had to, they were responsible for it. But they did not help the workers. So they came looking. And there are people who are renting who do not have shutters on their buildings. People who built the rental homes perhaps could not afford it. So, our own people that . . . Government I am talking about now, much less the wider community. Those people renting those places come to you for plywood because they have to be safe. They are humans and they have to be safe as anybody else. So that is a situation that we have here that we [need] to look at however you can do so, whether something is put in place to help those.

Through this system that I am proposing, the people who have homes or apartments for rent but who cannot afford shutters . . . will the Government allow them into this programme? That has to be considered. But I tell you what, it is a problem.

As I said, for those people that we make sure it is not wasted after the season has ended there may well be many good reasons for the use, but it is clear that the current approach is not the most economical, and this is the point I am making here.

Madam Speaker, when we talk about storing, some people do not have the wherewithal. They do not have sheds, and they barely have room in their house for their furniture. Some homes are small, let's put it that way. I know one lady who had taken the time to store her plywood and it got wet. When she went to use it, it had rotted in some places and it was completely covered with mould. So, it has to be properly stored. But some people just cannot do that, and we have to accept that fact.

Finally, Madam Speaker, hurricane shutters are far more convenient to use as a method of protection than sheets of plywood. And we should be aiming to reach a point where most homes are protected in this manner. Now, there is maybe an upper-middle income that you say should be able to afford shutters. I remember the last time I renovated my house. Six times in total since 1976, eight times now, total, since 1976. The last time, in 1996, and I got wiped out because the contractor failed to cover up. I told the bank, "Look, you are lending me this amount of money to build a good home for us to live in, yet you do not want to lend me (I think it was $10,000 or $8,000 at the time) to do the shutters?"

They said, "No. It just adds too much to your loan."

Well, I was persistent, and I said, "If you are going to lend me the kind of money you are lending me—over $200,000—you want to tell me you are not going to lend me enough to protect myself in case of a hurricane?"

"Oh, we might never get a hurricane."

"That's the truth. But suppose we get one, Mr. Loan Manager? And suppose something happens. Then what?"

"Oh, insurance will cover you."

"Well, suppose insurance does not cover, what happens? If I had had a shutter it would have helped, would it not?"

Well, I prevailed and I got them. And I can tell anyone that except for a little rattling they sure come in handy. I do not close my shutters until my committee gets back and they meet at my house and if people want to stay there, they stay, like they did with Ivan; or if they want to go back home, fine. But they meet at my house and that night just before everything came down I brought my shutters up. It is very, very convenient; very, very necessary.

Madam Speaker, in dealing with my second observation regarding the adequacy of our policy framework, I believe that our framework can be adjusted to address this issue with a few policies which are not very costly and relatively easy to implement. The first of these is to ensure that the homes of indigents are secured with a permanent and adequate shuttering system. This group is the most vulnerable in our society, and we should ensure that they get help at the time when their lives and economic livelihood is at such enormous risk.

In times when our local economy is at its worst, in terms of both the challenges facing local business and the high cost of living in these Islands today, it is even more important for us to remember that there are those amongst us who are at an economic disadvantage and will require some help to better protect their homes during the hurricane season.

And, Madam Speaker, this is a good time for me to say this: You know, I cannot say I marvel, because I do not do that, but I have to stop and think at how some people can stand up and look at others and say he does not need, she does not need because look at that good house they have. Do you have any idea how they got it, how much they have to pay, and whether they are even making their payments? You just cannot look at a person and say that their circumstances are better than anybody else. And our people need to stop doing that and judging the Government or misjudging us, or cussing us about giving those who do not need, because they do not know!

I said that when we started on a proper system of monthly financial assistance. I will never forget the amount of criticism I received in this House. I will never forget the representatives who came and said this one does not need and the next one does not need, and those representatives who went out and got other people to call radio stations and beat upon McKeeva Bush because I was doing it. We have to stop it! We do not know people's conditions. We cannot judge people's conditions by just looking at them and saying they can afford it. And you say, Well, they have a good car. Look at the kind of house they have. Well, it may be that when it comes to the car, that could have been given consideration; but when it comes to a person who just has a house and an ordinary car, not splurging in life . . . stop judging because you do not know. Sometimes, everybody needs help. That has been my position as a representative and I am not going to change it.

Madam Speaker, the second proposal is for the Government to consider securing the properties of all frontline public servants. It is important to recognise the role that those civil servants play, especially during the hurricane season. They are relied upon not only to deal with their day to day duties, which increase during the hurricane season, but also tend to their own families and personal needs. But we should also assist them because they are there to ensure that public services continue to run smoothly in support of our economy and in terms of the indigents who are themselves heavily reliant on a smoothly functioning public sector at all times.

I remember various social services employees, hospital, police. I remember some of them were out there until the very late night. They did not get themselves prepared, had not the wherewithal to do it. So, I would hope that they would find this agreeable.

The third proposal is for the Government to consider establishing a programme to provide access to adequate funds to allow qualified individuals to obtain hurricane shutters. In other words, Madam Speaker, we can see that it is not only the indigents that require assistance with this challenge. This is evidenced by the fact that many homes, not just those of the poor, remain without hurricane shutters. We have to ask ourselves why this is the case, despite the knowledge of the very serious threat that each hurricane season brings with it.

I believe (and that's the point I was speaking to just now) all our people would clearly wish to have the best protection in place. And I believe that one of the main reasons we have so few hurricane shutters in place is that people cannot afford to purchase them. I believe we can assist with this economic challenge facing many individuals by providing access to funding under certain conditions. Indeed, given the very dangerous nature of the hurricanes we face and the experience of Hurricane Ivan, it is critical that we put some mechanisms in place that would help qualified individuals to acquire hurricane shutters.

Madam Speaker, I believe that Government could do this. If they do not have the money they can find it somehow and I believe the amount of money we spend each year in buying plywood would pay it back and handle it through the Development Bank. That's the proper place to do so.

Madam Speaker, how many homes do we have that would need to get that?

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Five million could do, what, five thousand homes with proper shutters? I do not know. I am not an accountant. Perhaps somebody could sit down and do the real numbers, but I believe that might be where we are looking. I do not think that is a whole heap.

Madam Speaker, another point. And I did not read the article, but someone told me about it and I glanced at the article in the Caymanian Compass, with the Leader of Government Business talking about the insurance. That is another matter. It is ridiculous, to say the least, that we have to pay the kind of premiums that we are paying, that even when you shutter it does not seem to affect even when you put on a cement roof, it does not seem to affect. Some people have gone ahead and built hurricane rooms—I am just in the process of completing one with a seven inch thick cement roof, eight inch walls, steel doors, steel in every hole in those blocks. And when the bank said I had to get more insurance, I shuddered to think what that increase was going to be, putting that much more value in my house, because it increases the value. When I went and talked around, I could get a reduction from like $17,000 to $16,000—a $1,000 reduction. And the people that I was with who did not give it to me before, but I have been with them a long time, I said, "Now, at least you are going to have to come down this much."

"Oh, we can do that."

Madam Speaker, they cannot tell me they are not making business.

Now, I do not know, because you can't look at things and say what they are doing. But, my God, when people are paying the kind of insurance premium, which is sometimes more than their mortgage, and build this kind of protection and are on high ground in this country, not likely to be flooded, and have improved their homes by putting shutters on, and have built even hurricane safety, and they tell you that does not have any affect on it? Madam Speaker, something ought to be done. Something ought to be done about it.

I am not going to batter business, because I know that business has been taking a licking. But I want to say that for 50 or 60 years you did not have one claim, then you get a lick and all of a sudden, even when they say you are not insured enough, what you were insured [for], they are cutting that down too. Sometimes I have to wonder, Madam Speaker, if there is a social conscience, and if that is really the way that you do nation-building, because I have to wonder about it.

[phone interference]

The Speaker: Whoever has their phone on vibrate, would you turn it off please?

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, along the same lines . . . Madam Speaker, I do not have my phone on vibrate. I never do. I have it on silent and I am going to keep it on silent. I do not think that affects . . . I have been told it does not affect the system.

An Hon. Member: It does.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I have a sick mother—

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, I am not having an argument with you, sir, but the engineer says it affects the recording even when the phones are on silent. So—

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I was told it did not, and you could keep it at least on silent. But if that is so, if it is going to mess up what I say so that it comes out jumbled or something, I'd better cut it off. But I usually keep it on silent because I have a mother at home who is sick, and in case someone tries to reach me, I always keep that on silent when I am at a meeting.

Madam Speaker, it is a pity that we ever have to have one of these things called a telephone anyhow.

Madam Speaker, along the same lines I was talking about the—

[phone interference]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Now, Madam Speaker, you see—but my phone is not ringing! Nobody is calling me, so . . . you would think that that noise would come on only when somebody's phone is ringing. And I think that is what it says . . . if it makes a noise it is only when somebody is trying to get you. But no one is trying to get me, thank God. Not even Mama. And mine is off.

I want to see who else's [phone] is going to ring shortly.

Madam Speaker, that's a good side track. Gets our mind away from this high insurance we have to pay!

Along the same lines about providing access to funding, in order to assist not only the indigent and those facing an economic challenge, but as an important emergency policy for the wider community and economy, I believe that we should consider removing all duty on hurricane shutters and related matters. Putting in place a duty waiver system targeted at this area I believe is just as important as the current exemptions in place for other items. Next to health is education, so think about it.

Commonsense tells us that we can better save lives and protect our economy by ensuring that our business community reduces its risks during such a period by providing assistance as proposed in this Motion before us. I encourage the Government to give them support.

The additional costs and foregone revenue will be more than compensated by the significant gains made in terms of protecting individuals, safeguarding families, protecting the financial security of businesses and, therefore, employment of Caymanians, and keeping insurance claims and therefore insurance premiums to affordable levels.

I will stop there, Madam Speaker, and listen to what others have to say.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In listening to the Honourable Leader of the Opposition in introducing his Motion, which was seconded by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, I could only think back to certain occasions in our history, several of which he spoke to. When it comes to hurricanes, while we have had to say that we have had our share of it the truth is, all told, God has been very good to us. While we are always grateful, and while we continue to rely on Him not only for ourselves and our safety, but for the safety of others who face similar circumstances from time to time, the fact is that the most appropriate and correct statement that we can make regarding the threat of hurricanes and other natural disasters, while hurricanes are the ones that we are most used to, is we must be prepared as best we can at all times.

Some of what the Leader of the Opposition spoke to in his Motion talks to the fact that not everyone has the same abilities and/or wherewithal to be as prepared as they can be on their own, for various reasons. One of those reasons would be the financial resources and, of course, there are some people in the society who simply by themselves do not have the physical ability to deal with this. It is something that all of us, and certainly this Government, has recognised and we have talked about it on more than one occasion—on many occasions, in fact—that we need to be making our individual residences and, indeed commercial buildings, government buildings, all buildings throughout the three Islands as resilient as possible.

We have to segment the whole affair when we are really looking at it. The Government itself has certainly done a good job in having regular hurricane exercises and making sure that whenever the threat is close that all Government buildings, all dedicated shelters are all secured very early. So, Madam Speaker, from that perspective I think the continuation of that goes a long way with regard to the Government itself and its resilience.

Of course, Madam Speaker, every time we have an event, whether catastrophic or not, whether it is a near miss or whatever, there is always a lesson to be learned, and we do that. But, there also are issues which face us in regard to legislation and even planning regulations that we have to look at. We have to look at the stock that is in place now in the country and, as buildings are continually being built, how to deal with it so that we can get to the point when it comes to resilience with our structures where it becomes the norm for any new structure to be properly shuttered.

When we get to that point, we do not have to look back five years from now and have a bunch of them that are not shuttered and we have to revisit the whole programme as to how we are going to handle it. While I would immediately say (and we all know this) that the Government has limited resources to take on a countrywide project such as this, the fact is that we have respected that we have to lead the way.

One of the good things we have going for us is that, when it comes to hurricanes, the vast majority, if not all of our citizens by now, are quite aware of the dangers and have a fervent desire to protect themselves and their property as best they can. So we do not have to go through but in few instances that educational process to convince our people that that is the direction we have to take. Of that I am convinced.

I must tell you the truth, Madam Speaker. I would not have been prepared to stand on the Floor of this House and make that statement before September 13, 2004. But after that, I am confident that we can say that. I only refer to the “visit” (as I term it) of Hurricane Ivan.

Madam Speaker, I will be speaking to the resolve sections of the Motion as we go along and making reference. Just before I begin dealing with the resolve sections, let me say generally that two years ago when we began speaking about shuttering, the questions that we all asked ourselves were: We know what the objective is, [but] how do we achieve this objective? How do we separate the various issues? We came to the conclusion that it was not one of these projects that the Government had the capacity or the resources to just take on as a countrywide project and say we were going to underwrite the cost. Physically that is impossible. The Government does not have that kind of disposable income to simply say we are going to take care of it.

Just so that we understand perspective here, Madam Speaker, even if that were physically possible, new structures are being built every day. So it is not something that Government can sustain. We came to the conclusion that we had to bring about a multi-pronged approach whereby we looked to what obtained, we looked at how we were going to deal with that, and even while we were doing rebuilds and refurbishing, we also ensured that shuttering was taking place with those structures. We now need to see how best to be able to ensure that all structures built in the future will be properly shuttered. It will be an ongoing programme, a nationwide effort both by Government and by all citizens of the country.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of Government Business, is this a convenient point to take the morning break?

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

Proceedings suspended at 11.28 am

Proceedings resumed at 12.07 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed.

Before I move on to the Honourable Leader of Government Business continuing his reply to the Motion, I would like on behalf of the House to extend condolences to the Honourable Minister of Communications on the passing of his aunt just last night.

Honourable Leader of Government Business, continuing.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break I was speaking to the thought process we exercised when we began looking at the possibility of a nationwide shuttering programme about two years ago.

As I said, we have to look at the housing stock that exists and how we can get all of that done. Then we have to be looking at whatever legislation is necessary to ensure that new buildings built in the future are, by way of requirement, built to be resilient either by shuttering or hurricane resistant windows, or both, for those with the ability to do so. That was the thought process employed. Knowing what the objectives are, specifically what does the Government do, working along with private homeowners and private sector, to make this become a reality?

Madam Speaker, before I go any further (and I am now dealing with the resolve sections of the Motion), I want to say that while we accept and agree and the Motion actually accords with what we have already embarked upon, we have to accept that it is not going to be one hurricane season when all of that has been achieved.

When we move to the resolve section, the very first resolve section reads: “BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government consider securing the homes of indigents with a permanent and adequate shuttering system . . .”

After Hurricane Ivan, and after all of the initial efforts both by Government, the National Recovery Fund (NRF), and assistance from individuals and businesses, we got to the point where we realised that even the rebuilds and renovations should encompass proper shuttering for these houses. As we speak, the NRF is engaging in shuttering all of these homes—new rebuilt homes and renovated homes—and they have also been tasked with those that they had worked on already to retrace their steps and provide proper shuttering for those homes. That simply makes sense. It makes no sense to have these houses either rebuilt or renovated and something happens and they have to go back and do the same thing over again because of not being shuttered properly. That is one of the things that has been in motion for quite some time now.

Madam Speaker, the HMCI (Hazard Management Cayman Islands Limited), is now in the process . . . and as I understand it, hurricane season has prevented them from completing the development of this plan. They are now in the process of developing a shuttering programme plan to be given to the Government for our consideration. The objective with that plan is to find ways and means to accomplish exactly what this Motion is seeking to achieve. But there are individual segments that we have to look at.

In the first resolve, speaking to indigents, we certainly know that that is something in the Government's best interest to make sure it happens. It has to be in the long run. As the Leader of the Opposition said, it has to be in the long run a cheaper way, rather than the makeshift operation of supplying plywood all the time. Mind you, Madam Speaker, while that is onerous and difficult at times, and perhaps one of the most thankless tasks simply because we are never able to satisfy everyone—and once everyone is not satisfied, he who is not then finds somewhere to blame—the fact is, that has helped and will continue to help until we are at the stage where these premises are shuttered.

The Leader of the Opposition mentioned during his introduction about rental properties. That is a difficult situation. I remember the last time plywood was being distributed here in the George Town district. There were some individuals who came. By and large they told the truth, they were in rental properties and, of course, the usual policy is that it is only to individual homeowners that plywood is distributed. But we had to take the decision that if that property got damaged, we would still have to step in and render some assistance. So, we accepted that that was how it is and we did not deny them plywood.

But the truth is that, as a matter of principle, while rental properties on the Island vary in the cost of these rental properties and their locations, they vary in the quality of building. It does create an income. So we have to be looking at it very carefully. It is not going to be a situation where the Government can simply say we are going to encompass all rental properties into providing proper shuttering because they do derive an income. A lot of them already have shuttering as part of the construction. Many of them learned lessons from Hurricane Ivan and when renovations were done shuttering was provided. But I know at certain levels (and I accept, without going into a lot of details) that assistance will have to be rendered. Certainly we will be looking at that.

I want to say, Madam Speaker, that in the next resolve section where it says: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, in its hurricane preparations, the Government consider securing the properties of all front line public servants . . .”

Madam Speaker, the way that is worded, when we think of 300-odd police officers, when we think of 100-odd members of the fire service, when we think of customs and immigration, that is a lot of people, and a lot of homes. When we think of the staff of public works, when we think of the staff of NRA who are all out prior to the event and post the event, it would be difficult to say where you would draw the line.

What has been happening in many instances, for instance those who assist with delivering plywood and all that, is that a certain amount is always reserved at the back of the compound to ensure that as soon as the deliveries are finished, that those who need can get to make sure they can complete their preparations. But the whole idea behind this is that we do not want to be looking at temporary fixes.

What we need to do is make sure that people have proper shuttering so that it is not a labourious exercise every single time. Whatever the choice is, because there are varying types, you want to be able to have them in such a way that it does not take very long for them to be installed.

The point was brought up about storage. Some people do not have the ability to store. So we have to be looking for the type of shuttering, for those who cannot store, that can remain on the building all the time and simply be locked up.

Just to use an example and to give some statistics: In the financial year ending 30 June this year (that is, the 2007/8 year), the Government made available $300,000 for loans to civil servants. That $300,000 is not dedicated (I think it is called property loans) to a shuttering programme. But it so happens that the Cayman Islands Civil Service Association, who administers this programme, their stats after they developed a policy whereby the maximum amount they would lend to civil servants is $5,000 for shuttering their homes. In the year ending 30 June 2008, out of the $300,000, [the amount] used by civil servants to deal with shuttering was $256,000.

What we already discussed and agreed on is that we are going to extend that programme, which is an ongoing programme, by adding another $200,000 to that and having specific amounts of that half million dollars on an annual basis dedicated to civil servants being able to borrow funds for shuttering. That will be an ongoing programme because civil servants continue to build their own homes. So it is not something that ends in any one given year. That is part of what we have to continue to do to be able to get to the point where just about everybody has proper shuttering on their home.

Madam Speaker, when we speak to the Government considering securing the property of all frontline public servants, this is one way of them having access to funds—get it over with, get it done one time—so that their homes are secure in that regard.

While this Motion really just speaks to shuttering, the truth of the matter is that I have to add here that while we are looking at making the necessary amendments to the legislation to call for single family homes and/or multi family dwellings to be properly secured and resilient (and there are some amendments that will be coming very shortly also) we also have to ensure that the Building Code that now exists is amended where necessary, especially for buildings being built on the coastline. It is obvious that, while you want all of your buildings to be strong, the coastline is most vulnerable. So that much more has to be considered with the methodology employed with the construction.

Those are the things we are also putting in place to create the whole resilience factor, I call it, with regard to buildings here in the Cayman Islands, both existing and those to be built in the future.

I mentioned the many numbers that we would be looking at if the Government undertook a programme of that nature. I am not 100 per cent sure the spirit or intent of that resolve section . . . and perhaps the Leader of the Opposition can clarify in his winding up. But I am assuming that the idea is that the Government is expected to somehow assist with these frontline public servants. I am saying what is already being done. And if there are any other specific considerations, then if we hear them we will certainly examine them and consider them. But as of now, Madam Speaker, what I am saying is that civil servants by and large have access to . . . and I believe also, Madam Speaker, that these are interest free loans.

Am I correct? These are interest free loans?

Yes. The civil servants have access to these interest free loans which will allow them proper shuttering. The amount of money every year that is going to be accessed will be increased to $500,000. That $500,000 is not fully dedicated to shuttering, but a certain portion of that will be specifically dedicated to such a task.

Madam Speaker, the other resolve section is: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers establishing a programme to provide access to adequate funds to allow qualified individuals to obtain hurricane shutters.”

[inaudible]

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I am corrected that those funds being made available to civil servants are not interest free, but actually attract a 5 per cent interest, which is a reasonable interest. But, certainly, that is something that we can also consider.

As I was saying, the other resolve section speaks to a programme to provide access to adequate funds to allow qualified individuals to obtain hurricane shutters. Madam Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition suggested that dedicated funds be made available through the Cayman Islands Development Bank. That is certainly a consideration we can give, although I know that the private lending institutions are already engaged with many of those who they have provided mortgage funds for, allowing specific loans for such programmes once people qualify and are able to make their separate payments.

That is something that we can look at. It is just that when we examine that situation, if the private lending institutions do not qualify these people for funds for shuttering—which is in everyone’s interest, including the lending institution that has a charge on the property—then there may be some difficulty for these individuals to actually go through the process of acquiring these funds. But that is something that we will examine.

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I have to call a meeting within the next two weeks with the banker’s association (and I will speak to that in a minute), and that is certainly something that I will be speaking to them about and finding out whether there can be a dedicated and specific programme which all of them might be willing to participate in, in this regard. We will see which one works best, but the whole idea is that we understand the intent of this resolve section and will be looking to do that.

I am going to be meeting with the representatives of the banker's association very shortly because one of the other things that we have discussed and, in principle, we have agreed to, but they had to canvas their membership to see how widespread the support was, is creating a fund which on an annual basis they will be contributing to. The whole purpose of that fund, which will be an ongoing fund and we are hopeful that once they agree we would be somewhere between $2 million and $2.5 million on an annual basis. The whole purpose of that is once that fund is created those funds within that fund (if I may say it like that) will be used on a continuous basis to create resilience for indigents when it comes to housing.

That, in itself, is another programme that we have been speaking to the bankers about for a few months now, and actually we should have had response by end of August. But we know we were in the middle of Gustav and other things happening. I am sure that as soon as we are out of Legislative Assembly we will have that meeting. I expect to hear positive results. That will be part and parcel of all the considerations that we have. We will then have access to those funds on an ongoing basis, because it is not a one time contribution. Their idea to us was an annual contribution from these institutions and we would be able to tap in on the funds there.

Madam Speaker, I have said to them, so that they are quite satisfied that the funds are being used properly, there could be a committee of which their membership is included to ensure that the funds are steered in the right direction and properly used. That is exactly how we want it to happen. I anticipate that to be happening very shortly and that is going to be a great help, and part and parcel of all of that will include the resilience for indigents and wherever they are living.

The next resolve section reads, "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers removing all duty on hurricane shutters and related materials."

Madam Speaker, that seems to always be a thought in any consideration when looking to give relief to the citizens. The great difficulty in that is we have no mechanism that guarantees that those savings are passed on to the consumer. Our view with that is that it is best for us to find other ways and means to ensure that individuals receive assistance than leave it to chance.

Madam Speaker, while the Government is quite happy to accept the general spirit of the Motion, the last resolve section I have to be truthful and say I am not keen, nor is the Government keen, to actually engage in that simply because there is no failsafe way to ensure that any savings derived, which would lower Government revenue, would specifically be passed on to the individual consumers. There is a difficulty in that regard.

Madam Speaker, I am sure other Members wish to speak to this. I was just bringing the House a basic update on where the Government is at. As soon as the specific programme is presented to us by the HMCI, while we have all of these other ongoing parts of it, as soon as that is presented to us we will share it with all other Members and take input from Members in regard to any alterations or changes that might prove to be more effective in regard to creating resilience. I expect that to be within a short period of time.

Accepting that plywood distribution is by no means the most efficient way to create resilience, and that it is only a temporary situation, I still want us to realise that even though we try to make sure that records are kept, I would appeal to people who hear us today who have gotten plywood, to take care of it so you can use it throughout the season so that we do not run the risk of some people who might well need it not getting it because others come two and three times to get. But, at the same time, we know it is going to take us a little while to get to the point where we are quite satisfied that what is being done is sustainable and the vast majority of our citizens and their homes are properly protected. During that time we may well have to continue to resort periodically to plywood distribution and while most of us do not look forward to that, we know that it is something better done than not done. I only want to make sure, Madam Speaker, that we understand that from here on in we are not going to be able to say we do not have to do it at all.

Madam Speaker, just to cap off by saying that the Government is happy to accept the Motion, understanding the spirit of the Motion. I explained some of the things we are already doing and have been doing. We will continue to build on that. As soon as I have the recommendations and proposals from HMCI then, certainly, we will share it with all Members and take it from there.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 1.45 pm

Proceedings suspended at 12.39 pm

Proceedings resumed at 2.02 pm

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09. Does any other Member wish to speak?

First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to obviously give my support to the Motion moved by the Honourable Leader of the Opposition and me, being Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09, in respect to assistance with hurricane shutters.

Madam Speaker, from time immemorial the Caribbean and, indeed, the Cayman Islands have been subjected to many tropical storms and hurricanes. Throughout the history of the Cayman Islands, on more occasions than not, we have been spared; indeed, we have been protected from the wrath and destruction of many a tropical storm and/or hurricane. However, Madam Speaker, we have had our share, as indicated by other speakers.

I have read about the 1932 and the 1939 and, indeed, I lived through the 1980 [Hurricane] Allen, very devastating hurricane on the Brac. Again, in 1988, Gilbert, and of course in 2004, we all experienced the wrath of Ivan. And this is but to list a few during the short span of my life here in the Cayman Islands.

In earlier times, we would all be cognisant that our Caymanian homes were not constructed of cement and stronger windows and doors as we enjoy here in this jurisdiction today, but they were usually constructed of wood. As a result, most of the doors and windows were of the same type of material. Suffice to say that during Ivan we saw that some of those same Caymanian homes withstood the wrath of Ivan when compared to what we would now deem as more modern infrastructure.

As a result, the need for shuttering is, I believe a revolutionary one. That is, the original cleats (and this perhaps reveals our age group as a term that is almost forgotten) and locks and wood braces and ropes that were used for protecting of the older Caymanian homes, the traditional homes, during the onslaught of a hurricane are not used today but perhaps in the outer districts.

But as time progressed, and as the modern Caymanian was being birthed, the more affluent persons within our community resorted to the use of plywood in order to protect the more vulnerable parts of their homes, being the doors and windows.

[phone interference]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: We saw that the poor Caymanians who could not afford the plywood resorted to zinc, another dangerous material but all that they had, or whatever other type of scrap material they could come in contact with.

In fact, I remember Hurricane Allen in the first week of September 1980 quite well as a teenager, when it took its aim on Cayman Brac. Those were the days when we had no other option but to run to the caves in the Bluff to seek shelter and to depend on radio stations from Bonaire and Jamaica and some other US radio stations, and the good commonsense of the able bodied seamen who were very faithful to the readings of the barometer to let us know that we were in danger.

Those were the days when everyone in the district still (and I speak personally about the district of Watering Place, which I love dearly) took the time to help neighbouring properties in the preparation to protect their homes. In fact, I remember my grandfather, the late Lewin Brown, who almost lost his life in Hurricane Allen in 1980 because he chose to assist many of the neighbours in the district. We were still in the era where many of the men were out to sea and the other men took up the responsibility of assisting in the village/neighbourhood concept. Because of that, his property was the last to be shuttered and the storm was raging at that time. He pretty much had to climb up the Watering Place Bluff and experience the deafening sound of Mr. Clemens Dilbert's housetop coming off and flying in the air, landing by the mango tree that he was hugging because of the heft of the breeze.

Madam Speaker, we know what it is to experience very serious and very dangerous hurricanes. Every successive government has sought in their own way and according to their finances to contribute to this evolutionary process of protecting our citizens. What better way to invest than to invest in our people, our Caymanian people and residents alike.

We must take this Motion against the background that in former days, revenue was just not there to do more. In fact, some of the materials used now for adequate protection had not even been invented. That is why I term it as an evolutionary process in the protecting of our people here in Cayman.

Caymanian people did whatever it took to survive. And some of us still do, especially on the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman where the economic bubble of Grand Cayman did not, for whatever reasons, enlarge its boundaries. This was in the early 70s and beginning of the 80s I am referring to, Madam Speaker, for the avoidance of doubt.

Government should be for the people. Government should be by the people. A very familiar phrase. I am saying this in respect to those who have consumed much of the time on the airwaves recently crying down the Government and the Opposition for the distribution of plywood. I am seeking your indulgence, Madam Speaker, to go through this historical analysis to try to put the evolution of the necessity to protect our people into perspective and for it not to be seen as an isolated methodology that any particular government would aspire to use at any particular time.

[phone interference]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: In fact, I would give any government the benefit of the doubt, having been in government myself. But each government sought to do what they thought was best for the protection of people. I fully concur and was an active participant in the distribution of the plywood. In fact, I wished I had 400 more sheets, Madam Speaker, to give to persons who were not able to get on the Brac.

Madam Speaker, at that point in our nation's development the Cayman Islands Government could only afford to offer protection to residents from a communal perspective. In other words, there was not adequate capacity for hurricane shelters in any of the districts. Yes, we still have not reached that utopia where every district has sufficient . . . perhaps, East End, now that I reflect on the two shelters, and perhaps North Side. But, certainly in the Sister Islands, we do not have adequate capacity.

Thank God, during Hurricane Ivan we learned a lesson there, as I am sure the folks on Grand Cayman did, where after having to find refuge (with Hurricane Allen) in the caves and the discomfort that brought and the injuries some received for not having electricity for over six months there, we thought it was high time to build a proper hurricane shelter. Under the leadership of the late Mr. Leroy Tibbetts and Tory Tatum, the Government of the day built a very strong building which has lasted now for over two decades and is still serving the purpose with just limited amenities and renovations to that building.

[phone interference]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: Government then decided, and rightly so in their effort to prioritise the evolutionary protection process, that they needed to find at least a safe place where the communities could congregate based on their budgetary constraints. That is what they sought to do and continue to do in all these past decades.

Madam Speaker, some may say it was reckless. Some may say it was negligent from that stage not to provide protection for the individual, but I will not go down that route. Having been in government, governments have to do what is best at that particular time based on the financial constraints they had.

I believe that although the government thought it was best during those times in providing public shelters, with the greatest of respect they were only able to solve a small part of the puzzle. I strongly believe in the principle that one should not put "all eggs in one basket" and although it was perhaps a good principle at that time to build a hurricane shelter and try to get everyone in there, we saw with the high school in Ivan, I believe it was that lost its roof, and the exposure and high risk that brought to a large number of people. I believe that was when we evolved the strategy to protect our people and we saw that it was better to spread it out district-wise. I will give the Brac story and we will hopefully share with this House and the wider public the approach we took with investing in our people and protecting, shuttering just being part and parcel of the wider picture.

Madam Speaker, when I first entered the political arena, I quickly discovered on my first visit to Little Cayman that they did not have any shelter at all.

Although it is quite easy to say (since there were 300 or fewer residents there) that they could be evacuated, every man's home is [his] castle. Because we do not have access to a national guard and other types of security it is not reasonable to expect the residents there to just pick up their stakes, as it were, and leave not knowing when they are going to get back to their property.

So, I quickly embarked, with the assistance of the then government, to build a multipurpose building on Little Cayman for the public works accommodation centre, to a standard that could be used for a hurricane shelter—and it has been. So that was a continuation of other governments' policies of having that communal protection.

Cayman has progressed much since then, Madam Speaker. Although we are not attempting to create a socialistic type of government where everything is dished out, as some would like to say, or economic fish are given out all the time, I think it would do all of us good to recognise the role we play.

Simply put, we are the trustees of the public's purse. In fact, it is the public themselves that generate this revenue. So I do not think it is extremely far fetched to be asking . . . and I am sure that the Leader, in his concurrence to the Motion, became quickly aware even in his preliminary discussions (he intimated to the House today that his Government was having) that this is money well spent when we protect our people. So, I am happy and grateful and appreciative to the Government for the position they are taking with respect to the Motion.

Madam Speaker, I saw that another incremental step in the protection of the people in the Brac—who no longer want to run and seek shelter in almost vertical cliffs and often unforgiving limestone—was the need to create a road network on the Bluff so that people could, (1) access their properties; and (2), we could provide communication (whether Cable & Wireless or what have you—at the time it was Cable & Wireless and we are grateful to them) and utility companies.

As in the case with the plywood (tying that in to the Motion), when change comes, because we are not creatures of change, there will always be opposition. I would be very surprised if we did not receive any opposition from the distribution of the plywood. But I do believe that the driving motivation of every honourable Member within this House was to ensure at that particular time (perhaps less than two weeks ago when Gustav was passing) that every resident within the Cayman Islands was as protected as could be, given the limited window we had for the acquisition and distribution of the plywood.

Of course, we realise that hindsight is better than 20/20 vision. But during those times I do not think any politician in here had the time to go through a means test. I would much rather err on the side of someone receiving plywood twice then having to face the occupants of a home who did not get plywood because of my erring in a discretionary mode. I am open to that type of criticism and, as I said on the radio and elsewhere, I took it upon myself to put together a form. But I can understand the pressure that the politicians on Grand Cayman had to operate under. Sometimes we just have to exercise common sense, Madam Speaker. I think that as Caymanian people we need to begin to be somewhat more grateful for the—

[phone interference]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: —way and the method that any government, whether it is this Government or another, uses to assist them.

The time that some would choose to get on the radio and talk about the plywood, perhaps those energies would be much better spent if those same people would form a committee within the districts to help our elderly, to help our handicapped, to help those in the forefront of public service to nail up a piece of plywood or to get a truck to help distribute it, or to go around with some water or some charitable things.

We are in the process of nation building, and unless we as Caymanians . . . and I think this is one of the issues that goes way above any type of politics. I was happy that that happened with this. I congratulate all Members and colleagues who worked in that regard. The fundamental fact is, Madam Speaker, that we are Caymanians. We ought to start looking out for our Caymanians, whether it is from shuttering for hurricanes or in other aspects of government.

As Caymanians, we need to be very careful. Some of us have perhaps “made it” and can just pull down the hurricane shutters. I am not one of them. But I am speaking generally.

[inaudible interjections]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: But that does not give me any right to then go and criticise someone who cannot afford it.

As the Honourable Leader of Government Business indicated, we cannot judge the financial credibility or financial status of our fellow Caymanian merely by looking at how he or she dresses or what they drive, or at their house. Whether we like it or not, Madam Speaker, often we fall into the category of the US television commercial where you see the head of the household driving the lawnmower and this beautiful manicured lawn and the house. And his only thought is “I’m over my head in debt.” Unfortunately that is the real life story for the majority of Caymanians here. So, we must be careful when we just look at the external things, the material things, and use that to justify whether or not they can afford plywood.

Madam Speaker, we may say that they should prioritise. They can buy a sheet of plywood here; we can buy a sheet there. But human beings being what they are, rather than spending that $40—one person on the Brac wanted $70 for a sheet of plywood—they would much rather buy food to put on the table for their children, or maybe pay the utility bill or telephone bill, or a school bill that’s pressing at the time, and hope that somehow they will be spared through the hurricane season. So we must go through all of the reasons before we become caught up in tautological reasoning which is, in my respectful view, most destructive during a time like this with our Caymanian populace.

Madam Speaker, I also believe that from the Brac protection story that the ‘chicken and egg’ situation also faced most communities in that when I first took the decision that the future of the Brac was on the Bluff there was much opposition—some inside the House, some outside the House. But we are being paid to be politicians and leaders. We are not being paid to be philosophers or eloquent arguers on the Floor of this House. Sometimes governments have to take positions that are not necessarily popular at the current time. But time usually bears out that it was the right decision.

I am here to say that building the access roads, providing the electricity and the communication on the Bluff was an integral part toward the evolutionary protection of our people. The reason I say that is because it has reduced the load on government for an urgent need to fill the deficit of hurricane shutters, the capacity. We have seen, especially since Hurricane Ivan, is that a large number of persons, both on the Brac as well as from Grand Cayman, have built very strong and beautiful homes—some large, some modest and some smaller. And they can now stay in their individual residences. Not only do they stay, but in the traditional Caymanian vein, they invite their friends and families to come and shelter during the storm.

Oft times, government is asked to make expenditure, as is being asked in this Motion today. But good business people know that you have to spend in order to get a return. I believe that this Motion is no different from that basic economic principle.

Madam Speaker, the other benefit from the evolutionary protection process of road-building, et cetera, and other necessary infrastructure on the Bluff, is that it has caused us to spread out the risk of injury. We no longer have to worry if the roof comes of the one and only Aston Rutty Centre, or the West End School. In fact, our people have excellent communication, a good road network. Over 90 per cent of the Island no longer have to travel on our coastal plains to be exposed to sea or flooding because the road network has linked up the West End Primary School and the Aston Rutty Centre.

I am trying my best to show how the shutters themselves are not a means to an end but, [rather], a process that has been developing and progressing over many decades.

I believe that Cayman has now reached a financial juncture and can now afford to start looking at more permanent solutions than the plywood. I realise that it will have to be done on an incremental basis, because we have not found any oil wells yet, or any gold that I am aware of. We still have to keep within less than 10 per cent of our debt ratio. We have to be prudent. We have to be sensible. And I was happy to hear that the civil servants have already been afforded an opportunity to access affordable capital with a mere 5 per cent interest. I would ask the Government to consider perhaps removing that 5 per cent through whatever means they can.

[phone interference]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: If that can protect the homes of our residents and our civil servants, then the interest is miniscule compared to the benefits of saving and protecting the lives of Caymanians and residents alike.

Madam Speaker, I also believe that previous governments contributed by way of planning laws and regulations ensuring there were high standards in the Cayman Islands. This too helped in the evolutionary process. Since Ivan I believe we have learned more lessons than we could even anticipate on how to build and how not to build our homes. That will help diminish the amount of money government would have to put in because there is absolutely no reason why any house being built now should not figure into the construction process money for protective windows, doors and/or shutters. I believe that the banks have a moral obligation to ensure that in lending money . . . it seems to me it is much easier to get a loan for a vehicle than to get something to protect your property. That should not be so.

I am happy for those banking institutions that took the lead in offering financing for insurance, but I believe that if the insurance companies themselves were to enter into this partnership and see ways and means to bring down the premiums, then perhaps we could all work together in a positive way as we build this nation.

If banks have to foreclose because people can no longer afford their insurance, it is not going to do them any good. Only a certain number of homes can be put on the market, and there are only a certain number of people who can buy them up real quick for a bargain. We must all look at this from a very rational position. They are benefiting. There is no bank in the Cayman Islands that is here because they love Cayman. Perhaps that is a side attachment, but it is a business and they are here to make money. So, I believe that they can look and see how they can assist with this Motion that the Government is about to accept, and I believe that if the will is there, they can go a long way in assisting our people which will—

[phone interference]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: —in turn assist them from a social and psychological standpoint as far as our people are concerned.

I would like to put on record my sincere gratitude and thanks to all who were responsible with the initial concept for the distribution of the plywood. But in particular I would like to thank Mr. Donovan Ebanks from the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs and the National Hurricane Committee which, I know from having spoken to him previously, played a very integral part in getting this decision formulated and implemented so that the Caymanian people would have this type of temporary protection.

Madam Speaker, make no mistake. The plywood is temporary insofar as it is not secured properly or is not installed properly and the fact that it has to be taken off and put back on. Because of the nature of it, there is no standardisation as to the installation as opposed to shutters where the manufacturers themselves will have to standardise a test for the actual installation and the Government can regulate that through its planning regulations. So, that is a grave disadvantage for the plywood. But plywood, properly installed and maintained can, and has, served a good purpose for many, many hurricanes and will continue to do until the Government finds itself in a position to adequately finance the different resolutions contained in this Motion.

Madam Speaker, I believe for anyone to say that the plywood was not a temporary measure on the talk show media is misleading and very divisive. Whether it was this Government or another, any good government wants the very best for its people. Having said that, they are always dangling modifiers; what is best also means what is affordable, what is accessible. I believe that in the past two or three years the plywood was given, that was the best the Government could do at the time.

As I said, I am grateful that the Government is willing to entertain the majority of the Motion with slight reservations to the last resolution. But we believe that where there is a will we can find positive and practical solutions to move forward in this evolution of protection process.

Madam Speaker, you do have, as I said, the unsafe aspect of the plywood in the delivery.

[phone interference]

Ms. Juliana Y. O'Connor-Connolly: I am not sure what happened in Grand Cayman, but as far as the Brac was concerned, you normally do not get approval or authorisation for obtaining and distributing plywood until 24 or 36 hours before a hurricane is coming. In a small community like the Brac it means just me and the Second Elected Member (for this last one). For other reasons it was just me, but I am sure had he been there he would have done what he did the first time—assist me in distributing the plywood and ensuring that everyone who needed it got it.

Often we find that the wind has already picked up. It's raining. You have the human element of some persons not getting because of limited resources, and then unfortunately for two consecutive years we had the . . . I certainly had the element of a particular businessman deciding after receiving the order who should get from who should not, which meant that people would come back to me asking for the plywood. I gave the assurance that the order was placed only to be told that they did not get, and then to hear the reasons why this individual businessman would not give it to them.

From my understanding, he spent more time showing the list to members of the public passing comments as to why Mr. or Ms. So and So should not get that, that the time that should have been properly spent in distributing the plywood was wasted playing politics—or politricks. Madam Speaker, I leave him to his good conscience. One of these times in his exercise of boyish games that he has embarked upon, he is going to find that someone he decided not to give plywood to is going to be exposed to high risk, and he will have to bear on his conscience increasing the risk and vulnerability of the people of Cayman Brac.

Madam Speaker, I get quite passionate at these boyish games (or girlish games when they occur) because, having lived through Hurricane Allen and watching from the edge of the Bluff the beautiful and normally tranquil and serene Caribbean Sea rise up into tidal waves ending at the foot of the Bluff in a cave where you are only some 45 or 50 feet above, and seeing the destruction and having to live through six months there without electricity and the hardships . . . thankfully, those days, for whatever reason the British Government seemed to have loved us a little bit more.

I remember, and I still have pictures of my dad and those who came in on the warship assisting in constructing homes and assisting with the general rebuilding of Cayman Brac. I have those vivid memories of what it is to survive a hurricane such as Allen in 1980.

So when it comes to assisting people, cost what it may, I will be there to the last minute trying to make sure they get protection regardless of where they come from or their financial status.

Like I said, I am sure Members can attest that during that short window that we have for distributing the plywood, there is no time to be second guessing or to be social service agents where a proper means test is done. The overriding consideration is that plywood is given to our residents and our Caymanians so that they can be protected from the onslaught of the storm and that during the billowing waves and dangerous seas we can rest assured that we did everything within our power to ensure that all Caymanian people are protected.

Madam Speaker, [the way] we do it is a bit different on the Brac, as I understand from the talk shows and in talking to some of my colleagues. I basically faxed in the orders from district administration for the plywood to the two establishments that had resources at that particular time, and signed off for it. They then distributed it themselves, as opposed to here [where] I understand the plywood is sent out to the various colleagues here, then the politicians here distribute. I do not get into that aspect of it except when it comes to the very end. We usually have some at the public works department. This time I had access I think to 104 sheets. Those were saved in the event someone was not able to access district administration during the hours we were there. It was like a reservoir reserve. So, in that aspect I was able to get Mr. Jerry Hunter, and I am extremely grateful to him, for working overtime in the rain and the wind to assist with the distribution of that plywood.

The experience is somewhat different, and I have done that, Madam Speaker, and it was done that way when the Second Elected Member was there the first time we did it, and that was to try to ostracise or sell from that exposure of politics being involved in it and I think it worked extremely well the first time. Except for that one occasion with this business boy, it went well this time.

I trust that the Motion, once accepted, we would move expeditiously to the shuttering because that would eradicate any intrusions or erosions of that sort, Madam Speaker, where people would have ample time, proper and adequate shutters to put on their homes and we won't have this plywood rush.

As I said, it is going to take some time, but I trust [that] in the Brac scenario that as quickly as it is possible . . . and I am sure the Leader and his Government will ensure that we can get the shutters for those outside the Civil Service—who already have access to affordable capital, as we heard this morning—indigent persons, [and] some strategy or plan from a financial perspective [will] be put in place to ensure that they too have it so that this whole plywood aspect scenario will go away sooner rather than later.

Madam Speaker, I believe it is also very necessary for us to look at those persons who we term frontline public servants. Both the Leader of the Opposition and the Leader of Government Business referred to the various categories and this is not inclusive or limited to these groups. But, certainly, the firemen, the emergency workers at the hospital, et cetera, the Public Works [workmen] who did a magnificent job of shuttering the entire Island, I am told by Mr. Ernie, in perhaps four to six hours on the Brac. A commendable job! But we need to look after them.

I can give you one very glaring example, and that is with our district officer, Mr. Larry Foster, on Little Cayman. Obviously, he sits on our committee on the Brac and as we convened for a committee meeting the need arose for him to fly across to the Brac to attend the committee meeting. Well, as most meetings that are more than a committee of one, they become protracted and time is consumed with various important matters. He also had a limited window to board up and batten up the residence of his wife and his special needs son.

Of course, very early the next morning he had to get on the plane, go back to Little Cayman, where he is like “governor” in the respect that all the responsibility of protecting the Island and the residents falls on his shoulders. I believe that we should look at the creation of some type (call it whatever you want) of task force for shuttering up these frontline persons, like him who—because of their public commitments have to be out there making decisions, protecting the public—will not have time to do it.

Madam Speaker, the Government can decide whether this will be done by assisting those persons’ access to loans where they get shutters that roll down and are quite easy for the wife or special needs person to deal with; or whether it is going to be what some deem to be the stronger ones that you install in panels. It was in this vein, when we were creating the Motion, thinking about the process being an incremental one that it would not be immediate, so you would still have the plywood.

In those areas we felt, from the Brac context and Little Cayman, that the numbers were small enough that you could have the task force committee (or whatever you want to call it) go around and ensure that those properties were secured so they would not have to lose their focus and their concentration thinking about their homes and their families while doing their public job.

I can stand here today, Madam Speaker, and tell you that that is not a good feeling. When we had Ivan back in September 2004, I came across on one of the first planes to land in Grand Cayman. My main home is on the Brac and I do have a residence here, which was pretty much demolished by Hurricane Ivan. We had called an emergency meeting with the Governor and, because I had just come in, I did not have a security pass. The hotels and everything were out in Grand Cayman. Everybody, including the Governor, disbursed from the meeting, never mind the fact that I was in George Town where people were looting and other things that should not go on were going on.

[phone interference]

Ms. Juliana Y. O’Connor-Connolly: A woman in George Town that time of night not yet even conceptualising all of the damage that had occurred, feeling quite strange and afraid, being on the dark streets of George Town, with all this going on, not knowing where to stay except my vehicle, and there was very little room there because I brought down three or four construction workers to try to patch my roof to try and salvage what I could.

Madam Speaker, I have said in here before, and I say it again, I thank God for CG who, for whatever reason had hung around and saw me in this desperate situation. He asked me to follow him down West Bay Road. I could almost imagine how Mary and Joseph must have felt when they were told there was no room in the Inn, because that was the story for the night. The roads were not very easy to navigate at that time.

Luckily the new Holiday Inn . . . in the beginning they said there were no rooms. But, after the persuasive technique of my colleague from West Bay, they allowed us to come in. We spent the entire night sitting around the pool with mosquitoes eating us. This was as a Minister of Government.

So, Madam Speaker, I know what it feels, not to mention the six months being in Prospect without anywhere to go, and having taken in some Brackers who lost everything and until this day not having furniture. I know, Madam Speaker, when I stand up here and speak about these issues, those persons on the frontline who have to go out and do the business of the country need somebody, some council, to go and look after them so that they can do what is necessary to carry on the country, to recuperate, to get the business regenerated.

In this process of nation building, we must come out of that small-box thinking, where if I do not get it, the next person should not get it; or, if a public servant gets it, then it is corruption. Madam Speaker, we are all in this fight to build this nation together. Unless we start thinking in a more codified and unified manner, we will never reach our final destination. I believe that perhaps through civics education in the schools we can start teaching our children to be proud to be Caymanian. As parents we can do this.

My friend and colleague, the [Fourth] Elected Member for George Town, always speaks about the importance of the flag and that interjection of pride into our Caymanian culture. This Motion is not that far fetched from that, because if we are proud to be Caymanian, if we truly believe that we need to encourage and increase our numbers, then one way to do it is by protecting and preserving what we already have. I believe this Motion will go a distance in decreasing the exposure and risk that our people have in the time of storms.

Because of many varied experiences, sometimes near death experiences, the Caymanian people know the importance of shuttering up their private and/or commercial properties. We are fully cognisant that one way of protection from windstorms and hurricanes is to install impact resistant shutters to cover all of our windows, especially the large windows, and our doors. Not only does adequate shuttering offer protection to doors and windows from windborne objects, but it can also reduce damage caused from a sudden build up of pressure within homes which will cause doors and windows to disintegrate and can also cause personal injury or physical damage to the property.

I believe that perhaps one of the considerations interjected into the Government resorting to the use of plywood was because, one, it is the easiest method for adequate protection and perhaps also the quickest. But because of the reasons expounded on by the two previous speakers and me, we must now move beyond this juncture. I believe I am preaching to the converted in that everyone is on board with the need, the urgent need, to now go to a more permanent nature of shuttering and protecting the homes of our Caymanians and residents alike.

Madam Speaker, I believe that Planning, through the Minister of Planning, must take an active role once this Motion is duly passed, hopefully today, in this honourable House, to ensure—I believe there is at least one manufacturer here . . . and it is going to be excellent business for them or anyone else who goes into the shuttering business—but to ensure from right now so we will not have to be faced with the prospect of grandfathering persons in who did not come up to any particular standard, that we set the standard post haste for the installation and for the durability of these shutters.

I know from the advertisement on the local radio that the persons (I believe it is the Hydes family) in the business that [the shutters] stood up to the test. In fact, I remember hearing on a talk show or an advertisement, the roof had gone, but their shutters were still on. I believe that is a good testament to the durability of the work they are already doing. But it gives the Government a very wonderful opportunity to standardise the installation of these shutters and to standardise the material.

Although it is the manufacturer's responsibility in testing these shutters to ensure that they are up to the required standards, and to ensure that they will not easily yield to the force of wind and wind-borne objects, Government too has a role to play in this regard.

Madam Speaker, another consideration for those who would qualify in the category for loans and access to affordable capital would be the installation of impact resistant windows and doors. From my research and understanding the frame and the glazing of wind resistant windows and doors works together not only externally, but internally, so that when wind pressure builds up you do not have that immediate fragmentation of glass flying. But the glazing helps to bond it together. Again, another protective measure, perhaps a measure that can be considered for the frontline public servants because it would not require anything more. Really, with the onslaught of a hurricane it would already be installed and would negate the manpower aspect of it.

I believe that if we give it some reasonable consideration we can find ways and means to assist these public servants to ensure that they are free and liberated to go and do what they love to do best. And that is to serve this country without any restrictions or inhibitions.

Madam Speaker, with those words I wish to thank you for your indulgence and all honourable Members for listening. I trust the Government will duly consider some if not all of what I and the Leader have said thus far and that it would not be a motion that falls by the way because of other priorities. We realise that time is short, elections are coming, hurricane season is not over, the world seems chaotic and other needs and constraints are on the Government. But, if not directly themselves, I would urge them to delegate or form an advisory body or authorise them with the ability to get to work and ensure that as soon as possible we start to see persons getting their shutters up and getting access to them and that a statement is made by them or a press briefing to inform the country what these strategies are and how we can access them.

Madam Speaker, I thank you again for your indulgence. I thank the Government in anticipation of positively and wholeheartedly accepting this Motion as brought by the Leader of the Opposition and seconded by me.

Thank you.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker—

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for the district of George Town.

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to make a few comments on the Motion proposed by the Leader of the Opposition and the First Elected Member of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman on shuttering.

Madam Speaker, while sitting and listening to all the speeches I went back many, many years in my lifetime regarding hurricanes. Although I am not ancient, I certainly have covered a few decades. Although I cannot remember really being involved in a very major storm except for Ivan, I certainly have experiences of those that came near to us and those that have brushed us that were not as severe as Ivan.

I remember in my day, we talked about battening down the house. And you would know that word, Madam Speaker. I am not dating you at all, Madam Speaker. I am just trying to remember some of those words we used. "Shuttering" is certainly a new word.

But I remember that we lived in a wooden house with wooden windows and a zinc roof. That was my first memory. I remember people coming to my mother's house, taking rope and tying down the zinc. I remember the nice wooden windows that kept us safe. Nice wooden windows in those wooden homes that we had in those days. Then, as I grew older, I saw the whole idea of battening down when we got glass windows. We moved to glass windows in our wooden house, and then we battened down with wood.

Madam Speaker, I believe the intent of the Motion is not so much regarding the shuttering, but about the safety of Caymanian people from any disastrous hurricane or catastrophic hurricane. I think that is perhaps the intent. Although I agree with the spirit of the Motion, I believe there are other variables that reflect safety. Not just the shuttering, but the whole idea of the educational aspect of our people in terms of understanding the dangers of a hurricane; to be protected, whether it is shuttering, a proper roof, or the other variables, like insurance. Those are the issues that we perhaps have skirted that are important . . . although the shuttering. I can tell you, Madam Speaker, [as] I stand here today, I bought proper shuttering (and the Leader of the Opposition spoke about proper shuttering) on my house. And the velocity and force of the water took my lovely shuttering and my place just moved with it.

[phone interference]

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: So, Madam Speaker, even though we have proper shuttering, we have to understand too that it depends on the force of nature, because I have experienced that. I lost everything. But I would not wish for the people of this country, whether they be residents or citizens, to lose what they have. Therefore, I stand to support the spirit of the Motion that through this media we can talk about it in this House to let the people be aware that it takes all of us, not just the Government, to ensure that we are protected.

And, Madam Speaker, excuse me—

[phone interference]

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: The thing that we have to put across is that the Government is willing to come forward and help the vulnerable. Every society has the vulnerable. Who should help the vulnerable but the Government? But at the same time, all of our people work somewhere. They are employed by somebody. What we need to put across too is that it is not just the Government that has to look for shuttering to ensure that our people are safe, but also the people that we work for to ensure that there is protection. This is collaboration.

I believe that in addition to what the Leader of the Opposition has proposed, I think we need to go beyond that to talk to the private sector in a very respectful way to understand that they too have a responsibility along with the Government to ensure that their people are protected so that there can be continuity in the workplace and we can be safe in this country.

So, I want to ensure that it is not just the responsibility of the Government to look at the protection of our people to ensure that they are shuttering. Madam Speaker, we have 54,000 people here. We have 22,000 on work permits. If we have 22,000 on work permits, surely at some point in time someone has to consider that they have to be protected too. They work for somebody. Yes, I understand that at the end of the day the Government has to assist. But I also understand that the employers should be cognizant of this. And when they hear what the Government is trying to do, they too can facilitate their personnel.

This is an important issue we are talking about and it should not be a blame-game situation. I hope this is not what it is. I think it is a realistic situation. When we look at the Turks, our own sister in the Overseas Territories, when we see the damage they got . . . then I reflect on Hurricane Ivan and the part that I played—not yet an elected politician—to see what had happened to us. We had not prepared ourselves educationally, physically or economically. All of us.

Madam Speaker, I understand and thank the Honourable Leader and the Civil Service for what they are trying to do for the people in the forefront. But we also have volunteers in the forefront. We have to think about those people who volunteer to help us during hurricane season. We need to educate everyone that when one leaves one's home and has to go somewhere, it has to be protected. Granted, the elements have a mind of their own and can do whatever the elements want to do. But at least we should know that if we leave our home to help somebody else, then we should have our house also safe.

I have been involved in the plywood era for over three years. I understand the situation, but I know that where I have been we have recorded persons who get the plywood. I am not saying that sometimes things do not fall through the net. I am not saying that. Perhaps people do get it for other reasons, but that is their conscience and their soul. They have to deal with a higher authority than me. So, when they come to us to get four pieces of plywood and they use it for other reasons, someone else is going to judge them. And it is not going to be me.

At the end of the day, we have a record of it to know that John or Jane Doe of whatever street received four pieces of plywood.

Before I close, I would like to make a point about the renters. In particular, those persons—

[phone interference]

Ms. Lucille D. Seymour: —who live in vulnerable areas.

Madam Speaker, we went around in a certain area and distributed plywood to people. I witnessed across the way a rental house. On the night of the pending hurricane, the renter called and asked if we had any plywood. I said, I thought their landlord would do that. And this was a nice cement house, you know. This was not a wooden house. But it was in a vulnerable area. But the landlord did not do it. So, the renter went next door and borrowed from somebody a piece, and cut an X and put that on her windows to protect it.

What I am saying, Madam Speaker, is that when we are talking about all of this, we also need to have some sort of discourse, either with the planning ministry or some sort of communiqué with the landlords to let them know that they are responsible for protecting the people in their homes, that they are responsible for it.

Yes, we can have the Government assist them, but they are the ones collecting the money from those poor people. Are you telling me that every month they cannot put aside a sum of money to help with their shuttering?

Also, if they are so needy, if it is very difficult for them because they have no expendable income, can they not dialogue with the Government or with some agency to work with them to ensure that they can have a loan somewhere to be able to put up shuttering on their houses? I think that we must not leave the landlords out of the equation. To me, that is very important.

Madam Speaker, when you are limited with your plywood, you have to use tact and diplomacy to let those poor tenants understand they can only get one piece. But what is one piece when you have four windows, three doors and so on? So, it behoves the landlord to . . . this is just as important as any other thing in the Cayman Islands. This is national—protecting the people in a country during a catastrophe, a hurricane or whatever.

So, Madam Speaker, I have said my few words. I would like to thank the Honourable Leader of the Opposition for bringing this Motion, but at the same time I think I would have liked if he had brought it in perhaps another way that we could have not put all the onus on the Government. If this is the worst economic situation that we are in . . . it is kind of difficult isn't it, Madam Speaker, to find money. But I do not believe that. I believe the Government has held its purse well. Yes, we are in some terrible economic times that affect our external . . . and we happen to fall into those. But I believe the economic situation is not as perilous as people would like it to be, but we certainly would be able to find that little bit of money to protect the safety of our people and the residents therein.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

The Fourth Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Madam Speaker, just a few short comments on the Motion.

This Motion is asking for Government to assist persons who cannot help themselves with more permanent hurricane shutters. For many years now the Government has been spending approximately $300,000 to $500,000 annually on plywood to assist these persons. However, these shutters are a necessity, not a luxury. We must help those persons who cannot help themselves.

We, on this side, realise, and I am sure Members on the other side of the Floor will agree, that the plywood shutters are not an ideal situation. However, for persons who do not have any shutters at all, these plywood shutters are greatly appreciated. As an interim measure it has worked until more permanent shutters are installed.

Madam Speaker, we were fortunate in West Bay (and they have helped other people in other districts as well). There is a working group, headed up by Mr. Allan Bush, which has volunteered their services during the hurricane off season (if they had the material) to cut and fit the plywood on persons' homes who need the shutters and who cannot help themselves.

During Hurricane Ivan, this working group and Allan did a tremendous service to the community as a whole, delivering plywood, cutting and installing and we would like to publicly thank them for that service.

Madam Speaker, permanent shutters would eliminate the necessity of having to annually distribute this amount of plywood and, in the long run, would cost the Government less than it is costing them now.

So, Madam Speaker, with those few words, I would like to support this Motion and thank the mover for bringing it.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

The Second Elected Member for the district of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to support the spirit of Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09 [sic], brought by the Leader of the Opposition and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Speaker: [Private Member's Motion No.] 6.

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I believe that the Motion completes a cycle that has been started, as the First Elected Member said, years ago in a vision for the Bluff of Cayman Brac, and for the people of the Cayman Islands as a whole.

I am very pleased to be able to stand here today and talk a little bit about the Cayman Islands, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and what we have learned from Hurricane Ivan, to protect the people themselves.

Following along the lines of an overview before I deal with the resolves, in Cayman Brac itself after Hurricane Ivan, the population doubled. And, rightfully so, the future was seen to be on higher ground on the Bluff.

[phone interference]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: In my short time of public service, I am very pleased to say that the continued approach of safe refuge for not only the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, but the people of the Cayman Islands, continues to be developed. We have together created and continue to work on a road system that starts at the eastern end of the Island, with the completion of the Ann Tatum ramp, and allows the eastern district to get on high ground without having to go through the most dangerous area of the Island around one of the primary schools or in the Panama Canal where most of the overflow usually happens.

[phone interference]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: And that road system continues on to the Aston Rutty Centre, where a medical centre has been built, and also a daycare to a category 5 standard which gives more protection for the people.

Then, from there it goes to the westernmost hurricane shelter of the West End School. This year, right before hurricane season, it was prioritised to complete the road into the West End School. I believe that shows the correct way of thinking, and it shows how this Motion will tie everything together from the standpoint of protecting the indigent all the way to the ones who do not need help with shuttering in Cayman Brac and the Cayman Islands themselves.

Madam Speaker, the spirit of the Motion has been brought at a time when I think it can be most easily seen important to be dealt with. In that way, I believe the Government (as indicated by the Leader of Government Business) will action it with a very high sense of urgency, considering we are in the centre of hurricane season.

The resolve section reads, AND WHEREAS in recent times the Government has been supplying individuals with plywood at a great cost . . ." I have been involved with this twice. We sit on a committee chaired by the district commissioner in Cayman Brac. The First Elected Member and I have the ability, as she has outlined, to go to the Hurricane Committee on Grand Cayman (through Mr. Donovan Ebanks and the First Official Member) who organises the plywood itself.

When hurricane Dean was approaching, as we sat in the Committee we looked at each other and realised that time was limited and that we must action this as quickly as we could. We went outside of the committee and we called and got permission and, as was done in this circumstance recently with Gustav, people were put in a situation to request. Accountability was very evident because a form was filled out.

The person's name was on it, and a list was made and sent to suppliers.

The suppliers, being caught in a last minute situation and never before in Cayman Brac having to deliver that quantity of plywood purchased by the Government to give to people for shuttering, were not able to meet the demand put on them in that short period of time. The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and I got a truck and we went to the public works compound on a Saturday. We loaded everything we could on the back of the truck and we drove from the east end of the Island to the west end to support the suppliers, to make sure that as much [as possible] could be delivered in a short period of time and the people that needed to get it as quickly as we could get it to them.

I dare say that at the end of the day there were probably still people that needed.

I say that to preface what I want to say about Gustav, because I was not here in Gustav. I was flying back from a vacation and did not arrive until Sunday. But as the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said, she actioned in the same way. And I have confidence that she did the very best she could to get plywood to the people that needed it. She had to take an individual truck and go and deliver to make sure people were receiving.

Madam Speaker, when I arrived back on Sunday, the number of people that called and thanked not me personally, but thanked us—every one of my colleagues here in this honourable House—for the plywood and the attention and the effort that was made by those on Cayman Brac to protect the ones that needed, it made me feel good. It made me feel how the community had pulled together and how they had worked so hard to make sure that the ones who needed help got it in a short period of time.

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: The idea of criticism will come no matter what any of us do. But I believe that if we err on the side of more protection rather than less protection, we can feel comfortable that we have done what we were to do as legislators and MLAs for our districts.

I would say that there are still some orders of plywood in Cayman Brac that were not able to be filled in the short period of time. I believe that they should be actioned. The hurricane season only being half over we should continue to make sure that people who were unable to get and still need get sometime in the next week or so.

Madam Speaker, the idea of frontline people, only if you have been through the lead-up to a hurricane do you understand how people put themselves in harm's way, and how their families depend on them, and how the community depends on them, and how their families do without them in that time of need. So the inclusion of that in the resolve of this Private Member's Motion, I think is most important. I believe that we must encourage them to continue to serve in the way they do. And it is incumbent upon us to find a way to make them whole when they are out protecting us. If that means a system that is implemented on a national policy or a system that is implemented by community committees, I think we have to be the leaders in understanding how we protect them and give them comfort in continuing the way they serve.

If you look at our structure and what we have learned from hurricanes past, I think we can be very confident and very proud with what the firemen and the police do. In the fire service in Cayman Brac, as was mentioned before, the chief and the members looked at where populations had increased because of the building on the high ground on the Bluff, and actually stationed tankers and emergency equipment in those areas and spread them out through the Island.

Madam Speaker, this is a very proactive approach, a very positive way of looking at how they can protect the community. I believe that all the services and all the frontline people approach it like that. So, again, I reiterate my support for coming up with a policy on how we make them whole to protect us.

Madam Speaker, the idea of Government considering how we shutter properties of the indigent is, again, when you have been involved in the lead up to a weather system coming to the Islands, one of the most worrisome and time consuming issues you will have to face. Not only are you worried about the protection of the indigent people themselves and moving them to the shelters or protection in some way, but you are also worried about the protection of their property, their homes. You must give them peace of mind that everything that can be done has been done so that when they return from the shelter after the storm has passed their personal property has been protected in the best way it could.

I believe that this is an issue for us to look at because when the plywood is delivered to an indigent's house, it's just delivered. It just sits there. There is no one to put it on the window, to pound it in. If we look at how we shutter those houses and make it easy for it to be secured, it not only protects the personal property of the indigent, but it allows the people who have that responsibility to save much needed time as the bad weather approaches.

Madam Speaker, I would certainly encourage, as others have said before me, that when we look at the type of shutter that is needed we be proactive and realise that the initial cost is not always the real cost of what you are installing and how you are going to protect. The real issue is that the time you have saved because of an accordion shutter in comparison to individual pieces that you have to place and bolt would probably allow you to do three or four more homes in the same amount of time with the people responsible for that.

Madam Speaker, the resolve of adequate funding I think has been addressed in a very professional, sound manner. The idea of the Cayman Islands Development Bank providing loans for the ones that can afford to have that extra payment, a low interest loan . . . , it is hoped that when they approach the bank for the loan there is also some expertise to advise them on the best type of shutter. And not only that, on the best deal they can get. I believe that would be very helpful for the population itself.

I would also hope that this creates a demand. I would envision a young entrepreneur in Cayman Brac taking advantage of supplying this demand, looking at, whether it is the Development Bank or a private bank, to help with an assembling business for shutters in Cayman Brac. I believe that would attract no import duty if they were assembled on the Island itself. The tools are in place now with the investment bureau on Cayman Brac, and the Development Bank to help mentor and bring this young entrepreneur along. I think it is a very important part of the resolve in the Motion.

[phone interference]

Mr. Moses I. Kirkconnell: Madam Speaker, to complete my short comments, I would just like to say that I would ask the Government to think about removing import duty on goods into Little Cayman for a short period of time for them to rebuild the damaged properties there now. I would also ask them, as the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and I have discussed earlier today, to action as quickly as possible (and we discussed this with Leader of Government Business, let me be clear) the damaged homes in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that we can move on into the community and get these roofs fixed and the damaged areas resolved as quickly as possible.

Madam Speaker, those are my short comments as I speak in support of the spirit of this Private Member's Motion.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause] Does any other Member wish to speak? [pause]

If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I want to thank all those persons who spoke. First, I want to thank the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who seconded the Motion and gave her input.

Madam Speaker, I heard all the speakers on that side—only being three, including the Leader of Government Business—say they support the spirit.

[phone interference]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I am wondering whether that means they are going to vote for it.

Usually my experience has been in this House that when somebody says they support the spirit, they normally do not vote for it. But, perhaps the Government means they are in support, but they did not want to come out and say that much to me.

I noted with interest that the Leader of Government Business said that perhaps it is financially unattainable, if you read what he said in the Caymanian Compass. Of course, while I agree with him that a lot has been talked about, there are things that have not been done.

Madam Speaker, I believe it was in the June or July meeting of the Hazard Committee that the Governor chairs (they have so many now, I do not know which one, but the Governor chairs this one), the Leader of Government Business said when we got to that point (this was in July) that. . . I cannot quote word for word, but to the extent that it did not seem like a shuttering programme was going to be put in place so we had to go back to the plywood deal. I think that was in July when I met with them. Now, whether he meant at that time that it would not be put in place in time for this hurricane season, or that it would not be put in place at all, I do not know. But that was what was said there.

I have listened, and I want to move forward in closing to speak to a few points that were made.

I would like to give some statistics in regard to what the National Assessment of Living Conditions had to say about the households. According to the findings of the National Assessment of Living Conditions, there are 18,338 households in the Cayman Islands. This would include those who reside in rented facilities that perhaps will fall into a different category, from what I hear Government saying about not being so willing to support anything they are doing because the rental facilities are a business. And people should be able to take care of themselves, is what I think I heard some members of Government say.

But, the 18,338 households—

[phone interference]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: —and that is not what I said, Madam Speaker, about who is capable and who is not capable. That is coming from the Government's side.

Our small size as a nation afforded us over the years a good economy. I cannot buy this excuse, Madam Speaker, that they do not have enough money. To use the words of my friend, the Third Elected Member for George Town, she would rather I had brought the Motion in another way to not put all the onus on the Government. She said these are terrible economic times. Of course! Of course we know these are terrible economic times.

Madam Speaker, with the frequent revelations of wasted money I am amazed that the Government does not see the value for money in protecting all the property of the residents of this country.

I hope, and would have hoped, that this would have been more straightforward than what the Leader of Government Business made it and it will not be a continuance of distributing the proverbial political band aid each hurricane season. The annual plywood distribution costs, it is estimated, over $1 million per year some years. It is not often available the following season as we said.

According to the National Assessment of Living Conditions report, most persons in the Cayman Islands live in undivided private houses, that is, 41.2 per cent. This translates to 7,555. Homes, flats, apartments, and condominiums represent 42.6 per cent. Overall, 3 per cent of households live in double houses or duplexes. An estimated 47.7 per cent of all households owned the homes in which they live. Of these, 23.5 per cent of homes were owned with a mortgage, while 24.2 per cent were owned without a mortgage. The high percentage of rentals points to the presence of a large immigrant population on contract of employment who would need to rent accommodations during their stay in the Cayman Islands.

So, we can deduce from these statistics that the number of private owner/occupied dwelling homes in the Cayman Islands, which is the target for this proposed programme, is estimated to be 3,551 homes.

A significant percentage of dwellings in that report were found to be constructed using concrete blocks as the main material of the outer walls, at 70.8 per cent. As their socio-economic position improved, persons were more likely to live in dwellings made of concrete blocks. However, a startling 31.8 per cent of households, the lowest bracket, used wood and timber as compared to 5.9 per cent in the highest.

There were also dwellings with the main material of outer walls being plywood. One per cent of the households surveyed used plywood. Within the poorest bracket, 2.8 per cent had used plywood as the main construction materials of outer walls.

Madam Speaker, from the statistics I have quoted, we can see that it is the poor in this country that are most vulnerable to the threat of hurricanes. I do not expect that it is an unattainable goal to ensure that all of these homes are shuttered properly. We all know that a significant percentage of these homes are already shuttered.

Madam Speaker, it does not take a financier to determine that the current system of distributing plywood is an impractical option to continue and those permanent shutters would shortly pay for themselves.

To put this in perspective, I might have said something this morning that at an estimated cost of $5 million, that one thousand homes could be shuttered for $5 million. Sorry, an estimated cost of $5,000, one thousand homes would be shuttered for $5 million.

The amount is not extravagant. That is at $5,000 per home. I believe that is about right, Madam Speaker.

My daughter, who has a modest Cayman home, just bought her shutters and that is about what she had to pay. That's the accordion shutters, the ones that are quite easy to lock up.

I do not know where they can say that there could be an unattainable goal (I think were the words used by the Leader of Government Business), because we spend so much money on other things that can be a problem in a government that spends so much—in the Matrix fiasco, in the helicopter, in a boxing match, so that the Minister of Tourism can get his frame up on television every time it went around.

You can look at various amounts of expenditures and we could say that a programme of what I am talking about and the spirit of what this Motion means . . . because that is the spirit. The spirit is to put a programme in place that people can get.

Maybe the commercial banks will do it, but they have not been doing it up until now with a lot of homes because we know how difficult . . . that is a more commercial operation. I am trying to say Government could help if Government went through the Development Bank and did it themselves, rather than do it through the commercial banks. It is going to be a whole pile of low interest and some people, not as little as you think of it . . . and it seems that is how they have been thinking—very little of it. As little as you think of it, that $5,000 or $6,000 more on a mortgage is going to cost a lot more. It might put them out of their range of getting their mortgage.

[phone interference]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: And I think a lot of that has been happening, Madam Speaker.

So that's why I say Government needs to devise a programme through the Development Bank. Get the capital somehow and allow the programme to run there. I am not going to say through the recovery fund. I am not going to say that. I am hearing too much bickering going on between Government and the recovery fund, and this one and the next. Sometimes you do not know where you are with the recovery fund.

I would rather see . . . and I think I'd better say it now. The spirit of the Motion is for Government to do a programme. Not to mention now that they are going to buy Embraer—two more planes! They cannot be short of money. Cannot be, because they have spent, spent, and keep spending.

[phone interference]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Small country like us? Three different kinds of planes? And you are talking about you wish I had not put the onus on Government? You have to put the onus on Government.

[phone interference]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Including all of us here in this House.

But, Madam Speaker, so rightly said by the Third Elected Member for George Town, that's why I am bringing the Motion. All of us! I do not think that would be insignificant.

Madam Speaker, the Leader of Government Business spoke to duty concession concerns. I have had my concerns over the years as well. But, Government has a lot of things duty free now. Why is the Leader of Government Business choosing this one to be so concerned about not being passed on to the people? Look at how many things are already duty free. Why?

We hear his concern regarding not passing on the savings to the customer. And to this end we encourage the Portfolio of Finance to dialogue with suppliers of shuttering equipment to examine the practicality of establishing some form of direct rebate to customers. That could take place because as I see it, you go and pay $6,000 for your shuttering from some company, and you can prove to Government by the receipt that you paid $6,000, then Government can give back that 20 per cent, $600 [sic]. So we can look at that possibility in the spirit of the Motion.

Madam Speaker, I think the Leader of Government Business mentioned something about temporary fix; we do not want temporary fixes. We are not asking for any temporary fix. The Motion is very, very specific asking for a shuttering programme. It is not something temporary.

You know in the old days, and the Third Elected Member [for George Town] brought back a lot of memories for me, I guess a lot of Members of this House that lived in that old house with a zinc roof and no ceiling. That was my grandmother's house. I will never forget it. Many hurricanes came and did not knock it down. We had to tear all the wood off and that old frame stood there and you had to get the big bulldozer to slacken. How those old people had made those homes without any electrical equipment, without any nails. The wattle and daub they called it. That stood.

But I remember that we did not want to stay there and we moved to a neighbour's better house during a hurricane. We were always concerned about our safety.

I remember one of my cousins and a neighbour, the late Capt. Curry Ebanks had shutters made out of wood. Quite easy to put on, but very sturdy. He said "Put them on." I used to go help him. He used to pay me for it as a little boy, when the approach of any storm was expected. A lot of homes in Cayman had those types of shutters, wood shutters, made with the bolt in the building itself. All they had to do was hang them—one up, the other one down. But they would stand the breeze.

Let me tell you something. We all used this plywood. I saw in Ivan, I had to go out 10 o'clock that morning and everyone knows that is when the storm was really hitting us. But I had lost contact with my daughter and her family at around 6 o'clock. Not able to take it any longer, I said "we're going." Luckily there was a truck in the yard of the many people that were in the house, and I saw plywood being torn off of a house. I looked in there and I suspected that that happened to many more houses because when I looked up (I say a mile, but I don't know what distance it was) the amount of plywood I saw going into the west . . . I said, "Well either somebody's roof is gone or the shutter is gone." So do not think that is . . . while that is a good mechanism, that can be torn off by the wind if the wind catches it in the right corner. And I saw it being torn off of one house.

So, Madam Speaker, we do not know what nature can throw up at us, and when we hear about 60 foot waves that hit Cuba, and when you look at what Ivan, at the lighthouse on the tip end of the Bluff, that the sea—which is 150 feet, or something like that . . . the sea came up on top of that, Madam Speaker. It must have been what the elderly people told me up there, two waves hit together and flew in the air. That's 150 feet. For that to come up, only God knows what kind of sea that was.

We do not know. It is only God's mercy that saves us, and we all better recognise that. I know they are cussing me because they say I am no Christian and I say I am a Christian. But, Madam Speaker, we better get on our knees and be thankful to Almighty God.

When I saw what was hitting the coastline in Havana and coming through those towns, going up to six storeys, we can imagine what the poor people in Grand Turk . . . they just thought they were gone because the Island was swept. We do not know, but we can try our best to be prepared and then pray to God to do the rest for us.

Two more points, Madam Speaker. One was that someone talked about they should have been prepared in 2004, or better prepared in 2004. Madam Speaker, I laid the report, Crisis Readiness—Investment in our Future. I am still asking why in the world this was not accepted. I know the Honourable First Official Member will remember the day we were invited to talk about this by Marsh McClelland at the time. I said, my God, I didn't know we could get to do these things and get prepared, and I was all gung ho, so much so that I took it under my wing to move forward with it. They turned it down in Cabinet, the then Governor did. Turned it down. Nothing ever happened. Got there late.

You can blame the smiling tourism minister for that. It got there late, but nevertheless we got it there. They turned it down. We were not ready for what hit us in 2004. Not ready. The country was not ready, the Government was not ready, the Hurricane Committee was not ready. We all worked hard, mind you, for the preparation. We all worked afterwards. Everybody knows. Just imagine—to put this country back on its feet, this town here, in one week. Yes, and they cuss us and say we did nothing. One week! We were back in business to save the country.

They ask me what I have done. I can feel good, Madam Speaker. I still say . . . I hope they took that when I tabled it and looked at it for the national plan, which we are still working on now. That was not just for Government. That was for the whole country.

Madam Speaker, maybe it was the Third Elected Member for George Town who said that she hoped it was not a blame-game. It is not a blame-game, Madam Speaker. I would like to repeat that. We are not coming here saying that . . . well, we could have said that they should have been better prepared. But we all have responsibilities. We all know what the stresses are. I am not going to be like them, Madam Speaker, when they did everything to defeat me as Leader of Government Business. And they have not. And I am not going to do that. I have not done it these past nearly four years. I have not gone on the street when I could have been there. I could be there against the helicopter. The Government—not the Governor, the Government! I could be there against CUC. I could be there against Matrix. I could be there for so many different things.

I am afraid I am going to have to go about CUC if they are going down the route that I hear in this House. I will have a public meeting out there once the plans are put forward. But we are not here laying any specific business. This is not what it is about. There are a lot of things that we can do that for. That is not what this one is about.

Madam Speaker, the Motion is specific. I would hope that Government, if they pass the Motion, would get immediately on it. This is, I know, the last hurricane season, and we hope that we do not have to contend with any more. Let's pray about that. But we do not know. We continue as Opposition to do all we can and offer our full support to Government on anything that we can do, Madam Speaker, to make things better, to make it work better, any input that we can give. We are here to do our part, and we have been doing that.

So, I ask the Government, if the spirit is good then carry through the programme.

The Speaker: The question is: BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government consider securing the homes of indigents with a permanent and adequate shuttering system;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, in its hurricane preparations, the Government consider securing the properties of all front line public servants;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers establishing a programme to provide access to adequate funds to allow qualified individuals to obtain hurricane shutters;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government considers removing all duty on hurricane shutters and related materials.

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09 is duly passed.

Agreed: Private Member's Motion No. 6/08-09 passed.

[Pause. Speaker asked for delayed Motion No. 7/08-09 to be done at this time.]

Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09—Scientific Study to Ascertain Cancer in the Islands

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Amendment Thereto

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Notice has been given to you of an amendment to the Motion which says, and I beg to move, Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09. And I guess I had better read that into the records

In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the Honourable Leader of the Opposition, give notice to move the following amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09, entitled Scientific Study to Ascertain Cancer in the Islands, as follows: by deleting the words "of the extremely high degree" as they appear in the resolve section of the Motion.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder, please?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The Motion for the amendment has been duly moved to delete the following words: "of the extremely high degree." Does the mover wish to speak thereto?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we agreed that I was not going to speak to the amendment. I do not know if anybody wants to. I certainly do not see the need to.

The Speaker: The question under Standing Order 26 is that the amendment be made. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Agreed: That the amendment be made to Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09—Scientific Study to Ascertain Cancer in the Islands—As Amended

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Amended Private Member's Motion No. 7/08-09, Scientific Study to Ascertain Cancer in the Islands, which stands in my name, and I move, reads:

WHEREAS there is a high incidence of various cancers in the Islands;

BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government considers conducting a scientific study to ascertain and determine the possible causes of cancer in these Islands.

The Speaker: Could I have a seconder?

Capt. A. Eugene Ebanks: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: The Motion as amended has been duly moved and is open to debate.

Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I have—

[phone interference]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: —put forward, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay and I, a Private Member's Motion requesting that Government consider embarking on a study of the occurrence and rate of cancer in these Islands.

I would venture to say that there is not one person in this honourable House who has not been touched in some way by this disease. I recall some time ago, 2004, somewhere around there, there was a motion by the Speaker and somebody else, early between 2001 and 2004, I think. At some point there was a motion and then there was a report done by the then Minister of Health also on that motion.

As I said, Madam Speaker, there is not one person in this honourable House who has not been touched in some way by this dreaded disease.

As representatives of the people and family members ourselves, we have all attended the funerals, made the hospital visits, or in other ways had to deal with the many persons, empathise and sympathise with them and our community whose lives have been touched by cancer.

The statistics of this disease often paint a grim picture. According to the World Health Organization, cancer is one of the leading causes of death worldwide. In countries like the United States of America, it is surpassed only by cardiovascular disease. In 2007, cancer accounted for 7.9 million deaths worldwide. That was 13 per cent of all deaths. Unfortunately, this figure is projected to rise by 45 per cent from 2007 to 2030.

The Speaker: Honourable Leader of the Opposition, just give me one minute so that we can correct . . . so we can be as safe as we can be . . . the amendment is dated 10 September 2003, and Members have pointed this out. I am certain this is a typographical error and should read 2008.

Thank you, Honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: So what this means, Madam Speaker, is that the number of cancer deaths will jump from 7.9 million to an estimated 12 million in the next 20 years.

Statistics from the United States suggest that this year alone (2008), over 565,650 persons will die of cancer. That is at the rate of 1,500 people per day.

The main types of cancer leading to overall cancer mortality each year are: lung, 1.4 million deaths per year; stomach, 866,000 deaths per year; colon, 677,000 deaths per year; liver, 653,000 deaths per year; breast, 548,000 deaths per year.

Madam Speaker, again based on information from the World Health Organization, we know that the most frequent types of cancer worldwide based on the number of global deaths among men: lung, stomach, liver, colon, oesophagus, prostate. Among women: breast, lung, stomach, colon and cervical.

Honourable Members, another grim statistic to consider is that about 72 per cent of all cancer deaths in 2007 occurred in low and middle income countries. That is a frightening statistic. Seventy-two per cent of all cancer death in 2000 occurred in low and middle income countries. That means that countries in our region, the Caribbean, are facing a high toll from this disease.

We also know that certain cancers, such as lung, prostate and breast, are quite prevalent in the region. I wish I could provide comprehensive and up to date cancer statistics for the Islands, but, unfortunately, we do not seem to have this kind of data in such a form. I understand that we have some serious knowledge gaps regarding cancer in the Islands, and this is directly related to the unique circumstances of our population and economy.

As I understand it, there are two main particularities: One, a significant number of local residents do not see a doctor here. They develop a medical problem and they go off island for diagnosis and treatment. Or, they may see a primary physician here, but then are referred overseas.

In many cases, unless persons are insured by Government or are seen at the George Town Hospital, any potential cancer cases are not captured as part of our local data.

The second issue is that we have a large expatriate population here and it is entirely possible that persons within this grouping may immigrate here with a predisposition to certain cancers. We know that some types take many years to develop and if members of this group should later be diagnosed with the disease, then hospitals cannot tell whether there were local factors at play or whether they had been incubating the disease for some time.

Madam Speaker, we have a very active and vibrant Cayman Islands Cancer Society which does a tremendous job in highlighting cancer as a major health concern. I thank them from the bottom of my heart for all they do. The other one is the Hospice Care. It was a godsend when those individuals started that.

There is so much talk about expatriates, and I will not get into it, but some make great, great contributions to this country. When you consider what Hospice Care does (between them and the Cancer Society), Government cannot pay for that kind of care; can't pay for that kind of service. That is why I said many years ago in this House that Government cannot pay for the kind of social services rendered by the NGOs and social organisations in this country—Lions Club, Rotary. If we had to pay for all those things, we would be taxed out of existence to pay for the good service that we get. We cannot. And people better understand that.

But even with their efforts, they only speak for or monitor those cases that pass through their doors. It means that, and this is part of my impetus in putting forward this Motion, 1) that we still have much to learn about, the extent to which cancer is being diagnosed and treated; 2) the prevalence of the disease; 3) and the prevalence of different forms of cancer; 4) the incidence of cancer among native Caymanians and expatriate groups; 5) any environmental factor that may be a contributory factor in the development of the disease in our Islands.

I want to specifically stress the last point. It is no secret that many persons in our community have from time to time expressed concerns about what they perceive to be a high rate of cancer in our Islands for the size of the population. We certainly cannot fault them for this perception.

I spoke to the Minister of Health the other day, and I know he is going to respond. The World Health Organization, PAHO (the Pan American Health Organization), will say that we have a very low incidence. To us here in the Islands, when we experience it around our family, around our friends, and when we see what is happening in the community, we say, Well, they can have their statistics, but this is high for us.

We may well recall that some years ago this very issue was the subject of a study which concluded, inter alia, that the overall cancer incidence and mortality rates found for the Cayman Islands are only one-third to one-quarter of those found in developed countries such as the United States and the United Kingdom. Compared to the whole world neither male nor female overall incidence and mortality rates of cancer for the Cayman Islands can be considered abnormally high. In the Cayman Islands the crude incidence of the most common male and female cancers is also similar to that of the Caribbean region and the Bahamas. And the Cayman Islands' accrued mortality rate of the most common male and female cancers is also similar to that of the Caribbean region and the Bahamas.

A study was conducted by the Chief Medical Officer and was put forward as a report on the Motion 2012 [sic]. That was the motion I was speaking to earlier, Madam Speaker. Number 12 of 2000, sorry. Nevertheless, while on the basis of that Motion that study was done and made its conclusions, as I said, when we are impacted we feel this is a big issue for us, the size of these Islands. Accountants and people who deal with statistics will use the statistics to tell you that this is not so. But as I said, when you have to bury a loved one because of it, it is an impact.

Cures persist, but cancer continues to ravage us and families continue to pay the price. Madam Speaker, it is clear that we do not have sufficient empirical evidence about cancer in our Islands. Even the Cayman Islands Cancer Society can only provide anecdotal evidence regarding the incidence of cancer and who is being affected based on the small numbers of persons who avail themselves of their services.

The Cancer Society itself indicates that they frequently field questions from the public about any casual links between local cancer rates and environmental factors, particularly relating to mosquito spraying and our water supply.

[phone interference]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we have yet to get beyond mere questions, fearful speculation and the anxiety that stems from lack of scientific knowledge.

Madam Speaker, they say it has not harmed us. I do not like to be one who talks about . . . because you sound like you know it all. Some people have that habit. But when you look at some of the younger people that are dying, and when you think about the spraying that has taken place over these many years and those persons were young children and had cisterns when that began. We depended on cisterns for drinking water. We have to wonder if that had any effect.

I know this: It was never published, but there was a report done back in the 1970s that concluded that the spraying at that time had an effect on the health. It was never published. But it is a fact that that report was done, and hid away from the public.

And what were we spraying with at those times?

You have to wonder too, Madam Speaker, when we talk about environmental factors, what caused so many deaths in teachers? Have we considered the number of teachers who sat in that classroom, day after day, sometimes at night; lived there? There was one, two, three, four, five, six, seven, eight, nine, ten . . . there were six that I can think of who passed away. At least four, including one in this House, were affected. We have to wonder whether anything in the building affected them. It is something that always gave me a great degree of concern.

So, cancer is a public health issue and is acknowledged as such by much of the global community and I believe we must do the same. I am therefore appealing through the Motion to give very serious consideration to a scientific study into cancer on these Islands.

Madam Speaker, in talking to the Minister I think he indicated some support. It is widely understood that knowledge is one of the most powerful weapons in the fight against cancer. This underlines my Motion, because the more we know about what is causing this disease among our people and the more we know who is at risk, the better prepared we will be to deal with it.

Generally speaking, we now know something about some of the causes of cancer, and we can do some things ourselves. We know there are external agents, such as ultra violet and ionizing radiation. Chemicals, such as asbestos, and components of tobacco smoke, biological carcinogens, such as infections from certain viruses, bacteria and parasites.

Scientific data also points out that genetics play a role in the development of certain cancers.

Talk to the old people and some of them say you were born with it. You do not know. A scientific study looks at the incidence and nature of the disease. Here, I believe it could help shed light on the extent to which this is a factor among Cayman's cancer patients.

Madam Speaker, we also know that there are certain key risk factors for cancer that we all can avoid by adopting more healthy lifestyle practices. These include tobacco use, being overweight—worries me!—obese or being physically inactive. Now, I am not inactive, but I know I am overweight. Harmful and excessive alcohol use. Sexually transmitted diseases. Occupational carcinogens.

As a country, we can continue to promote healthy lifestyle choices so that everyone can do their part in the fight. But, Madam Speaker, I put forward this Motion because I strongly believe that with the right information that comes out of our own research and our own special circumstances in these Islands, things we face . . . we have an unhealthy garbage dump. Is that affecting us? Is the mosquito spraying affecting us? Other things, some of them I named.

We can help to prevent what is preventable in our own special circumstances, and treat what can be treated. We must remind ourselves that prevention options now include vaccines, such as that for cervical cancer. People are now seeking to head off some cancers through genetic testing to determine if they are at risk for the disease. Might these be options that could be widely available to the residents of these Islands? The more we know, the more we will be able to determine the answers.

I understand that even before any meaningful study can take place, we will need to establish some denominators for such a project. The Cancer Society has recognised the need for a cancer registry because they, more than any other body, have to deal with the perception that there is a high incidence of cancer in Cayman. But without scientific evidence they have no way of knowing.

So, a cancer registry would provide the means to collect information on the incidence and types of cancer, the extent of disease at the time of diagnosis, the kind of treatment available to cancer patients, and the outcomes of treatment and management of the disease.

Madam Speaker, depending on how such a registry is developed, we might also expect to capture data on local population segments and even on a district by district basis. I do not know, but it might well be that because of privacy issues in medical reporting we may require legislative framework to establish such a registry.

I would certainly support the efforts of the Cancer Society to establish such a registry. This would be a good first step to getting the kind of data we need to underpin any scientific study.

Cancer registries exist in other countries, and in a majority of the states in the United States. Data collected by these registries enabled public health officials to understand and address cancer more effectively. So this was seen as a useful tool and a practical first step for us.

Madam Speaker, while we are on the subject of practical steps and the fight against cancer, let me say that the tobacco legislation was languishing. But I saw somewhere recently that it is time enough for this to be passed into law. And let me say something here: I have not had time to look at all of it. I have looked at different pieces. But I hope it is going to be effective because I have no sympathy for this thing of cigarette smoke. Even when you do not smoke yourself, this thing affects you. I know some people have recognised it and stopped it, praise the Lord. But I have no sympathy.

We have to be realistic and practical sometimes about businesses in the business. I know that Government gets revenue from it, and I am not debating the Bill. I only saw it somewhere, but we are debating cancer. And I know people have been affected by cigarette smoke and got that dreaded disease and died because of it. So bring it soon. You have my full support. There will be people who say, No, we can't do it this way, we must consider this. We have to consider people's health.

Smoking should be banned everywhere! Restaurants, everywhere. I hate to kiss a girl and smell cigarette smoke.

[inaudible interjections]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: I didn't tell you I don't kiss girls anymore! That was not part of me getting saved. I kiss girls. I am not going anywhere else to kiss.

[inaudible interjections and laughter]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: My Kerry don't smoke, but I did not say anything about how you were kissing.

[laughter]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: It's your own mind.

Get out of there.

Madam Speaker, good to have that light moment for Members.

I expect I am going to hear that the Motion is a tall order. Yes, it may require much, but it is certainly not impossible, and I am sure the Minister recognises that. I expect I am going to hear that the task of establishing a scientific study is not an easy one. That may well be true. And I expect there will be some who will think that just because cancer is a phenomenon of global proportions which continues to baffle the medical community, and the best of medical communities, for decades, that small communities like ours can do nothing about it. That is not something we have to accept. We do not have to accept that.

Madam Speaker, I hope that all my colleagues will join me in supporting this Motion for the good health of our families, our community and our Islands.

To end on a lighter note, not because a girl smokes, I did not say that I would not still kiss her.

The Speaker: It is almost the hour of interruption. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

Honourable Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

We have a press briefing in the morning at 10 o'clock. As I intimated to you, I would move the adjournment of this honourable Legislative Assembly until tomorrow morning at 11.30 am.

READINGS BY THE HONOURABLE
SPEAKER OF MESSAGES
AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I have no messages or announcements.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE
MEMBERS AND MINISTERS
OF THE CABINET

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Health and Human Services.

Health Care Services Authority Charge Master

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, the Members of the Legislative Assembly are asked to note that, in accordance with section 17 of the Health Services Authority Law, 2005 (Revision), the Board of Directors of the Health Services Authority (HSA) has gained approval from Cabinet to implement a new Charge Master. This document was recently gazetted and will come into effect on 1 October 2008.

Having a comprehensive schedule of fees will enhance the delivery of services resulting in better data management and tracking. The Charge Master includes codes for patient billing that use generally accepted international language to communicate information among physicians, patients and insurance companies.

A Charge Master is necessary for the following reasons:

1. The HSA needs a comprehensive schedule of fees for all services provided, as presently many services are bundled into a single charge which does not enhance good long-term management.
2. The Health Practice Law requires healthcare providers to publish all procedures and associated fees for services.
3. There will be fewer denials of claims from insurance companies, thereby reducing loss of revenue and decreasing the need for government funding.
4. Implementing a Charge Master is one means whereby the HSA can move towards becoming financially viable.

Members of the Legislative Assembly are asked to note that the most commonly used services (such as physicians, consultations, room and board, supplies, Lab, Radiology, and Physiotherapy) will remain unchanged. There will be no changes at all to them with the implementation of the Charge Master. The biggest impact of the Charge Master will be on the publicly owned company, CINICO, which will be managed this year by a special arrangement between the company and the HSA. On average, only 20 per cent of the Health Services Authority's revenue comes from private insurance claims.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: I recognise the Honourable Minister for Education, Training, Employment, Youth, Sports and Culture.

Update from Press Briefing on National Celebrations for Cayman Islands' Olympians

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I have two formal statements this morning. Before I read them, I simply want to reiterate for the benefit of this honourable House what the Leader of Government Business said this morning at the press briefing. He said that the Government will be hosting a Champions dinner for our four Olympians at the Ritz Carlton at 7 pm tomorrow evening to celebrate their tremendous achievements, and to give them the honour that should be accorded them for their tremendous performances in the recent Olympics in Beijing. We have invited all Members of this honourable House. In attendance will also be friends and family of the Olympians and representatives from a number of the various sporting organisations, and the media.

The Government thinks, Madam Speaker, that given the tremendous effort made by the Olympians—Shaun and Brett Fraser, both for having set new national records and achieving personal best in swimming; Ronald Forbes, having done likewise in the 110 hurdles; and Cydonie Mothersill, for actually making the finals to the 200 metre sprint—that those achievements do warrant a national celebration. The Government is treating the matter in that way.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Service Provision to Persons with Disabilities

Hon. Alden M. McLaughlin, Jr.: Madam Speaker, now to the formal statements.

I first wish to make a statement on the service provision to persons with disabilities. I want to give an update on the efforts which have been underway for some time now in respect of improving the provision of educational and training services for persons with disabilities. In doing so, my update will cover the provision of services for the very young (through the Early Intervention Services Unit), educational provision to disabled students at the Lighthouse Development Centre (formerly called the Lighthouse School), and services to the adult clients at the Sunrise Adult Training Centre.

I am privy, Madam Speaker, to the contents of the Own Motion Investigation Report Number 10, prepared by the office of the Complaints Commissioner (OCC) entitled "Sunrise Adult Training Centre—Does the Government Provide Adequate Daycare Centre Facilities and Education for Adults who are Mentally and Physically Disabled?". I am also very well aware of the various issues raised in the last meeting of Finance Committee in relation to the Sunrise Adult Training Centre.

In the development of the strategic plan for the transformation of our education system I have ensured that provision was made to address the needs of all young persons in an equitable manner irrespective of any disability which might limit their ability to access mainstream educational services. Efforts focused initially on restructuring the Early Years programme within the department of education services, expanding our ability to assist in the identification and assessment of children with disabilities at an early age, with an aim of identifying the appropriate intervention needed to ensure that these children are ensured the best chance to succeed when they reached school age.

Beyond that, Madam Speaker, this Government introduced a new level of pre-school assistance which, for the first time, ensured that families with very young children with disabilities could access pre-school services in support of their child's particular disability. All of our efforts are focused on ensuring that each child has the best chance to succeed in our mainstream education system and, where this is not possible, that there is a clear transition for them to achieve their best in a more structured and appropriate environment.

Moving on Madam Speaker, attention was given to the range of provision at what was formerly called the Lighthouse School. Over the course of the past academic year we have introduced that ASDAN programme, which has shown significant success with our students there. ASDAN, which is an acronym for Awards Scheme Development and Accreditation Network, is an awarding body based in the United Kingdom which now operates in many countries. It accredits its programmes which predominantly focus on life skills and careers.

The Lighthouse Developmental Centre is currently implementing Transition Challenge, which is a programme for Key Stage 4 (14 to 17 year olds). This programme uses activities within the subjects of our national curriculum to accredit life skills and to prepare special education needs students for life beyond school.

Madam Speaker, I was most pleased to attend the school leaving exercises in late June of this year when the four graduates from the Lighthouse Developmental Centre all received their certificate of successful completion of the ASDAN programme. They had already acquired jobs with local companies. I was also pleased to learn of the special interest each of these companies has taken in these young adults in supporting them going forward.

What became clear from the outset was that in order for us to make meaningful change for this sector we needed to take a holistic look at it in much the same way as we have with mainstream education. To that end, my Ministry set up a steering committee of technical personnel and parents (which was aptly called the Steering Committee), "Planning the Future for Persons with Disabilities in the Cayman Islands". This body was set up as an advisory body to the Minister comprised of public sector personnel working in the various related programmes serving these clients, personnel from Special Olympics, parents of disabled children as well as persons with disabilities, working in partnership on the wide ranging issues impacting the lives of persons with disabilities across the Cayman Islands.

Its goals were to:

- Record a comprehensive understanding of the problem.
- Develop recommendations for the establishment of legislation for persons with disabilities.
- Develop a public awareness campaign, which seeks to sensitize the community to the issues of persons with disabilities.

Madam Speaker, I wish to record my thanks to all the persons who have served on this steering committee which, to date, met all three of the set goals.

Early on in the work of the committee, a sub-committee was established which produced the report on the status of services to persons with disabilities, as well as including wide ranging recommendations for enhancing service delivery to this population. This was followed by the creation of a legal sub-committee of the steering committee to craft recommendations for the draft legislation.

Here again, Madam Speaker, I wish to record my thanks to those persons who put in many long hours ensuring that the outcome of their efforts would include consideration of the several other pieces of legislation that will need amending in order to ensure that persons with disabilities will have clear safeguards in place for fair and equal treatment as citizens of these Islands.

I am told, Madam Speaker, that this report should be completed shortly. I am looking forward to receiving this body of work as it will allow us to work towards producing what will become the first such piece of legislation in these Islands to address, in a comprehensive manner, the needs and rights of persons with disabilities within our society.

Taking the legislation forward, the range of recommendations, which we know will emerge from this legislation, as well as the obvious need to enhance the programme offerings in the short term for this growing population, requires that we develop a work plan with identified targets over the next 12 months. This approach will allow us to stay focused on improving services to existing clients, developing our personnel capacity for an expansion of our programmes, including addressing the needs of this population in the Sister Islands. To this end, my Permanent Secretary and the Principal of the Lighthouse Developmental Centre will be attending a policy meeting later this month in Washington, DC, which will specifically focus on policy formulation and on improving service provision for people with disabilities.

Over the past several months there have been ongoing comments to the media—reports, which over the summer, focused attention on the Sunrise Adult Training Centre, particularly in respect of the inadequacy of the facility. Madam Speaker, it is important that this honourable House is fully apprised of the circumstances which surround this matter.

The duplex the Sunrise Training Centre occupies is the same building it has occupied before I assumed office in 2005. In recent times I have come to learn that it never received a certificate of occupancy from the Central Planning Authority (CPA) for the change of use from a residential facility to a training facility for persons with disabilities—despite the request from the Building Control Unit to the previous Government that this was a requirement, when it was initially leased over five years ago.

This discovery came to my Ministry's attention in May of this year when the Building Control Unit advised us of this. We were told that unless the requirements—which had been provided to the previous administration some five years ago—were met within a specified timeframe, the programme would have to be closed down at its present location.
