GOD SAVE THE QUEEN.'

1987 THRONE SPEECH

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR:
Legislative Assembly -

Honourable Members of the

In accordance with the usual practice, the new Session opens with a Throne Speech which outlines the Government's plans for the coming year. But before I begin the Speech, I should like, firstly, to welcome the new Member of the Assembly who has just been sworn in, and our new Clerk, and to offer them on behalf of all Members, our warm good wishes.

Secondly, to welcome also some distinguished visitors who are here today, the Rt. Hon. Sir Frederick Bennett who is a Member of the House of Commons in the United Kingdom, and chances to be visiting the Islands now. We would, I am sure, all wish to offer him and his wife a very warm welcome. Welcome too, to the Justices of Appeal who chance to be here for the day, and who are attending this ceremony. As always, we are glad to see them in the Islands, and particularly glad that it chances they should be able to join us on this occasion.

And finally, before I begin the Speech, I have been asked by the Honourable First Elected Member to offer to the House, what he has already offered to me, an apology for the fact that he is today away on official Government business, and unable therefore to be present.

Now to the Speech itself.

Steps to strengthen the police and to improve standards by in-force and overseas training will continue. Careers of local officers are being carefully developed and in the past 12 months a further 14 promotions have taken place.

Crime generally continues to increase despite very high detection rates and harsh penalties by the courts; the sharpest increases are in drug related offences and this is viewed with great concern. Steps have been taken to increase the Drugs Squad and further, such steps will be taken within the coming months.

The high priority given to road safety, resulting in fewer accidents and road fatalities in 1986, will be continued.

Strenuous efforts continue to fill all vacancies with able young Caymanians, but competition from other Government departments and the attractions offered in the private sector cause high wastage. It may be necessary therefore to consider overseas recruitment on a careful and limited scale.

The Prison Service faces greater challenges as the number of people in custody continues to grow. Greater emphasis will be placed on the training and development of staff, so they are ready to respond appropriately.

Emphasis will also be placed on rehabilitation programmes intended to ascertain prisoners' potentials, and to develop their skills.

Further buildings will be constructed at Northward.

A further burden will be imposed on the Immigration Department during 1987 by the substantial growth in tourism which is anticipated. Efforts will however be made to expand and improve the services provided for the travelling public.

The demand for labour will be closely monitored to preserve full employment whilst being receptive to the genuine needs of local employers.

Nearly two years have passed since the new Caymanian Protection Law and the accompanying Regulations and Policy Directives were brought into effect. Experience during that period has revealed some gaps or anomalies. Legislation will be introduced to remedy these once a review of the position has been completed.

Radio Cayman recently celebrated its tenth anniversary. During the first part of this year it hopes to extend the FM broadcast system, offering residents in the Brac and Little Cayman the separate programmes introduced to Grand Cayman last year. Compact disc programming is also scheduled for introduction in 1987. This provides the optimum in audio fidelity.

Several members of the Department's staff will be sent overseas for training during the year. Government Information Services will continue to prepare and issue press releases, to produce the Islands' Annual Report, to update a range of factual booklets about them, and to sell or to distribute official publications. Its role will thus be to remain the official channel for the dissemination of news about Government's affairs - now including domestic coverage of tourism matters.

During the coming year the Attorney General's Chambers will continue to face the increasing burden imposed by the volume of criminal cases. This has recently dramatically increased, so that in the first Session of the Grand Court for 1987 there were 23 cases for jury trial.

On a brighter note, there are presently three Caymanian lawyers, qualified overseas, in the Legal Department itself, while a further newly qualified Caymanian has recently started at the Courts Office, as a prelude to joining the department. These young lawyers will play a significant part in shouldering the workload of the department, both in advisory matters and by conducting cases in court.

The first year's intake at the Cayman Islands Law School are scheduled to take their full examinations in July. Those who graduate will be the first Caymanians to achieve a professional legal qualification as a result of a course pursued in the Cayman Islands. The graduating students will also, as a result of the link with Liverpool University which the School enjoys, be awarded an external Bachelor's degree from that United Kingdom University.

In January 1987 $2.0 million of the 1986 surplus was transferred to General Reserve increasing the total to $7.1 million. However, in the 1986 accounts the Financial Secretary has separated the deposits, which are collateral to the Tower Building Loan calling them "Special Deposits". This will reduce the General Reserve to $5 million.

The unaudited preliminary figures for the 1986 revenue and expenditure accounts indicate a surplus position, so far, of $2.9 million.

In order to effect greater efficiency in the Treasury, the Department is being restructured with four main sections - Revenue, Expenditure, Audit and Training.

The new structure will enable the additional staff approved in the 1987 Estimates, to deal effectively with the Public Finance and Audit Law, which is to come into force this month.

The draft five year Economic Development Plan, laid on the table last November, will be submitted to this honourable House for approval later in the year, after it has been examined by Finance Committee. Its purpose is to plan capital expenditure over the next five years and assist a smoother Budget preparation exercise.

To ensure that our Laws remain attractive and in line with modern Banking, Insurance, Trust, Partnership and Company practices, amendments to them are presently being considered in consultation with the private sector. They should be introduced in 1987.

Amendments to the Motor Vehicle (third Party) Insurance Law, which it was hoped to introduce in 1986, are being considered by the Insurance Industry.

A Bill to regulate the Registry of Shipping will be presented at this meeting. It will give authority to refuse to register certain ships and remove others from the Register, but will not seek to limit or to restrict the size of ships which can be registered.

The National Health Plan is due for completion this year, together with regulations governing hygiene and the safety of food handling.

Mental health and drug abuse programmes will be expanded, with an increase in personnel.

During WHO's 'Year of Immunization' our aim will be to improve the Islands' cover from the present 90 percent to 100 percent.

A mobile dental unit will be added to the Community and School dental health programme.

A consultancy will be undertaken during 1987 to determine the adequacy of the physical facilities at the hospital, and whether any recommended improvements can be accommodated on the present site.

The Education Department will continue to prepare for the introduction of the new GCSE examinations and the curriculum development which will occur at the Middle and Primary School levels because of this. To facilitate this change over, the Department is liaising closely with the relevant UK authorities and Examining Boards. Phase 1 of the training programme for teachers has already taken place.

The recruitment of an educational psychologist for September 1987 will further strengthen the services being provided for children who are experiencing learning and emotional difficulties in the school setting.

Additional training will be provided for teachers in the area of drug education and the teaching of interpersonal skills. The Quest programme will be introduced into the Middle School curriculum for the first time.

The school building programme will include a multipurpose hall at Savannah, Home Economics block and two additional classrooms in the Technology block at the High School, recreational facilities for George Town Primary School and a Library and Resource Room at the Middle School.

A Bill will be introduced to provide for the Community College to have its own Board of Governors, and an Advisor has been available to us by the Commonwealth Fund for Technical Cooperation, to help plan its future development.

The Department of Social Services' Home Health Aide Programme will provide home care services to elderly and handicapped persons in district. In addition, a small home for the elderly will be available in East End.

The Department has also started counselling groups of teenage mothers and potential juvenile delinquents.

Sports will be developed during 1987 in such a way that the whole Caymanian community benefits from a comprehensive programme.

Facilities provided at the Sports Complex (where a grand stand is to be constructed) will offer our young people an arena of international standard. They will have a further opportunity to enter regional competitions when we participate in the Regional Soccer Tournament which is being held during March.

A start should be made on the establishment of a physical "home" for a national museum of the Cayman Islands. This will involve renovating and adapting the old Courts Building, based on recommendations from a UNDP museum architect, to make optimum use of it.

Marine Parks were established by law early last year. The Development and Natural Resources Portfolio and the Natural Resources Laboratory subsequently installed most of the necessary markers, moorings and signs. Their installation in the Sister Islands will be completed during 1987. An enforcement officer has already been appointed.

Preparations are being made to build the Farmers' Market which should be built this year. The construction of the proposed abattoir is scheduled to begin in late 1987. Both facilities will be vested in a Farmers' Cooperative.

The successful stray dog programme undertaken in the Seven Mile Beach area will be extended to outlying districts.

The agronomist appointed to the Department of Agriculture will concentrate on the improvement of crop production.

Mosquito nuisance was reduced to an all-time low during 1986 with the MRCU using new techniques and upgraded physical control. Work on physical control in the Bodden Town and Rum Point areas will continue this year.

The West Bay Road Sewerage System, the construction of which has already begun, should be approaching completion by the end of 1987. Local personnel are being trained to operate the completed system.

Work on the first phase of the George Town piped water supply is due to start in July and to be completed by January 1988, and work on the development of water resources for Cayman Brac will continue.

$68.7 million worth of applications were processed to full approval during 1986, and the Planning Department expects another busy year. The Development Plan Review process continues, using in-house staff under the guidance of a BESO advisor.

A draft of the proposed Building Code has been issued for public review. After any comments on it have been considered, the Code will be submitted to this Honourable House during the present session for approval. A Building Control Section is being established in the Planning Department, to administer it once it has been approved.

The Land Registry will be computerised during 1987, to make possible information such as an alphabetical list of property owners.

Topographical mapping of the western half of Grand Cayman was completed last year and the remainder will be mapped in 1987.

1986 air arrivals were up 14.5 percent over 1985 for a total of 166,082 stayover visitors. Cruise ship business continued to be strong with 270,949 passengers recorded, an increase of 4.5 percent.

Another 525 hotel rooms will be available in 1987 once the Hyatt Regency and Treasure Islands Resort projects have been completed during the first quarter of the year. So will additional condominiums. Continued positive growth is therefore expected, despite some delays in the completion of the two hotels: the revised Department of Tourism's forecast is that stayover visitors will increase by 35 percent, to 224,000.

To ensure that standards of service continue to improve too, the Tourism Law is being reviewed. Any amendments to it found necessary for this purpose will be introduced.

Aviation continues to expand at a rapid pace in keeping with the continuing growth of tourism. The Civil Aviation Department is therefore making plans for extended hours of operation at the airports: by the end of 1987 it may be necessary to operate for 24 hours a day.

A Bill will be introduced to provide for the establishment of a Statutory Civil Aviation Authority, similar to the Port Authority.

The Fire Department is also taking account of tourist growth. Its new fire station at Owen Roberts International Airport will be built this year. And it may have to be strengthened by a slight increase of staff and equipment.

A new substation will also be built at West Bay. Manpower in readiness for this will be recruited, and some officers will be sent on specialized courses overseas.

Special emphasis will also be placed during the year on fire prevention measures in public premises used for accommodation, entertainment or the sale of alcohol and food.

As a result of negotiations on the Miami/Cayman Route Moratorium the National Airline has been granted rights to operate scheduled services to three new points in the United States in addition to Miami and Houston, and concessions on charter operations.

The selection of these points is presently under consideration.

Cayman Airways must now expect to face strong competition in the US market from other American carriers. Government support and the loyalty of the travelling public will be critical to the continued survival of the airline.

The company has acquired for the inter-island service a 30 passenger Shorts 330 aircraft.

The small staff in the Labour Office will continue to deal with job requisitions and to resolve labour disputes informally.

A Director of Trade and Labour will be appointed this year to further encourage investment and the diversification of the economy, and to strengthen and streamline labour operations.

The Select Committee on Labour Legislation is still continuing its work.

Due to delays in obtaining the loan funds required, the construction of the new Gerrard Smith Airport Terminal did not begin last year as originally planned. Work on the building (which will contain an Air Traffic Control Tower in addition to passenger facilities) and on the associated fire station, aircraft parking apron and runways, and car park should now start by June 1987.

Work will continue on the Bluff Road in Cayman Brac and on the resurfacing of the road from the dock to Blossom Village in Little Cayman. Other projects scheduled for 1987 include the building of a new dental clinic near the Faith Hospital.

The shortage of jobs in Cayman Brac caused some families to seek work in Grand Cayman, but the increased number of visitors coming there resulted in the hotels enjoying higher occupancy rates and in decisions to build additional rooms during 1987. This should generate welcome employment.

The Port in Grand Cayman continues to be a viable operation even though it is subsidizing the Port in Cayman Brac.

The installation of the Cruise Ships Mooring System should be completed in June 1987. Other projects include continuing the marking and lighting of all major navigation channels in the Islands, repairs to the George Town Dock Finger Pier and the renovation of the present Port Office in George Town.

In accordance with the recommendations of the 1985 Allgrove Report, the Building Section of the Public Works Department will continue to move away from direct labour operations. More work will therefore be put out to the private sector on a competitive basis.

The Department will also continue to place increasing emphasis on the training of young Caymanians - for example, in architectural drafting, in building technology, in construction engineering and in air-conditioning.

A Master Ground Transportation Study will be undertaken during 1987. It should be completed before the end of the year.

An extensive building programme will also be undertaken: many of the individual projects have been mentioned already.

Major road works will include the realignment of sections of the George Town to Bodden Town Road in the Spotts and Lower Valley area.

The Postal Department continues to play an important role in the communication network of these Islands. An International Express Mail Service from the United Kingdom, the United States and Bermuda was introduced last year. It is hoped to introduce a similar service to the United Kingdom in the next two or three months and possibly to the United States before the end of 1987.

As you know, I shall be leaving Cayman in just under four months' time. This is therefore my last Throne Speech, and an appropriate occasion to thank all the many people who have made the past five years so pleasant and so memorable. Much has happened during them, the evidence of development is visible everywhere, with new buildings, growing sophistication, more visitors - and more traffic too. But what my wife and I will principally remember, is the warmth and friendliness for which Caymanians are renowned. They have been endlessly kind to us, and we shall be eternally grateful. Our wish is that these Islands may remain prosperous and stable, making progress but holding fast to their heritage of Christian virtues.

I pray that Almighty God will continue to bless and guide their Government and people.

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, the answer, $192,000.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Does the Member have at hand, or could he give a breakdown of the cost, in terms of materials, labour, etcetera?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I do not have that breakdown. I can get it for the Member however.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Can the Member say what caused such a big difference between the estimate and the actual expenditure.

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President the preliminary estimated cost was $192,000. It was based on an initial concept of minor reconstruction and overlay works. However, the Department was able for the first time to do a proper design prior to the commencement of construction, and it was required that we construct a more substantial road at a higher standard.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Could the Member state, why in raising the standard, which I agree was good, a recosting was not done on the new design for the road?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, a recosting was done Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, the Elected Member for North Side may ask Question No. 2.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR LEGAL ADMINISTRATION

NO. 2: Can the Honourable member state why the individual who destroyed the Blow Hole in East End by blocking it with concrete, was not prosecuted?

ANSWER: The Attorney General's Chambers has not received any complaint concerning this matter.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Would the Member state if the Attorney General's Office would accept my question as an official complaint, concerning the matter?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I would be quite prepared to look into the matter now that the Member has raised it.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Would the Member also be prepared to accept a written statement by one of the people who was employed to pour the concrete for Mr. Harrison Bothwell, from me?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think that frankly, if we are starting to raise something that may become the subject of a criminal investigation, it would be unwise to pursue supplementaries too far in this House, for fear of prejudicing any possible proceedings, and I hope the Member will agree with me.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: I will accept your ruling Sir. But, can I have your permission to therefore lay the statement on the Table of the Assembly Sir, so the Honourable Second Official Member will in fact have a written official complaint?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think the proper thing to do is not to lay it on the Table, but to hand it to the Attorney General.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: All right Sir, I will do that.

MR. PRESIDENT: Question No.3.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR HEALTH EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES

NO. 3: Can the Honourable Member state whether the GCE, CE, CSE Examinations are to be replaced by GCSE Examinations in 1988?

ANSWER: The GCE 'O' Level Examinations (Cambridge Board) will continue to be available to their overseas clients including the Cayman Islands until at least 1989. This examination will no longer be available to United Kingdom schools, through any Board, after 1987.

The Certificate of Secondary Education (CSE) is likewise being discontinued in the United Kingdom as from July, 1987. This examination, which is set for the Cayman Islands by the Welsh Joint Education Committee, is therefore being replaced in these Islands as from 1988 by the GCSE Examination.

The CE (Certificate of Education) is a new examination for these Islands and will be sat by students for the first time in 1988 and will continue indefinitely.

SUPPLEMENTARY:

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member state, in light of the fact that the GCE is being discontinued in the United Kingdom schools in 1987, whether this is going to pose any problems for students who sit the examination in 1988, for entry into institutions of higher learning in the United Kingdom?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: No, Mr. President, it will not pose any problems.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, the Member may ask Question No.4.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNICATIONS WORKS AND DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION

NO. 4: Can the Honourable Member state if the contract to supply crushed rock to Government for the Public Works Department for 1987 will be put to public tender?

ANSWER: Purchases of crushed rock by the Public Works Department during 1987 will be made in accordance with the Financial and Stores Regulations, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, a supplementary Sir. Does the Store Regulations for 1986 tell us that this crushed rock, or anything used by the Public Works Department will, or will not be tendered?

MR. PRESIDENT: If I can just check one point first, am I right that the Finance and Stores Regulations have been laid on the Table and are available to Members. I am not absolutely sure myself?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: I do not believe they have Sir, but they should.

MR. PRESIDENT: If they have not been, then I certainly will allow the supplementary. If they had been, then I would refer the Member to them. But I will assume for the moment, that they have not been, and the supplementary may be allowed.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: No. I agree with the Honourable First Official Member, they should have been.

and Stores Regulations No. 8.1, the General Principles for Tenders Contracts and Local and Overseas Purchases; with your permission, I would like to read it Sir.

"The principles governing the purchase of goods, works and services, must be obtained openly and competitively so that not only do all potential suppliers of the goods, works and services have an equal opportunity to bid for public contracts, but the award of such contracts is seen by the community at large to be fair and equitable. To this end, except for purchases not exceeding $10,000 in value, all goods, works and services required locally by the Government will be obtained by contract after public tenders. In no circumstances may a purchase or project be broken down into smaller components for the purpose of evading tender or contract requirements."

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. In light of the information just revealed by the Member, can I have his undertaking that crushed rock needed by the Government, will not be bought by the truck load?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, the actual purchasing procedure will depend on the quantity, and in turn, the estimated value required.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, just a point of clarification, to say that the Financial Stores Regulations and the Public Finance and Audit Law will come into effect on the 1st March, but at the moment we are using it as a guide.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think perhaps it would be helpful to the House if a copy of the Regulations could be laid on the Table. I think you were indicating you....

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: I will do so this week Sir.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: We need a Regulation Committee you see Sir, so we know what is going on.

MR. PRESIDENT: No, I do not think these are Statutory Regulations. I do not think they would fall within the terms of reference of the Committee, but I may be wrong about that, I am not absolutely sure, however, as long as they are laid.

Unless there is any further supplementary, we can pass on to Item 3. on today's agenda, Government Business. The Honourable First Official Member.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

COMMENCEMENT OF DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH

MOTION

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: I rise to move the following motion:

"Be it resolved that this Honourable Legislative Assembly records its grateful thanks to His Excellency the Governor for the gracious address delivered on Friday, 6th February, 1987."

MR. PRESIDENT: The question before the House is:

"Be it resolved that this Honourable Legislative Assembly records its grateful thanks to His Excellency the Governor for the gracious address delivered on Friday, 6th February, 1987."

The motion is open for debate.
The Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, I wonder what would have happened if I had remained in my seat, because everybody seems to be unprepared after the Business Committee has given them four clear days to be prepared. But, as usual Mr. President, what I have to say has no bearing on what anyone else is going to say; these are strictly the opinions of myself.

Mr. President, I would like to congratulate you in your role as Governor of these Islands, on your gracious Throne Speech, which was your last one. It is also my hope Sir, that against what appears to be heavy odds, it will be the last Throne Speech delivered by the President of this Assembly. As you see Sir, I hope on Thursday to successfully pilot Private Member's Motion No.1. asking for a Speaker of the House, through this Assembly and to see a Caymanian appointed to the high office of Speaker of our Legislative Assembly.

Mr. President, it is good to see that during the past 12 months there have been 14 promotions in the Police Department. My only regret Sir, was that all the 14 were not Caymanians. However, I believe that the majority were Caymanians, and it only goes to show that Caymanians are capable and will prove themselves worthy when given the opportunity. I believe Sir, that, and I speak subject to correction, no doubt the Honourable First Official Member will be glad to correct me in his reply, because I do not believe that this Throne Speech Debate is going to be like the one in 1986, because I am going to follow today an example set by a grand cousin of mine, Donald Chisholm, with chickens. He had a friend who wagered a bet with him that he could not steal his chickens. He went that night while the chickens were sleeping and he pinched each chicken on the toe, and the chicken stepped on his stick and he walked away with a whole chicken coop full of chickens. Now Sir, I am going to pinch each member on the toe today, and by the time I have finished speaking, I believe they will all be reaching for the microphones before them.

As I was saying Sir, I believe the Police Department is the only Department in Government where promotions are done through merit, determined by examinations. It is a pity that such a merit system does not exist in other departments of Government. I have long been a supporter that promotions in the civil arm of Government should be determined by some form of merit examinations, and not by some other whim and fancy, or whatever methodology is presently being used. The Police Sir, are to be praised for their work in the detection of criminals and their apprehension. But Sir, it is fairly obvious that the harsh punishment being handed down by the Court is not the answer to our problems. And Mr. President, one is left to question the wisdom of a Judge making a statement such as the next time somebody comes before him for a second offence for being over the alcohol limit and they are going to send him to jail. Mr. President, what concerns me most about the Police Force is what appears to be a growing mistrust and lack of confidence by some sections of the public. Mr. President, this is not necessarily a small section of the public, nor are they an insignificant number of persons who have voiced that opinion to me. And I still feel Sir, that this Government could go a long way in improving the confidence and alleviating some of the doubts of our citizens in the Police Force if the Brown/Lowe and other Police Reports were publicized. Because Sir, I myself am left to wonder what there is in those reports that has to be hidden? Why can they not be released? As my memory serves me, those were the terms of reference under which they were conducted, that they would be released to the public.

Mr. President, I also approve of the increase in the Drug Squad, and further steps to strengthen it, because that 'cancer' of illicit drugs in our society must be attacked. And, Mr. President, I would suggest to Executive Council that the Drugs Law be amended so that when these valuable boats are seized, they are seized as non returnable, unless a person is later found innocent by some Appeal Court. The boat either had the drugs on it or it did not have the drugs on it.

If it had the drugs on it, it should be seized as non returnable, whether it is a 275,000 ton tanker or a ten foot dingy, a $7.0 million airplane, or a $25,000 Cessna. And Sir, once they are seized, non returnable, they should be disposed of forthwith by public auction, so as to allow the maximum revenue possible to be obtained from them. Now Mr. President, I would not want to see that revenue going into General Revenue, to increase the reserves. I think that revenue so obtained, should be specifically earmarked to equip the Drug Squad with better equipment, to provide educational programmes in our schools, in our communities, to provide rehabilitation at the school, at the prison, etcetera, etcetera. I believe Sir, that in the last four or five months, there has probably been close to a half a million dollars at market value, of yachts seized in this country, connected with the drug trade. If those boats were sold as soon as possible, a lot of that revenue could be gained. But, if you leave those boats there as has been the practice, for two years, three years, whatever, six months, they deteriorate, mildew, moss and all instruments are taken off them. By the time they are finally sent up for auction, they have very little or no market value. If that half million dollars was realised today, which I believe it could be, it could go well towards buying some kind of equipment, I would suggest a helicopter gunship, to patrol the coastal waters of this country, to allow for better detection. Because those little police boats that they have take at least four or five hours to get from the North Sound to East End, and you could almost unload a supertanker in that space of time.

Mr. President, the only section of your speech that really perturbs me is on the top of the second page, and I quote:

"Strenuous efforts continue to fill all vacancies with available young Caymanians, but competition from other Government departments and the attractions offered in the private sector cause high wastage"....(this is what concerns me Sir)...."It may be necessary therefore to consider overseas recruitment on a careful and limited scale."

Now Mr. President, I beg to differ with the Governor Sir. I do not believe that if a young Caymanian leaves the Civil Service, goes into the private sector, replaces one foreigner on a work permit, is allowed to contribute and perform in the private sector, that it is any waste at all, because that individual is continuing to contribute to the economy of the Islands. However Sir, what is a terrible waste, is when young Caymanians return from Colleges and other institutions of higher learning, all ready and gung ho to prove their worth and contribute to our Islands, and they are not allowed to do so. Mr. President, until we, the Members of this Honourable House find a way to fully utilize, motivate and encourage the Caymanians who have gone overseas under adverse conditions and obtained academic qualifications, we are wasting our time in this Honourable House, and we are nurturing a revolution of the kind that we do not want to see happen in these Islands. Mr. President, young people come back, as I have said, all gung-ho and ready to prove themselves. What happens to them? They are demotivated, they are desensitized by the system and their peers, who see them as a threat for some unknown reason to me. Because, if I were in one of those higher offices in the higher echelons of Government, and a bright young Caymanian came along, I would do what any good manager in any developed society does, that is, I would put him to work. I would capitalize on what he produces, and I would sign it when it goes out of the office. But these young people are not even given the opportunity to do that. You know Mr. President, in 1977 or 1976, I read an article written by a University Professor of Management on the Cave Hill Campus of the West Indies. I attempted to preserve the article, but unfortunately I could not put my hands on it today; but the gist of the article said that the problem with management in the Caribbean basically, was that management was not doing what management is doing in the developed countries. Instead of management promoting, motivating, encouraging, allowing young educated people to come back into the community and mushroom in development, and progress in the country, management in the Caribbean was destroying them - an extension of the old colonial creed 'keep them ignorant and we will always be supreme'. In this case they could not keep the young people ignorant because they went off and proved that they were not ignorant, so that when they came back they had to demotivate them, they had to desensitize them. What is happening in our society here in Cayman today, is the same thing. What is left for the young people to do? It is not only happening in Government, it is happening in the private sector, and in many of the sectors as well. The young people are left to wander from job to job, looking for some encouragement and motivation. Maybe just a pat on the back, someone to take an interest and the time to show them a career ladder, and to allow them to climb it. Instead, the managers and leaders like ourselves pat ourselves on our backs and say 'we work hard for what we have, we have earned our place of superiority in this society, and you young ones will have to work harder to get there'. They have even coined a phrase to suit it Sir, as was done some years back when certain sectors of the community wanted to differentiate themselves from Caymanians, and make others believe that they are better, so you did not get invited to the parties etcetera, the kind of word 'expatriate'. These people, and they applied it to themselves you know Sir, we Caymanians did not apply it to them. They say now that Caymanians do not want to work.

Mr. President, Caymanians left here in the early 1950's as bedroom stewards on National Bulk Carrier ships. They were given the opportunity, the motivation, rewards and in a decade they were the worlds' greatest seamen. Are you going to tell me Sir, that that generation of Caymanians were so much better, are so different from this generation of Caymanians today? Are you going to tell me that in 20 years, two decades, we could not have trained Bank Managers, Trust Company Managers, etcetera, etcetera.

Mr. President, Caymanians do not want to work, is an excuse for the establishments in this country to console themselves and hide their guilt while destroying other people's lives and hope. Because Mr. President, my background is as a pharmacist, I know a little bit about drugs. People do not take drugs without a reason. And Mr. President, how can the young people prove to themselves and to their peers today, that they can achieve, that they can win? How are they proving it? They are proving it by drinking one more beer than their friend, by snorting one extra line of cocaine, by driving ten miles an hour faster on the road, by overtaking ten cars on a corner instead of two, because their friend only had the guts to do two. Mr. President, as legislators in this country, we have an obligation to the young people of this country to find a solution for this problem and to give them the opportunities to expound their energies and to prove their abilities in other areas, beside the ones I have just mentioned. Mr. President, I would be so bold as to suggest that in your very next breath in your Throne Speech, you have provided the answer that the establishment wants to hear in this country - 'consider overseas recruitment', why? Why is overseas recruitment the answer to the needs in manpower in our country, when our own young people are falling by the wayside. Mr. President, that is not the answer, and that is going to spell doom for this country. Why not look for the answer here in our own community, and put the actions which are necessary in place to treat the disease and not just kill the pain by bringing in two more foreigners that they can kick around. Why are the big companies, the big employers in this country being allowed, when work slows down, the first person to get laid off is a Caymanian.

When the Hyatt project was closing down, I had Caymanians coming to me Sir, who had been working with an electrical company for instance, for seven to nine years. That electrical company had brought in a couple of Scotsmen, and who was laid off? The Caymanian who had worked seven to nine years, because they had paid a couple of hundred dollars to Government for the Scotsmen's work permits. Mr. President, Government in its civil section needs some people in the Personnel Department who are trained in personnel management. Personnel management Mr. President, is a highly specialized area of management. We have to stop putting secretaries who have fulfilled the Peter Principle by reaching their level of incompetence into positions where they are then expected to fulfill personnel management functions.

People are not leaving the Civil Service because of the dollar sign. When I left the Civil Service I took a $200 per month out in pay, and there are others who are doing the same thing. Increasing pay, increasing benefits is not the answer, and Government must find the answer. We need people in the Personnel Department of Government who can motivate our young people, find ways to extract maximum performance from our gifted young people. The young people today are no less gifted than those who went to sea in the 1950's. We may be a little less tolerant, and the generation that is coming behind me, because of the circumstances and pressures of society, might be even less tolerant.

Mr. President, I can tell by the smirks and the half smiles on the faces in this very room that people do not like to hear what I am saying. But Mr. President, what I am saying comes from the heart, and as I have said, I did tell you Sir, that I was going to pick their toes. They will have all the time in the world to prove me wrong in the next couple of days, because there is going to be a lot of toe pricking going on here today. But

Mr. President, I can look many of our young people in the eye today and say Sir, 'there but for the grace of God, good parents and a good Christian upbringing, there go I', because Mr. President, what I am saying here is not hearsay. I have been through the trials and tribulations of the young people of today.

And Mr. President, this is the very fact which has motivated me to offer my services for another term in office in this country, if the electorate in my constituency see fit to give me the privilege. Because Mr. President, change is the only thing that we are guaranteed. We cannot always determine what the change is going to be. We cannot always determine where the change is going to take us, but Sir, we have to at least for our own consciences sake if for nobody else's sake make a concerted effort to orchestrate that change to the maximum benefit of this country, and the generations to come. Mr. President, until we find people in Executive Council who are willing to tackle this problem, we will continue, as the Governor said in his Throne Speech, to build more buildings at Northward. And Sir, unfortunately in talking to the young people, if we do not do something pronto and I do not mean 1995, or we do not want to have to have six BESO people coming down doing ten surveys and ten studies to tell us what we want. Something has to be done now. You can continue that sentence Sir, by saying that you can build more walls at Spotts.

Mr. President, there are some people in here who would make you believe that I am a radical, I am a hothead. No Mr. President, none of them have a better heritage than me. The Miller family, the Chisholm family are nothing to be ashamed of, I can hold my head up anywhere I go. But Mr. President, I have been taught to call a spade a spade, and a spade it is Sir, but I would only say to them Sir, 'let he that is without sin cast the first stone'.

Mr. President, I will state plainly and unqualified that I will not support the overseas recruitment of personnel as a policy, or an answer to the brain drain in Government. We have to find the real problem. Mr. President I believe I have an idea where the problem is, and, part of it is a lack of personnel management expertise in Government, because for some strange reason Sir, the Public Service Commission, the Personnel Department of Government insist on hammering square pegs into round holes, and call it punishment or promotion, whatever terminology one chooses. A good example of what I see as the problem and where the people are desensitized and demotivated, has happened right here in this Chamber twice in the last four years. No disrespect to the new Clerk. I think she is one of the square pegs that will have the ability to become round and do a good job just like the last one did. But I have a question to ask the Public Service Commission, the Governor, the head of the Civil Service and the Personnel Department. How are they going to continue to motivate the Deputy Clerk, the Senior Clerical Officer and the Clerical Officer in this department? Twice in the past four years these three people should have had an opportunity to be promoted, they were not, and this is only one example you know Sir, because there are plenty more that I could give throughout the Service.

I hope that in the Legal Department, with the promotion of the Senior Crown Counsel to Attorney General, that the young Caymanians, of which a great deal is made in the Throne Speech, will be allowed to climb the ladder and follow him up, that is what needs to be done Sir.

It is happening in Cayman Airways. The Pilots who are in the senior positions there have put a clamp on all the others coming behind. They say they need 750 hours of experience, because some Law that was written in England in the 1960s' says that they have to have 750 hours. Mr. President, we have to stop R.S'ing the young people of this country, because those people have gone through superior training. In the days of your when those people were being trained as pilots, they probably had to fly 15, 20 years and hope that they loose an engine, to find out what it was like to loose an engine on an aircraft. Today Sir, there are computerized simulators in which these people are trained, which not only allows them to loose an engine, but they can have a multiplicity, a compounding of problems. They could loose an engine, they could loose a hydraulics system, one wheel might not come down, they could loose one oarlock, they could lose one elevator, they could only have half a rudder, but they are still expected to try and land the plane safely, and they can take those chances because they are doing it in a simulator, they are not jeopardizing a $10.0 million piece of equipment.

So what these people had to learn by experience over 15 years, the young people can now learn in six or eight months, and that kind of training has to be taken into context when we are telling the young people that they are not qualified, that is, those who are not qualified, because those who are qualified, we are telling them 'you need experience'. Mr. President, experience is a relative thing, and I have always maintained that if you have been sitting at the same desk shuffling the same set of papers, answering the same memos, putting them in file 13 in the garbage can for the last ten years, that is only one years' experience, that is just repetition of habit, that is not experience.

But, Mr. President, some Caymanians have the adaptability and the stickability to survive in spite of the system, not because of the system. Others have no choice but to stay in the system, because they cannot do any better.

Now you see Sir, as I said, I believe in the example that I use, and no disrespect to the lady, she knows that I am not telling the public anything that I have not told her, she understands where I am coming from. That lady should have been promoted in the department where she had the expertise. But you see Sir, there is such a thing in this country as Caymanian Status. So, her way to the top there was blocked. So what did they do? They took her, she is a bright young lady, she is a hard worker, they know, she has proven it, because she has been moved around several of the departments, that she has the ability, the adaptability and the stickability to do a good job. So, they hammer her in to one more round hole, because they know, that like some other Caymanians, that she is going to produce good work down here, she is going to do a good job. But you see, if we had not given Caymanian Status to the Englishman, she could have been made Director of Immigration, and the people in this department could have been properly promoted, and we could have hired a school leaver off the street and provided a job at a clerical level; that is what needs to be done in this country, not only in the civil arm but in the private sector as well. There are people out there, top management getting Caymanian Status and they are getting together with the establishment in this country and stymieing the growth of young professionals in this country, but Mr. President, that seat of power is going to change.

Mr. President, I believe I know enough about how to succeed in the Civil Service, that someday I should probably write a book on it, but you see Sir, I do not have the personality, I am not that adaptable, a spade is a spade, and I am not one of those who could not do better, because I believe that I am as well off today at 34, as most of the establishment in this country were when they were 34. Now there have been some battles, and there are going to be some more battles, but as I have said Sir, except for the grace of God, good parents, Christian upbringing, when I look into the eyes of some of the young people who have been tempted into the wrong paths of life, I am honest enough to say 'but for the grace of God, there go I'.

Mr. President, as I was saying, the people in the higher echelons in the private sector, getting together with the inner sanctum of power, the establishment in this country, and you can go to the cocktail parties, you can see them grouped, in one corner one group, in another corner another group, one group in the middle, one group over here. You know, somebody told me a couple of days ago that we had three political parties in this country now, the Unity Team which is a properly acknowledged political group, the Young Businessmen's Association which is hiding behind the scenes and saying they are not political, but they get involved in everything political that comes by; the Masonic Lodge which is wandering around controlling everything according to reports, so I guess maybe we need a fourth one.

We do not have any team, these people cannot play team work, they only wanted to bat for them, not against them. Mr. President, those same people would have you believe that the success of Cayman is due entirely to this, what they call the sacred document, the Constitutional position of this country, that is garble Sir. Turks Island, British West Indies had similar constitutional positions, where are they today. They were a little more advanced in certain areas, I will grant that Sir, but they had similar constitutions at some stage in their development to that which we had. Where are they today, their bankrupt economies with their Government Members in jail, some of them any way. This sacred document has very little to do with the success of this country. The success of this country is founded and built on the honesty, hard work and the people of utmost integrity in this country that call themselves Caymanians, Sir. That is where the success of this country is founded, not on some piece of paper handed down from Whitehall as a particular sacred constitutional status, without the hardworking, honesty and integrity of the Caymanian people, this country would be just like Turks Islands, a salt town with only two coconut trees in it. Mr. President, let me say that the people over 45 have no special dispensation from God on being honest, hardworking and having integrity. There are some young people who have those same qualities. The only difference probably is, that those people were encouraged more by their forefathers than we are being encouraged by them.

Mr. President, my greatest fear for this country, lies in the form that change will take when the power shifts in this country, because it is going to shift. The days of merchant domination in this country are fast coming to an end. These problems are not only being created by the politicians as I have said, they are created by the establishment in this country that see themselves and set themselves up. If you look around in the community at who are getting the breaks in this country, you can see the writing on the wall. The establishment is doing its best to promote their own in certain areas, and I will go back to one of my examples I used earlier, Cayman Airways. Now, some people in there have the right family connections, a young man has told me whenever I want a job in Cayman Airways I can get it because I have a family that works there. Others are looked upon like myself, as upstarts, young radicals who went off and received some training, and then they try to tell them 'well you did not go to the right school, well you did not have enough time in this, you did not have that, well you need 750 hours', but that same rule has been waived for those people who have connections. Mr. President, the Bare Foot Man sings a song about gossip in Cayman, these things cannot be hidden you know, they are going to come out, so we might just as well face them and help expose it, and treat the problem. I have a member of my constituency who was sent on training by Cayman Airways to a school. They say he failed the first time around. I went with him, put up a reasonable argument, showed where I did not feel he had been given the same opportunity, the same chance that others before him had been given. The Managing Director obviously agreed with me, that the man had not been given the same opportunities, because they made the decision to send him back, he went back and got his qualifications. Now he went to the same school that those with the connections went to you know Sir, and talking about the school, I have a few things to say about that too. He gets what the others got, comes back with a restricted licence, so then they tell him 'you cannot fly with us man you have got a restricted license', and he said 'yes, but I received the same one that that man received, we went to the same school'. So what did they do, they hurried him up quickly and packed him off to Miami and they give him the plane ride and they qualify all three of them. Of course, the young man made the mistake of coming to his representative who made the mistake of going there and trying to fight with them, so they never did accept him, and he does not have a job today.

But if we could get back to the schools, you know Sir, these questions can be answered and I expect to see them answered in the press by the Chairman of the Board, by the Managing Director and I am sure the Member will provide me with some answers in his debate. But I want to know, why Cayman Airways is paying $10,300 to train a flight engineer in Dallas, Texas with a restricted licence?

Now, Mr. President, I am fortunate, I have got a telephone on my desk and I know the numbers for the FAA in Oklahoma, and the one for Washington, and I know a few schools. I saw the contract that this young Caymanian signed with Cayman Airways, and my recommendation to him was not to sign it, because he was not going to get any benefit out of it, because it said that if you pass everything we do not owe you anything, we do not guarantee you a job. You fail one thing, you have to pay us back $10,300. That is what they bonded the boy for, $10,300. I can only assume that that is what the boy's training was going to cost in Dallas. Now what was Cayman Airways getting for that $10,300? I am going to tell you Sir. They were giving the boy a living allowance of $2,700 for the three weeks that he would be in Dallas, to pay his hotel bill, buy food etcetera. They were paying Branniff $7,600 to train the young man. What was Cayman Airways getting for that $7,600? They received two weeks of ground school, they received approximately 12 hours in a simulator, they were taught the performance of Branniff aircraft. They were not even taught the performance of Cayman Airways, they had to go back after they qualified to be taught the performance systems of Cayman Airways. They did not get a walk around the plane, they did not get a plane ride and that is why he received a restricted licence.

Now Mr. President, I called a few other schools to find out what they were offering. There is a school in California if they want to fly far away, that will train a flight engineer with an unrestricted licence for US$4,800. Burnside Aut in Miami would have trained them for $5,400 and this, I never got it out of any book Sir, I telephoned them and asked them and told them that I wanted to do the training. I know one individual who went to the American Aeronautical and Medical School in Melbourne, Florida to train as a flight engineer. Of course, when that one comes back the licence does not mean anything. It is everything but not good enough. The cost of the course, $3,850; accommodation $285; individual estimates, that spent was approximately $700 on living expenses, $5,135. That Sir, included two plane walk arounds which is required by the FAA to get your unrestricted licence; it included the necessary plane rides to get your unrestricted licence; it included as much time on non-motion simulators (CRT's) as the person wished they could sit at it all night if they wanted, and use it. It included the 12 hours in FAA certified motion simulators, and it is $5,000 less. And Mr. President, this individual does not only have what they got restricted from Branniff in Dallas for $10,300, that is, a flight engineer for a Boeing 727 200 series. This individual has both for that price, they got both the 200 and the 100 series, and this is no back of the wall school Sir, they train people for People's Express and Eastern Airlines, etcetera, etcetera, all the big American airlines have employed their students. Even Venezuelans that we are now employing were at the school at the same time this person was there, because you know we bought a Trylander some 12 years ago and we bought a Bush pilot out of Tinson Pen Airport in Kingston, Jamaica, and he came here and received all kind of hours and experience flying between here and Cayman Brac in our Trylander, the Trylander cannot fly without him. We bought a Shorts 330 now, I understand we bought four Venezuelans too, and there are five Caymanians fully qualified, FAA qualified commercial pilots out of a job. Mr. President, why in Gods name are we bringing in experts to train Venezuelans to fly a plane between Cayman and Cayman Brac? These young people who do not have a job have flown a 172 between here and Cayman Brac dozens of times in all kinds of weather. Why could not the Americans train the young Caymanians, if they could waive the rule of 750 hours for one or two, because they have got people who have been flying the jets as flight engineers for 18 months, two years and three years that do not have 750 hours today, and they are not going to get it, because those people could have been put on the Shorts 330 too, so that they could build their flying time to get there 750 hours, get their Cayman commercial licence, go on and get their ATP, and then we put them back on the jet so that they could go to the right seat on the jet. They should not be put there without their ATP, but to get an ATP Sir, you can only use one third of your flying engineer time, and it cannot be any more than 500 hours. Those people need a thousand hours flying a plane. Mr. President.....

MR. PRESIDENT:

I wonder if this would be.....

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: is fine with me.

If you want a break now, that

MR. PRESIDENT:

late, I was letting you get to the end of one part.

I think so, we are a little bit

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: back.

Not to the end Sir, I am coming

MR. PRESIDENT: to it.

Well, maybe you can come back

I think we will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes now.

AT 11:24 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:47 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, when we took the customary break to feed our faces, I was dealing with the woes and troubles of the young people who are trying to develop careers in aviation in this country. I went into some detail as to what schools were offering what, for what price, and as I said before, I began to deal with the subject, I expect to see some answers in the local paper, by statements from the Managing Director, the Chairman of the Board, etcetera, as to why we are paying $5,000 more for a restricted licence for a flight engineer, and if the answer is that we are using planes that were used by Branniff, and that Branniff's school in Dallas simulators have the same mock-up as our cockpit, is just not going to be acceptable. I want to know where the other $5,000 is going. There are all kinds of ways that one can speculate as to where it is going. I will not speculate at this time.

We were talking about the Shorts 330. Now I believe that that is an adequate aircraft for the Cayman Brac route. Of course, I also believe that a Shorts 360 which looks more like a plane, would have been much better. But my concern Sir, lies in what I have been dealing with all morning. There again, is another example of Caymanians not being given the opportunity to develop.

Now Sir, we have before this meeting of the Assembly a Bill to create a Civil Aviation Authority. I know all the expert pilots are going to say that Ezzard Miller is only a private pilot, he does not know anything about the Regulations, and he does not know anything about flying a plane, he ran one off the runway and all that kind of thing. I will accept all that criticism, but what I would like to point out Sir, is that that authority is not issuing a British first class nor second class commercial licence, it is issuing a Cayman Islands licence. Mr. President, I see no reason why we cannot strike a happy medium for a Cayman commercial licence, even if we want to follow the British system, and call one a senior commercial licence, and say that you cannot get a senior commercial licence until you get 750 hours. But I see no reason why we cannot reduce the requirements for a Cayman commercial licence to say 300, which is another 50 hours plus, over and above what is needed for an FAA commercial licence.

Now Mr. President, some people are going to say that that is lowering the standard, it is a point which I am prepared to debate with those people, because the FAA has recently lowered the requirement for instrument rating from 200 to 150 hours, the results of that will not be unsafe skies, but they will be safer skies because more people will avail themselves of an instrument rating, than are presently doing, because it only takes a 150 hours versus the 200 hours it used to take, so we are going to have people who are better qualified flying as private pilots. You know Sir, I am going to tell those pilots of many, many, many years of experience out there that they must not jump the gun and get out and tell people what qualifications Ezzard Miller has and what he does not have you know, be careful not to misinform the public.

But Mr. President, as I was saying, it behooves me why, a company that is owned by the taxpayers of this country, that is subsidized by the taxpayers of this country, I have to stand up here and support revenue measures to pay the salary of the Managing Directors and the senior pilots of that Airline. Now everybody knows that in November I did not support the $1.2 million subsidy of the airline, I still do not. I think it can make it on its own two feet, if it cannot, and the Caymanians are not going to benefit from it, close it down, as the Honourable First Official Member suggests, because when you look at some other areas in the same Airline, they have got some of those secretaries I was talking about earlier on Sir, who has reached their Peter Principle, the level of incompetence so you call them Personnel Directors and such and so forth, so you can keep giving them increases in pay, they have a couple of them in there, there is still a lot of fat which can be cut out, they have cut some, there is still some more that can go.

But Mr. President, the other question I want the management of Cayman Airways to answer is, what are the managerial qualifications of the Managing Director and the Deputy Managing Director in that Airline? Because the young people are being told that if you fail one exam we are going to kick you out. I understand Sir, and I speak subject to correction, but the EIU has been wrong in the past, but not too often you know Sir, where EIU finds smoke there is some fire. They were trying to instill in the operations manual that if you failed your upgrading you were fired from the Airline. Now Mr. President, I know of no other Airline that operates such a principle. I believe the kind of norm is that you are given three opportunities to upgrade from flight engineer to co-pilot, from co-pilot to captain. If you fail the third time you simply remain in the position you are in. I want also to know Sir, why the double standards? Why can someone be allowed to fly for 18 months to two years with a restricted flight engineer's licence, and the next man who comes along is not allowed to go aboard the plane. I want to know if these people in the top echelons have the academic qualifications for their positions, that they are demanding from the Caymanians.

Further, I want to know Sir, because I know they have one flight engineer who came here for six months, and he is still here. Further Sir, the member of my constituency who passed his exam, was told he had to go to Jamaica almost immediately. He asked them to let him do his observation time on the line, then he would go to Jamaica and do the British exam. No, no, no you have to go now. The boy went, passed the exam, but the South African, the Africaner who came here for six months and still is still here, he is still working for the Airline. You know Sir, he has not done that exam yet. I want to know when they are hiring these foreigners, how far back into their history do they go? The advertisements that come out in the paper do not say that if you have ever failed an exam, we are not going to hire you. I understand that that same man was put on the line without his 50 hours of observation, and worse than that, they promoted him to chief flight engineer, and he is checking out the Caymanians, and he has not done a British exam. You know Sir, all of that is just wings flapping and no birds flying, or what people in my district call 'hogwash', because that is just one way of keeping them out.

Mr. President, I am not asking to lower any standards, to give these five or six young people anything they do not deserve. All I am saying is, give them what was given to those who belong to the establishment. I am going to bring it home to you Sir, because I had a meeting with the Managing Director of Cayman Airways and the Deputy Managing Director and with two young pilots whom they said had failed in Dallas. They agreed to send them back, the next thing I see is a letter from the chief pilot and the chief operations officer, saying that they are not sending them back because they are going to lower the standards, yet they had a captain who crashed a simulator in Dallas so badly that it took maintenance men nearly two days to fix it, but he had the right connections. Those two young people told the Managing Director and the Deputy Managing Director; so I do not have to ask anybody about the Deputy Managing Director. I went to school with him, I know how many 'O' Levels he has got, I know how many he has not got, and I know how many times he took them to get the one or two that he now has. Those two young people told the Managing Director and the Deputy Managing Director that they would do anything in the Airline for a job. They had spent their money, they had trained themselves. Cayman Airways never sent them on any scholarships as they did for other people you know. There is something on those Cayman Airways scholarships, many things. 'We do not have anything, nothing that you can do' they are told.

I happen to have heard that there was an opening in operations, so I asked the Managing Director and the Deputy Managing Director why could not one of these young people be hired in that job, because at least they knew something about the aircraft, and could be of some assistance to them in operations. He told me that no pilot was going to be hired for that position. "A pilot was not going to be considered", he said, that was Thursday afternoon at about 3.30 in the afternoon, and I have a witness who was in the meeting with me. Monday morning, Mr. Perry Panton, a qualified pilot, went to work in the job. Now Mr. President, I hate to get into colour; I hate to get into any kind of social discontent among young people, but I am left to wonder Sir, if it was because these two people did not have the connections, because of their surnames, or whatever, because they had the same things he had plus more hours, several more hours, one even had over 30 hours turbo prop time, and still got it. But you never see any advertisement come out in the paper for Caymanians to apply as pilots for the Shorts 330. As I have said, when they bought her they bought four Venezuelans. Come 1999 the four of them will still be here, whether they can speak English or not. It is time for the management at Cayman Airways to tell the people of this country why the Short has not started to fly as it was scheduled to do. Why are we still chartering the Trylander if it has been sold? I hope Sir, that Mr. Sky Brown, the fixture on the Trylander, just like to yoke, cannot leave without it, is not going to be trained for the Short, because he can go back to Canada. He probably has Caymanian Status now for all I know, but I am going to get to that a little later on, I have got a good suggestion as to what to do with Caymanian Status.

Mr. President, all I am trying to say is that we have an obligation to provide the opportunities for our young people. We are not doing it, because Sir, one of those same people they said failed, obtained a lawyer to write to them, and got all their documentation. I read it Sir, I did not see the word 'fail' on it, I saw no problem, no problem, no problem for six sessions in a simulator. Strangely enough, all the 'S's' in the check ride looked like a little snake in the grass, but when it came to when it was sent back to the individuals, the 'U's' looked as if they had been drawn with a slide rule. Now, here again Sir, one has to wonder if they were tampered with, and it was not an 'I' instead of a 'U' meaning incomplete instead of unsatisfactory, because the person was recommended for two more hours of simulator time, when the chief pilot told them on the telephone to come back to Cayman, you have failed. They get back to Cayman, they are told their contract is being enforced, and you owe us $6,300. The individual went and obtained the money by whatever means, I guess, he probably had to do what the rest of us have to do, borrow it from a bank. He carried the cheque and the book to the Deputy Managing Director, who pretended he did not know what was going on. They did not want to take the cheque, because the last thing I heard was that he was doing so well, the person said that that was the last thing they had heard too.

Mr. President, something is radically wrong, and I could stay here for the rest of the afternoon, and give examples in the banking sector, give examples in the accounting field, give examples in the insurance industry, give examples in the tourist industry. Tourism has been flourishing in this country for what, 20 years, two decades.

How many Caymanians have been offered training in hotel management? And I do not mean the way they do it down on the beach, Sir. They send you off to the Bahamas, and when you come back then they do the same thing that the Civil Service does to you, they desensitize you, they demotivate you, they tell you you have got to start at the bottom washing dishes, and work your way up after you have been through three years of school. Somewhere along the line Mr. President, we have to build into the system, where the person gets the recognition for the time they have struggled in school to get an academic qualification. Granted, most of us would work our way back up the ladder, and be glad for the experience, once we are shown the career ladder. Caymanians will climb it, that is the problem Sir, those Caymanians, if you give them half a chance they are going to take your job and you will have to go back to England, Canada, Jamaica, Honduras, wherever.

Mr. President, I do not accept what they tell me at cocktail parties you know, that things are so much worse in Cayman than what they were when they left home, because any person who migrates by his own volition from a good set of circumstances to a bad set of circumstances, is no less than an idiot Sir, and should be regarded as one.

Mr. President, the base of power in this country is going to change. With all sincerity Sir, the way I see the change coming about presently, makes me very scared and concerned for the future of this country. We need to do something about it now, otherwise Mr. President, when the change comes about, the establishments in this country had better hope that my generation and the generation after me, if they have, and if they are forced to wrestle the power away from them politically or economically, remember the Sunday School lessons that we were taught as children in Sunday School, when we are dealing with their offspring. Because Sir, I am not going to try and quote it verbatim, but there is a little verse somewhere in the Bible that has something to do with 'your children shall reap the fruits of the seeds that you plant'. I have got it turned around a little bit, but.....

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

grape, and children's teeth are set on edge.

The Fathers have eaten a sour

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Thank you Pastor Bush. You see

there is always somebody who knows it Sir, but that is what I am trying to tell them. I have got children, the establishment of this country have got children, and they have got grandchildren. Vindictiveness is a hard cold fact of life Sir, and I would hate to know if my children, or the children of the establishment's power base in this country, have to fight any harder than the way we have had to fight to get somewhere. Because Mr. President, in four years in the Civil Service, and the Honourable First Official Member of Government can bare me out, and the Honourable Third Official Member of Government, because they are the only two left who attended the management courses. In 1975, 1976 and 1977 there were three management courses in Government, and of all the people who topped the management courses, they are the only two left in Government. The recommendations that were made in 1977 are as true today, as when they were produced in 1977. But what has happened to them, nothing, no one paying you any mind.

But I see it as my duty Sir, to sound the warning bell, if they do not heed it, I believe I can fend for myself and my own as well as the rest. But what I want to see Sir, is that I want to see the system changed. I want to see the young people encouraged to perform. There are boundless opportunities in this country. Somehow, we have got to get the young people to grasp those opportunities, and become useful products of society, instead of building more buildings up at Northward, because it is a clear choice, there is no middle road.

Mr. President, like the Governor, I believe that there are some changes needed to the Protection Law, there are quite a few anomalies in it. The first change I would like to see Sir, is that the Civil Service must go to the Protection Board for work permits too. They should not be able to sneak them in through the back door. Go to those Caymanians on that Protection Board and justify your need. Do not pick them up off the street, because the private sector cannot do that, and I do not see why the public sector should be allowed to do it. That is going to reduce the number of expatriate hired in Government. Of course, to do that now, we Caymanians have to fulfill our obligations too, because the Protection Board can only makes its decisions based on the information it has before it, and it is no good us standing up on the street corners of this country, sitting down on the front porches of this country, sitting down by the Sunset Bar or any other bar in this Island and procrastinating the woes of the Caymanian Protection Board, because those people are trying to make a decision with the information they have before them.

My advise to any young Caymanian, and old, because there are some old ones who are being kicked around too, who apply for any job in this country, from a gardener to the highest paid executive in this country, to the post of Speaker when it is created on Thursday.

Mr. President there is an old story, again about my Uncle Donald whom the Honourable First Elected Member likes to castigate me with, was the bad man, but that depends on who you talk to Sir.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

You are family to him too.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Sir, with an uncle of his in West Bay. The uncle had a brand new hammock, of course the one before that Uncle Donald had stolen from him, so he had to go and look for a new one. This man really was not my uncle you know Sir, he was some cousin or other but we all called him Uncle Donald, but I am not ashamed of it. So, he bet Uncle Donald that he could not take his hammock, because he was going to lie down in it, he was not going to get up out of it. Uncle Donald talked him to sleep....

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Why do you not let the man rest in peace.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

....talked him to sleep Sir, when he woke up he found he was tied up by the rope from Uncle Donald's mare, by his shoulder and by his feet, and the hammock was gone.

Mr. President, I notice you are dozing off Sir. Be careful when you wake up that the mare is not gone. And as for the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council, I know he is glad to get in there and claim a little bit of fame from Uncle Donald, I understand that Sir, because the pictures I see of him and him are very, very similar Sir, it looks much more comparable than with mine, especially without his glasses....(LAUGHTER).

Mr. President, secondly, with the Caymanian Protection Law Caymanian status should be removed, done away with, kicked out of the window. We should allow foreigners to come here with the right to abide, the right to work and that is it, plain and simple. We should only allow them three years for that, and it should be renewed annually in case they break the law in between, or they start any immoral activity.

I know Sir, that that is one of the toes I am pinching you see Sir, we are going to get plenty of argument on that here today, and in the next couple of days, because they are going to tell me by saying 'oh you are going to get the wrong kind of people, you are going to get those people who only come in here to rape the country and they keep one foot back home. Mr. President, I humbly submit that we have got plenty of them here now who are trying to get Caymanian Status, but they are not giving up. Some have it, that is right, but they are not giving up their other citizenship you know. Things get bad here, and they are gone on Cayman Airways. It is people like me who will have to stay here and go fishing.

Make them register as aliens. They can write, they can work, they can abide here for three years, when the three years are up they leave, they come with that understanding. I do not want to hear no gibberish from anybody up in here today about 'well we cannot do that.' In Bermuda, it was on the news, they are doing it to the Filipino, no more Filipinos. Britian, they did it to the East Indians under the Nationality Law Act, they stopped them cold, bang, no grandfather clause, no back date no nothing. They never wrote to Ezzard Miller and asked him if he wanted to be a British Citizen, or a British Dependent Territory Citizen. They told me I was going to be a British Dependent Territory Citizen, and I am glad to be one, but I knew I had no choice, so we do not need to give them any choice either. One wants to come here let them give up their British Citizenship and take out British Dependent Territory Citizenship.

Mr. President, the Governor said that Radio Cayman is doing well, but you know, as usual, I have my convictions and I stick by my guns. I am going to go down with my boots on. I still believe it could operate that little much better as a public owned corporation. We could remove, or at least reduce the public's concept that news is being tampered with, that certain things are being taken off the air, etcetera, etcetera.

Mr. President, I am also happy to see that the General Reserve has been increased by $2.0 million, and I also agree with the Financial Secretary's new accounting system of calling the Tower Building or the Unity Team's monument, or whatever you want to call it, the moneys that are against it, separating them from the real clear cut General Reserve.

I am also happy to see the restructuring of the Treasury Department, and no doubt Sir, the public will be better served as a result of its restructuring, and through the implementation of the Public Finance Audit Law and the publication of the Stores Regulation, so that they will know....there is one little thing in it that worries me you know Sir, and that is that part where it is determined about quantity, whether it has to go to a public bid or not. Well Sir, there is potential for a little bit of fiddling there you know Sir. I mean, you can buy crushed rock on a bid for 500,000 yards, or you can buy it by a five yard truck load. And in accordance with information given to me this morning, if you buy it by a five-yard truck load you buy it from who ever, when ever, wherever, at what ever price you want. If you buy the big amount, you must go to public tender, and I believe that Public Works Department has the expertise to calculate closely what is going to be needed, and put a lot of this stuff out to public tender.

Mr. President, the draft Economic Development Plan, which is a result of a Private Member's Motion brought by myself and the Second Elected Member for West Bay, because we like a little praise every now and again too Sir, has revealed some startling information. It just goes to show how important it was to document those facts, and Mr. President if the working population of this country by 1990 is going to be greater than 50 percent, we have to address it now. There is no use in waiting until 1990, because you cannot address it then, you are going to be out numbered, that is why I am saying kick Caymanian Status out of the door; three years, pack up and they leave. They know what they are coming for, they know how long they are going to be here, and there is no argument because you have got all kinds of problems with people who fulfill the requirements, but Caymanian Status is not a right, Caymanian Status is a privilege, and is granted if the Board wants to grant it to them, etcetera, etcetera. And so you find that people feel that they are being slighted, people feel they are not being considered properly, people blame that others are being favoured and all of that kind of thing. If you come for three years and you have got to leave, none of that will happen Sir, because when one comes they know for how long they have come.

I hope that Finance Committee can complete its deliberations on the Economic Development Plan, and it can be debated in this Honourable House during the April Meeting, because we need to have that in place to assist with the preparations of the 1988 Budget, because I think it would help a lot Sir.

Now Mr. President, I want to get back to one of my little pet subjects again, and that is that I would like to see Government introduce Programme Budgeting and Responsibility Accounting, along with the Public Finance and Audit Law, because there again Sir, I believe we are going to get a little more efficiency and a little more cost effectiveness. I am going to give you an example, Sir. We are trying to get a playing field built and soccer pitch built in North Side, and it was borne out this morning in the Estimates for the piece of road in Frank Sound. Just after I got elected in 1984, the first estimate to build that soccer pitch was around $200,000. Now I told them that I could not support it, it was a waste of money. Let us look for some land somewhere else and forget about that, so I went around and looked for some land. We found 17 acres that we could have obtained for around $80,000. All of a sudden the cost of the soccer pitch came down from $200,000 to $70,000; so it does not make sense to buy the land for $80,000 if you can build a soccer pitch for $70,000. They went and got the plans drawn up for the soccer pitch. When I had a meeting with the Member responsible and his Principal Secretary it was down to somewhere around $50,000, and that $50,000 now Sir, was supposed to do two fields. It was supposed to do the one on at Old Man Bay and the Primary School field. Well I expressed my reservations about their ability to do it, anyway, they went ahead and they spent the $50,000 on a soccer pitch, but they ran out of money before they got anywhere near the school, but two weeks ago I went up there with the Sports Coordinator.

You want to say something Sir? Would you like me to give way. All right, but I have seen you grabbing your microphone, I like to give way to people any time they want it.

Anyway Sir, as I was saying, last week I went up there with the Sports Coordinator, who is doing a good job. Now the soccer pitch was supposed to have been 300 feet by 200 feet. You know what the soccer pitch is, 300 feet by 148 feet.

HON. BENSON O. FRANKS:

You should have noticed that

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

I did, but Public Works was there measuring it. I am no surveyor, I am a pharmacist, and if I had said that it was not the right size, they were going to tell me that I did not know what I was talking about, so I took the surveyors there and made them set up their transit and measured it. The Sports Coordinator told them that it was the wrong size, they told him 'no way'. Anyway it is approximately 50 feet too narrow. Now you see Sir, if you had Programme Budgeting and Responsibility Accounting, somebody would have had to pay for the difference. What we are going to have to do now, we are going to have to go to Finance Committee, or we are going to have to go to Bodden Town, or we will have to go to West Bay and vire some funds from somewhere else, to complete the soccer pitch, because it is no good as it is. But I will haggle with the Member, we will get it, we will get it straightened out after a while, in spite of Public Works Sir, and there is a reason for some of that.

Mr. President, the Bill to regulate shipping as mentioned in the Throne Speech, I am convinced is a step in the wrong direction. I am not going to support the Bill, but I will expound on my reasoning when we are debating the Bill.

Mr. President, twice I sat up in my seat while you were delivering the Throne Speech Sir, once, was the part I dealt with this morning about the wastage and the bringing in of expatriates on a limited scale, the second time was when on page 5. you said 'the National Health Plan is due for completion this year.' Now Mr. President, I am glad about that announcement. I hope that when it is introduced, it is something that I can support because I am no surveyor, but I know something about health planning. Is it just a Health Policy Statement, or does it involve National Health Insurance? Is it a scheme which is going to be a combination, I hope, of voluntary and compulsory health insurance; the voluntary being by the private citizens who can afford it, the compulsory side being Government's part of its benefit package for its workers and the indigent poor, and Government paying their insurance, or whatever? But I trust that the Members do not take his little pinch on the toe seriously, and he is going to expound for me when he gets up to reply to the Throne Speech, what the Health Plan is all about.

The regulation to control, because I do not like the word 'govern' Sir, I prefer 'control' hygiene and food handling is long over due. The hope for a hundred percent immunization is an admirable goal, I believe it can be achieved, and I believe it will be achieved.

Mr. President, the Pharmacy Law badly needs to be overhauled to control the dispensing of medications; the way medications are dispensed in this country, because every time I criticise the hospital on the floor of this Assembly, I get a letter from the Chief Medical Officer saying I am dispensing medications without prescriptions. I believe though that I have put that one to rest with my last reply to him. Any time, and the Member has a copy, any time Government is prepared to deal with that, and it needs to be dealt with, I am prepared, and the Pharmaceutical Society in this country, of which I am a member, is prepared, has made proposals to Government about doing something about it, but it has to be done the right way. It is not going to be like the Medical Society, adopting a set of ethics and then kindly ignore the part that says that doctors are not supposed to sell prescriptions for a profit - can clean it up properly. Because I can give you some serious horror stories about that kind of thing, Sir. A lot of people come into my shop with a piece of masking tape round a bottle, with one multiplied by four a day. No name on the medication, no date it was issued, no quantity, no patient's name and they want a prescription refilled because it is their blood pressure tablets and they do not have any for the weekend. When I question the quality of health care being delivered in this country, I have reason to Sir, and it is not all the fault of the pharmacist with these circular letters, being sent to everybody instead of sending them to where the complaint comes from.

Now Mr. President, you go on to say, and I quote:

"A consultancy will be undertaken during 1987 to determine the adequacy of the physical facilities at the hospital, and whether any recommended improvements can be accommodated on the present site."

Mr. President, I am going to be candid with you, Sir. I can save the Member the mental anguish, I can save the Honourable First Official Member the dollars out of Treasury to pay for the consultancy to determine the adequacy of the physical plant, or whether the necessary improvements can be accommodated on the site. Sir, in a nutshell, it is my somewhat considered, calculated, informed, intelligent belief, and maybe biased opinion, that it cannot be done. So it is no good the Member going through the anguish of having some consultant coming to tell him what I have just told him. He has been told, it cannot be done. Save the money in the Treasury to pay for those people that need to go to Miami to get their hearts operated on. Mr. President, from the time the former Member of Health, Education and Social Services Mr. Truman Rodden and his Principal Secretary at the time, the Second Elected Member for George Town, put the Fifteen-Year Plan for that compound in the cellar at the Administration Building, all hope for that site was lost. Because since then, they have proceeded, not the Second Elected Member for George Town, because he saw the writing on the wall and he left, he knew, he found out after the Plan was filed that it was a bad mistake, he did the right thing and left, but the Member persisted in developing the site, helter skelter, that is the only way you can describe it Sir. Every time you go up there there is another building being built in another direction. Honourable First Elected Member, I made it clear it was not you, I told you what to do about the consultant, right, that was Mr. Truman Bodden, all right, do not confuse the public. It is a culmination.....

HON. BENSON O. ERANKS:

(INAUDIBLE)

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Oh, Mr. President Sir, the Member would like me to say that he was the Member who left the Plan there in 1976, that is true, he did a good job on it in 1976, and it was one of the most unfortunate things that ever happened to the Health Care System in this country, because just when we had obtained for him the professionals and the paraprofessionals in the department, and got him to where he understood Health Care, he went out and lost the Election...(LAUGHTER)...we could not do anything about that Sir...(LAUGHTER)...but he is on the right track again, but I am going to save him the anguish of the consultancy.

If you would like to take a break Sir, I can say this all over when I come back, because I am going to be on Health Care for a while.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I hope you are not going to say the whole thing, the same part all over again. But no, I think it might be convenient to break for lunch now.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
redundancy, Sir.

You will not get me on

MR. PRESIDENT:

So, I will suspend proceedings until approximately two fifteen, and just before I do suspend them before we leave, I have a commitment in the early part of the afternoon, and I have asked the Honourable First Official Member if he will preside over the proceedings for the first bit of the afternoon.

AT 12:37 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:23 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech. The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I do not know whether it is an omen, or a good sign, but even if we have not got a Speaker, we have a Caymanian in the Chair.

When we took the lunch break Sir, I was dealing with the National Health Plan which was mentioned in the Throne Speech, and had told the Member that he could save himself the agony, and Government the money of a consultant. If he feels that he really should spend some money, I will charge him one dollar for the advice that I gave him this morning, not to hire a consultant, but to scrap that mess that they have up there. Because, the only way to describe it now is a concrete maze. Every time I go to the hospital they are building a building in another direction.

I believe Sir, that it is going to become more and more obvious, that it is going to be increasingly difficult and eventually impossible to deliver quality health care from that facility, efficiently and cost effectively. Like Humpty Dumpty Sir, all the kings horses and all the kings men could not put that hospital plan together again.

I would, however, recommend to the Member responsible, when doing his National Health Plan that he gives serious consideration to the discontinuing of outpatient services, other than day surgery and emergency, because I believe that outpatient clinic services can be adequately and more efficiently handled by the private sector. I would recommend that he concentrates in the new facility on the delivery of inpatient care services. And as I said earlier, I hope that his Health Plan includes some form of a third party payment system, whether coinsurance or a combination of voluntary/compulsory, whatever. But I will be listening to his contribution to the debate, for his expounding on what is in the National Health Plan.

The Education Department seems to be progressing in the right direction, and maybe finally, Government has put a round peg in a round hole because I believe that for the last ten years, and one of the reasons why the Health Services, the Social Services, and to some extent the Education System, is a bit behind its time is because for the last ten years the people who were promoted to Principal Secretary had financial backgrounds and not the specialized backgrounds needed in either of those areas, and I believe the results are showing up.

The Community College Bill before the Assembly is a good example, compared to the fragmentation which existed in the extended education, technical training over the past years, like the Hotel Training School, the Building and Trade Training School, the Marine School, scattered helter-skelter. And Mr. President, I am particularly delighted by one subtle, but what I believe is a very important aspect of both the Community College Bill and the Airport Authority Bill, in that, the Bills do not name the Member as the Chairman of the Board. Have we finally cracked the ice in removing serving politicians from Boards in Government? I hope so.

The intent to develop sports to the benefit of the whole Island is a move in the right direction. I believe that the present sports coordinator is doing a good job. Certainly, the facility at the sports complex, including the grandstand will be most welcome, and should do much for the further development of sports in the Island.

But Sir, we see that the National Museum and its physical establishment is to be underway, this will be an asset to the Island, both culturally and economically. Sir, I hope that the Member can find a section in the Museum to dedicate it to the seamen who built the foundation and many of the walls of this country.

And, speaking of seamen Sir, I held a public meeting in my constituency on Thursday night as I usually do prior to Meetings of Parliament, you have got to tell the people what you are doing, and a question came from the floor concerning what was known as the Global Seaman's Union. Now, it is my understanding from the discussion that went on during the meeting, and in discussion with other people, that this was a Union that was established by seamen, and apparently all Caymanian seamen contributed on a regular basis to this Union, their fees were deducted monthly, and people are wondering what happened to the funds. I am wondering if I could ask the Government bench to investigate what happened to this Global Seamen's Union and its funds, and have some kind of report made public in some fashion, so that the seamen who paid into it for 10, 15, 20, 25, 30 years either know that they were never entitled to any benefits, or are they supposed to get any benefits, or will there be any benefits, or there are no funds, but I think it is an area that needs to be cleared up.

Mr. President, while the Marine Parks that were established by law last year have been demarcated, I guess you could call it, the Throne Speech says that the necessary markers have been put in place. I would question the words 'necessary markers' Sir, because I believe there were three distinct zones in the Marine Conservation Law; there was a Marine Park, Replenishment Zone and Environmental Zone. I also believe that the privileges, freedoms and the restrictions for each of those three areas are different. Now, I have looked at almost all the markers in the North Sound. Certainly in that area there is only one marker, one type of marker used which says Marine Parks, it does not differentiate from Replenishment Zone, Marine Park or Environmental Zone, and I wonder what the legal ramifications are going to be when somebody is caught in the Environmental Zone where you are supposed to be doing five knots, and the buoy says Marine Park which allows more speed.

But Mr. President, I am afraid that this is another case of putting a law on our books, and I wonder if we are really achieving what we set out to do. I go to the airport quite often, I still see tourists walking through the departure side of the airport with pieces of coral, with sea fans, with conch shells, with sea stars in clear view of the airport security, of the police officers at the airport and nobody says anything. Up until yesterday afternoon, about five thirty a tourist came into my shop seeking to buy formaldehyde to preserve starfish, which they had taken out of the North Sound. Of course they tell me that it was washed up on the Seven Mile Beach, but when you really dig deep enough you find that they got them out of the North Sound. Now, I have made representation to the Portfolio of Development and Natural Resources, asking them to write letters to these charter boats, asking them to do something, asking them to put the starfish on the list that is covered under the law, because they say it is not specifically protected. Some of these people have ten and twelve starfishes, and the whole idea of the Marine Parks is, if you enjoyed seeing them, leave it for somebody else to see. So, I am going to ask the Member to look into this and maybe, write a letter to the charter boat operators, making a regulation under the law that the charter boat operators who are doing the tours across the North Sound must display a map of the Marine Parks with the restrictions, liberties etcetera, etcetera, right on the boat, so that the tourists will know right from wrong. And if caught at the Airport, prosecute them, because Sir, the poor North Siders, who take two conchs, three conchs, or a dozen conchs over the limit, they are being hauled to Court to pay for it, yet, somebody can go and pour concrete over one of the few natural resources, the blow hole in East End, and, according to an answer to a question this morning, nobody made an official complaint about it. I believe that the Department of Development and Natural Resources was informed about it. I believe that the Department of Natural Resources removed the concrete from it. Government, I believe, paid the cost of removing the concrete from it. All I am looking for Mr. President is answers. I am the first speaker, everybody else after me can answer these questions, but do not tell me you are going to prosecute a North Side boy for having three conchs over the limit, and somebody can go and pour concrete over a blow hole and nothing is done about it. You can give me a reason for taking extra conchs because you are going to eat them, but you could never, never justify to me, pouring concrete over a blow hole, which is one of our few national natural resources.

You know, I believe that it even goes further than that, because I believe there is an individual who applied to either the Department of Planning or the Portfolio responsible, for permission to concrete it, and he was denied it. But I will be watching it closely Sir, and we will see what is done, because this is part of that double standard type of thing that we were talking about this morning. You cannot have one law for the young boys in North Side, and one law for somebody else. And the Marine Parks Law is not going to do any good unless it is enforced and it must not only be enforced on the little local boys, because on the other hand you know Sir, if those young boys did not have a market for those conchs, they would not take them. Somebody is buying them, and maybe that is where we will have to direct our energies, to the purchaser, because if we can stop the person from buying them, then the person who is not working all week, it is no good going to him on Saturday to get 300 conchs, because he is not going to sell them, and he cannot eat 300 conchs over the weekend, unless he is going to have a big party.

I am quite happy Mr. President to see that the Farmers Market is progressing, that the Farmers Cooperative is being set up, and that the Farmers Market is going to be vested in the Farmers Cooperative. I believe that is a step in the right direction.

From reports of the news it seems that we still have a stray dog problem in some areas, but maybe if that gentleman had had a general gun licence and not had it restricted to his own land, he might have been able to defend himself from those dogs, but that is another problem that we can deal with a little later on.

Now Mr. President, I do not know where the people from MRCU are living, because I really cannot agree with the Governor's statement that mosquito nuisance was reduced to an all time low during 1986. Sir, I can remember clearly twelve o'clock in the day, June and July sitting down by the Falls on Seven Mile Beach, mosquitoes would be eating you. I do not believe that it has been a year when mosquitoes have not been...they have not been much thicker in North Side for a long time than I can remember than they were in 1986. Maybe the fiscal control of Bodden Town and the Rum Point area will help, we hope so.

But here again Mr. President, you know I drive along Seven Mile Beach at six and seven o'clock in the evening and I have often seen tourists walking on the beach. In fact there are more tourists walking on Seven Mile Beach today and in the last couple of weeks than there have been for several years, and it bothers me to be driving along and these tourists are walking, and along comes a fogging machine and the people are running for shelter to get away from this mosquito stuff that we spray. You know what it does to your car windshield, it does the same thing to your eyes. So I am wondering if the timing could not be adjusted a little bit somehow to facilitate these people.

The sewer system is badly needed. I trust that the construction will be completed by the end of 1987, and it is good to see that local personnel are being trained to operate the complete system.

Mr. President, the Governor said that work on the first phase of the George Town Water System is to start in July. Everybody knows how I feel about the Water Authority. I think Government has no business in it, I think it should be left for private enterprises. I think it represents the potential for another Cayman Airways. Add that to the fact that at least with Cayman Airways when you want to go you have to buy your ticket before you go on board. With the Water Authority, we have the potential of another hospital fee/garbage fee situation. After people use the water, what are you going to do, cut them off? The bills are still outstanding. I am not sure that the public is prepared to pay the fees that are going to be necessary for this water service, Nor am I entirely convinced that there is a need nor a desire by the people of George Town for piped water and that they would be willing to pay the price for it.

Now Mr. President, I had some questions that I would have liked to have had answered before I replied to the Throne Speech on the Water Authority. In the absence of those accurate figures, because I have not seen the accounts for the last three or four years, I am afraid I am going to have to speculate, but like I say, what I have said is subject to correction, and each person will have their opportunity to correct me.

It is my understanding that the Cayman Water Company, a privately owned company, paid royalties to the Cayman Water Authority of close to $200,000 for 1986. I would hazard a guess that that probably represents more than 50 percent of the income for the Water Authority for the year 1986, because the other sources of income are licences, the well fields in East End, the well fields in Lower Valley, and the well fields in East End. The well fields in Lower Valley have a cost of production. Now, Mr. President, we have been told in the last meeting, that CUC, or its subsidiary company Cayman De-Sal which is going to make the water which Government is guaranteeing to buy for distribution in George Town, is not going to pay a royalty, they are not paying any duty on the equipment, engines etcetera that they are going to use to get the waste from for that. Government is going to put in the piping. Government is going to buy the water and distribute it, sell it cheaper because they can do it cheaper than the water company can do it now. But I wonder how the people feel if they are subsidizing a Water Authority to the tune of 50 to 60 percent through royalties, and it is going to be in direct competition with them.

I mean we all say we are weary and we do not want public enterprise to dabble in private enterprise, etcetera, etcetera. As I have said Mr. President, and you know, the Water Authority seems to have a lot of power. I know of a member of my constituency who was sent overseas for medical care, his medical bill was not small, it was over $100,000. Now we had someone to purchase a piece of property in North Side for such a sum of money that he could have paid off his Government bill of over $100,000 and have some money left to look after himself and his family. Low and behold, the Water Authority vetoed the sale of the land, because they refused permission for the use of the land which I believe was to be a quarry because it was over a water lens. Now here it is, Government could have received a $100,000 in outstanding fees collected, because Government has a charge over the property. Yet, another arm of Government is preventing the sale of the property because it is over a water lens.

You know, Mr. President, I think we have to wake up, we have to be realistic. The water that is underground in this country took years and years to get there, and it is not going to take years and years and years to pump it out, because I do not think they remove that much water from East End. I happen to live on the fringe of the water lens, and I can tell the deterioration in my water, and all the experts, they could bring them from Timbucktoo, cannot tell me that the well water in Savannah and Lower Valley has not deteriorated since they have been pumping water out of it. Because, my sister lives there and I know what it was like before they started to pump it, and I know what it is like today. It is as the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town told them at one public meeting, if she tries to make coffee with her well water now she gets scum on the top of it, and those are hard cold facts on the deterioration of the water lens.

The only solution to water in this country has to be desalinization, either by reverse osmosis or steam. We are not going to pump the Caribbean sea dry, we have got seamen in this country who are retired, who can run desalinisation plants blindfolded. So why are we having all this wing flapping in these areas, and we are not producing anything? Because as I have said, in the absence of audited accounts being laid on the Table for the Water Authority for 1984, 1985 and 1986, I am left to speculate, and in a case like this, I am a pessimist.

I understand that the industrial development which I support for my constituents, which I believe is a good thing for the Island, is having problems with the same Water Authority after they have in fact, obtained at least conditional approval from the CPA, the Central Planning Authority. All the surrounding landowners have agreed that they development can go in, but the Water Authority is telling them that it is on a water lens, so they have got to meet this, that and the other, etcetera, etcetera. That is a monster that can get out of hand.

The Economic Development Plan Review process Sir, is overdue. We are now asking developers for instance on the Seven Mile Beach to develop under 1977 Regulations on density levels, and land in 1987 certainly costs more than it did in 1977. So we have to increase the density so that we can improve the investment on their money, or whatever...(You will have your turn).

I have read most of the proposed Building Code, I agree with most of it. I think it is a good thing, but now Mr. President, that Building Code is something that cannot be brought in in stages. They have been trying that for the last six years, bringing in one stage and then one stage, it has to be brought in at a cut off point, and anything after that has to meet it, otherwise I do not think it is going to work.

It is good to see that the Land Registry will be computerized during 1987, to make possible information such as an alphabetical list of property owners. You know Mr. President, there is a piece of information that is even more important than that computerization might help with, and that is the transfer of property to other people. And Mr. President, I know of several condominiums which have been bought and sold, and bought and sold on the Seven Mile Beach area and it is still in the original developer's name. My calculations on those that I know about estimate that Government has lost $120,000/$130,000 in stamp duty revenue. We have to find a way to stop that. I know there will be a hue and a cry from the real estate people, the lawyers and the rest of them, because that is part of their selling tactic. They tell people that you can buy this, but you do not need to transfer it, once I sign the top line you can keep that half filled out and you can sell it five or six times, and you never have to pay the stamp duty. I have a very interesting case in point Sir.

For about a year I have been trying to find the owner of a piece of property in North Side next to Apollo 11, to see if he could get an access for the people of Old Man Bay. Now that particular piece of property is registered in a Mr. Anderson's name. I went to Lands and Survey and obtained the man's name. I enquired, I obtained his telephone number, I telephoned him in Indiana. He said, 'Mr. Miller, I sold that piece of property to Mr. Selkirk Watler in 1972'. Well, so I go to see Mr. Selkirk Watler, 'do you own this piece of property, it is still in this man's name, we are interested in getting 50 feet off it to put down a launching ramp in Old Man Bay so we can have some access to the sea for the fishermen'. 'Oh my son, I sold that to somebody else and he sold it to somebody else, I do not even know who owns it now'. You know Sir, if I can get the cooperation of Executive Council on this matter, what I would like to do is, I would like to send Land and Survey up there, survey a 100 feet off the piece of property, gazette it that Government is acquiring it for public use, and let us see who steps forward to claim their compensation from Government. If nobody steps forward, we have got the piece of land. I think the end justifies the means.

I know that the Honourable First Official Member made an attempt some months ago to stop this hole, and as I have said, there was a hue and a cry, but I think we have to face it, because I believe that Government is losing a lot of revenue through it.

It is good to see that 1986 air arrivals are up 14.5 percent over 1985, and that the cruise ship business continues to be strong. But Mr. President, there is something about our cruise ship business that bothers me. I was listening to the radio one afternoon and I heard that the Jamaican Minister of Tourism had expounded in Parliament, or in a statement to the press, how bad the cruise ship facilities were in Cayman, and how Cayman and Mexico were responsible for the demise of tourism in Jamaica, because we did not have proper facilities, like a landing jetty. That perturbs me because as far as I understand, I think that man had something to do with a proposal here a couple of months ago to build one. I have seen no statement from Government here to correct it, and while I will agree we do not have a dock that cruise ships can pull up to, I am certain when the passengers land on our cruise dock facility they are not bombarded by beggars, they do not have to step over naked people and they do not have to walk through all sorts of muck and stuff as they would have to do in his country, Jamaica. I have been to the cruise ship berth in Jamaica too. But when he can get up in his country and blame us for their own demise, I think we need to say something about it. Now whether he is trying to make a point, and get permission to do something or whatever, I do not know.

Mr. President, the opening of the Hyatt Regency Hotel and the Treasure Isle project are a boost to this community, but the reports that I get from people who stay at the Treasure Island Resort give me great cause for concern. I believe if those reports are true, and if it continues, it could be the most detrimental thing ever to happen to tourism in this country in the last ten years. I believe that they need to be looked into and make sure that they are brought up to scratch. I see that the Member plans to improve the standards of service required in the tourist industry, and revise the law where necessary, I will certainly support that.

I think the Bill that the same Member is introducing to provide for the establishment of a statutory Civil Aviation Authority, similar to the Port Authority, is again, a move in the right direction, I have always advocated this kind of thing in Government. The Bill, however, is superior to the Water Authority legislation and the Port Authority legislation in two distinct areas, as I see it. Firstly, as I have mentioned already, the Bill does not appoint the Member responsible as the Chairman, and secondly, the Bill obligates the members to make an annual report of the activities of those two Authorities, the Community College and the Civil Aviation Authority, to the Legislative Assembly. I believe, though there may be subtle changes in legislation, I think there will be great benefits derived from it.

The Fire Department is to be congratulated, and they certainly need improved physical facilities to continue to function properly. I will be glad to see both the Owen Roberts Airport Fire Service and the fire station in West Bay during 1987. I also agree that special emphasis should be placed on preventive measures, but not only on preventive measures Sir, because I have talked with the Chief Fire Officer on many occasions, and though some of the laws or their requirements for fire fighting are antiquated like the Cinematographic Law which requires you to have one bucket of sand and one bucket of water, and whether you have got a Haylon extension system or an ABC, you still have the bucket of sand and a bucket of water because that is what the law says. But, there are a lot of buildings in town, where I understand that the fire exits are not working properly and there are all kinds of boxes and parcels piled up in the stairways for the fire exits, and things like that. I know they used to have fire drills at the Administration Building, I have not heard of one recently, but I think these are the kinds of things that need to be implemented in the private sector building as well, and especially in the schools.

We should have an evacuation plan for that school compound area, for the High School, the Middle School, the Prep School, the Catholic School because the propane tanks are right across the street, and all you need is one light at night and it is just going to settle over the whole school compound; somebody strikes a match and boom. So I think, we need to put in place an evacuation procedure so that if something happens it is not just chaos.

Mr. President, I am concerned about the enforcement of the Liquor Licensing Law. I supported the removal of the quarter mile limit from the churches from the law, on the basis that I thought it was a necessary evil, and we had to continue development. But, the policing of the speak-easies is not up to par Sir, I do not think, there are still a couple of them around which need to be closed down. You can legitimately go and get a liquor licence now, it is not like a taxi licence in London any more. The other problem I see with the enforcement of the Liquor Law is an ID. Now I believe that Government can help in this, hopefully Sir, one of these days we are going to get that piece of legislation called the Traffic Law brought to this Assembly. For two years now, there has been some Committee meeting somewhere, some place, redrafting this law, and they cannot get it here, because one way we could provide IDs is if your drivers licence was produced like Government's ID cards, rather than that book which is usually an embarrassment to pull out in a foreign country, and it not only carried your picture but it carried your birth date. We are asking people to keep children, young men, young women under 18 out of bars, I think the least we can do is to try and facilitate in offering some sort of ID service. Of course, Government has all the equipment sitting idle, they could easily advertise that anyone aged 18 who wants an ID could come and pay a small fee and get one, and they would have it. The system that some places are using where you go and carry your passport or your birth certificate, and they issue an ID, that ID is not usually accepted by anybody else, but if it was issued by Government it would have at least some semblance of security behind it. We need to enforce those laws, we have to keep the kids out of the bars.

I also believe Sir, that the Member made the right step when he traded the bringing forward of the moratorium for more entry points into the United States for Cayman Airways, because they are going to have some competition now and they are going to have to get their act together. Although I may have been the only one in 1986 who voted against the subsidy for 1987, I do not believe that they are going to have the free run of Government's Treasury as they have had in the past, in the future. As I have said before this morning, there are some serious problems in there personnel wise, and things like that. Part of it is due to the fact that they have secretaries who have risen to the level of incompetence, and then they are called Personnel Managers.

The small staff in the Labour Department is going to be increased. But Mr. President, I would hasten to add that I cannot accept the statement by the Governor that labour disputes are going to continue to be resolved informally. Mr. President, from experience, I can tell you that the day has past in this country when people like myself who represent people in their constituencies are expected, rightly so, by their constituents to assist him in times of need during labour disputes, when you could go into a company's office and talk amicably and pleasantly with the manager, and have the problem resolved. Those days are gone. Those people now ask you 'what legal authority have you to be on my property? What gives you the legal right to represent this person?' The Labour Legislation must come, September is the due date.

The appointment of a Trade and Labour Director, certainly, is a step in the right direction, but there again, I do not see the point of appointing a Director of Trade and Labour if we are not going to get the Labour Legislation. I know, and everybody else knows, that the introduction of Labour Legislation in this country is going to be a very unpopular thing, because it gets back to what I was talking about this morning, the 'establishments' in this country. I mean, when you get a letter saying that, an employer has the right to treat his slaves any way he feels like, that is a serious kind of mentality, but it exists out there. And the work force in this country are the only people that do not have a bargaining force. They have no legal rights behind them really, because all the legislation that are on the books are outdated.

Bankers have an association, the accountants have an association, the hotels have an association, the condominiums have an association, the contractors, everybody has an association, except the labourer. We do not have to call it a labour union, they are protecting themselves, the Hotel Association does not protect me, it is there to protect the hoteliers; The Condominium Association, ditto, the Contractors, ditto. They are dictating the terms of labour, and it has to be a two-way street. Some of the representation that we have received, and some of the opposition is well founded, some of it is not even worth reading. From the time you see the letterhead you can throw it away. But, unless something positive is done to alleviate the problems that exist in the labour force in this country today, we are sitting on a powder keg.

I see that the loan funds for Cayman Brac are coming through, they are going to get their new air traffic control tower, their new terminal, and they are going to continue the Bluff Road in Cayman Brac. But Mr. President, while I support the improvements in the infrastructure of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the answer I do not believe is for Government to continue to find a capital project to employ the people. Somehow we have to find a way to encourage private enterprise to invest over there by incentives or whatever, and when private enterprise is prepared to do it, it is not vetoed by anyone. If private enterprises are encouraged to provide jobs etcetera, then the economy will develop. Remember, in Grand Cayman we built our tourism industry on a wooden terminal. We built the tourist industry which paid for the terminal we have today. I mean it is outdated already, but you know we have got it, and can live with it for another eight or ten years, until we get through paying it off, but that is just the problem of poor planning. Mr. President, somehow we have to find a way for private enterprise to invest in the Lesser Islands, because that is a solution to the problem. The solution to the problem is not by Government spending half a million, two or three million dollars every year, we banging our heads together looking for a capital project to do over there, which really cannot be justified on an economic basis, and encompassing the other needs of the Island. I mean that the single determining factor so far has been that the people over there need something to do, that is all well and good, but there are some needs in Grand Cayman that have to be met too.

The Governor says that the Port in Grand Cayman continues to be a viable operation, even though it is subsidizing Cayman Brac, I hope so. I have not seen audited accounts to prove it. I do not know by whose standards it is operating well, because as far as I know, they have got one bathroom down there that both men and women have to use. I think that is ultra vires to public health law. The Governor goes on to say that they hope to improve the offices there, but I hope it is not going to be another one of those half hearted attempts to turn what really was a house into an office building, but that they are going to look at it properly, and maybe put up a proper building which can provide some more storage space for the dock, and the part that is not being used for offices etcetera, etcetera. Not just to go in there and look at what it is and tear up the vinyl from the floor and put down a new one and shift the desk around and say that we have done a great job at the Port, because that is what they have been doing that for the last ten years.

The installation of the cruise ship mooring system of course, will be an advantage. The Governor also says:

"In accordance with the recommendations of the 1985 Allgrove Report, the Building Section of the Public Works Department will continue to move away from direct labour operations. More work will therefore be put out to the private sector on a competitive basis."

That is good, but we have been saying that for three years, nobody paid any mind to me. A man comes from overseas with a briefcase in his hand, and makes a report, it is implemented, that is all right Mr. President. Again, the end justifies the means. As long as we get an improvement and it is cost effective.

Mr. President, the Public Works Department has made some strides towards improvement over the last couple of years, there is no doubt about that, but there is still some room for improvement. I hope that the whole of the Allgrove Report, or at least the majority of it, is going to be implemented and not just the sections that we like. Because sometimes it is the sections that you do not like that are the most cost effective and the most beneficial for you. So you should not just ignore them just because you do not like them.

Mr. President, a Master Ground Transportation Study will be undertaken during 1987. It should be completed before the end of the year. Now Mr. President, I agree that we need somebody who knows what he is doing to do this Ground Transportation Survey, but I cannot accept the time frame that it might be completed by the end of 1987. How are these consultancies granted? I mean, does a man come in and is asked to do a study of the transportation requirements of the Island ad infinitum? Does he hand in his report when he feels like it? I mean, I really do not think he needs all the way until... because this thing was started last year, some of this groundwork was done from early on last year. We had teams sitting down here under the willow trees counting cars for days by street lights.

My concern Sir, is that it will not be completed by the end of the year, means that nothing can then be done until 1989 since the whole budgetary process, capital budget, everything else will have been completed in November 1987 for the 1988 year. If this Ground Transportation Report comes in in December 1987 it is no use to us then. You cannot touch it until 1989, and the traffic situation in this country cannot wait that long. If the present people who are carrying out the survey cannot deliver the goods before the end of the year, find somebody who can deliver them by the end of May. You have got almost all of February, March, April, May, four months. We might not have the detailed design of how many feet this piece is going to be, or how many inches that is going to be from that tree, etcetera but we should be able to have a layout in principle, so that you can make capital budgetary allocations for the 1988 year.

It is not only Seven Mile Beach that is congested. You come into town from the Eastern Districts of this country, between ten minutes past eight and eight thirty the traffic is backed up, some mornings to Savannah. The only relief you get is when those people taking their school children to school turn off and go through South Sound, and that road is so bumpy that most people prefer to take the long way round. I think Mr. President, that with due respect to the people who are doing this master ground transportation study in an indefinite period, such as we might get it by the end of the year, is...I cannot accept that, I think we need it by the 31st May.

MR. PRESIDENT: Have you reached a stopping point?

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Yes.

MR. PRESIDENT: In that case I will suspend for afternoon tea for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:25 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:45 P.M.

THE PRESIDENT PRESIDED

MR. PRESIDENT: Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech. The Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, when we took the break I was dealing with the Public Works Department. An extensive building programme will also be undertaken, and we have dealt with some of it already.

Major road works, I am glad to see that the realignment of Spotts Road has begun. I hope that the turn immediately following the realignment is going to at least have the cliff rocks cut down by the machines so that the grass cutter can keep it cut, so you can see traffic around it. I do not expect that we are going to get it all straightened out, but as you know, the machine for breaking up the rock is there, it is only another 100 feet away. So we can break down that little piece of rock and put some grass on it, so we can see around the bends.

The Postal Department continues to play an important role. I will agree. I do not know what happened to the new Post Office and the carpark facility that was envisaged some time ago. I still feel that it is a facility which could serve the community well. Certainly, something needs to be done about parking around George Town. Maybe the experts on the Ground Transportation Plan can tell us what to do about that too.

It is good to see that we have an express mail service from the United Kingdom, United States, and of all places Bermuda. Well, I do not know why, but I guess it is good to have it.

Mr. President, in concluding my debate, I would like to wish you and your family good wishes in your next undertaking. I could not in all honesty, say that I am sorry to see you leave as President of the House, because it would not be consistent with the motion that I am bringing on Thursday. However, I think you have done a fairly good job as President of the Assembly. I certainly have enjoyed working with you in the two years that I have been here, and I will expound on the reasons why I am bringing the motion for a Speaker on Thursday, and I will simply say now that it has nothing to do with your ability as President of the Assembly.

I thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Does any other Member wish to speak? It is much too soon for the adjournment.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, I will draw your attention to Standing Order 38, that if you so move, I will so move that the debate be closed.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, I will give Members just a moment longer, but I think another 15 seconds would be long enough, and if nobody seeks to catch my eye within that period, I will have to invite the mover to reply if he wishes.

I am not sure whether the Second Elected Member for George Town was trying to catch my eye, or whether he was.....

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I am Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Very well. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

You are giving way to the...in other words you are not making your speech now, it is not merely that you are....very well.

MR. W. McKEEVA RUSH: I am not going to make mine either Sir, I would want to make mine tomorrow, but I will start.

MR. PRESIDENT: Very well then. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. McKEEVA RUSH: Mr. President, the Speech from the Throne is an outline of Government's policy for the year. It gives us therefore, a chance to debate as it were, the state of the nation. The Governor's speech Sir, was brief and rather abrupt in some instances, and as someone said, has left much room for speculation. I do not like to speculate, and as a representative of the people, I should not have to speculate. As far as I am concerned, all things should be laid before us clearly, and not in such a guarded manner. However, as my arguments in favour or against develops, I trust that I will have made myself clear on where I stand on the Government's policies.

Before I proceed with the speech Sir, there are a few areas of importance that I would not mind addressing at this time. Mr. President, I will speak about these things because I feel strongly about them, and being young, I realize that change must come but not being the radical I am purported to be, I like to see change done in a way where it does not affect institutions in this country that have proven the test of time. That is why, when I talk on certain subjects I speak with some passion. I feel that we have a fairly good group of people in this House, you have conservatives, you have moderates and you have liberals. I feel that this group of people looking at our given situation in this country today, should make the necessary changes so that all of us can be satisfied, rather than pushing certain things down our throats to satisfy a certain small sector.

When I first entered this House, I brought a motion asking for a new timetable for the House. Government agreed with the motion Sir, they accepted the motion, but when we went into Committee they threw everything out. I asked for two things Sir, one, that meetings begin at 2.00 p.m. instead of 10.00 a.m. as we do now. My reason behind this Sir, is that members would have more time in the day to devote to their constituencies, and also the Members of Government, to the business of Government. By meeting as we do now, from 10.00 a.m. to 4.30 p.m. and sometimes later, it does not leave much time to do anything else, except to come into the House and we are here sometimes for two to three weeks. Government has not given me one logical reason why this time cannot or should not be changed. The other thing which I advocate and feel strongly about, is that we should change Meetings from once ever three months to once a month, or every other month. You know, right now, we meet every three months.

The Government's argument against this time change is that we would spend more time in the House, that is the only answer that I can ever get from them. They say if we meet here more often than we are doing now, we will never get out, which is a flimsy excuse. It is not true. If we could meet once a month, we could deal with whatever matters we have in hand. As it is now, work piles up, and we are dealing in every meeting with an average of a half a dozen Bills plus Government Regulations, or Resolutions and Private Members' Motions, and every one of them carries a lot of debate, and you must accept this because we live in a democracy. If we met once a month, and we had one Bill and some questions, we would take the business, finish it and go about our business. Well, if we had no business we would not have any reason to meet. If we met every other month, we would probably have a little more business to do than if we were meeting once a month. It would not change the way we do things too much. The difference is, that we would not have as much business as we do now, and would not stay as long.

The other thing is that while we are here in the House, it gives a sort of disruption to Executive Council, which has to meet every Tuesday I believe it is, at 2.00 or 2.30 p.m. But if we met once a month, and perhaps on a Wednesday, it would make things flow much more easily. I know that I am not supported with this time change, except for the Member from North Side. But we would not be digressing from the way things are done in most dependent territories. Bermuda, which has a little larger population, meet every Friday. I do not believe that Bermuda is that much more busy than we are. All the territories as far as I can see, meet at a different time, they meet more often. But one of the main reasons I would like to see this time change is perhaps, that it might change the way we Members of the House are being ignored in important happenings in the country.

There are several blatant examples which I could mention, but I would mention one, and that is the recent announcement of the new Governor. Mr. President, why could we not have been informed about his appointment before the newspapers, the one in England and the newspaper here in the Island. I feel strongly about these things Sir. I consider it a slap in the face, as a representative of the people, for the man to pass through this country, let us say, on a familiarization visit, and for no one to say 'old dog, here is your new master'. I think it was a slap in the face for those representatives whose districts he toured without their knowing it, and who had to see it in the newspaper. I know Mr. President, that I will be told that these appointments are made by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and if I do not know that now, I will never know it. It is true, as far as I can understand, but somebody on this Island knew about it, once it had been decided. And I feel strongly as a representative of the people, that once an important decision such as that is known, we should be told about it. What are we, sticks?

We have a very responsible position, we are responsible to the people, not only the four Members of Council. I had 1,139 votes too, but what is worse yet, that the Members of Council did not know it. Maybe my line of argument is not getting much favour in this House, but maybe if we were meeting once a month, important announcements like that could be made to the House, where they should be. And since the majority of Members are for keeping His Excellency as Speaker in the House, with the excuse that he is closer to us, His Excellency would have no qualms about making known such an appointment after he had been informed by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and after he had informed the Members of Executive Council.

Too often I see important announcements come out in the papers, and you find a constituency member coming up to you and saying, 'well, tell me what about this'. And, you know, you have to be like an idiot. He does not really understand, his first question to you is, 'well what did we send you there for anyway?' But what was good back in 1959, is not good today. That is why I talk about change in conservatives, moderates and liberals. I make no apologies for my suggestions, for a new parliamentary timetable, or my observations on important announcements such as appointments, as has been made. If these things are thought about more realistically, it can only serve this country better. By meeting more often, we as the people's representatives, would have a better grasp of what is going on in Government. We need to know before my little puppy or my cat knows about it.

The present system as I have said was good in 1959 and in 1972, but today our workload is different, our problems have increased, but we, the ordinary Members of the House who are held responsible, unless we are in Executive Council, and not everyone can be in Executive Council, are still not knowing what is going on. We have to go up to Sunset Bar, sit on a stool and hear the whole of the Government's business for the day. You think that is not a shame. It is true. You think it is not a shame....

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

go there this Friday evening....

You think it is not true, you

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Do not poke fun. Not everything is fun and games, I am serious about this thing. I had to put up my thousand dollars to run, and had to make a sacrifice to my family, promising my people that I would come here and try to do good for them. But how can we, when sometimes you are even misled in what you are told, and it is time for that kind of attitude to change. My people, the people whom I serve, expect service. The system must give me the wherewithall to be able to serve, and I am finding it quite difficult under existing situations to be able to serve properly.

And while I am dealing with us as representatives, I am hoping that during this coming year an office will be established in West Bay. I hope we can get together to decide where it should be. I want to serve my people better, but give me the wherewithall to do it. The Caymanian today, as I have said about problems Sir, is not the same as the man you had to deal with in 1965 and 1959, but today has many responsibilities himself, and his mind is taxed to the limit. He has teenage children with whom he has to deal, he has a house which he has to pay for, and there is a wind of change blowing in this country, and laugh if you want to, but when change comes, and coming it is, some people will not have it as good in an exalted position as they have today. We have heard about warning bells, that is a warning bell, Sir. You get out there and you will see the signs of the time.

I trust that the Government will look at what I am saying. We cannot all be rubber stamps for Parliament, so do not expect us to come here just to get up and speak our minds on a little piece of legislation, get laughed at in the bargain, sometimes they take your advice and sometimes they make you out to be the biggest idiot that walked the street, when they know deep down that what you have been saying is true. I trust that the Government will change their minds about the present position.

Mr. President, having said those things, I believe that the Cayman Islands can and does have a good future. The main indicators give on one side, cause for us to be in an optimistic mood. As we look around the country, there are all kinds of buildings going on; there are many homes being built; there are condominiums being built and there are major hotels wanting to come in; real estate seems to be moving, and as far as I can determine most businesses seem to have had a good year, and are expecting 1987 to be as good as 1986, or better. If we take all these indicators into consideration, it would seem that the Government is doing some of what it promised, and the future would seem to be bright. The economic picture from what I have seen, is beginning to look good, that is one side of the coin. The other side of the coin Mr. President, gives me much cause for concern and distress.

The Throne Speech began by saying on the first page, that crime is increasing, despite the rewarded efforts of the police, and the harsh penalties by the Courts. Sadly, it admits that the high increase in crime is drug related, pointing out that steps have been taken to increase the Drug Squad. I cannot say Sir, that I am in much disagreement with the steps taken. However, I must pose the question. Is this helping the situation? Is this helping to eliminate the crisis we are facing in the large increase in drug use over the last seven years, by our young people? Mr. President, the answer, if given in fairness, must be no. This scourge has grown to enormous proportions, even as more and more young people go before the courts, mainly because of detection of the newly devised urine test which I had hoped would have acted as a deterrent. In spite of this law, youngsters continue to go before the Courts, and who do we find getting long jail sentences and getting police records, but the very youngster whom I had hoped would have been deterred, they are even called out of bed to do the test. But the usage has increased, even as 10 and 12 year old boys are being used as peddlers, it grieves me Sir, it is serious.

At the Commonwealth

Parliamentary Association's conferences in Jersey and London last year, which I had the honour of attending along with the Member for North Side, one of the main topics for discussion was 'Drugs, the social and economic implications'. I was the second speaker set down for this subject, and I put forward the view that the war on drugs can only be won by a massive educational programme, and by eliminating the economic woes of the have-nots. I hold fast to that opinion. It is true Sir, it is true that this scourge of drugs reaches across all segments of society. It is no respecter of a person or a country; the rich as well as the poor. But I believe that its stronghold base is within that part of our society which is less able to help itself for one reason or the other. Mr. President, it is easy for what I call 'some of those just come here people' to say, 'oh, the young person just needs something to do, this is a kick for him'. That is not the entirety of the matter, some will try it because they have been challenged, but others get mixed up because of different pressures.

Years ago Mr. President, and I mean in the late 1960s' early 1970s', the ganja craze was on in this country. We did not know anything about cocaine or any of the other drugs that we hear are being used today, crack etcetera. In those years when I was just a teenager, and being tempted myself, I saw young people getting involved, I saw them dropping out of school, I saw them wearing their hair long and I observed society passing them by, criticizing of course, but rejecting them. I believe I am safe in saying that certain parents were not associated with because their child wore his hair long, and was counted as a ganja boy. Now whether this was plain prejudice or a do not care attitude, by those who were counted as the upper crust of society, I do not know. But I do know, that certain parents were left out by certain segments of society. Nothing I would say, was done to help those involved. Churches did very little, and society at large just talked, and Government increased fines and added to the membership of the force.

More and more young people fell by the wayside, creating a greater gap in the community. Some of them might have been accountants today, some of them might have been lawyers today, some of them might even have held some other important position. But no, no one saw that. Criticism! There were no rehabilitation programmes, no counselling of any kind to a meaningful degree. Things kept getting worse, but I should say Sir, that crime of a serious nature was very unusual. There was the occasional burglary or stealing of someone's ground provision but no serious crime - those were the days of ganja. Then cocaine came in, and a pandoras box was opened and chaos was unleashed into our society, murders, armed robbery, burglary to an all time high, young people degrading themselves to the lowest. I could not even give you the examples publicly, that I have heard about.

And still Mr. President, we have not realised that drugs is our single greatest problem in this country. Still, priority is not given in the vast establishment to the programme which we talk about, as if we have forever to deal with it and haul our young people from its clutches. Still we enlarge the force, still we enlarge the jail to lock up these young people. It is not helping the situation, it does not even serve as a proper stopgap measure because they get drugs as easily in prison as they do on the outside. In spite of the measures taken, the use of cocaine has taken over from the use of ganja. If you listen to some people talk, they say the few ganja boys are being locked up, to make way for the cocaine dealers. Hard words, but I am telling you what I am hearing on the street. And while there are steps being taken to rehabilitate, and steps being taken to offer help in some areas, Government has to move faster and faster and faster. Government has to devote more of its budget. Let us get the job done. Let us stop this attitude of a little bit here and a little bit there. It will take a mighty long time, and time is what this country does not have if we are going to save our young people.

The situation is extremely bad, terrible, terrible for a country of our size. I would like to know whether there has been any official assessment of the reasons for the accelerated growth rate of the usage of drugs in our society, the reasons, not just the medicine on the sore, but the reasons why you got the disease in the first place, and if they have not done it yet, why not. We just cannot go with stopgap measures, we have to have a real grasp of what we are dealing with. I know we say that we are going to set up that psychiatrists service and the counselling service, but these services can only be effective when they have the person in hand to deal with. But who is out there finding out what is the cause for the young person to get to the stage where he needs psychological help, and who is out there to bring him in? Who is out there making an assessment of the community, who is out there educating them to the dangers of drug usage?

We have to get going, there is no time for slow pace, if there is anything like speed we need to do it, or else we are going to find that our young people will be piled up on the dump heap of society, and there is going to be cause for more and more outside help. I am wondering if there is not some master plan somewhere where you lock up and you lock up, and you give them a record and you degrade them so that they would have no chance to move in that direction to take a certain position. Mr. President, I feel strongly about these things because I have a nine year old son and a six year old daughter, and just as strong because I know that I was elected here to bring about the social change that is so vital to this community. Now one can easily say that it cannot be done over night, I know that. But Mr. President, we have to move faster on the programmes which we know we say we are going to put in.

It seems to be an easy thing to move a kilo of cocaine from Columbia to the United States, or to the Cayman Islands. It seems an easy thing to move a pound of ganja from Jamaica to Miami or Grand Cayman, but this drug is harmless in this country until it reaches the hands of the user. The peddlers and the users are two of the most vulnerable people in the chain of supply. If we take them out we are on our way to real victory. It is of paramount importance that we identify him and use our governmental resources to educate him against the evils of these drugs, so that he can find some hope in life other than peddling and using this destruction of our civilization. We can make laws, we can negotiate treaties, we can threaten with guns as the United States have done, it will not help. The real place to start, if we are serious about stopping this thing, is let us do as I have said, we need to do, let us get going with what we have planned, but let us put a little more effort into our plan.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think the Member is quite right to look at his watch, because I do have to interrupt him now, it is four thirty by mine.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Reports. The Honourable Third Official Member of Executive Council.

Presentation of Papers and

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON:

with the provisions of Standing Order 18(1), I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Annual Report of the Royal Cayman Islands Police for the year 1986.

Mr. President, in accordance

MR. PRESIDENT:

So ordered. Questions.

QUESTIONS

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Question Number 5 be deferred for a few minutes until the answer comes down from the office. I inadvertently left it behind.

Mr. President, I ask that

MR. PRESIDENT:

Very well. I think probably it will be for the convenience of the House if we put Question Number 5 slightly lower in the Order Paper and return to it.

In that case, I will invite the Elected Member for North Side to ask Question Number 6.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED

MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NO. 6: CAN THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE IF THE HYATT REGENCY HOTEL OR THE TREASURE ISLAND RESORT WILL PAY ANY ROYALTY ON THE WATER THEY USE?

ANSWER: NEITHER THE HYATT REGENCY HOTEL NOR THE TREASURE ISLAND RESORT PAY ROYALTY ON THE WATER USED FOR THEIR OWN OPERATION.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: A supplementary, Mr. President. Does that reply mean that they are not purchasing water from Cayman Water Co. Ltd., but are using their own equipment - or what does it mean?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, that is correct, Sir. They are producing their own water on site.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: So the franchise agreement then has not been altered, and if they are using water from Cayman Water Co. Ltd. they would then be paying the usual rate and Government would collect on the royalty part of it? Is that correct?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, that is correct, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, I invite the Elected Member for North Side to ask Question Number 7.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNICATIONS WORKS AND DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION

NO. 7: CAN THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE IF AND WHEN THE 1984 AND 1985 AUDITED ACCOUNTS OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS PORT AUTHORITY WILL BE LAID ON THE TABLE OF THIS HONOURABLE HOUSE?

ANSWER: DUE TO THE PROBLEMS AT THE PORT AUTHORITY, WHICH THE MEMBER IS AWARE OF, THE AUDITING OF THE 1984 AND 1985 ACCOUNTS WAS NOT FINALIZED UNTIL SEPTEMBER OF 1986.

IT IS NOT A REQUIREMENT OF THE LAW TO LAY THE ACCOUNTS ON THE TABLE OF THIS HONOURABLE HOUSE. HOWEVER, IT IS MY INTENTION TO LAY THEM ON THE TABLE AT THIS MEETING.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no supplementary... .. I am advised that the Honourable First Official Member is now in a position to answer Question Number 5. So I invite the Elected Member for North Side to ask that question.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO. 5: CAN THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE WHAT WAS THE AMOUNT OF ROYALTY PAID TO GOVERNMENT BY CAYMAN WATER CO. LTD. IN 1986 AND WHETHER THIS MONEY WAS PAID INTO GENERAL REVENUE?

ANSWER: THE AMOUNT OF ROYALTY PAID TO THE GOVERNMENT BY THE CAYMAN WATER CO. LTD. FOR THE PERIOD JANUARY TO NOVEMBER, 1986, AMOUNTED TO CI$174,959.91. ACCORDING TO THE WATER AUTHORITY, THE AMOUNT PAYABLE FOR DECEMBER IS CI$16,749.29 AND THE COMPANY HAS BEEN REQUESTED TO MAKE PAYMENT. THIS, WHEN ADDED TO THE COLLECTIONS THROUGH NOVEMBER, GIVES AN OVERALL TOTAL OF CI$191,709.20 FOR THE YEAR ENDED 31ST DECEMBER, 1986. ALL AMOUNTS COLLECTED HAVE BEEN CREDITED TO GENERAL REVENUE.

MR. PRESIDENT: Unless any Member has a supplementary, I will invite the Second Elected Member for George Town to ask the next question. But, since he is not here has he asked any other Member to ask the question on his behalf? Then we will defer his questions and see whether he is here at the end.

I will pass to Question Number

11. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, I believe that this one will have to be deferred also. This is being asked to the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

MR. PRESIDENT: Unless any other Honourable Member has been invited to answer it.....

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, the answer is here and the Honourable Member has asked that it be deferred if possible.

MR. PRESIDENT: Very well. Let us try Question Number 12.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, before you proceed. When the Honourable Member said deferred, does he mean deferred to later on in the Sitting or?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I am told that the Honourable Member should be here shortly.

MR. PRESIDENT: Perhaps the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town would like to ask question number 12.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM, AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 12: WOULD THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE HOW MANY HOURS HAVE BEEN FLOWN BY THE 737 AIRCRAFT AND WHAT HAS BEEN THE AVERAGE LOAD FACTOR?

ANSWER: WHILE NO ATTEMPT IS BEING MADE TO CONCEAL NECESSARY INFORMATION ABOUT THE NATIONAL AIRLINE, THERE ARE, HOWEVER, MATTERS WHICH ARE CONSIDERED SENSITIVE IN NATURE AND PRIVATE TO THE COMPANY'S OPERATIONS, AND WHICH, IF DISCUSSED PUBLICLY COULD EASILY BE MISUNDERSTOOD AND PREJUDICE THE AIRLINE IN ONE WAY OR ANOTHER. THEREFORE, IT HAS BEEN THE PRACTICE IN THIS HOUSE NOT TO ANSWER QUESTIONS WHICH RELATE TO THE DAY-TO-DAY MANAGEMENT OF CAYMAN AIRWAYS. THIS QUESTION FALLS WITHIN THAT CATEGORY.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, may I remind the Member that he told the House last year that the reason for leasing a 737 was to see how economical it would be, and whether that aircraft would be used to replace the 727. If that is the case, I think the House can demand that he answer the question, and not dodge it. And I would like to ask if the Member, in the light of his statement to the House last year, that he gives us the answer now?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think the Member has to answer. I do not mean that you have to provide the information, but there was a supplementary question, and I think it is a permissible supplementary.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I am not sure what the Member from Bodden Town is referring to, whether it was a reply to an answer, a reply to a supplementary, or a statement I made in the course of the debate. I still stand by what I said originally, and I see no reason for me to get involved in how the aircraft is utilized, or the load factor.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can I ask if the Member's refusal to give the answer is an admission that the performance has been poor?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: No, Mr. President, I would not say that that inference could be drawn, but the 737 was leased primarily for a charter programme which the company was conducting this winter. And to be quite fair and honest, the matter of average load factors is considered confidential information for each individual charter operator, and since the aircraft is leased to charter operators on a charter basis, load factors are really no concern of the company. I still feel that load factor information since you are serving four or five different charter operators is confidential.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, the question is in two parts, and the Member seems to be saying that the second part of the question is confidential. Although I am not convinced that it is, can I ask him now - what about the first part of the question, how many hours have been flown? Is that also confidential?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

The number of hours flown Mr. President, is related to the day to day operation of that aircraft, and I think it is a matter for the management of the airline to decide how best the aircraft is utilized, it is a matter for them.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Supplementary.
Mr. President, this is something for the entire Legislature and the entire country with regard to this question, because Cayman Airways has always been a whipping dog until now, and everything with regard to its operation has been made public. Now, in asking, I mean, I have quite a few supplementaries I would like to ask on this question, and I think the question should be answered to an extent. If the Member wants to cloud the issue with regard to the load factor, I could agree that that is quite broad. We should have some questions on this matter. We are paying over $300,000 a month for an aircraft of that size, in comparison with what we are paying for the 727, about $120,000 per month.

MR. PRESIDENT:

That seems to me to be a statement not actually a supplementary, but I do not think there was anything there for the Member to answer.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, maybe I should remind the House that from the time Government became a shareholder of Cayman Airways in 1968, the Member at that time, when asked questions on the day-to-day management of the airline, replied that it was a private company and operated as such. Therefore they were very selective as to what replies were given. The Member after him, when asked similar questions, many times the House was informed that that information would be supplied in due course. My position Sir, is that Cayman Airways is a subject under the Portfolio of Tourism, Aviation and Trade and as such, I see myself responsible for policy matters. Government as the sole shareholder of Cayman Airways appoints a Chairman and Board of Directors, and a Managing Director who is paid a handsome salary to take care of the day-to-day operations of the airline. I do not see that as my responsibility as the Member for Tourism, Aviation and Trade, Sir.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

If the Member does not see that as a responsibility, I wonder why he partook so much in the discussions in the past. Anyway this question I think could be answered, and I think it is quite relevant to the question that is on the Order Paper. Has it flown on all trips that it has been called upon to do.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Supplementaries have to arise out of the answer to the original question, and since the original question in effect, was not answered, I am afraid that supplementary cannot stand.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Well, if you will not allow it now, believe me when the debate comes up somebody is going to answer some questions.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Question Number 13, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE.

NO. 13: WOULD THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE WHAT IS THE PURCHASE PRICE AND TERMS OF PURCHASE OF THE NEW 330 AIRCRAFT BOUGHT BY CAYMAN AIRWAYS LTD. (COST OF SPARES PACKAGE TO BE INCLUDED)?

ANSWER: THE PURCHASE PRICE OF THE SHORTS 330 AIRCRAFT WAS US$1,125,000.00. THE SPARES PACKAGE IS ESTIMATED TO COST US$400,000.00.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Can the Member say what items make up the spares package, as the amount of $400,000 seems unreasonably large?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the major items in the spares package is a spare engine, a spare propeller, special tooling for this particular type of aircraft and other replaceable items make up the spare package.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Can the Member give us the cost of the spare engine?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: No Mr. President, I do not have that item broken down, but I can supply it to the Member in writing if he so desires.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Have all the spares purchased, been received already?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: No, Mr. President. All the spares have not been received, they are not on location in Grand Cayman as yet.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: The purchase price that you gave, does that include the four Venezuelan pilots who cannot speak English?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: The pilots that were included in the price Sir, were not purchased, they were on loan from Pennsylvania Air, and they spoke very good English.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well, is it not a fact then that we do have two pilots here who are Venezuelans, one is a captain and the other a co-pilot and the two of them cannot speak or converse in English, but are they part of the package with the plane, or are you referring to other pilots, or are these spares, what are they?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think we are straying really, rather far from the original question.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: This is another supplementary then. Could the Member state how much time is available on the engines of this plane, and whether it can fly within the safety factor with regard to the engines, and whether the plane has been certified for the Cayman Brac/Little Cayman run?

MR. PRESIDENT: Again, I do not really think that that is a supplementary that arises out of the purchase, and terms of purchase. If the Member wanted that information he should put down a specific question about it.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: There is not much use in putting down a question here, because you cannot get anything answered.

Does the spares package include a starter engine worth about $15,000 for this particular plane?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I am not sure what the First Elected Member for Bodden Town means by a 'starter engine'. Is it the ground equipment used for starting the aircraft, or what?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: (INAUDIBLE)

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: But you are asking the question. I have never heard that expression 'Starter engine' before.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Except on a Bulldozer!

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: It is no wonder we get into the shape we are in.

Well, does it include a new engine? Is the engine that we are buying, to hand now or do we have to wait for the Harrier Jets or somebody else to bring it in? Is it available to us?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I said in giving the list of items that were included in the spares package, that a spare engine was included in the spares package. The spare engine is not on hand at the present time, it is on route to Grand Cayman.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: In other words then, we have bought it, and we need the engine but we do not have it, is that what you are saying to us?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: If we needed it at this present time, we would not have it on hand. This is not unusual in Cayman Airways, it happened with the Trilander, the 748 and the other aircraft which the company has leased from time to time.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: How many available hours then are on the engines that we have on the plane right now?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I could not give an exact number on that, but when the aircraft was purchased, the engines were overhauled down to 0 time. The aircraft had to be ferried down here and it has been used since. I cannot give the exact number of hours left remaining on the engines, but I would say that it is certainly considerable. There is no chance of having an engine change within a very short while, unless something unforeseen comes up.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Was there any pilot input into the purchase of this plane?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: That is the subject of another question Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think that is the subject of another question later.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: The Member said when the plane was bought. So as a part of his reply I am asking a question then. Who bought the plane, who was responsible for the purchase of the plane?

MR. PRESIDENT: No, that does not arise out of the answer to the original question, which was about the price and the terms of purchase, not about who advised on the purchase, and there is another question set down on the Business Paper.

Since the Second Elected Member.....No, I am so sorry I think we go on through. Question Number 14, the Elected Member for East End, and we come back to the earlier questions later.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE.

NO. 14: CAN THE HONOURABLE MEMBER SAY WHETHER THERE WAS ANY INPUT BY CAYMANIAN PILOTS WITH REGARD TO THE DECISION TO PURCHASE THE 330 AIRCRAFT?

ANSWER: WHILE NO ATTEMPT IS BEING MADE TO CONCEAL NECESSARY INFORMATION ABOUT THE NATIONAL AIRLINE, THERE ARE, HOWEVER, MATTERS WHICH ARE CONSIDERED SENSITIVE IN NATURE AND PRIVATE TO THE COMPANY'S OPERATIONS, AND WHICH, IF DISCUSSED PUBLICLY, COULD EASILY BE MISUNDERSTOOD AND PREJUDICE THE AIRLINE IN ONE WAY OR ANOTHER.

THEREFORE, IT HAS BEEN THE PRACTICE IN THIS HOUSE NOT TO ANSWER QUESTIONS WHICH RELATE TO THE DAY-TO-DAY MANAGEMENT OF CAYMAN AIRWAYS. THIS QUESTION FALLS WITHIN THAT CATEGORY.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, with all due respect to everybody, this question here cannot be considered to be anything about day-to-day management, that would be detrimental to the company in any respect. A simple question is being asked. Can the Honourable Member say whether there was any input by Caymanian pilots with regard to the decision to purchase the 330 aircraft? The Member could easily say yes, or no, and probably be correct which ever way it was, because if someone just discussed it the way the question is worded. So how can we fall back on such foolishness when we represent the country, and you are representing a big investment of the people, and we cannot get a question answered that is as simple as this. This is getting ridiculous now.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, I guess before long we will all be reciting that answer, because it seems to be flowing fast this morning.

I wonder if the Member could say whether he was aware of the purchase of the Shorts 330 aircraft?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Yes Mr. President, I was aware, and I supported the purchase of the aircraft.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: As a part of the purchasing group, can you disclose to this House how old this aircraft is then, and how many hours it has flown in the past, before we obtained it? I know what you are going to fall back on, these are questions which have been asked in this House before, and answered.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am afraid that that is not a supplementary that arises out of the question.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I agree with you Sir, but there is no use asking any questions in this House, because you cannot get any answers. We might as well forget Question Time completely, and take it out of the Order Book.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, to the best of my recollection, the aircraft is approximately eight years old.

MR. PRESIDENT: Question number 15.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 15: WOULD THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE WHETHER THE SHORTS 330 IS A CHARTER, LEASE PURCHASE OR PURCHASE AIRCRAFT, AND WHAT COMPANY HANDLES THE ARRANGEMENTS?

ANSWER: THE SHORTS 330 HAS BEEN PURCHASED BY CAYMAN AIRWAYS. ARRANGEMENTS WERE HANDLED BY THE COMPANY ITSELF.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Have we paid cash for it, or is it financed?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, it has been financed, and the company made the finance arrangements themselves.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Supplementary Mr. President. Could the Member say whether this financing was done locally?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: That is correct Mr. President. The financing was arranged locally.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: A further supplementary Mr. President. Could the Member say whether the financing was done by a local bank, or local individuals.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I am answering these supplementaries, but you know the original question did not ask about finance arrangements. They asked what company handled the arrangements, and I really did not take it that it was referring to financial arrangements. The financing was arranged through Morgan Grenfell (Cayman) Limited.

MR. PRESIDENT: I allowed the supplementaries because the original question was about the mode of purchase, or lease purchase, and about how it was arranged, and I think the financial arrangements, it is perfectly fair to ask that in a supplementary.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, the Member answered that the aircraft has been purchased by Cayman Airways. Can he say if the legal work for the purchase was done by the Legal Department of Government, or by a private law firm?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the legal work was done by the Chairman of Cayman Airways, who is a very successful lawyer. This was done by him as the Chairman of Cayman Airways, free of cost, and consequently saved the airline thousands of dollars which it could have incurred in legal fees.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Could the Member advise the House what the interests terms are on the loan, and the length of the loan?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: The loan is for five years, and to the best of my memory, it is one and a half percent above libor.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, Question No. 16.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 16: WOULD THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE THE HOURS OF UTILIZATION VERSUS IDLE-TIME ON THE 737 SINCE IT WAS LEASED?

ANSWER: Mr. President, a while ago the Member made the comment that they would probably be able to recite the reply before the day is out, well I am afraid this one falls into the same category, and it is the same reply, and the answer is:

WHILE NO ATTEMPT IS BEING MADE TO CONCEAL NECESSARY INFORMATION ABOUT THE NATIONAL AIRLINE, THERE ARE, HOWEVER, MATTERS WHICH ARE CONSIDERED SENSITIVE IN NATURE AND PRIVATE TO THE COMPANY'S OPERATIONS, AND WHICH, IF DISCUSSED PUBLICLY, COULD EASILY BE MISUNDERSTOOD AND PREJUDICE THE AIRLINE IN ONE WAY OR ANOTHER.

THEREFORE, IT HAS BEEN THE PRACTICE IN THIS HOUSE NOT TO ANSWER QUESTIONS WHICH RELATE TO THE DAY-TO-DAY MANAGEMENT OF CAYMAN AIRWAYS. THIS QUESTION FALLS WITHIN THAT CATEGORY.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, I am ashamed that you would allow a question to be answered that is of such importance maybe to the people of this country, and not have them answered.....

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: On a Point of Order, Mr. President, is that a question or a statement?

MR. PRESIDENT: I am hoping that the Member is getting round to his question, he probably is.....

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:I hope you understood well what it was, it was strictly a statement, but I am going to bring it into a question.

Mr. President, anyone can go to the airport and see when the plane is there and when it is not there. Certainly, to answer it is not detrimental to the people of the Cayman Islands or the operation of Cayman Airways. Now either we are going to get questions answered in this House Mr. President, or let us do away with Question Time completely. If that is what you want, we will make a motion and I will bring it to the floor now, that we do away with Question Time in this House, and I will put that to you as a question.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think the Member should know, I am not empowered to order Members of the Government to answer questions.....

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I sat in Executive Council with you, you either agree or disagree.....(INAUDIBLE)

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Member tell us how this particular question falls into the mysterious area of confidentiality?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well I have got one question....

MR. PRESIDENT: I think the Member has been asked a supplementary which I have allowed.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: The Member asked how it falls within the confidentiality of the company. If I were to reply that Cayman Airways is set up and operated as a private company, none of this information, none of the supplementaries and none to which I am replying to would be given out, because there are many things and much that has been discussed in this House, even during this current meeting of the Assembly, that could prejudice the airline in one way or another. And if the picture is painted to the public that Cayman Airways is running into problems, and that an operation might be unsafe, or that the Airline is headed for further financial difficulty, credibility and the reputation of the airline can be affected. So there are many things that cannot be traced directly to a specific item, but can contribute to an overall situation. I think that Members of this House should be very careful in the manner in which they are seeking information about Cayman Airways, and should think whether it would be supportive of, or detrimental to the airline. The airline is not mine.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, I can quite well remember sitting in this House for about seven years and taking all the criticism that could ever be given about Cayman Airways. Now, there is no criticism of Cayman Airways, what has changed, nothing has changed. I have a question for the Member right now, and this is a blunt question.

Does the Member know whether we own an airline or we do not?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Really, that should have been answered by him.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: (INAUDIBLE).

MR. PRESIDENT: Order! Order!
I think we had better go back to.....

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:Mr. President, if you will allow, I just had one more....

MR. PRESIDENT: One more then.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:supplementary question, and I would just like to say that the operation of the port is very similar to that of the airline, and I would like to ask the Member if he has seen the statistics published by the Port Authority. Every month they put out reports stating how many hours the dock has been used, and if that is not confidential, how can this matter be, and I would just like to ask the Member if he has seen the monthly figures published by the Port.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I have seen those figures, the same as has the Member asking the question, but I do not think that it is a fair comparison. The Port cannot be compared with Cayman Airways. The employees of Cayman Airways are not Civil Servants, and there are other items which cannot be fairly compared. Cayman Airways published its Annual Report and Financial Statements which were laid on the Table of this Honourable House last November, and a lot of the information that might answer any genuine queries as to the condition of the airline can be found there.

MR. PRESIDENT: We go back to Question No. 8, the Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I had a supplementary on this question, Mr. President, and if you would let me.....

MR. PRESIDENT: Very well.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: This is a good supplementary Mr. President....(LAUGHTER).....Since Government.....

MR. PRESIDENT: I will have to judge that when you have asked it.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Since the Government is a one hundred percent shareholder of Cayman Airways, and the Government also subsidizes the airline to the tune of about two million dollars per annum, is it not somewhat unfair to the people of this country, to be told the question which seeks to ascertain the utilization of the 737, as contained in this question cannot be provided, or would the Member otherwise agree to supply the answer in writing?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think the Member has made his point. I do not think it is really a permissible supplementary.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the subsidy as I recall is not two million. I guess sometimes I wish it was, it is a million, and if the Member asking the supplementary is interested in the information, I could probably request management to supply it to me, and I would then supply it to him in writing.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, I wonder if the Member could give me the same assurance for the questions which he did not answer.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I would have to consider them on an individual basis Mr. President.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, the supplementary asked a while ago was as a result of one of my questions, so that is the reason why I am asking if he could consider my question too.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Well this particular question I can answer in that manner. I would not want that to apply to all the others.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well Mr. President, who is going to answer to the Legislature and to the people of this country? I think when I was there for seven years, our group did. We answered every criticism as best we could, we took all the criticism. Nobody is criticizing except the few times that we do it here. Now, how is the public going to know what is going on with Cayman Airways when the Member is taking this cloak of secrecy and wrapping himself into it and wrapping the operation in it, and we cannot get any information? We know that there is a lot of money being lost, as it has been lost in the past, we can see that. Why are we not made aware of some of the problems when we ask about what is going on?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I have answered questions which I consider fall in the category of policy matters, and the statement just made by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, really, his position when he was on this side of the House and the Member responsible for Tourism, Aviation and Trade, is a bit different from mine, in connection with the airline, in as much as he was the Member and also the Chairman of the Board.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think Members of the House will know, and certainly will be able to determine from reference to past Hansards, that it has long been the practice that a range of information about Cayman Airways has not been provided, and a range of questions about Cayman Airways have not been answered. Members probably know too that it is the practice in the United Kingdom in the House of Commons, that detailed questions about nationalized industries in the United Kingdom are not answered by Ministers. Indeed, I think in the United Kingdom, the Speaker does not accept detailed questions about nationalized industries, and I shall have to consider whether it may be preferable in the future to refuse to accept the questions at all. The practice here has been rightly or wrongly, that all the questions provided that are basically in order, have been accepted and the Member, it used to be the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, it is now the Honourable Second Elected Member, has decided whether he will provide the information or not.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, with all due respect, I think we have got two different types of Government, the one in the United Kingdom and the one that is here. We have different opinions on many things, and we are not a socialist-leaning Government, and I hope to God that things are not going to get any more dictatorial with regard to what you have just said, and what has been the case in this House in the past. I hope the future is not going to be as dictatorial.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, I have always regarded it as having been the practice and the tradition of this House that it has not been for the Speaker or the President to determine whether a particular question about Cayman Airways or about some other statutory authority, falls within the category that would be regarded as inadmissible in Westminster, that is left for the Member who might answer, to determine, and I have not sought to change that practice, nor should I propose to for the moment. But if that practice is to continue, Members of the House on both sides will have to remember that there will, on a number of occasions, be decisions by the Members who answer questions, that they are not prepared to provide information, and that is a long-standing tradition here.

Now, let us turn, because we have not got too much time left, to Question No. 8., the Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, before asking this question, I would just request that the Standing Business Committee supply any amendments that they may make to the Order of Business that is sent to Members, because I had a Paper stating the Order of Business from Tuesday, 10th February though Friday, 13th February and on it none of my questions were stated there, so if these Business Papers are going to be changed, it would be helpful if we are given them in advance.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT.

NO. 8: WOULD THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE WHETHER GOVERNMENT HAS, IN THE PAST, GUARANTEED ANY LOANS FOR CARIBBEAN UTILITIES CO. LTD.?

Mr. President, the first answer I should give is as Chairman of the Business Committee. When we dealt with the Questions which were on Business Paper No. 1. the Second Elected Member for George Town had no questions on it, so we dealt with the questions as we had them at the time. We had a second meeting yesterday, where we took questions from Business Papers Nos. 2 and 3, and because there were only a few questions to be asked, if we stuck to the original decision of considering only the questions on Business Paper No. 1., Question Time today, would have gone by in ten minutes. So that is really the rational behind the way in which the Business Committee made its decision.

The answer to the Second Elected Member for George Town's question is:

ANSWER: ON 11TH OCTOBER, 1982 A RESOLUTION WAS PASSED BY FINANCE COMMITTEE AUTHORIZING THE GOVERNOR TO GIVE A GUARANTEE OR GUARANTEES IN SUCH FORM AS MAY BE NECESSARY FOR AND IN THE

NAME OF THE GOVERNMENT OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS OF THE AGGREGATE PAYMENT OF A SUM NOT EXCEEDING TWO MILLION FIVE HUNDRED THOUSAND UNITED STATES' DOLLARS OR ITS EQUIVALENT IN ANY OTHER CURRENCY OR CURRENCIES FOR THE PURPOSE OF AND INCIDENTAL TO THE PURCHASING BY CARIBBEAN UTILITIES CO. LTD. OF TWO 4.25 MW MIRRLEES BLACKSTONE GENERATORS AND OTHER EQUIPMENT.

ACTING UNDER THIS AUTHORITY, THE GOVERNOR ISSUED TWO GUARANTEES ON 10TH DECEMBER, 1982 TO:

- (a) MIRRLEES BLACKSTONE (STOCKPORT) LTD. FOR £ 549,000 REPAYABLE BY SIXTEEN EQUAL HALF-EARLY INSTALLMENTS TOGETHER WITH INTEREST THEREON, AND:
- (b) GRAY DAWES BANK PLC FOR US$466,650 FOR A PERIOD OF 8 YEARS FROM THE DATE OF SUCH ADVANCE, TOGETHER WITH THE PAYMENT OF UP TO SIX MONTHS ARREARS OF INTEREST.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, as the time is now eleven o'clock, which is normally the time for the end of Questions, and I have two questions left to ask, I wonder if you would agree to suspend the Standing Order, I think it is 23(8) in order that my other questions can be asked.

MR. PRESIDENT: It is not for me to agree, it is for the House to determine. If you, or any Member chooses to move a motion to suspend Standing Orders in order to enable Question Time to continue for the necessary period the motion can be considered.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I move that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended in order that the two outstanding questions can be answered this morning.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think there are three outstanding questions in fact, you may not have been aware of that, but there is a question by the Second Elected Member for West Bay as well. So I think with your agreement, I will interpret your motion as meaning that all the outstanding questions should be....

So the motion is that in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 83, Standing Orders 23(7) and (8) should be suspended in order to enable the remaining questions on today's Order Paper to be asked and answered.

Does any Member wish to speak.
If not, I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE THE REMAINING QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER TO BE TAKEN.

MR. PRESIDENT: We were in the middle I think of Question No. 8., because I had not given you an opportunity to ask supplementaries, or other Members to do so.

SUPPLEMENTARY:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Supplementary Mr. President. I want to thank the Member for this very comprehensive answer, but just if he could let me know if any loans were guaranteed since 1982 for CUC.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: The answer to the best of my knowledge Mr. President, is, that no loans have been guaranteed since that date.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, the Member may ask Question No. 9.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

NO. 9: WOULD THE HONOURABLE MEMBER PROVIDE A LIST OF CAYMANIAN STATUS' GRANTED DURING 1986 AND INDICATE THE NATIONALITIES OF EACH PERSON WHO WAS GRANTED STATUS UNDER SECTION 18(1) AND

(4) OF THE CAYMANIAN PROTECTION LAW, 1984?

If I may say Mr. President, Section 18(1) deals generally with the seven-year qualification, and Section 18(4) deals with persons who become British Dependent Territory Citizens by reason of grant, by the Governor, of a Certificate of Naturalization or Registration.

ANSWER: THE TOTAL NUMBER OF PERSONS GRANTED CAYMANIAN STATUS IN 1986 UNDER SECTION 18(1) WAS 10.

THE BREAKDOWN BY NATIONALITY IS AS FOLLOWS:-

UNITED KINGDOM CITIZENS	4
JAMAICAN CITIZENS	3
UNITED STATES CITIZENS	3

NO APPLICATIONS UNDER SECTION 18(4) WERE RECEIVED. A LIST OF ALL CERTIFICATES ISSUED DURING 1986 IS ATTACHED.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no supplementary, the Second Elected Member for George Town may ask Question No. 10.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

NO. 10: WOULD THE HONOURABLE MEMBER STATE THE NUMBER OF NEW GUN LICENCES ISSUED SINCE 1ST. APRIL, 1986?

ANSWER: FIFTY-FOUR (54) FIREARMS' LICENCES HAVE BEEN ISSUED SINCE 1ST. APRIL, 1986 - FIFTY-TWO (52) IN GRAND CAYMAN AND TWO (2) IN CAYMAN BRAC.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, may I ask the Member how many of these licences were granted to Members of the Gun Club?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: I do not have the information in that form Mr. President. What I do know, is that Members of the Gun Club do possess a number of licences, but I do not know how many of the 54 were issued specifically to Gun Club members.

MR. PRESIDENT: I wonder whether the Member would care to undertake to obtain the information and provide it to the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. He nods, I think you will get it.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Supplementary Mr. President, and if this information is not now available, I would ask the Member to undertake to provide it, if it is accepted by you, Sir.

Would the Member state the names of the individuals to whom these licences were issued?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: No Sir, I do not have that information.

MR. PRESIDENT: But I think you were also asked whether you would obtain it, and make it available if you do not have it now.

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: No Sir, I am afraid I could not give that undertaking without consultation.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, on a point of clarification, is the Member suggesting consultation with yourself as Governor, Sir?

MR. PRESIDENT: I am afraid I cannot answer, I am not sure whether you are asking me or asking the Member.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I did address the question to you, Sir. The Member said that without consultation, I think you are his immediate boss, so I was trying to enquire whether the consultation was going to be with you, or who it was going to be with.

MR. PRESIDENT: I have understood that. I was not sure whether you were intending to ask me to answer or the Member to answer, but I think it must be for him to answer.

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: What I meant Sir, was that I cannot give that undertaking without being given the opportunity to consult with whomever I think consultation is relevant.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, a supplementary, but we do seem to be getting bogged down here with a lot of unnecessary procedures.

Mr. President, would the Member give the undertaking that if his consultation proves successful, that he will provide the answer to this supplementary.

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: Most certainly, Sir.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, on a further supplementary, would the Member provide a list of gun licences renewed since the first January, 1987, and a list of renewed applications, refused, and if this information is not now readily available, to give his undertaking that he will give me this information in writing?

MR. PRESIDENT: I do not really think that is a supplementary that arises out of the original question or the answer to it. The supplementaries you have asked so far have all related to the new gun licences, which was what your first question was about. You are now introducing other matter.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, with respect Sir, my question deals with the number of new gun licences issued since the 1st April, 1986. And certainly Sir, the 1st January would be subsequent to that date, 1st January, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT: But as I understand it, your supplementary seeks information about renewals and refusals of renewals, and that is the distinction I am making, not a change of date. Your first question was about new gun licences, you are now asking about renewals and refusals to renew, and indeed about the names of all the people who have had renewals and refusals, and that I think is a separate matter.

I have no doubt that the Member concerned will take note of your hope to get that information, and it may be that if he has it and if he thinks the information can properly be supplied, he will let you have it, but I cannot allow the supplementary.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, I suppose I will have the same situation with this next supplementary question. The purpose of these questions should not be taken lightly. I have had a lot of questions asked me by members of the public, and I am just trying to serve them to the best of my ability.

The supplementary question is, would the Member state the number of gun licences renewed since the 1st January, 1987 in respect of the Gun Club?

MR. PRESIDENT: Again, I think it does not really arise out of the original question. If you had wanted a whole series of different sorts of statistics about firearms licences, I think you should have put down a more comprehensive question. But I dare say that if you approached the Member, he would be able to provide it privately.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, you are aware Sir, that I did submit these questions in their original form, and you refused them.

MR. PRESIDENT: I will have to check, I do not recall refusing a question that would have asked for information about the number of renewals, or the number of refusals to renew, but I will have a word with you afterwards.

Unless you have any further supplementary, I invite the Second Elected Member for West Bay to ask

Question No. 11.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: It is a funny world Mr. President. I was number seven, now I am number twelve. I hope it is not a bad omen.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR WEST BAY TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR HEALTH EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES.

NO. 11: WOULD THE HONOURABLE MEMBER SAY WHAT IS THE PROCEDURE FOR THE GRANTING OF SCHOLARSHIPS AND FOR WHAT AREAS ARE THEY BEING OFFERED.

Mr. President, before answering the questions Sir, could I apologize to you, the staff of the Legislative Assembly and Honourable Members for my late arrival, which necessitated this question being placed at this point on the Business Paper, but I assure you I was not idle when I was out of the House, Sir.

The answer:

ANSWER: AWARD OF SCHOLARSHIPS ARE MADE BY THE EDUCATION COUNCIL IN ACCORDANCE WITH THE CRITERIA STIPULATED IN PART IX IN THE EDUCATION LAW, 1983.

THE AREAS OF STUDY COVER ALL PROFESSIONS, EXCEPT LAW, ONCE IT IS DETERMINED THAT THE COURSE OF STUDY WILL BE OF BENEFIT TO THE APPLICANT AND/OR THE CAYMAN ISLANDS.

SUPPLEMENTARY:

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member say whether there was any application turned down, or an application for an accountant turned down?

MR. PRESIDENT: I did not hear the question, I am sorry. Could you repeat it...whether there was any application for....

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: For an accountant.

MR. PRESIDENT: For a.....

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: An accountant.

MR. PRESIDENT: I still did not hear, I am terribly sorry. An application for a.....I just did not hear the word, I am so sorry, could you....an application for...

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, what I am asking is whether there was any application for study abroad in the field of accountancy.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Mr. President, I am sure Sir, that if the application was turned down, it was turned down because they did not meet the criteria as laid down within the Law.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, that is the end of Question Time. But I think before inviting the Second Elected Member for West Bay to continue speaking during the Throne Speech Debate, it may be convenient if at this point we take our customary morning break, and I will therefore suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 11:15 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:43 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated.
Continuation of debate on the Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

CONTINUATION OF THE DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, yesterday when we took the adjournment I was just about finished dealing with the section in the Throne Speech dealing with the increase in crime, and the factors contributing to that increase. On going through the Annual Report of the Cayman Islands Police, it is alarming Sir, to see the increase in drugs in three years. It bespeaks of a nation in dire trouble, serious trouble.

In 1984 fines for drugs totalled $164,825. In 1985 $235,580 and in 1986 $240,134 for drugs. That is serious. But, what really bears out the seriousness Sir, is not so much the money collected that speaks for itself that there is an increase. However, when we look at the number of cases reported and dealt with, it makes me want to cry. The figures rose from 1978 in 1975 to 568 in 1986, an increase of 390 cases or 319 percent. That is serious Mr. President. It shows Mr. President an increase. I was speaking yesterday, giving the historical fact as I know it, and have seen it over the past fifteen to twenty years. When we see Mr. President, that we have risen from four cases in 1984 to 24 in 1985, and such a drastic increase from 1985 to 1986 of 165.

Mr. President when we look at the crimes which we can say are directly contributed because of drugs, you would see that theft had 416 crimes, and burglary 392. Detection for 1986, I cannot say was that good, and the clear up rate was worse, because for theft, 416 for 1986 we only had 139 detected, and the percentage cleared up for 1986, was 33 percent which is up on 1985, but still, it is not very good. I do not care who says it is good. They come here saying that because the detection rate is up, things are not so bad. It does not give that impression Mr. President, they do not even put it in this Report. It is a scandal on the country. But, it bears out what I have been saying and what I spent some time on yesterday afternoon, that building a jail and increasing the force is not even a good stopgap measure.

Mr. President, I am not going to belabour these points. I went through them in detail yesterday, but I will close on this section and say that in 1848 a Mr. Simon the Medical Officer for Health, from Manchester, who brought preventative medicine to that community, and abolished such things as smallpox, was asked to report to the cities fathers on the riots of young people in Manchester in 1848. He said that "society should not be too surprised if those whom it treats as outcasts eventually refuse to live by societies rules". This is exactly what is happening in this country today, after twenty years of yearly escalation in drug use. It is a scandal on past Governments, and Mr. President, so far it is a scandal on this Government. I ring no backing bells in putting blame where blame is. Yes, programmes are being laid in place, but I must emphasize as I said yesterday, let us get going with what we have planned, but let us put a little more into our plan. We put these programmes on the backburners and give them less money in the Budget.

We worry about the road from George Town to the Eastern Districts, and the Road from West Bay to George Town, when in fact and in truth, the danger faced on those roads and the death caused on those roads according to statistics is from drugs or the abuse of drugs. But we cannot put a crash programme on these planned social programmes which we are trying to get in place.

This country is in serious trouble, no matter how good the financial picture is. Again Mr. President, I see where further buildings will be constructed at Northward, and I hope that this is for teaching and not as an expansion of jail cells, in anticipation of more prisoners. Last year Mr. President, I brought a motion to this House, asking that the foreign prisoners be sent back to their respective countries. I was told that we had to wait on the United Kingdom Government, and as far as I can remember, a progress report was supposed to be made to this House, at each meeting, if my memory services me correctly, and this has not been done. But that again bears out what I was saying yesterday about us as ordinary Members of the House. However, in seeking the information, I understand that the United Kingdom has passed what the motion was asking for, and is now awaiting to extend it to the Territories. I trust that they will not take too long in extending this Treaty to us, because the cost is increasing to the country to keep the foreign prisoners in Northward Prison.

Mr. President, moving on, as the Throne Speech said, onto a brighter note. There is no man in this country today more happy than I, to see three of our young Caymanian lawyers working with the Government, and to know that soon we will have the first graduates from our Law School. What a great thing it is Sir, who would have thought we would see this day? There were many sceptics. I believe that those young people will do this country proud, and that they all will make their work for good in their country. I am trusting that the expatriate lawyers who have somehow taken some of them under their wings now, will do all they can to assist them, once they graduate. They must take them to their bosom and say to them that this land is your land, come, let us enjoy the fruits thereof together, so that one day graduates today, will be in the positions in these Islands to put their arms around another set of new graduates, and say come, let us work together, this land is our land.

I also hope to see from these young lawyers one day, our own Attorney General sitting on my side of the House. Mr. President, we have a young Attorney General in the House, I welcome him, and in him moving up, it has given other Caymanians a chance to move up, that is good thinking.

The promised Sir, to review the Caymanian Protection Law, and to bring an amendment to rectify certain serious anomalies in it, is welcomed with much relief. One situation now being experienced is where longtime residents are either married to Caymanians or staying abroad, are told that they have a short period to stay on the Island. I know Sir, that something is being done to remedy this anomaly in the current Law, and it will not be too long before it is rectified. However, when the amendment comes to the House, I would like, included in it, and if it is not done by amendment, I will still have my say, because I will put a Private Member's Motion here. I would like to see included in the amending Bill the section removed where the Governor can grant Caymanian Status, and for the Law to be able to withdraw Caymanian Status. I hope the Members of this House will be consulted before the amendments are made. We have a Board who is appointed by Government to say who gets Status, and who cannot get Status. We do not need anybody else doing it.

While I am dealing with this Sir, I must say that I am appalled at the number of people who come here on a permit for one thing, and end up doing another. I cannot see how, if anyone can come here as a dive master, and ends up a bartender. What is so bad about this type of situation is for the sake of an example, and the example I am giving you now Sir, happened at least in one establishment, but I imagine it happens a lot in other areas. At least at one establishment a Caymanian lady worked for six years as a bartender, she also acted as bar manager several times. The bar manager's post became vacant at one point and, someone as I have said, in the same situation, doing something else applied for the job and he got it, paying $2,000 per month plus his rent, and probably putting him up somewhere on the beach. But they could only see fit to pay the Caymanian girl $800.00 per month. The Caymanian girl applied for the post, but she was not even interviewed, yet they gave her a good report, they said she was so capable, so conscientious and doing a good job, but yet, when the push came for a decent salary, they would not even interview her. The Law needs to be looked at.

I cannot see how a qualified auto mechanic, because he is sick of the job, can leave and become something else and take away a job that definitely a local person could do. But these Sir, are the kinds of situation which exist that must be rectified, or else there is going to be a black spot on our stability.

Mr. President, I am not one for coming here and expounding on any situation, because of a situation that I find is affecting me, personally. But I do have a small business and it is not the only business of that kind on the Island, which is why I will say what I am about to say. When you find situations where the business that you are in, and that is in the maintenance service, when you find people having to be brought in on private establishments to do yard work, Mr. President, I cannot see how it is right. Any amount of grass that needs to be cut; any number of trees that need to be trimmed; any number of places that need to be cleaned you have got the service companies that can do it. There is no need for somebody working at one establishment to go to another establishment, and work for half of what I would be charging. I will leave it at that Sir, because I know you will hear that I am looking out for myself. But if I do not look out for myself, and everybody is looking out for theirs, I am going to be in a pretty mess.

Mr. President, finally we will have a National Museum, which I have given full support to. Mr. President, wither our cultural heritage. Some months ago Sir, we say a young person of this country put up an exhibition of things culturally Caymanian, and we saw some very good exhibits. We saw things which can be used in today's world such as straw brooms, straw fans and all the things that have been made, and can be made locally. Usually Sir, when we think of our cultural heritage, our Caymanian heritage, you here about an old mortar pistol, or the old cane crusher, or a wide rimmed hat, or a long dress, and yes, that is part of our heritage, a part that I am proud of, but is that all to it? There is a tendency in this country to confine matters of heritage and culture to things past, and they are trivialised, made a joke of. I personally feel, that this is a most dangerous practice. Yes, while the past forms are a very important part of any country, there is a sense in which current trends in development give cause for alarm. What we do today has a significant bearing on the kind of past which we observe tomorrow.

If, as a people, we neglect or trivialise the great struggles by our forefathers in the building of our country, then tomorrow our children will have even less reason to mark such occasions. I feel that we have developed a culture of consumerism, a culture of greed and selfishness, and a culture of foreign artifacts, a culture of foreignism. Listening to some people speak, sometimes you would believe they were born and bred in the United States. The biggest American that every jumped out of the water; afraid to speak their own Caymanian language, cannot understand it they say. I have heard it said that our people would not even eat the beans which grow in this country, but you put them in a red bean sack and they believe that it is God's gift to this earth.

It is the same Sir, and it is distressing to me, it is the same with our young people, or some of them who skim up their faces at a good fish stew. This is very disheartening Sir. I have two children, and you can believe they have enjoyed fish stew from the time they were very young. I told them that it was good for them. Yes Sir, this is very disheartening when that line of the popular calypso say, 'you put a West Indian in New York City and overnight him turn Yankee', it is in fact true. In fact, more true today than ever before. What it means Sir, is that more and more of our people are getting away from the way in which we were brought up, and believing that our salvation lies in everything that comes from outside.

Some of our very own people, look at them dancing on the dance floor, and you would swear that they had two left feet and a right one. You get out on the floor and try and dance a calypso, and they embarrass you. It is natural now to dance to the screaming American and English music. You might ask, what are you talking about cultural heritage? Many people are there who would not link such behavior with the strength, or the lack of it in our cultural heritage. But to me, there is a connection. In the end, if such a path is followed, our cultural style will become little more than an adopted subculture, an element of something from the outside. So, although that young girl's venture did not succeed, I congratulate her and her thinking, and hope that many other young people can and will think the same way she did in her endeavours.

I am proud to be a Caymanian Sir, very proud. I can not speak the beautiful Yankee English. I speak Caymanian English, and that is what I learnt in school. My English teacher Mr. President, at the Community College, when I attended evening classes, always told me saying "Bushy, you cannot speak good English, but you can sure write it".

Mr. President, Caymanians are becoming an endangered species. The well-talked about Economic Plan is bearing this out. Steps have to be taken to remedy that kind of situation. I am not overly nationalistic. Of course, any man with blood in his veins who does not have some feeling for his country, where his navel string was buried, more than that which he has for another country, is not a man, he is not even a good monkey. My ancestors, Mr. President, came from two directions on the globe. One was from the slave sector and one was from the white sector, one from Africa and one from Europe. Well, both of them had the strength to survive, that is why you see me here today. I am proud of that, I am a survivor too. So, whether we become an endangered species or not, this is going to be one Caymanian who is not going to be an endangered species, like me or hate me.

This here is my country, the country where I was born, the country of which I am proud regardless of the misgivings in this House. We have something to be proud of, or else they would not be flocking here and wanting to take it away, and telling you that you do not know what you are talking about, telling you that you must sit down, telling the Honourable First Elected Member that he is talking like me, they could not have been listening to him. They did not tell him that, they told somebody else that. I am ashamed of them, I do not believe that they are my friends at all, Sir.

Mr. President, the Speech mentions nothing about housing, but I see a large news report in the Compass of Monday last, telling us that the Housing Development Corporation has money, and that between 1985 and now, there have been thirty loans granted. Mr. President, I am not going to comment on it because I know nothing about who gets loans, but as far as I can understand, the Housing Development Corporation is for helping those people in the lower income bracket who cannot get loans from the commercial banks. My question is today, is it really playing that role? I really do not think so. Personal experience has given me some surface knowledge of the operation, and I do not think that given our historical experiences on home ownership and circumstances existing today, that the Housing Development Corporation is serving its purpose.

Mr. President, if a poor man starts to build a house, and it is estimated that the house upon completion will be valued at $50,000, although he is not going to put that into it, he is only going to put in maybe $10,000 to $15,000 with the help of his friends. But he needs as I have said, $15,000 to finish it. Why can he not borrow it from the Housing Development Corporation? Why must the Housing Development Corporation, an arm of Government set up to help these kinds of people, tell him "look your house is going to be valued at too much, we cannot lend you that kind of money", after struggling that upon completion it would be worth something? Why not? Rubbish, they are not helping anybody. Mr. President, there has been many a decent house built over the years by what you would call a poor man, that was counted as being too ambitious, and took several years to finish because he could not qualify for a loan from the commercial banks. Why, as I have said, given this, and this is something that we have been doing over the years from the time our grandparents went to sea and sent back their little shilling to buy a piece of lumber to build their house. Why, given this historical aspect of how Caymanians build their homes, why should he not be able to qualify through the Housing Development Corporation?

I have several cases, of people who are working and need a house, they are kicked from door to door but they cannot get one, why should this be in such a prosperous country as we proport to be, why? The Housing Development Corporation must be revamped and put in a situation where it can help our people. If we are serious about bringing those 'have-nots' to a level where they can hold up their heads. When a man has got to sleep in a four-by-four cottage with a wife and two children, or three children, what do you think is happening? Where do you think society is going? But nobody is paying me any mind, they are not even listening. The people who make $150 to $225 per week and need a shelter for their families, these are the people to whom we need to reach out to and must help.

I think we need to look seriously at the Housing Development Corporation. I see where in the Budget in November, we put in some $100,000 for housing. Exactly how much of this is going to be put on housing, real housing now, I do not know. I know one thing, I turned in a list a long time ago and they cannot say they do not have a list. We have got to get going, we have to move faster Mr. President.

As I said at the beginning of this debate, some things are moving in the right direction, and tourism is taking the lead. And in dealing with this subject now Mr. President, I intend to attach my remarks on the labour situation to it, because the two go together. Tourism is a very large employer, and besides that, the Member responsible for the two, will have a better time taking notes.

As I look back over the years at tourist arrivals for as far back as 1974, we have seen an increase each year. Contrary Mr. President, to what some people believe, this increase did not happen overnight, or did not happen by chance, it took many months in each year of burning the midnight oil to get where we are today. It does not start with any one Government, it started way back when. There are certain basic things that we have to do to continue getting our share of the tourism cake in this region. Services must be upgraded, costs have to be kept from a drastic escalation to be more in line with the quality of properties. And, when I say that prices and services must be kept in line with the quality of properties, I mean exactly that.

Mr. President, as you move around the country, you look at certain properties, and you find them in a very dilapidated state. I do not know how the tourists stayed in them when they go, and I know God has his hand on us, but he must have got all two, because we keep increasing. Something has to be done about certain properties in this country, it is ridiculous. It would seem Sir, that better management is needed of those properties, and I am trusting that when the Member brings his Bill to the House, it will tighten up those areas, and keep those people in line.

The entertainment side of tourism, Mr. President, must be upgraded. We are dealing with tourists, people who are looking for leisure. As far as the United States' market is concerned Sir, which gives us the greatest percentage of our visitors, I believe in reading and looking at other things in the Caribbean. I believe that much more growth is possible, and that we in the Cayman Islands have only begun to scratch the surface. This tourism industry is a very important one to me, not only because it is a very large national product, but because so many of my constituents depend upon it for their livelihood, and that is why I feel so strongly about certain activities in the industries.

West Bayers Mr. President, a large percentage of them work in that industry. They have sacrificed their families by working two shifts, and may be that is why West Bay got branded as 'the unruly republic'. I believe that my West Bay people have been sacrificed to tourism.

Mr. President, I spoke about entertainment just a while ago. Let us be realistic Sir, and accept the fact that the tourists will not spend the amount of money now required to travel from their homes to here, or any other destination, only to find nothing different from that which they left behind in New York, or Colorado or Texas, or wherever. I would like to see, and maybe it would help the atmosphere, Mr. President, around the dock, if we had a little combo playing some Island music at the dock when the cruise ships come in. I know other people have mooted this before, or at the airport for that matter, when we know we have charter groups.

You know, I can remember when this was done years ago, and it had a good effect. The tourists were dancing when they came, and crying when they were leaving. They came to hear some good West Indian music and to have a good time. Of course, those days are not like today, we are facing a different Cayman, but the music has not changed, and we in this country must maintain, as I said before, and develop our own culture and identify with it. I have always believed that we do not need Mr. President, to import some of the high cost bands which we import into this country to entertain our tourists. They can listen to these at home without the expense of travelling to Cayman. I am sure Sir, that our local entertainers are trying to do a good job, but they should not be encouraged to believe that they have to imitate the loud screaming American and English music, the tourists are not looking for that. The tourist is looking to hear good soca, jump up Island music.

While I am on this Mr. President, I support the theatre, the Harquail Theatre, I must say Sir, that this too can provide a form of entertainment for our tourists, but that too, should have more of an island fling. I like The Sound of Music too, I saw it when I was a child, but let us have something else in it. Yet they have been bringing in some good plays, I have enjoyed them. I hope to see some of Dr. Frank McField's plays, regardless of who likes them, he is a Caymanian playwright, and he has produced some good work, and we must encourage him. They tell us a little bit you know about our situation.

Sometime ago Mr. President, the entertainers in this country, or some, a young group, started up what was known as a Caribbean Cabaret, and it is a pity that it stopped, because this is the kind of entertainment that tourists expect to find when they come to a Caribbean country, and when they were in operation, that place used to be packed with tourists. This is the kind of indigenous talent that we need to encourage, and I hope I can get in contact with those people who stated Caribbean Cabaret because I certainly would do all in my power to help them start back up again, and stay together. Caymanians you see, Mr. President, are naturally good dancers, even though as I have said, some of them have got into the American swing. We are naturally good dancers, possessed of a good sense of rhythm that is probably unmatched in any of the developed countries from which our tourists come. Oh yes, some of them dance as if somebody is licking them in the backs of their legs with piece of yellow pine, but other than that, with a little effort and imagination we can develop enough local talent to satisfy our present tourism industry.

Mr. President, another observation on tourism, I try to keep a close watch on the average length of stay, because I believe that the average length of stay of tourists is an important statistic, and a good telling factor of the quality of people we are receiving. Now, I am no expert, I just try to keep up to date with things in the Caribbean area. Coupled with figures on total tourist arrivals, this statistic provides a better indication of the volume of tourism, than figures of tourist arrivals on their own. I believe that since 1984, during 1984 that is though, the average length of stay has had a decline, which means that our tourist are spending less time here, which also means that less money is going into the economy. We have to watch this and see that our marketing strategy is pulling in the people with money to spend. I am speaking Sir, from figures I have received to date, and I believe that the average length of stay has declined from what it was last year.

Now for the labour side of tourism. The last figure I have on the employment side is 1,264 persons in the industry, 86 percent of whom were Caymanian. That is not too bad a ratio, however, it is obvious, maybe I should rephrase my words and say, it is a good ratio given the circumstances in other areas. However, it is obvious with the coming on stream, of the two major hotels recently, that this figure will increase on the expatriate side, and it will be more evident when the Treasure Isle Resort's Food and Beverage Department gets going. I would venture to say from what I can understand on the situation, that the ratio will be in the region of 30 percent expatriate to 70 percent Caymanian, which is a decrease by 16 percent in the Caymanian ratio. I believe Sir, that if the two hotels had done a great amount of training in the period before they opened, as was mooted, the situation would be better.

The glaring thing about this situation is that they are saying that they are paying the foreign worker the same as the local. Let us say a cocktail waitress is in the $4.25 per hour bracket, local and foreign that is, and they will still say that the foreign employee is a specialist in that area, they would tell you that, but let us face the stark truth. If some of these people are so professional, why are they working here for $4.25 per hour? Any professional or semi-professional would be making $8.00 to $10.00 per hour. And I would venture to say that somebody is not telling the truth. The local employee is told to bear in mind the benefits of the job, which are probably medical insurance and vacation after a period of time with pay, and they still try and make him believe he is on a par with the foreign employee. But on a further examination of the situation Sir, we find that the foreign employee is getting enough to be able to live on the beach, that is a plus over the locals and has another plus in that, he is offered a free ticket back home for his vacation, and probably, he is schooling his child at this country's expense, or may be children. I know that I will be told that they have to pay, but there are other areas that I am talking about.

So, when the position of the foreign employee and the local employee is equated, even though they on the surface are getting the same hourly wage, you find that the foreign employee has a lot more going for him than that which the local has, and both are living in the same economy, paying the same for groceries and other commodities. Where is the social justice and equality? How can any person young or middle aged be inspired to do a job in such a situation? Mr. President, these are the kinds of examples that are potential destroyers of the industry. Great dissatisfaction can and will destroy. Mr. President, I believe in training, and I would hope that within a fair period of time, this Caymanian employment ratio will be up again, because in fairness to the country what should be happening now is that a genuine intensive in-house training programme should be going on. And along with this genuine in-house training programme, and I am dealing with the hotels now, Government must put greater emphasis, a crash programme if necessary, in the Hotel Training School so that we can close this gap between the foreign and local employment ratio.

One might notice Sir that I have been stressing the word 'genuine' as far as training goes; it is because some employers in certain places have the happy knack of saying 'look we cannot teach him anything, we cannot teach her anything' and the result is that the poor person being trained is discouraged, insulted and leaves the job, thereby enabling a further chance for the foreign employee to remain in a job, and the foreign employee and employer knows this and so we find much collaboration between the two - do not think that it is not happening, it is happening and nobody can make me believe differently. Steps must be taken to remedy this situation. I remember His Excellency at last year's graduation ceremony, expounding to the graduating class, the merits of joining the tourist industry, a good speech it was too, I enjoyed it. But how can you motivate anyone, young or middle aged to go into these places, or any other job under such circumstances. What is happening is that our young people are disillusioned and no wonder they turn to drugs, no wonder you find the kind of Annual Report as has been given us showing an increase in drugs - it did not happen over night you know. What is happening now, is that you have people on the floor of this House who will say so, you had people before who did not care. So what is happening now is nothing really new. The only thing now is that it has compounded itself, and because you hear a great hue and cry, they get up and say 'you see what is happening', it is nothing new. Ten or fifteen years maybe, it has been going on, on a small scale at first, then a little larger, and then a little larger, and then what we have today.

We badly need the energies of our young people, and we must try to provide the country with the tools and the kind of environment for developing a prosperous and balanced society. No matter what is done to invite or induce industry to come to this country, if the proper climate is not set, chaos will develop, and that is what is happening now. Some people might not like facing the truth, but that is what it is, the truth.

MR. PRESIDENT:

(INAUDIBLE)

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

I could go on Sir, I do not like to be stopped in my stride, I am telling you the truth.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I realize you have not finished your speech, you have got another two and a bit hours to go by my reckoning, but I took it that you had reached a convenient break, and since it is about lunchtime, I will suspend proceedings until approximately two fifteen.

AT 12:41 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:20 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, when we took the lunch break I was dealing with the labour sector, and it is my belief, and I would advocate that we devise an apprenticeship system, properly controlled by the Board. Surely, I recognize the need for outside help, there is some great difficulty in some areas of a shortage of skills, and because of this, work permits must be given to people with certain expertise and know-how. But this has got to a situation where it is being abused, and is one area that must be tightened up. The advertisement of jobs is another area where there is abuse.

One example Mr. President, and a case in point that I have is a complaint from someone in my constituency, who saw this advertisement in a paper which said "A Mate - Deck hand" and here is what they needed him to do, boat cleaning, maintenance and repairs of a 65 foot catamaran, must have ten years of sailing experience, be able to lead snorkeling groups, entertain and communicate well with guests, long but flexible hours. A man Mr. President, whom I personally know to have at least 15 years expertise and know-how, applied for that position, but was turned down. They had only advertised it because it is a must by law. The truth of the matter is that they already had someone lined up to take the job, and no matter how much experience that local chap had, he would not have gotten the job.

This is happening in too many instances. I believe that it must be set down in principle and backed by law, that where employers give an undertaking that they need to fill a post, they must now begin to give a commitment that training will take place so that the job which the individual holds, can be taken by a local in a year or two. That period would be allowed for the person to stay, but training carried on in the same period. And they should be able to satisfy the Caymanian Protection Board that their training programme is taking place, and will be completed within the time stated. The Board I feel, should also satisfy itself that a reasonable salary is paid to the trainee, so he would not get disillusioned because of pressures and need of money throughout his training period. As I have said, I think it is time now in this country that we set up this apprenticeship system.

Mr. President, I am not saying, and I do not want anybody to get the wrong impression, I am not saying that the young people in this country are angels, far be it from that. Where they are wrong, they are wrong, but when it comes to these situations, we have to try and protect them. One disillusionment leads to another. The use of drugs as I have said, might not be because of peer pressure, it could be for many other reasons such as broken homes, disillusionment on the job, frustration, working under somebody else, and having to train them. These are the things that I see happening. I am pointing no finger at anybody, far be it from that Sir, I am only stating the position I see.

Mr. President, I know that I am counted as a radical, because I stand up for the labouring man and woman in this country, but I am not now advocating anything that would retard the progress of any business institution in this country. If they have to get a permit for certain expertise, they should get it. I support that. But, I am saying that in an effort to encourage the Caymanianization in employment, those permits must be granted on certain conditions, that Caymanians would be assigned to understudy the foreign employee, if the Caymanian wants to, with a view to succeeding them at the end of the stipulated period. This is something that must be done. It must be done and it can be done.

Mr. President, there seems to be still quite a bit of opposition to the Labour Law, from some employers in this country. I recently received a letter personally, in the mail from one Mr. Tibbetts in the Brac, the same letter that was sent to the Labour Committee. I guess I it was sent to me because I was the mover of the motion which brought about that Committee. We are still hearing quite a few cries of 'communism and socialism' from the parasites, and this particular hypocrite seems to think that employees should not be called employees, but servants. Well, this particular person would seem to be in favour with our current piece of legislation, which governs labour in a very limited way - The Masters and Servants Law, which is 145 years old, and has no bearing whatsoever, on the situation which exists in the country. The very name is obnoxious, and smacks of the post-slavery period, and is inconsistent as far as I am concerned, with the idea of a society based on equality. But all like him do not know that.

Some people could not be equal if you shared them in two. But perhaps, that person who wrote that letter to me, and then sent a copy to the Committee, believes that because he is in a favoured position and is perhaps counted as part of the glorified establishment in this country, that no employee should have any rights, that they must be fired without reason, and that the employer is never wrong. Well, that may have been the case in the days of slavery, and perhaps he is a good slave master. But this is a different time, a different generation, and different representatives of the people. He, the likes of him and his cohorts will not have their way.

In dealing with the labour situation, I want to carry on with a few observations about attitudes, which I believe might be described as the human equation in the development of a country. They would not understand that either. They know only two things, 'come work for me and I will give you a little salary' that is all they know. And if I say you must come to work naked, you must come, and if I tell you to jump off the housetop you must jump off. You must not ask any questions - who do they think they are, a bunch of hypocrites. That is the best name that I could find for them, Sir. I am going to pinch some toes now too, but I am not related to Donald Chisholm though, you know.

I believe we will all readily agree and appreciate, and it is no fun and games that no plan for development is going to succeed unless that plan comes within the capacity to harness the will and cooperation of the workers in this country as a whole. There are many levels at which the attitude of a worker is part and parcel of the outcome of the development process of a country. We must see it, and it must be taken into primary consideration. And, I will say it today, what I said before, and it is this, it is the whole question of what is our basic concept about the role of the employee, or worker in Cayman, and whether his position is acceptable and desirable at this time. Let us say we have full employment, that is a fact, let us put that aside, I do not think anybody is going to dispute that; anybody who wants to work can find some work.

The Member yesterday was talking about square pegs in round holes, well there is a lot of that. Let us say we have full employment, I am not going to deal with it. I am going to deal with productivity. And you know Mr. President, people and being a small employer myself, have a tendency to preach productivity to the worker. You here all sorts of people preaching to the worker to work harder, and to do this and to do the other, and we hear it in this House and in Committee on the Labour Bill. But no one, they are not prepared Sir, to create in our system of law in this country, a situation where the worker can feel that he has a fully respected and protected position in our society. This society never at any stage, except for the little Masters and servants Law 140 years ago, declared through its system of law that there is a basic minimum place that the worker should occupy in this country. And so, what happens? The worker in this country feel left out. You do not know, Members in this House do not know, few of us know because we go out on the job sites. It is not at cocktail parties that we hear this sort of thing at, Sir, job sites, on the street, by the bar.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Seaview.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

No, you do not hear it up there because there is a different breed up there.

I am talking about a man who cannot take care of himself, that is the man I am talking about right now.

The worker feels left out, and you can preach all you want to about productivity and the good of the country, and this, that and the other thing. It is good, and I agree with it. Any chance I get I talk to those types of people, and try and tell them "look, you know this is ours", but the worker does not care, he really does not care, because he says to himself, "where is the protection for my family, if I fall off this house top today and cannot walk for two years?" And I have another case in point, a worker fell off the roof of a building, today he cannot walk, he cannot work and he ends up on crutches - what is his plight? He has $400.00 a month, rent, food bill to pay, light bill to pay and children going to school. His wife is only making $150.00 per week, but above all of this, he does not have his health. He does not even own his own house, how will he ever own it in his condition? He is not going to get it from the Housing Development Corporation, yet they cannot support this Labour Law, they are scared. What are they scared of? They are scared of themselves that is who they are scared of.

What do you think that man's position in life is? What do you think other workers feel when they see and hear his story? You know what they tell you, they say, look I go out there in front of a cement mixer for $5.00 an hour, and then if anything happened to me nobody would take care of me, no man, I am going to sit down at home first, that is the attitude.

I do not know what is wrong with this country Mr. President, I talked about greed just now, that is part of it, and yet Sir, there is this sturdy conservatism that besets some who govern, and those who count themselves part of the glorified establishment, and feel they are threatened, and say no to a Labour Law, which is only asking for the minimum basic requirements when it comes to protection for the worker in this colony. Yet, the hypocrites have the nerve to preach productivity. I think it is a scandal, shame on them, they should hang their heads in shame, they should be flogged and tared. That is how I feel about them. I want to live, you want to live too, and that is the only way we Caymanians can survive. You want to live well, I need to live well. Your child wants a new dress, I need to be able to give my child the same thing. When that is not happening, is when we have got trouble, they do not know that. They talk about other Caribbean countries, well Mr. President, those are the situations that cause it, that cause them to go bad, but they are not taking an example from that, greed.

Mr. President, I have said these things before, and I hope they are not lost in time, but truth has a durability of its own, and I think there is a profound truth involved in this whole question. Because another thing I would like to stress is that this country needs the energy of its people as one of the most desperate priorities, because I believe that any development will make or break itself on the question of worker attitudes in this country. You can create attitudes by preaching to people. We must preach from a platform that manifests justice and when that is done, people will begin to listen. Let us show the worker that we have his interests at heart, by giving him the basic minimum protection. If we protect him we are giving his family some insurance, that is what we are doing.

Let us look Mr. President, for a minute at the Workmen's Compensation Law of this country, and see exactly how the sentiments expressed in this Law are conducive to a just society, personally, I think it is a scandal again.

The Workmen's Compensation Law, 1964, looking at the Law which is 23 years old now, I was nine when they brought this Bill into force, 2nd day of January, 1965, I would have been ten years old. When you look at this Law Mr. President, and I feel strongly about these kinds of things, the first observance is that it is limited to workmen earning £750 per year. There is even no such man in Cayman today, so it has no relevance whatsoever to the working man. It is of no use to him, no protection for him. Section 5 of the amendment to the Law, Section 5(1)(a) says that where death results from an injury, the maximum compensation is £750 pounds. Can you imagine that? We have got some very big insurance people in this House, they know what I am talking about. Those who do not own the companies, sell the insurance. And in Section 5(1)(b) the compensation for someone who gets damaged on a job and is crippled for life, total disability, he could only get £1,000 pounds under the Law in any Court, he could not even sue for more. Where would this leave him Mr. President? There is a limitation under Section 12 where claims of compensation must be made within six months of the date of the accident. This period is definitely too short.

Let us say for example, a man is injured, and that injury requires (a) treatment by specialists abroad and (b), treatment over an extended period. He would be completely out of luck, sad to say, because the limitation says six months to make a claim. As everyone in this House can see, and the whole country can see, this Law is worthless, and has no bearing, or pertinence on matters existing in this country, there are many deficiencies in it and it needs to be replaced, and I would ask those responsible to take note.

I will continue Mr. President, to give you a brief overview of some of the other Laws that exist in governing labour, showing their inadequacy, hoping that it will help to convince those hypocrites out in this country who are against a new Labour Law. The Law which is used for governance of disputes between employer and employee is the Masters and Servants Law. As I have said before, its very name is out of place, and its contents has no pertinence in today's situation. I will give you one example of a situation with which I had to deal last week - a dispute between employer and two employees. Here we had two long-serving maids, one with eight years service under four managers, and the other with five years service under one manager, with the best of recommendations from all the managers, no faults whatsoever, always on time, no backchatting, helps direct the other maids, honest, hardworking, clean, these are letter which I received from the previous manager. Then one new manager comes along and in one and a half months all that has changed - one and a half months. The manager turned all that round to say that they are lazy, backchatting. The only thing they did not say about them was that they were thieves, he did not say they were ladies.

The new manager is really rough and out of place, and one might be tempted to ask how McKeeva knows this. Well, I have had to listen to the complaints from practically the first month he arrived there, and unknown to the new manager and the two ladies, I went to the property and I witnessed that man telling those two decent women about their private parts. That is a man now, dealing with two women. He eventually fired them and gave them two weeks salary. I called him up before I spoke to the Labour Board and asked him why. Did they steal? No. Did they stop doing their work? No. Were they punctual? Yes. "Then what gave you cause to fire them?" "They backchatted me", that was his answer. Yes, I heard the conversation, they questioned him, they did not backchat him, and I am glad that I went. May be they would have got me for trespassing if they had known. But I am glad I went to that compound that afternoon. They questioned him after his out of place reference to their private parts, but there was no great backchatting. They should not have questioned him, they should have hauled back with all their might and struck him right in his mouth.

You do not know how dirty some of these people are, Mr. President. I know them, you can tell them the minute they step off. Well, we had a meeting with the Labour Board and the Assistant Principal Secretary who I must say, did their best to get their jobs back, and they told the man after all the evidence was taken, they did not want me in the meeting either, I insisted that I should be there. I am a representative of the people, and there was no reason why I should not have been there. And, anytime I get complaints like that, I am going to insist that I stick with my people. And they told the man, the Labour Board Director and the Assistant Principal Secretary that they felt that the evidence warranted the two ladies getting back their jobs. But the manager was laughing, he would have none of it, and he knew that we had no law to back us, he knew it. He said that they would not get their jobs back from him. He sat and he lied, while those two women were nearly in tears because they needed their jobs. Those are the kind of things that are hurting me in this country, when I have to go to meetings and see some 'fat slob' take advantage of two decent women, who have worked hard in this country, and he can just come here and do that kind of thing. No, Mr. President, it is time now that we do something about this, and stop lip-servicing it.

The women wanted their jobs because they were comfortable in it for eight years, they knew all the management, all the people who came year after year, the surroundings were good for them nonsense. But I was glad I was at that meeting, and any time my constituents Mr. President, are in genuine trouble and are right, I am going to back them.

Mr. President, I will say publicly what I told the Member responsible for this Labour Bill, that I have received so much aggravation about it, and I felt so hurt that I was prepared to forget about it - let come what may. But no you do not, you do not kill me that easily....

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

You are going to fight them all the way.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

I am more convinced today than every before, that we need labour legislation, regardless of who likes it in this House, or outside. This Government must stop being run by big business. The people elected us, we promised them this, we never heard all these 'nancy' stories when we were out there campaigning, telling the people we were going to do this, and the next thing, and we are going to take four years to bring it. We do not need five years to bring labour legislation, we have a draft, take out the bad parts, leave in the good parts and put it into force, and let them battle it out come 1988. They are no bigger than the people. I am more convinced that we need labour legislation, and that law must provide guarantees against victimization.

A fair law should provide for reasonable security, the reinstallments of wrongfully dismissed persons, and adequate notice periods in cases of termination. It should provide also for adequate vacation and sick leave, and also provide for adequate severance pay. That severance pay money is new and that is reflected in the times and economy of the Cayman Islands today, and this is all that we have in this labour legislation draft Bill which we have. What is so communistic about it, why should we not have a law that provides for these things? What would be communistic about those things, and what would be anti-discriminative about them - who are we discriminating against? The people who have had it good in this country, people that when they had stores and went out to sea and came back and never had anything, that is what they want to have continued in this country? You tell Mr. Bernard Tibbetts, and you tell my friends in the Young Business Men's Association, you tell Suzie Bergstrom and the Chamber of Commerce that we are going to get a Labour Law, a law that is fair to everyone in this country. And the only reason those hypocrites do not want a law is because they want to carry on as some of them have been doing, treating good, honest ladies like dogs, - not while I am a Member of this House, not while I am a Member of this House.

If we do not get the law, organization work both ways, everyone of those who opposes labour legislation has some kind of protection, everyone of them, they have some kind of lobbying group or organization. Either we get a law with the basic minimum requirements for our developing society, or we are going to organize, let that be a warning bell in this House this afternoon. And if they think that I do not have the support, let them fool with me. The working man in this country backs McKeeva Bush because I back them, that is no idle threat. I know what support I have. One thing for certain, I promised this country, and I give notice of it now, because there is a certain element of unnecessary, unreasonable and unfair discrimination and victimization over jobs, I will move a Private Member's Motion which has been tabled for the next sitting. I will read it, and I hope in my minds eye this will help to address the situation, but I will read it because I am giving notice of it, I have already a seconder!

"WHEREAS the Cayman Islands Constitution Order, 1972 contains no provision for the protection of fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual, based on the universal declaration of human rights, as adopted by the United Nations!

AND WHEREAS to remind Government and govern alike of the rights and freedoms which must be observed in a democratic country, such a declaration should be made;

BE IT RESOLVED that a protection of fundamental rights and freedoms of the individual chapter be imbedded in, and made part of the Cayman Islands Constitution Order, 1972."

Now you can say, I wonder what he is talking about. The people know what I am talking about. I know what I am talking about too. I am moving that motion regardless, it can be defeated, but it is needed and I repeat why it is needed. It is needed today because there is a strong element of unnecessary, unreasonable and unfair victimization and discrimination in jobs in this country. That is why it is needed. I might shout because I am a little hot under the collar here now, but it is the truth.

This country cannot carry on like this - you want, I want too. Your baby is getting milk, my baby wants milk too. I have got a seconder. The Member for North Side always seconds my motions.

Mr. President.....I do not want to deal with that now, you are not going to make me loose my trend here this afternoon, I still have got at least another hour left.

Mr. President, because I am dealing with what I consider is a social aspect of this country, at this point I would say....Oh, the Member has gone, I was coming to him you know! At this point I would say, he knows it too....

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

He smelt the rat.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

I would like to see the Social Security Scheme in place by Government by September of this year. This too, is another piece of social legislation that the parasites do not want. Some of the main people who oppose, are again, employers and members of the glorified establishment who have yet to establish some kind of security at retirement age for some of their workers, although they have been coining in the money over the years. It all goes back to what I am talking about. If you live, I want to live too, but they do not see it that way. You know Mr. President, I well remember the debate on my motion that will bring birth to the Social Security Scheme, I hope. I well remember that debate, I do not think some people have forgiven me for it yet, but I gave them a challenge and I stand this afternoon and say what I said then. If they moved the parliamentary amendment to the Parliamentary Pension Scheme, I was moving a motion for a Social Security Scheme, and that is what I did. I remember, I was told by one of the Members that I should stop being a Robin Hood, robbing the rich to give to the poor. Well Mr. President, I never ever did proport to be a Robin Hood, but some people can stand a Robin Hood, this is how some people look at it. But the Holy Bible tells us 'not to muzzle the ox that treadeth the corn'. And Mr. President, the ox in olden days was a major source of power, and for the ox to perform properly and do his job well, he needed to be fed and his food came from the corn he was treading.

The same is true about our Social Security Scheme and about a Labour Law. The worker who produces the income for industry, is entitled to a fair share for his efforts because without him there would be no industry, without him there would be no profits. Of course, without industry he might not be existing either, which is why I am saying that the two must go together and share this little Cayman for all of us, not just for some. He is entitled to be able to feed his family and to be able to live in dignity at retirement age, no matter how humble his position. The critics Mr. President, who oppose Social Security say that the Government should not do it, and that most countries are trying to phase out social Security. I was given an example that the United States was one country and England was another that was trying to phase out social security....

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

That is hogwash.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

And, Mr. President that was an argument from one of the lobbyists trying to tell me that we do not need social security. I have a lot of respect for the man you know, but you know what he is telling us, Government should not do it, we are going to do it, we are going to do it. That will be the day. I reckon the poor people will live then, that will be the day. But, to prove my point about social security and welfare services in the world today, I want to quote some of what is contained in this Britannia World Data 1986 Annual Book. I just received it in the mail last week. It says that, 'in the United Kingdom where Government proposals appear to be inspired primarily by the ideological considerations, measures aimed at reforming the social security system met stiff opposition', and it says that 'some countries manage to improve their systems'. It goes on to say that, 'in the United Kingdom a Government Review of Social Security declared that the system had lost its way, and proposed the phasing out of certain state earning-related pension schemes'. They said that 'the proposal elicited an overwhelming hostile reaction, not only from the trade unions and pressure groups, but also from the Confederation of British Industry whose members believed that it would increase total employment costs and create instability in the system. As a result the Government backed down on its abolition proposal, while leaving the way open for some cost cutting modifications'. But more to the point, it says further on in the article that, "the old programme for the United States Spotlight in 1985 was the social security, which celebrated its 50th anniversary in a solid, financial and political shape. Total income for the year for the social system was expected to be US$199.5 billion with disbursements" that is, benefit payments and administrative costs, "of US$193.2 billion, and after years of concern over the future, the system was said to be fiscally sound for at least the next half century, and according to census bureau estimates, beneficiaries would more than double by the year 2035 from 36,683.00 in 1984 to 79,843.00 and disbursements were expected to increase 25 fold to more than US$5.0 trillion, however assets were also expected to soar during those 50 years from US$35.6 billion to US$11.0 trillion".

The figures are so large I do not know if I am correct in this, but they say it in the book, and they say that 'although critics claim that this projection was far too optimistic', well that is the same thing that critics here are saying - we do not know what we are saying, they know what they are saying, 'social security beneficiaries receive a 3.1 percent cost of living increase as of January 3rd, 1986, raising the monthly benefit from US$464.00 to US$478.00 for the average retired worker, and from US$788.00 to US$812.00 for the average couple'.

The United States Social Security System is in good shape because President Reagan took care of it, and that is what we are here to do with ours. These people here who are telling you that we do not know what we are talking about, all they are looking at is money for themselves, greed again, that is all. I must trust my money to them, and cannot trust my money to Government - no man. No matter how bad that Government is, we are always going to have a Government, but some of those companies we do not know about them. We do not know anything about their management skills. I trust that whichever Government, although I would fight some of them, it is they who should run it. And we need to provide this for our people - do not talk rubbish. These are good statistics, having not come from some former time book, very current, very up to date, and people believe it, it is not part of some of the stuff they bring here. So the critics must go up and search for more ammunition now, because what I have just given them are factual reports.

Our society is by far second to none in the Caribbean when it comes to wealth. It did not get this way over night, I know that and people had to work hard, those that had the money, they had to work hard to get it, I believe that, but the man working for them now has to work hard, he has got to work hard too. So, what we must do is to help him when it comes to the time when he cannot work any more. It is time that the people, the ox, gets something out of it, and the ox I am thinking of are all those Caymanian workers, working, working, working over the years and at the end of the day have nothing to fall back on. When they leave the job at the end of the month, see them here, holding their hand behind their backs, out through the door you go, you got your pay. Do not tell me about it, I see them, I am not blind I know what is going on in this country. You might not like me but, I know what is going on. Oh they are going to hear me for another eighteen months.

Must we deny our people the basic security? No Mr. President, we should not, no. I know that there is some fear amongst the privileged members of society who feel threatened by change. They feel their economic and social status is being challenged, but nobody wants their social status. All our people want is to have a share in this society, they seek social justice and it is a goal for all of us as Members of this Honourable House to seek if social stability is to be preserved. If you leave it out, we are goners. I will end my remarks on that Mr. President, but as I tell them, there is no backing down now. A Social Security Scheme must come, and Labour Legislation must come, and it must come this 1987, in the third year of our reign as the Government.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Perhaps if the Member has finished with that subject, we can take a break now, and he can resume after about fifteen minutes. I will suspend proceedings for approximately that long.

AT 3:15 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:48 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, when we took the afternoon break, I was just about ready to finish, but I am coming back. I have found another one of my notes here, and this is just an observation concerning the unsightly barriers around the light poles in the Prospect area. I understand that they are going to put up the same unsightly barriers on the West Bay Road, that is CUC. Mr. President, I do not know who gave these people permission to put those barriers up. I do know that in the states as far as I can understand, there is a special barrier which can be put around a pole, I do not know why they elected to do this particular thing, and I maintain that if they are going to put up barriers on the West Bay Road, let them put up proper roadside barriers. If they want to protect their poles they have to put up barriers all along the side of the road. I do not think that what they are doing in Prospect is a good thing. They are putting some tyres around them, to put them on the West Bay Road in a highly developed tourist area, would be very unsightly.

Mr. President, I have a few observations on my district of West Bay. Mr. President, last year Finance Committee took practically all the road money and gave the Eastern District a road programme. I should say that their excuse, although I did not support it, was a fair one, the road is in bad condition and needs to be straightened properly, not that I feel though, that that is going to stop the accidents up there. Speed and drug usage and abuse is what was causing those accidents, the majority of them, and we have to tackle that first. But as I have said, I saw what they were talking about, although I did not support it. But Mr. President, I along with my two colleagues, put in a list for road work in West Bay, amounting to over US$200,000. I am hoping Sir, that the Member will find it in his heart to put back some of that road money out of the surplus that they are bragging about.

Mr. President, the site in West Bay has been cleared at long last now, for the public Fire Station. This is something that was promised for a long, long time ago, I am glad it is finally coming to fruition.

The ramp, although there is some criticism of it, it is finished, it can be used. I do not agree with everything about it, but everybody knows that I do not have a say in matters any how! But in any event it is usable and I think in the end it is going to be a good addition for the people of West Bay.

Mr. President, we have a draft Economic Development Plan telling us about our projected expenditure. I am trusting that the Members responsible will bear in mind the needs of West Bay, being such a very large district. The social amenities are needed there, we need a Civic Centre, and it is really needed. It has been borne out on many occasions, but especially each year at school closing ceremonies of the public school, they have nowhere to go, they have to use the Town Hall, and it is not properly fitted out for the school children. So I am hoping that the Member is taking notes, and will tell us that he hopes that by August of next year this Civic Centre might be finished.

The Finance Committee gave me, and I am saying 'me' because I put the motion through, $20,000 for a park.....you did not vote for it, so keep your mouth shut now.

We have raised some money ourselves, that is the West Bay Progressive Youth Club which is working in conjunction with myself, and we hope to get other clubs down there involved. We are going through an exercise now with the 40 acres of land that we have, getting proper plans so that we will not be rushing here, there and everywhere, but we will be guided by a proper plan, I support that. But, Government must not get forget its priorities. These are the things that matter, that people look at, that people need. If you do not satisfy them with those things, you are not coming back here, that is for certain.

Mr. President, there is not much more that I can ask for for West Bay for this year. Or perhaps there is a lot more, but if I can get some of those things done I will be satisfied to an extent.

Mr. President, in closing, I should say that this has been a gruelling debate for me. But, I urge Members of this House, let us unite together to build a society in which all our people shall have equal rights and equal opportunities. Let us unite to build a society in which all of us can live together in harmony with one another, without any large degree of suffering; without injustice; free from exploitation and which all of us, rich man, poor man, middle man, brown man, yellow man, black man, the religious man or whatever persuasion you like, all of us can enjoy a gradually increasing basic level of material welfare before anyone lives in complete luxury. This is all I am asking for our people. As for me Mr. President, it will always be land of my birth, I pledge to Thee, loyal and faithful, true to be.

Thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member of Executive Council.

The Honourable Third Elected

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I would like to congratulate and thank you for an inspiring, concise and informative Throne Speech. It demonstrates quite clearly that our country is stable, progressive and prosperous with realistic goals and plans for the coming year. Inspiring, because it predicts a bright future and a period of prosperity for our Islands. Concise, because you have cleverly used the art of putting much detail in so few words, and informative, because you have clearly explained everything. I believe Mr. President, that this will make your fifth Throne Speech since you arrived here in 1982.

In the debate that followed your first Throne Speech, I wished you a successful and rewarding term of office here. I am pleased that it has been successful, and I hope that you have found it rewarding. You have worked long and hard, and have helped our Islands to grow from strength to strength.

In my opinion, the most memorable occasion during your term of office was the visit of Her Majesty the Queen and Prince Philip. Perhaps, the most momentous and historic occasion our country has ever experienced, and the success of their visit was due in no small part, to your efforts and attention to detail. You, and your good wife did our Islands proud.

Cayman is indeed the gem of the Caribbean, and we have much to thank God for. We are enjoying successes in almost every area, and our policies are bearing fruit. The revenue of our Island is up, and we passed the biggest Budget ever last year. We have put $2.0 million back into reserves out of the 1986 surplus of approximately $3.0 million. Tourism is up, employment is up, land sales have increased, imports passing through the port in 1986 have increased by 11.4 percent over the 1985 imports. Banks continue to increase in size and number, the latest count brings the total to 503 banks. The insurance industry is steadily growing and has brought the Islands to a high place in the world of offshore insurance.

It is important that we keep our islands financially independent so that we can determine and control our economic development without having to abide by the dictates of others. Furthermore, it ensures our free democratic way of life which many small countries have lost. Few if any of the other countries in the world, are in so enviable a financial position, and it is our duty to maintain the stability of our Islands and not squander our children's heritage by spending more than our country can afford. We know of other countries around us which were once prosperous, and now cannot pay their debts and have to plead with the bigger and more affluent countries to help them keep afloat. While they are suffering great hardships, we continue to sustain our economic growth year after year. However, we must never take it for granted that Cayman will always be prosperous as it is today. Our prosperity did not come by accident. Our forefathers, through perseverance and determination, made great sacrifices, suffered untold hardship and deprivation to help build this country up to where it is today.

We must never become complacent and take our heritage for granted. We have to do our part to make Cayman a better place for our children and the generations to follow. This can only be done through hard, honest work, and sacrifices on our part. It is our duty to set a good example for our children by showing them that they must live upright, honest lives, and avoid the temptation of making easy money which always leads to disaster. If we follow our Christian teachings we cannot go wrong. We may experience hard and trying times, but with God on our side, we have nothing to fear, he will see us through.

All these positive things however do not negate the worrying problem of drug abuse which, if not checked, will undo everything that we have worked for so hard. The Government will take every step necessary to reduce this drug epidemic in our society. However, Government cannot do it alone, and I appeal to the people in our beloved Islands, to join hands with us and help us rid our Islands of this destructive plague while we still have time.

Our Police Department is continually being upgraded to cope with the crime in our society, which continues to increase as a result of drugs. We must play our part by supporting and encouraging our Police Force at all times.

One Member has called on the Government to move faster, and faster, and faster to solve the countries many problems. Mr. President, mere words cannot cure our problems, nor can Government do it alone. The fate of this country lies in the hands of its people. The people of a country can either make or break it, and until such times as they are prepared to play their part to rid this country of the many ills that beset it, nothing worthwhile can ever be achieved.

The abuse of drugs is a root cause of most of our problems. The people know who the drug dealers and pushers are, and it is their responsibility to help save our country from destruction by cooperating with the authorities and take a keen interest in drug prevention. Parents need to educate themselves about drugs, what to look for, how to get help, how to talk to their children about the dangers of drugs, etcetera. I am sure there are very few families that have not in some way been touched by the problem, and we need to show more compassion for those who profit by it, and for the addicts and their families who suffer. (See Member's statement in the Hansard of 17th February correcting this statement.)

Mr. President, we have a problem where we are at the moment picking the leaves off the tree.

The only way Mr. President, to root out this evil is to pull up the tree by its roots. To those who say that Government must do something, The Church must do something, the service clubs must do something. I pose the question to them, what are you doing?

The signing of the Narcotic Agreement in 1984 and the signing of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty in 1986 have been giant steps forward in combatting drug trafficking. We have witnessed the departure of several dubious companies and people from our shores, who at one time, were considered respectable and upright. Mr. President, we need to take more steps now to clean up our Islands, or we will in a short time loose what ground we have gained. It has been said that our people like to gossip and spread rumours, stories that cannot be substantiated. I accept that this is partially true. However, Mr. President, where there is smoke there is fire, and let us not turn our backs on the smoke, and later have the fire consume us. I have reason to believe that there is a lot of truth to some of the rumours.

We are a small country with a small population, and no one can conceal anything for very long. We see some of our fellow men and women who hitherto had to struggle to make ends meet, now living a life that we know is not in keeping with the income they earn from their jobs. There is no need to identify these people, they have shown, and are showing evidence of their ill gotten gains day after day, and I would like to warn them that crime does not pay, and sooner or later their deeds will catch up with them. They may be popular now, but when things take a turn for the worst, they may not only loose their friends and expensive life-style, they may also loose their lives, I have seen it happen. The laundering of cash is fast disappearing, but questionable money is still being brought in in the form of merchandise and machinery imported and disposed of in our Islands. This is another new problem which Government has to tackle.

Government Information Service
- I would like to commend the Government Information Service for the excellent job they are doing in keeping our people informed. They can be relied on for straightforward dependably news releases which is what the public needs to hear.

On the 14th March, 1985 the Legislative Assembly resolved that Government prepare a Five-Year Economic Development Plan. This Plan should have been laid on the Table during 1986, but it was an enormous task which took more time than was anticipated. It involved a considerable amount of research, analysis, discussion and development in all branches and at all levels of Government. The Plan is neither socialistic nor communistic, it is straightforward, realistic and challenging as it identifies the many and varied areas that need to be given priority to meet the needs of our country. I believe that the Draft Plan which is to establish the social, educational, medical, economic and all other needs of the country has achieved its goal, and when all Members of this Honourable House have had the opportunity to study it, I believe they will also be satisfied. The Economic Plan is the most detailed and comprehensive look that any Government has ever given to the future of our Islands.

The Roads Law - Mr. President,
I would like to mention that a Bill to amend the Roads Law, should be introduced at the April, 1987 meeting of this Honourable House. A Bill to amend and replace The Traffic Law should also be ready before the second half of 1987.

Mr. President, I will now confine the rest of my contribution to the debate, to subjects relating to my Portfolio, and try to be as brief as possible.

Cayman Brac and Little Cayman -
the year 1986 was another lean year for the two Sister Islands, as there was little or no economic activity by the private sector until the fourth quarter when the small expansion of the Tiara Beech Hotel provided jobs for several residents who were unemployed. I have reason to believe that we will see more private projects started in 1987, and Government will do everything possible to encourage and assist them. The Elected Members of Executive Council and the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac have agreed that some incentive to investors and retirees must be made to attract and encourage more investments in our Sister Islands. We will explore all options including the incentives offered to pensioners and retirees, by the Costa Rican Government, to determine what will be the simplest and best scheme for investors, retirees and Government. Any suggestions that any Members of this Honourable House, or the private sector may have, will be welcomed. It is my intention to recommend to Government the establishment of a Committee to deal with this matter.

There has been an increase in tourism, and the hotels are experiencing good occupancy rates at the moment. This growth is undoubtedly due in no small measure to Cayman Airways, which increased the number of jet flights to Cayman Brac, and has recently introduced a Shorts 330 aircraft that will compliment the jet service and improve and upgrade the domestic flights.

Government capital projects for 1987 in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman - the road resurfacing programme between Salt Rocks and Blossom Village in Little Cayman will be completed by the end of March. Another section of the South Coast Road in Cayman Brac will be resurfaced later on in the year. Access roads from the East West Road on the Bluff will be constructed in an effort to encourage the construction of houses on the bluff. Final preparation of the site for the new terminal building in Cayman Brac, started in November 1986, and should be completed in May 1987. We hope that the loan funds from the Caribbean Development Bank and the European Development Bank will be released in order that this project will not be delayed any further.

I am happy to inform this Honourable House that a telex has been received today from Mr. Thomas Russell of the Cayman Islands Government Office in London, that the EEC Commission has signed the Cayman Brac Airfield Loan Agreement, and have passed it on to the United Kingdom's representative in Brussels for countersigning.

A small new dental clinic will be built near the Faith Hospital. The architects at the Public Works Department have this project on the drawing board, and we hope to commence construction by the 1st May, this year. It is hoped that we will be able to purchase and construct a small boat ramp at Spot Bay to help the fishermen of that district, who have suffered over the years because of the lack of a proper facility. This has been a priority of mine for many a year, but Government was unable to do anything positive about it because the owner of the land from whom the residents of Spot Bay wanted us to purchase, was not prepared to sell. We have found a small plot of land which is for sale and is suitable, in this area. It is Government's intention to purchase this plot of land and construct a boat ramp on it. I am sure the fishermen of Spot Bay will be pleased with it when completed.

Provision was made in the 1987 Estimates for Government to purchase the site on which the dock at Salt Rocks was constructed. The proprietors of the site have agreed to sell, and Government is now negotiating the sale price with them.

The first cruise vessel ever to stop at Little Cayman, made a call there on the 3rd February. I have been informed that the visit was successful and that all the tourists enjoyed the day. We hope that the success of this visit will encourage other cruise ship operators to include the Sister Islands in their itineraries for 1988. Since 1977, Government has spent considerable, but necessary sums of money upgrading the infrastructure of Cayman Brac. When the new terminal building is completed there will be no more capital projects left to do there. It is therefore very important that every effort be made to develop the tourist potential of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We must encourage and assist developers in this direction as it is abundantly clear that the future of our Islands is dependent on tourism.

I agree with the Member for North Side that the private sector should now step in and do something to revive the economy, and provide work for the people.

Public Works Department - most people believe that the only function of the Public Works Department is the construction and maintenance of roads. However, that is only a small part of its functions. The department has a task of working with every Portfolio to ensure the success of many of their projects. The performance of the Public Works Department determines to a great extent, the achievements of Government.

The Building Department has an extensive building programme this year, and, in keeping with the recommendation for the Allgrove Report, 1985, it is putting more work out to the private sector. One project under construction by a private contractor is the Old George Town Market, which is due to be completed next month. It will offer the cruise ship visitors a Tourist Information Office, four craft stalls, a small food concession with a covered seating area and rest room facilities within walking distance from the dock. The Public Works Department has also placed

The unaudited financial statements show a net income of $316,652 for both ports, Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac. It was hoped that the repairs carried out last year on the finger pier would have enabled the port to continue using it for a few more years before having to spend more money on extensive repairs. The pier was carefully examined by Public Works engineers, and two consulting engineers after the last heavy northwester. The examination revealed that further damage had taken place which affected the structural strength of the pier. The consulting engineers report states that in order to bring the structure up to its original strength, a reinforced concrete deck would have to be constructed over the entire finger pier. The estimated cost of this new dock should not exceed $500,000 if we act now. The Board of Directors have decided that repairs must be carried out as soon as possible, and instructions to proceed with the project have been given. Our consulting engineers have indicated that the project should be completed by mid August 1987. The present offices of the Port and the old Customs offices will be renovated, to provide additional space and better facilities for the staff.

A letter of intent has been signed to purchase four cruise ship mooring buoys which will be installed in George Town harbour. It is hoped to have a signed contract that will cover the fabrication and installation of these buoys. If we have no further delay, the mooring buoys should be operational by June 1987. The marking and lighting programme of all major channels throughout the Islands is continuing, and will be completed this year.

Mr. President, I have in my possession an outline proposal for the development of a new port facility in North Sound. The need for such a facility increases daily.....

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think we are just past half past four already, and perhaps if there is a new port facility and may be other topics that you have got, I will have to interrupt and ask you to continue tomorrow.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

I wonder Mr. President, if he needs about five or ten minutes to finish up his speech?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Yes Mr. President, about five minutes.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Tomorrow is Private Members' Motions. I am in Member's hands. I do not think I could authorize another five to ten minutes without suspending Standing Orders. If the House wished to suspend Standing Orders, in order to enable the Member to finish, that would of course, be another matter.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

I move the suspension in accordance with Standing Order 83, and move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) in order for the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council to complete his speech this afternoon.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The motion before the House is that in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 83, Standing Order 10(2) be suspended to enable the Honourable Third Elected Member to complete his speech.

Does any Member wish to speak?

I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED.

STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER TO CONCLUDE HIS DEBATE.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think the Ayes have it, and you may continue.

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Thank you Mr. President. Mr. President, I have in my possession an outline proposal for the development of a new port facility in North Sound. The need for such a facility increases daily. We need an all-weather port with deep water that will help us cope with the growth of our Islands. An all-weather deep-water port would generate a third leg to the economy, adding to the existing mainstays of tourism and banking. An all-weather port would also create a boom to Grand Cayman in the cruise ship business, as the port would give the ships protection, and guarantee their safety at all times. We would undoubtedly become a terminal for many of the cruise lines, allowing their Caribbean and South American cruises to begin and end here. A spin-off would be more air arrivals and departures which would give us more exposure, and also more business for our National Airline. In addition, I am sure we would attract a substantial portion of container trans-shipments which would provide more work for our people, and earn more revenue for Government. I sincerely hope that this project will materialize, as I believe it holds the key to the future of the Cayman Islands.

Postal Department - the Postal Department continues to be a major earner for Government and provides a reliable service to these Islands. The present level of service is severely constrained by the limited space available within the present building. The need for a General Post Office building increases daily. It is Government's intention to construct a new General Post Office next year, which will provide sufficient working space for staff, so that they will be able to perform their functions properly, and service the public more efficiently. A new General Post Office will also meet the demands for more post boxes, and enable the department to introduce additional services to the public when more space is provided.

Mr. President, your five-year term as Governor of the Cayman Islands has been, and will go down in the records of our Islands, as five historic years. Our Most Gracious Majesty the Queen visited us in March 1982, the only time that a reigning monarch has ever visited our Islands. It was a great honour and pleasure to be present when she delivered her Throne Speech from this Chamber. We were also honoured to have Mr. T.J. Eggar, MP., Minister of State, Foreign and Commonwealth Office, visit us in July last year, which is the first time that a Minister has ever visited us. On this occasion he signed the Treaty, the first Treaty ever signed in these Islands.

Mr. President, since this is your last Throne Speech, I would like to extend to you my sincere gratitude and the gratitude of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, for the keen interest that you have taken in the affairs of those Islands over the past five year. I assure you that your concern and help has been greatly appreciated by all of us. May your retirement be long, healthy and happy. May God bless you and your family, and give you a long, healthy and happy retirement.

Thank you.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, I now move the adjournment of this House until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question before the House is that this House do now adjourn until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of this Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

for North Side.

Please be seated.

Questions. The Elected Member

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

WITHDRAWAL OF QUESTION NO.17.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I beg to withdraw Question No. 17 which was to have been asked of the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council responsible for Communications, Works and District Administration.

"Can the Honourable Member state when the post of Janitor/Grounds-Keeper for the North Side civic area, i.e. school, Town Hall, clinic and grounds, created in Finance Committee in November, 1986, will be advertised?"

The reason for the request for withdrawal Sir is because within a week of having submitted the question, the post was filled and the man is doing a good job.

MR. PRESIDENT:

To be truthful, I am not sure which Standing Order provides for questions to be withdrawn, but I am sure there must be one that does, and I do not think that the House will object to my granting you permission.

Question No.18.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST ELECTED

MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR HEALTH, EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES.

NO. 18: Can the Honourable Member state who decides and what criteria is used to determine who goes overseas for medical aid at Government expense?

ANSWER: The answer Mr. President and the first part of the answer is taken from the medical policy as published.

No patient shall be referred overseas at Government's expense without the prior approval of the Chief Medical Officer and the Portfolio for Health. Such approval may be dispensed with by a Medical Officer in the event of an emergency when such consents would not be readily available and it is urgent that the patient receives treatment.

The Chief Medical Officer, after seeking the advice of the Medical Officer in charge of any patient, decides whether it is necessary for the patient to be transferred overseas for medical aid.

The criteria used in formulating the decision is simply whether or not the facilities exist in the Cayman Islands Medical Service for providing the necessary medical care. In all cases in which effective care can be provided locally, patients are not recommended for overseas treatment.

The Chief Medical Officer may from time-to-time seek the advice of other specialist officers in the medical service before the final decision is made.

Expenditure to Government is only incurred if the patient is indigent, as determined by the Medical Social Worker or Social Services Department, or if the patient is a Civil Servant.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member clarify, because in the criteria he has given, it does not include where the patient is to be sent, nor the cost of care available in different locations.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. President, I do not think that was a part of the question.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think it is reasonable to ask what criteria determine where patients go. There are various countries to which they could be sent. I think it is a fair supplementary.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: The Chief Medical Officer makes the decision dependent on the type of medical aid which the patient requires. For example, if adequate facilities exist at the University Hospital, or in Jamaica, naturally it is cheaper for the person to be sent to Jamaica, and once the service is equally as good as could be obtained in Miami, they are sent to Jamaica preferably rather than to Miami. Similarly, with any other State in the United States, or even the United Kingdom, we have sent people as far as the United Kingdom.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: A further supplementary Mr. President. Is there any greater weight placed on the cost decision, when the person is entitled to free medical care, or is any choice given when the individual is prepared to repay Government?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. President, as I have said, the cost is the overriding factor in the decision, once the care is comparable, equal, or better in the area where it can be received the cheapest. If Government is going to pay the bill, Government will call the tune.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. I agree that government should call the tune if they are going to pay the Bill. Part of the question also asked if the patient was given any choice of where to go when Government was not paying the Bill, Government was only putting the money up front, and the patient was going to repay Government on an agreed contract, on an agreed sum of money per month.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. President, once Government undertakes to pay the money, Government is liable for the money, even though there might be an undertaking from the client to repay money, there are many hundreds and thousands of dollars on the books that have never been repaid, which were promised to be repaid.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member say whether any action is being taken to recover those funds from those people who promised, and maybe signed over land, and signed contracts to pay, because certainly, if you have a contract you have a judicial agreement.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think we are getting a bit far from the original question now. What you are seeking to elucidate further, is an answer to a supplementary, which in itself had strayed a bit from the original question. So I think I must stop it at that point. If the Member wants the particular information he was then seeking, he will have to put down a substantive question in due course.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: It will be back in April Sir.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. President, I believe the Member has a specific case that he would like an answer to, and if he would be man enough to come out and ask it, I will give him the answer.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well I do not think I will let him ask it as a supplementary to this question. If he wants to put down a specific question about it, that is for him to decide.

Perhaps he will now ask

Question No. 19.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: I am prepared to ask his specific question, why tonsillectomies were done in Miami?

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES.

NO. 19: Can the Honourable Member state the revenue collected for the sale of water at both the Lower Valley and East End well fields and what was the cost to produce this water?

ANSWER: Revenue collected from water sales at the Lower Valley and East End well fields in 1986 was CI$70,268.60 and the cost to produce the water CI$56,546.00.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Could the Member give a breakdown of the cost of the $56,546.00, labour, materials, electricity etcetera, etcetera?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Yes Mr. President.

Administration	$ 5,250.00
Labour	$ 19,750.00
Electricity	$ 15,647.00
Vehicle	$ 9,800.00
Chemicals	$ 619.00
Rent of Site	$ 5,000.00
Spares	$ 480.00
Total Operating Cost	$ 56,546.00

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary...very well.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Do not jump the gun Sir, do not jump the gun.

In administration, does it include the time spent by the Director of the Water Authority in supervising the site, or is it just clerical and paper work, and things like that included in the administration?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, this is the time that members of the Administration's staff spent in supervising those water systems.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member state if I am correct in assuming that the Director of the Water Authority and his supervisory staff only spent one seventh of their time supervising these two locations?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, most of their time is now spent on the Seven Mile Beach Sewerage System, and the George Town Water Scheme.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, another supplementary Sir. Was the sewerage scheme not started in 1987? We are talking about 1986.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: The sewerage scheme Mr. President, stated in 1985, to my knowledge.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is now no further supplementary, I invite the Second Elected member for George Town to ask Question No. 20.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Thank you Mr. President.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NO. 20: Would the Honourable Member state -

- (a) The policy regarding the payment of housing allowance to married Police Officers; and
- (b) The policy regarding the payment of housing allowance where both spouses are members of the Police Force?

ANSWER:

- (a) Two levels of housing allowance are paid. All local officers are paid CI$200 monthly, the only exceptions are officers who live in free barrack accommodation, or married female officers whose husbands are in the force and who receive the above allowance.

The other level applies to contracted expatriate Officers who, like other contracted overseas Officers in Government Service, receive half the monthly rent paid, up to a maximum of CI$650 monthly.

- (b) The policy regarding payment of housing allowances where both spouses are members of the Force, is that only the male Officer receives the allowance.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Supplementary Mr. President.
Could the Member state what specific policy, or Police Regulation authorises the exclusion of the housing allowance to be paid to either spouse, where both spouses are members of the Police Force?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON:

Mr. President, there is no statutory provision for these allowances. These allowances form a part of the package of terms and conditions of service, and these policies are subject to adjustment administratively. However, the fact is, that the allowance is payable to 'a' married officer, and if spouses would wish to have their allowances divided, fifty percent on each of their pay cheques, that can certainly be arranged. But the total payable is the amount that I have stated, so that if both spouses are members of the Force, they can have the allowance divided, fifty percent equally between their two pay cheques.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, on a further supplementary. I have to differ with the Member. There are indeed Statutory Regulations that regulate the payment of special allowances, of which the housing allowance is one of them, and that is found in the Police Amendments Regulation 1980, which states that "married officers and other officers nominated by the Commissioner may be paid certain amounts". So, there is nothing in here Mr. President, that says that it only should be paid to one married officer, where both spouses are members of the Police Force, and this is why I would like to resubmit the question, as to where the specific authority comes from; whether it is an internal regulation, or whether they are following the Police Amendments Regulation 1980 in this case.

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON:

Mr. President, I think we are agreeing that there is provision for the payment of certain amounts of housing allowance. The question is how much will be paid in the case where both spouses are members of the force. The amount payable is fixed, and how the officers wish to receive it is a matter for them to decide. The policy is that the amount is paid the male officer. If they would choose to have it split between them, that can be arranged.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, the Regulation does not say male officers or female, it says 'married officers', and if two individuals are employed by the Police Force, whether or not they are spouses within the Police Force. It does not say in the Regulations that only the male should receive the housing allowance. If this is the intention, either a policy or an amendment to the Regulation would be required to spell that out, but as it is now, this is not the case Sir.

Mr. President....

MR. PRESIDENT:
not a question.

I think that was a statement

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: If I may ask if the Member would undertake to look into this matter and further communicate with me on it?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: Yes Sir, I will.

MR. PRESIDENT: Unless there is any further supplementary. The Second Elected Member for George Town may ask the next question.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR HEALTH, EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES.

NO. 21: Would the Honourable Member state what Government building can be made available to accommodate the George Town Boxing Club temporarily and whether permanent accommodation for it will be provided in the Sports Complex?

ANSWER: Investigation by the Sports Director and the Portfolio of Health, Education and Social Services have failed to turn up any Government building which could be put at the sole use of the George Town Boxing Club even on a temporary basis.

Architectural plans are currently being prepared for the Sports' Complex with due consideration being given to all areas of Sports Development. Some emphasis is being placed on facilities and equipment for weight-lifting and body-building; no doubt this will facilitate training for boxing as well.

Where actual fights are to be held, these can, at such times, be comfortably and safely accommodated outdoors.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, a supplementary. Would the Member give an undertaking that he will endeavour to have adequate accommodation provided in the Sports' Complex in view of the very expensive equipment now owned by the Boxing Association. It would be somewhat foolhardy to leave these lying idly in open areas, if he could give this undertaking Mr. President?

HON. BENSON, O. EBANKS: Mr. President, I am not sure what the Member is saying; whether he is making an offer to donate the equipment to the complex when it is built, for the use of weight lifting and body building, or what? But certainly Mr. President, the complex will have a vast amount of storage space for equipment, and there is no reason why the Boxing Club or any other Association could not have access to that area.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, to enlighten the Member, weight lifting and other similar sports are really yards apart from boxing. What I was really trying to ask the Member, because of the very expensive equipment we have, which I am sure he knows of, he opened the Boxing Club I believe, if he could give the undertaking that we would have adequate accommodation. I believe he has attempted to say yes, he will do that, and I appreciate it.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. President, the Member knows that I know quite a bit about boxing. I used to do a little bit of it myself when I was younger....

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: Probably got beaten up though
....(LAUGHTER).

MR. PRESIDENT: We shall all look forward to the fight between the two Members.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: No, no. Mr. President I am not finished Sir.....

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: (INAUDIBLE)

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: The Member also knows Mr. President that since the preparation of this answer, there have been developments which might make a building available to his Boxing Club.

MR. PRESIDENT: Unless there is a further supplementary, the Second Elected Member for George Town may ask Question No. 22.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNICATIONS WORKS AND DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION.

NO. 22: Would the Honourable Member state whether Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd. has specific authority under its franchise to erect barricades around certain electrical light poles?

ANSWER: Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd. does not have specific authority under its franchise to erect such barricades.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Would the Member state what action has been taken by Government to have these unsightly barricades removed?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, we have taken action to stop further erection of these barricades, and CUC have been instructed to submit new proposals so that we can inspect them and have our Chief Engineer of Public Works and Roads, and the Director of Planning as well to have a look at them before they are installed.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Supplementary Mr. President. Could the Member say whether the Traffic Department was notified of the erection of these barricades?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, no Government Department was involved or was asked any permission, Sir.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, could the Member say whether CUC has been ordered to remove such barricades?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, they have not been ordered to remove them as yet. We had a meeting with the Managing Director and the Manager, and it is understood that these barricades will be removed and others placed, when we have decided on the type of barricade that will be suitable, and acceptable to the public and to Caribbean Utilities.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Member say if he has received any representation from the conservationists and the beautification committees on these unsightly barriers?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: No Mr. President.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: And has there been any representation from the Police on the safety aspects of these barriers?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: No. Mr. President.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: And further more, has there been any representation from the people in the electrical field, like the leading electricians on the dangerous barriers?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: No. Mr. President.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: And further more, has there been any representation from the ordinary person on the street against these?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Yes Mr. President. This is what has caused us to take steps to stop the erection of these barricades.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Would the Member agree that since there is no concern from the special interest group, that it must be absolutely necessary that steps be taken to remove them.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Elected Member for East End.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, my last supplementary. Some years ago, Government saw fit...I will turn this into a supplementary...to urge land owners to try and keep the verges of their property clean because huge trees were causing motorists problems to see around curves, and also it was what you could consider, a danger to motorists. My question is, if Government could see fit at that time to see the danger of trees along the road, why should an order not have been made that CUC have those dangerous pieces of iron removed at once, seeing that they did not have permission to put them there in the first place?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I think that CUC in all good faith installed these barricades primarily for protecting the poles, but also to protect the public from getting into collision, and breaking down one of the poles with the high voltage wires falling across the car, causing certain and sudden death, if it did happen, so they did have the public in mind, and I would say they are very sensitive to public reaction.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, I wonder if the Member is aware that certain remarks have been made that the reason those pieces of iron were placed there was so that CUC could find who crack the poles?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President I am not aware of anything like that Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Sir. Could the Member say if CUC is going to be prosecuted under the Planning Law for erecting things without planning permission, as other people in the country have been.

MR. PRESIDENT: I do not think that falls within the Member's responsibility, prosecutions.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President Sir, while I agree that the prosecution, the actual prosecuting of the individual may not fall under the Member's responsibility, I feel it is the Member's responsibility if somebody has broken the law in something for which he is responsible, to notify the Attorney General to take action, and then we would not have had the situation with the blow hole, because the Portfolio knew about that for a long time.

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, they have no permission under the franchise, and as far as I am aware Sir, they have not broken the law, and as you rightly told the Member a while ago, I am not responsible for Planning, and if Planning has a case against them, Planning will have to prosecute them Sir.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member state if he is aware whether CUC did apply, has been given specific planning permission to erect those barriers?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I answered that originally Sir, I said they had no permission from any Government Department.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: Supplementary...and communications is your responsibility?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: I think this is an answer the Member knows Sir.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Mr. President I wonder if for the elucidation or for the information of the House, the Member asking the supplementary could indicate whether those barricades are in excess of four feet in height, because if they are not, they are not subject to Planning Regulations.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Yes Mr. President, I can answer the question. They are in excess of four feet in height from the ground level at which they are planted, and I would like now Sir, since nobody else seems to want to do it, I would like to make an official complaint to the Honourable Second Official Member, that due to answers given in this House today, it appears that CUC has broken the law, and I would like action taken to have them prosecuted for doing so.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: If it had been a little man building his house, he would have had to take it down, that is the whole gist of these supplementaries Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: Order! Order!
The Member must not make statements as he very well knows.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Can I have that undertaking from the Honourable Second Official Member Sir?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: With the permission of the House it might help if I was to explain what the law is in relation to breaches of planning control. It is not in fact an offence to erect any structure without planning permission. If something is erected without planning permission, the procedure is for the Planning Department to serve what is called an Enforcement Notice, and the person receiving such a notice either has to comply with it, in other words by removing the offending structure, or has the possibility of then applying to the Planning Department to get planning permission. Only if the Enforcement Notice is not complied with in the period specified in the notice, which is usually something like four weeks, for compliance, is an offence committed, and only then can somebody be prosecuted. So, if it is the case that these barriers are a breach of the planning control, the first step would be for the Planning Department, and this is something only the Planning Authority can do, for the Planning Authority to serve an Enforcement Notice.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Supplementary Mr. President. I appreciate his explanation, but being in Government for three years now I have learn that much, but I do thank him for his explanation. However, what about the safety aspect of this particular matter?

MR. PRESIDENT: I really think that has been dealt with already, because the Member for Communications and Works has said that arrangements have been made for the removal for the things, presumably because they are unsightly, and considered unsafe, so I think that is answered. The Second Elected Member for George Town was the next one to catch my eye.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Supplementary, and this is in connection with the answer given by the Honourable Second Official Member. If a structure is unauthorised and is in breach of the Planning Regulations, perhaps the Honourable Second Official Member can explain to me how that would not be an offence under the Planning Law, if it is in breach of the law?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think with respect, that is what he has just explained, to me it was quite clear?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Perhaps to you Sir....

MR. PRESIDENT: ...If you put up something that is unauthorised, you are...well I will let him explain it again.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: In respect of any law, it is not of itself an offence to contravene the law unless the law says that it is an offence. In the case of the Development and Planning Law, erecting a structure without permission is not of itself made an offence, it may contravene the law, but it is not an offence. The Development and Planning Law sets up a procedure through Enforcement Notices, whereby a contravention may ultimately become an offence if the person erecting the structure does not either demolish it, or subsequently successfully get planning permission for it.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think the Second Elected Member for George Town, because it was his point...I will come to the Member for North Side later.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, the only reason I was trying to get that clarified, it would seem that doing something wrong under the law, providing you are not caught is not an offence, and I do not believe that this is the meaning of the law.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Thank you Mr. President. In the light of the explanation given by the Honourable Second Official Member, can we have an undertaking from the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council under whose Portfolio Planning falls that....

MR. PRESIDENT: The Fourth Elected Member I think.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Fourth, sorry; that such an order will be issued because I have been trying to get these barriers taken down now for six months, I did not want the poles up that near to the road, much less the barriers.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, the matter will be referred to the Acting Director of Planning.

MR. PRESIDENT: If that completes supplementaries, I will invite the Member for East End to ask Question No. 23.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 23: Can the Honourable Member say whether it is correct that on several occasions, because of bad weather and its limited range, the 737 has been unable to do direct charter flights which could have easily been done by the 727's?

ANSWER: It has long been the practice in this House not to answer questions which relate to the day-to-day management of Cayman Airways. This question falls within that category.

However, it is the intention of the Portfolio to request a Performance Report from the Management of Cayman Airways on the 737 at the end of the lease period in April, 1987. This Report will be distributed to Members for their information.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Supplementary Mr. President. I guess I will get a similar answer. Could the Member say whether he is aware that this occurrence did take place?

MR. PRESIDENT: I really think in effect, the Member has his answer already. If he is just rephrasing the same question....

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: That is correct Sir, I think it had been replied to in the first instance.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Certainly Mr. President, there is nothing confidential about whether a flight is cancelled, and the Member cannot really hide.....

MR. PRESIDENT: I do not think that the Member has said anything...

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: I am going to turn this into a question Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, all I was going to say was that I do not think the Member mentioned confidentiality in his answer.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Well then Mr. President, will he tell the House why he is giving this silly answer.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Really Mr. President, if you ask a silly question you will get a silly answer...(LAUGHTER).

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, the question tabled in the House was not a silly one, or else the Member is saying that the President who allowed it is a silly man, is he saying that now?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: He has his opinion, and I have mine Sir.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: In other words, you are saying that the President is a silly man.

MR. PRESIDENT: No, I do not think he said that, and I think that the Member asking the supplementary knows that it has been the practice here not only on grounds of confidentiality, but also in accordance with the practice of the House of Commons, which is set out in some detail in Erskine May, in regard to nationalized industries in the United Kingdom, to withhold information about the day-to-day management.....

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: This question has nothing to do with management.

MR. PRESIDENT: But on the grounds that United Kingdom Ministers and Ministers of Executive Council here do not have responsibility for the day to day management on the one hand, of nationalized industries, and in the other of Cayman Airways.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, I trust that the remarks of the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council was not levied at my question. I hope it was the supplementary of the Bodden Town Member, because I feel that Question 23. is not only important to John McLean, but it is most important to the safety of our Airline, and I have a right to question it.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, with due respect to the Member from East End, I am sure that the question was asked in all sincerity, and the information will be made available to him when the performance report is requested. My response really was an appropriate answer to the supplementary.

MR. PRESIDENT: Question No. 24.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Well Mr. President, I guess I will get the same answer, seeing that this is to do with management. Anyway Question 24. to the same Member.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE.

NO. 24: Can the Honourable Member say whether there is a Caymanian understudying the Managing Director of Cayman Airways Ltd?

ANSWER: Yes.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Can the Member further say whether this is a Caymanian?

MR. PRESIDENT: But I think that that is the question. 'Was there a Caymanian', and the answer was 'yes'.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: I beg your pardon, I am sorry. Could the Honourable Member say to this House how soon it is hoped that the present Managing Director will be replaced.

MR. PRESIDENT: Do you mean by a Caymanian, because I think...

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I could not give an exact date as to when he would be replaced. I suppose, it depends on a lot of situations. I mean something could come up whereby he might have to be replaced before the Caymanian who is understudying him is ready. I think the supplementary relates to when a Caymanian might be able to replace him. I can only say that the progress of his understudy is being monitored closely, and I can assure him and the House that whenever it is considered that the Caymanian now understudying the Managing Director, is capable and willing and able to replace him, or any other Managing Director who might not be Caymanian at the time, that this change will be effected.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Supplementary.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Second Elected Member for West Bay first caught my eye.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Is it possible to say Sir, how long his contract is for?

MR. PRESIDENT: You mean, how long the contract of the present Managing Director is for?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Yes Sir, that is the man we are dealing with.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President I am not exactly certain of that. To reply to the best of my recollection, I think the contract has another year to run, I am not one hundred percent sure of that. I think it is about another year.

MR. PRESIDENT: I wonder whether you would undertake to make the information available to the Member.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I surely can Sir.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Can he say how long it was for?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I believe originally it was a five-year contract with an option to renew, as far as I can remember.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, the Second Elected Member for George Town did catch my eye at one stage.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Thank you Mr. President. A supplementary question, could the Member state whether the progress of the Caymanian understudy will be monitored by his Portfolio, or by the present Managing Director?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, that would be like appealing to Caesar Sir. I know it is being closely monitored by the Board and by myself.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Elected Member for East End.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Supplementary Mr. President. I wonder if the Member could tell us how long the present person who is understudying the Managing Director has been with the Airline?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I believe the person referred to has been with the Airline probably 12 years, 10 or 12 years.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Can the Member state what the academic qualifications are for a Managing Director of Cayman Airways.?

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think we are really getting a little bit further away now from the original question. If the Member wants to ask that, it had better be put down. I am not even certain that there is not a question like that put down already for answer later.

If there is no further supplementary, the Elected Member for East End may ask question No. 25.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE.

NO. 25:

Can the Honourable Member say whether the necessary protections are in place to assure a born-Caymanian pilot of being able to replace expatriate pilots or those who may obtain Caymanian status?

ANSWER:

A policy is in place so that any expatriate pilots who may be employed after 1st July, 1986 are not eligible to be on the Company's permanent seniority list.

Favourable consideration will naturally be given to replace them with Caymanians whenever qualified Caymanians who meet the company's standards become available, based on the company's needs at the time.

Anyone who obtains Caymanian status is treated as Caymanian and therefore eligible to be placed on the Company's permanent seniority list.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member say whether he is aware that in the past, expatriate pilots have been recommended for status through his department, in order to allow them to be placed on the seniority list?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, that was before my day Sir. I was not in the Portfolio when that was supposed to have happened.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member state if in his answer those expatriate pilots who were employed before July 1st, 1986 are going to be eligible, or remain on the seniority list?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, the company has two expatriate pilots employed prior to the July 1st, 1986 date that I mentioned, and the answer is that they will remain on the Company's permanent seniority list.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member say whether it is going to be necessary for these two pilots to obtain Cayman status, to remain indefinitely employed with the Airline, if so, why the exceptions?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, it has no bearing on whether these two individuals obtain Caymanian status or not. It is my understanding from them that many years ago they were promised Caymanian status, whether this is so I do not know, nor am I here to confirm this. But I would explain to the Member asking the supplementary, and to the House, the reasoning which the company and in consultation with me, have agreed on. The reason is because these two expatriate pilots came to Cayman Airways, I think one eight years ago, and one six or seven years ago. These two individuals are at the top, they are senior pilots with Cayman Airways. They fill at the present time, and have in the past as well, they have made a very valuable contribution to the Airline. They assisted with the training of young Caymanians, and for those reasons it was felt that it would only be fair to make an exception in the case of these two individuals, and allow them to remain on the permanent seniority list.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Supplementary Mr. President.

Can the Member say whether these pilots were adequately paid for all the services they rendered to the Airline, and whether or not one of those now resides in Florida, and only comes to Cayman to do a flight and pick up his pay cheque?

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think the adequacy of somebody's pay is really a matter of opinion, and questions cannot be asked which seek answers that are matters of opinion. As to the question...you will find that in Standing Orders. As to the question about residence in Florida, that can be asked.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

I will change it up Sir.

Can the Member state whether those two pilots were paid any less than other pilots filling the same position in Cayman Airways.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, my reply to that supplementary would be that I am sure that they were paid the same scale of pay as any other Caymanian filling a similar position. As regards to one of them living in Florida, to the best of my knowledge both of them maintain a family and home in the Florida area, and because of their type of work, they commute back and forth between here and Miami.

MR. PRESIDENT:

It is in fact now after eleven o'clock, so I am going to have to close Question Time I am afraid. We have asked all the questions. I can understand that there may have been more supplementaries.

Private Members' Motions, I wonder whether the Second Elected Member for West Bay is coming. I can see him. Private Member's Motion No.1/87.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO.1/87

APPOINTMENT OF SPEAKER TO THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I beg to move

Private Member's Motion No.1/87 - Appointment of Speaker to the Legislative Assembly:

"WHEREAS the Cayman Islands Constitution 1972 allows that the Governor may appoint a Speaker of this Assembly

AND WHEREAS there is to be a change in the persons who occupy the Office of the Governor in the near future,

BE IT RESOLVED that there shall be an Office of Speaker."

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:
Motion.

Mr. President, I Second the

MR. PRESIDENT:

Private Member's Motion No.1/87

is duly moved and seconded.

Before inviting the mover to speak to it, there are four points that I would like to make to the House, three by way of explanation, and one by way of comment.

The first is, that I have agreed that Members of Executive Council shall not, in respect of this motion, be bound by collective responsibility. That is to say, that each Member shall be free to vote in whatever way he judges right.

Secondly, I have also agreed that the Official Members, the appointed Members of Executive Council will not participate in the debate, and will abstain if there is a vote at the end of it, because it is their view which I share, that a matter of this kind should most appropriately be decided by the Elected Members of this House.

Thirdly, it may be helpful if at this stage I just explain to Members what the position would be if there were to be a tie, and I were to have to exercise a casting vote. Not that I necessarily expect to have to do so, but I would prefer that Members should know from an early stage what the practice is. Our Standing Orders lay down that we should follow the practice of the House of Commons, unless Standing Orders specifically state something different in respect of a particular matter. In respect of this matter, they do not state anything specific and different, we therefore follow the practice of the House of Commons, and Erskine May makes quite clear that it is the long-standing practice that if the Speaker has to vote, he will cast his vote to leave things as they are. In other words therefore, I would have to cast my vote against the motion, in order that there should not be a change. That would not in any sense reflect my personal views or wishes, that would simply be in accordance with the practice that Standing Orders lay down, I should follow. I wanted the House to know it at this stage.

Finally, the fourth point, which is by way of comment rather than explanation, I have from time to time taken the opportunity to remind the House that the Constitution does contain a provision to enable the creation of an Office of Speaker, and have suggested to Members that they should bear this in mind. I therefore welcome the opportunity that this motion will give for Members to debate the matter. I am not seeking to express a view as to whether they should vote in favour of the motion or against it. I have private views about that, but I do not think it right that they should be made public. But I do think it proper that I should express the opinion that I am glad that the matter will be debated, and the House will come to a conclusion after debating it.

Now those are the four points I wished to make. If the Member wanted to start his speech now, there would be 10 minutes or 15 minutes before we took our morning break. If he would prefer to defer starting until after we had taken the break, I would quite happily suspend proceedings for a quarter of an hour now.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: I would prefer it if I was talking to people who were not looking at me with hungry faces Sir, so take the break now.

MR. PRESIDENT: Take the break now.
Very well, I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 11:07 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:31 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated.
Private Member's Motion
No.1/87. The Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, in Private Member's Motion No.1/87 I am seeking to evoke the provisions as made under the 1972 Constitution.

In bringing this Motion Sir, it is no reflection on my part, upon yourself as Speaker of the House, but I believe that we all have to grow up, and while there are some sectors in the community who are advocating constitutional advancement, and other constitutional changes, I for one, do not see the point when seeking constitutional changes, if we are not going to use the provisions which are already there.

Mr. President, Sir, I believe that the population, and saying this I have to correct a quotation that the Compass said about me a few weeks ago, when they suggested that I had said that the President of the Assembly has his role as Governor and President confused. That was not what I said. What I said was, that I believe that there are members of the public who have the role confused, and are unable to separate the two roles of Governor and President of the Legislative Assembly. Mr. President, I see the role of Speaker, if the motion is successful, to be a very clear-cut one. His job, and I am using 'his' as a common gender, (I am not opposed if a woman is appointed Speaker of the House), would be to conduct the affairs of the Assembly under the rules and regulations as provided for under Standing Orders. Quite simply, he is not going to be a spokesman for Government or anything. He will simply see that the Standing Orders and when Erskine May has to be referred to, or the practice of the House of Commons is carried out. And, his decisions will, as yours as President in the past have been, based upon practice in the House of Commons, and the rules as laid down in our Standing Orders, etcetera.

Now Mr. President, some people have told me that they cannot support the motion because of the cost involved, and some people have said that I am out of place and the motion should not be allowed because I will be creating an expense for Government. But I do not think that is correct Sir, and as far as the cost to pay a Speaker of the Assembly, is I believe a small price to pay to have continuity in this House of Parliament. Under the present system we have to train Governors, or they have to train themselves, in some cases after they have taken up office here, into the rules and practices of our Parliament. And I believe that the funds spent to pay a Caymanian as Speaker of this Honourable House, would be no more than the funds that are consumed in training repeated Governors to be President of the Assembly. As I have always advocated Sir, I believe if we are going to train someone, we should train one of our own. Others are reluctant to support the motion, because they are not sure, or they have no one in mind, or they can find no one whom they believe is capable of doing the job. I do not subscribe to that Sir, I believe there are several Caymanians who could fulfill the role of Speaker of this House quite adequately. I think they can demand the respect that the high office deserves, I think they are capable of implementing Standing Orders, and interpreting them fairly and squarely across the board. So, I do not think that that is a reason, and in the final analysis Sir, I am not going to make a recommendation, simply because it is your job. It is a job of the Governor to find someone who is capable, who is willing and as I have said, I think it can be done.

The other reason why I have brought this motion at this time is, because as everyone in the country knows, shortly there is going to be a change in the person who occupies the high office of Governor. I therefore believe, for that reason, or at least that is one of the reasons why the motion is timely. But the most important reason why I have brought this motion at this time Sir, is because of my concern for the confusion that I believe is being nurtured; I believe exists in our community. I believe it is being deliberately cultured to erode the halo of respect that does, and should surround the person who serves as Governor in these Islands as Her Majesty's representative.

It has perturbed me Mr. President on several occasions, when Members have disagreed with the ruling from the Chair, and their remarks in disagreeing with that ruling have not been directed at the President of the Assembly, but at the Governor. I am concerned Sir, if the position of Governor was ever politicized into that of a political football, because I believe that the elements outside who would want to erode that respect and, if they are successful in doing it, they may in fact be able to sell to some of the lesser informed members of the voting public; ideas for advancement in our constitutional position; ideas to have the Governor removed and replaced with a Chief Minister; and I might sound cynical or over pessimistic Sir, but in talking with several members of the public, and in trying to explain to some people that the President of our Assembly presently wears three different hats, and the functions of each office has to be clearly distinguished when criticism or praise is being leveled. If we are criticizing that individual as President of the Assembly, or if we are criticizing him while the individual is wearing the hat of President of the Assembly, the criticism should be directed at the President of the Assembly, and not at the Governor. If we are criticizing him when he is Governor, it must be likewise. If we are criticizing when he is wearing his hat as the Chairman of Executive Council, the criticism must be likewise.

Mr. President, I read a book as part of the requirement for my postgraduate qualifications at the University of Minnesota, called 'The Dance of Legislation', which outlined all the lobbying that goes on by special interest groups behind the scenes in the United States, Senate or Congress to get a Bill passed, and how things when they come out in final form are usually meaningless, because they have been amended to accommodate so many special interests and varying opinions and varying demands, that the legislation is meaningless. Now I have spent some time lobbying for votes for this post, but unfortunately Sir, there is not any room here to accommodate negotiating and wheeling and dealing. The position is clear-cut, hard and dry. Either we want a Speaker, either we want a Caymanian to preside in our Assembly, or we do not. This is not a position where we can say, well we can create the office today and we can wait another five or six years to put somebody in it when we find someone who is "acceptable" to everyone. Because I do not think that should come into the debate nor the discussion, nor the rationalization in ones mind as to whether we should or should not at this time have a Speaker of our Assembly. Because Mr. President, if we try to find someone who suits the whims and fancies of each of us in this Honourable House, that person has not been made, and if we try to mold someone and transplant parts of their brain or parts of their body to suit everyone in this Assembly, we are going to wind up with a monster similar to the man who took the parts home from his car in his lunch bag each day, and the person will be unable to function.

Mr. President, I believe the time has come to appoint a Caymanian as Speaker of this Honourable House. I fully appreciate the explanations you gave before the break, and I fully understand the position you will have to take if there is a tie, but I do not believe we are going to have to worry about that unfortunately. I hope Sir, that the vote for the Speaker is going to be a unanimous one, and I am going to urge all Members to vote in favour of this motion to appoint a Speaker of this Assembly.

I thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:
West Bay.

The Second Elected Member for

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I often wonder why I get up to speak just after the Member for North Side. Usually it is on something that we both feel strongly about. But what happens is that we usually get the hell knocked out of us, and we have no chance to reply. However Mr. President, I will give you an instance, the debate on the Bill for the Parliamentary Pensions, what a licking we took on that one, we won, oh we won. But this time the Member for North Side has the prerogative to reply, and I would dare say that no Members on the Government side are going to misbehave today. They are all going to be gentlemen.

Mr. President, there is absolutely no doubt that in the eyes of the world, including other Island Territories in the Caribbean; struggling independent and non-independent nations big and small world wide, and more importantly, the hundreds and hundreds of thousands of tourists and investors who continue to come to these shores, there is no doubt in their minds that the people of the Cayman Islands are quite capable of managing their own internal affairs, that goes without questioning. Like trustworthy Sea Captains, we have taken the good ship Cayman safely through many adverse conditions, despite stormy recessions in the United States, our most powerful supplier of technology, manufactured goods and foods and a continuing flow of tourist and investors to boost our opulent life-style, which no doubt is the envy of many, and inspite of civil disobediences, political upheavals, labour strikes elsewhere in the Caribbean and in other independent territories, we have, and will continue to prevail.

It is so because of our ability to take charge, and with encouragement and support of you Sir and other representatives of Her Majesty's Government, we have earned the confidence and respect of many who doubted that this new administration of Government, could present the present healthy state of our economy, which I am confident will continue, provided that we ourselves continue to demonstrate our ability to take charge. Through the years Caymanian have had to learn to accept and take advantages of changes and opportunities presented to us. Because we are smart enough to grasp these opportunities, we have also learn to become even better Sea Captains. I cannot count the times Sir, because there have been too many who knew our previous Governor, and many of my peers here in this Honourable House, and even other experienced parliamentarians have called on us here in the Cayman Islands, or that we have met in our overseas travels, have expressed surprise and some disappointment that the Presiding Officer of this Honourable House is not one of our own. Now Mr. President, I have been saying 'one of our own' because I know Sir that in the Constitution of 1972, it does not say Caymanian or non-Caymanian, but I believe, that if we win this motion, you will have the good sense to appoint a Caymanian.

It seems then Sir, that we must ask ourselves, are we not capable, are we so politically immature that we cannot trust and believe that one of our own is qualified? Why is it that the hundreds of banks, insurance companies and tens of thousands of offshore companies that are registered here, can trust us with billions and billions of dollars, deposited with banks and investments here in this country? With due respect to you Mr. President, it seems that some of our own are afraid of taking charge of our own children, their children's children and our own destiny, in not supporting this motion to appoint a Speaker. They have not yet given one sensible reason why it cannot be done. They tell us, costs. Mr. President, you take for a country with billions of dollars, and this Legislative Assembly is only costing some two hundred and odd thousand dollars per year, and Legislators only getting $12,000 per year. Where else in the world, what better could we have it? There is no doubt that we are full-time employees. I call myself a glorified social worker. Cost does not come into this thing because any Speaker who is appointed to this Legislature would not have to be full-time. Some of the other excuses are that we would be closer to His Excellency the Governor, Mr. President. You know how frank I am, that is not true. You know that you and I are good friends, or I hope we are, and if I have been disrespectful at times, it is only because I am speaking on certain areas that are precious and dear to my heart, but we are not that close to you Sir, nobody can fool me about that. You and I are good friends as I have said, but you do not tell me some of your secrets. Good friends tell secrets to one another, like the last time the Governor was appointed, I asked, but nobody could say anything, but the next day they saw it in the papers.

Anyway, I am not being disrespectful, and I want to point that out. I hope you are not taking it that way, but I am just speaking of some of the excuses I am hearing as to why Government with at least two supporters on this side, is not going to support this Private Member's Motion....(You keep quiet, just behave yourself).

To refuse to support this motion is like not taking on, or taking up the offer of a valuable scholarship, so that we can improve on our political education and strength. Many of us have not had an opportunity to even finish High School, much less College, I am one of them. I do not have anything to hang my head in shame for. We have however, earned respect amongst our Caribbean and other British Commonwealth peers as astute politicians and businessmen, and we do have hands on political experience. But, when I say Mr. President, that through a Speaker we can improve on our political education and strength, and that we can learn more about the House. For instance Mr. Speaker, Mr. President, I hope I will soon be saying that, for instance there are presiding officers and speakers' conferences held in the Commonwealth, and I doubt that you have yet had the opportunity to attend one, or that any of the previous President we have had have gone. I am hearing Mr. President that you went to one, and for my clarification, I would sit down now, and you tell me whether you went....No Sir, I said for my clarification....Mr. President, I think I am making good way here, I think I am giving some good debate, that is why I hear some jibes coming across from the Government bench. You all behave yourselves and vote for this thing today.

Anyway, what I am saying is, that if we had a Speaker he could attend not one, not two, but he would be a man here that we could trust, he would go to every one of the conferences, to learn more, come back and impart his knowledge to us. We do not have that chance Mr. President, with you, nor from any one of the Governors that we have had. Mr. President, my colleagues here in this Honourable House who may succumb to the scare remarks, and we have had some, by weak, timid and jealous individuals, could only live to regret that they did not grasp this opportunity, or they may try and explain why to a future generation, and how this present one ignored the opportunity given to us their elected representatives, to add I may say, further Caymanian dignity to this Honourable House. Without any advancement or change in the way the executive branch of Government works, our present constitution provides for this appointment, either from amongst one of us in this House, or anyone else who may suitably be qualified, and whom I should say, His Excellency the Governor would appoint. In the past, there were many who doubted that Caymanians could hold the many important posts they now do in just about every department in Government and the private sector. Years ago Mr. President there were many sceptics. I remember them, when they said they were going to appoint some Caymanians to certain posts they sang out, "What are you putting him here for? What are you going to do with him." I am going to tell you now that it was not only foreign people saying that you know, but some of our own. In the past there were fears that other Caymanians would be kept down, and others would not have a chance to grow. Mr. President, the situation today, and my colleagues here in this Honourable House know this, that this is far from the truth.

We have progressed well, even though we might not agree with everything the Civil Service does. We have progressed well in this country by having the majority as Heads of Departments. The ones that we are not doing so well with are on the reverse side. You know Mr. President, we have the Caymanian Protection Board that administers and screens applications for work permits, to ensure that qualified Caymanians are not passed over to bring in, or appoint a non-Caymanian to important post which they are quite capable of holding. Well Sir, I am offering this challenge to Members of this House, to consider ourselves as the Protection Board for this Assembly, and to vote according to our conscience, as to whom they want or do we want to see as the next Presiding Officer for this House - a non-Caymanian or a Caymanian. If this Government can recommend and appoint members of the Protection Board to guard the interests of all Caymanians in the private sector, then I submit that we as Legislators, can act sensibly and responsibly, and make the decision to protect the rights of Caymanians to serve in this Assembly. To vote otherwise would be to think small, and that is not our habit. We think big in practically every other area; our homes, cars, TV dishes, you name it, our economy and a very stable one it is I may add. As our economy continues to expand, so rightfully should be our political responsibilities to our people. We have this opportunity to act on this measure, to appoint a Speaker.

Now you Mr. President, have said many times, that it is our right under the present constitution, and I must add again for the sake of clarity, without any advancement or change to our present form of Government, in spite of what certain letters to the press have tried to say. The dignity of the Members of this House and future Members of the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly is now forever at stake, not the small minded cowardly pronouncements of a jealous few. I am confident Mr. President, that our new Governor to be, Mr. Scott will no doubt, be pleased to get on with the business of governing, as you have often said, instead of having to sit in these Chambers as President. Such a move Mr. President, would relieve Mr. Scott from the pressures and confrontations which you have not had the pleasure of avoiding during your last five years. You know, I have had to walk out on you, but what is that saying Mr. President? It is a sign of the time for change, that is what it is. We are no longer accepting what you may say, or the next one may say, and the other people might come along and say "well you are not obeying the rules", but I can tell you, I am going to be frank with you, which some of these ones up here do not want to be. Many times you say something, and you see some of them look at you and they get up and go out and go inside the room. That is because they do not like what you have to say. When I do not like what you have said, I tell you so, or I walk out, but they put it another way, and try to hide it. That is the truth.

With the appointment of a Speaker Mr. President, the workload of the Governor's Office would be lessened, there is no doubt about it, and we politicians could get down to the nitty gritty of constructive debate, without having to worry about whether or not the Governor is going to like what we are going to say. I asked my colleagues how is it possible that every Government department and private sector business could continue to grow and mature, and we cannot. Rubbish. I do not need to remind them Sir that the people of these Islands in July 1972, gave us a new Constitution to govern them with. In other words, provisions were made for a Caymanian, and there are capable Caymanians, if he would create the post, to take up the position of Speaker in this Honourable House. Are they prepared to continue denying our own people their right? And, that is what they are doing. What would probably happen is that we might not get a Speaker we like, but he would be a speaker, a Caymanian Speaker. I am going to be frank with you, there are people we can appoint, but because certain Members of this House do not like them, they are not going to be appointed, but had they liked them the Speaker would be appointed. That is the truth Mr. President. This decision Mr. President, is undeniably a vote that needs the depth of ones conscience, and I am glad you have urged the Members of the Government bench to forego their collective responsibility and vote their consciences, and I am also glad to hear that the three Official Members will not be voting on this particular one.

Mr. President, my colleague the Member for North Side and I, have dared to bring this motion to the House this time, not as the new young Turks, or turtles as we have been called, but as responsible legislators who recognise that the world is changing, and so is the Cayman Islands. Besides, our obvious affluent life style, I again would like to draw reference to the advances made in the executive and judicial branches of Government. Not to mention the tremendous ongoing growth being achieved in the private sector. We here in this House of Assembly, should illustrate responsibility by recognising that we too can progress with the appointment of a Caymanian Speaker. Our elected colleagues are also a part of this generation, and whether they like it or not, the burden is on them to support or reject this motion. I hope they do not reject it. I know Mr. President, what I will be telling my constituents when I offer myself to them again, God willing, next year in November. I urge my colleagues to seriously consider the implications of how they vote, because for the electorate's benefit, I intend to ask for a Division after the vote on this motion is taken. And, I believe that if something like this was put out to a vote it would be unanimous in this country, to appoint our own Speaker, there is no doubt about it. The time has come Mr. President, for all Elected Members of this House to put aside unwarranted apprehension, petty indifferences and act in favour of our own, and when I say 'our own', our own legislative development. The motion is probably the single most important measure brought to this House since we approved a new Constitution, providing us with the authority to appoint a Speaker. To shirk our responsibilities and harbor petty fears and jealousies will be getting us nowhere. I think Mr. President, if it seems that we are not grateful for the role you have played in our development, no slight is intended, as I have said. I think Sir, that our time has come, the days of 'soon come' are just over in the Cayman Islands. All the cliches about the Island's that time forgot or as others put it, as the Islands that forgot time, they have all gone, they are not here any more. We have been politically elected by a majority of the people of these Islands. We can set precedents for the future, starting afresh with the new Governor, Mr. Scott. The Members of this Assembly and the people could then be justifiably proud of one accomplishment, seeing a Caymanian sitting in your chair Sir, as Speaker.

This motion Sir, does not need the approval of London. It needs the support and firm approval of the Members of this House. Speaking on behalf of my constituents, I am confident in stating that it will be a proud day when this entire House, not only the Speaker's Chair, is occupied entirely by Caymanians. I am not saying Mr. President, I am not talking about independence, less that be misconstrued, and I am not saying that it is going to be right now, either, I am not talking about that. I am saying that we are proud enough to want our own in this House. We have got to start somewhere to bring this about, and a golden opportunity is here right now. This measure does not need to be sent to another Committee, we are the all encompassing Committee, voting to improve ourselves just as we voted amongst ourselves to elect the present Members of Executive Council. Now it is their turn, for the Members of Executive Council to vote with us according to their consciences for unanimous approval of this motion. Every dependent territory in the British Commonwealth can boast with pride that one of their own is Speaker of their Parliament, no independent country, a colony just like us. Mr. President, we the Elected Members of this House as the lawmaking body of this country should exercise our rights under our existing constitution, and vote in favour of this motion. Her Majesty's Government in England has said that it is all right, and you as Governor, have said that you would welcome the appointment of a Speaker. Her Majesty's Government in England has approved such an appointment under the Constitution.

It should also be noted Sir, that the majority of our now serving and past legislators have also expressed the desire to see a Caymanian serving in this Honourable House as Speaker. The only one I have heard of so far say that he does not want a seat, is my good friend behind me from Cayman Brac. I do not know for what reason. I have been begging him to support me, but his heart is like a rock. My colleague from North Side and I, have taken the initiative by supporting the ushering in of this new administration. Now together we can all stand up and be counted, by giving unanimous support to this motion. I feel strongly about it, or else I would not stand up here and say the things I say, and I urge all the Elected Members of this Honourable House to make all Caymanians proud, and approve this measure for the appointment of a Caymanian Speaker.

One last remark Mr. President, before I sit down is that I intend to move the suspension of 42(2) so the President would not have to make a decision if we came to a tie vote, it might not be, but if it does, I will seek suspension of the Standing Order.

Thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Before I call on another Member to speak, I would just like to make one point, because I would not wish there to be a misunderstanding. If I understood him correctly, the last speaker, the Second elected Member for West Bay said that I had welcomed the suggestion that the Governor should cease to be Speaker and should cease to preside over meetings, I think that is what he said. That was not what I said. I was very careful about what I said. I said I welcomed the debate and the opportunity that Members would have to reach a conclusion. But I did not express an opinion either way as to whether the Governor should remain Speaker.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Well Mr. President, just on a point of information. Maybe I read what you said wrongly, but what you said, maybe I read it to be otherwise, but I thought you were glad to get out of the Chair.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I was careful not to say whether I should be glad or not. I said that I would keep my private opinion to myself, but I did say I welcomed the debate.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Most other ones have said the same thing, but I often thought what would happen if....

MR. PRESIDENT:

Well, I just did not want the public to be misinformed on the point.
The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, it has been said in so many words that any person who opposes this motion is a timid person. Now Mr. President, I am going to make my position clear that I am going to oppose the motion, I am going to vote against the motion, but lest anyone should think that I am timid, he should examine the Hansards of this House. I may not huff and puff as much as some people, but when I have to make a point, I make it.

The position of Speaker, Mr. President, was likened to the Caymanian Protection Board, and I would invite Members to look at the Hansards for 1971, and they would see that I had the privilege of introducing those laws into the Assembly, and that it was done against great odds. So that does not display any timidity. It has also been said Mr. President that if this were put to a vote, it would receive a unanimous vote. I could only help Members on that question by referring them to Chapter 37. of the Report given by the Rt. Hon. Lord Oxford and Asquith, KCMG, when he reported on our present Constitution in 1971. Mr. President, this is what Lord Oxford and Asquith had to say about it:

"The question whether the Administrator should continue to preside at meetings of the Assembly or whether there should be a Speaker (drawn preferably from outside the Assembly) is one which evidently much exercised the minds of elected members. The majority and minority reports of the Select Committee were both in favour of a Speaker but opinion on this point has since been modified and several of the signatories would now prefer the Administrator to preside. The earlier opinion stemmed partly from the general feeling that the Administrator should withdraw from some of his many functions. It was also felt that his power to intervene at any stage of a debate, not only on points of order but on points of substance, gave him an unfair advantage over members who would usually have only one opportunity to speak. It was suggested too that his position as Her Majesty's representative made it inappropriate for him to take an active part in Parliamentary proceedings. Those who changed their opinion did so partly because they recognized that the part he played in the proceedings was a valuable one and partly because of the uncertainty of finding a suitable

Speaker.

The position, as I see it, is that if there is a strong front bench of officials (or alternatively, in a more advanced type of constitution, a front bench consisting of Ministers) the functions of the person presiding can be largely confined to matters of order - for what purpose a Speaker, if available, may be more appropriate than the Administrator. But when the front bench is weak either in numbers or in experience, the Administrator's guidance will often be necessary if a measure is to be successfully handled. In the Cayman Islands Assembly, where officials are very heavily outnumbered and there are no Ministers, such guidance has evidently been necessary in the past. I foresee its continued necessity for some time to come, where the issues under discussion are sensitive and controversial."

Now Mr. President, Lord Oxford and Asquith, as Members know, canvassed opinion on his findings far and wide in these Islands. He held public meetings, he went and sat in the Town Halls in the districts, and heard what the general public had to say about desires for constitutional advancement, and it was on that basis, and on the basis of consultation with the then Members of the Assembly that he wrote his Report.

I am flattered Mr. President, that the mover and seconder of this motion might in fact have been somewhat misguided by the comment of Lord Oxford and Asquith about when the Government front bench is able, strong and capable. I believe that because this is the position today, they may be led into a false sense of security, and are therefore advocating the appointment of Speaker. But, as Lord Oxford and Asquith said, we have no guarantee that this will continue to be so, and the guidance of the Governor as Speaker will be invaluable if the front bench in Government was ever made up of inexperienced and less able people.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: When you say 'experienced' the front bench, you are leaving out the two back bench Members, or what?

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: I am speaking generally.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: Oh, so who then?

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Shut up!
Now Mr. President, it has also been suggested that this motion would ensure the appointment of a Caymanian to the office of Speaker. But what the Constitution has to say about it is this, and this is Section 32(2) of the Constitution. It says:

"The Governor, acting in his discretion, may appoint a Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, who shall be a person, whether or not a Member of the Assembly, who is qualified and not disqualified to be a Member of the Assembly:

Provided that this subsection shall not come into force until the Legislative Assembly has passed a resolution that there shall be an office of Speaker."

Mr. President, there is no guarantee therefore, in that section of the Constitution that if a person is appointed, it would necessarily be a Caymanian. And if there is some legal deficiency in the drafting of our 1972 Constitution Mr. President, I would suggest that it may have been in this area, because there is much about the appointment of a Speaker that should be there, if in fact we were going to appoint a Speaker. The point being Mr. President, there is no indication of the term of the Speaker's office, whether it would finish with the life of the House as is customary in other jurisdictions, or whatever. And frankly, Mr. President, I believe that to meet the wishes of both the mover and the seconder of this motion, the speaker would in reality have to be appointed by the Members of this Legislature, and in the instances where the Member refers to contacts with fellow parliamentarians from abroad, that is certainly the way it is done. So, I would not be too eager to latch on to the bandwagon of some of these fellow parliamentarians who we meet from time to time when we go to the Commonwealth Parliamentary Conferences.

Maybe Mr. President, I could remind Members of the experience which the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council and myself had with one of those parliamentarians from a territory where they call themselves Ministers, and where they had a Speaker. We both came back short of cash which we loaned to one of those Ministers, and have never been able to recover, and I believe they have even lost their Speaker subsequently. I do not know whether he was borrowed, stolen or done away with.

As I have said Mr. President, I am sure that that deficiency in the Constitution was probably due to the fact that the general feeling of the country, and of the Members at that time certainly was that the appointment of a Speaker was not an urgent or important matter, and that is probably why more attention was not given to that section of the Constitution, when it was being scrutinized.

One must remember Mr. President, when we talk about other Caribbean countries, we are talking primarily of countries that have the party system, which does not yet formally exist in the Cayman Islands, and as to what other Commonwealth Parliamentarians might feel about our position with the Governor sitting as Speaker of the Assembly, Mr. President I could not care less, the way they feel. My responsibility here is to see to the welfare of the Cayman Islands, and it has quite rightly been pointed out Mr. President, that we have an economy that is the envy of many countries in the Caribbean.

We have no natural resources as such. We have sand, sea, sun, a friendly people and I would hope Mr. President, a pragmatic people. And until someone can quantify to me the value which we derive from having the Governor sit as Speaker, or conversely, could tell me how much we would lose if he was not there, I am not prepared to move. In other words Mr. President, what I am saying is that if something works well, leave it alone. We have a strong economy; the President does not exercise an overburdening or awesome rule in this legislature. In fact Mr. President, I am sure that if there were an independent Speaker sitting there, more Members would get thrown out, and basically, that is how most of the time in this Assembly would be spent. If Members displayed to the Chair the respect and dignity which it deserves, we would have no problem....

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Like when you leave and go into the Coffee Room. I hope you are including that as well.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Shut up!

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I hope you are including that as well.

MR. PRESIDENT: Order! Order!

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. President, I have had my tiffs with Speakers in this Chamber, but I defy anyone to find anywhere in the Hansard, where I have been disrespectful to the chair. I have on occasions had the need to manoeuvre...(LAUGHTER).... within the Standing Orders of the House, to get my point across. But I believe that I, if not always, almost always succeeded in doing that, and that is the way it should be Mr. President, and then it brings me on to the next point that was made. That was, that the appointment of a Speaker would enhance the knowledge of Members of the Legislature, because the Speaker would attend the Conferences of Speakers and Clerks held annually, or whenever, in the Commonwealth. He would gain knowledge and would come back impart it. Mr. President, the deliberations in this House are controlled by our Standing Orders, and where they are silent, we apply the rules of the House of Commons, and there is a Bible on parliamentary procedure called Erskine May. So that no speaker going to a conference can in fact, learn anything which is not contained in our Standing Orders, or in Erskine May. Now they certainly benefit from those conferences, to the extent that they understand and exchange views as to how different interpretations may be applied, and so on. But when it comes down to the final analysis, Erskine May is the Bible on Parliamentary procedure, except where our Standing Orders specifically state what happens in a given case. Our Standing Orders Mr. President, are written and amended from time to time by the Members of this House. So, the question of increased knowledge does not in my opinion enter into the matter. There are time Mr. President, when I accept that Her Majesty's representative as Governor in these Islands, having to sit in this Legislature as President, is somewhat compromised, or maybe has some of its dignity taken from it. But I have seriously considered Mr. President the advantages and the disadvantages of the situation, and I believe that in balance, the advantages of the Governor sitting here as President as regards the way in which he can carry out his high office as Governor, far outweighs any disadvantage which might be attached to the office of Governor, because of any problems encountered here.

To summarize Mr. President, I feel that this matter was widely canvassed when Lord Oxford and Asquith visited the Territory in 1971. The people spoke, and as I read from his recommendations, he gleaned from his talks that the people would prefer to allow matters to remain as they were, where the then Administrator who is now Governor sat as President of the Assembly. So I believe that the people of the Cayman Islands had quite a bit of input into that decision. The only merit Mr. President, I see in this motion, and it does have this merit, and that is, to remove the Governor from the unpleasantness that he sometimes experiences at the hands of Members, by him being in this Legislature as President. But we as Members can diminish and decrease those incidents of, shall I say, demeaning experiences if we pay more respect to the Chair, follow our Standing Orders and refer often to Erskine May, and when we have a point to make, let us make it within the ambit of our Standing Orders, in the framework of Erskine May. We might have to sometimes be persistent as I have said before, but we can be persistent and remain within the Standing Orders.

As far as I am concerned Mr. President, our present situation has served us well. We have a buoyant economy, and until I am satisfied that any move to remove the Governor as Speaker of this House will not affect our economy, I am going to say 'steady as she goes', it is not being done out of timidity. I have taken many unpopular stands, but when I take those unpopular stands, I am satisfied it is for the benefit of all Caymanians, and I am not satisfied that this motion would serve the benefit of all Caymanians, therefore Mr. President, when the time comes, I am going to vote against it. I will be happy to respond to my name when the division is called.

MR. PRESIDENT:

for our customary lunchtime break, and I will suspend proceedings until approximately two fifteen p.m.

I think that the time has come and I will suspend proceedings

AT 12:43 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:23 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

being a few moments late.

My apologies to Members for

Private Member's Motion

No.1/87. Continuation of debate. The George Town.

The Second Elected Member for

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

support of Private Member's Motion No.1/87, in respect of the appointment of a Speaker of the Legislative Assembly.

The Private Member's Motion

reads, Mr. President:

"WHEREAS the Cayman Islands Constitution 1972 allows that the Governor may appoint a Speaker of this Assembly.

AND WHEREAS there is to be a change in the person who occupy the Office of the Governor in the near future.

BE IT RESOLVED that there shall be an Office of Speaker."

The only section of the motion Mr. President, which would seem redundant is that the second 'Whereas' should not have been placed there, because if there is a necessity for such an appointment, or for the resolution to be placed at this time, it should be done regardless of whether or not the Governor is leaving the Islands. We could have looked into this matter before.

The section of the Constitution Mr. President, which deals with this matter is Section 32, and I would like to read this for the benefit of the listening public:

"1. At sittings of the Assembly there shall preside -
(a) the Governor; or
(b) at any time when there is a person holding the office of Speaker, the Speaker; or
(c) in the absence of the Governor, or as the case may be, of the Speaker, the Senior Official Member of the Assembly.

2. The Governor, acting in his discretion, may appoint a Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, who shall be a person, whether or not a Member of the Assembly, who is qualified and not disqualified to be a Member of the Assembly.

Provided that this subsection shall not come into force until the Legislative Assembly has passed a resolution that there shall be an office of Speaker."

Mr. President, provision is already made in the Constitution for the appointment of a Speaker of the House, and this motion seeks to have the resolution or motion passed, so that the office of Speaker would be established.

Before dealing with the text of my contribution to the motion, I wish to comment briefly on certain remarks made by the Honourable First Elected Member of Council, and while I agree with him on certain issues, as has been recently evident by my support of a motion coming to this House, I think the Hansards will show that we never always agreed. I believe that this is one case when I have to disagree, respectfully, with him. I believe that he is living in the past on this particular issue. The Member is not as up to date on what is happening in the Cayman Islands as I would have hoped. While I have a lot of respect for the Report of Lord Oxford and Asquith, I believe we are talking about a Report that is some 16 year old. It would be interesting Mr. President, to see the reaction of the Cayman Islands public today if this issue was taken to referendum. To suggest that the people of the Cayman Islands today are of the same opinion as in 1971, I think is incorrect.

We have not only improved our physical development, but we have improved constitutionally and otherwise. I do not believe that even this Legislative Assembly Building was here in 1971, neither was the Government Administration Building. The Tower Building, I could tell you of a lot of developments that have passed in those 16 years, yet the Member is suggesting that in this particular case, we must not move ahead. We must continue to abide by the Report of Lord Oxford and Asquith. Perhaps Mr. President, it would be in the best interests of this Honourable House if less references could be made to these antiquated and outmoded pieces of reports, because they have become redundant by the inflection of time. Perhaps we should now be considering inviting a Constitutional Commissioner such as Lord Oxford and Asquith to determine exactly how the people feel. Also, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council made reference to other Caribbean islands. Mr. President, we in the Cayman Islands are leaders in the Caribbean, we are not followers. So I do not feel that if we took a step in this Legislative Assembly, that we would indeed be following the example of others. If you look around the Caribbean today, there is no other island in the Caribbean that is any more advanced than we are. Yet constitutionally, we are the most backward of the islands. I also believe Mr. President that if a Caymanian was placed in the seat of Speaker, that he would be given as much respect as anybody brought from overseas. There are no specific qualifications for Speaker, Mr. President. We have an example of a very brilliant lawyer who has just been made our Attorney General, a man for whom I have a lot of respect, unlike of course his predecessor. And, Mr. President, what is to stop this gentleman being appointed to the post of Governor in Anguilla or some other place tomorrow, coming back here as Governor and sitting as Speaker? Does it mean that he has more basic academic qualifications than his other legal colleagues? No Mr. President, there is no specific qualification for the Speaker, all that is necessary is a good knowledge of parliamentary procedure, your Standing Orders, your constitution, and so on and so forth.

Mr. President, unless these top positions are filled by expatriates, it is the general feeling that no Caymanian is capable of doing it. Mr. President, nothing could be further from the truth. There are many, many Caymanians that given the chance, could fill the position of Speaker in this House. Just to name a few, you have people like and I would put her at the top of the list, Mrs. Sybil McLaughlin. You have got people like Mr. Warren Conolly, Mr. Vernon Jackson just to name a very few, and not to speak about senior Civil Servants. Right across from me a man like Mr. Lemuel Hurlston or Mr. Jefferson, or anybody could be placed there, because they have a very good knowledge of our parliamentary procedures. Mr. President, it is unfortunate that some of us keep speaking in this House of our interest for Caymanians, yet when the opportunity arises, we are the first to try and block those openings.

The Member mentioned that the Constitution is silent on the question of the period of appointment. I do not see where this would be a major problem, and in this particular case, is hardly relevant, as when the office of Speaker is established, the necessary amendments can be made to stipulate the period.

I further cannot subscribe to the view that every time there is an election in this country, that there would be a change of Speaker. I think that that is a retrograde step, and it is a backward way of looking and viewing your fellow Caymanians. I believe we have Caymanians in this country who would be given as much respect as any Governor who is placed in that seat as Speaker of our House, or as President of the Assembly.

Mr. President, I believe that if this motion had been brought to this House by a Member of the Government Bench, that it would today be given full support, and I feel that it is wrong just because a motion is brought by a Member of the back bench that there is so much struggle especially when the motion has so much merit. It would be a shame Mr. President for this motion to be rejected, mainly because it is feared that if an appointment was made of somebody like say, Mrs. McLaughlin, or Mr. Conolly, or Mr. Vernon Jackson or somebody else, that they would be political and have political leanings. Of course, many times Members of this House have disagreed with the Chair, but this will happen, this is politics, this is why the Governor's position should not be compromised by having to sit in that Chair also as a referee of a fight sometimes, because regardless of how good he is at refereeing, somebody is going to feel that he has not been treated right. I feel that for this reason if for no other, that the Governor should be left with his role as Governor of the Cayman Islands, and that a Speaker should be appointed.

The Constitution states Mr. President that the person does not have necessarily to be a Caymanian, even though this may be in the Constitution, I would hope that if an appointment is made, that it would be a Caymanian. The Constitution states that the qualification is someone who is not disqualified to be a Member of the Assembly. Right now Mr. President, the Honourable First Elected Member and myself, we are trying to put through a motion in this House that will protect the interests of Caymanians now, and for the future, and it would seem that there is a contradiction in terms, when we push for a motion like that, and at the same time reject this motion which seeks to appoint a Speaker of this House.

In considering the pros and cons of the appointment of a Speaker of the House, various factors must be born in mind, least of all, is not the development which our country, that is the Cayman Islands, have experienced over the past 14 years. I have seen representations made by certain individuals against this motion, but thus far there seems to be no real substance to support their opposition to the appointment of a Speaker of our Honourable Legislative Assembly. We live in a democracy, and thus there is freedom of speech by all and sundry. As a matter of fact, our free press encourages the exchange of ideas and varying points of view, and to my knowledge Mr. President, this has not been denied anyone in this country. Therefore, anyone who wishes to write for or against this motion should not be denied this privilege, even though Mr. President, I feel that much that is found in the columns, the letter columns that is, of the Compass should be taken with a grain of salt. It should also be understood that many of the letters if not most of them, are expressing the own personal views of those individuals. It does not mean Mr. President, that everything that is read in these columns should be taken as gospel. The people of the Cayman Islands should make up their minds on an issue like this, and the same way the right was given to them in 1971, to decide on an issue like this, it should be done today, and this is why I feel that a motion as important as this, should probably be delayed until a proper referendum could be taken to decide how the people of this country feel about the appointment of a Speaker of the House. It should not just be thrown aside, because the Government bench may have the support to do this, this would not be doing a service to our people in our country. We are here to represent the interests of our people, and we would be denying them their rights if for any personal reasons, we decide that an issue of this national importance should be just cast aside.

Mr. President, there seem to be certain individuals who are so paranoid about any changes in Constitution, that they would keep the Cayman Islands as the islands that time forgot for ever and ever. They would impede the progress of this country, but I would like to make it abundantly clear that this motion does not call for a change in the Constitution. A number of people have asked me about this, the provision is already in the Constitution. All that is necessary now under the Constitution is that a resolution be passed by this Legislative Assembly to create the office of Speaker. Yes, Mr. President, the legislators in 1971 were indeed very wise people, and they saw the necessity for such a move from then. Mr. President, even though we have great respect for the individuals who have filled the Chair as President since then, as a nation, and as people with national pride, we feel that as soon as we have grown to the stature where we can have one of our own people fill a position, that that should not be denied them.

Mr. President, what surprises me is that there are so many of our upstanding people in the community that would let you believe that this country would fall apart if Caymanians are put in top positions. This is not so, right now we have a number of people who are highly qualified for top positions. I could name you another gentleman like Mr. Woodward Terry who is coming out of Law School. What would be there to stop a man with the qualifications, the legal knowledge, the necessary ingredients from going on a course abroad to the House of Commons or wherever, and coming back as Speaker of this House. Mr. President, I cannot subscribe to the view that we do not have people that could be impartial and unbiased enough to fill that seat. We are really crying our Caymanians down, when we say that there is nobody whom we could think of who would be capable of doing a proper job as Speaker of this House.

Mr. President, I too do not agree that sufficient time has been given to the public, before this motion was brought here. Because, unlike years back, the public now have the opportunity to listen to the radio. Also I believe, and I am speaking from my own experience, that many of the Members like Mr. McKeava Bush from West Bay and others, still keep in very close touch with their constituents. I do not have a meeting every month, because this is not necessary. I go and I visit my people, person to person, and I meet many more of them than I would if I had a public meeting. But there is not another Member, and I say this without fear of contradiction, who keeps in closer touch with their constituents than I do. So I have a good idea of how they feel on matters, and I would say here and now, that if a referendum was taken tomorrow to decide on this issue, and the people knew that there were capable Caymanians who could handle the position, that they would support it. So when we speak in this House that we are not going to support an issue like this because it is an interest of the people of the Cayman Islands, I wonder whether it is in our own personal interest, or out of some petty reason, because of a personality reason.

Mr. President, unfortunately, there is an old colonial feeling pervading in our Islands, that unless you are an expatriate, and I say this in the best way, because I have nothing against expatriates, but unless you are an expatriate, you cannot do anything right. As long as you come from another country, it could be from Little Cayman, you had better fly into Cayman, then you can do the job. But if you are Caymanian, no you cannot handle the job. This is wrong, there are no nationalities in the world that are any brighter than Caymanians, and given the opportunity, they can handle the job as well as any nationality. We see it right before us, we see it in this Legislative Assembly, we see it all around Cayman. Caymanians given the opportunity, can handle the job as well as anyone else. What is to stop any Governor coming to these Islands, from taking sides in the House, he is a human being. He might look across here and not like the Second Elected Member for West Bay, but he might like the Honourable First Elected Member, therefore he might be a little more inclined to lean towards the First Official Member. These things are human tendencies, even though I must make the point that so far we have not a major problem with this, but we have to cope with these problems. Nobody is suggesting that if a Speaker of the House was appointed here tomorrow, a Caymanian, that you are not going to have some teething problems, of course you are going to, but we are a developing nation. I have always said that if I am going to be taken off to jail, I would rather know that one of my own Caymanian police had arrested me.

Mr. President, there are a number of born Caymanians, or persons with Caymanian Status who could ably fill the Chair of the Speaker of the House, and I want to make the point abundantly clear that it has nothing to do with whether or not the Governor is or is not capable of the job, but the Governor should remain Governor of these Islands, in his role as the Queen's representative, and the Speaker of the House should be dealing in this Legislative Assembly on matters to do with the legislative process of this country. One Member said to me that this is his best opportunity to meet the Governor. Well, God help us, if we have a Governor governing the Cayman Islands and legislators cannot meet him, that is the poorest excuse that I have ever heard, but the gentleman is free to his opinion, that is no reason at all. If I am a representative of my people, it is my duty and the duty of the Governor to meet with me when possible, whether he likes to do that or not, I represent the people.

Mr. President we would be taking a retrograde step in this country if we allowed an opportunity like this to pass. I know Sir that you have in the past, said to us that any time we want to appoint a Speaker, you would be happy to entertain the resolution. You have not tried to block it. As a matter of fact, sometimes reading between the lines, I believe you might be somewhat supportive of the idea, but, be this as it may, I feel that we are now talking of our national pride. We are talking of our national development. We are talking of placing people, Caymanians, capable Caymanians, in positions that they can fill. Mr. President, I am tired of seeing our own Caymanians who are capable of filling positions, pushed into second rate jobs; pushed aside as second class citizens. 'You cannot do it because you are Caymanian'. By virtue of the fact that the person is expatriate, makes him a better qualified person to fill the post, nothing could be further from the truth. Any Member here that would subscribe to that view would be doing an injustice to the people they represent.

Mr. President, I would not this afternoon be supporting this motion if I felt that it would in any way endanger this country. Because unlike a lot of other people, I have nowhere else to go, so I have the interest of my country and the people of my country at heart when I support this motion. I believe Sir that each Member here this afternoon should search his own heart. Give this matter very, very serious consideration; forget about the politics; forget that Mrs. Sybil McLaughlin might have run in the last election, or that Mr. Warren Conolly was a politician, or whatever. Think of your country, this is most important, and what could be done by people like that. It does not matter about the personality clashes. Not every Member of this Legislative Assembly agrees totally with the Presiding Officer now, the President of this House, but he is respected. The same would apply if we had a Caymanian here, and I am not talking of any Caymanian or any and every Caymanian, I am talking of people who are as qualified as the present Presiding Officer, to handle that job.

Mr. President, this is a democracy, and each and everyone of us will have a chance to speak on this motion. And while I might be making an impassioned plea for the support of other Members on this motion, I would not want it to seem as if I am denying them the right to oppose it, because I could not do that. But Mr. President before opposing, I would ask them not only to consider their own personal positions, but to consider the position of the generations to come. If we deny them the right this afternoon on this motion, we are only delaying the inevitable. I say here this afternoon that it will come, so it is a matter of delaying the inevitable. So whether you want it to come now, or two years down the line, this is completely up to you. But we cannot stop the tide of progress in this country. We cannot stop the development that is taking place, the physical development, and at the same rate the Constitutional development that must take place to cope with it.

I am not supporting this motion for personal or for frivolous reasons. I have given a lot of thought to this motion since it was published, and I believe Sir, that Members of Executive Council should exercise their right to vote in accordance with their conscience. If the motion is defeated Mr. President, we would have struck a blow to our people. We would be saying to them, 'we represent you but we do not believe in you'. We would be saying to our fellow Caymanians who have proven to this country and to other countries that they can handle positions, that they are not good enough to do it. We would be saying to them that we do not believe that we can find a Caymanian who is impartial, or unbiased enough to sit in that Chair and give us justice.

Mr. President, in closing, as I have said, provisions are already in the Constitution for the appointment of Speaker. And most importantly Mr. President, we do have a number of Caymanians who can fill the positions. Therefore Mr. President for us to deny our people the opportunity to prove themselves, I would consider it a violation of their rights, of their constitutional rights, because it is imbedded in the Constitution. Mr. President, I hope that Members of the Government bench and others who were considering that they would not give support to this motion, will now change their minds and will support this motion, not only for themselves Mr. President, but indeed for generations to come.

I thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:
the Lesser Islands.

The First Elected Member for

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, Private Member's Motion No.1/87, the Appointment of a Speaker to the Legislative Assembly, to me is a totally unnecessary motion to be before this Honourable House at this time. I think all Caymanians are fully aware that the Legislature has performed its task well. I do not think there are any complaints as to how legislation has been passed. We have performed well. I for one, am honoured to have the Governor appointed by Her Majesty's Government, serving as our President, or Speaker. I think it adds prestige to the House, and although, as the Second Elected Member for George Town said I was wrong for saying, I will repeat, I feel that it gives an ordinary Member like myself, and I would say that this is the seventh session for which I have had the honour of serving my people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in this Honourable House. It gives me the opportunity of having discussions with His Excellency while being in the Legislature serving as a President, that I would not feel that I was justified in taking his time setting up an appointment at his office during his official hours. I am able to keep in closer touch with him, and in order, I think represent my people better.

I would also like to say Mr. President that when I stand to speak in this Honourable House, I have first consulted my constituents, and am speaking their views in this Honourable House, and not my views, and I am not here to criticize any mover, or anyone else, I am speaking the views of my people and what I feel is best for the Cayman Islands as a whole.

The Cayman Islands is a fortunate territory, we have much going for us, as other speakers have said, we lead the Caribbean. So, certainly we could not have been doing too much wrong here in the Legislature if we have achieved this position.

I would like to say also Mr. President, that I am not here campaigning, I am simply stating facts, and I would like to say to all Honourable Members, let us remember that although we have Caymanians who are qualified, and I am the last one to try and crow down Caymanians. I have always been one throughout my life to try and help build the Cayman Islands, and build up our people. That has never entered into my mind, but I am saying it is an honour to have the Governor serving as a President, or the Speaker if you prefer to use that title, and I think it would be a retrograde step at this time, or any time in the immediate future that we the Members here should make that decision, to change. This is no reflection, and I want to make it crystal clear to all Members in this Honourable House, or hearing my voice on the radio, that I am in no way inferring that there are not Caymanians, for I have many good friends whom I feel would be quite qualified to serve as a Speaker of this House, but I do not feel in the best interests of our country, their appointment would serve the purpose.

Therefore Mr. President, I cannot support this motion, and I ask all Honourable Members to consider this on its merits and not just as a matter of political gesture. We must do everything within our power to continue to develop the Cayman Islands as the great little territory it is, and I for one, would like to publicly say that I am very grateful to all the Governors who have so faithfully served us as President here. I know many times it has not been very pleasant, I have tried to be as respectful as I could during the seven years that I have been here, but I know on many occasions I felt embarrassed to know that His Excellency, the Queen's Representative, was being subjected to some of the abuse I thought he was being given. But nevertheless, I would like to go on record as showing my sincere appreciation for the Governor serving as a Speaker of this House, and again I ask all Honourable Members to let us let that continue.

Thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, I rise to oppose this motion. It is a very short motion with three short paragraphs, five lines, but Mr. President, in my view, it is a very important issue, and whatever the views of Members maybe when we debate an important issue, there is always the argument for and against it. So be it. Those who have brought the motion are those who are supporting it; that is one side of it; those who feel that it is not expedient to introduce a Speaker at this particular time could have good grounds for it as well.

Mr. President, over the years I have supported Caymanianization of the Government systems, and to oppose this motion is not really saying that I am against it, or that I am denying Caymanians of a position as Speaker of this House. But, Mr. President, we must accept the fact that this has always been a very delicate subject in the past, that the matter had been debated over and over again, not necessarily by a motion presented in this House, but since 1972 under the then new Constitution which provided for a Speaker of this House at any time that legislators felt that this change should be made, there has been discussion on the matter. I have been involved in some of those closed-door meetings as well, and I know the argument adduced by legislators of the past opposing the appointment of a Caymanian Speaker, or a Speaker of the House. Now Mr. President this is tradition, something that past legislators and present legislators hold dearly in their hearts. We do not just get up and with the stroke of a pen, make changes here. Mr. President, the majority in the past have always supported the view that there should not be a Speaker of the House, and Mr. President, there is no personality feeling in this, it is not an excuse, it is not so. These are views expressed by Caymanians, whether one may have different views from the other, they are all Caymanian views, and we must respect the views of other people too, do not accuse them of things which are not correct. It could be said Mr. President that we could also appoint a Caymanian Governor for these Islands, I thought that would have been mentioned as well. It may be as one speaker has just said, that it is delaying the inevitable, that may be true but sufficient unto the day.

I contend Mr. President, that personal contact in this Chamber with the Governor has been tradition, and it will continue to be tradition for some time, even if there comes a time when the majority say no, we must have a Speaker.

The Governor is a man who is conversant with all the happenings of the country, he is well versed in the affair of the country, and when legislators meet with him they can converse with him. Legislators have played great importance on this in the past, and I dare say they will continue in the future as well. It is all right for one to say that getting in contact with the Governor, or meeting the Governor is something which is everyone's privilege. That may be so, the Governor could perhaps invite legislators to Government House to a reception, and could meet people there, talk with them, but Mr. President, it is not the same as coming into this Chamber and meeting with you, and having that personal contact. This is tradition, and this is what the opposition to this motion is all about.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

You can hear more at cocktail parties, let us play on that.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, we must also remember that we live in a very small society, and especially in recent time political views have been very strongly held by individuals here, and I am not saying that you cannot find Caymanians who could be appointed to the position of Speaker, but whether you continue to accept the Governor as President of this House, or you go for a Speaker, those views are still going to be held by individuals, and therefore, we on this side Mr. President, are strongly of the view that the time for change is really not now, this would not be in the best interest of the country, and therefore I have no problem in opposing the motion, and I do so Mr. President.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think perhaps before I invite any other Member to speak, it may be convenient to take our customary afternoon break now, so I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 3:12 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:29 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Continuation of the debate on

Private Member's Motion No.1. Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I personally like the idea of having an independent Speaker. However, I cannot and will not support the motion before the House. Every Elected Member in this Chamber was elected or had been elected in 1984 on a manifesto which did not mention the appointment of a Speaker, did not mention constitutional changes, and while I know the appointment of a Speaker does not in a sense require a Constitutional change, nevertheless it is a fact that if a Speaker was appointed, we would have a dramatic change in procedure and a substantial and fundamental change in the way the business of the Legislative Assembly would be run. I think it is unfair to the public to sneak in through the back door the many changes which this present Assembly has already made, and are seeking to make in this sitting.

Just look at what we have - since 1984, the Standing Orders of this House have been amended many times, they were amended and when the Standing Order which was amended trapped some of the Members who made the amendment, they had to go back over it and change it. I am referring here to the matter of the method of having questions answered in the House. We have here an amendment which does not really change the Constitution, but which would rather implement a section that has lain dormant since 1972. Hopefully, next week Thursday, we will be dealing with a Private Member's Motion which will seek two substantial changes to the Constitution, and not a word has been said to the public, there has been no public input and we received notice yesterday from a Member that he has tabled a motion, or will table a motion in April, to seek another substantial change to the Constitution with regard to putting in a Bill of Rights. Why are we playing with the Constitution of these Islands behind the backs of the people? I feel that if these far-reaching amendments are to be carried out, the Members should have included these matters in their manifestoes, and if they had been elected on a manifesto seeking Constitutional change, then I would say "go ahead with it". But these Members have no mandate at all from the public to make the changes which they are making, simply because they have the votes.

I feel that these changes, like the one with the Membership, the qualifications for membership should be exposed to the public and perhaps made a part of their manifesto for the next election, and have the courage to go out and say "we need Constitutional changes, we feel capable of making them, it is a sensible thing to do", and let the public react and then if the public elects Members under those circumstances, the Members would then have a free rein. So, while I want a Speaker, I do not want him to be sneaked in through the back door, but I want him to walk proudly through the front door in all his ceremonial pomp.

Section 32(2) of the Constitution provides that the Governor, acting in his discretion, may appoint a Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, provided that this shall not be done until the Legislative Assembly has passed a resolution that there shall be an office of Speaker". So, there is no need to amend the Constitution to appoint a Speaker, the machinery for the appointment is already in the Constitution. However, the Speaker would not be functional and it would be very difficult for the Governor to appoint a Speaker. It would be very difficult to draft the Speaker's term of office. It would be very difficult to write that letter of appointment, because there is nothing at all in the Constitution to tell us what he should do, how he should do it, how you could remove him from office, with one mere exception, and that is, that the person appointed could be a Member of the Assembly, and could also be another person not a Member of the Assembly, but who is qualified to be a Member, and not disqualified to be a Member. So, all the Governor would have to go on in making this appointment, is that he would find the person who is either a Member of the Assembly or a person who is not a Member, but who is qualified to be a Member and not disqualified from being a Member.

It seems strange that this motion should have been brought at this sitting, when there is another motion which seeks to change the qualification of Members. This makes the task of the Governor in making this appointment, even more difficult, because if this resolution is passed today, he will have to bear in mind not only the qualifications and disqualifications of membership, as contained in the 1972 Constitution, but also have those qualifications and disqualifications, may be altered by the amendment which is to come. So, the motion is ill timed, and ill conceived.

The section in the Constitution which provides for a Speaker had been, in my opinion, simply put there by Lord Oxford and Asquith to satisfy the ruling factions of the day. The section is totally inadequate, and therefore for that section to function, it would require at this time, a very substantial amendment to the Constitution in order to define the qualifications of the Speaker; the terms of appointment; the reasons for his dismissal; to identify what would happen in the event of his death or his retirement. So while the Constitution does provide for a Speaker, there is not enough in that section for anyone to go out and appoint a Speaker. The section of the Constitution, like so many other sections are suffering from having been overtaken by the effluxion of time. Our Members ought to have the courage to go to the public and say, "you have an ailing Constitution which needs substantial changes, and we will bring in a Constitutional Commissioner to examine our Constitution in the light of our political and economic progress over the last 15 years." This is what we need, we need major surgery, we do not need an aspirin, and our leaders need to go to the public and tell the story, because recent events have shown that this country can no longer continue with the piecemeal type of Government it has had since 1984.

Every day we hear rumours coming out that the ExCo Members are not agreeing, and that they cannot control the Governor, and that they have a fifth or a sixth Elected Member of ExCo who sits in some law office somewhere and writes the policy of government. These are very serious matters, and show clearly that the Elected Members of Executive Council are no longer in control of the Government of this country, and here we have before us a very important motion, and what did we hear from the chair this morning, that the Governor has released the Members from their collective responsibility, and each one can vote as he pleases - no Government stand. What is wrong with the Government when the Government cannot stand up and say "this is our position on this important constitutional matter, and we do not care what the consequences are?" So what do we hear from the Chair, "Members will vote their consciences". This is a sorry state of affairs, but is a reflection on what has been happening.

There is an ancient proverb which says "He that will not apply new remedies, must expect new evils." This is the stage we have reached in our development, we are afraid to apply new remedies. We have a state in our Parliament where the Member dodges like the Member for Tourism did, dodges behind technicalities, refusing information, and I am going to deal with that in greater detail when I get to my debate on the Throne Speech. Look at the whole series of event, there have been secret meetings on Constitutional matters, secret meetings. The cat was let out of the bag by the Member for North Side and the Lady Member for West Bay, when they mentioned it in their debates here at the end of 1986. In fact, one of them tried to put the blame on my good colleague here from Bodden Town. There were discussions on Constitutional matters by the Committee of 24, at the United Nations. There was a visit here from the Constitutional Committee which is writing the new Constitution for the Turks and Caicos Islands.

There is in this sitting two motions dealing with constitutional matters, and notice being given of a third one, and the public does not know what is going on. I attempted to place a question on the agenda of this meeting, asking about Government's position, and the President in his wisdom or not, ably blocked my attempt, and the letter I received from the Clerk reads that "I" (meaning the President) "would need to know precisely what was then said, before I could rule on this point, and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town should be invited to provide details". What he means by that is that I should give him the Minutes of the meetings held at the end of last year, Minutes which he knows full well have not yet been circulated to us, an effective block of communication, preventing the truth from coming out through a technicality, and this is why we are at a stage of development where we have to put an end to this, and it cannot be done by the flimsy motion before the House.

I like the special treatment given to this motion today, when the Government bench pretends that it does not exist. The Elected Members are going to vote their consciences, and the Official Members are going to be tongue-tied. I would think that on a motion like this, the Honourable Second Official Member, the Attorney General should have given us a lucid explanation of the consequences of making the change that is suggested, an unbiased, legal, factual report on the position. There is one big difference between 1971 and 1987, and that difference is Sir, that in 1971 when we had the Constitutional changes, the public had some input into the matter. Here in 1987 the public have no input, they are not consulted, they know not what is going on. The rug is being pulled from under their feet by very zealous people. There is also an ancient proverb that says that "zeal is fit only for wise men, but is found mostly in fools".

I will turn Sir, to the motion before the House which reads:

"WHEREAS the Cayman Islands Constitution 1972 allows that the Governor may appoint a Speaker of this Assembly,

AND WHEREAS there is to be a change in the persons who occupy the Office of the Governor in the near future,

BE IT RESOLVED that there shall be an Office of Speaker."

I agree with the Second Elected Member for George Town, when he said that the fact that there is to be a change of Governor is not sufficient ground for the appointment of a Speaker. That line makes no sense at all. If we need the Office of a Speaker, we need the Speakership, whether there is a change of Governor or not, and I would think that if there is to be a change of Governor, this would perhaps be a reason for not appointing a Speaker, but I still do not see the relation between the two.

The role of a Speaker in Parliament is an important one. The Speaker in the United States is a man of great influence. In the House of Commons the Speaker is the Presiding Officer, he is the guardian of its privileges, he is its representative on all official occasions. He is elected for a constituency like every other Member, and if we are to have a Speaker, I would like to see that Speaker elected, not appointed, and I will tell you why. The Constitution here says that, "the Governor in his discretion may appoint a Speaker", and in order to carry out that appointment, the Governor will undoubtedly have to use Section 7(v) which deals with the Appointment of Persons.

Section 7(v) says that:-
"the appointment of any person to any public office is the sole responsibility of the Governor", and here this new post of Speaker would undoubtedly have to fall under that section, because there seems to be no other implementing section to carry out the appointment. So, the Governor would find himself having a very difficult time appointing a Speaker for the Legislative Assembly, if he has to do it the way that he appoints somebody to the Civil Service. So without the proper implementation, the proper enabling provisions in the Constitution, it would be impractical for the Governor to make the appointment. There are a few Parliaments in the Commonwealth in which the Speaker is not elected, but believe me, they are in countries that we do not need to follow. If we are going to have a Speaker in this Parliament I think he should come from the ranks of the Elected Members. Let it be shown that he has what it takes to sit in the Chamber. So, in the House of Commons the Speaker is elected in a constituency as every other Member is elected. He reaches Parliament by the same route, and naturally represents the interests of his community in like manner. He is chosen by his fellow members from among themselves, and the first business of every new Parliament is the election of a Speaker. So, it would follow that the Speaker would be elected in a similar fashion to the way our Elected Members of Executive Council are. After a General Election we would elect a Speaker, and then go on to elect the Members of Executive Council.

Now without a Speaker, the House can transact no business, which means we would need, not only a Speaker, but a Deputy Speaker who could function if the Speaker had to be absent, if the Speaker had taken ill, if the Speaker had any business which kept him away, if the Speaker was on a holiday. In the House of Commons they have three deputies to the Speaker, to ensure that the role of Speaker functions at all times. So, if we do have a Speaker we would need a Deputy Speaker, or we would need a provision for the Speaker to appoint somebody to act in his place.

Now, we need in agreeing to this motion, if we do agree, to find out what is going to happen if we have to choose a successor to the Speaker. I guess it follows, if the Governor appoints a Speaker, he probably has the right to revoke or to terminate that appointment. But our Constitution is very clear on membership to the House. It is set out how a Member can lose his seat, and provisions are made for replacements, whether by by-election or if it is an Official Member, by the Governor himself, making a new appointment.

Now in the House of Commons, the election of a Speaker is attended with ceremony, in accordance with the practice of many centuries. It is common for Speakers to ensure that the rights and privileges of all Members are preserved, especially the freedom of speech in debate, and once a person is appointed as a Speaker, I think it will be necessary for him to shed all his previous political affiliations, which would be very difficult, so that he would be not only totally impartial, but would be seen to be so.

It would follow, that if we had an elected Speaker, he would have to resign from his party, and perhaps change his whole life-style. In some countries like in Canada, I understand that his club memberships are even restricted, and here he would not be allowed to go to cocktail parties, because there the establishment would corrupt him. So once a person took on the Office of the Speakership, he can no longer allow himself the informal social activities that are permitted to the other Members. He should not pursue friendships which would appear to favour certain Members above the others. Now it is true that in the commonwealth their different regulations, different statutes governing the role of Speaker, and in the United Kingdom these have changed over the years. The important point is, that in the Caribbean Islands, where they have Speakers, the Speakers have been appointed mostly after independence, with the exception of one or two of the smaller islands where they may still be in a colonial status, but might have a Speaker. So, the majority of these Speakers have been appointed after independence.

Now, I need not go into the work of the Speaker within the Chamber because that is pretty well known. I would suggest that the Member withdraw this motion, and that before we bring it back in April, that each Member of the House make an attempt, to read this valuable book which is in the library of the Parliament, called 'The Office of Speaker in the Parliaments of the Commonwealth'. Because it does have a wealth of information, and it will give an insight into how difficult the Speaker's job is, how difficult it is to be impartial, and so that they have an idea of what they are getting into before they advertise the job.

In closing, I would just like to say that I hope that one day this Parliament will have a speaker, properly appointed, or elected whichever way we may go, whether he is elected as in some countries of the Commonwealth, or whether he is appointed, whether he has been elected as a Member of Parliament, or whether he is not. I do not believe it can be done simply by passing a resolution without any guidelines at all, for the Governor to make his appointment on. The whole matter needs considerable study. The whole matter needs to be gone into carefully, and because it is so important, I do not think the Members should push this matter through today, as they have done so many other things, and then find out later that they have made a mistake. Because, we know that even without a Speaker, a Parliament can be an area in which the rights of the minority are protected, an area in which free debate is allowed, and certainly, if we move away here from our traditional way, I would trust that we have done the work that is necessary.

MR. PRESIDENT: Does any other Member wish to speak? No Member catches my eye....in that case I will invite the mover to exercise his right of reply if he wishes.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: I would not miss the opportunity for all the gold in the world Sir, because Mr. President the only thing that fits this debate so far, is that their ignorance is going to cramp my conversation in my reply.

Mr. President, my reply is going to be delivered with a heavy heart, but the tears that may roll in this Assembly might not necessarily be mine.

Mr. President, we had two Members who chose to speak in favour of this motion. I thank them for their support, and I will try my very best to reply in kind to those who opposed the motion, because Mr. President a man never discloses his own maturity and character so clearly as when he describes others.

Now Mr. President, the first speaker who opposed this motion, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council said that he was not opposing it because he was timid, I will agree with that. I have never looked at him as a timid individual, but I hope that after today he will realize that I live by the motto of the Chisholm clan, 'I am fierce with those who are fierce with me'. Mr. President, he suggested that myself and the seconder of the motion, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, may have been misguided, because the front bench over there are strong. When I am finished with this reply Sir, I will know how strong they are. But I see Sir that we have in the audience one of the persons who wrote a letter to the paper some days ago, and I would also like to give him the benefit of hearing my comments from the horses mouth, because the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council will be here next week Thursday.... he must be a harrier jet, he has disappeared already.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Member should in any case remember that he is expected to address the Chair, not the public audience.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER I was addressing the Chair sir. I was only saying to you Sir, that one of the people who wrote a letter was in the gallery, but as I have said he is like a harrier jet. But anyway, what he has tried to do in his letter to the editor was to try and mislead the public as has been tried on the floor of this Assembly today, about the motives and what the bringing of this motion really means. Because, he has suggested that I was promoting Constitutional change in asking for the appointment of a Speaker. All I can say about that Sir, is, that he spent eight years up in here running in the wrong direction, he could not have been looking at the same Constitution that I have before me today, because it is clearly spelt out there for the Office of the Speaker. His cohort Mr. Merren, one of those who has been chosen by the establishment to try and continue the power. They are out there stirring, but you know Mr. President, that is the key to this debate up in here today, because we are talking about change. We are talking about the shifting of power from the establishment. And it is easy to see how, even in these Chambers, the establishment can dovetail. In one breath most of them are saying that they would like to see a Caymanian there. But you know what the real fear is Sir? I am going to tell you. Their fear is that you might appoint somebody that they do not approve of, and the person might do a good job, that is the crux of the opposition to this. As to the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town's verbose dissertation on a 'sneaking in through the back door'. It is not being snuck through any back door, Sir. I gave notice that I was going to bring this in the Budget Debate in November. I said I would be bringing it. The Member has had it the required period of time, as required by Standing Orders and by Law, or else I could not Table it in this Assembly. It is not my job to go and inform his people in Bodden Town, that is what he is getting paid to do. I informed my people in my constituency, I canvassed the people that I represent about this motion, that is my job. If the rest of the Members up in here have not done their job, I cannot take responsibility for that. Why should I hold back a motion to give him three months to go and talk to his people? He had a public meeting the other night, he should have talked to them then. Mr. President, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council brought out his shrewd and tired little booklet written by Lord Asquith, as he does whenever it suits him, to make a point, and he complained about the lack and absence of various definitions for the Speaker. I was no part of the architecture of the 1972 Constitution, he was. Do not hold me responsible for that, he should have seen that those things were written into the Constitution.

MR. PRESIDENT: The time now is four thirty, and I am obliged to interrupt you, but if you thought you might finish within a few minutes, it might be that the House would prefer to have Standing Orders suspended, in order to complete the debate on this motion today.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: I think I am going to be here quite a while Sir, because there is a lot here that has gone down, that has to be answered, so unless the Members are prepared to suspend Standing Orders for at least an hour or longer, I would not be prepared to have them suspended.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, unless a Member wishes under those circumstances to move the suspension, I would invite the Second Official...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, under Standing Order 83, I beg to suspend Standing Order 10(2) so that the Member can finish his speech.

MR. PRESIDENT: Very well. The motion is that in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 83(2), the provisions of Standing Order 10(2) should be suspended in order to enable the mover to complete his speech and the vote to be taken. Unless any Member wishes to speak, I will put the question.

I have been reminded that the motion should be seconded, I forgot that, I beg your pardon. Is there a Seconder to the Second Elected Member for West Bay's motion?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS No Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: There has to be a seconder otherwise the motion...

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: I will second the motion Mr. President. Very well, the motion is moved and seconded. In that case as I had started to do, I will put the vote.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Now what are we voting, are we in favour of suspending the Standing Orders to allow him to continue....

MR. PRESIDENT: If you say 'Aye' then you are in favour of suspending the Standing Orders to allow him to continue. If you say 'No' then the implication is that you want the adjournment moved now.

So, having made that clear, those in favour.....

QUESTION PUT: AYES AND NOES

MR. PRESIDENT: I think the Ayes had it but...

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Could we have a division Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Certainly we may.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO.1/87
TO BE COMPLETED

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, I was dealing with the comments of the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council. He also reminded my colleague and I that we should not follow the words of other parliamentarians who we meet on conferences, and that we should be astute when we go on these conferences. Well, the Member did not appear to be so very astute when he went on one of his conferences as I was. Because that same individual that sent him back to Cayman short of fifty pounds in cash, tried to short me of fifty pounds in cash, but you see I saw him coming and I told him "no". He got my colleague for fifty pounds but he did not get me. So when it comes to astuteness abroad, we will let the public be the judge.

Now, Mr. President, I spoke in this Honourable House on Tuesday for nearly three hours, and at times I believed I was not being listened to, and it was obvious from the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council that he and his colleagues were not listening to me, because I said then, and I maintain now, that the success of the Cayman Islands is not due to any magical constitutional status, but due to the hard work, honesty and integrity of Caymanians. It is unfortunate that they do not believe that we have Caymanians who are capable, who are honest, who have the ability, who have the integrity to fill the post of Speaker, because that is what a vote against this motion says, but I am going to let a few cats out of the bag.

The Bodden Town Member said I had let some cat out of the bag a little while ago, but I am going to let a good big cat out of the bag here today. He asked and said that he would not support the appointment of a Caymanian to the position of speaker of the House unless someone could quantify the loss or the gain to him. Well, I tried in my opening remarks in one area to quantify it for him, not in dollars and cents, because I do not think that value can be placed on the post, but as the two people who wrote in the press have tried to say, that it is a constitutional change, and in my opening remarks I said that one of my concerns and one of the reasons for bringing this motion at this time was the erosion of the respect for the post of Governor by certain individuals in this House, that does not apply to me, Sir. I think you and I have got on fairly well, but it is the people like Mr. Truman Bodden and Mr. Orren Merren who write letters to the press misleading them about this matter being a constitutional change which will take advantage of that erosion in here to get the constitutional change that they and the Unity Team have always wanted, but have never had the guts to put in their manifesto and campaign on it, because they knew they could not get elected on it.

Let us not forget who brought the Committee from the United Nations and decolonisation to this country, who went to the United Nations after the public outcry and hue, probably against their own will, to represent us there, who was walking around with a petition here a couple of months ago, asking for an overthrow of the Government, and a couple of weeks later you get a statement from the same Decolonisation Committee of the United Nations, questioning whether the people of the Cayman Islands are happy with their Constitutional status. Remember, they made it clear that they were strongly contemplating sending that petition to the United Nations. I have no knowledge of the petition being delivered to Government, so maybe they did send it to the United Nations, and maybe that is the reason why that statement came from the Colonisation Committee; that is the element that concerns me. When the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town criticize the Chair, they do not criticize the President, they criticize the Governor. They have always made that distinction clear when accusing the Chair of being biased, or any other thing. And these two people who write letters to the press are part and parcel of them you know, birds of a feather flock together!

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council said that he would not support it, unless we could guarantee the continuation of respect and separation of the roles. Now, I cannot guarantee them the continuation of respect, as he has said, that is for all of us up in here to do. But the only way to guarantee the separation of roles of Governor and President of the Assembly is to appoint a Speaker, because they are going to be two separate bodies then, and two separate minds. The Member made much hay of my colleague's suggestion that if we appointed a Speaker he could attend conferences and gain knowledge, and come back, but there would be no way of imparting that knowledge to us. We were in no way suggesting that when the Speaker comes back from a Speakers Conference, he would conduct a Sunday School class and he would tell us what he had learn. But Sir, from the knowledge that he gained at those conferences and his interaction with other Speakers, he would be better equipped to fulfill his role of Speaker in this Assembly. He would better be able to interpret our Standing Orders, he would understand the personality differences in people, etcetera, etcetera. Those are the things that could be gained, and the continuity in the post. I want to know Sir, because I believe the Governor as Governor and President and Chairman; President of the Assembly, Chairman of Executive Council, is a fairly full-time job. Now, I do not know if he had any time and maybe the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council is going to assure us that Mr. Scott, the new Governor, who will have five months before a session, is going to read what he calls the Parliamentary Bible and know it off by heart, know our Standing Orders and everything else in that time. I will leave that for him because he will be dealing with him a long time before I get a chance to deal with him. But the first chance I get, I am going to suggest that he should read the Bible.

Now Mr. President, I also mentioned on Tuesday the dance of legislation, and almost every speaker in here today has complained about the timing of this motion, Now they all had warning of it. But Mr. President, with a clear conscience I am going to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. I had a meeting about this motion with Executive Council Members, and do you know what they told me, they would support the motion, but I must hold it back until they found somebody suitable to them, to put there, but I did not take that advice. I brought the motion, and Mr. President, you and the public can see that I, as the mover of the motion, the Second Elected Member for West Bay as the seconder of the motion have made no recommendations to you as to who you should appoint. We are prepared to work with whom ever you chose to appoint as Speaker of the House.

I do not need him to be my friend, or to be on my political side, because that is not his job, his job is going to be to conduct the House in an orderly fashion. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said the same thing, in so many words, but I will get to him as I move along. But as usual, they get up in their rambunctious manner and occupy the time of the House with all sorts of frivolous verbosity, and then they get up and they leave. Mr. President, I fail to see how having a Caymanian as Speaker of this Assembly, is going to have such a detrimental effect on our economy, because the Speaker does not make any decisions you know Sir. You laid it out quite clearly this morning, even in the case of a tie in votes, the Speaker has to go with the status quo, it has to remain as it is. I hope the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council is not leaving as I have not gotten to him as yet.

Mr. President, I can stand here and say that I discussed this motion with my constituents. I called a public meeting, and I discussed it, that is my duty. If ten people show up, or 500 show up, I have done my duty. I also went around and talked to them, and I understand from my colleague from West Bay that in the meeting that they had in West Bay, he had the support of the people in West Bay who were at that meeting, for this motion. and I will tell you Mr. President that although.....

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I am rising on a Point of Order Sir, 35(7), where the Member referred to a meeting which he had with Members of Executive Council.

MR. PRESIDENT:
what your Point of Order is?

I am sorry, I am not quite sure

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
explain.

I will give way Sir, let him

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

35(7) Sir.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
Order, I will give way for his explanation Sir.

Do not worry about the Point of

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

The point is Sir, the Member did meet with Members of Executive Council, but he turned around the undertaking which he gave to make it a requirement of the Members. The understanding between that Member and Executive Council was that if he could convince Executive Council that he had found a suitable Member or members of the public to fill the vacancy, or the post of Chairman, we would discuss the motion again. He has never returned to Executive Council Members until the motion was brought to the House Sir, that is the way that went.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I do not really think that was a Point of Order you know, but since the Member gave way, I will not pursue the matter.

I do not really think that was

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Check 7 Sir. Check subsection 7 of 35, the character of Members is quoted there.

Check 7 Sir. Check subsection

MR. PRESIDENT:

Anyway the point has now been made, and the Member for North Side may now continue.

Well perhaps yes, all right.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Yes Mr. President. The public has heard both sides of the story, they can judge from the debate which side is true, because I gave them no such undertaking, but Mr. President, it is a curious fact that of all the elusions that beset mankind, none is quite so curious as that tendency to suppose that we are mentally superior to those who differ from us in opinion. In all the debate who was asking the questions about the timing of the motion? Not me. And, Mr. President, I gave sufficient notice, that which is required by Standing Orders and by Law, and everybody in this Assembly had time to discuss it with whom ever they wanted. But you know Sir, one is tempted to believe that this is a vote against national pride. Now Mr. President, a lot of the people who got up and raised cane about the motion have left, because the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac, Sir, who spoke on the motion, he not only missed the boat, he missed the ocean, because the rest of us were in the Atlantic Ocean, he must have been somewhere up in the Indian Ocean. He said it was an unnecessary motion, it was frivolous, and we are trying to destroy. You know Sir, any time the Second Elected Member for West Bay and myself bring a motion here that people do not like, they brand us as radicals who are trying to destroy. But when they need that support for something contentious in the public, like the Marine Parks, they want us on their side.

The First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands also said that the Governor brings honour to the House. I have not denied that. My concern is that the House is bringing dishonour to the Governor, and that is one of the reasons for the motion. He said the motion has no merit, and it is politically motivated. I do not know what I am going to get out of this politically.

Now the Honourable Fourth

Elected Member of Executive Council says that he was not denying that there may be Caymanians who could fill the post, but he had debated the subject over and over, but where, behind closed doors. I do not believe in that Sir, bring it here to the floor of the Assembly, let us debate it in open house, let the public know what we are getting at. That is why I am here on the floor of the Assembly.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I am told that the tape will run out in about a minutes time, so I think perhaps I will suspended proceedings for about two minutes, in order to enable them to change it, not for longer, please do not everybody leave.

I am told that the tape will

HOUSE RESUMED AT 5:00 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
Please continue.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:
lacking a quorum.

Mr. President, I think we are

MR. PRESIDENT:

Well that is quite true. I was not going to notice unless a Member brought it to my attention. Let me just look up, 13. I direct that....ah yes, we have a quorum now.

The Elected Member for North

Side may continue.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

they like that coffee in that room you

They will try anything Sir, know.

Before the short adjournment

Mr. President, I was dealing with the comments of the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council, and I was saying that I preferred open discussions where the public could hear what was being said, as has happened today. Both sides of this issue have been aired, and even though the seconder and myself might lose the battle, we may not have lost the war. But again, the Member tried to throw things out of whack by suggesting that the next step might be to appoint a Caymanian Governor. Now he has been around long enough to know that that requires some serious constitutional change, unless he is talking about one of those who was given status etcetera, etcetera, I do not consider them Caymanians. He made a big thing about tradition, tradition, tradition.

It is the tradition of this House to have a Governor as its Presiding Officer, that is a good thing, and therefore it should continue. I agree that it is traditional, but like fishing off the ironshore and the marine parks, that was traditional. The fishing with scenes, the fishing with cast nets, all those things were traditional, but the time had come when we had to make some changes, and the changes were made. I feel that it is time that we changed the tradition in this House, if we are going to continue to retain our constitutional status, and not have it eroded by the elements from the outside. He also thought the motion was not timely. Now Mr. President, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, I do not know where he was coming from Sir, I do not know where he was going, I do not know where he began, I do not know where he got on a train and I do not know where he got off. He talked for about 40 minutes, and he started out by saying he wanted an independent Speaker, and somewhere along the line he said that it should be an elected Speaker, and he should be bipartisan.

Now I do not know how we are going to elect a Speaker in here, and he is going to be bipartisan, because it has got to be the group with the most votes which is going to elect the Speaker. But of course, he expects that after he is elected, we are going to strip him naked up in here, we are going to disrobe him in a ceremony, we are going to take away all his credit cards, we are going to take away all his memberships. We are going to let the Second Elected member scratch him on the forehead, we are going to make the Sergeant-at-Arms tap on his shoulder with the sword. We are going to make somebody else scratch him somewhere else, and then he cannot go to cocktail parties, he cannot go back out of the precincts of the Assembly. I do not think that the Speaker, if one were appointed, has to go through that kind of ceremony. I do not think he is expected to be dehumanised. We do not expect the Governor to stop socialising, that is unreasonable.

The Speaker has to abide by the rules of the road and enforce the rules, that is all. He has to have that ability when he is inside these Chambers. He can talk to me, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, the Honourable First Official Member of Government, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council, the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council, any Tom, Dick or Harry that he wants, as long as when he is in here, he is a fair minded individual who applies the rules as he interprets them, right down the middle. But you see Sir, all of these things are just words, smoke screens to cloud issues before the people of this country, and to mislead the public into thinking that this motion brought here by the Second Elected Member for West Bay and myself, is asking us for some dramatic change which is going to destroy the economy, which is going to disrupt everything.

That is all rubbish, the only thing that is going to change is the person and the body who occupies the Chair, he has to enforce the same rules, the same regulations, he has to make the same decisions, that is all. There are no changes except the body or the person who occupies the Chair. There is no big legal change in the appointment of a Speaker. I am sure if there were, the Honourable Second Official Member would have gladly given us the benefit of his knowledge, and people like me would have gladly accepted it, but there is no change, it is all laid out in the Constitution.

But I have a question for him Sir. As usual he is not here, so absent, gone, another Harrier jet. One of his great quotations was about zealous people who are thought to be wise but most of them are fools. There is nobody in this Chamber that is any more zealous than he is. I mean, sometimes I am wondering if the man is going to have a stroke the way he starts to express himself, and he gets all heated and puckered up when he is making a speech.

As I have said, they cannot hide this behind a cloak, that we are trying to sneak this matter in through the back door, that is simply just not the fact. You know, the only thing that I gathered from the speech of the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac was his fear of the unknown, because he started to tell us about facts, but he never got round to them. But you know Mr. President, as I was saying, what we are talking about here is a power struggle, a power struggle with the establishment. And the Unity Team would be happy to have a Speaker, if they could say who it is going to be. Their greatest fear of all those who have spoken against this Bill is that it is going to be somebody that they do not like; somebody they cannot work with; somebody whom they might not be able to control - that is what we need up there. The big issue he made about the Second Elected Member for West Bay and myself bringing the motion in April about the Bill of Rights, it is going to be brought, it is going to be defeated too, because the establishment does not want us to have any rights enshrined anywhere. We must sit down and take the manablings and accept what rights they give to us. They are scared of an impartial Speaker, I am not.

I am not indicating Sir, that you are partial, do not misunderstand me Sir, that was not the intention. But you know, I might be wrong but I would not doubt that when you make a decision, they catch and put you in the corner and try and influence you too, I watch what is going on. The biggest reason for not supporting it is that it is ill timed and it is ill conceived.

Now Sir, all of the Members say that the timing is bad, but none of them have been constructive enough to say when the timing is going to be good. I will tell you when the timing is going to be good, when they can put whom they want there. That is the timing that is essential to get this through the Assembly. But you know Sir, getting back to the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, and about sneaking things through the back door. Now I want to ask him how much public discussion they had in 1984 when they changed the Constitution? As I recall, they discharged one court and they had not even changed the Constitution yet. They had to come quick, quick, hurry up, change it before they could appoint another one. Of course, they said it was not true, the only place you would have read that was in the Herald, and that it never had any foundation. Many things that appeared in the Herald that they said were lies, were true you know.

He tells us that my motion is frivolous, a waste of time, what the Constitution needs is major surgery. He has the same opportunity that I have or any other Member has to bring any motion onto the floor of this Assembly, calling for any change, or going out there and canvassing the public on a campaign trail, for any Constitutional change he wants. But no, they learn their lesson, the Decolonisation Committee when it came here. Now, they were going to sneak that in through the back door. They were only going to have one meeting and that was going to be in Bodden Town, and they were going to have some of those people there that the Second Elected Member for West Bay talked about, that will be going north and looking south, and they were all going to say "Yes Mr. Monaboobo, Mr. So and so, we want constitutional change, we want independence, we want this and we want that". And, if they get the chance, and if they believe that they can get away with it, they are going to take this country into full internal self-Government and independence, and that is not for my good nor the public's good, that is for their own gratification and glorification. Probably the only reason why they have not campaigned on it and did not do it when they had the Assembly full of broomsticks was because they could not decide who was going to be Premier, who was going to be Prime Minister and who was going to get to live down on Seven Mile Beach in the Governor's House, because some people had already picked the furniture you know Sir, to put in it. He talks about due remedies, but Sir, here is a simple opportunity to put a Caymanian in an honourable position in this House, and they say 'no'.

Mr. President, any time I come into this Assembly, I bring the manifesto that I campaigned on, to remind me of what I promised the people I would do. I do not do as some people do after they get elected, they tear it up and throw it away. I am glad to see that the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council has his to hand, but you must not put it under the table now, you must keep it on the top of the table, no hiding in the book, put it out where you can see it.

I said I would not support any change in the constitutional status quo, and I maintain that, and in bringing this motion, I am not changing the status quo of the Constitution, and anybody who tries to make out otherwise is just stirring up mischief. Yes Sir, we have here an ancient document, the Election 1972, Sir. They talk about what they want to say and what they do not want to say, what they want to hide behind and what they want to sneak in through the back door. One little paragraph tucked away in here says "further changes should be made in our Constitution allowing for the Governor's veto to be overridden by a two-thirds vote of the elected members". Some of the things in here you know Sir, it is signed by some of the same Members who are up in here telling you that the Elected Member for North Side and the Second Elected Member for West Bay are trying to sneak things in through the back door, and that the other Constitutional change which is being proposed is being snuck in through the back door. This was signed by J.M. Bodden, First Elected Member for Bodden Town; Ira Walton, Craddock Ebanks, L.M. McLaughlin and Garston Smith, but they tell you now that those two radicals being the Elected Member for North Side and the Second Elected Member for West Bay, you have got to put a clamp on them. And the First Elected Member ran on the same platform you know Sir, he was around the corner dodging, the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town. They were all in the same group, came from a little thing now which used to be called the Help Organization. They were going to help yes, they were going to help themselves.

Mr. President, there is no secret that the Second Elected Member for West Bay and I work very closely. I see you are going to sleep Aunt Suckie, wake up, are you listening, all right. If you go to sleep I will wake you up.

And this is the United Nations General Assembly, part 191. Mr. G. H. Bodden, you all know who that is, that is the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town who said, "one thing about the Cayman Islands which seemed to have been over looked by many Caymanians, and certainly by the United Nations, was that these Islands are unique in that they had not attained Crown Colony status until other colonies had been decolonised. Previously the Islands had been a dependency of Jamaica, and even then had been left pretty much on their own. They had never known the problems which existed in many of the other colonies. So talking about foreign masters was foreign to the Cayman Islands. Their people were happy with the situation, and if they got the idea that the visit of the mission was even remotely connected with any change in the Constitution, it would not be well accepted". Now if they were not coming about changing the constitution, why tell them this.

"Unfortunately, the visit came close on the heels of the 1976 General Election, and the small minority of the electorate who were not satisfied with the election results, were trying to make a political issue of the visit. He suggested that the mission should make an effort to inform the public of the technical assistance which the United Nations could offer, and to give some idea of what they had done and could do for the Islands". But the key is half way down the paragraph when they do not want us to know about the constitutional changes.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I have allowed the Member to stray quite a long way from what really is his motion. I hope he will get back to the motion soon before I have to draw his attention to Standing Orders.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

I am only replying to what was said Sir. I have told you that I was not sure where that man got on the train, and I was not sure where he got off, Sir. I am just trying to cover some of the ground he covered. If I stray a little bit Sir....

MR. PRESIDENT:
the United Nations.

I do not remember him visiting

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

He went up there Sir, he went up there, because as far as I am concerned, what he said there is "come to the Cayman Islands, but do not really tell them what you are coming for". That is my interpretation of what was said there.

Mr. President, as to his reference to the book on the Office of Speaker, I have read it, I have a copy, and I believe that even though the job of Speaker of this Assembly might have its difficult moments, I believe that a Caymanian is capable of handling the post.

Now Sir, they also said that the second "whereas" in the motion, because there was going to be a change in Governor soon, should not have been put in. They even got my good colleague from George Town, who is supporting me with this motion to agree to that. But Sir, there is a reason why I feel this is the opportune time, because I do not feel we should have to train another one. If we are going to train somebody, let us train a Caymanian, and that has been my stance from the day I walked in here; from the day I was in the Civil Service, and it always will be, and I am not ashamed of that.

Now Mr. President, I appreciate your opening remarks. I am glad Sir, that you have removed the collective responsibility from Executive Council, so that they can vote their consciences. I am glad that the Official Members are not taking part in the vote, because when this is defeated, they cannot get up on the platform and say that it was the Official Members fault.

Mr. President, as I have said in my opening remarks, and in closing and summing up, I spoke for nearly three hours on the Throne Speech, nobody listened. I could go on and on about this, nobody is really paying any mind to you, Sir, they are going to defeat the motion, so let us put it to the vote and see what happens in the future.

Thank you Sir.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

WITHDRAWAL OF QUESTIONS NOS. 26 AND 27

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President I beg to withdraw both Questions No. 26 and No. 27 standing in my name.

Very well.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for George Town, Question No. 28.

The Second Elected Member for

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE.

NO. 28: Would the Honourable Member state when the decision was made to purchase the Shorts 330 inter-Island aircraft?

ANSWER: The decision to purchase the Shorts SD 330 aircraft was made on 4th December, 1986.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President.

A supplementary to the Member,

Would the Member state whether any senior flight crew or senior management staff other than the Managing Director, were invited to make a decision on the purchase of the Shorts 330, prior to the purchase?

MR. PRESIDENT:

I do not think that arises out of the answer. If you wanted to ask that it would need to be set down as a substantive question. It was in any case I think, dealt with yesterday.

Is there any further supplementary?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, I trust that you will find it in your heart to accept this supplementary, because I think it does arise from the question.

Would the Member state whether a feasibility study was carried out by the management of the airline, prior to the purchase of the aircraft?

MR. PRESIDENT:

No, really, that does not arise from the date on which the decision was made. If the Member wanted to ask that, it should be set down as a question., and certainly my recollection is that it has been set down, whether it was answered yesterday or whether it is still to come, I am not sure.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

With respect Mr. President, I believe if we are considering when a decision was made, then it is quite relevant to question whether a feasibility study was carried out to determine or to arrive at that decision.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Yes, we had a Question on Wednesday, whether there was input from Caymanian pilots with regard to the decision to purchase the 330 aircraft

So, if there is no further supplementary, the Member may ask Question No. 29.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE.

NO. 29: Would the Honourable Member state whether any Caymanian pilots were sent on training to fly the Shorts 330 prior to its arrival here?

ANSWER: Due to the time-frame in which the company was endeavouring to replace the Trilander for this winter season, it was not possible to train Caymanians to fly the Shorts 330 prior to its arrival here.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: A supplementary Mr. President. Would the Member state whether there are any Caymanian pilots now on training, and how soon it is expected that the Venezuelan pilots will be replaced by these Caymanian pilots?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the company has plans to employ two young Caymanians who are qualified. When I say 'qualified' they have their United States commercial rating, and those two young Caymanians will eventually be taken on and sent on training. It is really not fully decided yet, as to the manner in which these two Caymanians, once properly trained, exactly where they will be placed, whether it will be on the Shorts or as a flight engineer on the 727. But, the time-frame by which the Venezuelan pilots can be replaced is based on the availability and the training results of the Caymanians who we are endeavouring to recruit.

I might mention that the pilots who have been brought in here, have been brought in only on a month to month basis. So there is actually, to the best of my knowledge, no long-term commitment, and whenever Caymanians are available they will be put in their proper place, and the other pilots who have been brought in will be released..

MR. PRESIDENT: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, the Member states that it was not possible to train Caymanians to fly the Shorts, prior to its arrival because of the short time-frame, since they needed the plane for the winter season.

Can the Member tell us why the company put itself in this short time-frame, as they evidently knew the date of the start of the winter season, many years ago? Can the Member say why there was such a short time-frame?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, when you are looking for a secondhand aircraft, and even though the search for a replacement for the Trilander probably started, I would say, around the middle of 1986, it is not as if the company is financially able to place an order for new equipment. So when you are looking for a specific type of aircraft to suit our particular operation, and a secondhand aircraft comes on the market, the company has to attempt to take advantage of the availability of the equipment at that time. This is nothing new. It happened with all the other secondhand aircraft which Cayman Airways has in its service.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, the Second Elected Member for George Town may ask Question No. 30.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 30: Would the Honourable Member state whether it is the policy of Cayman Airways to place senior foreign flight crew on the national carrier's Permanent Establishment?

ANSWER: It is not normally the policy of Cayman Airways to place senior foreign flight crew on the permanent seniority list. However, an exception has been made in the case of two long serving senior crew members who are non-Caymanian.

And to add a bit to the written reply, I think yesterday in answering a similar question, I elaborated on the reasons why the company felt that it was justifiable and reasonable to make that exception.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

A supplementary Mr. President. Would the Member state whether there are now any Caymanian pilots qualified, or nearly qualified, who could replace these two senior foreign pilots?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

No, Mr. President. At the present time, if Cayman Airways were to lose these two senior flight crew members, we would have to go outside the Islands and recruit two others to replace them with.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Supplementary Mr. President. I wonder if the Member could state whether there are in line, young Caymanians who will soon qualify as captains?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, based on the information I have, it is estimated that there should be one young Caymanian First Officer who would probably be ready to be checked out and qualify as a captain, but I believe that that would not take place probably until within the next year or so. At the present time, no Caymanian who is presently employed with Cayman Airways, is ready to fill that position, and based on the company's requirements, I believe it will probably be approximately a year or so before that change is possible.

MR. PRESIDENT:

If there is no further supplementary, the Elected Member for North Side, Question No. 31.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO. 31:

Can the Honourable Member state when the post of trainee pilot at the Mosquito Research Control Unit (MRCU), as created in Finance Committee in November, 1986, specifically to train a Caymanian for the post of pilot at MRCU, will be advertised?

ANSWER:

Although this question seeks to obtain a definite answer as to when the post will be advertised, at this time such cannot be given until the problems associated with this type of training, as outlined by the Director of MRCU have been addressed.

According to the Director:

Training a pilot locally for mosquito spraying is basically not feasible for the following reasons:

1. MRCU aircraft are single seaters;
2. The type of flying involved is exceedingly dangerous and requires great skill.

To expect a young inexperienced pilot to practice low level flying in poor visibility on his own, would not be fair to him, his family or the community. Also it is doubtful whether any insurance cover could be obtained.

Experience is the most important factor and it has been the policy of MRCU to employ mature pilots with thousands of hours of agricultural spraying behind them, plus night flying experience. This has paid off, as the very rare emergency situations which have occurred (and which are bound to occur during 15 years of mosquito spraying) have never led to loss of life or damage to property, purely because the long experience of the pilot has enabled him to make the right decision in a fraction of a second.

It has been repeatedly stated by MRCU since 1972 that any young Caymanian interested in a career as spray pilot with MRCU should first work abroad as an agricultural pilot and acquire at least the 1000 hours of agricultural spraying required by the MRCU pilot job description.

A suggestion for overcoming the problem would be for Government to ascertain whether any suitable candidates do exist and then allocate sufficient funds to support the candidate abroad for several years while he obtains the necessary experience, either with one or several different spray companies. It would probably be very difficult for a Caymanian pilot to get a paid post with a foreign spray company, but if such a company did not have to provide a salary and in addition was paid a 'training' fee, they may be willing to provide the necessary work experience.

It should be pointed out strongly to any potential candidate that the post of MRCU pilot is one where the demands are often greater than the rewards. The dangers in this type of flying are obvious, but the post in fact, involves a very low number of flying hours and this could be very frustrating for a young pilot anxious to accumulate an impressive number of flying hours. Also it is not a 'clean' job. Pilots have to mix insecticides and after a night's spraying, both the aircraft and pilot can be well covered with spray. Most flying is between the hours of six and eight in the evening and often continues seven days a week for months on end, so a normal social life is not possible.

To summarize, therefore, for a Caymanian to be considered for the post of MRCU pilot, he would first have to be sent overseas for a considerable length of time and at an extremely high cost. For this reason, it would be prudent for Government to give careful consideration to the total cost of this training and seek Finance Committee's approval of it before advertising the post.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: A supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member state whether in moving this motion in Finance Committee, it was made clear by the mover that Government recruitment would have to send somebody overseas for the training, and how long it would take to train someone, because to the best of my knowledge, most agricultural courses in the States are twelve weeks.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I am not quite sure what I am being asked to say. First, I took it that he was the mover. The Member asking the question was also the mover in Finance Committee. I think he is relating one to the other, and the comments that he made in Finance Committee. Is that correct?

I think what the Member indicated was that yes, he sought to have a token sum of $10.00 in the Estimates, in order to train a pilot overseas to become a pilot of the Mosquito Research and Control spray plane.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Supplementary Mr. President. Can the Member state how, when and where Caymanians are expected to get experience flying an agroplane, if they cannot get it flying a plane owned in their own country after they have qualified to fly the plane?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think if the Member reads the answer he has been given, a suggestion is made there, and therefore in effect the supplementary has been answered already.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Yes Mr. President, a total impracticable suggestion. Those three pages could have been answered in one line.....

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: On a Point of Order Mr. President, is this a statement or a question?

MR. PRESIDENT: Well I am just hoping that it is going to be a question, I must stop it if it is not.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Could the Member state Sir, whether the three-page answer could not have been defined in one sentence, 'we want to retain the foreign pilots at MRCU'?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: The answer to that Mr. President is not what the Member suggests. The answer is that if you are going to advertise a post of this type, I think it is fair to all concerned, including candidates who have an interest in the post, to make it clear what the duties of the post are, what dangers are involved, and all the relevant facts and duties of that office.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Member tell us how many planes are currently employed, and how many persons are currently employed in this job?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: The answer to that to the best of my knowledge is that there are two planes and two pilots, both planes are single seaters.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Can the Member define how flying a Mosquito Research spray plane to which one has been trained, is any more dangerous than flying a 727 for which one has been trained, or flying a Shorts 330, or flying a 172 Cessna, for which one has been trained?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I do not claim to be a pilot, or an airline specialist, but certainly, a 727 does not fly at three levels, spraying insecticide, and there lies the danger. The 727 coming close to the ground is either landing or taking off, one or the other. But, I did condition my answer by saying that I know nothing about being a pilot, all I know is that as a layman, when the plane comes over my house it sounds as if the roof is coming off, and you cannot relate that spray plane to a 727 or the 330, because they certainly do not fly at those levels, and I do not think the Air Traffic Control will allow them to fly at those levels.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town may ask Question No. 32.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO. 32: Would the Honourable Member state what was the actual closing balance of Government's surplus on the books at the 31st December, 1986?

ANSWER: According to the figures provided by the Treasury as at 11th January, 1987, the unaudited closing balance of Government's surplus on the books for the year ended 31st December, 1986 amounts to $2,248,132.77. Honourable Members will immediately become aware that this figure falls short of the projected surplus of $3,319,939.00 by $1,071,806.00.

Factors Contributing To This Difference

Based on an analysis of trends of recent years, and especially the pattern of collections from January through December of 1986, the aggregate revenue balance was revised at $65,887,873. However, the actual position as reported by the Treasury showed total collection as being $65,185,768, resulting in a difference of $702,105 below the revised limit.

To comment on this marginal shortfall between the actual and revised revenue figures, Honourable Members are aware that even with the best of Estimates, the end result will always differ from any predetermined position. In this regard, allowance has often been made for a 3% variation between the actual and revised figures. The end result in this instance, however, is approximately 1%, which, if looked at positively, could be regarded as reasonable.

On expenditure: The revised position through 31st December, was estimated at $61,444,387, while the actual position, as reported by the Treasury through 31st December, showed total spending as $61,803,088, an excess of $358,701 over the revised limit.

Honourable Members will have observed that the total derived from these differences (Rev. $702,105 plus Expenditure $358,701) closely approximates the overall difference between the actual and revised surplus realised.

Further, of the $358,701 difference between the actual and revised expenditure, $199,879, or approximately $200,000 of this sum resulted from the Government being called upon to make a pecuniary settlement which was not provided for in the revised figures, as it was not foreseen that an agreement leading to such settlement would have been reached before the end of the year. At a meeting of Finance Committee held on 18th December, 1986, Honourable Members were appraised of the circumstances leading to this settlement; hence avoiding the need for the giving of any further details on this matter. The remaining excess expenditure of $159,000 is largely due to the carrying out of various adjustments to the final accounts by the Treasury.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, just on a point of clarification. I would like to ask the Member if it is correct that since the projected surplus at the end of 1986 fell below the Estimates, and since they transferred $2.0 million to reserves, is it not correct that there would not be a balance of $1.3 plus million dollars carried into 1987, and therefore 1987 actually ends with a deficit rather than the surplus shown here?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, the 1987 Estimates give a revised position of $3.3 million. It was also approved in Finance Committee that $2.0 million be transferred to general reserves, which we have done. The actual position as outlined earlier in the answer, indicates that there are now $248,000 being carried forward to 1987, but these are still unaudited figures. We are not sure what the audited figures will be, but it does not lend itself to be said that the 1987 position is now in deficit, because we are only into the first couple of months of 1987. Certainly, controls can be put in place to bring about the same affect, that is, a balanced affect.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Member say if it is correct that the shortfall of surplus by $1,071,806 would convert the projected surplus in December 1986 of $108,000 into a deficit of roughly $1.0 million?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I believe we are saying things semantically. What I am trying to do is to agree with the Member on paper, that that is the case. But in practical life we know the things on paper do not always turn out...

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: It will be much worse, right?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: It can also be much better, and I like to take an optimistic view.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary. The Elected Member for East End may ask Question 33.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 33: Can the Honourable Member say whether it is correct that the pilots for the Shorts 330 who were hired from Venezuela by the Managing Director of Cayman Airways Ltd., did not come up to standard for the job and the Director of Civil Aviation would not allow them to fly the 330?

ANSWER:

It has been the practice in this House not to answer questions which relate to the day-to-day management of Cayman Airways. This question falls within that category. However, due to the nature of this question and the possibility of the listening public forming the wrong opinion about the Airline's operations, it has been decided to categorically state, that this is not correct..

The Director of Civil Aviation and the Company are fully satisfied that the crew of the Shorts 330 are fully qualified and that there is absolutely no deficiency in their performance whatsoever.

Mr. President, that is the written reply to the question, and I might add that just so that the opinion is not formed that Cayman Airways in a haphazard or ad hoc fashion went out, and somewhere found four people to fly the Shorts. I would point out here that one of the captains of the Shorts aircraft at the present time, hold a total of 6,000 hours on this particular type of aircraft, the Shorts 330. The second captain holds 2,500 hours of flight time on the Shorts 330. One of the co-pilots holds 600 hours, and the other one holds 330 hours on the Shorts 330. So I believe that that would establish beyond any doubt, that they are clearly well qualified to operate this type of aircraft.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Supplementary Mr. President.
I wonder if the Member could say whether it is correct that the necessary hours for that time of aircraft is 700 rather than 300?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

No Mr. President. I believe what the Member from East End is referring to is that 700 hours is the total flight time that is required, based on requirements from the Civil Aviation Department, and Cayman Airways. But that is total flight time, the numbers I gave relate to aircraft type time. In other words, the captain could have 700 hours, 300 on the 330 and 400 on some other type, and would have the total that he needed to be licensed.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President....

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think before the supplementary is asked, it is eleven o'clock, so if we are going to continue with supplementaries and finish questions there will have to be a suspension of Standing Orders. If a Member wishes to move that and the House agrees, we can of course continue.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8)

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Yes Mr. President.

I beg that Standing Order 23(7) and (8) be suspended so that I may get my other question answered, that is in accordance with 83, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

And would I be right in thinking the suspension should also cover supplementaries to the question that you have just mentioned, so that you could ask your additional question. If we moved the motion strictly like that, I would have to stop off supplementaries on the question we are considering, and I think the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town certainly had a supplementary.

So perhaps so that we can finish Question Time, all the questions on it, you would be content with that? Very well then..

The question before the House is that in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 83, Standing Orders 23 (7) and (8) should be suspended in order to enable any further supplementary questions in respect of Question No. 33, and question No. 34, to be asked. Unless any Member wishes to speak, I will put that question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) 7 (8)
SUSPENDED TO ENABLE QUESTION TIME TO BE COMPLETED.

MR. PRESIDENT: We can continue with supplementaries to Question No. 33, and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town caught my eye.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I would like to ask the Member with regard to the first paragraph of his answer - "It has been the practice in this House not to answer questions which relate to the day-to-day management of Cayman Airways. This question falls within that category." Would the Member have any objection to my having a cassette recording made for him, as this has recurred so often.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: If he wants to do a cassette of repetitious comments, I think he must remember that charity begins at home!

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Yes, I know that, but I am asking if he would like a recording made.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, if they continue to ask questions about the day-to-day management of the company, it might be necessary to make the cassette, but I think I will be here around for sometime to answer.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, the Elected Member for East End may ask Question No. 34.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM, AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 34: Would the Honourable Member state whether he is aware that a letter has been issued by the Board of Directors of Cayman Airways Ltd., stating that certain expatriate pilots will continue to be employed by Cayman Airways Ltd., and that they shall remain on the Seniority List of pilots?

ANSWER: Yes.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no supplementary...that ends Question Time then.
Continuation of debate on the Throne Speech. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

CONTINUATION OF THE DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, I wish to thank you most sincerely for the gracious Throne Speech delivered here a few days ago, which was delivered with clarity and conciseness, though perhaps somewhat of a repetition of last years' Throne Speech, but nonetheless, provided much food for thought.

I would also take this opportunity to extend a warm welcome to the Honourable Richard Ground and Mrs. Georgette Myrie on their recent appointments to the posts of Attorney General and Clerk of the House, respectively. I have no doubt that we will see improved work, especially in the legal area, and I look forward to working very closely with the new Attorney General and our Clerk. I would take this opportunity though, to say how much we do miss our last Clerk, and I believe that the new one will do equally well. I cannot accept that our new Clerk is a square peg in a round hole. From the reports I have heard, she is a very efficient lady, and I feel that this Legislative Assembly is lucky to have somebody of that caliber.

Mr. President, as I have stated, your Throne Speech covered many areas, and in a nutshell it was much food for thought. Commenting on the Police Department, I am pleased to learn that 14 promotions have taken place over the past 12 months, many of whom as I understand it, were Caymanian Officers. It was, however, disturbing to me Sir, to note the level of the increase in crime in this country, despite the very high detection rates in the Police Department. I am also pleased Sir, to see that the Drugs Squad has been increased, even though it seems a retrograde step, when we continue to increase the Police Force, and expand our prisons when greater emphasis should really be placed on alleviating community problems amongst us. These problems should be addressed by not only the Churches, the Service Clubs and other areas, but should indeed be the prime objective of the Government's Social Services Department, and each individual should feel himself responsible for trying to keep these problems under control.

Mr. President, as I have said in this House many times before, it is the duty of Government and of each individual Caymanian and resident here to focus attention not only on the curative aspects, but indeed on prevention. Too much emphasis Mr. President, is being placed on curing the problem, and I am reminded of the saying "it is too late to close the gate once the horse has escaped". There is the dual problem of cause and effect. Ninety percent of our time is placed on the effect, too little on detecting the cause and treating the cause. I have contended here and have spoken many times on some of the problems I see in our community, and I believe Sir, that the worsening environmental conditions and social conditions of our people contribute significantly to the increase which we are experiencing in our crime rates.

I feel Sir, that the Social Services Department of Government should be doing much more. While I would agree that they are perhaps taxed to the limit with the staff available to them at present, I also feel that if it is necessary, that they receive more staff and that representation should be made by the Member responsible for this subject, so that the necessary funds can be made available to that department. I feel that the Social Service Department of Government must take the lead Mr. President, and recent experiences that I have had with that department, I see a trend developing where there should be less bureaucracy and more willingness to work with community leaders, parents and interested citizens. This is not to be overly critical Sir, but I trust that these individuals in charge of this department will realise that when community leaders, Justices of the Peace and others attempt to help, especially with juvenile cases, that they should be much more tolerant.

I can recall even telephoning to speak to some of the senior officers there, and have yet to receive a return call on a matter that was very important, and I did not do this in my position as a politician, but as a Justice of the Peace, who is called on frequently to sit in the Juvenile Court. Mr. President, after all, we are hopefully working towards the same common goal, and I feel that there should be much more cooperation through the Department, with not only Justices, but indeed, with community leaders.

I have heard a number of complaints Mr. President from parents of young people, of juveniles sent to Jamaica. I have heard that the conditions in Jamaica are so bad, yet when you communicate this to the department, the parents told me that they get no results or satisfaction. They are not even given an encouraging word. Mr. President, there seems a reluctance on the part of this department to deal with some of these problems, and I trust Sir, that they will indeed become much more flexible, and will realise how important it is in the job they are trying to perform, to work very closely with not only Government Departments but the parents involved with these youths.

Mr. President it concerns me that our juveniles are still being sent to Jamaica, when quite a while back we agreed that a Committee would be set up to examine the feasibility of establishing our own Approved Schools and Remand Centre. But it seems Sir, that insufficient priority has been given to this subject. Perhaps, my thinking has been overcome by events, but I would be very happy if I am wrong in this. I do not feel that enough is being done to push for the establishment of an Approved School here so that our youth would not have to be sent to Jamaica to Approved Schools. This is not to say that we are not very grateful for the assistance we have received from the Jamaica Government over the years. But as we develop as a nation Mr. President, it is high time that we get our priorities in order. From reports also that I have received it seems that Government should be investigating some of the conditions which exist in those Approved Schools. I have been told that a lot of foodstuff, clothing etcetera, sent to the children in those schools has been stolen, and when these cases are reported, the children are beaten and told that they are liars. Many stories I have been told cannot all be lies Mr. President, so I would ask the Member responsible for this subject to give this matter his very urgent attention.

Returning to the Prison situation, when one considers the numbers and the composition and age group of the young men and women at Northward Prison, one is left to question where will our beautiful and tranquil Island end up. Where will these beautiful Islands end up if something is not done to halt this regressive trend? It is all right for most of us to go to Church every Sunday and to pretend that we are doing our part for society in our community. But I have said before, and I say again Mr. President, that more and more attention should be placed by Churches and other organizations such as Service Clubs, in visiting within their community and observing first hand the conditions that exist. The people whom they meet in Churches are already people who know what wrong is, and this is the reason they attend, either as Members or visitors. We need to be reaching out, we need to launch an outreach programme to assist a lot of these young people.

When one goes to Northward Prison, the age group of the young people you are dealing with is between the average of 18 to 25 years of age, 80 percent of them. This is a very serious situation, and I am not here saying this Mr. President, for sensationalism. I feel Sir, that if the Cayman Islands is to develop and continue to be the envy of the Caribbean, and indeed the envy of the world, that Government must recognise the situation which now exists, and what is indeed becoming a growing problem. Mr. President, something must be done at the foundation level. Something must be done to reach these people at the home level. The Social Services Department must not only sit in the Tower Building, but they must spend much more time sitting in the homes of some of these people, and working with them.

Mr. President continuing, reference was made by you Sir, in your Throne Speech regarding the possible recruitment of overseas personnel. While I can Sir, appreciate that of necessity expatriates of all walks of life will no doubt have to be recruited to keep pace with our development, I feel that much more care must be exercised to ensure that we are not deliberately pushing our own Caymanians out of jobs to provide space for expatriates. I personally, do not have anything against expatriates, because I am cognizant that in our developing country there has to be a motto of 'out of many, one people.' We have to work together. But as a Caymanian, and as one who loves my country, I would be doing an injustice to my people if I did not try to protect their rights, which are also their constitutional rights.

Mr. President, as I have said in these Chambers before, and I say again, I believe that many expatriates, be they British, Canadian, American, Jamaican or otherwise, can vouch that I have always tried to deal impartially with any problems which they have brought to my attention, and to deal with these matters as expeditiously as possible, and indeed in a very objective manner. There is no question of my intentions, or my feelings, I feel towards them in a very wholesome and sincere manner, but this is not the question, the question is also protecting the position of my fellow Caymanians. As a matter of fact Sir, to substantiate this, I stated categorically in my political manifesto which I issued for the 1984 Elections, and I quote:

"In our rapidly developing financial community it is not reasonable to suppose that we can produce in the short term the required number of lawyers, accountants, bankers and other workers locally, with the necessary expertise to ensure the proper expansion and development of the Cayman Island's economy."

And I went on to say Sir:

"I believe that the key to the successful long-term development of the financial industry in integration of the Caymanians professional, not replacement of the expatriates."

I went on to say Sir:

"The term 'Expatriate' is intended in its broadest sense to include all who are non-Caymanians, regardless of the ethnic or national origin."

My position has not changed Sir, I still believe that in our developing country, that the answer is not kicking out expatriates, but working together towards the same common goal on an equal footing. I do not feel that the Caymanians should be made to appear or feel like second class citizens. As I have said Mr. President, my position today, is the same as then, which is not to arbitrarily replace any overseas people or personnel in this country, but rather to integrate, integration is what we are talking about - 'out of many, one people', is what we are talking about. And I do not subscribe to the view which I have heard expressed that we must kick out expatriates just to put Caymanians in positions, if the Caymanians cannot fill those positions. But I do subscribe to the view that Caymanians should be given the equal opportunity to fill top positions in this country, and this is one of the reasons Mr. President, why I was so strong in my view in my debate of the motion to appoint a Speaker of this House. I indeed felt that there are Caymanians capable of filling the position. There was no reflection at all on the President of this House, because as a President of the House I feel he is qualified and I feel he is doing a fairly good job. But my point was, that there are indeed Caymanians that can do it, the Constitution provides for it, so there is no reason why we should not have a Speaker of this House. We are denying our people their Constitutional rights when we do not do these things that we can do.

It was further stated Mr.

President in your Throne Speech, and this was made a special point, that there will be an expansion of buildings at Northward Prison to accommodate more prisoners. Again Mr. President, I must say that I am disappointed with Government's policy in this respect, even though it may be unavoidable. I would like to have seen a positive statement of preventative measures being taken to try and alleviate and reduce the number of crimes in this country. We seem to be operating under Parkinson's Law which states that wherever there is a void it will be filled. We build bigger prison cells at Northward Prison, you can bet yourself that those cells will be filled, and then we will have to build bigger ones and bigger ones. It is just like the question of building gallows at Northward Prison.

This is something Mr.

President, which is also very near and dear to me. I realise Sir, how I would feel if I had loved one who was murdered in this country. Mr. President, I do not think that any man has the right to take a life of another person. I do not think Sir, that taking the attitude of an eye for an eye is in the best interests of the Cayman Islands, and before you leave this country Sir, I trust that you will be looking to make the necessary amendment to our Penal Code so that capital punishment could be replaced by life imprisonment, and perhaps with the discretion given to the Judges, that a minimum period of 30, 40 years whatever could be imposed on the offenders.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I wonder whether this would be a convenient point to the Member to break?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Yes Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

In that case I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 11:29 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:52 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, at the time of the break I was speaking on the question of capital punishment, and Sir, while I have made an impassioned plea that you use your best persuasion to have the Penal Code amended so that we would not have a retrograde step of swinging our own Caymanians on gallows built in this country. I know Sir, and appreciate that this is not left with you, and that it would have to be a decision of this House. I say this Sir, of my own personal feelings and do not intend to make this seem to be the consensus of any group in this House.

Mr. President, I believe that the root cause of our major problems in this country is drugs. I believe Sir, that much more could be done in trying to alleviate this problem, and if it was the intention that capital punishment would not be removed from our penal code, then I say Sir, that the only way I could ever agree with it, is that the pushers and the suppliers would also be subjected to it. They are the people who are bringing havoc to our country, and I say that the people who are getting involved in crimes are the victims, and we should be dealing more with the pushers.

Mr. President, I was a bit disappointed to see an article which appeared in the Caymanian Compass in the issue on Tuesday, 10th February 1987 under the editorial. Mr. President, in reading this, my first impression was that the rationale of the writer would seem to condone the fact that we have dealers and suppliers amongst us, and that they will be with us forever. Like the poor, the poor we will have with us forever. It seems Sir, that the use of drugs was justified on the economic theory of supply and demand. The uninitiated reading this Sir, would feel that maybe it does have a place in our society, and that we have to live with it. I am saying Sir, that it has no place in the Caymanian society, and we should not satisfy ourselves that we have to live with this scourge. The article which I refer to under the heading 'Supply and Demand' stated, and I read:

"The drug dealer exists for the same reason that the service station, or the lumber store, or the supermarket does - society demands the service."

Mr. President, it is sad, that our leading paper would carry an editorial of this sort. It further said Sir:

"That is today's reality. It may be deplorable, it may be frightening, it may instill panic, but it is incontestably clear that people buy narcotics because they want them, or need them, and not because the dealer makes them available."

Regardless of the logic and the truth of a statement like this, I do not think that it is right that it should be appearing in our editorial which tends to give the impression that we understand this problem and that we are accepting that this problem is with us. Instead, the article should be suggesting ways and means of pushing this out of the country; suggesting ways and means of dealing with the pushers, and making the dealing of drugs much less attractive in this country. It further said Mr. President:

"The abysmal failure of Prohibition and the incidence of cigarette smoking, despite evidence of carcinogenesis, are but two illustrations of people displaying a behavior despite efforts at dissuasion.

By all means"....it continues today...."we should continue to come down hard on the drug dealer"....and this was one positive statement and I give them credit for this...."but we have to face the fact that the pressures of modern life"....and this is what is of concern to me, we are saying that we accept because of the pressures of modern life...."the pursuit of pleasure, the search for an escape, are causing people in every country in every hemisphere to pay large sums of money to the man who sells narcotics."

This is no reason Mr. President, regardless of what the trend may be, that we should not be making a positive statement and making positive efforts to try and wipe this scourge from our Island community. Mr. President, it said in the last paragraph:

"It is an unpalatable truth that many of us blindly refuse to face, but the drug dealer, be in New York, Bogota, or Grand Cayman, is selling a product for which many have, unfortunately, developed a desperate craving."

Mr. President, I trust that in future editorials, with regard to drugs in this country that a more positive position could be taken, and that the justification and rationale is not on a matter of the economic demand and supply theory, but that we will let the public know that we have no place or tolerance for drugs in this country, be it in accordance with supply and demand or not. We do not wish to have drugs in the Cayman Islands.

As I have said earlier Mr. President, I believe that the Prisons could be lagging under other departments of Government, perhaps which may be operating under Parkinson's Law. But, I am happy to say that I have seen a marked improvement in the efficiency of many of our Government Departments, and much of this credit goes to many of our senior Caymanian Civil Servants who are now in command of controls. But Mr. President, the point I am making is that the answer is not in the building of more and more cells at Northward Prison. As we were just discussing during the break, drug taking is a disease, and it must be treated as such. It is like addiction to cigarette smoking or addiction to alcohol. We cannot just brush the people aside and say that they are bad people. We must deal with the problem effectively. This is the only way we can hope to cure this problem, and we must also make more efforts to seek and search for the source of the supply.

I have heard a number of stories of how drugs come to the Cayman Islands. I have heard that they come through cruise ships; I have heard that people go out fishing and meet boats. I am sure that if I have heard these stories, other people have heard them. Therefore, let us do something to investigate these problems and these stories we have been hearing. Nobody is suggesting that they are totally correct, and much of it could be hearsay. But I say Mr. President, that many times where there is smoke there is fire.

What we need to provide in the Cayman Islands for our people are more wholesome activities, much more wholesome activities, not only for our youth but also for the adults. Priority should be given to establishing a Youth and Community Centre in most of the major districts. As a matter of fact, I would like to see one in each district of the Cayman Islands, and in the Sister Islands. Mr. President, unfortunately, Government has not yet seen the necessity to make this a priority. But I trust that before too long we will see more emphasis placed on these wholesome activities, and the provision for accommodating such facilities.

Recently Mr. President, I posed the question in this House to the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council regarding accommodation for the Boxing Club. I can appreciate Sir, that funds are limited, but I believe Mr. President, that more thought should be given to facilities for our youth. In forming the George Town Boxing Club, this was done with the feeling and the understanding and knowledge that there were many of our youth, or young boys, who, if they were not involved in wholesome activities would be out on the streets either using or pushing drugs. I am not suggesting that the population, or the people we have in our Boxing Club are those type of people. I am just saying that we have found an avenue to prevent them having any temptations as far as is possible. We will never cure it one hundred percent, but we should do all in our power to deal with it.

Mr. President, I move on to the subject which you dealt with, the Caymanian Protection Law and Regulations. I could not agree more with you Mr. President, when you said that there are gaps and anomalies in the Caymanian Protection Law. As a matter of fact, I have in this Honourable House and through the news media alluded to these gaps and anomalies. But to date, no action as far as I am aware has been taken to correct some of these problems. Specifically Mr. President, I believe that the selection process for the granting of Caymanian status leaves much to be desired. I feel that the criteria for the granting of status as contained in the directives of the Governor in Executive Council to the Protection Board, together with the relevant provisions of the Law and Regulations, could be more evenly and fairly applied. This is not to cast any aspersion on the integrity of the people who fill that Board, because the men and women on that Board are people of integrity. My question is the lack of direction, and the question of the policy which is now being applied in Board decisions. As I have said Sir, I make this statement with due respect to the Members of the Board, as I believe they are honest men and women of integrity. But I nonetheless, feel most concerned about the question of the granting of status and the way it is done.

Further Sir, policies regarding the granting of work permits have to be reviewed. Why are Caymanians being told that they may have to bring certain categories of casual workers from the United Kingdom and other European countries. Is this correct? I pose that question. Has this been said? I pose that question. I have been told that individuals have been told this. What is the rationale and the whole idea behind this? I leave you to ponder that question.

Mr. President, it is only practical that we continue, if the Caymanians are to develop, to receive or employ people from areas which are in the best interests of Caymanians. If we need a domestic helper in our house, or somebody to clean our yard or whatever, and we cannot find a Caymanian, then we should be permitted to employ somebody who can do the job to our satisfaction, at the lowest possible cost. But to have to try and recruit people from overseas, or as far back as Europe to do such tasks, Mr. President is not only impracticable, but it is a bit of a nonsense.

It seems that there is some hatred against Jamaicans in this country, especially the common workers. But Mr. President, many of the people voicing the anti feelings against Jamaicans have a very short memory, or perhaps they were not around when the Cayman Islands worked very closely with Jamaica, and indeed, most of our wealthy people in this country today obtained their money through Jamaica. Further Mr. President, many of our people had to go to Jamaica for a living.

I feel Mr. President that on the question of employing any nationality in this country, that we should now be considering whether individuals should be placed on contracts, or given facilities such as Green Cards, so that they could work in the Cayman Islands, because many of the people who now apply for status do this because they want the protection, not necessarily because they want to be a Caymanian citizen, or a member of the British Dependent Territories. They do it because they want protection and continuity in their lives, and contracts or a Green Card would offer them this type of protection. But it would be understood that they would not be eligible, or some would not be eligible for status, mainly because they want a contract, and when that two, three or four-year contract or whatever has expired, then they would have to come back and start all over again. This would prevent any question of them qualifying or getting the necessary requirement for qualification for status. I am not suggesting that the Government should discontinue giving status, I am only suggesting Mr. President, that maybe it is time that Government starts seriously looking at the whole question of status, and the granting of permits in the Cayman Islands. Let us not just squeeze any one nationality whether they be Jamaicans, Hondurians or whomever, because they are performing a service in this country, and whether we like the ethnic national or whatever their background may be, that should not play a part in the decision as to whether somebody should live or work in this country.

Mr. President, the problem does not only exist at a domestic or casual level, but it filters into the very top echelon of our commercial sector. I feel Mr. President, that the commercial and the professional firms should be forced to make a greater effort to employ Caymanians in top senior positions. When you look around you show me how many Caymanians are being groomed to fill the Managing Directors' positions of many of our Banks and Trust Companies, in some of the smaller companies, or indeed in the law firms or the accounting firms or whatever. It is a struggle Mr. President, it is a big struggle to even keep a job with some of these companies. And the reason for this Mr. President, is that as soon as some of these people come here they are placed on the same equal footing as Caymanians and they have the same rights, so there is no incentive for them to train Caymanians to take over from them. Mr. President, token gestures are not enough.

What is of concern to me Mr. President in this respect, it is because of the present policy of the Caymanian Protection Board in the granting of status, that most of the senior management positions will never be passed on to Caymanians, especially those in professions such as accountancy, law and banking just to name a few. Granted Mr. President, some Caymanians are lucky to get the breaks, but these are in the very small minority. Much, much more should be given better, better employment opportunities.

Mr. President, I recently heard where a professional accounting firm fired a young lady who had spent six years in that firm as one of their top executive secretaries, for the mere reason that that lady refused to work in a dark and humid office when they had the power outage. That was the basis used, but when she went to the Labour Board she could get no redress. This is the reason why we need a Labour Law in this country, and regardless of who says we do not need one, it could be self serving, because most of the letters that I have seen opposing a Labour Law are coming from employers.

Mr. President, I am not suggesting that the present draft legislation before us is adequate, because I find a lot of fault with it. I feel that the Legal Department did not take sufficient time, and this is no reflection on our present Attorney General, but I feel that they did not take sufficient time to study what was needed for the Cayman Islands. What they seem to have done was to lift the Antigua Code and put it straight in the Cayman Islands, to be used by Caymanians. When in fact, conditions that exist in the Cayman Islands are so much different from the Eastern Caribbean Islands. But we need protection for our people, but it must be properly done.

Could anybody by any stretch of the imagination accept that the treatment given to our faithful employee for six years, for refusing to go and wipe out a damp humid cell was right, when they fired her. Yet, what can be done, her employer told her she could do whatever she wanted. Of course, you cannot hurt him, because he has Caymanian Status. Mr. President, I submit that this type of behavior is not only unfair, it is deplorable and it certainly is not in the best interests of Caymanians. As I have stated, if for no other reason, this is a good reason why protection is necessary for our people.

At present Mr. President, it is useless to take a labour dispute to the Labour Board, they have no power, employers laugh at them, they ignore them. It does not make sense, it is a waste of time. It can be likened to somebody having a permit refused and the Executive Council telling them to appeal it. It is a waste of time, you are appealing from Caesar to Caesar. So when you are told to go to the Labour Board, it is just putting you off, you are wasting your time. And if a Labour Law or proper legislation is not brought to this country, then people are going to be forced to take industrial action, and this will be a sad day for the Cayman Islands. We had better not ignore this any longer.

I know of another case Mr. President where another young Caymanian lady was dismissed from her job with a 'B' Bank without any form of severance pay, after having served that bank for 12 years. Now, nobody can tell me that after 12 years, it would take 12 years for an employer to decide whether an employee is suitable. It is not necessary Mr. President to have such a long period to decide on somebody's abilities. But there again, this lady was told 'you do what you like, I have made a decision, and there is nothing you can do about it.' She could not seek legal advice because she did not have the money, and this is what it all boils down to, who is paying the cheque. And this is why we need to neutral force, we need the legislation, we need the law to protect the people who do not have the money to pay for these expensive legal fees. What is happening to the rights of our people? How are those rights being protected? Mr. President, again it is not only unfair but it is disgraceful that an individual who had served faithfully, not only working as an employee but indeed, building up a company, should be fired without even the consideration of proper severance pay after 12 long years.

Still dealing with the Caymanian Protection Board. I would like to know Mr. President, what criteria was used in selecting applications for status from the list approved by the last Government. I happened to have seen this list, and this information will remain with me forever. And there were some very outstanding people that had been approved by the last Government on that list, but why have those people not since then been given consideration? In late 1983 at the request of the then Chief Secretary, Mr. Dennis Foster, the Board considered that of the 265 applications which were then outstanding, that 25 of those should be approved by Council, and they were recommended for the grant of

Of those 265 applicants, 25 were recommended, of whom only 12 were granted status. What was the basis, what was the criteria used? Did they follow the Directives of the Governor in Executive Council, or the provisions of the Law and Regulations under which the Protection Board operates. Or were there other considerations given? Mr. President, I cannot understand why people who have contributed to this country, not only commercially, but socially, and in a community manner, are not also given top consideration. But you find situations where two and three from the same family can get status, but other people are by-passed. Why were not individuals like Mr. Brian Butler who has done so much for this country not considered for status? Why was not the Rev. Godfrey Meghoo who has done so much for this country considered for status? Why should they now have to go and beg.

Mr. President, something needs to be done. It would be interesting to know what one needs to do to qualify. I have watched the careers of the two people I have just mentioned, very closely. I do not think that there is a second developer in this country who has done more for the Cayman Islands than Mr. Butler, and I do not think there is another Minister in this country who has done more for our community than has Reverend Meghoo, and I have not asked their permission to mention this. I feel that it is only right and fair that people like that be given due consideration, something certainly does not seem right. I can understand when somebody is denied because of his behavior, because of his moral standards or whatever, but in these two cases cannot understand the reasons, and I am not here suggesting who should be granted status, I am questioning the criteria used.

However, I understand Mr. President that the reasons given were very flimsy indeed. The reason given for not approving the other 13 individuals at the time were because it was felt by the Board that these applicants did not have any assets - how ridiculous. You show me one who was approved who has any more assets than Mr. Butler. The second reason given was that they did not play an important role in the community. This again is ridiculous. Show me one of those who was granted status that plays a more important role in the community than the Reverend Meghoo. I am sure Mr. President that you will have to agree that this simple example I gave of two names, that they would have qualified in any country for the grant of status. Mr. President, something definitely seems to be inconsistent with the policies being adopted in practised by the Board in this respect.

I do not want Mr. President to be taken wrongly on this issue, because I am not advocating a proliferation of approvals for the grant of status. But Mr. President, I nonetheless feel that right is right, and that applicants should be considered strictly on the basis of the law, regulations and directives under which the Board operates, and that personal considerations should play a secondary role if any at all.

Moving on Mr. President, your Throne Speech dealt with Radio Cayman. Like yourself Mr. President, I too wish to congratulate Radio Cayman on the celebration of its tenth anniversary. The introduction of the FM broadcast system which now offers to the Brac and Little Cayman separate programmes was introduced here some ten years ago, or rather, the FM station was introduced last year. It is most refreshing and a welcoming addition to our news broadcast. The music Mr. President, is fit for the ears of Kings and Queens, especially on a Sunday afternoon. And I say, congratulations to the Radio Station for the good job they are doing. The staff in particular, are to be highly commended and congratulated on this fine job, and I would take this opportunity to tell Mr. Charles Glidden, otherwise known as 'Challo', to keep up the good job he is doing even though, he is not from my constituency, born here, he acts like a good George Town constituent, and I congratulate on this fine job he is doing.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

He comes from West Bay, he is a good fellow.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

....But I agree with the Second Elected Member for West Bay, that the credit has to go to West Bay where he was born. You know I have to always keep on the good side of my friends....(LAUGHTER).

Mr. President, the Radio Station is doing a good job, and it is disseminating news accurately and impartially. This is not to say Mr. President, that I do not still feel that the Department of Broadcasting should still not be a Statutory Corporation. This is a matter which I feel very strongly about, as I do not feel that direct controls should be through Government.

And now I turn to the section dealing with the Attorney General's Chambers. It is noted from your Throne Speech Sir, that the Attorney General's Chambers will be faced with an increased work load, but I am confident that with the expertise of our present Attorney General and the new Senior Crown Counsel, and of course, our very ably Caymanian staff in that department, that one will see a greater degree of efficiency. I trust however Mr. President, that our new Attorney General has accepted his seat in this Honourable House with an open mind, as I believe he has, and that he has not allowed himself to be unduly influenced by his predecessor. Enough said on that.

I turn to the Cayman Law School. I also extend my sincere congratulations to the Law School for their fine performance since they were established almost five years ago. We are fortunate Mr. President, to have an astute group of individuals attending the school, and I believe that the legal profession in the Cayman Islands will be the better off with the introduction of the graduates from this school. I trust though Mr. President, that Government will give the school their full support, as it has established beyond any doubt, that the qualifications being offered through the school are comparable to any in the world. I am happy Sir, that the school has also had somebody in the person of Mr. Rowe to help it along, and also in gaining recognition through the Liverpool University for the external qualifications of the LL.B. degree. I wish we had more people like Mr. Rowe coming to this country.

I think Mr. President that the past Government is to be congratulated on the move they made to establish this school, it is an asset to the Cayman Islands. But Mr. President, I trust that the graduates will be able to occupy their rightful places in the firms and in other areas where they choose to work, and that Government and the Caymanian Protection Board will indeed protect the interests of these people. Sometimes I wonder if this is a misnomer, because when we say 'Caymanian protection', then it should be just that.

And now Mr. President, I will touch on a subject which is near and dear to my good colleague from North Side, the draft Five Year Development Plan, and one which I indeed welcome. This is the reason Mr. President, why I could not in good conscience, stand in this House and criticize the Development Plan. I agree that there is much that needs to be done to amend certain areas, and I feel that it will have to be reviewed to be presented in a better form, in a more practical and workable form. But Mr. President, let no one fool you, much work has gone into this Plan and it is basically, a good Plan, and I say this in my own personal position, and do not wish to, in any way, project or present the view of any group or groups.

The Draft Five-Year Development Plan which was laid on the Table of the House in November last year is a fairly good document. However Mr. President, as I have said, much work is still required in the Finance Committee before it is approved by the House. While I appreciate that its purpose is to plan Capital Expenditure over the next five years and to assist a smoother Budget preparation exercise, there is nonetheless, a lot of fluff which will need to be trimmed off to make it an acceptable and practical document for use, not only by the Government, but indeed by potential investors to this country.

I have to agree Mr. President with the Chamber of Commerce, that the Draft Plan in its present form is essentially a Civil Service document, but then, it would have been difficult for it to have been otherwise, especially considering that this is the first major attempt to prepare such a Plan. I further agree with the Chamber of Commerce that virtually every time it identifies an area requiring new investment, large or small, it proposes the public sector solution. It would seem Mr. President, and I agree with the Chamber, that little thought has been given to whether private enterprise should be encouraged to do a job, but I am sure that my good colleague the Honourable First Official Member, will clear this up. Care must always be taken Mr. President to avoid a situation in which the state, that is the Government either through the Civil Service or indirectly through statutory authorities or state owned companies, fail to realise or release its grip on ordinary business. Usually you find that the private sector can as efficiently, or more efficiently manage many of these concerns. And I agree with the Chamber that perhaps in reviewing this document, that Government should look much more closely at this position.

MR. PRESIDENT: If the Member has come to the end of a particular part of his speech, I wonder if this is a convenient moment for him to break?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Yes Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: In that case I will suspend proceedings until approximately two fifteen.

AT 12:40 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:18 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated.
The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Thank you Mr. President.
When we adjourned for lunch I was dealing with the matter raised in your Throne Speech in connection with the Draft Five-Year Development Plan.

I would like now to move on to the section of your Throne Speech which refers to a Bill to regulate the Registry of Shipping. Mr. President, it is my intention to deal with this Bill in further detail during my debate of the Bill itself. However, I would say at this point that I believe we may be taking a backward step if we impose too many severe restrictions as seem to be contemplated. Perhaps instead we should be thinking of ways and means of expanding our Shipping Registry. But Mr. President, it would seem to me that my thoughts on this, when I received the Bill, have somewhat been overtaken by events, and further information which has been detailed and given by the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council in one of his recent meetings. He did say here at that meeting that a Bill to get international shipping conventions extended to the Cayman Islands enabling an expansion of the Shipping Registry is to be made by sending a delegation to London, and Mr. President, I certainly welcome this move. The Member further said that the delegation would leave shortly after the current sitting of the Legislative Assembly. He made a condition here and I do not think this condition should apply, but he said "if legislation governing the Shipping Registry is passed through the House". This is indeed a very good move because I see the development of shipping in the Cayman Islands as very necessary, and perhaps, an important avenue for increased revenue.

I was also pleased Mr. President, to note from the Throne Speech that additional training will be provided for teachers in the area of drug education, that the Quest Programme will be introduced into our school system, and specifically into the Middle School's curriculum. I also hope Mr. President, that a similar opportunity will be offered to the staff of the Social Services Department, in view of the very important role they play in guiding our youth, and in the community generally.

The Sports Complex - much credit Mr. President, must be extended to Mr. Winston Skinner for the invaluable job he is performing in developing sports throughout the Islands, and I would also personally thank him for the keen interest he has shown in the sport of boxing. I trust however Sir, that in the development of the sports complex that we will ensure that accommodation are provided permanently for the housing of the Boxing Club and other necessary facilities for sports in the Island. As mentioned here in the House during Question Time, the Boxing Club is indeed experiencing very severe difficulties in finding even temporary accommodation for the Club. This is one of the reasons Mr. President, why I feel that Members should get priorities right in this House, and also look more closely at the need for providing the activities and avenues for our youth. It would be a shame if a Club like this that now encourages 20 to 30 young boys to come out every evening to develop themselves physically and mentally, was closed down. This would indeed be a shame Mr. President, so I trust that Government will not only pay lip service to this problem, but will do something in a tangible way.

I now turn to the National Museum. I was pleased to learn of the progress made in the establishment of a physical home for a national museum. I trust that Government will give this project their full support. We are fortunate to have a qualified Caymanian in the person of Miss Anita Ebanks who heads up this project for the benefit of the people of the Cayman Islands. Mr. President, I trust that she will be encouraged in every way to continue the good work she is doing, and I would take this opportunity of saying, congratulations Anita.

The Marine Parks and Farmers Market - I am also pleased Mr. President, to learn of the progress being made in the establishment of the Marine Park and the Farmers Market. I feel sure that the Farmers Market will provide a proper venue where farmers can display and sell their produce, and that it may also encourage self sufficiency in all farmed products. However Mr. President, at more of a community level, I feel that a Recreation Park is long overdue for George Town and for some of the other districts in the Cayman Islands. I trust that this will be given the serious consideration by Government in their next Budget. Many of us will remember when we had a small park here in George Town known as the Princess Royal Park, I think it was called, but this was destroyed to house the present Legislative Assembly Building, and unfortunately, it was never replaced. I am surprised that the Government of the day allowed that park to be destroyed, and that subsequent Governments have made no attempts to reestablish it.

However Mr. President, I understand that plans are underway for a new Post Office, and I feel that if this must be located behind the library, as I understand it will be, that Government should now be considering using certain areas of George Town now used for parking cars, and reconvert them to proper recreational parks. On top of the Post Office should be placed a multi storey car park, so that there will be no question as to the adequacy of parking facilities, where the cars are now forced to use the central George Town area for parking. I once saw an artist's conception Mr. President, of a building which was supposed to house the car parking facility, but I understand that that concept has now been put on a second burner. I trust Mr. President, that it will be given top priority because parking congestion is becoming a major problem in George Town. Specifically, Mr. President, I see an area in George Town between the Scotia Bank Building and the Courts Office which could be made into a very nice recreational park; somewhere where the workers in town, Caymanians, visitors, whatever, could sit during the day and relax for a while, could take their children there on the week ends, it would be an asset to this country. We need to be considering these things.

I would also take this opportunity to recognise one of my George Town constituents Mr. Rex Miller, in sending me a letter on this matter. Sometime ago he wrote to me on this matter, and Mr. President, I am happy that he is so far sighted. We should be thinking more and more about beautifying our country; in making it the paradise, the Garden of Eden that it really is. I can appreciate Mr. President that a car parking facility will be expensive, but I also see such a facility as a most important investment, whether this is undertaken by the private sector or indeed by Government, it will be a profitable undertaking, even though it would be financed over a long-term period. However Mr. President, in order for this to work properly, the Traffic Department would have to be empowered to designate side roads etcetera in George Town as non-parking zones, so that motorists would be forced to use the new parking facilities. This would not only improve the problems of parking in George Town, but would also improve the traffic problems generally around the Island.

Mr. President, I trust that the Member responsible for this subject will give it very serious consideration, and he will bring it either to the Finance Committee or to this House at some stage, because I feel that he will get a lot of support from the Members of this House. We are, just as with the case of the Speaker of the House, we are delaying the inevitable. At some stage we will have to consider establishing a proper car park, and Mr. President it would seem that one located above the newly planned Post Office behind the library building would perhaps be one of the most appropriate sites we could consider.

Mr. President, I now move on to the Fire Department, but before doing this Sir, I wish to comment briefly on a matter which has been brought to my attention with regard to appointments within the Government Service, and I would ask that yourself and our Honourable First Official Member and the Honourable Third Official Member would look into this matter very seriously. It has to do with the qualification for appointments to senior posts. I do not feel that individual Civil Servants should be discriminated against in any way, mainly on a personal basis, on likes and dislikes. It has been brought to my attention that a senior officer of the Education Department has met with this condition. I trust Sir, that if this is correct, it will discontinue, because it cannot do our country any good. I also understand Sir, that whilst speaking on this, that it is the intention that the Netball Association Tournament will be held in the Cayman Islands in August of 1988, that is more than a year away, and I trust that in view of this major event, that Government will give it the support it deserves. This will perhaps be one of the biggest sporting events in the Cayman Islands, and it will indeed do a lot to advertise and project the Cayman Islands. So I trust that putting politics or other considerations aside, full support will be given to this event.

The Fire Department - I am pleased Mr. President, to note that the Fire Department is also taking account of the tourism growth in this country. I welcome Government's intention to build Fire Stations at Owen Roberts International Airport, in Cayman Brac, in West Bay and in other areas. I personally have no problem in supporting financial allocations made in the 1987 Budget, or indeed, will I see any problems in supporting future Budgets related to the Fire Department, the main reason being, that the Fire Department is not only expertly managed, but it is indeed most important to the development of this country. I am fully aware Mr. President of the efficiency and the expertise of the Chief Fire Officer, Mr. Kirkland Nixon, and his very abled staff. And I believe that any funds allocated to that department, will be well placed. I trust Mr. President, that manpower will indeed be put in readiness so that once the buildings are completed, we do not have a situation where Caymanian staff are not trained and available.

I now move on to the subject of Cayman Airways. I am pleased Mr. President, to note that, as a result of negotiations on the Miami/Cayman route moratorium, the national Airline has been granted rights to operate scheduled services to three new points in the United States, in addition to Miami and Houston, and also concessions on charter operations. It was further stated Sir, in your Throne Speech that Cayman Airways must now expect to face strong competition in the United States market from other American carriers. Further Sir, while I agree that Government and the loyalty of the travelling public will be critical to the continued survival of the Airline, I feel that it must be understood by the Caymanian public that the Airline will have to work in competition with other Airlines coming to the Cayman Islands. I also believe that while we must do all that is possible to keep Cayman Airways going, that we, the Members of this Honourable House, have demonstrated our good intentions by the big subsidies of between $1-2.0 million which we provide to keep the Airline afloat on an annual basis. I believe Sir, that if this amount had to be increased to $3.0 million a year, that the Caymanian public would support it, because the Airline is important not only to our national identity, but in ensuring that we have a reliable service for the people of the Cayman Islands. At the same time Mr. President, I do not believe that it is in the best interests of our people to demand that they should suffer as a result of competition.

It has come to my understanding that Cayman Airways passed a policy that the round-trip fare between here and Miami would be restricted so as to protect the Airline. I have discussed this with the Member concerned, and I fully understand the rationale behind it, and he is aware that I am speaking on this matter. But I, nonetheless, feel that if Government is being subsidised to the tune of $1.0 million that the Airline will have to pass on any benefits that would normally have accrued, if they had travelled on some other Airline. In other words, the Airline has to be competitive, we cannot protect the fares that they charge and at the same time subsidise the Airline. The travelling public should receive the benefits of any discounts which may accrue as a result of competition.

Mr. President, it is unfortunate that so many negative reports have been surfacing, regarding the top management of the Airline, and this does not, I make it quite clear, include the Member, but there have been quite a lot of negative reports as to what seems to be a lot of inconsistency, not only at the Board level, but at the top administrative level of the Airline, and this inconsistency relates specifically to the treatment of Caymanian staff at the Airline. Questions have been asked in this House Mr. President, with regard to the intention of staffing the Airline with Caymanian crew at senior management level, and I would also pose the question this afternoon Mr. President, why is a senior member of the airline not in the position of Managing Director, at this time? Why is somebody in the person of Mr. Ernie Bodden or Mr. Mike Adams not being groomed to replace Mr. Tino Gonzalez? What is the specific qualification that he may have that these people who have been there upwards of twelve years, would not have? Another question of relevance Mr. President is, what is Mr. Gonzalez doing for our Airline that could not be done by either of those two gentlemen I have just named especially if they are given the proper opportunity including the necessary training for the post of Managing Director?

Moving Mr. President, to the question of CAL's profitability, and the competition that Cayman Airways will face, I believe Sir, that in view of the Government subsidy as stated earlier, to the Airline which is already a major strain on the people of these Islands, that it is unreasonable, and I would repeat that, it is unreasonable and unfair to our people for Cayman Airways to deliberately keep the Grand Cayman/Miami fare at an inflated level, even though I can fully appreciate, that if it had been reduced, it would terribly disrupt the revenue position of the Airline. We will have to decide whether we are going to deny our people the rights of benefits of competition, or whether we are going to protect fares just to keep Cayman Airways moving. It is unfair for us to deny our people any savings that they may be able to get on a fare, whether it be to Miami or wherever.

I understood that Eastern Airlines was prepared to offer a $98.00 round trip, Grand Cayman/Miami/Grand Cayman, but that this was turned down because it was felt it could injure the airline. But what about the consideration given to the travelling public? We are already giving a subsidy of $1.0 million a year to the Airline. In 1985, together with payment on loans, I think the amount might have amounted to something like $2.0 million. I do not have the figures before me, but I believe that is correct. Mr. President, the people of this country deserve better consideration, and I say again, I think the action that was taken, was taken in the best interests of the Airline, and I can fully understand why this was done, but I also feel Sir, that we must also consider the interests of the travelling public. I trust Sir, that Government's position in this matter will be reviewed in favour of the people of the Cayman Islands.

Continuing on the subject of Cayman Airways; I am very disturbed by the attitude of the Chairman and Directors of CAL as reported by certain members of the Airline's crews. There seems to be an on-going struggle between the Caymanian pilots and the Chairman and management of the Airline regarding what Caymanian pilots view as an infringement of their rights. However Mr. President, it seems that the Caymanian pilots are fighting a losing battle as they have been told, in no uncertain terms, by the Chairman that he has no intention of discussing whether or not certain expatriate staff should be included on the permanent seniority list. He told them quite bluntly that it is not a subject for discussion. I do not wish to be misunderstood in this matter, as it is not my intention to belittle the competence of these two expatriate pilots. As a matter of fact, I think they are fine gentlemen and they are men for whom I have a great deal of respect, but this is not the point here Sir.

However Mr. President, it does bother me the manner in which the Chairman appears to be handling this very delicate and sensitive issue. I do not feel Mr. President that Caymanian pilots should be held down because of the wish of the Chairman and possibly his Board of Directors, to retain top senior positions for expatriate staff when there are qualified young Caymanians who could be groomed for those positions. I would admit here though Sir, that I have been reliably informed by the Member in charge that every effort will be made to see that deserving young Caymanians are qualified in accordance with their capabilities, and that they are given the opportunity to fill any openings which may be available in the Airline. I am happy to hear this Sir, and I want to congratulate the Member for taking this positive step.

Mr. President, when I stand in this House Sir, I do not stand here without facts. When I speak on any matter in this House, I spend sufficient time in researching it, so I am not guessing at what I am saying. Either I have been given the facts or I have read them, and I took the time to also examine the Pilot Work Rules and Employment Agreement, and a part of that stated, and I quote:

"From and after the date hereof, any Pilot whose name appears on the Contracts Seniority List and who may thereafter acquire Caymanian Status may elect to be placed on the Permanent Seniority List and his seniority on the latter shall take effect as from the date of such election."

This is why I queried in this House whether it was true that certain Pilots would be given special consideration for Caymanian Status, so as to assist them to qualify to be kept on the seniority list. It is my understanding Mr. President, that this section which I have just read, was included in their agreement to make provision and to protect the expatriate staff who are now on the seniority list, and to keep them there. It seems Mr. President, that the management of the Airline is not acting on this particular matter in the best interests of Government, especially when I hear that the two senior expatriate staff will be given Caymanian Status, merely to enable them to qualify. I trust that the Member responsible for this subject will clear this up, because if this is indeed the case, this is a sad situation. I do not think it is the case, but it has come to my attention.

Mr. President, I do not have any reason to doubt the honesty and the integrity of the Member responsible for this subject, and if he stands in this House and gives me an answer on any query which is raised here, I believe it, because I respect him as a man of honesty and integrity, even though I would like to see a situation where he, like his predecessor in that post, would cease saying "I will get you the information in due course", or "it is privileged information". Because Mr. President, it seems to me a bit contradictory that this should be said, when indeed our Cayman Airways is a one hundred percent asset of the Cayman Islands Government, it is owned one hundred percent by us. In addition, we are asked by this Honourable House to provide subsidies to keep it alive, one to two million dollars. Yet, when Members of this Honourable House ask questions regarding the operations of the Airline, we are told that it is a statutory authority and thus we cannot get the answers. While this may be the case under the Standing Orders, and while I appreciate that Erskine May no doubt supports this position, I feel that it is unfair to the people of this country who have to pay that subsidy, that they are denied information regarding the stewardship of that money.

I move now Mr. President, to the delay of commencement of construction work on the new Gerard Smith Airport Terminal. The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac will be pleased to know that Cayman Brac has a special spot in my heart. I have a lot of respect for the people from that Island, they are very industrious people, they do not beg for any favours, they are prepared to work. But Mr. President, I do not feel that the Caymanians, and they are Caymanians whether we want to believe it or not, from our Sister Islands are being given a proper break. They are not being treated fairly.

Specifically, Mr. President, I see no reasons why Government could not have advanced the necessary funds to enable commencement work on the Cayman Brac Terminal. To delay it until it was approved from overseas, to me was not correct. We advance money for a lot of other projects. Funds could have been advanced to start work in that Island. This, Mr. President, would have provided jobs for a lot of Cayman Brackers who are now forced to leave their homes to seek employment in Grand Cayman. They are forced to disrupt their way of life, it is not a voluntary act, it is forced upon them, if they want to keep alive and keep food in the mouths of their children, they have to come to Grand Cayman or go to some other country. This is not fair, we should be doing more to help those people. Why is it Mr. President, that no work is intended to commence on the building of the Air Traffic Control Tower and on the Fire Station until June, 1987? What is being done to stimulate the Brac's economy in the meantime? Granted, some work on the roads etcetera will continue, but is this enough?

Mr. President, I was most concerned to read an article in Friday, 6th of February, 1987's issue of the Compass which was captioned 'Government Looks At Brac Economy', and I must say here, that I congratulate the Compass on this article. I sometimes am not that congratulatory to the Compass, but I want them to know that I must congratulate them on this. But I must ask the question, why is Government only now taking a serious look at the economic conditions and problems faced by the people of our Sister Islands, when these conditions have been existing for such a long time? May I be bold enough to ask if this is because we are just a year away from the 1988 General Election? I hope not.

In November 1986 the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac made an impassioned plea in this Honourable House for assistance to the people of the Sister Islands. Many people thought it was sensationalism, but knowing the Member as I do, I know it was honest. Yet to date Mr. President, no significant work has been commenced on the Brac or on Little Cayman.

While I agree with the Second Elected Member from the Brac who is also the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council, that the people of substance, overseas people, should be encouraged to retire on the Brac as a source of employment for the Cayman Brackers, I do not believe that this is sufficient, and I am also convinced Sir, that very little will be accomplished until Government shows much more seriousness in providing the necessary infrastructural facilities on the Brac, such as the new Gerard Smith Terminal, the Fire Station, public water supply, public sewerage systems and facilities. It is indeed Mr. President, Government's responsibility to provide the people of Cayman Brac with the necessary facilities which are required before we can reasonably expect investors to invest in the Sister Islands.

Mr. President, I cannot accept the reason given by the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council in the same Compass article, in which he was interviewed by Miss Winker, when he said that the reason Cayman Brac is taking much longer than he had hoped to get development going was because so much was going on in Grand Cayman. That is not good enough. Grand Cayman is only one of the three Islands that comprise the Cayman Islands, and it is his responsibility, like each one of us here whether we represent the Brac or not, to see that they get their equal share. So to suggest that the reason the people of Cayman Brac have suffered over the years is because priority was given to Grand Cayman, to me is a poor excuse. I really feel Mr. President, that it is his and other Member's responsibility, for the Brac in addition to Members of this House, to see that the Sister Islands get their just due, and I want them and the people of the Brac to know that I will support any efforts brought by them to get the economy of the Sister Islands moving again.

I now move to the Public Works Department. Mr. President I have heard much criticism leveled at the Public Works Department, not only during the session, but in many previous sessions, or sittings of this House. Some of these criticisms Mr. President, have been justified, but many not, in my opinion. While I too, not only as a Member of this House, but indeed as the Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, would like to see more controls on the cost and expenditure in that department, we must realise the onerous job that they have to do. And while I would like to see the reduction in the cost of some of the new construction of roads etcetera, I do not think Sir, that any Member of this House can truthfully and reasonably say that the standards of roads which we have been developing in this country are not as good as anywhere in the world. Perhaps they are not as huge, but the standard can compare with any roads you would find anywhere in the world. Mr. President, I say this as an individual who has done a reasonable amount of travelling all over the world. It is true Sir, that I have seen more elaborate highways in much of my travel, but as I have said, I am yet to see better finished products than the new road in Frank Sound, for instance, and the new road which has just been completed connecting the Smith Road with Crewe Road. This is good work indeed, and I feel that the Director and staff of the Public Works Department together with the Portfolio, should be congratulated for the good work they are doing. It is easy for us to find faults, anybody can find faults, it is another question when we find solutions. And rather than finding faults Mr. President, I feel that we should give credit where credit is due.

Mr. President I would take this opportunity to let the Member and his Public Works staff know that I for one, feel that they are doing a good job under the circumstances.

If you go around George Town, West Bay and any of the districts around, you can see that they are busy not only building new roads, but repairing roads. As we have heard in this House, this is only a part of the many jobs that they have to do.

Mr. President, I would like to make reference to recognition of some of our prominent citizens in the Cayman Islands. Recently I was talking to one of our prominent citizens in the George Town constituency, Mrs. Ethel Cook-Bodden, and apart from our discussion being most refreshing and enlightening, I was pleasantly surprised to learn of the many things that this good lady had accomplished at her own expense, for the people of the Cayman Islands, with no more recognition than the Certificate and Badge of Honour. These were the days Mr. President, when people like Mrs. Cook-Bodden, gave without hoping to get in return. It is individuals like Mrs. Cook-Bodden who would and should qualify for higher recognition in this country, such as the M.B.E. In 1956 she was given the key to the city of Miami when she accompanied Theada Panton who was then the Miss Cayman Islands beauty queen, when she went on her trip to Miami. I think I have that date correct. And she also accompanied her to Jamaica and Costa Rica at her own expense. She has helped a number of Caymanian seamen with clothing in the heyday of National Bulk Carriers; some paid her, some did not, but she continued to help. For many years she was considered one of the leading merchants in George Town, yet we tend to push these people aside as pieces of asset which have become obsolete through the effluxion of time, this is a shame.

There are many, many good deeds which I could relate, but this is just an example of one individual, and there are many, many in our Islands' community. A lot of the accomplishments of these people will never be recorded in the annals of Caymanian history. But I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate Mrs. Cook-Bodden and others like her for the wonderful job they have done and are still doing for this country.

I feel Mr. President, that I would too be remiss in my duties this evening if I did not express my very deep disappointment at the treatment which was given to one of Cayman's most outstanding sons, I speak about no other than Mr. Ernest Panton. I feel Sir, that Mr. Panton should have been given a state funeral. Mr. Panton was one of the greatest Caymanians who lived in this country, and I cannot understand why it was not seen fit to give him such a funeral. There is not one individual in the Cayman Islands whether he be from West Bay, George Town or wherever, that had a bad word to say about Mr. Ernest, I have never met anyone. He did so much good for this country that indeed, he should have been given a knighthood. It would not have been out of order for it to have been done posthumously. I again say Sir, I trust that Government will not make a mistake like this again, and I fully support a letter which was written by his nephew complaining about this. Even though the letter was short and did not go into a lot of detail, the point was made.

Mr. Ernest's contribution to his Government, to the Church, to the community as a whole, and to each and every individual with whom he came in contact will never be forgotten. But I want his family to know Sir, that even though he was not given a state funeral, many, many residents of the Cayman Islands felt that he should have received one. I want Mr. Stanley Panton to know that I fully support his feeling in this respect.

Mr. President, in the appreciation Sir, that this is indeed your last Throne Speech, I will try my best before you leave not to make you get too nervous, and I will not make life difficult, as I have tried not to do in the past. I want you to know that I sincerely wish you all the best. It would be dishonest for me to say that I have not, many times, questioned your ruling, but this will happen in the best regulated families. I sometimes felt that your rulings were somewhat off, but then as an individual, I am sure you felt that maybe we were wrong in the way we were acting, thus the reason you felt to rule in a certain way. Mr. President, I trust that who ever succeeds you in that position will try their endeavour, whether it be Mr. Scott or whomever, to follow a path of non-involvement in politics regarding either side of the House. This may sometimes be difficult, but I have been very pleased to see, especially in recent sittings of this House that the Government bench has been reprimanded in the same way as backbenchers, and this is the way it should be.

The position of Speaker of the House should be a very neutral position, and regardless as to whether it is an Executive Council Member or a backbencher, the same rules should apply. As I said yesterday, I cannot support the rationale of certain Members of the House that this not an opportune time for the appointment of a Caymanian Speaker, and I say it also that this was not a reflection on the Presiding Officer at present, or on any future Governor who may serve as President. It is much deeper than that Sir. It touches the national core of the people of this country.

I feel Sir, to comment a bit more on this, that we indeed can find suitably qualified Caymanians who could fill the position of Speaker of this Assembly, and I will abide by the ruling of the majority, which is democracy in action. But I believe Sir, that we are indeed delaying the inevitable. It would be interesting to hear the qualifications required for the job of Speaker. I would say right now that any Member of the official bench of Executive Council, given sufficient time to study Parliamentary procedures in this House, could fill that position. It need not be somebody who is designated 'the Governor'. I also feel Sir, that somebody in the position of Mrs. Sybil McLaughlin would have done an admirable job.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I am sure the Member knows that strictly, reviving debate on something we have already considered is out of order, and I hope he will not oblige me to call this formally to his attention.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President with respect, I am hoping you will not get me in a position where I have to be defensive, but I do not think I am reviving a debate, I am not, but if that is your ruling so be it. But I must insist that my remarks are generally meant to convey to you and to the listening public that I feel that there is too much of an aura placed around the position of Governor and President, because that position is filled by an expatriate. There is no reason at all why any senior position in Government cannot be filled by qualified Caymanians. It was an unfortunate day yesterday, when the motion was defeated.

Mr. President there is no use us standing in this House giving lip service, if we do not believe what we are saying, if we do not sincerely practise what we preach. We want to see opportunities opened to Caymanians, therefore Mr. President, let us not block those opportunities. We want to see capable Caymanians filling jobs, and I am not speaking of the motion yesterday to do with the Speaker of the House, I am speaking generally. We want to see capable Caymanians put in place in these positions. We want to hear less hot steam being blown.

Mr. President, regardless of whether a motion had been brought here yesterday on the question of Speaker of this House, it was my intention long ago to raise this point, so I would hate for the Chair to feel that any reference I may make regarding this subject is reviving any past debate, it is not. I feel Sir, that any Governor who is brought to the Cayman Islands should perform the post of Governor of these Islands, and I will not, and cannot subscribe to the view that the only reason why a Governor should fill the position of the Presiding Officer in this House is to allow Members of this House to be able to meet and chat with him.

MR. PRESIDENT:

No, I must stop the Member now, I have told him once. I do regard this as reviving something that has been debated already, and the Member must pass on to the rest of his speech.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, I do not agree with you Sir, but I will bow to your ruling. I am not reviving any debate, I have a right to debate the Throne Speech in this House, and whether that touches on something that was debated before is beside the point. You cannot tell me I am wrong in doing that, because I will be touching on a lot of things that have been discussed in this House already. You are wrong Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

No, I think....

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

If it is such a touchy subject to you Sir, I will not continue to speak on it, but I am sure in your retirement you will hear that a Caymanian has been appointed to that position.

Mr. President, there was much more I intended to say, but it is obvious to me that you intend to keep interrupting me without good reason, so may I take this opportunity Sir to again, even though you are doing this, to congratulate you on your Throne Speech in your position as Governor of the Cayman Islands. I have taken some time to debate the Throne Speech, and if my throat not started to give out on me, I had intended to take some more time, and had I not been interrupted by you I would have taken some more time.

MR. PRESIDENT: I will suspend proceedings now if you like, to give you a chance to refresh yourself before you finish.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I am sure you do not want me to find any more ammunition Sir, but thank you anyway for your good thought. I will be finishing in a few minutes.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would you sooner finish before we take the break?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: You can take the break now Sir, but I would not need many more minutes.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well I think we will take the break then, if you have no objection. So I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 3:21 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:39 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, when we took the normal afternoon break I had mentioned at that point that I was nearing the conclusion of my contribution, or reply to the Throne Speech. And I believe Sir, we were discussing what could be considered admissible, or what was perhaps discussing matters that had already been covered, and I will not go over this ground Sir, because I stand to your ruling.

I want to again Mr. President, in closing, congratulate you on your Throne Speech which was ably delivered in this House. As stated earlier, I have taken time to debate a reply to your speech, and I trust that I have covered many of the very important areas touched on by you, and many of the important areas outlined in the Government's plans for the coming year.

I share your sentiment Sir, in your wish "that these Islands may remain prosperous and stable; making progress, but holding fast to our heritage and Christian virtues". This is the reason Sir, I alluded to a situation which I hope could occur in the future in this country where consideration could be given to amending our Penal Code so that we could more ably retain the Christian principles which we hold so dearly to us, and that we would not put ourselves in the position here in the Cayman Islands where we could be looked upon as just another Island in the Caribbean - a plantation colony.

I trust Sir, that consideration will be given by Members of Executive Council, regarding the suggestion made that maybe it is an opportune time that we look again at the provisions regarding capital punishment under our Penal Code.

I also trust Sir, that the new Governor and President of this House will come to his post with an open mind, because to come with any preconceived ideas would indeed be an error.

May I again Sir, take this opportunity to wish you and your good wife all the very best for the future.

Thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: Does any other Member wish to speak? If not, I shall call on the mover to reply if he wishes to do so. I think there may be one other Member who wishes to.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: The Third Member is coming Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any Member wish to speak?

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

The Government is going to have to pay me an extra salary for being a whip, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Member for West Bay.

(LAUGHTER)..The Third Elected

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Thank you Mr. President.

I would like to be prepared at some time to make a speech, and there have been a couple of times when I have had to save the day. I am not sure that it is fair on me, but I hope and pray that I will get my message across this evening.

Mr. President, I would like first of all to thank you for your gracious Throne Speech, which you delivered last Friday, and I must say, that I found it a rather upbeat and positive Throne Speech. I personally would have liked to have seen it presented in probably a nicer way. I expected it to be nicely bound, in nice copies, but any way, I suppose the text is what matters, and I want to say how much I appreciate all that you have included therein.

There are a few things that I would like to comment on, and before doing so, I would certainly like to take this opportunity of welcoming our new Attorney General, as well as our new Clerk of the Legislative Assembly. And I trust that we will have a very mutually satisfactory time together here.

Many things have been touched on Mr. President, which were outlined in your speech. As I mentioned just a while ago, I do not have notes or anything like that prepared, and I hope that I will be able to remember all the things that I would like to say at this time. Perhaps with the number of speeches that have already been made, a lengthy one is perhaps not necessary at this time, but I hope the substance of it will be something that is quite valuable and helpful to each of us here.

The off-start of your speech was a little bit disheartening I must say, when I noticed some of the statistics of crimes on the increase, and so on. I suppose this comes with the development of any nation, and in the modern world today with all the forces of evil that are upon us, the Cayman Islands finds itself, not exactly the Islands time forgot any more.

I think that the Police Department is to be congratulated for all its efforts thus far. I am not sure whether the increase in statistics is necessarily that crime is on the increase, or whether it might be a combination of the detection rate being up, and not necessarily that there is that much of an increase. However, the slightest increase gives cause for concern, and through this medium, since what is said in this House is published and is heard over Radio Cayman, I think I would like to call upon the members of the public Sir, to assist in every way possible, because the Police are able to do just so much. There is a tendency nowadays to contradict, blame and criticise, but the Police cannot be everywhere at the same time, and it behooves each of us, Members of Government and every citizen in this country to recognise that to curtail crime, to suppress it even, I wish I could say to stamp it out, but certainly to make an inroad into the increase of it, each of us will have to be involved.

The Drug Squad Mr. President, I notice has been increased. I can quite understand why, and I trust that this might prove to be a means of helping to solve some of the terrible crimes which we have to face in these areas.

I must say that although I may have received the wrong impression, the editorial just a few days ago in the Caymanian Compass, did not lend itself to giving much encouragement to the Drug Squad of the Police Department in trying to curtail, suppress and convict criminals involved in the drug scene. I wish that I could skip over this whole subject. It is a terrible thing to have to deal with, because it is there in our society. However, the text of this particular editorial seems to indicate that there is a tendency to call upon us as it were to have, is it a defeatists attitude, to say that we might as well face facts, that no matter how much we do to try to catch the big dealers, or those who are making money out of drugs, the problem will still exist. To be likened to something like a service station, a lumber store or a supermarket, that society demands the service, it is a little difficult for me to understand what the editor here is trying to say. The editor goes on to say that it is deplorable, it is frightening, it instills panic and so on. But people need them, and not because the dealer makes them available. They would not need them in the first place if a dealer had not made them available. And having now gotten young people addicted to them, they continue to fill what has become a craving, but certainly, it is not a need. I feel that this type of editorial is not helpful to the Caymanian public.

I hope that I am not being over zealous in this regard, in that perhaps there might be a misunderstanding on my part, but in reading through this Mr. President, it is almost saying to us that you might as well throw your hands up no matter how many you catch, the public is still going to demand that drugs be available. Mr. President, we have a situation in our midst that is certainly one that is a cause for concern.

I noticed that there are plans to increase the size of the Prison, this is a necessity, criminals will have to be punished. I am heartened to see that emphasis is going to be placed on rehabilitation programmes, and again, we need all the help and assistance we can get from the public, from the civic, social and Church organizations, and although some Members of this House seem to believe that it lies squarely and solely in the hands of Government to curtail or to make an indent into the drug problem, Mr. President, each and every individual in this country will have to realise that we cannot separate nor isolate ourselves from this particular problem, it is a grave problem and we have to become involved.

There are many things Mr. President that I would like to touch on here. Much has been said about the Caymanian Protection Law, and I would like to congratulate the Board for the tremendous job that it has to do. Certainly, there has to be a heavy work-load placed upon that particular Department. And while it cannot satisfy the needs of everyone nor the requests that are made, I have great confidence in that Board that they try to be as fair-minded and helpful as possible. Their decisions may not always please all of us, but I think that they try hard to do the best job that they possibly can do.

I too, was a bit concerned when certain individuals, whom I thought might have been and who certainly seemed to be eligible for receiving Caymanian Status, did not receive it. But again, I feel that we have a very fine Protection Board, and all that I can say is that I believe they acted in the best interests of the country, and with the limited number of persons that can receive Caymanian Status, I believe they acted, and did according to what they felt was best.

I am pleased Mr. President to see that in many of the Government Departments, young Caymanians are moving up. Many times we can see the situation where we feel Caymanians are being suppressed, held back, kept down, but in many areas many of the promotions and the appointments which I have seen published in the Gazette, I believe that there is a concerted effort made to place our young Caymanians in positions for which they are capable.

Mr. President I am concerned that often times there is a tendency to be overly critical in this particular area. I know that there are times when I have been caused to wonder why certain personnel seem to be stuck, and cannot move up. Sometimes I would like to ask for an explanation, and hope that I would get a satisfactory reply, and it does not always come. But I have sensed in some of the debate that has already taken place, even during this sitting, that we have to be extremely careful of the manner in which we tend to be overly critical in this regard. Caymanians must be taken care of. If they are capable, they must be placed in positions that they are capable of filling, they cannot be overlooked. But Mr. President, in our society there are certain positions which all of us recognise, where we still need a non-Caymanian to fill them. Mr. President Sir, I am old enough to recognise that this country has, all of my life, and probably even a long time before that, welcomed the expertise and the help which could be given by non-Caymanians. I am not so naive as to believe that a person does not come here to make a buck for himself. This is the whole reason why so many Caymanians left here to go overseas. But in having come here, and given us of their time and talent and energies, I think that we have to be extremely careful that we do not appear, even if this is not what our intention is, to just boot the individual out once we feel we have received what he could give us, and we do not need him any longer.

Mr. President, as all Members of this Honourable House are aware, the subject of Cayman Airways has come up quite a bit during this Session. I suppose that particular area will be a subject of heated debate for a long time to come yet perhaps. Questions were raised about qualifications, capabilities, promotion from within of young Caymanians and so on and so forth. But Mr. President, when I think of individuals who come here and give seven or eight years of their time in working with an airline, during its early stages of development, now that we see that the Airline is making some progress, certainly the picture is more rosy than it was some time ago, it would seem Mr. President, quite unfair for any of us to simply boot those individuals out, simply because we have qualified Caymanians coming up. I would hope that that Airline is reaching a stage where not only can it absorb the talents and expertise of those that have been with us from overseas for a long while, but that we will find additional places in which young Caymanians can be placed.

Now Mr. President, what I feel that we in this Honourable House need to know and to do, is to realise that we cannot group the good and the bad apples into the same keg. There has to be a separation of those. I most definitely know that there are some expatriates who have lived among us, some who are still here, who seem not to fit in with our way of life at all. And in my humble opinion they do not belong here, simply because they seem not to have any intention of fitting in. But those are the few, Mr. President. The majority of the people who are here, my experience has been, that they have contributed to this country, and I feel that they ought to have the opportunity of living in this country with dignity, the ability to feel comfortable and respected until time comes that they are to leave.

Mr. President, the calling of names in this House, of certain individuals, whether they work with Cayman Airways, or whether they work in Immigration, or whether they work in any other department of this Government, I feel if nothing else, is disrespectful, because those individuals Mr. President, are not responsible for being hired in their jobs in the first place. This Government has hired them, and to take a man's name in this forum and send it over the airwaves and into the press and so on, I feel is unfair. Many of those individuals come here, they know they are not here to stay. It is not everyone who comes to these shores that is looking for Caymanian Status. I am not saying they may not wish to have it, but they know what the restrictions are, and I believe with all my heart that they are here to earn a good living, to make their contribution while doing so, and to leave with dignity.

Just this week Mr. President, one of the individuals working with Cayman Airways and his wife, sent a letter to the Caymanian Compass. In fact, if I am not mistaken this same individual may have been referred to during some of the debate in this House. But I will read it here. The letter goes on to say:

"Just over a year ago, my husband was hired by Cayman Airways on a short-term contract. It would have been easier for our two boys and myself to have remained in Texas while Ivan commuted, but we chose to join him in this beautiful land of sunshine. This was the best decision we could ever have made. Not only have we enjoyed the sea, land and air, which are typically splendiferous, but also the many opportunities to serve God and man. From being involved in our Church, the school, the Sound of Music and various other special events, to tasting the many native dishes, and treasuring the Caymanian culture itself, our time here has become a newly composed symphony which we will fondly listen to for many years to come.

It must be disheartening at times to make friendships with folk like us, who are not going to be around for long, only to have to see them off at the airport once again. But you have never let that stop you from building relationships at least in our case. For this we are grateful. No longer will the Cayman Islands be just a small dot on our map. Because of you, the friendly Caymanian people with big, big hearts, the Cayman Islands will be as large as the sea which surrounds them. May you allow Him that hath founded it upon the seas, to be the faithful friend that only He can be.

Thank you."

And it was signed Gloria and Ivan Lebrandt and their children.

This, Mr. President, is an indication of what many expatriates hope to find in this country. And I would sound a warning here that the day that these Islands find themselves in a position where we no longer have time, nor friendship, nor respect, nor gratefulness for the people who come to contribute to the welfare of this country, then we have lost the single most important virtue which is ours. The fact that we are prosperous, the fact that there might be a situation of unemployment, the fact that we are renowned over the world for a people who are industrious and who are almost self-sufficient, which I consider we are, in many respects, we are never to forget where we came from, and where we need to go.

Mr. President, these overtones of belittling the expatriate, these overtones of independence in many respects, these overtones of not needing anyone else in our midst, I think is an unhealthy state of affairs, and I would like to express here, my concern that in this country we have no reason whatsoever why the same friendly disposition which we had all during the many years of our existence, cannot still go forward. There can be a happy medium where we ensure that this country is not taken over by any individuals who refuse to go along with our way of life, we will have none of it. If they are here and they see that this place is not what they want then I would suggest they take the next plane out. But when you have individuals who come here to seek a livelihood and to make a living like the rest of us, I do not feel that they should have to live under the stigma of feeling like a second-class citizen. And this House of all places Mr. President, should set an example of this, and these overtones of discontent with anyone other than a Caymanian is unhealthy, and I repeat that, it is an unhealthy situation.

These Islands are known for their friendliness, and this friendliness must not only be expressed to the tourists who come here and spend thousands of dollars in a few weeks, but anyone who gives of his time and talents should be recognised for what he is contributing to this country. Mr. President, perhaps I have touched on this issue before, but it bothers me and it bothers members of the Caymanian public when they listen sometimes to what is said in this House and the manner in which it is said. It is not always what one says, but many times it is the tone of voice and the manner in which it is said that makes a difference.

Mr. President this is an awesome responsibility; I have sat here at times and wondered whether this is something that I would wish to take on for another four years, but I am here, as sure as I am speaking in this House today by divine calling for a purpose, and I feel that each of us here has to recognise that the responsibility is ours to lead this country in the right direction. This Throne Speech Mr. President has touched on many issues, but this is an issue which weights heavily upon me.

There are other areas Mr. President, which I could touch upon. I am so grateful for the help we received in our district over the last year. Once again I feel that the Social Services Department has worked closely with us as representatives in the district of West Bay, and I believe we have made great inroads into some of the social problems which we have had there. There is still a lot to be done, but certainly we are making some progress.

Until I was getting the monthly progress report from the Public Works Department, there was a tendency on my part Sir, to wonder; what these people are doing, because there was so much that needed to be done in our district, and it seemed in my mind I thought, that they were dragging their feet. But fortunately, that department decided to issue and to circulate to Members the monthly progress report of the Public Works Department, and I feel that they ought to be congratulated heartily on all the accomplishments which I have seen from time to time in these reports.

Mr. President, there are many issues which are very delicate and serious. I would like very much to see the Rehabilitation Services in place. It bothers me when I see the many young people who have become addicted to alcohol and other hard drugs. And many times I am lead to believe that were this nipped in the bud, and with a proper rehabilitation service in place, I believe we could do something to curtail the many problems that we have to face today. I know that young people many times are disillusioned; many times there are problems in the home or in society which have confused, and sometimes almost compelled them to try to get into this world of unreality. But I would hope Sir, that it will no be long before that particular service is in place. There is a matter of funds, we would like to have many things but there is only so much that can be done at one time. I think that in the district of West Bay we have done well over the past year, and I look forward to many accomplishments during this year.

Mr. President, mention was made in your Throne Speech Address, regarding a study of the facilities at the hospital, and whether or not these should be improved upon, or whether other plans need to be made. I might say here and now Mr. President, that there are quite a number of good reasons why perhaps there should be a complete new facility for the hospital. I am not advocating that it be done this year, but I would suggest that as soon as possible it be done. The buildings on that particular compound can be used in many respects, but I would like to repeat once more that one of the areas that I feel should be a priority if any such decision is made, that that particular facility should be used for other purposes.

Mr. President, in our Island today, and I do not need to emphasize this, because each of us know that it is a situation that exists, but we have quite a number of teenage mothers. Many, if not most of them are from homes where the environment is not conducive, it is not wholesome nor favourable to a young mother expecting her child, and especially her first child. Mr. President a facility which would accommodate these young teenage mothers may be for the last six, or probably the last three months of their pregnancy with concerned, capable House Parents to teach those young mothers the responsibilities of motherhood; the ways in which to care for a child; the ways in which to manage a home, can be done in those last few months.

After the child is born, if that young mother is allowed to remain in a favourable environment where she can be taught how to care for the child, cement that bond of love between the mother and the child, her mind is not distracted through fighting and fussing and all the other things that go on in some of the homes in our society today, it can only be a positive approach for that young woman with a young child to care for. She learns how to manage a home; how to cook; how to clean; how to perhaps manage money; counseling on family planning, and with good Christian advice, with love and a sense of security Mr. President, we perhaps can nip in the bud many of today's ailments, because it starts in many instances right from infancy. The child does not know any other situation, other than that which it was born into, and it grew up with. It goes into society as another statistic, but the Social Services Department, the Police Department or some other Government department taking into its hands - preventative measures, Mr. President, I repeat, is what it is going to take to cure some of the ills in our Islands today.

I would hope that such a facility can be provided in the not too distant future, because some young teenage mothers just could not do much better; the whole environment was a place where this situation was conducive to exactly what they find themselves in. Mr. President, there is much to be done in this country. We do not have time for bickering and frivolity and the wasting of words in this forum. The business of governing a country is much too important for frivolities and bickering and majoring over minors Mr. President. This country is in our hands and if the public out there is in any way disillusioned or feel that we are incapable, or feel that we are not the individuals in whom they can place their trust, then there is very little use of our being here. No matter what we say Mr. President, no matter what we try to get across to the public, it is important that they see that this Government is going about the business of governing.

Mr. President, there are many things upon which I could touch. I am a little bit sorry that I do not have my notes together, and I make a promise here.....

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: made his secretary pregnant.

You could talk about a man who

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:
to debate in this House, I am going to

.....that the next time I have be given that opportunity.

Mr. President, I mentioned a few seconds ago that the business of this House is not necessarily frivolity and fun, and I would hope that my message got across as I intended it to....

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: that is what you had said before.

I was just reminding you that

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:
of Health, Education and Social Services seems to have quite a few things on their plate for this year. But I would like to at this time, congratulate an organization which I feel has helped in a very real way, and that is the Rotary Club for making available the mobile dental clinic. I think this is going to be a tremendous help with all the dental needs that are out there to be looked after, and I would like to congratulate all the social and civic organizations that throughout this year have made a positive impact on filling the needs of this country. The Lions, Kiwanis, Leos, Rotary and all the others who have pooled their efforts to raise funds, or to provide equipment whether it is for schools, the indigent or otherwise. This is the type of cooperation which this Island is accustomed to, and I am pleased to see that it continues.

Mr. President, the Department

Mr. President, I was also pleased to see that the Social Services Department is going to be providing a home help aid programme for the elderly and handicapped persons, and of course, the provision of a small home for the elderly in East End is certainly very much in order, especially since that district is so far removed from the Pines Retirement Home in George Town.

The Sports programme is very much in order. A child who is occupied with doing positive and wholesome activities has less, if any time, for being involved in drugs. I would hope that the men in this district who seem to find that they have time on their hands will find time to become involved in this area, and to lead many of our young people in the right direction.

I am pleased to see Sir, that the West Bay Sewerage System is going forward. I am surprised that they are able to do so much with so little disruption, and that other areas such as the piped water supply, is well on its way to being completed by next year. Many things which I feel the Caymanian public should be led to recognise that this Government is working on the people's behalf, and we are not necessarily centering our attention on any one area, but the entire Island is benefiting from what this Government has been able to do in the last two years, and more.

I notice Mr. President, that there is expected to be a vast growth in the number of visitors to our shores, and I notice that the standards of service are going to be monitored carefully, and we cannot be too careful in this regard. I happen to work in a complex where I meet many individuals who visit this Island, and they have a lot of good things to say about the Cayman Islands. As I mentioned a while ago, upper most in their minds is the friendliness of the people, the cleanliness of the Island in addition to its natural beauty, and the fact that they feel safe in this place. There are sometimes comments made that certain properties have been a disappointment to them, they expected so much, and when they got to the property it was not what they expected and they were very disappointed. But I feel sure that with diligence and a constant monitoring of all the properties in these Islands, the Department of Tourism will ensure that these Islands offer what it advertises, or better, but not worse. Nothing substandard at all.

Mr. President, I mentioned Cayman Airways just a while ago, but I want to say here and now that comments which have been made to me without any prompting whatsoever, have been only favourable for our national airline. I have had some comments from persons who were delayed in Miami from another airline, were able to get on to Cayman Airways, and they mentioned that it was the finest service they had received on any airline at any time. The ability of the young air hostesses to make them feel at home; one couple in particular commented that you had the feeling of being at a big family gathering. They were pleased with the cleanliness of the aircraft, they felt completely at ease in making the trip and they had very positive comments to make about the airline. After further discussion, the one thing that was left with me was this, and I know this has probably happened half a dozen times over the last several months, that that airline should at all costs be maintained, because it is ours, we have it, we know that it is there and we should do everything possible to see that it continues to fly and to maintain the services which our Islands need.

Speech.....

MR. PRESIDENT:
thirty.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Mr. President in your Throne

I am afraid it is now four

I have about five minutes Sir.

I would request that Standing Orders be suspended.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, Standing Order 10(2), maybe it could be suspended so that the Member can finish her speech, under Standing Order 83, that is Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: The motion is that in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 83, Standing Order...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: 10(2).

MR. PRESIDENT: If it is 10(2), I was just checking it... I hope you have got it right...10(2) should be suspended in order to enable the Third Elected Member for West Bay to finish her speech. Unless anybody wishes to speak to that motion, I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED

MR. PRESIDENT: The Ayes have it, the Member may continue.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: Thank you, Sir.
In closing my debate on your Throne Speech Sir, I wanted to thank you very much for all your good wishes which perhaps I am sure everyone appreciates. You noted what we have, that the evidence of development is visible everywhere. New buildings; growing sophistication; more visitors and more traffic. I am glad that you will principally remember the warmth and friendliness for which the Caymanian people are renowned. I am glad that you find us kind and warm and friendly, and may your prayers Sir, be answered, that these Islands will remain prosperous and stable, making progress but holding fast to our heritage of Christian virtues. If we would let Almighty God guide us, then we can expect his blessings.

Mr. President, perhaps there is a lot more that I could have said. I will perhaps be chiding myself tonight that I have left out many points which I should have got across. However, that opportunity will present itself at another time, perhaps even during this Session, and I trust that each Member here will leave these Chambers with a determination that it is our business to continue to see that these Islands are the best anywhere, and second to none on this globe, and it takes each of us to do so.

Mr. President, I thank you for allowing me this time.

MR. PRESIDENT: In that case I will call on the Honourable First Official Member to move the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I move the adjournment of this House until ten o'clock on Monday morning.

MR. PRESIDENT: The motion now is that this House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. on Monday morning.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. AT 4:35 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10:00 A.M., MONDAY, 16TH FEBRUARY, 1987.

Presentation of Papers and

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT OF THE STANDING FINANCE COMMITTEE
(MEETING HELD 28TH JANUARY, 1987)

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, I apologise for the quality of my voice, but I beg to lay on the table of this Honourable House the Report of the Standing Finance Committee of the meeting of Wednesday, 28th January, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT:

So ordered.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, that meeting was called specifically to deal with the Economic Development Plan, and also to deal with the seeking of approval from Finance Committee to the write-off of, what is deemed to be uncollectable, hospital fees. That sum was $107,000, and approval was given for it.

In dealing with the Five-Year Economic Plan the discussion was held to try to reach an agreement with Members of that Committee as to the approach in dealing with and examining the Economic Development Plan. Agreement was reached, and it was left for the Chairman to call a meeting shortly after this meeting comes to an end.

At that meeting also, Mr. President, Finance Committee approved a supplementary for Head 17 - Department of Social Services - Sub-Head 08-009 - Community Development of $106,000.00 and Members will recall a few days ago, we also laid on the Table the Finance Committee Report of 18th December, where $35,000.00 was also approved. That $35,000.00 plus the $106,000.00 makes $141,000.00 which was a Government contribution to defraying the cost incurred in the development of the Helen Harquail Cultural Centre.

Thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 67(4), the recommendations and the Report are deemed to have been accepted.

Questions. The Second Elected

Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 35: Would the Honourable Member state what consideration is being given to replace foreign senior flight crew with qualified Caymanians?

(That is the flight crew of Cayman Airways, Mr. President.)

ANSWER:

It is Cayman Airways policy to replace foreign senior flight crew, who are not on the Company's seniority list, subject to the availability of qualified Caymanians who meet the airline's standards.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

A supplementary for clarification purposes Mr. President.

Would the Honourable Member state whether the question is suggesting that, if the foreign flight crew are on the seniority list, Cayman Airways Limited's policy is not to replace them?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, there are only two foreign senior flight crew members who are on the Company's seniority list, and it is the intention, as I explained last week in the course of answering other questions and supplementaries, that an exception has been made to keep those two crew members on the Company's seniority list. All the others on the seniority list are Caymanian.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Supplementary, Mr. President. Could the Honourable Member say whether the airline's standards are laid down in an operation manual, and if the Member knows what the standards are?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, I am not totally familiar with all the standards of the airline. The Civil Aviation Department, for example, has a certain criteria that has to be met, and the airline's standards are sometimes higher than those set out by the Civil Aviation Department. But the Company's standards are set out in the Company's Operations Manual.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Supplementary Mr. President. Could the Honourable Member say whether it is possible to have those standards for the flight crew published so that people who are aspiring to the airline can know what they have to obtain?

MR. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

I believe, Mr. President, that would be a proper and correct procedure for the Company to follow, which I believe it does that is for any young Caymanian applying to Cayman Airways for a position to be given in exact detail the Company's standards so that they will understand from the very beginning what standards have to be met and what is expected of them. When the Member says "publish" I am not too sure what he means. Does he mean to publish it publicly? I think this information would be of value to prospective young Caymanians who are seeking positions with the airline, and I agree that those standards should be made available to them from the very beginning if they apply to the airline for a job.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Supplementary Mr. President.

I happen to know that persons who have applied to the airline have been given various standards. So I wonder if the Honourable Member could give me the undertaking that the five applicants who have applied for a pilot's job at the airline could receive in writing a copy of the set standards?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Yes Mr. President, I will have the Company review which applications they have on file and will see that management informs the applicants of the Company's standards.

MR. PRESIDENT:

If there is no further supplementary, the Second Elected Member for George Town may ask Question No. 36.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR GEORGE TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNICATIONS WORKS AND DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION.

NO. 36:

Would the Honourable Member provide a comparative annual maintenance cost of the Tower Building since its purchase by Government?

ANSWER:

The Tower Building was purchased by Government in Mid-1984. At the time, the major part of the building had not yet been fitted with floor coverings or partitions. Appropriate floor layouts were designed for the various Departments selected to occupy the building. Between late 1984 and late 1985 the necessary internal works were carried out and the building progressively occupied.

The past year, 1986, therefore, represents the first full financial year of complete occupancy and the maintenance cost in respect of the building for 1986 was $46,000.00.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, since the question asked for a comparative maintenance cost, may I ask the Honourable Member if he can say how the cost of maintenance on this building compares with the cost of say the Government Administrative Building, or any other public building?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, unfortunately I do not have those figures, but I would be happy to get this information and pass it on, Sir.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, can the Honourable Member let us know what items make up the $46,000.00 given in the answer?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, in terms of labour and materials, the respective costs were $24,000 and $22,000.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Supplementary Mr. President.

Could the Honourable Member state what were the capital improvement costs made to the Tower Building during 1984 and 1985 to make it suitable for occupancy?

MR. PRESIDENT:

I do not really think that that is a permissible supplementary. The original question dealt with maintenance, and the only reason that the Honourable Member mentioned the other point was in order to explain why there were not maintenance figures for 1985. I think if the Member wants to get the information that he has sought, he will have to put down a substantive question. If there is no further supplementary, the Elected Member for North Side may ask Question No. 37.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NO. 37: Can the Honourable Member say if the Snug Harbour Development has been excluded from the Sewerage Project?

ANSWER: Yes. Snug Harbour Development is excluded from the first phase of the West Bay Beach Sewerage project, but will be included in the second phase.

SUPPLEMENTARY:

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Supplementary Mr. President. Would the Honourable Member state what is the estimated time placed for the commencement of the second phase?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, hopefully after the first phase is completed there could be a bit of a breather in putting the second phase proposal together. I would think that perhaps the second phase would be implemented sometime in the following year.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, we can then pass to Item 4(1). Continuation of Debate on the Throne Speech.

Does any further Member wish to speak? The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

CONTINUATION OF THE DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: I am certainly not going to miss the opportunity to debate the Throne Speech, as happened with the Budget Address.

Now, Mr. President, I would like to join my colleagues here who have already spoken, to congratulate you on a well structured and a well presented Throne Speech. It is one Mr. President that went straight into telling the nation what to expect in this new year, so that everyone can be at ease to know what Government's plans are.

Mr. President, it is true to say, too, that your Throne Speech has also presented a true and explicit record of accomplishments so far, and plans either already set in motion or plans to come forward during the course of this year. Mr. President, it is a position I would say which can ably guide this Honourable House over the period of this year.

We have arrived, Mr. President, at a midway position of our term of office which expires at the end of next year. In reviewing the Throne Speech we feel a sense of accomplishment at the work which we have undertaken so far over the two-year period - and, satisfaction, too, Mr. President, that our plans for services to come into effect in the next two years will be on stream. We will see many of them unfolding in the not too distant future and certainly before the end of the term. Despite difficulties which were experienced at the outset, the ship is now on a smooth course.

Our aim, when we were elected to office was, I would say, two-fold. One was to rectify the problems that existed or that were just rearing their heads; and the second was to build up a surplus in the Treasury that could serve as a buffer over troubled periods, such as recessions and perhaps catastrophies.

Mr. President, looking over the Throne Speech there is ample evidence that we are doing just that.

Every area of service is showing needed growth, good maintenance and too, our surplus is beginning to grow.

Having said that, Mr.

President, I must also admit that due to financial restraint there are those things that need to be done, that we cannot. They could also be included on the list of priorities. But in circumstances like this we must ensure that our financial principles are not sacrificed on the altar of expediency just in order to achieve all that we want. In other words growth, development and progress must be slowly achieved. Like the old proverbs, we should not hang our hat where we cannot reach it. In other words, Mr. President, we must not attempt to delve or to travel in the realm of deficit financing. We must remain in the position we have built for ourselves over the years. If we look round the world today we will see that the Cayman Islands are almost unique in their financial position. The trend around the world today is that it is so easy to achieve things by borrowing. So let us go ahead and do it.

Mr. President, I hope that those coming after us in this Honourable House will also have that sense of the financial principles which have built this country to where it is today and that they will endeavour to maintain the status quo. The country is small. Our resources are not that great and we must always remain attractive in every way if we want to continue to build on the economy which serves these Islands today.

Mr. President, the Throne Speech has set out the numerous services, which I have mentioned, and to go through them would be to read the Throne Speech again.

As I look around these Islands, I cannot but say that there is ample evidence of prosperity, good harmony and a greater co-operation among citizens toward the common good. However, there are to my mind two areas that need addressing. One of them is our ever increasing traffic congestion which my colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town, spoke about at some length in his contribution to the Throne Speech. Secondly, there is need for greater co-operation between the private sector and Government toward the good of these Islands.

Mr. President, I will deal with traffic first. At the beginning of this Administration, we had some input from residents regarding a possible solution to the traffic congestion here in George Town. We brought this to the attention of the public, with a suggestion that a multi-storey car park be constructed on Government property behind the library. In any case that land is now used by the public for parking.

It was thought, too, Mr. President, that the Post Office needed to be relocated, and that this could be done on the ground floor of that multi-storey car park building. And I should say, Mr. President, that with regard to the Post Office building, sooner or later it must be moved from where it is.

Quite recently the Honourable Member for Communications, Works and District Administration put forward a suggestion for the renovation and work to be done on the old building. But, it was Government's view that this should not be done because the re-siting of that office was in the making, and whatever resources there were available to put on any renovation of the building, should be applied to the new office.

Mr. President, we approached the business offices in George Town about the car park for an indication of their interest, and to also state that there would be a fee for parking. There was a reasonable response, although the senior people in those offices said that they could not speak for their staff, and of course their staff were in any case always looking for free parking in private parking lots, and so they would not be in a hurry to move unless they definitely had to find parking. But, Mr. President, looking at George Town today, it is bursting at its seams with traffic and with the problem growing worse each day it indicates that there is now good reason to move on with that particular development. And it is the intention, Mr. President, to begin fairly early to deal with the construction of the multi-storey building for the Post Office and car park. As soon as the Honourable First Official Member can marshal financing for the project, approval will be sought for the implementation. So there is no doubt that there is that need in George Town today for additional parking, and I am sure that all concerned will support the project.

Speaking of co-operation, Mr. President, much has been said from time-to-time about the co-operation between Government and the private sector. Since our coming to office in November 1984, we have sought public input in all the things that we attempted to do; that is where major decisions had to be taken. I refer to projects like the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, Marine Parks, the Building Code and now the Development Plan review, the Labour Legislation and the proposed Pension Scheme, because Mr. President, we felt that this is the way good government should operate and it was therefore one of the principles which we adopted in our bid for this Government.

Mr. President, we believe that the opinion of the majority should prevail at all times, and in all the things that we attempt to do that principle is strongly borne in mind. In spite of this we still find responsible groups in the private sector asking questions such as "Why is Government doing this?" or "Why does Government not do that?". I believe, Mr. President, that Government basically exists to give shape, order and good meaning to society and to do for people what they need and what they cannot do for themselves. The interesting thing is that the more independent people are, the less Government there is. Now when people reach the point of expecting Government to practically do everything for them, and at little or no cost, that is when there is too much government and when the cost is very expensive to all concerned. The bottom line is that Government can only dole out what it takes in, and it only takes money from the people it provides a service to.

We have been talking about our fiscal policy, where the country will find added revenue for its future needs. That today, Mr. President, is not being thought of too much simply because the present system of revenue is producing quite well. But when we need to find new avenues of taxation to provide the need of government, if this Government continues to expand and expand to unreasonable proportions, then we are going to be in some difficulty and a dilemma to know where that revenue will be sought. So, Mr. President, when I speak about too much government, that is exactly what I mean. We can have too much of something that will not do us any good.

Mr. President in the midst of our private sector there is a high level of expertise. Most groups have formed associations such as banking, insurance and accountants. These associations, Mr. President, could well provide a certain level of self-discipline and community service which would be of direct benefit to the country, both in the short and long term and would provide better service to the public thereby avoiding the need for government to increase its size and costs. Again too much government.

Mr. President, I am aware that the private sector in any country has its limitation in what it would want to undertake. That is understandable, but it is also most important that at this point in time they make themselves aware of their choices, and take a more positive and less negative role in shaping the future of these Islands. Not by just peeking into Government and attempting to dictate the course.

Mr. President, there is no need to be at loggerheads just because of misplaced pride. The private sector and Government must work together for the good of the country. Each side must recognise its duty and fulfill those obligations to the best of its ability. Achievement must be the aim of both sides. As Shakespeare said, "Nothing will come of Nothing". We must recognise what is there to be done and do it. Not just by the easiest and most lucrative way either, by what is considered the best method and manner.

Mr. President, I will now say a few words on Agriculture. The Department of Agriculture was established many years ago, and scarcely without a goal - only to assist farmers in whatever manner was possible. In those days Mr. President, no form of agriculture was seen to be lucrative or viable and so there was very little interest. There were farming projects established in those days and vast sums of money injected into those operations, and they all failed.

Today Mr. President, the outlook is much better. Farmers are more optimistic about agriculture and so it is Government's intention to encourage and assist farming wherever this is possible. In this regard, in late 1986 last year, Government appointed a qualified and experienced agronomist, a farming expert from Trinidad to assist and put a new thrust into agricultural development and to upgrade our demonstration farms. This is one of the ways in which we assist farmers - by showing them what the latest technology in farming is like so that it can assist their small or big projects.

It was never the intention of Government at any time, through these demonstration farms, to be in competition with local farmers. The question of the bananas was raised not long ago, but the demonstration farm produced bananas not intentionally to compete against other farmers. At the time we did not suspect that the local market would become saturated with that produce. When we found that this was so, we quickly placed a halt on the banana production which was really demonstrating a new species of banana and to see how well they would grow in our soil.

The demonstration farm, Mr. President, will be used for many other things - to produce other produce and we hope that that will be a boost to our endeavour to promote agriculture.

The other big move within agricultural development, Mr. President, is the construction of a Farmers' Market. Now we have many farmers coming to us from time to time saying that they are small farmers who produce a bit, but that there is no outlet for such produce. This was the first thought that brought about the idea of a Farmers' Market. Somewhere where all farmers could take their produce and have it placed for the public to use.

The other thought, Mr. President, was to build an abattoir for the slaughtering of animals. Now I have an idea that a few hairs rise when we talk about an abattoir, but from 1969, 18 years ago, an abattoir and a Farmers' Market were the subject of two items on the capital project list, which was a five-year programme - later converted into a ten-year programme. Those two items are the only items that have not been touched until now.

It was through that, with the Cayman Islands developing as they are, an abattoir was necessary from a sanitation point of view. And we can all be proud of the development that we see here today. All our services are considered first class, and yet we still butcher cows under the trees, on the ironshore - the seashore. We must balance our thought. If one service is good for improvement, then the other should be. Mr. President that is the reason why the abattoir is being built.

The question which has been asked is whether it is going to be self-financing? Well what if Government has to finance these things for a little while until they can be sorted out? The intention is to put the market and that abattoir under a co-operative of farmers, and the farmers must take responsibility for operating them - and operating them in a financially viable manner as well.

I do hope, Mr. President that those two items which have been approved in the Budget - all for the financing to be put in place as far as the abattoir is concerned - will be successfully completed and put into operation, and that they will be as fine a service as we find with the other improvements we have made in the Islands. And that we can also be justly proud of them, so that we can take people there and show them where we now butcher our animals.

Mr. President, I will now say something about water. We are grateful to the Cayman Water Company for providing piped desalinated water for the Seven Mile Beach which service came into effect back in 1979. In the early years, 1969 to 1970, when we prepared our development programme, we thought from those days that water for the Seven Mile Beach would be a very important subject because we knew that with the growth of tourism in that area the small rainfall and the water produced by truckers would not fill the need of that area in time. So we were very delighted when the Cayman Water Company came along and produced water. Of course, it is a very lucrative area and one that any business would seek to provide services of that nature to.

Mr. President, water for George Town is a little different. We have to produce water for people of all classes and varying conditions in George Town from the wealthy to the poor. And so it is not just another Seven Mile Beach project. We have to find cheaper water, more reliable water and water of equal or better quality. That is what the Water Authority sought to do over the past two years.

When we talked about water for George Town we invited the Cayman Water Company and other people to look at George Town and say whether they wanted to provide water here as well. The reaction was that if Government was willing to subsidize a water system for George Town, they would be prepared to do it - subsidize. Well that will give you an idea, Mr. President. Not everybody will want to jump and do a project of this nature in George Town.

In any case, Mr. President, the Water Authority Law in 1983 gave that authority to the Water Authority to provide water and sewerage for these Islands. And so, if the Government of the day saw fit to place that responsibility in the lap of a public corporation, then at this stage I see no reason why the Authority is not the proper institution to do a water system for George Town. And so it was decided that that would be so. We would have to find someone who could produce water.

We knew many years ago that one of the cheapest and most reliable systems of producing water is to do so by a waste-steam system, and Caribbean Utilities was lobbied many years ago to see whether they were willing to produce water if the need should arise at any time. They, too, were quite aware of their capability of producing water, and so the arrangement was that Caribbean Utilities, through their affiliated company Central Desal Limited, would produce the water and sell it to the Water Authority for distribution. That is why the Water Authority is able to sell a cheaper water to the public of George Town.

There is no competition in it, Mr. President, because the Cayman Water Company is operating within a franchise area and the Water Authority will not be selling water in that area. Truckers who are now buying water from the Cayman Water Company may buy water from the Water Authority, because it is cheaper water and good quality. The truckers do not originate from the Seven Mile Beach. They are from George Town and other areas, and so there is absolutely no competition at all. Furthermore, Mr. President, Central Desal, which will produce the water, is not doing it under an exclusive franchise. They have a licence to produce water, but if more water is needed, other companies can be asked to produce water for George Town as well.

The question was raised why Central Desal is not paying a royalty. Well, Mr. President, if Central Desal were called upon to pay a royalty the people of George Town would pay more for their water, and we said that we should sell cheap water to the public of George Town. The Water Authority will be making a profit from its operation, and that profit will go to public revenue, or it will be used for the expansion of their facility. But in whatever way those excess funds are used, it will be of benefit to Government.

Mr. President, quite a lot has been said about George Town water, but I would like say one thing. The people of George Town want water and they are satisfied with the Water Authority producing that water. If other people do not want water that is entirely up to them. But I say that the George Town water system should be left alone because the people of George Town are beginning to ask why queries are being made in the House about the George Town water. It is the people of George Town who will pay for it, not the people from other districts.

When the time comes Mr. President, they can make a decision whether they want water in their district or not, but please leave George Town alone. This Government is not paying for any of it. The Water Authority will pay. It will pay its overhead cost and repay its loans, and it will put money into the public Treasury too.

MR. PRESIDENT:
convenient point to break?

I wonder if this will be a proceedings for approximately 15 minutes.

In that case I will suspend

AT 11:12 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:38 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
Resumption of debate on the Throne Speech. The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. VASSEL, G. JOHNSON:
President.

Well I am back home, Mr.

Mr. President, some mention was made about the ability of the Water Authority to collect its revenue. The Water Authority is a public corporation. It must operate its business as a commercial venture because it will be responsible for its overhead cost, repaying its loan and for other expansion of the system. So it must be able to collect its revenue. Further, the suggestion was made that the water and sewerage scheme should be done by a private company. Well, if the Water Authority institute tight control and proper methods of collecting revenue, what difference will it be from say Caribbean Utilities, Cable and Wireless or the Cayman Water Company? They institute stiff rules for the payment of fees too.

Mr. President, I have no fear about the Water Authority's ability to operate its financial affairs successfully. Neither do I see the need for politics to interfere in the operation of that system. Someone asked whether as a politician I was going to cut off the water supply. Well Mr. President, the truth is if you have to cut, you cut. It is no different to Caribbean Utilities or Cable and Wireless - especially when the Water Authority is producing a cheap commodity of good quality, people must pay for it. We can understand the few poor people who might have difficulty in paying dues for a month or so. I am sure that any of us would pull a few dollars out of our pockets and help them. One of the norms of the day is that we go around and help poor people.

Mr. President, we are now embarking on a Building Code for these Islands. Something which has been advocated for many years. Attempts have been made to establish such a code, but I know that among the architects, contractors, engineers, planners and interested persons there is support for such a Code. As we see large beautiful structures going up in the Island, the question about the type of construction and whether it is under any Government control is asked. All we can say is that it has received planning permission, but scarcely nothing else.

I know that since a few years ago the Planning Department has been using, as a guide, the South Florida Building Code. I think they have successfully employed it in some cases. But what is important Mr. President, is that under our Development and Planning Law there is a code to control the ethics of building. Although it is said that the Cayman Islands have never experienced heavy earthquakes, anything is possible and no doubt one of these days we will experience heavy enough shocks so that if our buildings are not properly structured under some acceptable building guidelines, we will start to blame ourselves for it.

I am sure even the investors and developers who come here to do construction of that nature also want to know the acceptable system which Government employs so that they can use it as well.

The draft Building Code Mr. President, passed through Executive Council and it is now with Members of this Honourable House. At the adjournment I will be calling them together to discuss the code because it is the intention to send it to the public for comment, but I did not want to do so until Legislators had the first look at it. After public comments are received we will pass it through formal legislative process. Hopefully by the middle of the year, or thereabouts, the Code will come into effect.

We are now recruiting the Building Code Inspector and will be establishing such a section within the Planning Department. That should improve building in the Island, but of course Members will see that the code will not apply to small residential homes that will continue to be under the control of the Central Planning Authority as is now the case.

I think it is a good code. A lot of effort was put into it. We have had the able assistance of a very experienced planner from the United Kingdom. I think that can be confirmed by all who worked with him.

Mr. President, also in the process of preparation is the Development Plan Review. The Development Plan was introduced in 1977, and under the Development and Planning Law there is a requirement that the Plan should be reviewed every five years. Unfortunately, it has now been ten years since the Plan came into effect and this is the first review which is being carried out. The review is also in the hands of a very experienced planner. It will seek public input in the same manner as the Development Plan itself when it was being structured in 1977, and everybody will have the opportunity of giving their views and input into it.

I believe personally that there is need for the review because things have changed somewhat since those days of the 1970's. We see economic development booming on - and there is a need to support economic development, because job opportunities must be created for the young and upcoming generation. But in our bid to develop our properties, we must ensure that there is a balance between economic development and the ecological base of the country.

People have always said that we should not dredge our swamps or cut down our mangrove trees. We know that a tree takes many, many years to grow to full height. Although when one looks at the Hyatt Regency Hotel and Treasure Island Resort it can be seen that a forest can be created almost overnight. I dare say that when we cut trees we must seek to replace them with other trees. There is a great deal, from the planning point of view, that we need to look at, and which the public should have their say on as well. That is the purpose for the review of the Plan every five years. We hope that by later this year the review will be coming forward for us to look at in this Honourable House.

Mr. President, mention was made of the Marine Parks, and I apologise to the Elected Member for North Side who seems to have had difficulty in deciding what the Marine Park sign meant in areas of replenishment, and so on.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Not me, Sir, the public.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Well you speak on behalf of the public. The public never said anything to me, you did.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

They said it to me too.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:
that.

Yes well, I can understand

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

explain to them now though.

I am glad you do. You could

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Order! Order!

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:
Sir.

The Member is inviting debate

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President I am sure there has been so much publicity about the three vital areas of the Marine Park. We have the Environmental Zone, the Replenishment Zone and the Marine Park Zone. What we are doing is making signs for the various zones. The signs will give the details of what you can and cannot do in those zones. The sign will show the exact spot where one is standing. So all those details will be there. But because the Marine Park signs were all finished before, we thought in the meantime we would put them up so as to remind people that it is a Marine Park. Whether it is environmental or not, it is a Marine Park, because the regulation deals with Marine Parks. Nevertheless, I am apologising to the two Members since they have been confused about these signs, and wish to assure them that proper signs will be put up as soon as they are available. Many of these Marine Park signs will be taken down and sent to the smaller Islands to alert them that the signs are coming.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:
(LAUGHTER).

Signs of the times ...

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: of what is coming.

You have to give a pre-warning

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
complaints come from us.

Mr. President there was a complaint too, I do not know if it came from the two Members, but ...

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

(LAUGHTER) ... I know that. I am addressing the Chair, Sir, but when I refer to Members I mean the two of them. (LAUGHTER)

They talked about starfish and the large number that tourists were taking away with them. Well, Mr. President, unfortunately, when the Marine Conservation Law was introduced, there was no protection for the starfish. In other words it was not considered a protected species at the time. So it is not an offence for anyone to take starfish out of the sea - except in a Marine Park area.

Mr. President, if it is the wish of this Honourable House for the Marine Conservation Law to be amended to include, in the list of protected species, starfish, I am prepared to bring the amendment forward. But we cannot go and accost people for taking starfish out of the sea. I think it was also said that we arrest only certain people. In other words the inference is that the tourists can get away with anything.

We have appointed a Marine Park Inspector, and I can say Mr. President, that he is a very alert and experienced person who has been loaned to the Portfolio by the Police Department. He will book anyone. It does not matter whether it be a tourist or a local person ...

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

What about the blow holes?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:
you were going to say.

I knew that was exactly what

Mr. President, my information is that he booked the police last week. So that is an indication of what I said a while ago. He is no respecter of persons. I would alert one and all to be cautious, because that Inspector is like Superman. You never know when he will appear.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

No politicking now.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

You go in the sea and take a conch and you see what happens to you in a replenishment area.

You believe it is politicking.

Now, Mr. President, we come to some more serious things. The Elected Member for North Side complained that the Water Authority blocked the prospect of a sick North Sider from selling a parcel of land. It was probably valued at over $100,000. I deny that allegation Mr. President.

We know the parcel of land that is being referred to. When the Authority looked at it, the parcel of land was going to be used as a quarry for the quarrying of rocks to produce aggregate. Normally it would not have been agreed if there was some other operation that would molest the underground water. This proposed quarry site was on a high rise, and it posed no problem to the water table. The relatives of the individual discussed this matter with the Water Authority, but to date no application has been made to the Water Authority for their decision on the matter. But as far as the Water Authority is concerned it indicated no objection to the proposed quarry.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

In writing, or verbally?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, perhaps when one knows the developers behind the scheme, it throws a different light on the matter. So, what I am saying, Mr. President, is that if the individual still wishes to sell his land for a quarry, the Water Authority has no objection.

The case of the proposed chemical factory over the North Side water lens is quite a different thing. Granting such an approval, Mr. President, would be in direct contravention of the Development and Planning Regulation. It would be against those Regulations to allow an industrial development to be placed in an area that is not zoned industrial.

Mr. President, I understand that the matter is now with the Central Planning Authority and so I cannot presuppose the decision of it. But the Authority uses the advice of the Environmental Health Office, the Water Authority and the Fire Department. So this advice forms part of the decision-making process of the Central Planning Authority. However, Mr. President, do we run the risk of damaging a water lens that provides water for an entire district? It is dangerous to health. Although assurances are given by the developers of what they would do to ensure non-interruption or interference with the water lens, we must remember that when someone is conscious of it precautionary measures will be used. But what happens in the days when this is forgotten, and that chemical factory starts to spew chemicals into the soil, uncontrolled, that go down into a water system that is used by the people in that district?

Mr. President, there are many suitable industrial areas in the Island where this type of factory can be put. But I would say that if there is need to change the zone in any part of this Island, the matter must be examined by the Central Planning Authority. A recommendation must be put forward supporting changing of a zone. It must go through Executive Council and the regulation must be presented to this Honourable House for ratification. And so if it is the intention of the Central Planning Authority to finally recommend the siting of that chemical factory over the water lens, then the zoning will have to be changed, and the legislative process will have to be followed.

Mr. President, housing was also mentioned by one of the twins! (LAUGHTER)

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Robin Hood!

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

And I would just say, Mr. President, that the intention of the Housing Development Corporation Law was to assist people in need - those who had little or no chance of attaining a mortgage from the commercial banks, but who had sufficient collateral to satisfy the Housing Corporation. They would be people whose income was of a certain level.

When this Government took office we first had to raise some money, because there was no mortgage money available. Secondly, our management gave some problem. The manager who was there resigned. The next manager we appointed died and so we have just been able to fill that post.

Now, Mr. President, since we have been able to raise the money and to recruit a manager, we must next go on to look at the guidelines and to see really whether there is a broader group of people who could be assisted by the Corporation. What we have been doing over the past is to loan people money which has been giving the Corporation some problem in collecting the loans. This is what we expect anyhow from that group of individuals. But it seems to me, Mr. President, that it is not only the poor people who become bad paymasters from time to time. One finds it even through those who can afford to pay their loans. Anyhow, loaning money to the poor is not an easy job, but it has its rewards in time ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:
right?

So what I said made sense,

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Yes.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:
my suggestion and revamp the guidelines?

And Government is going to take

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Well, we are going to look at them. I did not say we were going to revamp the guidelines. We are going to look at them. That is a different thing. There is a statutory Board which deals with these matters. And again, I cannot presuppose the decision of the Board.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Government sets the policy.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, I could go on to comment on all the departments of the Portfolio which are doing very valuable work, but I know that all the Members here, too, could comment on their departments. I have found my departments very energetic and professional in all things that they attempt to do. They have achieved quite a lot during the time that I have been here, and we hope to continue achieving more as time goes on.

The Mosquito and Research Laboratory is one of the vital departments of this Government. If we were to take time to cast our memories back to the days before the laboratory was established, we will find that the work of the laboratory has been the main source by which development crept into these Islands - development of the tourist industry and the development of the offshore financial industry. It is from these two industries that all other activities flow.

I remember the days before the laboratory was established. Tourists used to come here in the afternoon and by next morning they were off. They could not take another night of it. So without the control of mosquitoes and sandflies, this Island could never have developed to this extent. One needs only to reduce activity in that department for a short time for mosquitoes to be back in full force. Mr. President, Cayman is not the only place where you will find mosquitoes. I have been to New York and other big cities and have found a lot of mosquito nuisance there. And so we must at all times respect the work of that Unit, and never underestimate its value.

When a little money is asked for any improvement within that Unit, it is a well thought of project or proposal because the Unit is aware that legislators have always been cautious and suspicious of its spending. So, Mr. President, I have nothing but praise for the work that has been done from time to time, and I hope that we do not lose sight of the need for that job to continue at its high level in order to preserve our tourist industry and other things.

Mr. President, the other department that I would like to mention is Planning. This is also offering a very valuable service. In the days before that department was established, the days before cadastral survey took place and land registration started, there was a lot of concern by many politicians and others of the advent of land survey and registration. I think if the advantages of what has happened, with the lands of these Islands by way of recording and registration, is looked on carefully against that which was obtained in the days prior to that exercise, we will see that the people of these Islands have profited a great deal by the simple system that exists today. In days gone by, for one to transfer a piece of land, one had to employ an attorney who would take a long time to research the records and give a legal opinion on the title - and this would cost a lot of money. Today it is not necessary Mr. President, because the owner of a parcel of land can go to the Registrar of Lands for a research and instantaneously the legal position of the property can be had. The individual can stand there and ask for a transfer form and sell his parcel of land right away having to employ an attorney to do so. And so what ever else might have been said about land registration and the cadastral survey before that, it is today a system that we can all be proud of. People from other territories come here to look at our registry and learn about it, so they, too, can move on to institute something of the sort. I, too, Mr. President, have a great amount of praise for the work that is being done there.

Mr. President, I am now coming to the omega of my contribution to the debate on the Throne Speech. I will not end it as abruptly as a rabbit's tail. As far as the Throne Speech is concerned I have nothing but praise. It is to me the right format for a Throne speech. In times past we found Throne Speeches including financial and economic matters as well. But Mr. President, in the days before the Financial Secretary first presented the Budget Address, it fell the duty of the Governor or President of this House to present the Budget Address as well, which formed part of his Throne Speech. And so over that period of time, the Budget Address and Throne Speech became one and the same address. When the Budget Address was separated and done by the Financial Secretary - and the first of these was in February 1969 - when the Throne Speech began to be reduced to the extent to which it was given before. So we have come to a Budget Address of today which presents the format of what, in my opinion, a Throne Speech should be. I dare say Mr. President that although this will be your last Throne Speech, it sets a model for others to come.

Mr. President, there will be another occasion for tribute to be paid to you before you leave, so I will not attempt to say anything about that just now. But I certainly will not miss my opportunity to join others in doing so. Mr. President, I do not want to take up too much more time because there are other speakers. So I will say again, Sir, thank you for your gracious Throne Speech and for putting forward the state of the Nation in a very concise form.

Thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The First Elected member for the Lesser Islands.

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, I would like to thank His Excellency the Governor for his gracious Throne Speech, so ably delivered to this Honourable House on the 6th February this year. It was concise and to the point. It was in line with my idea of a speech - as short as possible but covering the subjects that need to be covered.

Mr. President, before going on to the debate on your Throne Speech, I would like to make a few remarks. I would like to welcome the Honourable Second Official Member and the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly to this Honourable House. I look forward to their help in the years to come, and I wish for them all that is good in their term of office here.

Also, Mr. President, on the first page of the Caymanian Compass this morning appeared an article that could be misunderstood. During the debate on Thursday afternoon there was a motion to suspend Standing Orders to enable the business to go on after 4:30 p.m. Having no idea that this would take place, I was unable to postpone a previous appointment that I had made for 4:45 p.m. and so I voted no to the suspension of Standing Orders. There was no collusion on my part whatsoever. It was a matter of meeting another obligation that I had, and that was the reason why I left the House. I think in my debate I made my position very clear on my feeling about it. I spoke from my heart and although I might have been accused of not being in line with it, I still got my point across. Thank you Mr. President.

It is alarming to note that drug related crime continues to increase, even though efforts on the part of the Police Department have been made to strengthen and increase their detection. I am very proud of the progress that our Police Department has made, the training that they are being given and to see that many promotions have been made in recent months - many of which are Caymanian, and I hope that they will continue with the overseas training. I regret that we have still been unable to get our Police Force up to the allotted number. I think it is very essential that we have a full compliment of police officers in order for us to get on with the job.

The Drugs Squad, I am sure, is over worked. This is regrettable, but I guess this is the era in which we live. We are geographically located in a trans-shipment area leading into the United States' and North American continent. So we will continue in this location, and our problems will be compounded. However, if the continued detection rate increases and it can be eliminated here on our Island, we will have accomplished much.

Mr. President I am very encouraged to see that the number of fatalities on our roads were reduced during the year just ended, and I am happy that we are making efforts to reduce the hazards on our roads. Again, I compliment the Police Force on their vigilance in trying to control speeders and those driving under the influence, for we must make Cayman a safer place.

It is alarming that our prison population continues to grow. This is of great concern to me, particularly to see that the population is of such a young age and that so many offences are drug related crimes. It is incumbent upon us to make every effort to establish rehabilitation and crime prevention programmes in this Island and I feel that we must address this issue at the earliest possible time. I do not believe that incarcerating a young person really solves the problem. It only delays it and sometimes compounds their problem. I feel that if we have a place where they can be shown that what they have done in the past is wrong where we can change their attitudes, they will come out, join society and be good citizens. We have smart young men and women who go wrong. Maybe just through fate. Maybe because they took a step they did not really mean to take. But it is too late once they have taken it, and I feel, as I have said, that we should have a rehabilitation and crime prevention programmes that will solve the problem.

The construction of additional buildings at Northward is a necessity, I realise, and I support the expansion of the prison, but I hope that it will not be a matter of additional cell facilities and not rehabilitation and crime prevention centres outside the prison to solve the problems which I have spoken of.

Mr. President, our Immigration Department has a great task ahead of them as we prepare for the additional new hotel rooms and the increase in tourist traffic. We realise that they have a great problem and we support them one hundred per cent, but they must address the over-stayer problem. With the aid of the computer I think this can be better controlled, and I would ask them all to realise that they are ambassadors and should be friendly and courteous to our tourists because tourism is one of the main pillars of our community. Without tourism we could not live the lifestyles in which we live in the Cayman Islands. Finance and tourism are two of the big things that we depend on to support our economy, and we should all be courteous, and realise that there are many other territories in the Caribbean and all around the world that are looking for these same tourists and trying to attract them. The very first person a tourist meets after leaving the aircraft is the Immigration Officer. I am very grateful to those who are courteous and pleasant to the arriving passenger, but I would ask them all to give a little extra smile to make the tourist feel at home.

The Caymanian Protection Law and the Caymanian Protection Board are both very important to the smooth operation of our country. The Board I think has done a good job. I compliment all the Members and its Chairman. I realise that there are amendments necessary to the Caymanian Protection Law and they will be dealt with in meetings to be held later on this year. But, until that time we have to address the problem of our own Caymanian people. Our own Caymanian people must be given every opportunity to advance, but at the same time must realise that it is not just because he is Caymanian that he is entitled to be paid and not work. It must work both ways.

Mr. President I think those of us who reside in the Lesser Islands have a greater appreciation for Radio Cayman than those who reside here in Grand Cayman, for it is our means of really keeping in touch with what is happening with our Central Government and the activities here on Grand Cayman. It is encouraging to note that the FM service will be extended to Cayman Brac sometime during this year and I look forward to it. I would like to recommend at this time that when the FM service is strong enough it be heard in Cayman Brac, and that maybe the Legislative Assembly broadcast could be put on FM as opposed to AM. It would not make the broadcast go quite so far away, for some of the broadcasting I think would be better kept at home.

The Government Information Service, I think, is doing a good job. It keeps us all informed of what is happening with our Government. The dissemination of news is good. They also handle matters of tourism locally and I congratulate them on the domestic coverage which is being made.

We note, with the increase in criminal cases, the Attorney General's Chambers are having a heavy workload. But I am glad to know that young Caymanians are coming up. Some being trained overseas will soon be returning. Others are now here, and I congratulate those who have qualified themselves and those who have taken the advantage and who will come back. It is my hope that most of these will see fit to stay with our Legal Department and help build our Legal Department with some of our Caymanian lawyers. I also would like to compliment all who had a part in the establishment of the Law School. It is good to know that in the coming year the first graduating class will qualify. I am also very encouraged to note that they will not only get a certificate from the Cayman Islands Law School, but will receive an external Bachelors' Degree issued by the University of Liverpool. This I am very glad of because for a while I was concerned whether lawyers graduating from our Law School could only be lawyers in the Cayman Islands. But I am glad to know that they will have an external degree which will make them comparable I would not guess, to lawyers who qualify anywhere else.

Mr. President, I turn now to the draft Economic Development Plan. I think this is a good plan. It is not perfect, but it is a step in the right direction. I think this is forward planning - something we have lacked over the years. I look forward to dealing with it in Finance Committee. I say now, there are some amendments or changes that I feel will be necessary, but it is a step in the right direction and it will enable priorities to be properly established without rushing into projects not really knowing what they are going to cost and the benefits that can be derived from them.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member now to take the break ...

If it is convenient to the

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

AT 12:44 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:13 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Resumption of debate on the Throne Speech. The First Elected member for the Lesser Islands.

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, when we took the lunch break I had completed speaking on the Five-Year Economic Development Plan.

I will turn now to the Motor Vehicle Insurance (Third Party Risks) Law. It is my understanding that an amendment will be coming to this Honourable House sometime this year. It is my hope that the act coverage will be dropped completely for, as I see it, it really does not offer any coverage other than satisfying the requirements of the Law as it is written now. But as far as giving the motor owner or the pedestrian coverage, it does not. So it is my hope that it will be dropped from the Law by this amendment.

Ship Registration. It is my belief Mr. President that once our ship registration is put in proper order it can be a good revenue earner for this country. I note the amendment which is coming to this House. It is a band aid really in a sense. I look forward to further legislation that will make us a full ship registration, enabling us to register ships of all sizes and afford us a good source of revenue. I personally have been contacted by many large shipping companies and have turned them over to the Registrar of Companies who has in turn been in contact with them, but for certain reasons, sometimes, they are unable to accept the ships. So it is my hope if this Law is put into place in accordance with the requirements of the large shipping companies, our revenue will increase dramatically.

I note that in your Throne Speech a National Health Plan will be considered. I have no prior knowledge or view of what this will consist of. I think there is a need for it, but it will have to be approached with caution and I look forward to seeing and hearing more about that as the months go by.

The Mental Health Programme and also the Drug Abuse Programme is going to be strengthened, and, as I said earlier, it is an area that we certainly need to give serious attention to. Many of our people have problems, and if they go undetected there will be greater problems in society in the years to come. So I look forward to us being able to increase our personnel who will be properly trained and equipped to deal with these unfortunate people, and that we will be able to improve their position in society.

I note that we are considering a new hospital. It is my hope that this will be a complete new complex. Much of consideration will be given to the proper siting of this institution and its design, and that it will meet the needs of these Islands for many, many years. The Hospital was designed for a much smaller community than we now have, and it was not envisaged that we would have the facilities that we have on the site that exist today. Therefore it has been a sort of a patchwork affair. It is my hope that we will have a multi-storey hospital, something that we can be proud of, something that will afford medical treatment for many, many years to come, and one that will eliminate the necessity for so much treatment of our people overseas. I think if we spend the money in establishing the proper hospital facilities on the Island, we will eliminate the annual expense of sending them overseas.

I note with interest the progress made by the Education Department and the progress being made in constructing and expanding at the various schools here in Grand Cayman. I regret again, that due to the decreasing population in Cayman Brac there is no need to expand our schools. Our population in the Primary Schools and the High School are both decreasing. I spoke about this in November and I have to speak about it again. It is a serious problem, and we must address it. I note additional training will be provided for teachers in the area of drug education and the teaching of inter-personal skills, the Quest programme will be introduced into the Middle School curriculum for the first time. This

I am very happy to see, and I think it is a step in the right direction.

I also note that from visiting the Sports Complex and also from your Throne Speech, Mr. President, it is becoming a very nice complex. I am proud at last that the Cayman Islands can truly say that we have a Sports Complex. I look forward to seeing it in a completed state as time goes by. I hope it will attract international competition to our shores that will provide greater recognition for our talented young boys and girls who are excelling both at home and overseas. If they have the proper training facilities here in Grand Cayman, the sky is the limit as to what they can achieve.

I am also glad that there is now a home for the National Museum in Grand Cayman. Like the National Museum in Cayman Brac, it will be preserving an old building which is a museum piece within itself. The old Courts Building on the waterfront will be the home of the National Museum and I am glad that that old building will be preserved. I would like to compliment the Department of Agriculture on the progress they are making. I note with interest that the agronomist is now here in Grand Cayman. I look forward to his assistance to our small farmers in Cayman Brac. We have limited capacity for farming there but I think that with more modern technology we will be able to improve in that field as well. So I look forward to him helping our farmers there after the job is well underway in Grand Cayman.

Mr. President I could not stand in this Honourable House and not pay tribute to the Mosquito Research and Control Unit. As one of the older Members here, I fully remember, the days before the Unit was established, what we suffered and I am glad it continues to make progress - not only in Grand Cayman, but in the three Islands. Little Cayman is now benefiting substantially from the spraying and it is a far more pleasant place to visit and to live. The Unit deserves much credit for the development of the Cayman Islands.

The West Bay sewerage scheme. Never before has a project been undertaken in these Islands more necessary than the sewerage scheme. I am glad to see that progress is being made so rapidly, and I generally look forward to, not only, phase 1 but also the implementation of the because it is necessary for the health and welfare of the people of Grand Cayman.

The George Town piped water supply will also make good potable water available, not only to the affluent members of our society, but, to the less fortunate people. This Government is to be complimented. In putting in this piped water scheme it is thinking of providing for all classes. Everyone will have an opportunity to have healthy, good drinking water.

You also mentioned in your Throne Speech, Mr. President that the water resource development will be further studied in Cayman Brac. I regret that the wells drilled so far have not been more successful. In my honest opinion if we are to have water in Cayman Brac we need to look to desalinisation, and I should like, today, to recommend to the Honourable Member responsible for that Portfolio to commence negotiations with the Cayman Brac Power and Light Company - similar to that which has been done with Caribbean Utilities - to see if there is sufficient waste heat. I have been told by people who know that it is possible to produce sufficient water for the needs of Cayman Brac from the waste heat of the Cayman Brac Power and Light Company. A similar programme should be started in Cayman Brac because there today, other than the two reverse osmosis plants at the hotels, in a dry season there is just no water available for love or money. Human health cannot be maintained unless good water is provided.

I turn now to the Development Plan Review. The Development Plan as we all know was due for reviewing a few years ago. It was not completed, but it is well underway now for Grand Cayman. Cayman Brac and Little Cayman were included only in the guidelines in the 1977 Development Plan. However the people have elected that separate Development Plans with an emphasis on economic development be provided, one for Cayman Brac and one for Little Cayman. I am happy to say that this is well underway. The Planning Department with the help of the team from the University of Tennessee and the BESO Advisor have done much work on this. Much very useful information has been compiled. District committees have been established and I think when this is completed, the Development Plan for the two smaller Islands will help investors know what exactly will be available and will help to encourage investors to come to these two smaller Islands.

I also support the Building Code which we now have in our possession. It is a good document. It is long overdue. If we are to have buildings constructed properly and to the proper standard we must have a code to go by. I look forward to its implementation.

I am also glad that the Planning Department will be expanded and strengthened as it is a very important department. It has been understaffed for many years and we cannot expect them to do all that they are asked to do if they are not properly staffed. With the Building Code complement added to the department, I think it will be far more efficient.

Another move that I think is in the right direction is the creation of the Civil Aviation Authority. If this is as successful as the Port Authority has been, it will be a great step forward. I compliment the Civil Aviation Authority today. It is a department headed by a young Caymanian, and it is very efficiently operated. I look forward to good things from that department.

Another department due for a lot of praise is the Fire Department, which is also headed by a young Caymanian who is very dedicated to his profession. His job is not an easy one. I have the privilege of serving on the Central Planning Authority with him, and without going into the technical aspects of his job, one cannot realise how complicated and complex his responsibility is. He determines all the safety requirements of buildings and everything that goes along with it to make them safe. He is a hard-working man and has the Cayman Islands at heart. He has served faithfully in support of the Development Control Board of the Lesser Islands. Whenever we have a problem he is right there to help us solve it.

I am happy that new Fire Stations will be constructed at Gerrard Smith Airport, Owen Roberts Airport and in West Bay during the coming year. Some people may think that the only service of the Fire Department is to put fires out, but the big job is in fire prevention.

Cayman Airways our national flag carrier has always been a subject compliments and criticism in this Honourable House. But I say today that it is the responsibility of every Caymanian to support and to be loyal to Cayman Airways. Cayman Airways has challenges today that it did not have during the last tourist season, and it will probably have greater challenges in the next tourist season. We should all support Cayman Airways and be proud that a territory as small as ours is able to have a national airline. It is an expensive thing I know, but nevertheless we could not, particularly in the smaller Islands even live the life standards we do today without Cayman Airways.

On behalf of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman I would like to thank Cayman Airways, our Government and everybody who has seen fit to introduce the Shorts 330 aircraft to replace the Trilander. She served us faithfully for many years, but it was too small a capacity and simply could not cope with the trade. With the Shorts 3-30 - once all the bugs are ironed out and the schedule is properly organised - Little Cayman and Cayman Brac will have a good air service. I would like to make it crystal clear today that we are not prepared to accept this as our only service. We expect the jet service to Cayman Brac to be maintained. This is a domestic service connecting Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac and supplements the jet service. We do not accept this as a replacement for jet-air service to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Honourable Member is certainly giving me, as he has done on many occasions, his co-operation to study very carefully the scheduling of flights in and out of Cayman Brac in order to move the traffic as efficiently as possible and to encourage tourism in every way possible. I am grateful to him for his co-operation in the past, and I know I will have it in the future.

The Housing Development Corporation was established to benefit less fortunate people - people with a low income. It is unfortunate that more funds have not been available and that as much red tape, as has been in the past, has been involved. It is my hope that we can make larger sums of money available and streamline the process of applications. There are many young Caymanians who need a home, they deserve a home, but they cannot qualify with the banks and trust companies to borrow money here with present requirements. If our Government is in a position to help the other people that genuinely need help, I look forward to seeing this implemented.

I go now, Mr. President, to my constituency, that of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I stated in my debate on the Budget in November that 1986 had been a very bad year economically for the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Some people thought that I just wanted to talk, I believe, but I was being very honest. I say today, Mr. President, that there has been no improvement during the first months of this year. The only construction going on in Cayman Brac today is a small expansion to the Tiara Beach Hotel.

There are plans I am told, if the air scheduling is satisfactory to the Board of Directors of the Divi Divi Hotel Corporation to carry out a major expansion to their hotel. That would be very beneficial as far as providing labour and also to improve and expand our tourist industry in Cayman Brac.

We are now told that funds will shortly be available from the EEC, which is very encouraging. Presently work is going on on the site for the new Gerrard Smith Airport Terminal, but unless we get funds from the Caribbean Development Bank to construct the Terminal, 1987, I am afraid, is going to end on a sad note for Cayman Brac. So I ask the Honourable First Official Member and all Honourable Members of the Executive Council to make every effort to get these funds in place.

I am very grateful to my colleague the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac, the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council, for his keen interest and close co-operation with me in trying to solve this problem. It is a big problem. It is not easily solved. I know it cannot be done overnight, but I am very grateful to him and his Elected colleagues in Executive Council for all that he has outlined in his debate. I feel they are moving in the right direction, and I would like to say to him, on behalf of the people of Cayman Brac, that we are all most grateful for all his efforts and those of his colleagues. It is important that the private sector becomes alive. If we can get investors to take the burden off Government, Government can then look in other directions. I realise, that as my colleague has said, the infrastructure is almost complete. But Mr. President where do we go if we do not get the private investors into Cayman Brac? That is why we must do everything possible at this time.

It was encouraging to note that a small sailing cruise ship visited Little Cayman and I hope this may be an area in which we can attract a little more activity in both Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. What we really need is exposure. It is my belief that we will develop as more a residential area than as a real vacation holiday site like Grand Cayman. If we can get retirees and residents, who live there say six months out of the year, to build expensive homes, I think it will begin to solve our problem. With the cruise ships calling it will help to generate revenue for the taxi drivers, the store keepers and it will also create some employment.

Mr. President, I again ask all Honourable Members for their support. I realise that large sums of money have been spent since I was elected to this Honourable House in 1980. Each year we have gotten large sums of capital improvements in addition to the recurrent expenses in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I am not complaining, but I am just saying that so far we do not have the private sector going, and that is the thing we need to motivate and get moving.

I move now, Mr. President, to the Port Authority. The Port Authority is a credit to the Cayman Islands. The facilities in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac are both good, well equipped facilities. We are sorry because of our depressed situation that the Cayman Brac Port Authority is a financial burden on Grand Cayman. But, nevertheless, we hope it will turn around if everything else in Cayman Brac moves as we hope. However the Port Authority is a great asset to Grand Cayman. I traded here for many years when we only had the rocks to tie up to, and I can easily be one of the few here in this House who can appreciate the amount of improvement made to port facility in Grand Cayman.

Another very important subject you touched on in your Throne Speech, Mr. President, was the Master Ground Transportation Study. This is very essential. I realise it will to be very expensive, but much consideration at an early date must be given, particularly to the over-crowding of the road from George Town to West Bay and the tributaries leading off it. It is a serious problem and it must be addressed. I really look forward to an early report from the the companies producing the survey and I hope that as soon as it is at hand, financing can be available to improve the position.

The Postal Department. The Postal Department is also a very important department, and I support the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council in what he said today when he spoke of the need for a new Post Office and multi-storey car park in George Town. Although I do not live in George Town, I spend a lot of time here, and I see the need for it. I saw a design here some months ago, and I think it is very essential that we move towards implementing this. It would provide and amortise itself over a few years. We would have to finance it in the beginning, but it would be self supporting. It would not be like a road - something that we would have to maintain - and which would not amortise itself. It would be an investment.

Mr. President, there is much more I could say on the Address, but other Members have covered the other points. I have taken what I believe to be the most important.

I realise, Sir, that this is the last Throne Speech that you will be delivering to us. We shall miss you, and do appreciate having had you with us over these number of years. As the time comes in the next session we hope that we will be able to pay the respect that is due to you. In my closing remarks I wish to publicly state how much I appreciate the keen interest which you have taken in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman during your term of office. You are beloved by all the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and you will be greatly missed by them. We look forward to your visits and we would ask you to visit us as frequently as possible prior to your departure.

Before closing, however, I would like to make one last plea to Honourable Members to not believe that I am simply trying to get money for Cayman Brac for nothing. I am trying to equip Cayman Brac so it can support itself and not be a burden on Government. We would like to be self-sufficient. That is the idea behind what I am trying to do. I am sure my colleague joins me in this. We are not asking for hand-outs. We are trying to equip ourselves to be self-sufficient.

Thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, I offer my sincere congratulations to His Excellency the Governor on his Throne speech so ably delivered to this Honourable House on Friday, 6th February. As has been said by other speakers before me, the message was abundantly clear, to the point, well balanced in content and it reminded me of just how much can be said in a short space of time.

Like other Members, I too offer my congratulations to the Honourable Second Official Member, the Attorney General, and to our new Clerk on their recent appointments.

Government's plans for the year 1987 were ably outlined. While we were reminded of our many material blessings through the continuation of economic development and growth, what was also forcibly brought home to me was the price being paid for this progress we all enjoy, and sometimes boast about.

The immediate need to address the attending evils in our society of a growing crime rate, drug and alcohol related offences and even traffic congestion on our roadways were clearly and specifically called to our attention. So let us be perfectly frank and realistic about it. With 10,709 motor vehicles in our country and increasing monthly, with 437,000 visitors annually and still growing, a population growth of six percent in recent years, what can we expect, but to bluntly accept the facts of our case. That is, since we must continue on the path which we have chosen of economic development needed to support our high lifestyles, then we must certainly find a way to cope, to adjust and continuously search for solutions to the many accompanying problems in our society today. These are all facts that cannot be denied, and I accept fully that it is up to us - it is left to Caymanians to decide just where we want our country to go, and how we plan to get there.

It is of course true that so far crime in Cayman has not reached the proportions that it has in many countries. We are still free from terrorism, political tyranny and oppression, but we must recognise crime for the cancer to society that it is. Government, together with the entire population of these Islands, must make a determined effort to meet the challenge of curbing the unsightly trends in our country before they finally undermine our tourism and financial industries, destroy our way of life and shatter investors' confidence as has happened elsewhere.

Fighting crime is everybody's business. Sure, we have the Police and we can increase their numbers and build bigger buildings at Northward. But as has already been said, these are not the answers. Rehabilitation programmes are making some progress in helping prisoners find their way back to becoming useful citizens. These have my continuing support. Regardless of what is said, Police efforts to detect and curb crime are in full force, but our community as a whole can help them do a better job.

Police and Prison Services are costing our country an increasingly tremendous amount of money. We are all concerned about the increasing crime rate and we are all ready to offer solutions. But solutions do not come easy and there is no magic formula. We all have a role to play in upholding law and order, to prevent our country's future being placed in serious jeopardy. As a country we must face the hard fact that we do have a serious growing drug and alcohol problem, and that the majority of our serious crimes are drug related.

We are today seeing the great United States of America almost battling under the serious scourge of society. They are spending millions of dollars, millions of man-hours passing laws, imposing the death sentence for drug trafficking, enlisting the help and co-operation of foreign countries such as ourselves, and yes, even appealing for the help of the boy scouts. We all know this. Caymanians are well informed. Television and radio keep us all up to date.

I recently read in the local press where our Magistrate in addressing a group said that it is time to declare war on drugs. I know that a start has been made, but it is also a fact that more needs to be done. I want to echo the Magistrate's words today and launch a desperate appeal to the entire population of the Cayman Islands to help us wipe out this problem - to help us save our country from both drug and alcohol addiction.

I know that it has been said that this Government has supported amendments to the Liquor Law. But Mr. President, prohibition does not work. It takes education. I also appeal to our young people who have more golden opportunities today to become someone than ever in the history of the Cayman Islands, to the Service Clubs which have already made a start; to our homes; our schools; Churches and all institutions - and yes, even we too can enlist the help of our Boy Cubs. We can call it a sermon if you may, but the Cayman Islands must get back to basics. In trying to hold on to our prosperity we must surely find a way to preserve the qualities which created that prosperity in the first place. It is not easy, but essential, and certainly it is worth reminding ourselves of this fact at every possible opportunity.

Radio Cayman is doing its part. Their community service messages against drunken driving, drug and alcohol abuse, against littering and also their tourism slogans, and messages encouraging our people to spend a smile on the tourists are all very much appreciated by residents and visitors alike, and are not going unnoticed. I would like to take this opportunity to thank Radio Cayman and to say that I would like to see these programmes continue and expand, because I do believe that the messages are getting across. But of course, like everything else, it all takes time, co-operation and money.

Last year's favourable financial results which enabled $2.0 million to be transferred to General Reserve, and projections for a promising and progressive 1987 clearly establish the good state of the economy, and the growing strong expression of investors' confidence in our country and its future.

Regardless of the critics' cries and doomsday prophecies, this enviable position has been accomplished through Government's sound financial policies and its determination to hold on to what it has, as well as to continue to attract new business of high quality, banks of quality, quality insurance companies and investors of repute and respect.

It is obvious that, in spite of the critics' claims of disaster and swift downfalls through the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, the Treaty has served to polish to a high degree the image of the Cayman Islands so that its good name is resounding in financial circles around the world and attracting the high quality business we are receiving today, and so rightfully deserve. Once we continue to keep our image clean on the international scene, maintain a high profile in our main markets, then there is no doubt that the two pillars of our economy, tourism and finance will continue to bring new and good business to our shores. This, Mr. President, must therefore strengthen our resolve and kindle our determination to control and remove anything that tends to threaten our stability. This too is why it is so vitally important who is placed in positions of power, and to whom we entrust the future of these Cayman Islands.

Mr. President, there can be no doubt that proper planning produces good results. We have evidence of this and it is my view that the Economic Development Plan which the Elected Member for North Side pushed for, will prove to be a worthwhile document in this regard. Advanced plans for capital expenditure will, as stated, greatly assist with Budget preparation. It establishes a clear sense of direction down-line in this very important area. The background information is well researched and written, and I consider this section, as well, to be of significant historical value. The Financial Secretary and his Department co-ordinated work on this Plan, and he along with the Honourable Members in Council spent many hours with the BESO Advisor on this project, and I believe that in due course those efforts will pay off.

I am pleased to see the progress that the Portfolio for Health, Education and Social Services is making with the Community College, and especially, Sir, the Hotel Training School in which I have a keen interest. The enrolment this year is 57, compared with a much smaller number over a year ago. This indicates that more interest is being generated for our young people to train and fill their respective places in the hospitality industry.

The training currently being provided will prepare them to eventually gain a recognised qualification in a wider variety of positions in hotel operations. I have been very encouraged to see these improvements; and the response and support from some hotels has been outstanding, which I would like to see continue. Training our people and equipping them to do a better job is a sound investment for the future of tourism. It will improve the quality of service we provide our visitors.

Marine Parks. This Government has had to table some not so popular legislation, and the Law to establish Marine Parks was one classified as such. But I am still convinced it is one that was absolutely necessary to the well-being of the tourist industry, and therefore to the country as a whole. I believe sincerely Sir, that one day our people will reap the benefits and agree that this was timely. Mr. Ladner Watler the Enforcement Officer is doing a good job and he needs the public's full support and co-operation. I want to assure him that he has my full blessing and support. I have no doubt, Sir, lost a few votes and perhaps a few friends for my stand on this, but I, to be quite frank, would prefer to loose a few votes, just a few votes, rather than for the country to loose its main tourist attractions.

The Mosquito Research and Control Unit. I have said many times before during the six years in this House, and I repeat it here and now - this is the best investment any Government has ever made. I say to the faithful in this department, keep up the good work, for we all know that mosquitoes out of control have the power to close down hotels and make life a misery for all of us, and I respect the mosquito's power.

The West Bay Road Sewerage System and the George Town piped water supply are both projects that are long overdue. They are not luxuries that we can afford to do without, but absolutely essential to public health improvement and to adequately meet the needs of an ever increasing population growth and tourist trade. There is no doubt that the completion of these projects will be very much appreciated by the general public and I look forward, Sir, to the time when water and sewerage systems can be extended throughout our Islands. As the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council reminded this House this morning, the George Town people are anxiously waiting to receive piped water, and we trust that this project will be completed on time.

Mr. President, I now turn to the subjects in my own Portfolio, to tourism. The increase in tourist air arrivals as well as cruise ship business speaks well for our country as a whole, and I attribute the success to team effort, to the close working relationship and combined energies of Government and the private sector.

An arrangement whereby our Department of Tourism, Cayman Airways and other airlines, our Hotel Association, our water sports operators, charter operators and our ground tour companies are pooling their resources and expertise in bringing a good product to the consumer - backed by high quality advertising, strategically placed.

Our plans for 1987 call for continuing our efforts in that direction. Television and radio advertising in our North American market which supplies 84 percent of our tourists, have worked well so far and our plan is to continue this - strongly supported by good collateral material, magazine and newspaper advertising and public relations activities.

It is true Mr. President that this is costly, but one gets nothing for nothing, and if we are to maintain our enviable position as a preferred tourist destination in the Caribbean, we can do no less than this in order to compete with other Caribbean countries with much larger budgets, and perhaps much more to offer.

This year Cayman's tourism will be facing the greatest challenge in its history. With over 500 new hotel rooms to fill, it will demand the best from all of us in order to produce the desired results and meet the projections of a 35 per cent increase during 1987. The key to the success of this highly competitive business is service. Service, I repeat. People pay hard earned, good money for a holiday in Cayman, and they expect good value in return. Logically, good service can only be provided by well trained productive staff with the right attitude towards serving the public.

Greater efforts will be concentrated this year on training people for our tourism industry with the continuing help from the Hotel Training School and more support from the Cayman Islands Hotel Association. We have received and accepted an offer from an outside organisation for a training programme for a certain sector of our tourism industry. I believe, Sir, that these are all necessary and are bound to be helpful.

Product improvement remains high on our list of priorities this year. The proposed revision of our Tourism Law will be to strengthen and update that piece of legislation. We need more frequent inspection of hotel properties, and a more expeditious and effective system of dealing with properties which do not comply with the prescribed requirements. I agree with those Members who commented that standards must be held high, or it will have a damaging effect on our tourist industry. I am not satisfied Sir that we are able to keep as close a supervision as we should, and I certainly intend to take the steps to improve this during 1987.

I realise, Mr. President, that investors have spent large amounts on building hotels in our country. We encourage them to do so, and expect that they must earn a fair return on their investment. Tourism is our business. It is important to all of us. Our people depend on it for a livelihood. Government is spending large sums of money annually to bring visitors here, and so we must protect this vital industry on which we so heavily rely for economic survival. When we keep our country's image high and maintain our good reputation in the market place, we are likewise protecting our investors' interests as well. It is definitely a two-way street. It should be accepted as such and is worthy of co-operation from both sides.

Mr. President, as has been said, last year was a good year for Cayman's tourism and 1987 is bound to be better, but we must never take our success for granted. The same genuine efforts that built our tourism industry must continue. Our people's attitudes must not change if we expect success to continue.

I cannot help but mention, Mr. President, how the course of politics amazes me sometimes. If tourism was down, which would be most unfortunate for all of us, Government would be criticised, but now that the industry is doing well and the number of arrivals is increasing, an attempt is being made to say that tourists are not spending as much as they used to. Regardless of political propaganda, the facts cannot be challenged or changed, nor the truth denied; and I refer here, Sir, to the comment made that we are attracting peanut butter sandwich tourists. This is not true. One Member said, I think it was the Second Elected Member for West Bay, that the average length of stay has dropped, which indicates that our visitors in the past years are not making the contribution to our economy they once were. According to my information Sir, it would seem that we are holding our own, and slightly better because the average length of stay was as follows.

In 1984 the average length of stay for hotels was 3.8 days. Apartments 6.7 days. This averages out to 5.2. In 1985 the hotels were 4.3 days and average length of stay for apartments was 6.2. Again this averages out 5.2. But it should be noted that the average length stay for hotels in 1985 increased from 3.8 to 4.3.

In 1986 the average length of stay for hotels was 4 days and apartments 7 days which gave us an average of 5.5.

First of all a vacation in Cayman is by no means cheap. You have to have some money to come here in the first place and if people come here it is my view that they are spending.

I believe, Sir, based on the information that I have, that we are still attracting quality and quantity in visitor air arrivals. In the course of this year we will hopefully be able to have our tourism survey completed which will establish more clearly their valuable contribution to the Island's economy.

Mr. President using the same formula as was applied in the past, it is estimated that in 1986 cruise ship visitors spent a total of $10.5 million Cayman Island dollars, or $39 per passenger arrival and that air arrivals contributed $69 million dollars or each tourist spent approximately $415. These are statistics provided to me by the Portfolio from the Department of Tourism.

Mr. President I may also mention here that a good yardstick by which to measure tourism and the image of one's country in the eyes of the tourist is the percentage of repeat visitors. I took these statistics out as a matter of interest.

In 1984 39 per cent of total air arrivals accounted for repeat visitors. In 1985 this percentage was 41 per cent and 1986 it was 41 per cent. This says something about the quality of the Cayman Islands, the services we are rendering and our image in the market place and it beholds all of us who have a genuine interest in this country and its future to endeavour to uphold those standards.

With regard to the ratio of Caymanians to expatriate workers in the hotels, the Member who mentioned this is correct in his information. The average I have is 87 per cent Caymanians and 13 per cent expatriate labour. However, it is commendable, Mr. President, that through the efforts of the Caymanian Protection Board, the Labour Office and the hotels it was not necessary to bring in more workers from overseas for the start-up of the two new hotels. Industrial standards require at least one employee plus to each room which means that over 500 employees have to be found for these two new hotels to operate. The number of new work permits were in fact kept to a bare minimum and a considerable number were conditioned to one year so that suitable Caymanians could be employed as they become available.

Mr. President, the Caymanian Protection Board often comes under severe criticism and just to clarify my knowledge of the workings of this Board - it does not come under my Portfolio - but as the Member responsible for labour, I have need, on occasion, to work with them from time to time and my Labour Officer is also represented on the Board. It is my view that maximum protection is being provided to Caymanians by the Caymanian Protection Board. I believe, like some others, that job protection is in fact practiced by some companies. They do this because they want to hold on to their old staff. Many times they apply schemes that will keep Caymanians out, but many times, too, because this is a small community, those companies are well known - so that all new applications are carefully scrutinised by the Board and a good case must be put up to them. That is the way it should be because, after all, our country must be developed for the benefit of our own people.

Why is it that the controls are in place if not to ensure that Caymanians are given priority and employed first as well as to ensure that companies have effective training programmes in place? This is the role of the Caymanian Protection Board and they are doing a good job which should be appreciated. The very people the Board protects many times seem to complain the most.

I recognise, of course, Mr.

President, that we are dependent upon outside labour for many categories of jobs to be performed in our country, and deserving cases of both local and foreign companies as well as individuals must be favourably considered until there are in fact Caymanians fit, willing and able to fill those positions. It is a fact too, Sir, that we cannot on one hand force the hotels, for example, to improve their service standards and in the same breath deny them sufficient man-power to properly service their establishments. This is why, when we decide to build buildings, we must always bear in mind that those buildings must be staffed and that not all the labour can be found in the Cayman Islands.

There are several new hotel projects in the pipe-line which Government is currently considering and it is my view, Mr. President, that the Cayman Islands will continue to attract tourists in increasingly large numbers to our shores for as long as our country continues to offer political stability, peace and tranquility, quality of service. May I say here, Mr. President, this responsibility rests with the entire population of the Cayman Islands and not just the Portfolio for Tourism, Aviation and Trade.

We need too, Sir, to endeavour to improve and increase our tourist attractions in Cayman and one project that I have in mind, that is being studied at the present time, is to develop a roadside park, an underwater park in the East End of the Island, in an effort to preserve our marine heritage. I believe that this, if followed through - and it will cost money; I am not saying it will be done this year, but the study is underway - and if it proves that we can find the funds to do this development, I believe it will be a step in the right direction.

Mr. President, I now come to Civil Aviation.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would it be a convenient moment to take our break before you turn to a new subject?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Yes Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 3:26 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:46 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated. The continuation of the Debate on the Throne Speech. The Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, when we took the afternoon break, I was getting started on the subject of Civil Aviation.

Generally speaking our Civil Aviation department continues in its usual efficient manner and is geared to cope with handling the increase in projected air traffic at Owen Roberts Airport and Gerrard Smith in Cayman Brac. All ground support services, air traffic control, our Fire Department, Immigration Department, Customs, our taxis and tour services have so far performed tremendously well and deserve commendation for their dedication and high quality of service rendered to the travelling public. Often overlooked and often criticised, this hard working group of Civil Servants and individuals of the public sector are, in the majority, good ambassadors to the many visitors they receive and serve.

As has been mentioned, the long awaited Fire Station for George Town and the sub-station for West Bay will finally become a reality this year. Both of these are overdue and will provide the facilities needed for another hard working and dedicated group of young Caymanians in our Fire Department to continue to provide an even more efficient service to our country.

Now, Mr. President, I come to the national airline, Cayman Airways - the perennial, political football. I dare say that if the day were ever to come when Cayman Airways was taken over by private enterprise, the deliberations in this House could become rather dull.

I am genuinely concerned that due to the comments made by some Members and the line of questioning during this meeting the listening public could easily gain the wrong impression of the national airline. I must say that I find the picture being painted grossly unfair, politically biased and potentially dangerous. It can cause irreparable damage to the credibility of the airline in the eyes of the travelling public - especially at a critical time in this development when it needs all the support that it can get.

Regardless of where we stand and how we view Cayman Airways, if politics are allowed to destroy it then it will not be around to employ neither Caymanian nor expatriate. The airline is still financially weak. It still needs Government's financial support to survive.

Mr. President, no one is claiming perfection. It never was, it is not now, and probably will not be in the future, but the fact remains that great strides have been made over the past couple of years in the areas of organisation and administration. Financial statements are presented to this Honourable House on a timely basis. The external auditors have written letters complimenting the staff of Cayman Airways and have been pleased with the progress which has been made in the area of accounting. All efforts are continuing to stabilise the company. Negotiations on the Miami-Cayman route moratorium were most successful.

I would like to record my appreciation and thanks to the Department of Transport in the United Kingdom, to our Legal Counsel in Washington D.C. and the Chairman of Cayman Airways, who, along with myself, spent many long hours in preparing and presenting our case both to Washington and London. By giving up three months on the moratorium, the airline received route-rights to three new points in the United States of America. These will be selected shortly and services inaugurated in the course of this year, thereby allowing the airline to grow and expand and to provide more opportunities for Caymanians.

As is well known the airline has been operating to Miami since 1972 and to Houston, Texas, since 1978 and it had no other chance to gain any new route-rights to the United States - a country that provided 84 per cent of our tourists.

It was obvious Mr. President, that the moratorium would expire and not be renewed. We had already received one extension. It was obvious that competition from Eastern and other U.S. carriers would eventually have come in any event. So I feel Mr. President, that without blowing our own horn, that was a tremendous bargain.

A Shorts 3-30, 30 passenger aircraft has recently been put into operation on the inter-Island service, which in my view is the most suitable aircraft since the DC-3 was removed.

I would like, Mr. President, to explain the situation regarding air fares which was mentioned by the Second Elected Member for George Town. Back in December, Eastern Airlines announced that they would be introducing, for 30 days, an introductory fare of $98, which in our view would have taken existing traffic from the airlines currently operating, rather than to generate new business. Government did not approve this fare because they were below cost fares on which even Eastern Airlines would have lost money, and it was only for a specific period of time - 30 days only.

At Cayman Airways every effort is made to give the travelling public the benefit of attractively priced air fares. There are about 10 different fares between here and Miami, but a matter of economics always come into play and I can safely say that this matter will be kept under constant review by the airline.

The localisation of flight crew and in other departments of Cayman Airways is important to me as well as to the Board of Directors and to all Caymanians. It is the Company's policy to accomplish this as and when suitable Caymanians become available. It is mischievous for the crew, or anyone else to attempt to make the public believe otherwise. This is our goal. This is our intention and this is the way it should be.

I should also like to reply to the point made by the Second Elected Member for George Town regarding the airline's seniority list and a mention of a promise made to some expatriate senior flight crew members who hold Caymanian status, which would enable them to remain on the Company's seniority list. He has asked for confirmation from me, and I wish to state here publicly that it is well known that the Executive Council holds no authority to grant status to anyone. At no time has any Cayman Airways crew member been promised status by this Government so that they could remain on the airline's seniority list. This is far from the truth. It has never taken place.

The fact that there are two long serving non-Caymanians on the Company's seniority list will not prevent Caymanians from moving up and filling their rightful place with the airline. In recent years we have had Captain Swayby, Captain Kel Thompson, Captain Rex Miller who have all qualified as Captains and are flying now in the left-hand seat doing a good job for the Company. They were not held back. No attempt whatsoever is made to keep Caymanians from the opportunities available to them. But the airline as all other airlines and our Civil Aviation Department, have certain standards which must be met and complied with. It must be noted that we already have in place 18 Caymanian flight crew members holding their positions and contributing to the airline. I attribute, Sir, the airline's good reputation and impeccable safety record to the expertise and professionalism of the Cayman Airways's flight crew.

I would like to explain two points that were raised by the Member from North Side. One was regarding simulator training in Dallas by Braniff. My information is that Braniff's simulator was selected because it is identical to Cayman Airways' 727 and that the cost of training is considered to be competitive.

Regarding the application of double standards which was raised, this is denied. I would like to explain that the report which I have received is that the two Flight Engineers referred to were fully qualified. They met all requirements and it was just that through an administrative oversight the paperwork had not been filed with the FAA as was required. This is the report that I have received on this query which was raised by the Member from North Side.

Mr. President, in closing my comments on Cayman Airways, I would like to reiterate that no attempt is being made to conceal any necessary information on the airline's operation. I recognise that Members must have information, especially when they are asked to support requests for financial assistance. The financial statements and operating reports are tabled on a timely basis and should help Members in this regard. In addition, Mr. President, I would like to say that I am prepared to hold a quarterly meeting to which all members of this Honourable House will be invited, so that they can be properly briefed on developments in the airline. I must repeat, however, that there is certain information on the airline which is sensitive and can be confidential in nature. Government, as the sole shareholder, appoints the Chairman and Board of Directors. A Managing Director is employed by the Company and together they are responsible for the management of the it. As the Member, I am responsible for policy. This is the way I see it and this is the accepted business practice as well as the practice of this House and the House of Commons. Mr. President, with due respect, the business of the airline, the day-to-day management of the Company cannot be dictated by the crew, nor by politicians regardless of their good intentions.

Before signing off on Cayman Airways, I would like to point out that the moratorium that I mentioned a while ago was only placed on Miami to Cayman and not the U.S. generally. Under Bermuda, too, any airlines have always had the rights to provide services from any U.S. point to the Cayman Islands. The moratorium only covered the Miami-Cayman sector for a period of four years.

Mr. President, I now turn to Labour Legislation. As is well known, it is at the present time in Select Committee. I believe that this form of legislation must be carefully examined and tailored to meet the needs of this country. I will express here publicly that it is my view that legislation is necessary but it must serve to protect both employer as well as employee. During the two years that I have held this present Portfolio, I have seen both sides of the coin. I have seen employers who have tried to dump faithful and long serving employees with little or no pay and little or no notice - cases in which I considered that they were treating their staff unfairly. Many times I was reminded that there was no legislation which dictated what they were supposed to or not to do. I had to point out what the custom has been in this country regarding severance pay and other employee conditions.

I have also seen, Mr. President, employees who did very poor jobs for employers. Some were employed for only a very short time - a matter of six or seven months - and they came into the office demanding severance pay, demanding vacation pay, demanding sick leave and all sorts of things they were not entitled to. So Mr. President, there are always two sides. It is my hope that with the type of legislation which will eventually be brought to this House, it will enable other problems to be resolved in a more professional, legal and perhaps businesslike manner.

I would also mention the appointment of a Director of Trade and Labour. I would hope that this individual, when appointed, would strengthen the Department of Labour and assist us greatly in continuing our efforts to maintain a proper working relationship and harmony in our country.

I would like, Mr. President, at this time, to briefly mention the Public Works Department. I think we are fortunate to have the expertise and talent that we have today in that Department. I know many times they are easy prey for criticism, but the quality of the road construction which we have completed and those which are in progress, only need to be examined to verify that we have professionals in that department.

I would also like to mention that I, too, look forward to the completion of the Airport Terminal at the Gerrard Smith Airport in Cayman Brac and I want to assure the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council that he has my full support in endeavouring to push this forward to completion. Additionally, Mr. President, I support any form of incentive, any form of programme that will help to boost Cayman Brac's economy, for we are one country, one people and must have one aim.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac mentioned the Cayman Airways' schedule and jet service. It is true that the introduction of the Shorts aircraft will provide numerous possibilities in improvement of service to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Many more connections are available. Much more flexibility exists. We are willing to sit down and work out the best methods that we can to provide a service that suits our needs and requirements. This has always been the goal for Cayman Airways - to endeavour to improve that service.

I would also at this time, Mr. President, the proposal for the development of the North Sound which the Honourable Third Elected Member of Council mentioned in his contribution to the Throne Speech. I have no doubt, that this is a project that could be beneficial and helpful to our entire country. It appears to me to be from what little I have seen under proposal, a very costly project. It is something that is long term and I would like to read one small section here which must continuously be borne in mind and I am happy to see that those who have prepared this proposal recognise this. It is that the protection of the ecology of the North Sound is of paramount importance to the Island. This must always be borne in mind. I see the North Sound, too, as what can be considered the last frontier for these Islands and any support that I am able to give, in my humble way, to this proposal, would be subject to what has already been acknowledged - a further ecological study and further engineering investigations. It is a project that has to be looked at very carefully.

Mr. President, in closing I would just like to say that I, like others, understand that politicians must naturally deal in politics. But believe me, unless a line is drawn as to where politics end and the interest of one's country begins, politics, the spreading of propaganda and incorrect information in order to make the next man look bad, will eventually wreck this land of ours; and we should ponder these thoughts.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I would like to wish you, as the President of our Legislature, and as the Governor of our Islands, and your family, all the best in the future. Your valuable contribution to our community has been appreciated, your visitation of the elderly and involvement in fund raising programmes and events for charity have all been welcome and highly appreciated by the entire population of our Islands. I realise that we will eventually have another opportunity to bid you farewell, but life, many times, can bring us different situations. I, therefore, would like to take this opportunity to say the words that I have said to you for you and your good wife at this time.

Mr. President, I thank you and all other Members for their attention.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Would any other Member wish to speak? If no Member rises or catches my eye, I shall call upon the mover of the Motion.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Mr. President, you may have noticed, Sir, that the proceedings in the reply to the Speech from the Throne has been somewhat different from the past. I would have thought that a speech, such as was just delivered by the Second Elected Member from George Town, would have prompted a response from the other side. But it seems as though it is going to take another similar dose of positive contribution to get some Members out of their seats.

Mr. President, I would not claim to be in a position to deliver as concise and comprehensive a speech as the last speaker, but I believe that I can hold the floor until 4.30pm and come back tomorrow morning and use the balance of the day.

I too, like Members who preceded me, Mr. President, would like to thank you in your capacity as Governor for your most gracious Throne Speech delivered on Friday, the 6th of February, 1987. Before I get into the substance of my contribution, Mr. President, I wish to join other Members who have welcomed to this Chamber for the first time, our new Attorney General and our Clerk. I hope that their respective stays in this small family be enjoyable and rewarding.

Mr. President, I will, of course, in my contribution contain myself primarily to those subjects that fall within my Portfolio, but I trust you will also give me the same latitude which other Members enjoyed if I drift into other areas.

MR. PRESIDENT:

It depends on how far you drift.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

I will not get on the reef Mr. President.

Mr. President, the Economic Development Plan put forward by Government has come in for varying forms of treatment. My view is that such a plan is long overdue and as long as it is accepted in the spirit in which it is presented, it can do nothing but good.

For the first time in many years, Government is attempting to show where it would like to be in five, six or seven years down the road. While many of the programmes are projects that can only be successfully tackled by Government, it will also serve as a guide to the private sector showing where Government wishes to go. Hopefully it will induce private investment to take over some of the services that can rightly and profitably be taken over by the private sector, thereby alleviating Government from the capital expenditure involved.

We must be flexible enough to accommodate such changes to the Plan. We must look at Government or at the Islands as a whole and understand the inter-relationship between the various sectors within Government and within the private sector. If the private sector comes along and chooses to embark on some of the projects which Government has earmarked as being necessary for development, then I am sure, Mr. President, that this Government would be only too happy to encourage the private sector to take those projects, wish them well and see that they are implemented in the best interests of the country as a whole. Only in this way Mr. President, can public and private investment capital be employed to the benefit of the entire country.

To say that to develop or produce an Economic Development Plan is socialistic or communistic, is utter nonsense. There is nothing in the Plan, Mr. President, that makes, or seeks to make the private citizen a slave to the country's economy. That is basically the theory behind communism or socialism. That is ownership and operation by Government and the compulsion of all incentive directed towards the national goal or the national economy rather than stimulating the private economy.

Mr. President, as a constituent said to me on the telephone the other night, anyone in this country who does not want to see progress today, will have to fall over it because he cannot move without seeing it in every corner and in every direction. So no one can successfully label this Government as being socialistic or communistic in its approach. For example, mention has been made of the Health Plan which it is hoped will be completed this year. I am hoping it will be completed, Mr. President. Within that Plan, what we are really saying is where we would like to be in health services for our people by the year 2000. I have already been approached by people in the private sector who would wish to provide private clinics, catering mainly, Mr. President, to the non-residents. I certainly welcome those approaches. I will study each one as it is presented and certainly each decision will be made on the merits or demerits of the proposal. For example, Mr. President, I am dealing with one project at the moment where the proprietors propose putting into that facility one machine alone that would cost approximately $1.7 million U.S. dollars. That is one piece of medical diagnostic equipment. If that were to come about, Mr. President, it would certainly relieve Government of ever having to think about such a large investment in medical diagnostic equipment, but it would certainly also be a blessing to this community. In fact, I am reliably informed that there are only about four of those machines in use in the entire United States.

Now, Mr. President, I will some idea of the quality, magnitude and resources behind the people Government is dealing with today. Having said that one piece of equipment would be in the region of US$1.7 million, the gentleman in the team providing the finance had one worry about overall facility. That was whether the scale of investment would be large enough to attract his company to invest in it. That I can believe because I know the name of the company well whom the person represents. It is perhaps the largest construction and development company in the world and they build projects in the hundreds of millions of dollars. So I hope that in order to attract this facility it can be built into a magnitude that it would be big enough to invest that type of money and expertise in its construction and equipment.

Mr. President, our health plan will be sufficiently flexible for us to accommodate and welcome what might be regarded in other countries as competition of that magnitude. We are not interested in building monuments to ourselves. What we are interested in is delivering first class service to our people. There are certain areas of our Health Services where it will be impossible to expect the private sector to undertake unless we are to retrogress from the position that we now enjoy. For example, you mentioned in your Speech, Mr. President, that we hope by the year 2000 to reach 100 per cent immunisation for our young population rising from the present 90 per cent. That is something that Government would never expect the private sector to undertake. Neither would we expect the private sector to undertake the hospitalisation care of our indigent and elderly. Nor would we expect the private sector to undertake the medical treatment that we now give to all children of school age.

Mr. President, it would be difficult to imagine the private sector delivering to our expectant mothers and their new born children the type of service which we now give to them, all, or basically all free of charge, Mr. President. This is reflected in the low mortality rate which we enjoy in the Cayman Islands among new born babies. Our statistics in this regard, Mr. President, are the envy of many developed countries. We also provide free birth control advice and services, free genetic counselling and so on. This is a service that Government will have to continue to provide, and in my humble opinion, we will have to continue our district clinics which are intended to be upgraded. The services presently rendered by these clinics are becoming increasingly acceptable to the districts. For example, Mr. President, in the West Bay district almost as much work is done in that clinic, certainly for that district, as is done in the Out-Patients Department at the Hospital. Here, again, Mr. President, I do not see us delivering hospital intensive care to our indigent and elderly, as I said before, without continuance of a Government Hospital, but certainly ...

MR. PRESIDENT:

I am afraid I am going to have to interrupt the Member. It is just after 4:30 p.m. and since he told us earlier that he hoped to occupy the whole of tomorrow speaking, I do not suppose the House will particularly wish to suspend Standing Orders in order to allow him to complete his speech today. Nor indeed perhaps is that his wish. So I will invite the Honourable First Official Member to move the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, in accordance with Standing Order 10(2), I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that this House do now adjourn until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, in accordance with provisions of Standing Order No.31, I would like to make a personal explanation to correct a serious slip of the tongue I made when debating the Throne Speech. I was speaking about the drug problem in our Islands, I said "that we need to have more compassion for those who profit from drugs". Mr. President, what I intended to say was that we need to show more compassion for the addicts and their families and to bring the dealers and pushers to justice. Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

CONTINUATION OF THE DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, yesterday I said that the preparation of the Five-Year Economic Development Plan by Government was necessary and made good sense and that it was long overdue. I said that it should be seen for what it is - a plan, and it should be accepted as an attempt by Government to show where it wishes to be in the provision of services for the people of the Islands for next five years. It should be regarded, Mr. President, as a programme linked to defined national commitments to which sufficient allocation of resources have been directed to make the greatest impact on the quality of life for all who live and visit these Islands. It must be recognised that the Plan will be sufficiently flexible to permit adjustments at different stages to take account of changes that are bound to occur. I mention the fact that the Plan would serve to focus the attention of the private sector on national objectives and goals as well as there would be areas within the Plan where, in my opinion, the private sector would step in and provide some of the services.

As an example of this Mr. President, if I am permitted, I would call the attention of the House to the fact that in the field of education this is already taking place. I know of plans by at least one of the private schools in the Island to establish a Middle School of sufficiently high standard to lead me to believe that some of the pressure will be taken off the Cayman Islands Government's Middle School to the extent where it will need us to rethink as to whether we will need to build our Middle School as quickly as envisaged when the Plan was drafted. I believe, Mr. President, that the same will be true for the High School, and I further believe that this will be a catalyst for the other private schools in the Island to follow suit and hopefully, relieve Government of most, if not all, of the financial burden envisaged in this area. Once these schools are of a sufficiently high standard, Government will welcome such a development.

Yesterday evening Mr. President, I also gave an example of what was happening in the field of health care. I pointed out that I was now in discussion with private investors who were interested in establishing a private clinic in the Islands which would provide first rate services, principally to patients brought in from overseas, but naturally, any such permission given to establish a private clinic would embody provisions for use by residents under recommendation of Medical Practitioners in the Government services or those already in private practice locally. To illustrate the high quality of the clinic envisaged, I mentioned that the plans entail one piece of diagnostic equipment that would cost in the region of $1.7 million dollars. I mentioned, Mr. President, that such equipment would enhance the services available on the Islands.

I would like to add one further point, Mr. President, and that is, that the development of new technology in computers and other means of transmission can make available medical services locally by feeding into units in the metropolitan centres that would not have been thought of a few years ago. Government must, therefore, maintain a close watch over the fulfillment of the policies they have formulated to take account of developments and changes as they go by.

To summarize, Mr. President, the Economic Development Plan must be recognised as a programme of our economic and social developments as a harmonious process in order to achieve specific priority objectives. There is nothing socialistic or communistic about such a Plan and those who take that view, Mr. President, are short sighted and whistling in the wind. But enough on that subject Mr. President, I am sure that if need be, the Honourable Financial Secretary, under whose Portfolio this subject falls, will deal with it if further explanation is necessary.

It was mentioned in the Throne Speech, Mr. President, the fact that the National Health Plan is due for completion this year. On this subject, permit me to say, that the various section Heads have written their respective sections of the Plan. At this point, a final decision has to be made by my Portfolio on certain specific matters which will impact substantially on the overall Plan. Foremost among these Mr. President, is a final decision as to whether the Hospital will be placed under a Board as a statutory corporation which, it is my conviction, should be done. I believe that such a corporation run by a Board comprised of hard-nosed businessmen can and will deliver the best possible health care to our people. And, coupled with the foregoing, is the decision whether comprehensive medical care insurance scheme should be introduced. I am satisfied that this will also ensure maximum care to our people.

Once these decisions are made, the Plan can be finalised and will be published.

Mental Health and Drug and Alcohol abuse - Mr. President, often the Press comes in for a lot of stick and I myself have done so from time to time, but I believe that on those rare occasions when they deserve a bouquet, it should be thrown their way and in this case, Mr. President, I think they deserve one. When I assumed responsibility for the Portfolio, I found established a Committee which was styled, if I am not mistaken, "The Drug and Alcohol Abuse Committee". It had been working for a while and certain plans had been discussed. Shortly thereafter, in reply to a question in this House, I think it was, I mentioned that it was planned to establish a Drug Rehabilitation Centre or in other words, a Detoxification facility. The Caymanian Compass shortly thereafter carried an editorial advising caution in this approach and mentioned, inter alia, something about persons and entities building monuments to themselves. To say that I was not a bit disturbed at the headline or the contents of the editorial, when I first saw it, would be an untruth, but it caused me to think and to look at what was planned a little more closely.

This scrutiny by myself, the Portfolio and the Medical Department led us to conclude that very little, if any, technical input had been given to the programme so far. And, as a result, we have rethought and revamped our proposed services.

In the area of Mental Health, Mr. President, at the moment we have the services of two part-time Psychiatrists and one part time Psychiatric Social Worker. The Drug Abuse Programme is presently coordinated by the Medical Officer of Health and we rely heavily on the services of Narcotics Anonymous, Alcoholics Anonymous and voluntary counsellors. Members will know, that in the 1987 Budget, we have provided for a full time Psychiatrist and a Psychiatric Social Worker or a Psychologist who will be the coordinator of a Drugs and Alcohol Abuse Programme, as it has been determined that most of the persons affected need outpatient counselling rather than inpatient care, or indeed, detoxification. In those instances where residential treatment is needed, we have established that we can send those persons to a Detoxification Centre in Florida for approximately $5,000 U.S. dollars each, for the required 30 day period, then bring the person back for professional counselling, a much cheaper proposition in the short term, for treating a substance abuse patient.

I thank the Caymanian Compass for their timely editorial which caused us to rethink our position. If and when it becomes necessary, to build a Detoxification Centre, we will have the experience of a number of years of actual involvement in the problem behind us and we will therefore know more precisely how many patients we must cater for. In the meantime Mr. President, we have promise of assistance from Dr. Parker, Physician in Charge of Psychiatry, Department of Substance Abuse, Henry Ford Hospital, Detroit, Michigan. She comes obviously eminently qualified, widely experienced and a lady whom we can rely on with confidence to guide us in this area. She has offered to help us set up our programme and assist in the recruitment of Substance Abuse Counsellor.

Mr. President, I might say that the appointment of staff for this programme is one of the most crucial decisions and one of the most important elements in the entire programme. The Medical Director of the Additional Treatment Programme at the South Miami Hospital has also agreed to provide all the assistance possible in the development of our programme. So Mr. President, with the appointment of the staff provided in our 1987 Budget, our Programme will really be off and running providing the much needed help for our people hooked on narcotic drugs and alcohol.

This year has been designated by the World Health Organization as a year of immunization and it is our Government's intention to increase our present 90 per cent coverage for immunization to 100 per cent. The Mobile Dental Unit donated by the Rotary Club of Grand Cayman, for which we thank them sincerely, will be placed in service to improve the delivery of dental health care at the community level and to schools. This Unit will be manned by Dental Auxiliaries, under the supervision of the Government Dental Officers. It is hoped that this programme will eventually make it possible for all school children in Grand Cayman to become dentally fit in their future and eventually lead to a more dentally fit adult population.

It has become increasingly clear that the present physical facilities at the George Town Hospital are inadequate for our present future needs. The ad hoc additions which have taken place over the past 10 years have not satisfied our requirements. The Member for North Side has described the present facility as a complete maze, and here, I agree with him. He is correct. He also said that we do not need a consultant to tell us what we need. Here, Mr. President, I disagree with him and those outside and maybe even inside this Chamber, who agree with him. He also mentioned the 1973 Development Plan for the Hospital, and for your benefit, Mr. President, and that of Members, I would like to show that, had that Plan been followed rather than I have been made to understand, committed to the archives in the Government Administration Building, we could have had a good facility on the present premises today, with room for future expansion. But instead of following this Plan, we had a Revised Plan done locally in 1983, and this Plan shows what we have up there today, not this one, the local Plan, with a kitchen out South Sound, the Pediatric Unit out in a grass-piece and, God only knows where the rest of the facilities are situated.

It is my opinion, Mr.

President, that we have two options before us, one is total redevelopment on the existing site and the other the development of a new Hospital on a new site. I prefer the latter, but the money spent on a proper consultancy would be money well spent, provided that the Plan, when it is prepared, is not again taken and put in the basement to harbour cockroaches.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

A Consultancy to design the facility not to tell you whether you need it, because we all know we need it.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Shut Up!

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

that.

You can holler louder than

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I do not know whether the Member was there when it was redesigned or not, but I am making the point, you do not go to a Proctologist to clean your teeth. The planning of a Hospital facility, if the Member will listen, is a specialized field which must take into account many variables. I, nor anyone else in the Island, that I know of, is competent to do that study and make recommendations that I certainly would be comfortable with to spend scarce Government resources on. The problem is that modernization and expansion of Hospital facilities are subjects often answered by expediency, but because the total problem is seldom envisaged initially, the many factors inherent in such a study, for example present population, anticipated population growth, anticipated tourism growth, environmental criteria, financial capability and so on, all combine to provide a basis of study determination.

In the area of training - continued emphasis is planned both from our own resources and outside agencies such as Pan American Health Organization, which Mr. President, has been generous to us in our training programmes. To name a few, a Workshop on Family Life Education will be conducted for selected nurses and selected teachers who will be involved in the teaching of Family Life education. This is a timely course, particularly with the advent of AIDS worldwide. An observation visit by the Genetics Disease Programme Coordinator to Malenan Centre in Miami for Child Development, has been arranged by PAHO. An agreement has been reached for Medical Consultants from Baptist Hospital in Miami to visit the Islands periodically to provide services on various topics, at no cost to Government. The Supervisor of our Laboratory will be sent to the University Hospital of the West Indies in Jamaica for two weeks to upgrade skills in Blood Bank Management. There are many other courses for doctors and nurses to be undertaken during this year, which are too numerous for me to mention here, Mr. President, unless I carried out my threat to speak all day.

Perhaps, Mr. President, this is a good place to mention that because of the increased incidence of AIDS worldwide, we are in the process of making arrangements to increase our blood bank facilities locally, and, in order that none of this blood is wasted and to ensure that we have a ready supply of tested blood at all times, we are negotiating simultaneously with a reputable Blood Bank in Miami, recommended to us by a Caymanian doctor working in the area, to open an account with them whereby we can send excess blood to that Blood Bank and draw from their supplies as and when we need them.

In addition to what has been mentioned in the Throne Speech on the subject of Education Mr. President, I might add that the degree course for teachers started in September, 1985 under the auspices of the University of Miami for some 34 Teachers, which includes 17 Caymanians, will be continued, and the participants will graduate in April, 1988 with a B.Sc in Elementary Education with a Major in Special Education. This course consists of weekend courses taught in Cayman by a Professor from the University and seven weeks courses during the summer at the University in Miami. The teachers are bearing most of these expenses for themselves. In the case of the Caymanian teachers, the cost is $5,830, in the case of non-Caymanian teachers, the cost is $7,282.56 and the total cost to Government, that is, unrecoverable cost to Government, is $31,075. This covers mostly the function of distance teaching costs.

There has been a counsellor in place at the Cayman Islands High School since September, 1986. There will be a Careers Counsellor cum Education Social worker in place at the Cayman Islands Middle School starting from September, 1987 and an Education Social worker will be recruited to replace the School's Liaison Officer, from September, 1987 in the Primary system. These appointments, together with the Education Psychologist mentioned in the Throne Speech, and the Coordinator of Special Education across the system and already in post, will provide a strengthened and enhanced counselling service in education.

Those who have read the Development Plan, Mr. President, will also see that money is in that Plan this year, to purchase land for a new Junior School in George Town. The Primary School in George Town has a present enrollment of something like 475 children which is in excess of the capacity for which it was built. Therefore, it is Government's intention to build a Junior School in George Town covering ages 4 through 6 next year which would remove about half of the children from the George Town Primary School. From available statistics, it would appear that the two schools will take us well beyond the year 2000 in supplying the needs of George Town Primary School and Junior School. I should also say that negotiations are presently under way for that land and again I refer to the required flexibility of the Plan because it appears, Mr. President, that we can get the land for the Junior School and accommodation for the Community College short term all on the same compound and for a minimum of additional expenditure.

Of course, being a prudent businessman, we already know what we will do with the premises when the Community College moves on to its permanent site in four or five years. Which again, Mr. President, is the only client in Government which I see can rescue the $1 million plus dollars that was put in the White Elephant of a kitchen at the Hospital and we intend to rescue that as the training centre of the Community College in its area of Hotel Training. If the new Hospital is built, it has been determined that existing buildings will be adequate to house the Community College permanently.

In addition to what was said in the Throne Speech about the Community College, Mr. President, permit me to add that the Community College is doing a great deal to equip young Caymanians with skills and knowledge to take an active part in the developing economy of this country. In September, 1986 the College enrolled 122 students in full time courses, offering training for work in hotels and restaurants, in technical trades, in business and in the Government Services. This figure represents an increase of over 70 per cent on the 1985 full time enrollment of 71 and more than double the 1984 enrollment of 48. What a dramatic change, Mr. President. No more two week shaft courses and fancy uniforms just to impress the electorate. We are down to serious business.

Of the 122 full time students currently registered for the three upper swing studies for the hospitality trades, 8 auto mechanics, 14 electrical installation and 17 building trades and it should be noted, Mr. President, all but 6 of these students are Caymanians. We are quite pleased, with the acceptance of the product of the College, by the hotel industry, and commercial enterprises and the moral and material support which the College receives from these entities is gratifying. We call upon the entire business community to continue to support the work of the College in the exciting days ahead. With improved accommodation, strengthening of its staff and organizational structure, the College will make a major impact on the lives of young people in this country and contribute substantially to the process of social and economic development.

It is planned to offer higher level courses in Accounting, Banking, Hotel Operations and Secretarial Services, to equip Caymanians for lower and middle level management or professional positions, or to enable them to go on to further and higher study. We will give the College the tools, Mr. President, and it will be up to the community and the students to make the fullest use of the opportunities provided and for the staff to guide them to success.

While increasing its numbers, Mr. President, the College does not and will not compromise or sacrifice quality for quantity, in fact, much of the College's work will continue for some time yet to be based on the courses and examinations of reputable overseas institutions and professional bodies, such as the Educational Institute of the American Hotel and Motel Association and the London Chamber of Commerce and Industry. I might add, Mr. President, that at the recent meeting which I attended in Jamaica, it appears very possible that an affiliation for recognition of our courses can be made with the College of Arts Science and Technology and the University of the West Indies.

The role of the College in the continuing education of adults must not go unnoticed. In response to public demand, the College offers a wide range of evening classes in practical, recreational and academic subjects. A few examples of these evening courses are, English Language, Introduction to Computers, Computers and the Small Business, Accounts for Beginners, Plumbing, Refrigeration, Economics, Photography and even Aerobics for ladies, Mr. President. The evening courses allow the College the flexibility to tailor its offerings to meet the needs of individuals for personal development and fulfillment. This is important because the development of a country depends upon the development of its citizens, not on vain promises and fault finding. Well over 400 students are enrolled in evening classes at the College with a total of over 650 registrations since some students register for more than one class.

Another important role of the College is the special courses it organizes and offers at the request of particular businesses or Government agencies for their workers. The College plans to step up this community service when its facilities are improved, either through its own or local resources, or through contractual arrangements with overseas staff and institutions. As I said, Mr. President, it is hoped that in a month or two, the Community College will be on its own compound which will be adequate to its needs for the next four or five years.

1987 holds much promise and challenge for the Department of Social Services, Mr. President. New services in place are, (1) The Home Health Aid Programme. This programme will ensure that individuals who possesses either Red Cross, Home Nursing training or Practical Nurse training can be hired to provide home care services to elderly and handicapped persons in the various districts. (2), In East End a small Government owned house has been renovated and will be officially opened on March 7th as a home for elderly residents. Presently there are two old ladies at the Home with plans for about three more to bring the Home to full occupancy. There are additional plans to cater just to persons who will go there daily, carry their knitting or crochet, sit and chat while they would otherwise be at home suffering from loneliness and despondency. This little Home, Mr. President, is really a pilot project as we explore the best possible ways to provide residential care to the elderly and handicapped persons in our community as close to home as possible and always within the district in which they are resident, wherever this is possible. (3) There have been group work programmes started with two young groups, one for boys, one for girls and these groups will focus on young people, not necessarily those already in some sort of problem with the Law. The two groups in progress since early January have seen the growth in attendance and enthusiasm by the young people attending. It should be noted that the group for girls is funded, by the Lions Club and speaks again to the actual and noticeable cooperation between Government and the Service Clubs. There are also plans to reactivate a group for teenage mothers which was in action for a short while in conjunction with a local Church.

There is a post, as Members know, for a professional Boy Scouts Trainer. It is hoped that his recruitment will revive the Boy Scouts movement in the Cayman Islands, a movement that teaches skills for life, health, wholesome habits and recreational activities.

Mr. President, I understand from some previous speakers this Department came in for some heavy stick. But it is easy to chat when you do not know what you are chatting about and it is even more despicable when the person who criticizes should know better. The staff in that department Mr. President, is under a heavy strain. I personally called one of the workers who I know visits the West Bay district, and asked her if she would make a call on two individuals on her next visit to West Bay. I was informed, Mr. President, that she would be going to my district within the next two days, but that she already had 14 calls confirmed for that day and she did not know whether she would be able to work those in, but if not, she would visit them as soon as her schedule of work permitted.

Probably, Mr. President, the 14 calls which she was going to make that day was going to add at least 10 new clients to the Department, certainly the two about whom I spoke would require processing, and if approved, would become clients of the Department.

I understand, Mr. President, that the point was made that Social Services Department sends children to Approved Schools in Jamaica. The Member who made that statement, Mr. President, should know better. The Department cannot send anyone to an Approved School, it is the Juvenile Court which does it. He should know better because he sits on the Bench. Mr. President, there have been instances when the Bench has gone against the recommendations of the Department. The Court has the last say, so why come up here and chew his gum over something he knows to be incorrect? I gather that it was also said, Mr. President, that no check is made on the children once they are sent to Jamaica. That is an untruth, the children are checked on at least twice a month by telephone and they are visited occasionally. It would be well for that Member to realize that when he commits those children to an Approved School in Jamaica, he has in fact, turned them over to the Jamaican authorities.

He complained, Mr. President, that the Social Services Department had become too bureaucratic because he was unable to get information which he enquired for. He should know that personal affairs of clients is confidential. How can the Department go and tell him what he wants to know about some youngster? Go and ask the parent, or the youngster, maybe he will get the answer that he deserves.

Mr. President, plans for the Museum are going well. We have a hard working and methodical Board. Soon plans for the rehabilitation of the old Court House or the Lands & Survey building, whatever people remember it by, will be finalized and reconstruction of the temporary home will commence. Work has already started on the preparation of exhibits and we have some excellent ones which depict the true history of the Caymanian people. Of course, Mr. President, it is not intended that that building will be the permanent home of the Museum because those who understand the operation of Museums, would readily understand that a wooden building is not the best place in which to house our artifacts and documents that must be preserved. The small vault that is in there is inadequate. So understandably, Government is committed, in the future, to building a purpose built building for a Museum on the Harquail Cultural Centre land. This will complement the Theatre that is already there and the Heritage Village that is planned for it, so that all our cultural activity and our cultural heritage can be displayed and practised in one central area.

Mr. President, if I could revert to the topic of Education for a while, I would just like to mention that we really do not have a serious truancy problem in terms of numbers, but one child, Mr. President, in our society is too much to lose and we are endeavouring to prevent this from happening. The staff which I enumerated earlier will form the core of our outreach and counselling services. Too often, Mr. President, I visit the school and I ask about the truancy problem, and I am told we really do not have a problem, but as you know, Family A and Family B, have always been a problem. Mr. President, we cannot write a child or his family off at that early age in their lives, hence, the Education Social Worker. We will get those children back into the system, and if it means someone sitting with them at night to see that they do their homework and regain their self respect and confidence, it will be done.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Hear! Hear!

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Additional training will be provided for Teachers in the area of Drug Education and the teaching of interpersonal skills. For the first time this year, we will introduce the Quest Programme into the Cayman Islands Middle School.

Now, Mr. President, what I have said up to now, together with what was put forward in the Throne Speech, should provide the answers to those who talked about going faster and faster and faster, spending more and more money and those that said that nothing is being done for the youth of our country. Talk is cheap, Mr. President, and I have heard few suggestions for remedies to our problems from our critics. I submit we have shown that we understand our problems and are tackling them in a conscientious and business like fashion.

I have heard and read a lot recently, Mr. President, about increased crime and a country gone mad with crime. Mr. President, crime has increased, but those who have seen the Police Report will also realize that the detection rate has increased dramatically and that is why it is so much in the forefront. It is indicative of the expertise and capacity of the Force that all of the last five murders at least someone has been brought to book on those murders. Whereas in the past, how many successes have there been? You hear that somebody disappeared and must have fell off the iron shore when he went fishing, or you can not press so and so to give information because he/she has a heart problem. I have not heard that in this instance, Mr. President, I could sit back and relax and know that the job was going to be done.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Why did they get special treatment?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I will give way to the Member to explain the comment.

MR PRESIDENT:

I do not think the Member has any wish to give an explanation, perhaps it is inexplicable.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

I think you ought to explain it, not me. You are talking about those people that are having heart attacks and why they could not be prosecuted. Explain to the House who they are and why they were not prosecuted.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Well, Mr. President, the Member probably has that information just as I did and if he wanted to mention it, he could have mentioned it along with his other babble. I do not appreciate my speech being interspersed with remarks that do not fit in. What I am saying ...

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Only when you do it to people is it satisfactory.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, the other aspect that I would like to call attention to is in the area of Drugs for example. I would challenge this country, or anyone in it, to equip at any time in our history, the successful rehabilitation rate which we have been experiencing in the last year or two with any other time. But you do not hear anything about that, Mr. President. Just Saturday night, Mr. President, I was at a wedding reception and there I saw a young man, whom I knew had a problem. I asked whether he had sought any professional help and I was told, "No". Mr. President, I was able to recommend with confidence, the name of one of his peers who had come out of prison, rehabilitated, attending Drugs Anonymous, Counselling, attending Church and is basically a lay preacher against drugs. The young man of whom I speak, also helped the Police in their "Say No To Drugs" campaign. Before I left that reception I knew that an arrangement had been made for the two of them to meet on Sunday for discussion, and I believe that just that introduction might have saved the life of one other of our citizens.

MR PRESIDENT:

I wonder if this would be a convenient moment to take our customary morning break?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Yes Sir, I do not have too much more to say, but I would like a drink of water, coffee or something.

MR. PRESIDENT:

In that case, I will suspend proceedings for approximately 15 minutes.

the question of crime generally, I would like to point out also that the facts should not be lost in considering these statistics that many of the crimes that are listed in that Report are, in fact, crimes that were committed some up to three years previously and have only now been detected because of improved detection techniques, especially in fingerprinting expertise by the Police Force. Mr. President, while on the subject of crime, I saw in the paper somewhere, where, at a public meeting, the statement had been made that the problem was that this Government did not know where it wanted to go and that it was a society gone mad with crime.

statement to make in answer to that criticism and that is, that to the best of my knowledge, no Member of this Government since 1984, has been found misbehaving in public places, so the example is not being set for bad behavior by Government. If the reference, Mr. President, is intended to reflect on the fact that this Government saw fit to remove the mandatory imprisonment sentence within the Misuse of Drugs Law, then, Mr. President, I accept full responsibility. But, it should be realized, Mr. President, that simultaneously with those amendments came the Community Service Order, the introduction of suspended sentences and the use of the power within the Prisons Law for the release of prisoners on parole. I maintain, Mr. President, that that is one of the best things that has ever happened in our society. It has proven its weight in gold because contrary to what people might believe, persons who are released on licence are not just set free, they have conditions to meet, they must attend the Church of their choice, they must be employed, if it is a drug related offence, the conditions can contain requirements that they must subject themselves to frequent urine analysis, they must attend the Narcotics Abuse Counselling meetings and such. And Mr. President I know of many who have benefited from such, shall I say, an easing back into society and in fact, they have been introduced to elements of society for their good, which were unknown to them in the past.

prisoners who, by their actions within the Prison, have demonstrated that they are repentant and that they intend to make good citizens when they return to society. I would just like to add for the records, Mr. President, that when the Misuse of Drugs Law was amended, the maximum penalties were not reduced, all that was done was that the discretion was placed where it should be, in the Courts, so that each case could be judged on its merits or demerits, whatever the case might be. Mr. President, those people who might have believed that this Government was soft on drugs, should remember that simultaneously with the removal of that mandatory sentence, the introduction of urine analysis for the detection of drugs was introduced.

Our standard defence in drug offences in days gone by, Mr. President, was "I didn't have the ganja, the Policeman put it in my pocket". I want to see the Policeman put it in his urine. And, make no mistake about it, Mr. President, this Government is not soft on drugs, but we do not wish to see a monument twice the size of the one we have now at Northward. Our mission is to rehabilitate the unfortunate people who are hooked or addicted to substance abuse.

Mr. President, it is true that we did not get as much money for road development in our district this year as I would have liked to see, but we did not do badly last year and I am confident that with the buoyancy of the economy, we will get more money by supplementary vote during the year to spend on roads, street lighting and such. One thing that can be said, Mr. President, is that we are looking at the problems of roads in the districts and we are tackling the most serious problems, we are not just fixing the roads of those people who, we might suspect, voted for us.

Mr. President, I hope that before you leave I will have the pleasure of inviting you to the official opening and dedication of the Launching Ramp in West Bay. I think that it is a model and it is going to provide a much needed service for the district, providing we can keep the divers out of it, because it is such an attractive facility, that you have more divers there now than you have around the Lobster Pot. When it is opened, we intend to put up a sign which will indicate the use for which it is intended and make it known that anyone else using it otherwise, is using it at their own risk.

I would like, Mr. President, at this time, to extend a vote of thanks to the staff of Public Works Department for that Ramp. It is true, Mr. President, that mistakes were made, but we all do. What impressed me was that very often they corrected their mistakes by listening to the lay seamen around and the persons who use the ramp. Once the little wall has been extended (if that has not already been done, I have not visited it this week, I am in the second week and have not seen it) they may have already extended it, and we have been hampered by bad weather, Mr. President, we hope to open it with a bit of fanfare because it is the most outstanding project that the community has had in a long time. Simultaneously with the Public Works, Mr. President, I would like to say thanks publicly to those public spirited citizens in West Bay who helped us locate the site and also those persons who made the land available to us at what I consider concessionary rates. I do not, Mr. President, like to expound Sunday work, although most of them might have been Adventists, I do not know, but the Sunday morning, Mr. President, that that site was decided on, there were at least a dozen able bodied men from that district who accompanied ... I believe the Second Elected Member from West Bay was there although he distanced himself from the ramp in his speech.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:
you not tell the truth?

You know I was there. Why will

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

They accompanied the Second Elected Member and myself all around the district and we settled on that site. It was a community effort and I would like to say, Mr. President, that I would recommend to the Island that they tried to mobilize the community spirit which has been evident in community development in the West Bay ...

Mr. President, I rise on a

MR. PRESIDENT:

34(b) does not deal with Points of Order, it deals with elucidating matters as long as the First Elected Member is willing to give way, then you may continue, but if he is not willing ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:
point of order Sir, to catch your attention.

I thought it would have been a

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I am not prepared to give way, if he has some elucidation to do he can do it when speaking again, he has the capacity to bring in everything under any head. So he can get a chance, he can speak four or five times later.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I am being misstated here and that is why I asked to raise the point. If the Member knew that it was true what he is saying then he would have given me the chance to correct it.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Order! Order! The Member must not continue. It is not a point of order.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:
misquote or mislead the House ...

Mr. President, I do not

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

You are misleading me now.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

If I am misleading you it means you are not following what I am saying, that is all.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

You are saying that I distanced myself from the ramp, it is not true.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:
you can explain it.

I think you did, but anyway,

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: made a man do?

Think? You know what thought

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Shut up!

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

You shut up. Tell the truth.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member from West Bay must not continue interrupting, if he has a personal explanation to make, he may request my permission to make it and it can be placed on the Order Paper.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Thank you Sir, I will do that.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

And it must be quoted from the Hansard Sir, I know what I am saying.

Mr. President, shortly, the sub-Fire Station will be started in West Bay, which, is to some extent, a by-product of the Ramp Project because most, if not all of the fill for that land, was recovered from the digging of the basin for the Ramp. We had hoped, Mr. President, that by now we would have had a tourist landing jetty in West Bay, but Members and the public are aware of certain proposals which were before Government which had to make us rethink that. Nevertheless, now that it appears that that project has been shelved, at least for the time being, that we are hoping that that will again gain favour and that we will be able to get at least one permanent mooring in West Bay so that we can show to our Cruise Ship visitors the garden district of these Islands and that it can bring some activity and prosperity to West Bay. After all, Mr. President, they have to come to West Bay to find the attractions anyway, so it might as well land them by them.

Mr. President, in closing, I think I should make a comment on a statement made by the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council regarding proposed development in the North Sound. I understood that the Member was stating his own views and I would like to make it quite clear for all concerned that what he was saying was in fact his views, it is not a policy of Government. As far as I am concerned, Mr. President, the North Sound is Cayman's greatest natural asset, that is, the North Sound and the surrounding mangroves. I believe that to materially alter what nature has provided there, is going to irreversibly alter the ecological system of these Islands. We are not like the Bahamas or Florida, blessed with thousands of square miles of shallow water and mangroves, and it is late in the day that we are bringing in the practice of conservation efforts, they can only pay off if we strictly adhere to them.

My personal view is, Mr. President, that even if such a project, as I understand is envisaged, could be successfully completed without my fears of damage to the ecological system, the question I would have to ask myself is, do we really need this project at this time? To the best of my knowledge, Mr. President, we have hotel after hotel stacked up for construction. It is my understanding that one of the longshoremen at least operating on the present dock, would be unable to perform his existing task without employing something like six expatriate labourers. So it would seem to me that we do not need, at this time, to undertake such a project with so many unknowns to provide labour for our people. I personally, Mr. President, am going to need a lot of scientific convincing that such a project can be undertaken without doing irreparable damage, and until I am convinced scientifically, that that will not be the case, then I do not think I could lend my support to such a project. As I said, if evidence produced shows that it is engineeringly and ecologically possible, I think we could leave the North Sound development to the next generation. I believe that we have enough reclaimed land already and enough natural land to see this generation through its developmental stages. I do not know, Mr. President.

I noticed an article attributed to the gentleman behind the project, and I am not referring to the Honourable Third Elected Member, Mr. President, who said that he basically thought it would be a great thing to Cayman, so that Caymanians could resume their heritage of going to sea as they did with National Bulk Carriers. I have got some news for that gentleman,

Mr. President. Caymanians were renown seamen long before National Bulk Carriers entered the scene. Caymanians were renown seamen from before the advent of the sexton, when they had to direct their ships by use of cassava sticks with notches on them. That is the reason why, when National Bulk Carriers came into existence, they rushed to get Caymanian seamen. I can go further, it was a Caymanian who pioneered one of the bigger and more successful oil shipping companies in the United States, Seden Tanker & Towing Company. Caymanians sailed as Masters on many American registered ships long before National Bulk Carriers came on the scene, it was only because National Bulk Carriers had ships under Liberian flags on which Caymanians could sail without being citizens or legally resident in the United States.

What I would prefer to see, Mr. President, in regard to Caymanian seafaring heritage is, something which we are tackling in our plans for the Community College and elsewhere and that is, that when a tourist comes to this country and goes into a boat for a dive, instead of 100 and odd Americans like himself, that is the tourist, operating the boat, I would like to see Caymanians doing that. And, I would like to see the spin off industries from tourism preserved for Caymanians, but I would also hope, Mr. President, that the capable Caymanians would continue to aspire to high positions in the financial industry, in Banking and Insurance.

I do not believe, Mr. President too many Caymanians enjoyed their life at sea. It was hard. When we tell somebody that they have to come here without their wife to work, you hear that it is inhumane, yet our men had to go to sea for years and leave their families. I do not know what big gift that gentleman is giving to the Caymanian society by offering them the return of their heritage of the sea. Sea flows in the veins of the Caymanians, Mr. President, and they will get back in command of our marine operations one way or the other. All they need is the training and we will see that they get it.

I hope, Mr. President, I have not sounded too negative a note on that project, I am not voting on it as yet, but as I said, Mr. President, I believe we have a lot of development going on in the western peninsula of the Sound behind the iron shore which does not, in itself, present too much threat to the total ecology of the North Sound. Let that continue and develop. As far as I know, there are plans in the pipeline to basically reclaim that whole peninsula and, in my opinion, Government should not go one step further until all of that and all of the other land that has been reclaimed in this country, is built up. If we then find out that we do not have the land that is required for next generation to work on, then leave that to them and let them make the decision, but do not let us, in our haste, ruin the inheritance of our children and their children. That is my position on that project, Mr. President. Thank you very much.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Member for East End.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Mr. President, on the 6th of February, the First Session of the Legislative Assembly for 1987 was opened with the usual Throne Speech outlining the plans for the year before us. Before entering into Debate on the Speech, let me congratulate our new Clerk on her appointment and to thank the outgoing Clerk for her helpfulness to me during her tenure of office. I have said many times in this Honourable House, Mr. President, that this department has persons in it that are very able and run a very smooth show. I wish also to thank them for their assistance over the years. I wish also to join with others who have offered congratulations to the newly appointed Attorney General. I wish for him every success in the future.

Mr. President, in the Throne Speech, mention has been made of steps being taken to strengthen our Police Force and also of plans to improve standards by enforced training and overseas training. This is very important and it is something which I fully support, as I see it the answer to the problems which we are faced with. Mr. President, I am aware, like I have said many times, that we must be most grateful to our Police Department. It is our only means of protection and it is a very hard job. I would say, it is probably next to that of a politician, a very ungrateful job, because in most cases, the more you do, the more you are talked about. I feel that it is only right that every responsible citizen of these Islands give support where at all necessary and possible to our Force. It was further said in the Throne Speech, that the careers of our local officers are being carefully developed and it was stressed that at least 14 promotions had taken place over the last 12 months. Mr. President, I wish it was only possible that we could brag that the 14 promotions were all Caymanian Police.

I know of an officer, Mr. President, that has been with the Police Force from the time he came out of school and, for one reason or the other, it seems as if he has been kept back from promotions. He, in his capacity as somewhat an old officer, has known, as a fact, that he has trained many and for one reason or the other, when promotion time comes up, the junior officers have been promoted and he has been left at the bottom. This sort of scheme, Mr. President, to me, is unfair, and not because there is an officer who does not say "yes" to the whims and fancies of others, that they should not be given an opportunity to move forward. What I am saying here, Mr. President, is that it is my honest opinion that the time has come when the policies for promotions in our Force should be looked after and looked after seriously, revised if necessary, thus giving equal opportunities to all those who deserve it. I feel that when we have an officer who joins the Force and stays there for a number of years, that in itself, proves to us his determination to work for his country and try to make it a better place.

In the Throne Speech, Sir, the increase in crime was also highlighted, and this is a fact. Regardless of what might have been said by previous speakers, we cannot bury our heads in the sand. This country has never in its history, experienced such harsh, wicked crime as it has over the past few years and I was a bit concerned that in this speech, it seemed like more emphasis was placed on drug offences rather than the harsh crimes. There is no two ways about it, Sir, I am not here echoing my views, but it is said on the street that nowadays one goes to jail for drug offences and goes free for murder.

This is not good enough Sir, and I hate to go back to referring to Elections, but again, it is a fact, that Elections in this country, in some instances, in 1984 were won on campaign promises of a crime free society. My question now is, where did the promises go? We see from the Police Report that in 1986 the overall number of crimes was 2,668 which showed an increase of over 717 in 1985. Mr. President, we need to do whatever is possible, we need to put our feet down and try all endeavours to curtail this. I am aware, Sir, that we must take every possible measure to deal with drugs, but at the same time, we must deal with both drugs and other very serious criminal cases. One Member mentioned a while ago, that in the past, you would hear of people leaving to go fishing and that was the end of it. Well, I am not one Sir, that believes in two wrongs making a right, we must look at it from the point of view that if that has happened in the past, we would not like an occurrence in the future. This brings me to another point.

Recently, Mr. President, I have had many complaints. Complaints from many reputable citizens of these Islands concerning, what they term, victimization of honest citizens. This complaint, Mr. President, was with regard to firearms. Recently for one reason or the other, Government has seen fit to restrict licenses of every firearm holder in this country, or to put it in good Caymanian language, restrict the honest, true-born Caymanians. My argument has been, Mr. President, and will be, that we should not in any way pressurise honest Caymanians or honest people who are honest enough to seek a license for a firearm. To me, this is a retrograde step, when we are going to take away a right from our people who have helped to build this country and who, in most cases, are of characters that cannot be questioned. We know, Mr. President, that the problems are not with the licensed firearms, the problems this country is faced with are the many unlicensed firearms that are out there. What are we doing about those?

One stipulation on these restricted licenses is that the firearm must not be on the street after 8:00 p.m. Really, Mr. President, that one is a joke. The other one is that the firearm must be used on the owner's property only, and again, this is a bigger joke. I will bear my argument out now.

Especially in the eastern districts, Mr. President, we have some of the better farmers in these Islands. We have farmers who cultivate, not their properties, but other people's property. Properties which are several miles from the main streets and properties which can only be reached by a footpath. How can we say to an honest, hard working farmer, who has to protect his crops, that he should not be seen on the road after 8:00 p.m. with a firearm. Mr. President, the farmer cannot set the time when the rabbit is going to feed on the crops. Also, if he is inland and for one reason or the other, something should slow him down, how can he be back to his house before this allotted time? I think it is most unfair, and I hope and trust that somebody in Government will see fit to have this stipulation removed. As I have also mentioned, some farmers who are willing and able and have proven themselves as some of the better farmers, have no property of their own. But, Mr. President, because of the goodwill of others, they are allowed to make their plantation on their property. How now can we say to them that you cannot be seen on anybody else's property with a firearm?

I feel, Sir, that much more study should have been put into this. We have taken away somebody's right, which in some cases they could have been enjoying for 20 or 30 years. I am not here Sir, to condone for any one individual or individuals who has created a problem, I say they should have been penalized, but for God sake, do not penalize everyone for one bad sheep. This is most unfair. I would add that this is one of the things that will help to turn a good citizen bad. What will happen if someone is found after the stipulated hour, or if someone is found on another property? My guess is, Mr. President, they will be jailed, their firearm will be confiscated and again I am saying, this is most unfair.

I know right now of a Police Officer who has worked for Government, who has been as upright a citizen in these Islands as there ever has been produced, he has handled firearms in Government and today, he is faced with the same restriction, how unfair. I have brought this matter forward, Mr. President, and I hope it will be taken in the light I have passed it on. I trust that Government will see fit to take the necessary action to have this matter further studied and, as I have said, if a problem was created by an individual or individuals, have them punished, but for God's sake, give our people a chance.

Mention was also made of the high priority given to Road Safety which has already shown a success. Mr. President, I support whatever measures we can take to keep our roads safe. It was for this reason that I had no problem supporting what Government presented to the Finance Committee, to try to have roads from George Town to the Eastern Districts as curve-free as possible. It is unfortunate that others did not share my view and disagreed, but I hope and trust that this move will prove itself in the end, to be a good one. I drive that road each day, Mr. President, and I see things sometimes that cause me to shiver, but we know as a fact, a few months ago, one of the worst accidents in the history of these Islands happened on that road. I am glad to see that immediate action has been taken and I must commend the Member responsible for Communication and Works and the Public Works Department for it.

On Page 2 of the Speech, I have to strenuously disagree as I cannot accept the excuse which is given. It has been said, Mr. President, that "the reason why Caymanians are losing their attraction for the Force is due to competition from other Government departments and private sector". I must say, I disagree completely and again, I hope this will be taken in the light I am offering it. I feel that our young Caymanians must be given equal chances against any other officer which may be brought in to this country. We cannot expect, Mr. President, and I say it is not fair, to have our new recruits sit side by side in examination rooms, do the same exams that officers with a much higher experience in Police work do and to expect that they could prove as well as the foreign officer. I think that this is most unfair and again, I hope and trust that it will be looked into before too many of our promising young officers become discouraged.

What has been said in the address is not good enough and I quote, "it may be necessary therefore to consider overseas recruitment". This is not the answer, Mr. President. This sentence should never have been included in the Throne Speech. I feel that it is a retrograde step and I can imagine it is very discouraging to the young officers of the Force. That is as good as saying, "if you do not perform you can get out". In some cases, it has been proven that foreign officers have been brought in, our Caymanian men have ended up training them, at that point what happens? We all know what happens, the job is given to the foreign police and our Caymanian must then stay below. I have had this complaint many times, Mr. President, and this is why I have decided to air it in this House.

Not long ago, I was told that a certain U.K. officer, I think he probably has returned to England by now, was brought here to update the training of our local officers in traffic work, but before he could do that, our officers had to even train him to drive a common motor car. My question is, is this fair to our people? When will it stop? Are we going to sit back and watch our people become second class citizens in their own hometown? Let us find a way to offer and to make local recruitment attractive enough so that we can some day have a localized Caymanian Force. I am not saying this in any way without respect, I am just saying, Mr. President, that we have come from strength to strength in many, many other areas and I feel this is one which we must now fully develop.

I was a bit upset to see in the Police Report that of the number of senior officers, there were only two true born Caymanians. These are the things I would like to see changed.

To move to Prison and the remarks on the emphasis which will be placed on training of staff - again, Mr. President, I fully support this and I hope that in the future this too will prove to be a great benefit to our Caymanians. What I disagree with regarding the Prison, is the fact that we were told in the Throne Speech that we must have further buildings constructed at the Prison. Mr. President, this is not the answer. I am aware that the Honourable Member who spoke before me did elaborate a bit on this, but I feel that the funds which have been earmarked for more buildings would be much better spent had they been spent on a proper rehabilitation programme. This, Mr. President, is what we need.

Just recently, it really hurt my heart as I visited the Prison for one reason or the other. An officer that I knew was by the door, he was there with an inmate. So in speaking to the officer, the inmate called my attention and it was really touching to listen to that inmate explain why he was there. It was as a result of drugs of course, but his story as to why he chose drugs was disheartening. This officer stood there, as I did, just listening to the plea of this young man. Of course, what he pointed out to me was, that he had been put in prison because he had handled five grams of marijuana, he is faced with two years imprisonment and he drew the reference to me of how he felt it was so unfair for him as an 18 year old boy, a Caymanian, to be put away for two years versus others who are foreigners here and have been put up for shorter periods for bringing in tons of the same vegetable matter. Like I said, it was quite sad, to listen to one of our young people as he tried his endeavours to put forward his story. Again, I hope and trust that this will be looked into, and we will try to, I do not like quoting other Members, but as the Second Member from West Bay always refers to, "move faster and faster and faster". In this case we cannot move too fast. This is an evil which we have to try and stamp out.

Mr. President, I do not only speak here because of the case which I have stated, I speak on behalf of the country and on behalf of our young people as a whole. I am a young father and one who is very concerned, knowing that I have a 14 year old son, who is exposed to this sort of thing. The most that I can do is to talk to him about the problem, but we all know that once they are out there, on their own, the temptations are there. So let us try, and try quickly to work in this direction.

Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the staff of our Broadcasting House on their very good performance and their many years of keeping these Islands informed. However, sadly to say, I wish to bring up an incident which I should hope will never, ever reoccur. At the end of last year I was very discouraged with the controls on our Radio Broadcasting. There were five Members of this Legislative Assembly who endeavoured to go through to the people of these Islands. I speak of Messrs. Linford Pierson, Jim and Haig Bodden, McKeeva Bush and myself. We were interviewed by the Radio, we were told by an officer in charge that he saw nothing wrong with the interview, but unfortunately, Mr. President, because of the powers that be, until this moment, the broadcast has not been aired. I do not feel that in instances like this, the rights of any Member or any member of this country should be taken away and that is what I think it was. We had our reasons for doing so and we went about it in the correct way. I must say, we felt very badly about it and I trust that that will be the last time such a thing should ever surface. We felt that it was important enough for us to relate through this media to our people and it is unfortunate that such action had to be taken.

On a more pleasant note, Mr. President, I join others in congratulating the three Caymanian lawyers who have been qualified overseas and also to those in the Law School. I feel it will be a great honour to those who graduate from our Law School in having the great feeling of making such an achievement on their own soil. I must say, that if ever there was one good move, it was when Government saw fit to put together the Law School. I hope and trust that it will continue from strength to strength to assist our young people as they try to make their lives better.

I wish also to offer special congratulations to the many young men who have made great achievements in our Public Works Department. I was very impressed as I sat here and listened to the Honourable Member for Communication and Works as he outlined it. I wish to especially congratulate the young man from my district, Mr. McLeary Fredericks, I feel, Mr. President, that a young man of his age and his ability, that the sky will be the limit. I wish for him all that is good in the future.

In the Throne Speech, Mr. President, it was highlighted that there are plans afoot to amend the Third Party Insurance Law. It is my hope that this will add no further hardships to our people. I know that some years ago, when this Law was put together, there was a lot of unrest among our people and I think that some Member speaking before me yesterday, did speak on this amendment. I trust that if amendments are needed, they will be in favour of the public and not as before, really making it compulsory and in some instances creating hardships for our people.

Mention was also made of plans for a Consultant to determine the adequacy of the physical facilities at the Hospital. Let me say, Mr. President, that there are many improvements which are necessary there. I must say that the Honourable Member did elaborate on this. I agree with some of his explanations, I cannot say that I agree with all, but I trust that if and when this is done, we will not enter into the upgrading of the facility in any haphazard manner. Whatever we do we should have something that can be expanded in the future and something that can do us proud.

Still dealing with the Portfolio of Health, Education and Social Services, I wish to commend the Social Services Department on the introduction of their Home Health Aid programme for elderly and handicapped. I must say, Mr. President, that I am most grateful to them and I know I speak on behalf of the constituents of my district when I say, we are most grateful that they saw fit to chose our district for the first small Home for the elderly. We are grateful for this and I am certain each and every one who is concerned with this knows that we have come forward in a positive way and have proven that we are very supportive of this. I hope and trust that this will be looked after for other districts and in turn, the same support will be offered to our Social Services Department. I agree, Government can only do so much and it is in instances like these when we, the people, must work very closely with them in an effort to succeed. Again, I must say we are very grateful.

I now turn to Sports. In the Speech it has been said that Sports will be developed during 1987 in such a way that the whole Caymanian community will benefit. Mr. President, I am most pleased to hear this and I trust that when that statement was made, my district, East End was included. My reason for saying this is, that since 1984, I have tried for assistance to have a playfield in my district completed and fenced. However, as of now, nothing has been done. I am aware of what was said by the Member concerning a proposal from a group out there as far as building a new field. Mr. President, I supported that idea, I support it wholeheartedly, but what should we do for the period between completing the new one and at present? I would appreciate very much if the Member would see fit to offer the assistance, if at all possible, to having the field completed and properly fenced. I feel, Mr. President, that regardless of what whichever Government is in power, the succeeding Government should endeavour, not because the previous Government began a project, but they should look at it from a national point of view at all times, to complete where necessary and possible, all the jobs that were started by previous Governments.

On behalf of my district, Mr. President, and I am diverting a little bit here, I submitted from 1984 a list of the different things that I had started and the things I would have liked very much to get done. I must say it is very discouraging to this point in time, that I have been unable to get hardly anything done. I am very appreciative of what I have gotten, I just want to get that point clear, but I honestly feel that the cake could have been shared a little more fairly than it has been. The Honourable Member for Communication and Works has been out with me on several occasions, he has shown his support and I trust that in the future I will see a little more action than what I have seen for the last two years. This is very discouraging to me Sir, because my history as a Member of the Legislative Assembly will prove that I have tried my endeavours to get as much as possible for my district. I do not think, Mr. President, that that is asking too much because when it comes to the first of the year, the people of my district are asked to pay the same taxes, so we must have our equal share.

MR. PRESIDENT:
convenient point to break for lunch?

I wonder if this would be a

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:
minute to finish Sports and then ...

Mr. President, I will just be a

MR. PRESIDENT:

All right. Yes surely.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:
let me pay special tribute to Mr. Dalmain Ebanks, whom we all know, who has so willingly assisted me in East End to construct a Boxing Ring. Our young men are most grateful to him and I hope and trust that in the future, we will be able to establish a place for the George Town club so that we will have district competitions. I am certain, that my colleague here from George Town, Mr. Pierson, will agree with me on that and we have been working quite closely to try to make both clubs a success.

Mr. President, I am going to move onto another Head so it would be a convenient time now to break.

MR. PRESIDENT:
suspend proceedings until approximately 2:15 p.m.

Thank you. In that case I will

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Continuation of the Debate on the Throne Speech. The Elected Member for East End.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Mr. President, when we took the lunch break I had just dealt with Sports and I now move to the Fire Department.

I am delighted to know that there are plans for a new Fire Station at the Airport. This is long overdue and I must say that this department has performed well, taking into consideration the housing facilities they have operated from. This department, Mr. President, is one which deserved admiration as it is headed by one of our finest Caymanian men. With the sub-station at Frank Sound and the one planned for West Bay, I feel this country has progressed and much has been done in catering to the needs in this area. Like the Police Department, the duties of a Fire Officer is a very hard and dangerous one. One must always be alert, able and willing at all times. I think, Sir, we can be justly proud to know that we can boast of this. I hope that Government will see fit to accept my suggestion which was made in Finance Committee at the end of the year, and that as soon as is possible, to place an ambulance at these sub-outlets, Mr. President, especially the Frank Sound Station for the eastern districts.

The eastern districts are further away from the capital. From time to time an ambulance has to be summoned out there. I see it as most dangerous having to rush out to East End, knowing the amount of traffic which we have on the roads today. I feel, Sir, that this suggestion should not be taken lightly and I am aware that a $10 token was placed in the Vote. I feel that later on in the year when we see our way clear, this should be given priority and we should try, as soon as possible, to have an ambulance placed at Frank Sound. If it is at Frank Sound, it will serve the needs of East End, North Side and Bodden Town and I think, Mr. President, that this is important enough for us to take immediate action. This could save somebody's life in the near future.

I now turn to Cayman Airways Limited. Mr. President, I am very concerned over the future of our national airline and the Throne Speech confirms my concern. Because I read on page 9 of the Throne Speech, it states, and I quote, "Cayman Airways must now expect to face strong competition from U.S. carriers". To me, this is serious and worrying. I have heard remarks recently on the street, by reputable people that they suppose the next step will be to bring back LACSA, as it seems that the objective is to prove Cayman Airways is not needed and to make us, once again, beholden to foreign carriers. I trust, Mr. President, this is not the intention and I hope our Airline will be able to continue as it is most important and necessary that it does for many important reasons. It no doubt provides a service to these Islands that plays a most important part in the economy of these Islands and also provides many good jobs for our people.

I would go on to say, Mr. President that quite recently I, as one who has always supported the Airline, have been very disturbed over certain matters pertaining to the operation of the Airline. These matters were brought to my attention, and as everyone knows by now, I have tried my endeavours to air them on the floor of this House. When I bring a question to this Honourable House, Mr. President, it is not in any way for political reasons. I bring it with good intentions and my reason is the hope that the Member concerned will take necessary action.

It is an old saying in Cayman, "that were there is smoke, there is fire". I am not saying that every incident that I have raised here at Question Time is fully correct, but, Mr. President, I have reason to believe that there is something wrong. I believe that we can honestly boast of our national airline as having some of the best crew that has ever flown an Airline and we need to keep it that way. We have seen our young men, Mr. President, move from the bottom of the scale to the top. We have seen them clean the airplane and today we see them proudly sit in the seat and take it from port to port. This, Mr. President, is a great achievement for us in these small little Islands. What we, as sensible Legislators must do, is to endeavour to keep our people in this area satisfied.

I have had several complaints as to the future of certain pilots within our Airline and this, over the last few days, in Question Time, has been tossed around in this House and I do not wish in any way to go back into the pros and cons as we heard. What I would like, Mr. President, is for the Member to meet with all Members of this Legislative Assembly at various intervals and enlighten us on the full day to day operation of the Airline. It is impossible to think that any Member in this House will feel satisfied knowing that each time a question is posed here, we are given an answer to the effect that "I cannot tell you, it is all to do with day to day management".

Mr. President, my people have a right to know what is happening in Cayman Airways, be it day to day management, or be it policy. I happen to be the representative for my people in East End and each time I am asked in Finance Committee to vote funds to keep this Airline operating, I cannot say more than that to my people. This is unfair to any Member here to be asked to vote funds to keep it going, yet I cannot tell you what is in there. This has to stop, Mr. President, I do not want to see Cayman Airways continue to be on the floor of this House and I think this is the way to prevent it from being here, if we know what is going on, none of us will have any reason to have to constantly bring questions here in an effort to find out. If there is something wrong there, let us have it corrected. We have heard much, even on political platforms, of certain changes which would have taken place. What have we said? What has caused a change of heart?

As I have said, Mr. President, we have good, smart, upright Caymanians operating our Airline. We constantly hear that Caymanians are not willing to work. This is an area where we have seen it has been proven to the contrary, that if a Caymanian is given the slightest opportunity, they will make good of it. Let us put no obstacles in front of them.

Recently, Mr. President, the Airline saw fit to purchase a new airplane. I am happy to know that we have now a larger aircraft to service the Lesser Islands. What I am a bit disturbed over, Mr. President, is the fact that I understand we have had this plane sitting at the Airport for some time, what I may call idle, and this is due to the fact that proper arrangements were not made in advance. Presently we have had to be like the dog who eats his own vomit because, I understand, that we had to go back and charter the old Trilander in an effort to alleviate the problem which was caused. In instances like this, Mr. President, when such action is taken that will cost this country extra money, I feel that whoever is responsible should be brought before the Board and knocked on the knuckles. We cannot afford this sort of waste. I also hope that if we ever meet with management, that we will be told exactly what took place with the sale of the Trilander. I have been told that we have sold the Trilander for a mere $175,000 and that spare parts that were thrown in with the package amounted to some $300,000. I hope that this is not true, but again I hope, and I believe that the Honourable Member in charge will check this and make sure and report back to Finance Committee.

In the Throne Speech mention has also been made of shortage of jobs in the Lesser Islands. This, Mr. President, has created a sad situation, as I understand it, whereby families have had to leave their home there and to come here to look for jobs. I was most pleased to hear from the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council when he said that the loan for the Cayman Brac Airport had been approved. I trust this will alleviate some of the problems and that some of the Cayman Brackers will be able to go back to their homes. I also feel that Government should endeavour to try to motivate investors' interest in the Lesser Islands so that this sort of thing will not be repeated in the future.

Mr. President, a matter that was raised here at Question Time that concerns my district, and I would like to refer to it briefly as the matter of the Blow Holes in East End. This was first brought to me some time ...

MR. PRESIDENT:

May I just interrupt the Member for a moment. My recollection is, that a complaint was made and it was said that it would be investigated to see whether an offence had been committed, if that is so, I think really, the rule that precludes discussion of possible judicial proceedings has to apply because I would not like anything said here to prejudice any possible proceedings, though I will ask the Honourable Second Official Member whether I am right in my recollection of the matter.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, it is correct that I had undertaken to refer the matter to the Police and this is now being done.

MR. PRESIDENT:

So I think perhaps ... if you have got something to say that you are quite certain will not offend the Rule, go on and I will stop you if necessary, but if you think it might offend the Rule, I would prefer you not to continue on that particular subject.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Mr. President, you can tell me now if you think it will, what I was going to elaborate on, was the fact that I had been notified of the incident, I took it to the proper authorities and the two Portfolios in charge had taken the necessary action to have it cleared. When I heard the Member from North Side mentioning something that leads up to what could be legal action, it was a shock to me because I could not say any more than I knew. I had reported it to the correct people and the necessary action was taken, so if he has the statement as he said, I now leave it in the hands of the Legal Department.

Another matter, Mr. President, which I feel is very important to the safety of the people of these Islands, has been highlighted here and it has to do with Caribbean Utilities Company and those dangerous light poles and barricades which are along the Spotts Road. Mr. President this really and truly worries me and again I will not go too far into this because I know, as you have pointed out, sub judice, I trust that the necessary action will be taken and, if possible, have this danger removed from the public.

Mr. President, the Honourable Member for Communication and Works in his debate, mentioned a proposal for the development of the North Sound. I must say I was glad to see that Government has seen the congestion of the present port facility and is willing to look at the present study. What really shocked me, was to see the disagreement of the Honourable First Elected Member and his negative attitude towards such a development. Mr. President, as I saw it, the Honourable First Elected Member to Executive Council has aired many, what I would term, "pie in the sky" projects, but I carefully sat here and listened, and he has failed to say where money was coming from to pay for these. The proposal as I see it, would help him with the necessary revenue and to meet the costs of the various projects outlined. I should hope that the Member, or any Member of Government for that matter, does not hope, in the near future, to revert to any further taxation of our people. Because, as long as I am here, Mr. President, I could never agree to this.

I would like to deal briefly with our new Governor now, Mr. President, I must say, that I have to agree with the Second Elected Member from West Bay, when he said he resented the approach taken with regard to the new Governor's appointment. I too feel, Mr. President, that we as Legislators, could have been brought into the picture, and I am not saying that everything that happens in your office you should call us and tell us about it, what I am saying is this, this man was invited here, he was taken to each of our districts and he was taken to our schools. I take it as a slap in the face that the people of these Islands had not been acquainted that he would have been our next Governor. I feel that this should have been a courtesy extended to our people, or at least to us as representatives of our people. I was most shocked when I opened the newspaper and saw photographs and the caption, "New Governor for the Island". Anyway, Mr. President, I trust this will have no bearing on his attitude towards our people.

I would like to go further to say, Mr. President, that while I had to take that stand as far as the Governor's visit is concerned, I must make certain remarks as far as the change is concerned. Mr. President, I cannot be a hypocrite, I will never lie to my people and if I did not state this, God knows I would be lying. I must say that I welcome the change of Governor, I feel that it is timely, I feel that it is time that we see a new face in that capacity and I say this with due respect. It is my personal opinion and I feel I have a right to air it.

Mr. President, the Throne Speech as outlined, has been a fairly good one and I trust that it will be followed as closely as possible by our Government. If, later on through the year we should come across something which we do not feel is working out right, I think we should be man enough to change it.

I thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Bodden Town.

Second Elected Member for

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I would like to welcome the Honourable Second Official Member and congratulate him on his promotion in the Civil Service and to say that I am happy to see the change in Attorney General. I would like to welcome our new Clerk and I will promise to give her any support which a Member can give to the Clerk. I would say that I do not consider her a round peg in a square hole, or a square peg in a round hole, but I believe that she is quite suitable for the job. I would also like to say that I was very sorry to see the former Clerk retire and would like to say that my relationship with her was quite good. I found her willing to assist the Members and I think she did a very good job.

The Throne Speech, I must say, Sir, was a disappointment. There was nothing new in it, there was nothing that gave any hope to this country. It was simply a catalogue of happenings that have been going on, some of them long before two years ago. Perhaps the reason for such a negative document is twofold, one is that nothing has happened in the past two years and perhaps the second is that this is really your last Throne Speech and you perhaps did not care to venture out into realms unknown.

The Speech began dealing with crime and perhaps this is fitting, since we do have a serious crime problem. According to our Police Report, one crime is committed every three hours in this Island. One Member mentioned that somebody's manifesto had promised the wonderful utopia where we would have a crime free society. I wonder if they would dare to read that manifesto today.

In November 1984 there were about 60 people in our jails. Within a year the number had more than doubled and the prison is now filled to capacity. In 1982, 1,674 crimes were reported. In 1983 the number had dropped to 1,384 and in 1984, the number had dropped again to 1,367. So, in 1984, we actually had less crimes reported than we had had in 1981. This trend shows that there was a very good "cap" put upon the criminal activities in these Islands. But whatever happened in November 1984, seemed to have triggered a wave of violence and other offences that are nonviolent and crime just ballooned. In 1985 crime was up by 50 per cent with 1,951 cases reported. In 1986 crime was up again - 36.7 per cent above the 1985 figures. So that while in 1984 we had 1,367 crimes, two years later the figure had doubled to 2,668.

The Honourable First Elected Member for Executive Council seemed to feel guilty about this and jumped up to say that neither he, nor his colleagues, had committed any offence during that period. He had not been accused of any offence, but the country over which he now rules has been saturated with crime during the two years of his administration and apart from the small mention at the opening of this Throne Speech, it appears to me that the Government does not know that we have a crisis in this country.

More time and money is spent on conservation matters than on crime investigation and curbing of crime. The debate was taken up with trying to put the Sea Star on the endangered species list. I am certain that in April we will have a Private Member's Motion to put the Sea Star on that list and the Government Bill will follow, as night follows the day, so that the beloved little Sea Star will exist. But man is becoming an endangered species and the Government does not seem to mind. I noticed the change in attitude of the four Elected Members who simply got up this time to sing their own praises, perhaps because nobody else is doing it and even the First Elected Member from West Bay is no longer on the defensive but has become offensive in putting forward his views.

Paragraph 54 of this Report is frightening. It reads, "that the overall number of crimes reported in 1986 rose sharply. An increase of 717 or 36.7 per cent against the 1985 total." And, if we look at the table in paragraph 55, we will see the cause. In 1986, of the total crimes reported, 568 were drug offences and, following very closely, are the two crimes which pay for the drug offences, the crimes of theft and burglary. 416 cases of theft and 392 cases of burglary. This is a very serious situation. It means that no one is now safe because the drug users have to commit thefts and burglaries to pay for their expensive drug habits.

I listened to a speech quite recently by Mr. Kipling Douglas when he spoke at a Rotary function. The theme of his speech was, "That we should wage war on drugs". Amongst the interesting statistics that he gave, he made one statement which stands out and that was that 50 per cent of the people who come before him on charges of burglary and theft admit in Court that they stole because of their drug habits. This has to be so, because we have seen the shift from the less expensive ganja to cocaine and even to the cheap form of cocaine, "crack", which is now selling for $25 a rock, and, since cocaine does not remain long in the system and the addict needs three or four fixes a day, we can see that the person will have a $75 to $100 a day drug habit. It is certain that these people will have to turn to stealing to find the money to pay for their drugs.

Paragraph 56 of this Report reads, "Next to drugs, burglaries and thefts therefore remain as the main problem areas and determined efforts will continue to be made in regard to prevention and detection". The number of cases reported and dealt with rose from 178 in 1985, to 568 in 1986; an increase of 390 cases or 319 per cent. So it seems inescapable that the Throne Speech should have started with a discussion of crime. When one studies the tables in this Report, one sees how epidemic the problem has become. In 1984 there were 100 cases for ganja before the Courts, in 1986 that figure had more than doubled, to 232 cases. In 1984 there were four cases for cocaine offences, in 1986 there 165, 41.25 times as much. Other miscellaneous drug offences which were only four in 1984, had gone to 171 in 1986, almost 42 times as much. All of this has happened in two years, while the Government has been counting green parrots and telling the little boy were to put his fishing line.

Paragraph 58 reads, "Whereas the overall increase is a matter for great concern, the increase in cocaine cases is grave indeed, particularly as most of these relate to the use of the drug in the form known as 'crack', or 'rocks'." Medical experts agree that this is among the most addictive and dangerous drugs encountered, and from experience in other parts of the world, it can be expected that addicts who do not submit themselves for treatment are likely to turn to serious crime to subsidize their habits and will eventually become physically dependent and an expensive burden to society.

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council tried to brush aside any responsibility for this alarming state of affairs but many of the actions of Government have contributed to the situation we have. I believe the biggest mistake we made in this country was to stop the construction of the gallows. Perhaps an even bigger mistake was to remove the mandatory jail sentences for hard drugs. You see, the idea has trickled down to the criminal that we have a permissive Government who is lenient on drug offenders.

The United States has found that trying to stamp out the supply of drugs has not worked and they must work just as hard trying to slow the demand. While we may talk about rehabilitation for those few who can be salvaged, I believe we have to step up the prosecution and punishment of the user as well as the supplier. Our two years of relaxing to penalties for drugs have resulted in the country being swamped and, I believe, we had better get back to a hard line if we are going to save future generations. We passed through a period in the last three years, when everything was done to demoralize the Police Force and to make the Police Officer look like an ass. We had better get back to respecting our Law Enforcement Officers and to treating them better than we are doing.

In the last two years, since 1984, the Police Officers have not had a raise, with the exception of a 5 per cent which was given across the board. I remember when I became a Member of this House, back in 1972, Police Officers were making $180 a month, some of them less, and during our administration it was realised that if we were going to attract and keep a good quality police officer, we would have to pay them a reasonable salary. We increased the salaries many fold until a Police Officer's starting pay is now at $10,000 a year.

The same thing goes for the Prison Officers and the Fire Officers, these essential services need a special breed of man who is honest, hard working, and who will put his line of duty ahead of other requirements and in order to get this kind of person, we will have to pay them. Perhaps it is time that these salaries be examined again.

The Government does not seem to realise this, because your Throne Speech says, "it may be necessary to reconsider overseas recruitment on a careful and limited scale". This certainly is not the answer, this the easy way out. The answer to the attrition in the Police Force is for Government to sit down and find out why we are losing Police Officers to competition from other Government Departments and to attractions offered in the private sector and try to remedy the situation. I do not believe that the monthly pay cheque alone will be sufficient, we need to reinstate the Policeman, the Prison Officer and the Fire Officer to their former respectability in the community. We need to have less sympathy for the criminals and more for the Law Enforcement Officers - these men who serve in high risk occupations, their conduct is constantly on display and if other countries can keep their Police Officers, we must also keep ours.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would this be a convenient moment to break? Yes? In that case, I will suspend proceedings for approximately 15 minutes.

AT 3:17 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:38 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, you also mentioned, on the first page of the Throne Speech, "that the high priority given to road safety resulting in few accidents and road fatalities in 1986 will be continued". Here again, it is fitting that this item should have appeared on the front page of the Throne Speech and it is comforting to know, that only 10 people died on the roads in 1986, as against 21, I believe, in 1985. But this is no cause for jubilation, because, 10 traffic deaths is still a large number of people.

In 1985 something like 99 or 100 persons died in the Cayman Islands, 21 of them deid in road accidents. Traffic accidents was the largest single cause of death in the Cayman Islands in 1985. More people died on the roads than from any other single cause. More people were killed by automobiles than by lung cancer, more people were killed by automobiles than by heart disease. This is a very sorry state of affairs, and, while that number was cut in half in 1985, we still have great cause for alarm. If one looks at Appendix H of the Police Report, one will see why 10 is such an abnormally high figure.

In 1983, only six people were killed in traffic accidents, in 1984 seven, but in 1985, which was the worst year in our entire history, the number had increased by 300 per cent. In 1986, 10 people died but that is still a large number when we consider that roughly 10 per cent of the deaths in these Islands was attributed to the automobile. These figures are alarming when compared to other statistics, for example, the number of new driving tests given were less in 1986 than in 1984, when we had 1,257 new drivers on the road; in 1986 we had 1,203, yet we had 10 traffic deaths.

In 1983, 10,099 vehicles were registered while in 1986 only 10,709 were registered. According to paragraph 17 of this Report, the increase of registered vehicles was only 1.5 per cent yet, the people brought in for speeding had increased in the same period by 126.9 per cent. So, while in 1985 only 416 people were charged with speeding, the next year, 1986, 944 had been charged; an increase of 126.9 per cent, when the registered vehicles had only increased by 1.5 per cent.

Now, here again if you examine this Report, you will notice the large number of driving offences that are related to alcohol use and, in fact, in some of the serious automobile accidents, where serious damage resulted in the person, or where death resulted, alcohol or other drugs played a part. It is my belief that the permissive attitude of the Government towards alcohol had helped to increase the number of accidents related to alcohol.

It is no secret that since 1984 the places holding a Liquor License have greatly increased, and in fact, on Church Street, North Church, South Church Street and Harbour Drive in George Town, the number of licensed liquor establishments have more than doubled. Someone even said that they believe that lamp posts could get a license now if they applied to the Liquor Licensing Board. Not only have the number of establishments been increased, but the hours have been liberalised. The Liquor Law which was passed by this Government did a lot to undermine the controls on liquor establishments, the Government must bear the blame and should seek to tighten the Law.

You mentioned in your Throne Speech the challenges faced by the Prison Service. The previous Government had been condemned for building a Prison at Northward, but I believe that it was the correct thing to do. If the Prison had not been built at Northward, we would still have prisoners but they would be going to Jamaica. They would be incarcerated in buildings that are substandard and the life of the prisoner would be much worse than it is here at Northward. It would not be possible to have visits from members of the family. The money which the Government spent on the Prison at Northward was money well spent. Despite the fact that a person has done wrong and winds up in prison, society still has an obligation to show humanity to the prisoner, in the hope that when he is released, he will not become a recidivist and may change his way of life. Our Prison has now become overcrowded and Government will have to find the funds to provide more buildings. I am not advocating this as the answer to the crime problem, but, we either have to find the space to house them, or we have to leave them on the streets.

In your Speech, you mentioned that the demand for labour will be closely monitored to preserve full employment whilst being receptive to the genuine needs of local employers. This is the work of the Caymanian Protection Board. The Government has been trying to produce a Labour Law and I certainly would have been happy if the former Attorney General had taken the draft which he produced, to wherever he has gone with him, because that document will not help the labour situation in this country at all. It is bound to damage the relationship which now exists. I trust, that as a result of his departure, we will hear no more about the Antigua Law and, if we do have a Labour Law, it will be one that will suit the Cayman Islands or one that is copied from a country whose economy is similar to ours.

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council dealt with the work of the Social Services

Department and he stressed the heavy work load which is carried by the officers in that department. I believe that he has given a true picture. I know some of the officers are very dedicated. The Government itself, and especially some Members of the Legislative Assembly, have encouraged the public to expect so much from the Government that the demands on the resources of that department are bound to increase.

We have embarked on a way of life here which, if not checked, will eventually make many people dependent upon the Government rather than trying to help themselves.

In your Speech, you mentioned that the Government Information Services will continue to prepare and issue Press Releases. I think what you should have said, Sir, is that the Government Information Services will continue to manage the news for Government in an attempt to make them look good. I wondered how it was possible that the man in charge of that department and his assistant could spend all their time taking notes here when the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council was speaking, and whether he had brought them along to help whitewash his image. Is this what we are paying them for? Why should they be here on Governments time? I can understand the newspaper being here, I can understand other people sitting there, but not somebody who is on the payroll of Government.

You mentioned that the first year's intake at the Cayman Islands Law School are scheduled to take their full examinations in July. I believe the Law School will stand out among the many achievements of the past administration. No such thing existed before 1976 and, in fact, a previous administration of which the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council and Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council had been the leaders, had closed the circuit and, in doing so, prevented Caymanians from becoming Attorneys-at-Law. What they had done was to amend the Legal Practitioners Law in such a way that it was physically impossible for a Caymanian to become a Law Agent, as they were called in those days, unless the Caymanian had gone abroad at his own expense, which was almost impossible in those days, and was trained as a Solicitor.

When we took office in 1976, we saw the need for a School to train young Caymanians as Lawyers here on the Island, where they could afford the fees. All the reports that I have had, have pointed to a success story for that School. We must be indebted to the tutors who came from the United Kingdom and instructed our students. I would also like to praise the students themselves, who have shown a dedication and tenacity to duty. I am very proud of the Law School and hope that the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council will not seek to make it a part of the Community College as he has done with the other Schools which we started and which he now boasts about.

Listening to him this morning, one would have thought that he had been the author and the giver of the technical aspects of the Community College. And although the Community College had been started before 1976, it was, as he reported himself, a very fledgling enterprise. If it were not for the good work done in the Hotel Training School and the Building School by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town when he was in charge of that Portfolio, my good friend, the First Elected Member for West Bay, would have had nothing to crow about today. But, we do not mind his crowing, because we know the rooster can crow, but only the hen can lay the egg.

The most alarming part of this debate has been the comments from the Member for North Side. I trust that he will never get in a position to enforce those sentiments. I was very disturbed with his attitude to foreigners in this country; we cannot let these people come here, use them and then ship them out in packing cases. We do not want in this country, a third world attitude towards foreigners. We must never forget that we live on three small Islands which are dependent on the outside world for our very existence.

As far back as history records, the Cayman Islands have survived simply because we were one of the few countries that always managed to get money from abroad. How did we get it? The First Elected Member for West Bay told you about the Caymanians working on the sailing ships, who sent their monies back to their families; those were the days when our fishermen caught turtle and sold them abroad; when we exported logwood, thatch rope and even the bark from the mangrove. Those days went along quite well until the Second World War when, the renowned fact of our men as seamen, spread. We entered into a new era when much more than 50 per cent of all the working males in Cayman were employed with National Bulk Carriers. What were they doing? They were sending their monies home to their families.

One year in the early 60's, the remittances from seamen abroad amounted to more than 1 million pounds. This was a lot of money in those days, all good hard currency. Because we live on an Island, every day we are sending money abroad to buy our food, our clothes, whatever else we may use, building materials, automobiles and, if we keep sending that money abroad, we will one day go broke unless the money comes back. The people we pay for a shipment of beer, soft drinks or sweet potatoes do not send that money back to us, we have to bring it back. And, now that those days are behind us, we have entered into the area of tourism into the age of tourism and offshore investment and, here again, we are dependent on foreign capital. Cayman has nothing, we have no bauxite, we have no oil, we have no agricultural products, we have nothing we can send abroad to get money back; so the money which we send abroad must come back from the foreign investors and the tourists.

Whether we like the tourist or not, whether we like the foreign investor or not, we must realise that it is the cash which they bring to our country that we use to buy the goods we need. Do not make the mistake Michael Manley made in Jamaica to run away the foreign companies, run away the foreign investor and then believe we can coax them back. Why has the Caribbean Basin Initiative failed? Why has not the American investor poured money into Jamaica? And, this is only one of the countries in the Caribbean I could name. It is because the foreign investor has been stung by the Government and that was started by the individual Member forgetting that his attitude would keep away the foreigner.

We know that the 1984 campaign was fought by people who said they wanted to get in so they could get rid of the Texan money, and people believed that they would do that. Do you no what happened Sir? I understand when they went up to Fort Arthur, they put on one of those wide brimmed stetson hats and they could not get them to take it off. So, instead of getting rid of Texan money I think they went to try and woo the Texan and his money. We need money not only from Texas, but from every state in the Union. We are an Island and we are not self sufficient. The money which we send abroad for consumer goods will come back from the investor and the tourist and, until we find some other way of making money, we had better be nice to these people.

Do you know that since the signing of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, Cayman has fallen in the eyes of the investor? There are other places that people can put their dollars, there are other beaches that tourists can go to. There was a time when Cayman was the place and there was not much choice otherwise, but we now hear of competition even from Turks Island. So, we had better straighten up our house and get rid of the Third World Syndrome, the Third World attitude to the foreign investor.

If one looks at our import and export statistics for the year, one will see there is a gross imbalance. We are buying more goods abroad than we are selling, so we need to get money from abroad and do not ever forget it.

Now, this is why the job of the Caymanian Protection Board is so difficult. They have to weigh the needs of the local population in such a way that they can only allow in a certain amount of workers to help our expanding economy. We cannot do it alone. On the other hand, the Government must take whatever steps are necessary to get rid of those people who are undesirable, to get rid of those people who are no good for this country, and there are many of them.

We have reached a stage in our development where Caymanians are becoming qualified to take executive positions in jobs and they must be given an opportunity. The Caymanian today has opportunities which were not available to his parents and his grandparents. He has the opportunity to on to college and university. He has the opportunity, if he will take it. So the young Caymanian must qualify himself for the job. He should never be given a job simply because he is a Caymanian, he should be given a job because he is capable of doing that job. We should not be ungrateful to those people from abroad who have helped us in the past and, they too, should remember that we have helped them. None of them is coming to Cayman because they love this rock, they come here because they can do better than they can do at home. If you take the professional person for example, he comes from New York City or London. Out there in that wilderness he is just another statistic, but when he comes to a small community, he is like a flower transplanted unto virgin soil, he can become something and grow. We receive him with open arms and stamp upon his forehead the shield of respectability. But, having been received like that, he must realise that we are doing him a favour, just the same as he is helping himself because he knows he is better off here.

It is a two-way street on which we must seek out those people who have gone abroad from their countries to seek a livelihood and are going about it honestly. Caymanians once went abroad with National Bulk Carriers on American ships, to Cuba, Nicaragua, Honduras and Jamaica; they went abroad to look for jobs. We now have people who are coming here, just like we went abroad, and these people must not be allowed to take away our country. But, if they are honest and hard working, we must at least treat them with respect. I think it was wrong the attitude adopted by the present Government to the Jamaicans in this country and I believe, if you have to keep Jamaicans, or any other nationality, it is better to keep those that you know of, those that have been here for years and have proven themselves, rather than to ship them out and bring in new people.

The draft Five Year Economic Plan which has been laid on the Table of this House, is really a joke. Perhaps, that is why the First Elected Member from West Bay tried to anticipate my remarks when he said that there were those who would claim that the Plan was communistic. The whole concept of five year planning developed in Russia, there is no question about that, and even the Russians today, have the good sense to know it is a waste of time. If you want, you can see the folly of this Plan; it is to cover the period from 1986 to 1990 and it has not yet been adopted by the Government. With this slow and ponderous movement that they have, I think 1990 will have rolled out before they get around to adopting it. 1986 is history. As far as Government's spending is concerned, so is 1987 because whatever money we will spend in the remainder of this year, has already been budgeted for in the 1987 Estimates which were passed in December last year. So, how can this be called a Five Year Economic Plan when we have not yet adopted the Plan and two years have passed? And, what of the other three years that are to come?

With the many programmes outlined by the Members and "the pie in the sky" project envisioned by the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council, there is no room for any Economic Plan. I can only say what the owner of the Oscar Meyer Hot dog fortune told one of his young workers, he said, "son, why the hell don't you stop planning and get on with your work?". This Plan is nothing more than what the Planner was told he must put into it and, I believe it is not worth the expense that we have already gone to because it is very difficult with the way things move to plan five years in advance. We heard the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council talk about the market and the abattoir that had been in the planning stages and had been inserted into a Five Year Economic Plan which turned into a Ten Year Economic Plan and is now fifteen years old and those Plans are still on the drawing boards because they have been overtaken by other projects which appear to be more necessary.

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Let us Pray.

Almight God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Member of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Questions. The Elected Member

QUESTIONS TO MEMBERS

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR NORTH SIDE TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNICATIONS WORKS AND DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION.

NO. 38: Can the Honourable Member say if and when provision will be made for compulsory pilotage of ships in the George Town Port?

ANSWER: At the present time no provision is being made for compulsory pilotage in the Port of George Town. The Government and the Port Authority have considered this matter carefully and have decided that compulsory pilotage is not necessary because ships trading here are able to obtain, through their agents, competent and responsible local persons, with knowledge of the Port, to assist them either to a safe anchorage or to a berth at the pier. This system has worked very well over the years and there have been no complaints from shipowners or operators.

However, should Government or the Port Authority, at some future date, consider compulsory pilotage necessary to improve the safety of the Port, appropriate steps will be taken to introduce legislation that will cover all aspects of pilotage.

SUPPLEMENTARY:

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Supplementary, Mr. President.
Can the Honourable Member say whether there was any agreement, at any time, to put in place this compulsory pilotage?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNEL:

Mr. President, at one time, Sir, we were considering it and when we got into the legal matter of compulsory pilotage we found we were in a hornet's nest. We were advised legally to back off from it until we could establish a proper legal framework under which we could appoint pilots and a proper authority to licence them.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Unless there is any further supplementary, we can pass on to Item 3 - Personal explanation. The Second Elected Member from West Bay.

PERSONAL EXPLANATION

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, in the course of his debate yesterday afternoon, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council misquoted what I said in my contribution to the Throne Speech. He said, and I quote him: "I believe the Second Elected Member for West Bay was there, Sir, although he distanced himself from the ramp in his speech."

The dictionary, Mr. President, says that the word 'distance' means the fact of condition of being far removed or apart; secondly, disassociation from one surrounding of worldly affairs.

Mr. President, I rose on a point of order which was not allowed and so I want to correct the deliberate attempt to mislead the country.....

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, on a point of order, Sir. Nothing controversial can be raised in the explanation. If the Member cares to read his speech from the Hansard I have no objection, but if he is going to introduce allegations I am going to make an explanation as well.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I have asked the Member already to confine himself to reading what he said and I should be grateful if he would do so.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

I do not know why he did not wait, Mr. President. That is what I was about to do. His conscience must be pricking him. Some people now have no conscience, just a shell.

In my debate, Mr. President, I said, and I quote: "The ramp, speaking on my constituency, although there is some criticism of it, it is finished. It can be used. I do not agree with everything about it. Everybody knows that I do not have any say in matters anyway. In any event it is usable and I think in the end it is going to be a good addition for the people of West Bay".

Mr. President, anyone who says that I distanced myself from the ramp is an idiot.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Item 4, Government Business.
Continuation of debate on the Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

CONTINUATION OF THE DEBATE ON THE
THRONE SPEECH

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, in the course of his reply to the Throne Speech, the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council mentioned that Government had received a proposal for the construction of a deep water port in the North Sound. He made it clear that this matter is really in the preliminary stages. He did not say that Executive Council has adopted the proposal, but I gather from what he said is that this matter has been with Council for some time and that Council has received a study, or has encouraged a further study on it that would show the ecological impact of such a project.

In my mind the Island needs a deep water port. The experts may argue about where it should go - whether it should be in the North Sound or in some other area - but there can be no question that this Island needs a deep water port. The locality of the present port is far from suitable. So while I am not today endorsing the North Sound project, I would like to make it clear that I am convinced these Islands need a port that is safe from bad weather and a port that is deep enough to accommodate larger ships. We are trying to cater to the tourist trade and if we are ever to develop the cruise ship business we will need a port where the cruise ships can lie alongside the dock and where passengers can embark comfortably.

Today's commercial cargo has moved into the age of containers. Some of the container ships are large and we could receive transshipment business - and I think the need is quite clear. What surprises me was the reaction of the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council who did not appear to grasp the situation we are now in. While it seems strange that there should be such a divergence of opinion amongst Executive Council Members, it seems ridiculous for the Honourable First Elected Member to make those statements.

We know our constitution contains collective responsibility which means that every Member of Council, whether he agrees with the decision of Council or not, must support in the Legislative Assembly its decisions. This is not to say that Council had taken a decision on the matter of putting a port in the North Sound, but if the public are to have confidence in our Government, they must see Government as a unit. They must see their leaders as working together. In fact our Constitution cannot function because of its delicate balance unless the four Honourable Elected Members agree. So when a major issue is to be dealt with the Members must decide amongst themselves their position, and the position must be made clear to this House and to the public. Although one or two Members may not agree with a decision they, nevertheless, under our Constitution, must support it unless they have been given prior permission of the Governor not to.

The country looks to Executive Council to function as a body and if one Member gets up and announces a dream that he has for his Portfolio, whether it be a $1 million dollar piece of equipment for the Hospital, or a new jet for Cayman Airways, or whatever it is, I think the other Members of Council must give reasonable support although they have a right to declare that they have not formally approved the idea. If our four Elected Members of Council do not stick together, Council decisions will then be the decisions of the Civil Service. There are three Official Members of Executive Council; they are Civil Servants and if even one of the Elected Members agree with the three of them, we then have a Civil Service decision. So it is very important, if we are to maintain the principle of collective responsibility, for the Elected Members of Council to stick together. When they do disagree I think they should discuss it amongst themselves - and I feel the First Elected Member of Council owes Executive Council an apology for his mean behaviour yesterday.

HON. BENSON O EBANKS:

You wait on that.

MR. G HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I brought this matter up first because I was certain there would be some interjection, and I have decided not to be side-tracked by any from the Honourable Member. So I will leave this subject letting him know that I am disappointed in his leadership display yesterday and I trust that we will see no more of this from any Honourable Member of Executive Council.

In your Throne Speech, Mr President, you mention that the unaudited preliminary figures for the 1986 revenue and expenditure accounts indicate a surplus position of $2 million plus. Perhaps it is right that you use the word "indicate" because we know full well that the final results showed there was no surplus.

In a question that was answered in the House during this meeting, we were told by the Honourable First Official Member that the projected surplus that should have been there on the 1st of January, 1987, had fallen short by $1,971,806.00. So when we put forward a budget which estimated that we would have surplus funds at the end of 1987 of $108,237.00, we can see how far wrong we are if we are depending on a surplus which was short by almost $2 million. Then to make it even worse, the Honourable Member, the Financial Secretary, laid on the table of this House the Report of a Finance Committee meeting held on the 18th of December - only a few short days after we had passed the 1987 estimates. That Finance Committee Report showed that it had increased the expenditure for 1987 by $1,896,023.00.

There has also been laid on the table, during this same meeting, the Report of another Finance Committee meeting at which approval was given for an additional expenditure of $106,000.00. So we can see that the little surplus which we would have shown at the end of 1987 of $100,000.00, will be wiped out by the little figure of $106,000.00, and we will go in the red by the $1,896,023.00 additional expenditure approved on the 18th of December as well as the shortfall of the surplus of $1,971,806.00. To use round figures, this means that the true deficit for 1987 will be $4 million - $4 million, and not a surplus of $100,000.00. The way this has been achieved baffles the minds of accountants. (LAUGHTER)

This cover up was very clever, but no one who can make me believe that Government did not know, when we approved the estimates in December, that they needed another $1,896,023.00. They had to know. And I am asking why was the House not told?

Now I can understand that when the budget process started in July or September they may not have had these figures. But certainly on the day when we had the third reading of the Appropriation Bill they had to know. I do not remember the date of that meeting, but it was only a week or two later on the 18th of December when they came back to ask for $1,896,000.00. An examination of that $1,896,000.00 will show that they full well knew; they had to know.

I would like to deal with just one or two items. For example on the 18th of December they asked us to approve $288,530.00 to cover housing rental for overseas officers through the remainder of 1986. So they had to know. In a matter of renting houses for an officer, they would have to have known he would have to pay the rent. Let me say that $288,000.00 was not to pay the rent from the 18th of December onward. That covered money already spent.

They asked us to approve on the 18th of December $165,000.00 to cover additional expenses for retiring officers during 1986. Now everybody knows when a Government officer retires, particularly those who are pensionable. Everybody knows it twelve months or even two years in advance, and this $165,000.00 was not retiring expenses from the 18th to the 31st of December. No one can make me believe that - and this one surprises even the people who put it forward.

Under Head 10 we were asked to approve $182,450.00 to cover expenditure under the following sub-heads, which sums are a combination of charges relative to 1985 that were brought to account in 1986 and excesses arising over budgeting provisions for payments due to fluctuation in exchange rates. So when we approved the estimates in this House in December Government had to know that they would need funds to pay for 1985.

On the matter of Poor Relief, we were asked to approve $57,000.00 to meet expenditure incurred during 1985. Government had to know about these figures and I question why they were not included in the Estimates?

I will deal with just one more item - Head 16. We were asked to approve $72,000.00 to cover additional costs to fill the absence of nursing staff on vacation. That was not an amount of money needed from the 18th to the 31st of December. That money for vacation would cover the entire medical staff if they all went on vacation for two weeks.

So the Throne Speech, which I believe was written after the 18th of December, should not restate the projected position set out in the estimates which were prepared earlier in 1986, but should tell us that this surplus position of $2.9 million at the end of 1986 could not, in fact, exist if these monies had been spent and if these monies were included in the Estimates for 1987, 1987 would have to be projected with a deficit because we are short of the surplus and we are adding $2 million expenditure at the beginning of the year.

The matter of transferring surplus at the beginning of the year also seems ridiculous. Not only was there no surplus to transfer, as I have shown, but the 1987 estimates includes a loan figure of roughly $8 million. So what are we doing? With that $8 million which we are borrowing, we are transferring $2 million to reserve account. Going out to borrow money at 18 per cent and putting it on fixed deposit at 5 per cent! I do not know exactly what the rates are, but one can bet that the loan rate exceeds the deposit rate. So if we had not done that little bit of cosmetic surgery - putting $2 million on reserve - we would not have had to borrow $8 million and we could have gotten along with $6 million.

I do not want to say that the estimates are phony, but there has been a very clever presentation - a very clever manipulation of the figures - and I guess that on paper you can show anything. In reality the 1987 estimates are a dud.

These two lines in the Throne Speech could be used as my text if I wanted to speak for the entire day because the more I look at it the clearer it becomes that Government had no surplus to bring forward, it had no surplus to put on reserves and it will have no surplus in 1987. I believe there is even a little part that mentions building up reserves. I seem to have read that. Yes, in January 1987 $2 million of the 1986 surplus was transferred to general reserve, increasing the total to $7 million. But even that - is that anything to boast about? If you look at these statements you will see that that reserve is much below reserves in the past.

Now if we are going to make ourselves look good by claiming that we have a reserve, we should do what the past administration did - put money in reserve from the surplus revenue during the year when one has the cash - the physical cash - but do not manipulate the accounting procedure by attempting to put money in reserves from a surplus which does not exist and from funds that you are borrowing. The day of reckoning will come for this type of accounting.

In the Throne Speech it was mentioned that it was hoped to introduce in 1987 amendments to the Motor Vehicle (Third Party) Insurance Law. This concerns me. If this Law is being examined by the people who sell the third party insurance what are they going to recommend? They would be foolish if they did not recommend compulsory third party insurance so they have captive buyers for their product and so that they can increase the rates every year. Now I do not know if any of the Executive Council Members are involved in any companies that sell third party insurance, but I would trust that any amendments to this Law will not come to the House with third party insurance being compulsory. We will have to await the development. I believe in insurance. I do not think it should ever be compulsory. I believe a man should insure or pay the far higher price of not having insurance. But I do not think Government should tell the people to buy health insurance or life insurance or any other form of insurance. They should encourage people to buy insurance and for those who do not buy it - well they pay a far higher price than those who do. So I will be watching out for these amendments when they come.

You mention in the Speech that a Bill to regulate the registry of shipping will be presented at this meeting. I will not anticipate the Bill, but give notice that I will not miss my opportunity to debate it if it arrives on the floor because I believe that what is being brought forward now is the same Bill that was withdrawn from this House after it had been put on the agenda at a previous meeting. I can only say that the circumstances which caused the withdrawal of that Bill have not changed and I believe that if we seek to put restrictions on our registry we are playing into the hands of the British Government who has never wanted this Island to have a decent shipping registry.

The British Government, I believe, is a great believer in the untied doctrine that says that for a ship to be registered it must have an economic link with the country and must either be owned by the nationals of the Cayman Islands or trade directly with it. I think this is a manoeuvre by the British Government to get us to do what they have always wanted. However, I better save a little for my debate on that Bill.

I must support the First Elected Member for West Bay, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council, in his stating that the aim of Government this year will be to increase the immunisation programme for the children in these Islands. I may also add that Rotary International this year has taken on as its major project that of wiping out polio world-wide. All the Rotary Clubs in the countries around the world will be raising funds and assisting in the work to vaccinate every child in the world against Polio. It is good that our Government, for many years, has engaged in a programme of providing free vaccines for young children and any mother who does not take her child to receive these shots is very stupid indeed. I support this programme because in medicine, prevention is better than the $1 million diagnostic machine that we are hearing so much about.

I would also like to congratulate the Rotary Club on its gift to Government of the mobile dental unit which will add so much to the health of the children of these Islands and will bring preventative medicine to the schools throughout the districts. I can only say that I am happy that the attitude of Government has changed. I remember in the old days when the now Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council ran the Government, it refused a gift from the Rotary Club of an automobile for police patrol. At that time the Police Force only had two bicycles and two stick-horses - and the gift was refused, but I am glad that the attitude of Government has changed over the years and that it now accepts the role played by the service clubs. Not because I have been a Rotarian for more than 20 years do I say this. I am really happy and proud to have been associated with the Rotary Club and also with the Lions Club because they seem to get more contributions from me than the Rotary Club. They have both done an excellent job in these Islands and I trust that their relationship with Government will continue. I am not ignoring the other clubs. They too have done their part - the Kiwanis, the Leos Club and all the other service organisations.

I support the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council - you know sometimes he does make sense - in mentioning that a consultancy will be undertaken to determine the adequacy of the physical facilities at the Hospital.

There are some people who curse the Hospital. There are some people who curse the doctors and staff, but it is my opinion that there is no better small Hospital than the one we have. It is manned by a team of doctors that any country would be proud of. The nurses are well trained. All the other ancillary staff of the laboratory and X-ray are all qualified people and I believe they are doing a good job. Of course there will always be the odd patient who will die. There will always be the odd patient who gets bad treatment and in an organisation like that we will always have the odd bad professional. But on a whole I think the Cayman Islands can be proud of its Hospital.

The Honourable First Elected Member tried to make us believe that if some moth-eaten plan that he had left there had been implemented, all the aches and pains of the people in this country would have been cured. Nothing could be further from the truth. He knows full well the reasons why that plan was scrapped - like so many of his other wild dreams.

The physical building of the Hospital has come in for a lot of criticism. Additions to it, the Honourable Member said, had been done in a helter-skelter manner with the kitchen being up in South Sound and heavens only knows where some parts of it were, but these are not honest criticisms. Everybody knows the Hospital was built years ago. I believe it was in the 1950's - at the time when Government should have been given credit for undertaking the construction of such a Hospital. At that time we only had one little house with two or three bedrooms and it was called a Hospital. At that time Government could not afford the consultants it can now afford. At that time the technology for hospital management and hospital construction was not available, even if the Government could afford it. And so the Government simply built a Hospital the way it built a town hall or the library and it served its purpose. It has been added to. It has been renovated and I do not think the major renovations made during the years 1972 to 1976 were anything to boast about either. The plain fact is that the construction people are working with what they have. Ask any carpenter and he will tell you that he would rather build a new house from scratch than have to renovate or change the use of an existing building.

So we have come a long way and

I think it is only right that Government decides that we do need a new Hospital. I do not think we can blame any of the Honourable Members or governments of the past for what we have. I think we should be thankful for what we have. And I believe that the Hospital will continue to serve us for some time until Government can find the funds. If our economy continues to stagnate as it has done since 1984, the year will probably be 3000 before we can build a new facility. But if we have a wind of change that will bring back some of the glorious days of the past, we will see funds available to build a new Hospital.

We are now talking about building a Community College. This is a good idea. But do you know that the last administration built the Middle School from scratch at a cost of over $2 million from some of the pocket money in recurrent revenue. There was not a single penny of borrowed money - a $2 million project - and while we were building the school the Honourable Member who is now in charge of schools was working to get a resolution through the Parent Teachers Association, along with Mrs. Mary Lawrence who was the President, to befuddle, to obstruct and to criticize the Honourable Member for doing this job. But I am glad that since he has been reinstated and has been brought back in from pasture that he recognises the value of the Middle School and that he understands that the High School would have been unmanageable today if we had not built the Middle School, despite all the nasty letters and the criticisms from the newspaper that were levelled at the Honourable Member during that age.

The High School, Middle School and the George Town Primary School are now crowded to capacity and it is time that Government take this surplus, which it claims is going into reserves, to build one of these schools. You see, if they had that $2 million in cash, in good Cayman Island dollars, they could hand it to Arch and Godfrey for them to build the School. But if it is only a maze of statistics in an accounting programme, it cannot be done.

We are told about the change to the G.C.S.E. examinations which will occur. I recall that last year I brought a question enquiring whether Government was going to cut out certain exams and whether it would only enter children that had a 100 per cent chance of passing. I was told by the Honourable Member that he had not given such instructions. My information was that teachers had been instructed to screen the pupils in December last year and only enter for examination those whom they felt certain would pass. This was very different from the directive they had in the past which allowed any child who had a reasonable chance of passing to enter.

When I discussed this with some of my supporters they said that I should leave them alone and not question it. They said that I should let the public deal with them, but I said that the development of education is at stake in this country and I must pose the question, even though I knew what the answer would be. Nevertheless, I am glad to see that even before the day the question was answered the matter was settled and the Teachers went along to select, in December, those children who had a reasonable chance. That was the second time, that I remember, that the fate of our educational programme was in jeopardy. The other time was in April, 1976 when the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council signed the agreement for the Caribbean examinations. I do not want to get into past history, but it would have been a mistake if the new Government, following 1976, had not given notice that we would not do the Caribbean examinations. That is a subject on which I could talk, but I do not want to bring out my Gleaner and other newspaper clippings at that time.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I wonder, if the Member has disposed of one subject, would it be convenient for him to break now? I am informed that arrangements have been made for a photograph of Members I just want to check with the Clerk. Is it at 11.15 or has no time been fixed for the photograph? Yes, it has been fixed for 11.15. So if Members would be kind enough to go outside now, we could have the photographs taken. Perhaps we could make the suspension about twenty minutes instead of the usual fifteen this morning.

Continuation of Debate on the Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, to finish up with the Portfolio of Health, Education and Social Services I would like to touch on a comment made yesterday by the Elected Member for East End when he read from the Throne Speech that, "Sports will be developed during 1987 in such a way that the whole Caymanian community benefits from a comprehensive programme.", and his comment that it is proving very difficult to get the playing-field completed that he wanted in East End.

I would like to add that this is also true of Bodden Town. In Bodden Town we started to develop a complex. In one year we bought the land. Afterwards we built a playing-field and finally a Civic Center, and the Civic Center is built in such a way that it contains changing rooms that can be locked off from the rest of the building. There is also sufficient land to put in a large playing-field.

Just after the November, 1984 elections the First Elected Member for West Bay went to Bodden Town and saw the need to fill this parcel of land to complete the playing-field. But there seemed to have been no money to do the work. When they were preparing the estimates at the end of 1985, I was again asked which project I would like to see in Bodden Town and I said, "Simply finish the playing-field.". I have heard no more about it.

Again, at the end of last year I received further communication from Government asking which project I would like to see - and again we have not seen any work done. I am used to this kind of treatment from the First Elected Member for West Bay.

I remember on the 13th of December, 1972 my colleague from Bodden Town and I were successful in getting a motion passed through this Assembly for a certain project in the Bodden Town district. Very shortly after that Finance Committee voted the money, but over the next four years the project was never completed. He made it clear on more than one occasion that he is interested in projects in his district, and we have found that projects for George Town and West Bay are completed quite easily. And this is bad because, whether it is so or not, it appears that the Executive Council Members, the majority of whom are from George Town and West Bay, are simply doing projects in their own districts for whatever reason they may have. The result has been that the rest of the Island has been sadly neglected - Cayman Brac, East End, Bodden Town, and occasionally they will throw a few crumbs at North Side. This is bad Government. Members of Executive Council should look at priorities Island-wide and should not have parochial mentalities which deal simply with their own backyards. We want government by the people, for all of the people. So when the Honourable Member enquires, as he will at the end of 1987, as to what project I would like to see, my answer will simply be the same as in 1984, 1985 and 1986.

We have been told about the contract given to a company to supply water to George Town, to the Water Authority, and I am concerned about the liberal terms of that franchise. We were told by answers given, that during 1986 Government will collect a substantial sum of money - I believe it was $191,000.00 - from the Cayman Water Company. This has been possible only because the Government of the day, when that franchise was given, required the company to pay a small royalty for their right to supply water. This resulted in Government receiving revenue and not having to tax everybody to raise the money. And here we see Government giving away to Caribbean Utilities Co Ltd (CUC) a golden egg. If this were all, one should not be too concerned, but they have given a guarantee to the company, which is either owned or affiliated with CUC, to purchase from them a fixed amount of water at a fixed price. Whether we say it or not, this company will be in direct competition with the Cayman Water Company which is a franchised company paying a royalty. It is unfair competition and should not have been allowed by Government.

Disgust has been expressed by certain Members about the barriers erected by CUC along the road. I cannot see how they could have taken such action with no regard to the safety of individuals. These poles that are well reinforced will mean certain death to any driver who comes in contact with them. They should be removed immediately.

The Honourable Member responsible for Civil Aviation seems satisfied that we now have competition on the Miami route. In fact, the comments in the Throne Speech would lead one to believe that we have a very good deal. It reads: "As a result of negotiations on the Miami/Cayman Route Moratorium, the National Airline has been granted rights to operate scheduled services to three new points in the United States in addition to Miami and Houston, and concessions on charter operations."

This certainly should read: "We have been given a bad deal.". The lucrative Cayman/Miami route has been taken and divided amongst the large American carriers to the detriment of our little airline. No amount of other points can ever compensate for the revenue that will be lost as a result of this change.

Government lost a wonderful opportunity when they were negotiating the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty. At that time I am certain that the United States' Government and its many bodies, the FAA, would have given any small concession that we asked for. If, at that time, the Government negotiators, instead of simply smiling and waiting for the handshake at the end, had asked the United States' Government to extend the moratorium, we would have gotten it and, in fact, I believe they would have even taken the other airline off of it - they were so anxious to conclude the Treaty. But we were let down by our negotiators and our birthright sold without even receiving the mess of pottage.

What amazes me is how anxious Government has been to get rid of the Miami route or to retain only a portion of it because the moratorium which they recently scrapped would have extended into this year and would have at least taken us past this year's tourist season. What do we get in return for it? Well, this is what we get. We lose the traffic that we built up on the Miami route to Eastern Airlines. We lose the traffic that we paid with our advertising dollars and our goodwill promotions. We lose that, and what do we get? We get the right simply to operate from another city. But if we had been given ten cities, it could not compensate for the loss or competition on the Miami route.

Government knows how difficult it is to open up flights to a new city in the United States. It knows the difficulties of opening up the Houston route and making it profitable. In fact I understand that quite recently an attempt to start flights into Tampa had to be curtailed because it was not profitable. So we gave away the only revenue earner that the airline had and we have gotten nothing in return. What are we going to do with these three new points? What cities shall we select? How many travellers from those cities will be interested in a direct flight to Cayman? Will it be Birmingham, Alabama or Detroit? Will it be Sumter, South Carolina? How much money is the airline going to spend to develop these new routes? The sad fact is that we gave away the Miami route and we got nothing in return.

We signed the Treaty with the United States. They got what they wanted - and we got a handshake. We do not need new points into the United States because all the major airlines have connecting flights into Miami. What are we going to do with flights into Norfolk, Virginia? Miami is probably the closest point to the Cayman Islands and our connection to the United States should be through Miami International Airport.

The Government negotiators failed us. They did not try. For example, Eastern Airlines should have been told that it can fly into Cayman, but that its flights would have to terminate in Cayman Brac. The Gerrard Smith Airport in Cayman Brac is of an international standard and the flights should have been directed there. If this had been done, Eastern Airlines would not be flying to Cayman today because they are not interested in a point that is not already developed. They want our airport that has already been developed by the money spent by this Government. They want to pick it up for free. They are not interested in the Cayman Islands.

Eastern Airlines, Delta and Pan Am have shown repeatedly that they are not interested in the Caribbean because the minute business gets bad and the country needs them they pull out. Delta Airline crippled the Jamaican tourist business when it shut down its United States/Montego Bay flights at a time when Jamaica needed it. Eastern Airlines would do the same to us that BWIA did, or that Lacs did for that matter, if it suits them to pull out. So do not believe Eastern Airlines is coming here for our pleasure. They are coming here because they know - they are airline people who know - they can make money on this route. They will not have the initial start-up cost that Cayman Airways will have if it tries to penetrate a new market.

We have been let down by Government. I can only say that today Cayman Airways is in a worse shape than it has ever been and all the major decisions of Government and the Board have been to the detriment of the airline - the loss of the Miami route and the addition of duty on airfreight. I could go on and on, but we are not supposed to mention Cayman Airways anymore. We are only supposed to pay for it.

The Airline has been criticized for the purchase of the Shorts aircraft for the Cayman Brac route, but I cannot join in that criticism because I know that since the demise of the DC-3 it has been very difficult to find a suitable aircraft for the traffic between here and the Lesser Islands - difficult in that most of the small planes are not equipped for comfortable travel. Most of them are like the Trilander with no lavatories, no kitchen, no aisles and no space to work around, and it is a very difficult job. I think the airline did well to find the plane that it found. I will not get into the matter of crew training and all that, but overall Cayman Airways has suffered a lot in the last two years, as was borne out by the accounts that were tabled here recently.

The Throne Speech recognises the shortage of jobs in Cayman Brac and this has resulted in families moving to Grand Cayman to seek employment. Cayman Brac is a problem area and everyone but Government recognises it.

On the day that I mentioned a while ago, the 13th of December, 1972, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and I also moved a motion in the House asking Government to set up a Committee to look into the economy of Cayman Brac. The Motion was rejected and we were criticized by the representatives of Cayman Brac at the time because it was said that we were meddling in their constituency. And so for four years Government did nothing to help Cayman Brac and conditions got worse. People left - well, they were leaving for two reasons. One was to put their children in the High School in Grand Cayman and the other because there were no jobs.

Government had before it an application from Cayman Energy for the transfer of oil and it would not even look at it. Time went on and after the elections in 1976, the new Government, in early 1977, signed an agreement for Cayman Energy to transfer oil off the coast of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

During the years that followed, Government received revenue. In one year the royalties exceeded $1 million, but this is not where the benefits came. The benefits came directly to Cayman Brac. At one time 15 per cent of the working population was employed at Cayman Energy. Of course other money was spent, but when I say employed, the men were making good salaries. Some of the mooring captains were making $3,000 to $4,000 a month - men who had before gone to sea for much less. But because of the construction of the loop-terminal and because of the fall in demand for oil, the transfers have ceased. And so Cayman Brac faces a new crisis and I hear of no steps to be taken by Government to counter the fall in jobs. Government lost the wonderful opportunity of having Eastern Airlines fly to Cayman Brac. They lost their bargaining power in the Legal Assistance Treaty, and today Cayman Brac suffers.

Over the last 20 years I have probably visited Cayman Brac more than any other Caymanian and I know that the words spoken by the Honourable First Elected Member for Cayman Brac are just as true today as they were when he spoke them at the Budget meeting. Cayman Brac is in bad straits and it needs development.

I am proud that over the eight years, from 1976 to 1984, Government spent a large amount of capital in Cayman Brac. In fact it averaged about 25 per cent of the capital expenditure over the eight years in building the dock which they need, making the airport to accommodate jets, building the roads and schools and a new Public Works' compound. But today Cayman Brac still needs a big injection of capital. I suffer and sympathise with the two Elected Members for Cayman Brac because the mentality of Government and the establishment has always been that these Islands end at Crewe Road, and that no money must go to Cayman Brac, Bodden Town or East End, and unless we change our way of thinking districts such as Cayman Brac, Bodden Town and East End will always suffer.

I would like to turn now to my many pages of notes that I made, and would certainly like to continue to use my four hours, but I have promised the First Elected Member for Bodden Town to end my speech at 12:30 so that he can start his.

The Honourable Member for Communications, Works and District Administration has spoken of the need for a new Post Office. This is an item that should have priority. The previous Government completed a study done by an expert of the Universal Postal Union which projected the needs for the mail services over the next 20 years. The Public Works Department did a preliminary costing and we were thinking of a building to be sited on the old Public Works compound with the bottom floor being used for the handling of mail, the second floor for offices and the remaining three floors for car parking. So the proposal that Government received from the private sector some time ago, I think since the last election, is not anything new. And I am glad that the Honourable Member recognises this need and that he will push forward to get this Post Office.

Amongst other things, it was envisioned that the new Post Office should have 10,000 postal boxes that could be rented within a few years and bring substantial income. One cannot get a large outside postal box for love or money. The staff is crowded and the mail is increasing.

What I would have liked to have seen was the Post Office built and the Museum put in the old Post Office building. I think it would be a mistake to put the Museum at the Harquail Center. The Museum should be in a locality where every tourist who comes off the cruise ship could pay $1 or $2 to visit the Museum. If we can put it in the center of George Town in the old Post Office building it will be the ideal locality. This could house many artifacts, but if we do have large ones such as the first buggy that travelled in Cayman and big items like this, they can do that at the Harquail Center. The smaller artifacts should be in the heart of George Town where the tourist can pay to visit it so that it can earn revenue for the country.

I do not think it is wise to put the Museum in the old Court House. I remember hearing of a story during World War 2 when one of the large rubber warehouses burnt down. It was a disaster for the allied forces. However, one of the newspapers the next day printed in black headlines, "Rubber Warehouse Burned, But Contents Insured". It is no use having irreplaceable artifacts insured if you lose them because money can never replace them. If the Museum is housed in the old Court House for a short time - I hope it will only be a temporary home - I trust that they will be moved to the permanent home in the old Post Office and not down to the Harquail Center where they would be inaccessible. So please do not let the Honourable First Elected Member for West Bay have his wish in this matter.

Another good locality for the Museum would be that place in the center of town that I understand is to be used for a Farmers Market. I support the building of the Farmers Market, but there is so much other land available. There is the old compound at the junction of Smith Road, there is the place where the present offices are housed. We could find many different spots and the area in the center of town should really be for the Museum. Is it just a matter of expediency why Government is taking the easy course because the old Market could be easily converted at very low costs into a Farmers Market. Government must look at the overall picture and not bend to expediency, but try to do a job that will be for the benefit of everyone concerned.

Finally, I would like to say that while Government seems to spend more effort on conservation and more money on propaganda, it fails when it comes to looking at important matters, and it is able to get away with this because the public seems to accept it. For example, the conservationists who scream about beautification allow CUC to dispoil the view along the road side and never raise a voice against it.

The Honourable Member from West Bay is reminding me, Sir, that it was his Government who destroyed the Princess Royal Park to put up this building (LAUGHTER) and I am amazed that he would bring this to my attention. I was willing to forget it. (LAUGHTER).

Mr. President, I know we have a long Agenda. There are many Bills to come. There are many Private Members' Motions tomorrow and I will keep my word to the Member to let him start his debate. I thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Bodden Town.

The First Elected Member for

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, it is a great opportunity for me to have finally been able to sit out the Honourable First Elected Member for West Bay. I still wonder why he allowed this to happen, but I think I can sympathize with him because his administration has not been able to do anything since 1984 and there is nothing much planned for 1987; thus, the brevity of your Speech.

This is the fifteen consecutive Throne Speech that God has blessed me to be able to debate and I must say that this one lasted about the length of drinking a cup of coffee. So it goes to show that this administration has not been able to accomplish very much. Although much may not have been accomplished, at least the speeches could have been longer.

Your speech, Mr. President, could not be termed as anything that would give hope to our people. Nothing was contained in the message for our people to grasp. Nothing in your Speech enlightened the youngest school boy in the street.

I am reminded and will remind the people of this country of a very old poem in the school books when I was a very young boy. This poem was about a certain sailing ship that was standing by a sinking ship at night. I think that that ship was probably captained by an ancestor of some of the famous people in Cayman today. However, it went on to say, "Take heart. Hold on. The three bells shall stand by."

I am reminding the people of the Cayman Islands today that, although your Speech was very short because you could boast of nothing that this administration had done, they can take heart and hold on because the Unity team is standing by for 1988.

I see from the Throne Speech that this administration has heeded well the words of the Financial Secretary, the First Official Member, in his delivery of the Budget Address when he said that it would be wise not to undertake any ambitious capital projects for 1987. I can well see why this has not been done, but with the present elected administration I do not think the country or ourselves will ever have to worry about any ambitious undertakings being started.

Our people are looking forward to the days that they enjoyed before. I think by this time the people of this country have well seen the empty promises that were given to them - promises that have not been fulfilled. Promises that were strictly election garbage, and it is a shame that the people of this country fell for it.

To enjoy the way of life that the people of this country have become accustomed to, we need the infusion of money from abroad. We need to provide the atmosphere to attract that investment money and it matters not whether that investment money comes from New York, Georgia, Texas or any part of the world so long as it is not the drug money. We need the infusion of foreign capital to help us build this country.

There is one Honourable Member of the present Executive Council who, in his electioneering, had much to say about money coming into the country from abroad. But I am very happy to learn that he has traded in his traditional head gown for a ten gallon Texas hat.

We must have this infusion of money. We have to import from abroad. We do not export anything other than geniuses who go abroad to shake hands. How are we going to import the necessities of life if the business community in the Cayman Islands is not of a vibrant nature? We will stagnate as we did in the years 1972 to 1976 - the years which few people in this country will ever forget, but I am sure they will also couple them closely with the years 1985 to 1988 after we are through with this Elected Executive Council.

We must no longer tamper with the faucets. If we do we will find that we close them off and no money will be available to develop this country. We must get away from the third world insular, socialistic minded policies of some of the people of this administration. There is no room in this century for some of the idea that they promulgate to this House.

Mr. President, I would have thought that in your Throne Speech you would have chosen some other item other than the Police Report to open your state of the union message to our people because I am sure that this Report must have been as disheartening to you as it was to me when I saw it. You did preface it by saying that crime generally continues to increase. Yes, unfortunately that is correct, Mr. President. That is correct although your present Elected Executive Council promised the people of this country a utopia in their electioneering - a garden Eden from which nothing but pure sweet honey would flow. What do we have instead? We have a crime ridden community thrust upon us - much worse than it ever was anytime in our history.

When one reads the Royal Cayman Islands Report for 1986 and compares it with 1984 Report, one can see the damage that was done by empty headed politicians in this country in the last election when, with their political cronies, they grasped at everything they could to tear down the reputation of anybody in this country - those cronies whom they have now supplied with some of the cushy jobs in Government. But I will give them notice and I will give their cronies notice that, God be willing, in 1988 they can pack their bags before the election. The cronies will not survive into 1989. It is because of that and this Report that I speak in this House today very inflamed.

The drug situation has been with us and will continue to be with us but I am certain there is no man in the Cayman Islands who looks at this situation anymore seriously than I do, and have done in my entire stay in the Cayman Islands.

When we had a Chief of Police who was doing something toward curbing some of these things, you, Mr. President, allowed yourself to be subjected to the abuse of the Elected Members and removed that man as no Police Chief has been removed in disgrace in our history. A man who, in my opinion, had done a lot for this country. You have allowed our Laws to be changed to where they have very little teeth anymore.

I can go along with the rehabilitation schemes and I will speak about them because I think the time has come that we have to make a major thrust in that area; but I do not believe in freeing a criminal just because on an election platform I may say, "Vote for me. Vote for the group and we will release your brothers and sisters out of bondage.". That is were are country began to go down hill.

If we had made a move that the Courts acted upon a couple of years ago and inflicted the sentence that was imposed under our judicial system at that time, we would not today have a country that is so crime ridden; and if you will remember, you will remember my personal stand on that action on that at the time. I feel as strong about it today as I felt then. Why did we not have enough guts to carry out the sentences which our Courts had imposed? Why would we want to let Jamaica carry it out for us? If crime is committed in this country we should deal with it as people who are fit to stand up and govern a country. We should not have to hide behind the coat-tails of someone else.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think we have probably come to the time when we normally break for lunch. Is that is a convenient moment for the Member to pause.?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I wish I had 24 hours to debate this, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Very well. I shall suspend proceedings until approximately 2:15.

AT 12:46 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:19 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
Continuation of the Debate on the Throne Speech. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, I would like the permission of the House at this time to deal with another important matter which I think is of grave national importance rather than to deal with the Debate on the Throne Speech.

During the lunch break it came to my attention that instead of having the peanut butter sandwich tourist that we have been getting, we have decided to bring to our shores a boat load of cream-puffs. I understand that we have a large ship in the harbour with at least 750 admitted homosexuals that have chartered this vessel.

Before I go further, Mr. President, and hear there is nothing that can be done about this, I would like to remind this House that in 1937, I think it was, a bunch of Jewish immigrants who were very anxious to get away from Nazi Germany chartered a Swedish ship by the name of "Gripsome", trying to find refuge in a foreign land. They travelled quite a bit of the globe in search of a sanctuary and although many of the western countries were sympathetic with them they were not allowed to land in any of these countries. So if I am told that nothing can be done, I will refer you back to that story. Something, I think, can be done and the precedent has been set.

We have today in our midst at least 750 men walking around town holding hands with each other and kissing each other in public. It disturbs our people, and so it should disturb us. Homosexuality has been with us like the poor ever since the creation of time, but there is no reason for us, in a small community, to import it in such volume. I understand that this ship has something to do with Bermuda. Is it another incidence of the Bermuda Triangle - or what is it?

It is also reported and it is probably true that many of these people may be suffering from Aids, or if not, they are probably Aids' carriers. God, in his wisdom, may have seen fit to inflict mankind with this dangerous disease to see if the ills of homosexuality cannot be cured, but I feel that our people do not support this move. Apparently, it was known in advance by Government that this ship had this mottly crew aboard.

Consider the consequences of this, Mr. President. People are eating and drinking in the restaurants and everyone well knows that our restaurants are not that well equipped with hot water supplies and so forth. We do not have the proper sanitation code to enforce things in our restaurants, and yet we are allowing these people ashore on our land. We are taking this risk. Why are we taking it? Certainly it must not be for the few dollars that these people would spend ashore. I understand that Jamaica, which is in much worse financial conditions than the Cayman Islands, has refused entry to this ship and if they could do it, why did we give them special permission to come to the Cayman Islands? This is certainly not the type of tourism that we want.

I say, Mr. President, that if you or your Cabinet allowed it you should all be dismissed at this point, or you should resign. I would ask at this point - and I am willing to give up the floor on this important debate on the Throne Speech - that you call your Cabinet in session for fifteen minutes so that we can see whether we have the leadership in this country that can deal with the situation, and have the police go out to round these people up and have them put back on board the ship as we did with the refugees in the past, and tell them to leave our shores. I leave it to you for fifteen minutes and I hope this House will support me on this.

MOTION

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I would like to move under Standing Order 24(9)(x) that the House resolve itself into a Committee to deal with this and perhaps the Committee will suggest that the Cabinet issue an Order.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I second the motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I propose to suspend proceedings for about five minutes because I am afraid I need to study Erskine May to determine whether it would be proper and accord with the Standing Order that the Motion be debated. I am afraid I had not been given notice that you intended to raise the point and it is not one in which I have briefed myself nor one with which I am familiar.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

But Mr. President, I do not think this House should waste time in debating this Motion. If it were that I would not be prepared to yield the floor because I have the right to debate the Throne Speech. This is something of grave national importance and I think you should give us five, 10 or 15 minutes recess and call your Cabinet together and come back out and tell whether or not something is going to be done. To debate this Motion is foolish at this point because by the time everyone has debated it the ship will have been long gone and nothing will have been done.

MR. PRESIDENT:
the Motion.....

But with respect, you seconded

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

... a Motion, thinking that you as President of this House, as the leader of Government business, would deem this of national importance and suspend for a few minutes to discuss it with your Cabinet.

MR. PRESIDENT:

What I propose to do is what I said - to suspend proceedings for five minutes while I study Erskine May.

AT 2:28 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:34 P.M.

RULING ON MOTION

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

My understanding, having read Erskine May, is that the Standing Order is certainly intended to refer to a procedural motion made immediately after the second reading of a Bill - that the House resolve itself into a Committee - and that it is not intended to mean at large that at any time during any stage of any proceedings, any Member can get up and move without notice that the House resolve itself into Committee to discuss any subject at all. So the First Elected Member for Bodden Town may continue speaking in the debate.

CONTINUATION OF DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, in other words you are telling me that you - and you can throw me out of the House today for this one - as the reputed leader of our country, are not prepared to suspend this House for 15 minutes and stand behind a procedural technicality in our Standing Orders to support your view than to do something that may be beneficial to the young people, in particular, of our community. It is not going to affect me personally. I am 56 years old and have been set in my ways a long time, so I am not going to change now. I love the women, but, Mr. President, you do not view this in the way that so many thousands of Caymanians who know about this today do, and you will not try to take action.

We do not need this type of tourism. We do not need that brought to our shores in volume the way it has been done. Having had notice of this and yet allowing it to happen, I say shame on you and your Cabinet. If you are willing to subject our people to this, Mr. President, with all due respect that I have for the Chair, I must tell you that you do not have the goodwill of Caymanians at heart. I am only sorry that this evening you do not have a reservation on that ship.

This is a dark day for Cayman and I am going to have another shot at it when I get to tourism, but before that I am going to put many shots across this building. I am going back, Mr. President, to the annual Police Report of 1986. I am going back to review that garden of Eden, that utopia, that the Honourable First and Third Elected Members of Executive Council, in particular, promised our people.

The Police Report on page four says that it will become necessary to revert to overseas recruitment if the establishment is to be kept to a strength. I object strenuously as a nationalist to this, Mr. President. I am of the opinion that per capita we have as many honest police as any other country. We have as many capable police as any other country.

Mr. President, maybe you should get down with your Cabinet because I think they are debating whether they should do something about the Aids ship or not.

Mr. President, I believe that we should do as the Unity Team Government did some years ago. We realised that the police had an onerous job. We realised that it was difficult to recruit and that the advancement was not rapid, and we created a bit of a super scale up to the Inspector ranks. Maybe the time has come again to do that if we are going to attract the young people in the community into Police Force. If we were to pay them more money, give them good organised training and some of the benefits that the expatriate officers get - yes, if we do these things, Mr. President, we can change this Report and we can have young people who would be interested in joining the Police Force.

I know that times have changed. I know that what was said of the Caymanians of old - that they sailed the wooden ships with iron men - may not be said of young Caymanians today. That may have changed, but I do not believe that they have changed so much that within the last few years there has been such deterioration to the point that we cannot get suitable youth to fill the positions in our country. I know we are going through the ravages of dope, and thanks to you and your Cabinet, maybe ravages of Aids in a few years. But, Mr. President, we can build a Police Force if we take an interest in the youth.

Dealing with this utopia - on page five - in 1986 the overall number of crimes known to the Police was 2,668 which was 717 more than the 1985 figure of 1,951. We go on to page 10 of the Report, and I am going to compare that to the 1984 Report in just a minute. I think this will show the country where the problems lie with regard to the Police.

During the Unity Team administration we took the view that the Police Force was like the school and medical systems - they are a community problem. One does not look for income from them, but the necessary money is provided to do the jobs that need doing. This was our policy for the eight years that we were in the administration.

In 1984 the country spent on the Police Force $3,718,639.00. For the same period it took in as income in the different areas that can be traced back to Police Force, $1,089,483.24, or, Mr. President, about 27 per cent of the money spent on the Police Force came back into the Treasury.

In the year 1985 we see only $3,954,612.00 spent on the Police Force and we see $1,280,334.70 coming back in. In 1986 we spent $3,980,722.00 and got an income of $2,470,202.44. In other words we are getting back about 66.66 per cent on every dollar that was spent. It is being looked at now as a revenue earner and not as a law enforcement agency of the country. The police are not being provided with the equipment and tools that they need to do the job, and our young people are not being given the incentive to join the Police Force.

MOTION

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, on a Point of Order Sir, could I draw your attention to Standing Order 12(1) and maybe we could get the matter of national importance dealt with under that because I believe that the Executive Council Members seem to be talking alot about it, so.....

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:
second that Motion.

Mr. President, I would like to

MR. PRESIDENT:

My understanding of Standing Order 12(1) is either the Motion has to be made at the end of questions or to be made by a Member of the Government.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: questions Sir.

But we have disposed of

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:
questions.

Yes, Sir, we have finished the

MR. PRESIDENT:

No, no, but it has to be made immediately after the end of questions. That would be my interpretation or that it has to be made by a Member of the Government. If a Member of the Government wishes to move such a Motion, then that will of course be in order, but I don't think that it is moveable by a private Member.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, what about Standing Order 12(2)(a) - the exceptions.

MOTION FOR ADJOURNMENT

CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I would like to move the adjournment of this House under Standing Order 12(1). Sir, to discuss this matter of national importance under Section 12 (1).

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: It might not need a seconder, but if it does I will second it.

MR. PRESIDENT: I do not think a seconder is needed.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I know my Standing Orders well enough to know that it is not needed, Sir, but I just wanted to voice my support.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well it may save time.... the Honourable Member is moving the adjournment of the House for how long?

CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I would suggest 15 minutes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Very well. The question then is the House will now adjourn for 15 minutes. Does any Member wish to speak? Those in favour please say aye. Against, No. I think the ayes have it.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. AT 2:47 P.M. THE HOUSE ADJOURNED FOR FIFTEEN MINUTES

AT 3:12 P.M. THE HOUSE RECONVENED

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated.
I think perhaps I should inform the House that the Honourable Member concerned will be making a statement about this matter tomorrow morning at the appropriate time in accordance with the provisions of Standing Orders and the Order Paper, but I think that Members may wish to know meanwhile that arrangements have been made for the ship to leave as soon as possible and for the police to be alerted meanwhile to prevent any unseemly behaviour.

The Debate can now continue.
The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

CONTINUATION OF THE DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, in the past the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council and myself may have had some political differences. We will probably have some again. I have always respected him very much as a gentleman. Today I wish to tell him how much I respect him as a man because, Mr. President, if he had not made the move that he did nothing would have been done at all about this matter. So I thank him from the bottom of my heart.

Before I go on much further, Mr. President, I would like to alert the House that as tomorrow we are dealing with Motions and since this is the winding up of the Throne Speech and I have lost quite a bit of my allotted time, I would hope Members would grant me at least an additional hour or one hour and a half this evening to finish my debate on the Throne Speech. I hope I will not be boycotted on that or that some Standing Order that does not exist will be used against me.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Perhaps in fairness to the Member I should just say that none of the time we have suspended for this afternoon is counted against his four hours, so he had not used very much speaking time and secondly, although it is perfectly true that tomorrow will be Private Members' Motions, the debate could continue on Friday.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, all of us have commitments in life that we have to live with. We have Motions tomorrow and I quite understand that the time has not been taken out of my four hours, but due to a previous business commitment I have to leave the Island and will not be here on Friday, and it is really difficult for me to condense down what I would like to say in just the next hour and fifteen minutes. I wonder whether Members would consider going through to 4:30 without a break to allow me to

MR. PRESIDENT:

I would certainly do that.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

too rough on you then.

Thank you. I will try not to be

Mr. President, continuing with the 1986 Police Report, we find on page 16 that in 1984 we had 1,367 crimes committed. In 1985, 1,951 and in 1986, 2,668. This is a terrific increase. We are becoming a community with too much crime. The number of cases on drugs alone increased from 178 in 1985 to 568 in 1986 - an increase of 319 per cent.

Now Mr. President, I do not know whether any of us may have the answer to these problems, but certainly this affects the well being of the entire community and we cannot allow this to go on. We must come to grips with it even if we have to use a little bit more of the money that the Unity Team Government left behind, but we must come to grips with the problem.

In 1986, again, we heard nothing about corruption. A number of witch-hunts were carried out which proved that the people were talking nonsense. In 1985 we had one case of official corruption. I do not think there were any in 1984. There may have been one - I do not remember exactly what is there. In 1986 we had 15. This is alarming. Under the Misuse of Drugs Law, under a certain category, we had 24 crimes in 1985. There were 165 in 1986. Overall - 1985, 178 cases and 1986, 555.

A lot was said in 1984 about gambling. In 1985 there were four cases under the Gambling Law. In 1986 there were 28 cases. I am going to deal more fully with this when I get to this book.

Under the Banking Laws, in 1985 there were no criminal cases. In 1986 there were 53.

I want to go back and add to my previous statements regarding the police not having adequate funds to carry to out the work that should be done. I am going to give this House the benefit of the 1982 figures which the Government of the day spent on the Police Force - $2,671,046.00. The income taken in by the Police Department for that year was $368,222.00. I am bringing out these figures just to show the country at large that the Unity Team administration placed much emphasis on the improvement of the Police Force.

In 1983 we spent $3,105,533.00. We took in $374,019.00. In 1984 we spent $3,718,639.00 and took in $285,209.00. We were not looking at the Police Force as something to earn income for the country. We used our brains in better areas.

To compare the crimes over that period. In 1981 there was 1,519. In the year 1982, 1,674. It then dropped in 1983 to 1,384 and further dropped in 1984 to 1,367 because at that time we had an able Chief of Police and the Government of the day was coming to grips with the criminal element.

I hope that the people of this country will pay attention to these statistics that I have revealed today because it will show the untruths that some Members of the present Government campaigned on in 1984. In 1984 under the Police Report there were no cases of official corruption. I stated previously the amount for 1986.

I think I have made my point with regard to the Police Force and to the criminal element now existing.

In my opinion we need to expend a lot of energy and money on the Mental Health and a Drug Abuse Programmes that were started under the Unity Team administration. I hope that the present administration will do their utmost to bring these things to fruition rather than by promising us in every Budget and Throne Speech that certain things are going to be done. The time for promises are finished. We need to know now when, what and where. We do not intend to tolerate any longer the empty promises that we have been getting.

I for one am in favour of laws with stiffer penalties and if we have to adopt similar laws that have been adopted in other countries, then I think we should do so. If the drug trade addicts will not come to reason - and they think they can make easy in the Cayman Islands - I think it is time for us, once again, to warn them that that will not be, and I will support any Motion that is brought to this House to go as far as giving life sentences for drug pushers, in a certain categories, after they have been convicted one or two times for a similar offence. If we have to go that far to help our youngster, then let us do it.

With regard to the users, I am a bit more sympathetic. I think that the present Honourable Member should try to put together a rehabilitation scheme as quickly as possible. I do not think he can measure in dollars and cents as he tried to do in some report that I saw recently where he said it may cost $5,000 to send someone to Miami for 30 day's treatment - if there were only 12 cases a year it would cost $60,000 - and if it were done the other way it may cost $1 million. I say spend the $1 million and put together a proper scheme because we are going to have more than 12 people a year who will need this treatment. If we only cure one of them and bring them back to a productive life, the $1 million, in my estimation, is well spent.

I am not supporting the use of drugs in any respect. I stand formally now as I always have against this, but what I am saying is that we can no longer measure the affects of it in dollars and cents. We cannot depend on balancing our budget by fining the ganja user $500 for smoking a ganja cigarette or $1,000 for using cocaine. We must help them because that is why crime is escalating in the community today. When people get hooked and do not have money they commit burglaries, thefts and even murder. They will go anything to satisfy that urge.

The Prison population is growing steadily. We are getting a good occupancy in Her Majesty's hotel, and we should not just concern ourselves with the building of more prisons - we have to concern ourselves with having adequate facilities as well as putting together an adequate rehabilitation system that will help these people. A system should be started for the people who are not on drugs to train them in other areas - maybe as carpenters and plumbers for example so at least when they come out of prison they can play a useful part in the community and not have to continue to hang their heads or become beggars. We are not helping the community, we are not helping them as individuals by doing that.

I would like to speak about the increasing size of the Civil Service. Under this administration we have gone wild in filling posts. Every Secretary now has a Secretary. Every office boy has a consultant and it is at the point where Civil Service posts are better than the 17 per cent of the work force. If we add together the other areas such as the Airport, Cayman Airways and so forth, one will find that the Government is now employing roughly 30 per cent of the work force of this country and it is time we came to grips with it.

We have an outmoded Civil Service system. We have an outmoded Public Service system. It is becoming a constant worry to the politicians of this country as to how Government is going to raise the money to continue to pay the large Civil Service salaries, and yet while this is being done we are not trying to train middle-management. There is a vacuum in middle management as there has been for many, many years. We are continuing to perpetuate the whole colonialist system of advancing our people by longevity. If they keep a seat warm for 30 years they can probably get an MBE and a better position. That is an anachronistic system. It has gone out of time. Let us get rid of it. Let us put together guidelines that will enable our people to be promoted on merit - not on time.

It is time for our Caymanians who come home from abroad to have a chance to see where they are going and to hope for a future in the Civil Service. If we made some changes we would not have to worry about importing all the experts, because who can tell one more about their country than the person who is born in it, who has his roots there and who intends to stay. It would be like me going to London and advising them how to build a nitrogen bomb.

We must pay our people in the Civil Service equal pay. There must be equal opportunity for them. If we were to take the gratuity and housing allowance - which escalates I think to probably close to $2,000,000 - and all of the benefits together, deal with an efficient Civil Service, and take that money and pool it among our local people they would have a better standard of living and we would have better employees in Government.

I cannot believe that the mentality and the ability of the average Caymanian has deteriorated that much. In the past Caymanians have been able to withstand every adversity and come out on top, and although some of our young kids may have been hooked on drugs I believe that overall they still have that capability if they are given the opportunity. I think we have to give them the challenge and they will rise to that challenge.

We do not need the experts from abroad. We do not need the consultants to tell us what type and colour of toilet paper a toilet needs. We can handle our own affairs, but in order to do this Government has to change its present policy. We must have meaningful talks between Government and the representatives of the Civil Service. We must instil in them better work ethics, but while we instil that we must also give them the promise of a better reward system.

The Public Service Commission should be put on the boat that is leaving in a few minutes - hopefully - and sent away from our shores because, in my opinion, it does as much harm to our country and our Civil Service as that boat would have done to the youth of our country.

Quoting from your Speech as well as quoting from some of the things we see in the press, tourism - which is the mainstay of this country, the main stay for the growth and development - was expected to increase through somebody's midnight dream by 47 per cent this year. Anyone can grasp figures out of the air and make them look good. Anyone can have pipe dreams. If they had looked at this more realistically they would have known that they could have never accomplished this, particular with the infrastructure that they have. This year it will probably amount to an increase of maybe 15 per cent to 20 per cent. That is not a bad increase. I am belittling it. What I am saying is that the figures that they were grasping at were unrealistic.

It is true we have two large hotels that have come onstream and they were probably figuring a 90 per cent occupancy rate for both of those to arrive at the 47 per cent figure. But we must realize that those two hotels are going to be like the other hotels of the past. They are going to do very little to actively promote bringing people in. They are going to fall back on Government as they did for the eight years I was there, and no one could have fought harder with them than I did for eight years trying to get them to assist Government with more effort on their part.

The advertising cost to promote tourism in the last two years has risen nearly 300 per cent from what it was in 1984. Money is being spent now through some advertising genius on televisions, radio and so on. I am not against this type of advertising because I stand for anything that will show the Cayman Islands up in a good light, but I would only give a word of warning that some of these monies are being spent in areas which, in my opinion, do not attract the type of tourism that we would like to attract.

There is one sign that promotes Cayman in Miami - but, again, please do not take me wrong when I state where this sign is because there are very good people in that area, people like ourselves - which is in an area where people cannot afford to come to the Cayman Islands, and that is in Liberty City in Miami. Now what can we expect to get with regard to tourism from that area. Those signs are very expensive and we could have gained much more from if we had been put it in another area. So I am just bringing this out to show that I hope that those who are responsible will pay more attention to the manner in which the money is spent. We cannot depend on some of these advertising geniuses. They are like the geniuses we have to contend with in Executive Council who are half asleep most of the time. They are not leading us in the right direction.

In 1986 tourism figures showed that we were up 14.5 per cent over 1985, but we must not lose sight of that fact, either, that 1985 was down from the figures in 1984.

We apparently have a present policy which grasps at the lower income bracket people. It promotes people in that income bracket to come to the Cayman Islands. I am not against those people. They should have an opportunity to come here. What I am pointing out is that we should not spend a lot of Government money to promote tourism to bring people here when we have limited hotel beds and everything, and they spend no money. It is true that we probably need to help Eastern to get started on this route, but I do not think we need to help them in that way. This is your peanut-butter sandwich tourist that I am referring to and if anyone doubts that we do not have that peanut-butter sandwich tourist here just go to places like Coconut Plaza where they can buy their hotdogs and hamburgers, and you will see the thriving business that is being conducted in that area, but that is all. One can go to Fosters Food Fare and see them loading up their bags with peanut-butter and sardines. This is not the type of tourism that we need. Wake up.

I would suggest to this House that the time is ripe to go to the United States to open meaningful negotiations to get a policy of pre-clearance for tourist in Grand Cayman. In negotiations that I had with the American authorities a few years ago they promised that when we were around the 200,000 figures they would do such a thing for us; they would station representatives from their country here in Immigration and Customs and pre-clear the planes as they do in Nassau. This would add a lot to our tourism and if the responsible people in Washington are approached I know we can get it, but if we go to the clerks as we have done on other important policy matters we are not going to get anything.

I will compliment the Honourable Member for Tourism at this point for his planned introduction for a Law to regulate the hotels. That is something that should have been done a long time ago. I was negligent in not having it done, although we had done some work in that area. I am hopeful that he will bring it to the House shortly where he will have my full support.

Now another point, Mr. President, is this. It serves no use for us to go all-out to promote tourism if we are not going to train our local people to take these positions. The Unity Team administration was very cognizant of the fact that that should be done and that is why we started the Trade Schools that we did. That is why we put so much emphasis on training school leavers so that they would not be the square pegs in the round holes that some people talk about.

I, Mr. President, feel very strongly about this matter and what is going on with this regard. We have two new hotels that have come onstream. They have employed a lot of people and I feel that six months before they opened their doors they should have been told, as I told them a couple of years ago, that they should be permitted so many work permit holders and the rest should be Caymanian who should be employed and paid six months before the hotels open and trained through the hotel school. This has not been done. There is a certain hotel which I, as a Caymanian, feel very ashamed to go to because the only two Caymanians whom I saw were the two standing guard at the door to open it as one went through the portals of the inner sanctum. These are not the dignified positions that Caymanians should be trained to take. Every other position that I saw was filled by an expatriate. That is not helping the work force. It is going to breed more and more discontent and it is not helping the country at all. Please, for the good of the youth of this country, get back into the training schemes that the Unity Team had started. Do not just scrap them because the Unity Team Government did it and realize that we did it for the good of the country and the good of the people.

Mr. President, I am very sympathetic with the problems that exist in Cayman Brac. It is going to take quite a bit to revive that economy, but I was very shocked to see in your Throne Speech that the only sort of olive branch that was held out to them was the new programming of Radio Cayman which they can now receive much better. You apparently thought that would be an antidote for all their ills. What we need to do, Mr. President, is to put greater emphasis and thrust on promoting tourism for the Lesser Islands. We need to build that terminal to provide employment and to let the people of Cayman Brac see that they are part of the Cayman Islands. We may need to reduce tariffs in certain areas in order to get investment going in that Island. We may need to promote it as a retirement home offering certain retirement benefits to people who retire there, rather than retiring in Grand Cayman. We have to put our heads together. We need to think. We cannot adopt the ostrich plans of the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council because he will never find anything that will work for Cayman Brac. We need to get someone who can think and devise plans to get that economy going.

During the eight years of the administration of the Unity Team, Cayman Brac received a fair and just portion every year. We put programmes together that helped the economy. People who had been working in Grand Cayman were going back to their homes in Cayman Brac because there was work for them. That has changed.

I support Government's present programme for the work on the Bluff Road and Little Cayman and I am pleased to see a new dental clinic is planned, but, Mr. President, this is only a drop in the bucket. We are faced with problems there and before they enlarge and get any bigger bring in your consultants, if you have to, if the geniuses that we have on the Cabinet cannot deal with it. Bring in the consultants - I will support bringing them in this time - and find out what we can do to benefit the people of Cayman Brac. We spent the money in the past to upgrade and prepare their infrastructure and we provided a healthy climate for investment, and the country began to move forward.

I will say in closing on Cayman Brac that I wish there was something that this Government could do to help the people in the Sister Islands. Whatever programme they embark upon they can rest assured that if it is for the betterment of the Sister Islands, I will support it 100 per cent.

I would like, at this point, to touch on the Government Information Service. In the last few months or years since the recruitment of the genius to fill that position, I have seen but very little activity in the papers that really promotes the Government of this country. That was another case of a political crony being paid off, but have your bags packed. Recently I did see - I think it was two full pages - in the newspaper where they were trying to deal with the Housing Development Corporation. That was after two years of sitting idle and two years of thinking that the people of this country had adequate housing and that nothing further needed to be done. The Honourable Member finally woke up from his sleep and decided to get his picture taken by the Government Information officer, my crony, and have a nice story written about it.

The amount that is stated as being spent on mortgages is roughly the amount, I think, that was there before the election. No attempt has been made, I think, other than borrowing money at a higher rate of interest from Caribbean Development Bank. He has not put the pinch on any of the banking associations or financial institutions of this country to buy any more bonds at a low interest rate to help the poor people. More needs to be done in that area. It is something that could be a cancer to this society and it must not be allowed to continue in this manner.

Mr. President, I am going to point out another area where I think something needs to be done and done quickly - you will probably tell me quite quickly that this is your preserve - about the present court and the judges. I do not have the answer for it. We have a new young Attorney General whom I hope is very ambitious and I hope that I will be able to associate with him many years in the Chamber and I congratulate him, but I hope that he will put his head along with yours and try to come up with something that can clear the bottle jam that exists in the present Court system. I do not know whether we need to have another judge or two or maybe two more Courts, but whatever it needs let us deal with it and deal with it shortly.

The time has long past when judges had to waste time writing down everything said. I know that if the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly had to write down everything said in here we would be here years. So it is impossible to think that a judge can write down everything that is said and to expect that it could be recorded for all those years for posterity. Let us change the system. Let us realize that we are living in the twentieth century and not back when the Magna Carta was written.

I am very proud to see that the Law School is progressing well and that we have some students whom I hope will one day take their rightful place in good positions in the community of Grand Cayman. This is one of the solid foundations for the betterment of our country which was laid by the Unity Team Government again. This Government cannot claim they have done anything, except give Cayman Brac better programming on Radio Cayman.

You touched on the surplus in your speech, Mr. President. The surplus, I think, which exists from the previous administration now stands somewhere around $5.1 million, including the guarantee for the Tower Building. Thank God it nearly all used up; now the present geniuses in Executive Council will really have to work to find out how they are going to get some back in there. They did a pretty good job of it this last year. In 1986 they took out another $2.5 million. This year they are borrowing $8 million they claim and they are going to put back $2 million of that $8 million borrowed to try to build up the reserves. That is really good thinking. This is the result of geniuses because that money is probably being borrowed at a higher rate of interest than if it was deposited back into reserves.

The surplus for 1986 was projected to be $3.3 million. I understand that surplus has nearly been reduced already by $2 million; so we are not going to have any surplus for 1986 to go into the reserves to build up the reserves of the country.

Our currency, of which I think all Caymanians are very proud, remains a strong currency. I am very pleased to see that, but I am not pleased to see that the entire operating surplus of $1,330,524.46 was transferred last year to general reserve. Now the entire surplus that existed in the Currency Board has never been used in any year in the past. It only shows the bad financial picture that exists in the present Government.

We have a Five Year Economic Development Plan that it supposed to be coming to this House. I was shocked when I read what this amounted to. Somebody spent a lot of time building up a big document, not really giving any input of anything that is vital to the country. If that is the policy for growth, then God have mercy on us. That is the policy set by the Civil Service. This is what I have always argued against; the policies of Government must be dealt with by the elected people and not set down by the Civil Service.

We have a Bill coming before the House on the ship registration. I, for one, am not in favour of any curtailment of the ship registry. Instead of curtailing we should upgrade. My colleague from Bodden Town and myself have tried since 1972 to have this done. Shipping is our heritage. Why should we take a backward step in the 1987? It is something our young people can associate with. I will admit not as many of them tend to think about a seagoing career these days, but it is still something that I think we should not divorce ourselves from. The United Kingdom has consistently dragged their feet in helping to extend any of the Treaties to us which could help us to upgrade it, and I think it is time for us, as a small country, to say that we are going to upgrade it and that we are going to stand firm, and that they are going to help us. If the United Kingdom is the Mother that it should be it should help this stepchild out here and extend treaties to us so that we can upgrade the ship registry and make something of it. But I will tell you, Mr. President, and the country that I was very alarmed to find out that our ship registration section had been abused by a local prominent would-be politician lawyer when it was used to register and shelter a number of Russian ships. I think for this act the man should hang his head in shame for the jeopardy that may have come to our country by his greed. Judas Iscariot got his thirty pieces of silver and I am sure he got much more. But to think that a Caymanian would steep to do such a thing - and yet he is still kept high places and looked upon as a god. How much further can the people of this country tolerate this type of thing.

Touching on the Hospital, Mr. President. It is high time we had a decent Hospital. I know that we will never get it. Time is short for the present Honourable Member to ever do anything to bring it about because he would have to study it fifty years before he could ever decide whether we are going to build one or not. However, a Hospital is needed and I say, as a Member from this side of the House has already told him, that we do not need anymore experts. We do not need any expert to come here and tell us to use cement block instead of red brick imported from Europe. Let us go ahead and find the money and build a Hospital that can help our people.

I am very proud of the Doctors and Nurses who staff the present Hospital. I think that they do an excellent job under adverse conditions. We do not have to worry about it being there, the present buildings, we can use them to house our experts that we bring in from abroad; our expatriates that work like the Government Information Service Officer - that is the place where we could put people like that instead of renting condominiums on Seven Mile Beach for them.

If we built a new Hospital we could go into many research areas. We could work with doctors in promoting this as a Plastic Surgery Center. It would make money for us, plus it would give our people the type of facility they need. However, the present Hospital could be used, as I have said, for expatriate housing or it could be used for the Community College.

The Community College is something that I think is very much needed. I probably look on it in a different way than the Honourable Member who is now responsible for it. I think one of the things we also need to do is to work more closely with the International College of the Cayman Islands to upgrade the facilities. Of course I understand he had quite a bit to say about that. I have not bothered to read the transcripts and I was not here when he said it, but I pay no attention to him because I have never heard him say anything that makes sense in the many years that I know him as a Member of this Assembly. I am really sorry he is not here to hear what I have to say.

We are now coming out with the new GCSE examinations. I have to plead ignorance. I really do not know what this means, but I am hoping that it is not a change similar to the Caribbean Council examinations that the Honourable Member became so famous for when he was in office before, and which would have been thrust around the necks of the children of this country for many years if he had had his way then. I hope, and I call on him, to acquaint this House fully with what he intends to do before this system is changed and what the system will entail. As my colleague from Bodden Town says, I know his background with regard to his feelings. I know how he used his political crony, Mrs. Mary Lawrence, to assist him in trying to stop the Middle School project when we started it in the Unity Team administration. I know the devious ways in which he works and I hope that we are not getting something today that will be of great detriment to our children in the years to come.

Career guidance for our youngsters is something that we need to focus a lot of attention on. It has to start at an early age and I hope that he will be doing something about that rather than giving us promises and telling us about somebody being sick. I will compliment him on one programme that apparently has been started and that is the counselling of teenage mothers and potential juvenile delinquents. This is a good start and I hope that he will soften his heart a little bit more in the months to come.

The Sports Complex was mentioned in your address. I support it thoroughly Mr. President. I think it has done a lot for the youngster of the community, but do not forget that was another thing that the Unity Team laid the foundation for.

Our overcrowded school system is becoming something to think about. We have to pay attention to it and it is going to cost money. I look forward to the near future when a new school complex can be built in Bodden Town. That will help Bodden Town to come back to be the capital of the Island as it was once before - well, we will extend the facilities in that area.

I am proud to see that this Government plans to do something about the Museum. A lot of time has elapsed on this. I tried to deal with it for many years, but we could not get an adequate place to put it. We wanted the old Court House which I think is an ideal place for the time being, and I think the Post Office would be the best repository for it for the future. Many of the artifacts that we have were bought from Mr. Ira Thompson. They are really not indicative in one sense of Cayman as such, but they are indicative of the Cayman way of life that existed some years ago. We should try to bring the youngsters of the community together to help in this project because by so doing it would help them survey the past whilst looking for a bright future under this administration.

Agriculture, Mr. President, is another item that has been forgotten by this present administration. The present Honourable Member, I am of the opinion, pays very little attention to anything relating to agriculture. We need to help the people more in this area. We need to give them more counselling and guidance and more financial help. He has boasted of only one thing that he has accomplished in this Portfolio and that is his stray-dogs programme and even then we had to get an expert from England to come over to tell us how to kill them. At least it did give him something to boast about.

Under the AIDB programme - again a scheme that was set up by the Unity Team Government - at least he has been able to negotiate another loan for $1.1 million for students and agriculture. I do not know how long it will take to get that money in place. I do not know what strings will be attached, but I hope that he can soon get it and that the people of the country can benefit from it.

We have two new hotels, but again the ground-work for them was laid under the Unity Team Government. We paved the way for the development of those two hotels. I am sorry that we cannot put a second plaque on the hotels like the Airport, then maybe this Government could get the credit for them. But, Mr. President, I would point out one thing that I think could be considered. Some of the hotels are now on the eastern side of the West Bay to George Town road and it is becoming a safety hazard with cars driving at high speeds in opposite directions and people trying to cross the road. You may say it is unsightly, but it is done in many areas of the world. It would be much better for us to allow pedestrian walkways to be built over the present Seven Mile Beach road than to wait until two or three or maybe four tourists get killed in traffic accidents there.

I am very pleased to see that the present administration is going to give consideration to the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands Bill that has been circulated. This came about because when the Unity Team Government negotiated with Caribbean Development Bank for the small loan to complete the airport complex it set as one of its guidelines that it be set up under an authority similar to that where it would be self-financing. We agreed to it and I am glad to see that the present administration has seen the sense behind it and is willing to go forward with it. I will be supporting that when it comes before the House because that helped us build what probably is the best, and the best looking, Airport in the West Indies. It is one that Owen Robers, the great pioneer, would be very proud of if he was alive today to see it.

Now, Mr. President, I come to the new Fire Station. The new Fire Station was again part of the airport development plan that was started during the Unity Team administration, and I am very proud that we will be getting to the point where we are able to complete it, but I wonder when? We have been telling the people for two years, I think, that we are going to build a Fire Station, and now it is time that we build it.

Mr. President, I do compliment that department of Government. It has one of the most capable administrators to be found in any place as the head of it. He is a man whom I have been very proud to have worked with in the past.

Now there is talk and plans for a station in West Bay. For goodness sake do not wait until every house in West Bay has burnt down before it is built. I am sure, however, that it cannot be done with the usual $10 token fee as has been endeavoured in years past. Let us get on with the job. Let us do it and show the people that this administration can do something other than kill stray dogs.

Much has happened in the last few months to effect the viability of Cayman Airways. We now have Eastern Airlines on the same and maybe another airline shortly - Pan Am. I do not understand why this Government elected to give up the moratorium that existed on the Miami route so many months before it was due to expire. They should have let it run to the end and those months should have been spent lobbying and working in Washington trying to get an extension to it instead of hanging their heads in the sand ostrich-like saying that nothing is going to be done so let us give up.

The worst thing about it, Mr. President, is that we not only gave up the moratorium, but I understand that we gave up the parity that existed between the United Kingdom and the United States' airlines under the Bermuda II. If we have done that, then we have really done something that is detrimental to the entire country because whatever the losses are, Cayman Airways is ultimately going to have to be picked up by the Caymanian people. Cayman Airways, like it or not, has to be something that will remain with us if we are going to have the prosperity we hope to have. In giving it up what did we get? Did we get anything more than we got out of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty? I am sure we did not.

There is only one person so far, I think, who has benefited from the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty and that is the previous Attorney General of this country, who has gotten his reward and has been appointed to sit in the holy of holies as Governor of the Turks and Caicos Islands. So he has gotten his reward; and I am wondering when the Honourable First Elected Member is going to get his BEM medal and whether the Honourable Fourth Elected Member may get his upgraded to, I do not know what, maybe the BBE or something like that - but at least we know that if one does his duty and bends his knees well enough there is something to be earned in the end. I am only sorry that it had to be earned at the expense of myself and my fellow Caymanians.

Cayman Brac exists as an International Airport. That was one of the reasons why the Unity Team Government saw fit to spend the money to upgrade it and so that in negotiations with United States Government we could say the Cayman Islands has two International Airports and not one. We have two Islands that people live in that need to be serviced. Northwest Airlines, Cayman Airways and Air Jamaica are serving Grand Cayman. Eastern must serve Cayman Brac. We would not be tied with the heavy debts that Cayman Airways in the future will be tied with if we had done this. We could have helped the economy of Cayman Brac, but there was no one who was capable of standing up and saying anything. All we could do, as usual, was to shake hands, bow our knees and come away saying, "We did our best."

There is no use telling us about the new additional routes. We must remember that when that additional route was opened at least $1 million or more was going to be spent to try to build up that route, and with American Airlines, as many as there are in the United States', as soon as it is built up there is another parallel to take away the gravy. There is no moratorium or anything to protect us, so what are we going to get?

Some mention was made in the Throne Speech about us being able to make more charters in the United States. That is ridiculous to say because the charter rights under Bermuda II existed all along. Cayman Airways had the rights for any charter route in the United States. So we did not get anything additional on that. The only thing we have done is to open ourselves up to very strong competition.

We always boast of how proud we are to be a colony of the United Kingdom. Well this is one time then that the United Kingdom should have helped the little stepchild and fought with us instead of doing what they originally did under Bermuda II, putting us in the mess we are in today, when they gave the United States' airlines an open-sky policy for the Caribbean while they got the open-sky policy in favour of the United Kingdom in the Hong Kong area. That is why we are in the mess we are in today. Now they are giving us a bigger insult. They are sending us another Governor who is from Hong Kong with all the systems they have had in existence over there.

Well, there are three new areas to open up in the United States. I hope they will be opened wisely, and I hope that they will be brought to a Committee of the House so that Members may know what is planned before it is done. I hope we will not find that a route is being planned into Plaines, Georgia. That would be a good place for you to go. We could pick up much tourism there and maybe you would be able to meet the wonderful President of the United States, Mr. Jimmy Carter, who did nothing just like this administration. That would be a chance to meet another genius.

I had so much more that I wanted to say, but I am going to condense some of it. I am say to you and to the country today that I support Cayman Airways as I have always done. I have always felt that Cayman Airways is very vital to the economy of this country and I hope that we can face the competition together and that we keep Cayman Airway viable.

In my hand are documents dealing with the Trilander that we recently sold. This is a list of the spare parts that were sold, I understand, for $20,000. I am not going into any detail on this; I am only asking the Honourable Member to make an investigation into this and report back to us in a private Committee meeting as to what happened, because there was also, in addition to that, a commission paid and I think we should know what amount was paid.

We bought a Shorts aircraft. There is a lot I wanted to say on that, but I am limited on time. However, I will say that we bought an aircraft that I think in time will prove is not suitable. Further, we paid too much money for it and it has many other problems. However, I think a bigger problem exists with regard to what has been done with the 737. To try to prove one point, they have gone off madly and gotten a 737 that is costing about $300,000 a month, including staff and this and that, which is about one and half times what we are paying for two 727's, and it cannot perform like the 727. It is costing us a lot of money.

I understand recently that a charter flight had to be cancelled. There were nine pilots with that plane. The two 727's were encountering some mechanical problems and at the last minute it was decided to use the 737. But the 737 could not be used because, although we had nine pilots, they had been drinking and nobody was on standby.

Now there is much more that I could bring out but I do not want to bring it out publicly. I have been blasted in every corner of this country by some of the big people in this present administration with regards to Cayman Airways, but at least I knew what was going on. I am giving words of warning now; let us sit down and sup together to get to the problem. Do not cast us aside as ignoramuses on this side of the House. We know what is going on and we want to know.

The Labour Bill. I can support the Labour Bill in some cases, but not in its present form. It has caused much dissension in our country because it was foolishly drafted. It is something alien to us. The previous Attorney General knew my feelings strongly on the Antigua Labour Code. I had dealt with him on it over several years and dissected it from end to the other. There was nothing but red ink over the copies that I had. It was a disgrace to try to foster that on the people of this country, and I hope that the new Attorney General or someone with get with us and help us put together a labour code that can work for our country. We need a labour code but we do not need it in the form that it was drafted before.

I see thatI have a cutting on this, I would like to say a lot more.... a Director of Trade is being planned. That is a very good move. I support it, but I am asking the Honourable Member not to let the Cabinet kill it with bureaucracy before it gets started and not to appoint political cronies. I would not like to see someone like James Lawrence in this position because he is a political crony.

The Master Ground Transportation Study is due to be brought before us shortly and I hope that no more minor studies will be done on that, but something will be done.

Mr. President, in my hand is a report prepared by the International Bank for reconstruction and development for official use only. This is done through the Caribbean Development Bank as a part of the World Bank. This is an economic memorandum on the Cayman Islands. This book is completely indicative, if anyone has the time to read it, of Government's policy of the past, of the present and of the would-be future. It tells of nearly everything that needs to be known about the Cayman Islands. I am going to read one little section - page 24, section 310 - and this is after it has outlined all the Government policies that are contained in the Five Year Economic Development Plan, the big blue book that has been given to us.

"Over the planning period it will be necessary to find new sources of current revenue and/or to curtail the growth of Government expenditure in order to preserve the status of the Cayman Islands as a tax haven. The use of lotteries mainly for the international markets and using the transient and local populations as a base, may be an acceptable option if accompanied by a campaign to increase public awareness of the cost of providing basic public service."

This is set down as part of the policy of the present Government and it is put out by Caribbean Development Bank, the bible of banking for the Cayman Islands. So this is how we plan to do our capital expenditures for the future.

I understand, Mr. President, that we should also at this session, pay tribute to the Sergeant-at-Arms who I think will be leaving shortly. I think he has done a very good job in his short time with us but I am ashamed that we are letting him go just so that someone can appoint a political crony to the position. I do not think the present holder could ever be considered a crony for any political group in this country, and that is probably why he is losing, or his contract will not be renewed.

I am glad to see that piped water will be given to George Town in the near future, but I would have liked, as a Member of the Legislative Assembly, to have seen the contract under which this is being done. I think that this is something that should not be done without all Members of the Assembly being able to see the contract.

The sewerage system is proceeding and I am thankful that it is being done. Again, this was a Unity Team job, we caught all hell for it - buying the land and everything else - but now the genius thinks he is going to capitalise on it. He will not capitalise on it because the loan and all the infrastructure was put together during the Unity Team administration.

It is time that we consider a new road into West Bay - one for each direction. I do not think it is wise to try to widen the present road. There is too much traffic and congestion, and we will open ourselves to too many accidents in the future.

The Honourable First Elected Member for West Bay did say - and in his usual manner he tried to be as abusive as possible to many people - something about fixing the roads of those suspected of voting for us, blaming, I think, the Unity Team administration. But I believe more of this is being done under his administration than was ever done in the history of the Cayman Islands lumped together before, because with every little bypath that is topped with a little bit of black oil he has said, "See, I have done it for you". This is what I referred to in my speech a while ago as being a third world insular, socialistic mentality. It is time we changed it.

I did not support the motion for a Speaker of the House because I think we need to go broader than that. The Constitution is really where this rests and, Mr. President, I must tell you today as I have told the people of this country for many years, and will continue to say - I may never see it happen, I am not for independence of my country because I realize the dangers - that I am in favour of constitutional change. Believe me, Mr. President, there are only two Members of this House who have never voiced that opinion and they are my colleagues the Elected Member for East End and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town because they did not trust the group enough to go in and discuss with them. I took it upon myself to go in, thinking that I could trust them for one time, and I was shocked to hear how much each and everyone of them was in favour of constitutional change and I said, in a limited way, that I agreed with them, that I would join hands with them and I would go on any platform throughout the country with them and tell the people that we have forgotten politics on this issue because we think it is of national importance.

Most of them felt that the constitutional change was needed because of you, but yet at the next Sitting of the House, when this was all secret, they tried to put the blame around my neck. I can take the blame, Mr. President, because I will tell any man in the world what I think of him. I believed in what I was doing. I thought for once I could trust these Members who were elected by the people to do something that would be good for the country. We were agreeing on a change of the constitution similar, or what would have probably been similar to the Virgin Islands and then when they thought they had hung me they tried to put it around my neck. Well, Mr. President, let me tell you, they were more verciferous than I was about a feeling for the change in the constitution, and it was mostly directed against you. So do not believe when you sup and drink with them that you are supping and drinking with angels. Jim Bodden will tell you what he thinks; they will not.

I stand before this House, before my people, before God and everyone else and tell you that I think the time is ripe for the Caymanians to at least handle their local affairs and be responsible because we know we are told we as Caymanians are not going any place, that we might do something wrong, that we can help be corrected and that we cannot run away; but you or anyone else can come and go and do anything with us and when you leave and we have to live with it.

Mr. President, I have no fear or hesitation in saying that under your administration of this Government you have set the country back, constitutionally, 25 years and you have perpetuated a Civil Service role in Government. You cannot in your Speech draw on the evidence of development visible everywhere. Mr. President that started a long time ago. I have tried very hard to keep respect for you in this House and for the Chair, but it is at certain times, Mr. President, that I cannot agree with the moves that you make and I am man enough to tell you so. I thought that we had evolved a bit from the Civil-Service-type of Government and since you came here we have been pushed back 25 years into an anachronistic system of Government that is not conducive to our people.

I imagine that when your term of office is up, if the present administration is still in place, they will bring you back as an expert or as a consultant. Anyhow, Mr. President, as I have said before, this is my 15th year; my time is just about up as far as this speech, but not my time in life I hope.

I would like to touch on one other item - then I shall be ready to sit down - and that is the proposed North Sound project. I agree there may be problems to be encountered ecologically and I agree that we should probably pay a lot of attention to it.....(INAUDIBLE)....Oh I thought this was something you wanted me to say about you; like Haig, you know.... (LAUGHTER), but Mr. President, in the long term the development of the North Sound has to come. It is the future of this country for development and I have said that for 20 something years. I am not saying that I will support any programme that comes here, but what I am saying is that if a viable programme comes before this House, something that can benefit our people, Jim Bodden will be in favour of it and I will not hide from saying that. I will not be like the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council who will support one thing in the back room but in the open will not support it.

Mr. President, there is so much more that I could have said and I am sorry that I had to condense my speech. I hope that my constituents will understand what I have said and that I have not confused them in any manner. I am eternally grateful to the people of Bodden Town for giving me this opportunity to be able to come in here and voice my opinions and to feel that I am helping with the development of my country.

Mr. President, I thank you and I hope, God be willing, that I will live to debate many more of these Throne Speeches.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Item 2 - Statements, The Second

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

M/V "BERMUDA STAR"

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, this statement is being made in connection with the Cruise ship M/V "Burmuda Star" which called at Grand Cayman on Wednesday, 18th February, 1987.

1. This Honourable House must be advised that the procedure adopted for dealing with requests from Cruise Ships wishing to call at Grand Cayman is for the local handling agent to refer any requests to the Director of Tourism who approves or denies the request based on the number of ships scheduled to be in the Port of George Town on the given date.

2. In the case of the "Burmuda Star", the Director was advised by Bodden Shipping Agents on 5th February, 1987 that this ship, on private charter, would be making a call at Grand Cayman on 18th February, 1987 en route from New Orleans. As there were only two other Cruise Ships scheduled for that date, the request was approved. It must be noted that it has never been customary to enquire into the type of passengers.

3. Obviously the times in which we now live demand that a tightening up of the screening of applications be implemented. The Director of Tourism has therefore been instructed that effective immediately and before any future requests for charter, or one stop calls can be approved, following additional information must be obtained and submitted to the Portfolio of Tourism, Aviation and Trade for consideration.

- (i) The purpose of the trip.
- (ii) Name of the charter group.
- (iii) Name and nationality of the ship.
- (iv) Nationality and number of passengers.
- (v) The itinerary of Cruise.

If, when this information has been obtained, it is apparent to the Portfolio that the nature of the charter or the type of passengers involved makes a visit of the ship undesirable, the Portfolio will instruct the Director of Tourism to deny the request to call at Grand Cayman.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Item 3. Private Members Motion Number 2 of 1987. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS
PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO.2/87
ORDER OF NATIONAL HEROES

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I beg to move Private Members Motion No.2/87:

WHEREAS there is an ever increasing amount of national pride and awareness on the part of the Caymanians;

AND WHEREAS there have been dozens of Caymanians who have made great contributions to the establishment and order of good Government, and for the convenience and improvement of life in general in these Islands;

BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Government do establish an Order of National Heroes;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT there be proclaimed a National Heroes Day for these Islands.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I beg to second the motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Private Members Motion No.2/87 is duly moved and seconded. I do not propose to read out its terms again, but I invite the mover to speak to his motion now.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, the motion before the House follows in kind the one which I brought in 1985 to establish a National Sports Award to recognise our youth in a national sense. However, this motion goes a bit further in that if it is accepted it will establish an order of national heroes and a national day in honour of whomever is proclaimed a national hero.

Mr. President, we should all know what an order is. An order is a society patterned on the knightly fraternities, but typically founded by a Sovereign or a National Legislature such as we are for the conferring of an emeritus distinction; hence the Order of National Heroes.

In asking Government to establish this Order, I am not suggesting, Mr. President, that this country discontinue the system that is ours by virtue of fact that we are a dependent territory and part of Her Gracious Majesty's domain; that is the Royal Honours. As long as we are a Crown Colony I know and agree that the main honours bestowed on anyone will be by Her Majesty the Queen; but because of these great honours should we have a sense of inferiority in something we could create, and say 'no' to the creation of it?

Mr. President, goodwill is beyond doubt an excellent lubricant but, Sir, pride and self confidence to me are better driving forces. All I am asking is that by our own statute and regulations passed by this Honourable Legislative Assembly that we set up the wherewithall to be able to proclaim someone of our blood, who gives service above self, a national hero.

It would seem, Mr. President, that some people are mistaken in thinking that I am here today asking Government to proclaim Mr. So-And-So a national hero. This is not the case. I must stress, Sir, this is not the case.

While, Mr. President, we are a country which has been said started 25 to 30 years ago to develop, we do have a long history. We have 155 years of Parliamentary Government alone. The history of the Church goes back, according to our report, to 1831.

Mr. President, many years ago to the shores of these Cayman Islands came the seaman of the Spanish and English navy in search of water and meat. Turtles, Mr. President, were in abundance in those days and afterwards came the settlers to be followed by the turtle fishers, the buccaneers, the slaves and latterly, slaves emancipated from their slavery. These shores, Mr. President, were inhospitable shore in those days and our forefathers had a very tough task in carving out our homeland which we are proud of today.

Food in the form of turtles and fish were plentiful, but land that could be cultivated had to be hewn out of the bush. Portable water supplies had to be searched for. The settlers, we can imagine, were prey to nomadic buccaneers. Stock, poultry and the produce of the land were subject to pilferage and theft. Disease-bearing mosquitoes took their toll of life. Hurricanes did damage to the country - sometimes resulting in the loss of life; thus the pioneers of this country came from rugged material. They were brave men and women with courage and cunning. They blazed their own trails through the wilderness which is now the Cayman Islands.

Mr. President, I pose the question, can we fail them in not trying ever to build up a basic national pride and patriotism? What is so wrong about it? We moved from those early pioneering days, and our fathers and mothers continued in nation building. They had no great agricultural land for which to produce large crops for export. We had no great industries worth billions of dollars as in other countries, but by the sweat of their brows and the courage of their hearts they took to the seas. They braved the weather and made a living for the country from turtles and such things as nurse shark hides. They eked a living for the young country by going into the swamp to bark the mango trees for export. Tired and worn out men and woman alike went into the highland interior to cut thatch to create small industries. Then our fathers and brothers left us with tears in their eyes to go to foreign lands - by sea again, braving the weather, sometimes losing a life - to send back a pay cheque which built homes, fed the families and took care of all the basic necessities of our common lives.

Meanwhile, in the area of Government, the old-style-works helped to keep the peace, order and development of good Government and helped to instil in the minds of our people a sense of respect for law and order.

Mr. President, I speak today of men like Mr. Roddy Watler, Mr. Carl Nixon, Bronson McCreedy Yates, people like Mr. Ernest Panton in blessed memory, Mr. T.W. Farrington in blessed memory; and the if I went through the list in this book this morning it would take me quite a long time to do so.

Teachers, Mr. President, toil to educate the populace to teach us to read and write and only some of us learn just that, but what great men we still made. I speak of teachers like Miss. Genevieve Bodden, Miss. Beulah Smith in blessed memory, Miss. Relie Powery in blessed memory, Mr. Hill, Mr. McLaughlin, Mr. Lee, Mr. Sonny Powery, all of whom helped to shape the future.

Nurses, Mr. President, under adverse conditions helped to keep our people healthy. I name but a few - Miss. Leila Yates, Mrs. Nurse Iciline Smith, Nurse Annie Bush, Nurse Earl Mary Bush, Mrs. Evelyn Wood and scores and scores of others. The Midwives, Mr. President, as we know, tried under adverse conditions and circumstances but produced a healthy little nation.

Under social and religious aspects, Mr. President, the churches played the master role giving birth to many community leaders and today the rich tapestry of christian churches are many that fling wide their gates for salvation to be available to all.

So then, Mr. President, our early ancestors were tempered in the fires of various cultures and races as well. Their first battle was for survival, their second for mastery of their environment, both on land and at sea, and this they did. They had one common aim, like the children of Israel, to establish a home. This common aim was to carve a society throughout the years with a common system of law, stable family relationships and stable Governments. Yet, our people were born out of hardship and frustration, but live with a purpose of strength and courage and vast gift for happiness and life. I will plant them upon their land and they shall no more be pulled up out of their land which I have given them. Surely we can give thanks today for this grand heritage of our forefathers and for their emancipation from bondage for the freedoms which we, as their descendants, now enjoy and for the Christian life and principles which they have promoted.

Mr. President, I have given prominence to these developments this morning as they have inspired and formulated the Caymanian character following those early pioneering days to withstand and adopt towards the dramatic development and changes in the style of living which characterised the past 30 years.

Mr. President, Sir, when it comes to this young Member of this Legislative Assembly, I am a nationalist at heart and I am proud of it. I am at liberty to say to my people, 'have confidence in the future and be proud'. We will need that confidence, Sir, if we are to achieve the slow, steady effort that can alone bring ultimate success in getting our people more entrenched in and to accept that we can have pride in our country and awareness of the deeds of our forefathers and be a nationalist without going into independence.

Being a nationalist, Mr. President, is a matter of pride in one's homeland and pride in things connected to the place of one's birth. Why is it that some people do not want to recognise Beloved Isle Cayman as our national song? Why? Why is it not set down in statute that it is our national song? Why is it that nowhere is it set down in law for a national flower as someone said, or a national bird? We talk about them but we do not have the guts to put them down in law. Why? Are we inferior to any other country? There is nothing stopping us from putting these things down in their rightful place in this country if we dare to and if we want to.

Mr. President, I believe, and as a young leader of the people, it should be instilled in their minds that they must consciously believe in themselves and their own destiny and must do so with helpful pride and with confidence and determination to win equality with any other nationality in this country or otherwise. An equality in terms of humanity that, irrespective of power and wealth, can be measured by the growing values of one's own civilisation and culture.

So, Sir, there should not be in this House any move to stifle what I am trying to accomplish here today. It is said that opportunities lost are never regained. We must not lose any opportunity to preserve our heritage or to maintain our culture. We must not lose any opportunity to give praise, in the highest sense of the word, to our own nationals. Why not?

It is being said, Mr. President, by some Members of this House that we cannot have a national hero because we are a Crown Colony or that we cannot have a national hero because we are still under Great Britain. How ridiculous. Who told them so? You, Sir, Her Majesty the Queen or Prime Minister Thatcher. Or is it again an illustration of small mindedness of a few who are afraid to take the great initiative?

Mr. President, when I decided in 1978 that we should have a National Sports Award there was all sorts of criticism. I brought it to the House; all the Members accepted it, but I have to know yet what is going on about it. That is the kind of treatment one gets in this House. I see nothing tangible for me to say that yes they are doing something about it or that yes we should have a National Sports Award.

Just to digress for a moment, Mr. President, in most countries and Islands young people's hero starts out at a local level, so we in Cayman can do the same thing. In the United States they had Baby Ruth, Joe Lewis and Mohammed Ali, all of whom started getting recognition in their home towns. In England it was cricket; great men like Hutton. In Jamaica it was Hedley. In Barbados Worrel and Walcott. In Brazil, Pele in football. In Trinidad, Remardin and Valentine in cricket. All over the world, Mr. President, recognition started at a local level and we can do the same thing today and why should we not? Why should we not give our young people someone they can be proud of? Why cannot we recognise that we have them and that we will always have them? Why cannot we recognise that?

Who are our heroes today? I could name a few that our young people, the future generation of this country, talk about all the time. How about J.R. from Dallas, Alexis from Dynasty and Sonny Crocket from Miami Vice? Our young people do not know anything about the late Captain Royal Bodden, a master builder of ships and buildings like the Town Hall next door to the Assembly building that served as a House Chamber for years, the Post Office and the Library to name a few. They also do not know of Mr. Roddy Watler, a burly no-nonsense of a man who headed the Police Force that totalled less than 12 men back in the 1950's. Probably if we had a man like Mr. Roddy today, we would not see the increase in crime and drugs that progress has brought us. Neither do they know about people like Mr. Dias.

Mr. President, I should be grateful if you would make your feelings known to those who may object out of ignorance so that they may support this motion on the grounds of merit instead of blind loyalty to the Crown. I would be pleased if you would do that because some people are under the impression that we have to be a Crown Colony or that we have to be independent before we can recognise one of our own as a national hero.

Mr. President, if an Order is created it could be set up in such a manner that it would have a Chancellor to maintain the records of the Order, to arrange for investitures, to perform generally all the acts of organisation and to do any work along with the Government that would necessarily involve the Order. The Order could have regulations to set up the Order of precedence setting out how the medal is actually worn and, Mr. President, it should be worn, if it was so created, after any medal for knighthood, in that I believe that that is one of the highest medals bestowed by the Queen. However, the medal of national hero should take the precedence over any other decorations.

A national hero would be a very unique person who would have rendered such service to these Islands of the most distinguished nature and an award of this outstanding honour should not be awarded, I feel, on an honorary basis. That would keep out those people like Americans and other nationalities. It should be awarded to Caymanians born here. I know that rings bad to some people, but we could not go to another country and be a national hero.

There is no sound reason in this wide world why this Legislative Assembly should not pass this motion today. It is not going to take one thing away from us, but it is going to aid us in our national development process in building a sense of pride in our homeland.

Looking back on the history of this country, we can be proud. Today we can say this land is our land and this is our home. It is where the bones of our ancestors rest and this is where we shall stay. Breathe there a man with soul so dead who never to himself has said this is my home, my native land?

The years, Mr. President, have forged a fair sense of pride of homeland in these Islands. The move is on. There is a strong nationalist feeling and I do not think it is bad. It is not bad for anyone to have pride in his country. Let us retain and continue to build it. Let us say we thank Thee Lord for our forefathers: we thank Thee Lord for our country.

Mr. President, I doubt whether the motion will go through, but what I have given you here today is a true picture of the history of these Islands and I would hope that the Members of this House would see fit to change their minds and support such a move.

Mr. President, I do not know if you are going to release the Members to vote on their conscience - the Honourable Members of Government that is - but I believe that if you did we would get a change. Thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:
debate. Does any Member wish to speak?

The motion is now open for

Does any Member wish to speak?

If no Member does wish to speak I think I put the question. I have been looking up my Standing Orders to see whether.....

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, as the seconder of the motion I would have preferred to have heard Government's side of the story or at least the side of those who are objecting to the motion before speaking. However, Mr. President, I am dumbfounded; I am at a loss for words that no one on the Government bench feels that such a motion, to create a national hero in our country, which is going to give recognition to Caymanians, by Caymanians, is even worthy of a single comment. I wonder, Sir, if they are even going to vote.

MR. W. MCKEEVA:

Oh, they are going to vote. We know that.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I support what the mover of the motion has said. I think it is time that we in Cayman start recognising our own Caymanians for their abilities and for their contributions to the building of this country to what it is today. It is very disheartening, Sir, to sit here after the mover has delivered such a fitting, proper, well constructed speech in which he appealed to the consciences of Government to see that the motion is going to be put to the vote and none of them have the interest to speak to the motion. Is it because they have no sensible rationale on which to base their no-vote? I believe that if they had one they would have been on their feet and given it.

Mr. President, I know that we have honours that are bestowed by the Queen, and for those we are grateful, but you know, Sir, sometimes one has to wonder what the criteria is for those honours - because we see real estate salesmen getting them who are not even Caymanian. I know of a lady, a midwife, in my constituency known to us all as Granny Brown who delivered up to five generations and I, Sir, collected information and asked Government to consider her for the highest award handed down by the Queen and she was ignored. Instead they give to it some real estate salesman.

Mr. President, why is it that Caymanians refuse to acknowledge the abilities and the contributions of their own people? yet one can come here from Timbucktoo, spend a couple of hundred thousand dollars and be treated like royalty.

I, too, Sir, am grateful for the contributions made by the lady towards our Cultural Centre, but how can we tell our young people that the Helen Harquail Cultural Centre is a Caymanian Cultural Centre? Where is the recognition for the Caymanian who suffered and laboured through the production of that culture that someone else's name is going to be written in neon lights all over it?

Mr. President, I am very disappointed in the reaction to this motion this morning by the men whom I voted to Executive Council. I would have not been satisfied to have had them do with this motion what they did with the National Sport's Award - work for it and then put it in file 13 and hear nothing more about it. But at least, Sir, they gave that some recognition. With this one nobody even wants to grunt about it.

The time has come in this country when we have to create the mechanism, the methodology by statutes and regulations where it is necessary and where it is appropriate to recognise our Caymanians, and by so doing encourage others to perform, to give of themselves to their country and to ask not what their country can do for them, but what they can do for their country.

I wonder what will be going through the minds of the young people tonight as they listen to this broadcast, and then watch the Bill Cosby show or Miami Vice afterwards and other television programmes on the weekend, and then see that their Government does not even have the respect. None of the Members of this Assembly, with the exception of the Second Elected Member for West Bay and myself, have the respect, for the people who laboured to build this country, to even get up and address this motion. They do not have to support it, but at least they should have the respect to rationalise their not supporting it.

Mr. President, as I have said, I am extremely disappointed in fellow Members of this Assembly. Of course there is no good in their getting up now because I have raved and ranted and say they were only waiting on me to speak because you were going to put the vote. They had no intention of speaking and anybody who gets up now is only trying to salvage some political mileage out of the it. They should have the guts to stick now with their decision and let you put it to the vote for the country to see, not the metal, but the clay and the sand - that moves up and down Seven Mile Beach with every Northwester - of which they are made.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON BENSON O. EBANKS: Yes, Mr. President, only to the extent to say that if one visits the cemetery in West Bay they will see how I honour my heroes.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Yes, Sir, they bury them and then forget about them.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, the Member for North Side was correct in saying that Government should reply to this motion. It has always been the custom, when a Private Member's Motion has been put before the House, that the Government states its position, its rejection or its acceptance of the motion and that the Government gives its reasons for accepting or rejecting.

I too am disappointed that the Government has not made a statement. I am not supporting the motion. This has been known. I made an announcement in Savannah last night and I believe I did the same thing in Bodden Town last week. I intend to give my reasons for not supporting it, and I think I have a right to disagree.

Ralph Waldo Emerson once said, 'The reward of a thing well done is to have done it.' The reward comes from actually doing the thing, and nothing that can be said or done afterwards can change what the person has done. I would say if any contemporary person should be honoured I think that James Manoaah Bodden, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, should receive such an honour for the contribution he has made to the development of these Islands over the years he has spent as a Member of the Legislative Assembly. However, I believe that he does not want such an honour. His satisfaction has come from having made a contribution.

One of the greatest American negroes was Buckatee Washington. He fought for the improvement of the negro race in America at a time when not very much had been thought of the negro. Buckatee Washington said that no man who continues to add something to the material, intellectual and moral well-being of the place in which he lives is left long without proper reward. If you do something and you do it well, you make your contribution to the country. Your reward is in making that contribution and it is not necessary to have awards that are superficial or that are bestowed by some organisation.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay mentioned a long list of Caymanians who well deserve praise - people who have been outstanding in their fields, teachers, nurses, and police officers. Many of these people I know personally, but I do not believe any of them are waiting for a national hero award. I think these people, some of them who now slumber quietly in their graves, had the satisfaction of doing something not for reward, but a satisfaction which came from within knowing that their reward would be in heaven or whatever other place they may have gone.

A person once said that it is not in rewards but it is in the strength to strive the blessing lies. We do not want to encourage people to do things for show simply because there may be an award. It has been said that a boy does not have to go to war to become a hero. All he needs to do is to say that he does not like pie when the slices are short on the table. The story behind this is that in little things you can become heroic. In little ways we can become heroes and have our own award.

I do not support the idea of a National Heroes Day, but I congratulate the two Members for making the presentation to the House. This is their conviction. This is their belief. This is what they would like to see and I am not going to criticize them personally for bringing it. I only want to make the point that this person does not agree.

We already have ten public holidays and I do not see the necessity for adding another one. If we have a National Heroes Day I imagine it will eventually become a holiday. Just to name it a National Heroes Day would not be sufficient.

We should appoint and set aside a particular day, if it is designated a National Heroes Day, as a public holiday. I do not think we need anymore public holidays.

I would like to question what would be the criteria or the criterion for deciding on the award? Who is going to write the guidelines for such an award? Are we going to take a vote on 'Open Line'? Are we going to set up yet another Committee to make recommendations on persons who will receive this award. Are we going to present them with plaques, or medals? No, Mr. President, I think the Government has more than it can handle in its many Portfolios today. We do not need to add to the burden of Government simply to congratulate someone. When a person has done something of merit, they get their award or reward or whatever it may be. People call them on the telephone. People go to visit them. People give them recognition and I do not believe in the artificial recognition like the one that is given by the Queen when the MBE's and OBE's are handed out. I do not believe in this nonsense.

If a man has worth, he will be recognised. So I am not supporting this motion, neither am I condemning the two Members who brought it. I think the motion is an expression of their thoughts and Members of the House must treat the motion with respect whether they agree with it or not.

MR. PRESIDENT:
George Town.

The Second Elected Member for

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, it was not my intention to speak on this motion as I had conveyed my feelings to the mover of the motion. However, I am somewhat insulted about the manner in which the seconder referred to all Members of this House. With the derogatory remarks that he continues to make in this House, Mr. President, I view his behaviour as most disgraceful. When he makes reference to Members of this House, I feel that he is talking to people who are in many respects his superior. He acts like a little boy who has had no upbringing, and, Mr. President, I feel that the time is ripe when this Member should start putting a bridle on his tongue.

We have our democratic rights in this House and if we feel that we are not going to support any particular issue before the House, this is our right. We need not be publicly reprimanded by any Member of this House for taking any particular action here. Mr. President I trust that this Member will in future give the respect to other Members of this House that he is so keenly asking us to give to him. It is an insult, Mr. President when he is going to look at Members of our Executive Council and other Members of this House and say that because they do not reply to a matter before this House they are made of clay and that they have no substance.

I would like to remind that Member that I am not sure about him, but I doubt very much that he has anymore substance than I do. I agree that perhaps Executive Council should have replied to this motion even if it was a negative reply. I agree with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town that they should have answered. But, Mr. President, because other Members of this House did not see fit to support this motion there is no reason for them to be publicly ridiculed.

I doubt very much that if the Member took a census in his district he would be anymore popular than the Member speaking now within the George Town district because my people respect me. They feel I am going a good job for them. I wonder if the Member for North Side has the same sort of support?

Mr. President, I agree with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town that perhaps some recognition need be given, but I have already conveyed my feelings to the Second Elected Member for West Bay as to the reasons why I could not support this motion. The Member for West Bay knows that I have supported many motions that he has brought to this House. As a matter of fact regarding the motion just passed for a Speaker of the House, which I will not revive debate on, there were only three Members who supported that motion and I was one of those Members because I believed in it. But Mr. President, I do not believe that the country is now ready for accepting the order of national heroes and for putting a day aside for such an order.

Mr. President, I trust that to maintain the dignity of this House the Elected Member for North Side, or any other Member, will realize that we are not just puppets. One just does not turn a screw and say that because an issue is brought to this House we have to support it. If an issue is brought to the House and Members feel it is worthy of support. It will be supported.

Mr. President, I am getting sick and tired of the outrageous manner of the Member of North Side in issues like this. I trust that he will understand, and I am making a point today, that I am not going to sit in this House and allow it to happen. Any time he gets up here and is out of order, I will be the first one to put him in place. He has had his lot to say about me in this House that I have not even replied to because I treated it with the contempt it deserved. But for the sake of the people I represent I will no longer do this and I want the Member to know that I am not going to sit here and allow him to get away with this disgraceful behaviour.

I do not support this motion, but it is no reflection of my feeling toward the mover or the seconder. I do it because I do not feel that it is right for our country at this time. Why should we be castigated and renegaded by the Elected Member for North Side because we did not feel it necessary or opportune at this time to support the motion.

Mr. President, I trust that in future the Member will behave himself because he is not intimidating anybody. I do not know one Member in this House whom he can intimidate, so I trust that he will behave himself. I realize that the mover of this motion will reply to this, but I trust he knows that I have not directed anything that I have said so far to him.

Mr. President, I am very disappointed at the behaviour of the Elected Member for North Side and I trust that for the dignity and the upholding of the dignity of this House it will discontinue.

Thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think perhaps before I invite any other Member to speak, it may be timely to take our customary morning break and I will now suspend proceedings for approximately 15 minutes.

AT 11.10 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11.35 A.M.

(TAPE 77)

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
Continuation of the Debate on Private Member's Motion No. 2/87. Does any further Member wish to speak?

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Thank you, Mr. President.
I would like to make a very short contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 2/87 for the Order of National Heroes. I would like to say at this time, Sir, that I think the intention of both the mover and the seconder of the motion were good. Perhaps they feel that there are many in the Islands who deserve recognition and perhaps this would be a good way in which to do so. However, prior to this morning, it was my intention, and it is still until now, not to really support the motion as it stands because I felt that there were already arrangements in place where persons in the Islands who have contributed, in one way or another to this country, in a very significant way can and should be recognized and that as Members of this House we have the ability to have many of these people so recognized.

Mr. President, personally, I can think of a number of people who have either not been recognized with any award from the Queen or with any local awards. I can think of those who have and I felt that the recognition that was given was not the highest honour which really they deserved. But, again, I am told that where it is felt that an individual in the country had not been recognized to the fullest extent which they should have been, this too can be rectified if perhaps it is thought appropriate by the powers that be.

There are a number of people in our country who have contributed, but I will venture to say that in any discussions which one might have with those individuals - most of whom I am thinking of right now are older people, some of whom have passed on and I have had the opportunity of talking at length with them and often - their real reward was not only in what they did, but to have seen the fruits of their labour in the conduct and in the character and contribution which those persons that they had been able to help were making to the country.

Mr. President, I can think right now and this is close to home because I have known this gentleman all my life, but can I think now of my grandfather who is almost 96 and the many young men for whom he took the time to train in the field of navigation. I can think of the many instances that I am aware of when, without any radio or any knowledge of what had taken place after a hurricane in Mosquito Keys, he and his group went out to search, take food and find. I can think of the many widows and orphans whom my grandfather and grandmother, together, have assisted because his position in those days was such that he had extra that he could give and I heard nothing in return except the satisfaction that they received in being able to do this.

Mr. President, it leads me to believe that not everyone here is looking for a national award, but I will say that the means by which we can accomplish this is already in place and I feel that many of those on the Islands whom we should recognize should be thus recognized. As far as another holiday is concerned I cannot support that. We have as many as I think we can cope with right now and if it is intended that the National Heroes Day would be declared a public holiday, I am not sure; maybe this is not the intention, however, if this is the intention, then I could not support another holiday. And, Mr. President, because the mechanism is already in place where our local people can be recognized, I feel that I cannot support the motion at this time.

Thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, I assure you I will not be like the last speaker. She could not make up her mind as usual which way she was going.

Mr. President, I think the motion has a lot of merit to it and I do not see why it should be ridiculed. It is true that we have had a lot of Caymanians who have contributed to the society and most often they are kicked and used as footballs and receive no credit for anything they do. And we must expect that as long as we have a system such as we have at the present time.

I have heard many people from time to time ask if anyone can tell them why Mr. John Doe got the CBE, OBE or the MBE and so forth. We have these awards, which I would say are alien to us. They are given by the whims and fancies of a very select group and because they either like you or because of this or that a name is put in nomination. One never has to do anything to get it. The only qualification that I know is to occupy a seat and warm it for a long time and then you are assured of one these Royal endowments.

I have much pride in my country, maybe too much, and anything that can be done to further the Cayman Islands for the public and future generations, believe me, I will support. I think it is high time that our young people have something to look up to. I am not trying to create a state where we have nothing but heroes or create anymore holidays, because God knows we have enough of those at the present time, but I am sure that we could find one of the existing holidays that have no merit and use that for National Heroes Day. It would give our people some pride, our young people in particular, maybe something to hope for. I know it does not stand a snowball chance in Hades of going through, but maybe times will change and we will get Members in here who can make up their minds and not talk at the same time out of both sides of their mouths so that we will be able to get enough votes to put this through in the future.

There is one thing I am pretty sure of is that if this Committee were set up your existing Executive Council would not be nominees unless they placed themselves in nomination; so, therefore, if there was nothing else to speak for this Motion than that I would support it.

Mr. President, I wish I had twelve votes. I would cast them all for it this morning. Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does the mover wish to exercise his right to reply?

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

thank you.

Oh yes, Mr. President, certainly,

Mr. President, I will try to keep my reply on the high level in which I introduced the motion. First of all I would like to say what I felt the Elected Member for North Side was saying. I thought the Member was asking for Government to say something on the motion; not that they should support it. I thought he said that they should get up and give their reasons why they were or were not supporting it. That was my understanding of what he said. Certainly it did get people up after he sat down, but that is my understanding of what he said and other Members have their right to their understandings.

Mr. President, as Members of the Government have not given their reasons for not supporting the motion, it is difficult for me to reply. I wish that they had gotten up and said that the motion is out of order or that it is out of place, but no one gave me that much respect. I consider it a big slap in my face, but that is not the first time that they have slapped in the face. I was even threatened that they would do so, Sir. However, the Honourable First Elected Member of Council did say that he did something for somebody in the cemetery and I know what that was all about and he knows that I agreed with him on that. This is exactly what I am saying, Mr. President - after those people who have done so much great work for this country are put away we tend to forget them. I am of a different opinion. I give my mother flowers today, not when she is gone lying in a casket while I am up here crying crocodile tears.

Mr. President, one Member talked about the many people whom I mentioned and I agree that all those people got their own personal reward and satisfaction for what they did, but what I am now suggesting is a national reward so that people like this may be remembered by our youth. We need people that our young people can emulate and aspire to, and those old people in the past were such people. We had them in the past, we have them today and I believe we will continue to have them. The fact remains that because some Members do not feel that they are going to be recommended as national heroes they cannot have it. Some Members feel that Jim Bodden might be recommended as a national hero, and they cannot have that either. I am not asking, Mr. President, we appoint someone today, but I am asking Government to create the wherewithal and to bestow on someone this high honour in the future.

The Second Member from Bodden Town in his debate asked who is going to establish the criteria. Mr. President, I thought I had given a very good explanation of that. An Order, Mr. President, is something that we would create - if I have to explain again - by our own statutes and regulations; something that Government would have some control over as in any another country. So that is where the criteria would be established.

One of the Members said that the country is not ready for national heroes. Mr. President, when will our country be ready? I am not trying to cry them down for not supporting it. They have their views. This is a democratic country and I have my views, but I am asking when are we going to be ready to be able to endow on someone such a high honour. If we are not ready today we will never be ready and I can guarantee this country that we are not ever going to be ready as long as this kind of mentality reigns.

Mr. President, I could say a lot more about this, but I am trying to keep the debate on the level on which I started, and since they found nothing there to criticize - they knew it was all true what I said - they just cannot find it in their hearts to say yes because McKeeva was bringing the motion.

I would hope, Mr. President, that as on the motion for a Speaker that you will release the three Honourable Official Members in order for us to get a clear understanding of what the political directorate is saying for the country; and I would ask three Honourable Official Members not to vote so that the country can get a clear understanding of which way the political direction will take us.

I wish Members would reconsider. I feel badly when Members do not get up and pay the respect that is due to such a motion, however, that is their way of doing things. That is how they are made up. I will only ask Members to please vote their conscience and I ask you again, Sir, to stress that the three Honourable Official Members do not vote on this motion.

Mr. President, the motion says: "Whereas there is an ever increasing amount of national pride and awareness on the part of Caymanians; And Whereas there have been dozens of Caymanians who have made great contributions to the establishment and order of good Government and for the convenience and improvement of life in general in these Islands; Be It Therefore Resolved that this Government do establish an Order of National Heroes; And Be It Further Resolved that there be proclaimed a National Heroes Day for these Islands."

Mr. President, I would like to make it clear that I was not asking for a public holiday. As usual my colleague, the Lady Member, is lost and does not know where she is going, but I trust that she will soon find out though. I am asking Members to please vote their conscience.

Private Member's Motion No. 3/87. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/87
HOUSE NUMBERING

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Collective responsibility heh! I can tell you one thing, they are soon going to fall apart according to the fights they are having.

Mr. President, this motion I know will be passed. The coffee room is a very good place in this Assembly in as much that that is where we learn what is going to happen. It is much like Sunset House where you sit down and hear all the Government business for the day. And I guess I will be told on this motion that Government has had it in mind for a long time.

Anyway, Mr. President, I beg to move the following Motion.

"WHEREAS the Cayman Islands have had a tremendous amount of development over the past 20 years;

AND WHEREAS it is desirable for the continuance, convenience and order of good development to institute house numbering in these Islands;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Government, at the earliest convenience, do establish a programme of numbering each house."

Mr. President, I beg to second

MR. PRESIDENT:

Private Member's Motion No.3/87

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, this country has had a tremendous amount of development over the past 20 years, not only in condominiums, hotels and places of business as such, but hundreds of private homes have been built and they are built in places where one would never think to see a house built - off the beaten track as it were. So, in order for someone to be able to know where he is going and to be able to find it without turning left by Aunt Sally's breadfruit tree and on the right by the big birch tree, the numbering of each house will make directions much easier and it is time that we moved to institute such a programme.

I trust that as I have had a little incling of what they will do the Government will maintain their word and support this motion and that I may hear some good reasons coming from them why they support it.

Thank you Sir.

DEBATE ON PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO.3/87

Mr. President, I am not too

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

As usual. (LAUGHTER)

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Confusion in the camp.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Anyhow it lies between Development and Natural Resources and Communication, Works and District Administration. However, what has happened over the past, Mr. President, is that a Committee has been established to deal with the naming of streets and roads and I presume that it is that Committee that will also deal with numbering.

Mr. President, it is a natural sequence that after naming of roads and streets numbering will follow and this is certainly been in the mind of Government for some time, but the naming is still in process. It has not yet been completed and so one will have to be finalized before the other starts. I know there is a good case for the numbering of streets - that is after the streets have been named - because over the years the Post Office has been stacked high with mail for people who have to go there to find it. A delivery service is not possible because these people live in areas unknown to the Post Office.

Mr. President, the numbering of streets will be undertaken sometime in the future, hopefully not in the too distant future, but I imagine that we will have to find somebody who has a bit of experience in street numbering because we do not want to go about doing something unless it is professionally done and we must be seen to be doing all our services here in somewhat of a professional manner. So, Mr. President, I support the motion because as I have said before it has been something that Government had in mind and will certainly undertake even if this motion had not come to the House.

Thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A PIERSON:

Mr. President, I rise in support of Private Member's Motion No.3/87 and I wish, Sir, to congratulate the mover and seconder of the motion for the timeliness of bringing it to the House.

In view, Sir, of the pace of development in Grand Cayman, Government must provide the conveniences and services that will keep pace with this development. Now that our roads are being named it is a logical sequence that houses along those road should also be numbered. The numbering of roads or of houses will not only benefit local residents, but will prove most beneficial and helpful to visitors trying to move around our Island. While the demand for the service is undoubtedly more immediate for Grand Cayman, plans should also be made for providing similar facilities for our Sister Islands in the future.

Again, Mr. President, I congratulate the mover and seconder for the timely manner in which this motion has been brought to this House. I support the Motion, Mr. President.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Well, I can see that the mover of this motion does not have to worry about it passing. No division will be necessary at the end of this debate because I can appreciate the fact that the motion will pass because it is another chance to bring in an expert.

Now if we had not had the possibility of bringing in an expert and employing a half a dozen assistants to help him expert, this motion, like everything else, would not have gone any place. However, happily the Honourable Member in his wisdom has been able to determine that an expert is needed, so we know the motion has passed. There is not much reason to debate it I guess after that.

I am sure that being able to number houses on a street does require a lot of technical education. I am sure, Mr. President, that at the adjournment the House will meet to prepare a Committee to go into the qualifications of this expert and to advise where this expert should be brought from and whether he would have to be a Cambridge graduate or a Harvard graduate, or maybe Oxford even, because it would have to be a place such as that that would, in the Members minds, qualify this person to be brought here. It is like the story I told in the Chamber a year or so ago about the same Honourable Member with the dilemma he had with some of the other experts that had been brought in. Anyhow, I wish the Honourable Member luck with the expert. Now he did say that this would be undertaken in the future. Now I can stand here and envisage, Mr. President, that maybe a hundred years from now somebody may say that we will undertake to do such a thing.....

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

We leave it for you in 1989.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I expect to be here longer, thank God, than 1989. I hope that in 2089 you will still be dealing with me.

To say to undertake it in the future is very, very vague and I would ask the Member that when he gets ready to sum up he asks for another amendment to this motion, and that is that we put in a specific time when this undertaking will be undertaken by the Honourable Member. That was really being as vague as anyone could possibly be.

Now, Mr. President, it was said that the natural sequence to the naming of streets would be to number those houses on those streets. Now, I wonder if the Honourable Member would advise the House how long this other Committee has been functioning to name the streets and how many experts and consultants we had to bring in from abroad?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

You should know that. That Committee was set up in your administration.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Well, in that case then it should have been finished and thrown out of the window like everything else you all did with our administration. This motion must really have more merit than I could have ever imagined it had.

Now as the Honourable Member has been quick to jump to his feet on several occasions I will be very happy to give him the floor one more time if he would advise this Honourable House how many consultants and experts he has brought in at this time to deal with this problem. I will be glad to sit down while you answer.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Ask the Committee that you established to do the numbering because the advice is coming to me from that Committee.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Well, I am sure that the Members we appointed are no longer there so you should be able to enlighten the House as to how many experts you have brought in from England to do this job for you. This, Mr. President, really tells you how far our country has gone down hill - when we would have to bring in experts to even be capable of numbering the houses on a street, or an expert to tell us what we should name our streets. Much, much more should be accomplished by this Government than what is being accomplished.

Do you know as I first entered the Chamber this morning and looked at this Motion, and this is not belittling the mover or the seconder in any respect, but I thought, first of all, what has happened to our country. There are so many national issues that we should be dealing with in this House, but because we have a Government that is not in touch with the people and that is not doing anything to help our people, then it is possible that something would have to be done - so we bring a motion such as this to try to get them something to be able to boast about. It was like the Throne Speech, Mr. President, and I am very glad to see that I have another chance to begin debating tomorrow.

In the Throne Speech the only thing that you could give to the people of Cayman Brac to hold on to was the improved airwaves of Radio Cayman, and the only thing Executive Council could have you boast about for them was the success of the stray dog programme where another pile of experts were brought in to tell us how to kill the few dogs that were down in the dump in the back of dog city.

Anyhow, I was really trying to keep the debate open in the hope that I could touch some of the Members to start them debating. However, Mr. President, we do have important issues in our country that need to be dealt with and as this has now become an important issue I propose that this work be undertaken by June of this year. That will leave about 17 months for this administration to complete their job. And I am sure that it will take at least that time because they will first have to crank up the Government Information Officer - put a fuse under him - and come out with a nice story to tell the public. The Honourable Member will have to sit and appoint a committee that will take six months and then we will have another six months while he decides to choose the names because he will have to write them out and strike them off and write them out again; and then he will have to call on the experts to advise him that what he has struck out is correct - and it will take Mr. Walker and the other assistants quite some time to walk to the Glasshouse to get this done.

So, therefore, I move that this be undertaken commencing in June of this year. Hopefully it will be completed by election time in 1988, and then this Government would have one more important subject to add to the improved airwaves of Radio Cayman and the killing on the Stray Dog Programme. This would be their third accomplishment for the four years in Government.

Therefore, Mr. President, I propose that we put an amendment to this motion asking that this work will commence by June of this year and that will give the Government Information Officer a few months to put out a bulletin to advise the people what is taking place.

I support the motion, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any further Member wish to speak? Does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, as the seconder of the motion I would like to thank Government for accepting the motion. I would also like to thank them for their support, but I, too, am not satisfied with 'sometime in the future'. So maybe we could amend the motion to say that it should be done or at least that it be begun in a specified period because some streets are already named and certainly we could start numbering the houses and other establishments on streets that are already named.

I can see the necessity for the caution because some of the street signs have to be moved around because the Public Works Department in their wisdom have located them in the wrong place. The Queen's Highway is exactly 40 feet long and that is the width of Frank Sound Road. So I can understand the Honourable Member's caution, but I doubt that we would need an expert to count 1,2,3,4,5,6 down the road. Maybe we need an expert to determine which end of the street we need to start counting, but that should certainly cut down on the time of the use of expert if he only has to find out which end of the street we are going to start.

I am happy that Government sees fit in their wisdom to accept the motion. I am also delighted to hear that this could lead to the actually delivery of mail because we all know of the long list of persons waiting for a Post Office Box, not only in George Town, but in other districts as well. So if we could get home delivery of mail I am sure the people of this country would be delighted.

Mr. President, it goes without saying that I support the Motion.

MR. PRESIDENT: If no other Member wishes to speak I invite the mover to exercise his right of reply if he wishes.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, I would also like to thank Government for their support. I suppose that the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council this time is speaking for the whole of Government, and I guess I am correct in saying that they are going to vote for this motion. I hope I am not mistaken. One does not know where Executive Council is going these days with the exception of the Honourable Second Elected Member.

There was a suggestion, Mr. President, to amend the motion, but I feel strong about this and I doubt, knowing Government as I do from my few years of association with them, that they are going to accept a time frame. I know the fights that I have gotten into with them on different motions I have brought in and they are not willing to be tied down. Therefore, I am going to leave the House vote on this as they see fit.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: A Wise move.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I know you good enough now?
(LAUGHTER)

I am going to ask Members to vote on this so that they cannot say that they did not pass this one; so they cannot say that they did not make this a promise; so that they cannot say that it is down according to the House and so that they cannot get away from it.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO.4/87
AMENDMENT TO THE FIREARMS LAW (REVISED)

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No.4/87. The Motion is the same in substance as that put to the House before and I do not now propose see that it is necessary for me to read the whole of this motion in that it is such a lengthy motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think I had better look up Standing Orders to see if they require you to read it. There is also the question of whether, from the point of view of the listening public, it needs reading. I think it might confuse the public in fact.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I am much afraid that if I read this motion, the public is going to be much.....

MR. PRESIDENT:

With that, I agree.

MR. McKEEVA BUSH:

.....because of the type of the motion it is.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I cannot find anything off hand in Standing Orders that specifically states that you are obliged to read the whole terms of the motion and so subject to the views of the House I would think it would suffice, since the Motion has been circulated to all Members, to allow you to take it as read. Unless any Member wishes to object to that course on this particular occasion I think we could follow it.

Very well then, there is no need for you to read it all out, but the motion must be seconded before we go any further.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I beg to second the Private Member's Motion No.4/87.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Deputy Clerk was just consulted me about what should be done in relation to Hansard and I expressed the view that subject to the wishes of the House, although the tape will not record the full wording of the Motion because it has not been read out, yet, nevertheless, the full wording of the Motion should be incorporated in Hansard. I think that would be the wish of the House, it seems to be the sensible arrangement.

So the Motion has been duly moved and seconded and is open for Debate if the Member wishes to speak to it.

(k) by re-numbering clauses 13 to 16 (inclusive) respectively as clauses 19 to 22 (inclusive).".

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, the Whereas and

Resolved sections of the motion read:

"WHEREAS there have been numerous complaints regarding the licensing of Firearms;

BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Firearms Law (Revised) (Law 17 of 1964) be amended.....".

The motion is of the same substance as the amendment that was defeated by Government when I brought it to the House last year in November. What I am asking Government to do is to establish a Board which I contend would make the licensing of firearms more democratic.

The position that we now have is that the Commissioner of Police, or the Deputy Commissioner of Police, is the sole authority to license guns in this country. Of course, we know that this is a form of internal security and both external and internal security are a direct responsibility of His Excellency the Governor. However, I maintain, Sir, that this would take nothing away from the Governor because the Governor would appoint, under the Law, a Civil Servant to be the Chairman and two other Civil Servants and three other Members of the private sector to be a part of the Board.

The new section that I am asking be put into the Law says exactly that.

The new section which is really the relevant part of this motion deals exactly with the appointment of the appropriate authority. So as all Members can see this Law would take nothing away from the Governor's responsibility, but the whole fact of the matter is that the situation existing today, Mr. President, is just not good enough. There are business people who have had general licences and they are now finding themselves restricted, according to the information I have.

Now, Mr. President, I want to find out what good a firearm is to you in your house if you have a farm or a place of business separate and apart from your house? What good is a firearm to business people who make deposits to banks, but who have to keep their firearms at home? What we must bear in mind above all things is the fact that, (1) there is a high increase in crime of burglary; and (2) there are already too many unlicensed guns on the street and what protection do we law abiding citizens have against all these firearms, that we all know, are on the streets.

Now, Mr. President, I do not want anyone to be mistaken about what I am trying to say or do. I am not asking that we give every dog and his cat a gun. All I am asking is that we create the Board to enable the whole licensing process to be a democratic one - so that through the Board the whole licensing process can be handled in a more fair and just manner.

I do not want to hear any foolishness from any Member of this House about us having a fair and just manner now. It is not fair and everyone of us knows what has gone on with the licensing of firearms. People in this country who have had firearms for years are being given the runaround - decent, honest, law abiding citizens. It is just not fair what has gone on.

Now so far, Mr. President, I trust that I have made my point clear about the Governor's responsibility. Any man, if he has any sense at all, who wants to be fair in using his sense will see that the creation of this Board will not take away one thing from the Governor in his responsibility for external and internal security. If we create this Board, we are not digressing from the norm of other dependent territories - and even if we had to, there is nothing to say that we should.

Once, and I have always maintained this, Mr. President, we find a situation that is good and workable here, and we need to do something, we do it. On the other hand if there is something that we do not want to do, but because it is protocol, we must do it. That should never be our attitude. We have a unique country and I am really sick and tired of being told about protocol this, and protocol the next thing. I have never heard in my life more about protocol and what the norm is in other territories. I find that when it suits the Government to say that something is not right in this country because they do not do it in other countries, they say it. It is like the State Funeral we should have had for the late Mr. Ernest Panton. That is what I am talking about, that sort of thing. We should do away with it. Why should we have to follow every little footstep that is made 15,000 miles away from here? We have a situation and we should do something about it. So I do not want to hear any foolishness about the Commissioner of Police or the next man. Let us do something to help the situation that we are facing - and it is serious.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think perhaps before the debate on this it may be sensible that we take our lunch break, so I will suspend proceedings until approximately 2:15 p.m.

AT 12:42 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:20 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Private Member's Motion No. 4/87

is now open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak? The Honourable Third Official Member of Executive Council.

DEBATE ON PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/87

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON:

Mr. President, I am happy that between November 1986 and now the mover of this motion seems not to have turned up any new evidence in support of what he had proposed at that time. It is therefore not difficult for me, on behalf of the Government Bench, to defend the reasons for not being in a position to support the motion.

The House has been told, Sir, that the present policy is an unfair one and that it is not right for the sole responsibility for licensing to be wholly vested in any one individual. We have been told that businessmen who have, for many years in the past, had general licences are now having those licences restricted.

The motion, Mr. President, does not, once again, address the main issues that were raised when the matter was last debated. It has not addressed the situation in relation to the Lesser Islands. It has not addressed the situation in relation to emergencies and the not infrequent need to have instant revocation and handing-over of firearms; and it has not really addressed and brought to the attention of the public the fact that the existing legislation makes provision for dissatisfied persons to file an Appeal against the decision of the present licensing authority.

It may be of some help, Sir, if I should explain that the existing practice of the licensing authority in the Cayman Islands is similar to that which is practiced in most jurisdictions elsewhere and that is that the responsibility for law and order, in relation to firearms, is generally vested in the Police.

The Royal Cayman Islands Police have a combined significant number of years of professional experience in dealing with these matters and it would seem that we would have to justify, much more than we have done to date, the reasons for changing the present procedures.

I believe, Sir, that what prompted the Mover back in November and again on this occasion to raise this matter is perhaps the same reason that has prompted a number of other Honourable Members to raise this matter from time to time as it relates to what is perceived to be a form of discrimination, victimisation and unfair practices within the existing licensing policy. I should explain, Sir, that the policy itself has not changed, but certain procedures for renewing licenses have been fine-tuned and refined and it is in this process of fine-tuning that a number of licensees have seemingly been aggravated and aggrieved.

It has been the policy in the Cayman Islands, Sir, to issue firearms' licences in two basic categories - a general licence being the first category and a restricted licence being the second. The majority of licences issued in this country many years ago fell into the general licence category and that general licence is an open licence that permits the holder to take his firearm whenever and wherever he wished within the jurisdiction. A restricted licence on the other hand authorises the holder to have possession and use of a firearm within a restricted context, and it is the application of this context of restriction that a certain amount of agitation has now arisen.

I had explained on the previous occasion, Sir, that within the present licensing authority there is a growing sophistication and formalisation of the policy of reviewing premises, of reviewing applicants and of reviewing applications with a view to streamlining our ability to regulate on an intelligent basis the total market of firearms in the country.

During this process of refinement, the licensing authority, at the beginning of each year for the past two years, has been in the process of going back in the records as far as possible to the original applications filed with them and reviewing the purpose for which the application was first made; and wherever possible, upon renewal of such licences, those licences are restricted to the use for which the applicant in the original application stated as his need for the licence.

It is similar, Mr. President, to applying for a driver's licence. We have a variety of category of drivers' licences and we submit ourselves and our applications for a licence depending upon what we want it for. If we want a licence to drive a motor car we apply for a licence for a motor car. If we wish a licence to drive heavy equipment we apply for a licence to enable us to be able to drive heavy equipment. And so it is with a firearm - persons made application and stated on the application the purpose for which they wished to have the licence and on the basis of the information contained in the records, wherever possible, the licensing authority restricts such licences to those purposes. It is in this process, Sir, that evidently a number of persons have become offended and hence the allegations of unfair practices, victimisation, discrimination, etc.

One thing that has been brought to the attention of the licensing authority, that the authority is prepared to reconsider, is the question of restricting the licences to a particular hour of the day. This complaint has been mainly felt in the farming communities where the 8.00 o'clock p.m. curfew seems to somehow present some difficulties for farmers who have to travel long distances to have access to their farm lands. So, for the Elected Member for East End who spoke about victimisation and confusion in his contribution to the Throne Speech, Sir, perhaps I could offer a bit of consolation by saying that the licensing authority is in the process, at this moment, of reviewing this 8.00 o'clock p.m. curfew. In relation though, Sir, please let me strike a word of caution to those licences that are being used for genuine farming purposes.

We have a situation in our developing society, Mr. President, where people tend to resist change as a matter of course and these changes in relation to the firearms licensing is just another example where one meets resistance. Let me assure this Honourable House, Sir, that at no time in the past, nor at the present time, nor will there be in the future any form of victimisation or discrimination by the licensing authority in relation to this matter.

I appreciate that the intention of establishing an authority of the kind proposed in the motion, Sir, would appear, at first glance, to be far more democratic and far more controllable as we understand the functions of Boards and Committees in the public sector context, and it would seem as if having an authority with the membership as suggested would present the ability to better be able to screen applications to deal with granting of licences, to deal with issuing of permits and also to deal with the revocation of those licences. But, Mr. President, we have some practical problems because this authority would have to delegate some of its functions to officers who would present themselves at the scenes of crimes and which officers would, of necessity, have to exercise some form of jurisdiction where firearms' regulations are concerned. And so the authority itself cannot fulfil every single obligation, as it would appear is intended, and the authority cannot present itself at every location and on every occasion where the revocation of a licence might become necessary.

Also, Mr. President, we know from experiences elsewhere what the establishment of Committees and Boards tend to do. We heard the word scandal used in the debate in relation to other matters, Sir, and I would venture to suggest that we have to be careful that we do not in this instance contemplate setting up another authority that could lead to something that might resemble a scandal.

We also know too, Sir, that there is a tendency in establishing these authorities and Boards, there is a tendency and a temptation sometimes to make allegations of political favouritism in the appointments and the Civil Servants who are appointed sometimes might put themselves into positions of being heavily leaned upon, and I think it would be wise to lead ourselves away from that situation when it comes to the enforcement of law and order in our community with respect to something as lethal and potentially dangerous as firearms.

As I said, Sir, the existing licensing authority has among it a considerable number of years of professional experience - experience that ordinary Civil Servants are unable to bring to bear on this subject - and from that prospective, Sir, we would be best advised to leave things as they are.

With those few words, Sir, the Government cannot support the motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for West Bay...I am so sorry, for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I fully support the motion before the House. I believe this motion would not have come if the Members had been satisfied that the licensing process had been working well. I believe that the two Members who brought it received, from members of the public, many queries on the licensing of guns.

I personally have received many representations, not only from the people of my district, but from other constituencies. I had one visit on a Sunday morning where a man who brought copies of gun licences that had been issued over many years complained that when he had taken in his licence to have it renewed this year he simply was given him an acknowledgment and he did not know on the day that he came to me whether he would get the licence or not. So there has been a communication gap between the licensing authority and the people seeking licences.

Abraham Lincoln once said that no man is good enough to govern another without that other person's consent. No man is strong enough to govern without the consent of the person being governed. This simply means that the Government cannot pass a strict law nor enforce a strict policy unless the public believes that that law or that policy is fair. If people want guns, people will have guns, despite the law.

We can examine the situation in Jamaica where they passed a strict gun law. They set up a gun Court with severe penalties and found out later that the Government's policies had been wrong, and that violence involving guns continued despite the law.

The Honourable Third Official Member mentioned that there has been no change in policy - God help us if there had been! I fully believe there has been not only been a change in policy, but a change in directives handed down to the Commissioner of Police and I hold Executive Council responsible for the change. We know that the Chief of Police is responsible for the control of guns, but I do not see a new Commissioner of Police taking upon himself the restrictions without the support of the Executive Council. If he has done so, I would think it was time for Executive Council to write new regulations, as they have the power under the law, and to give new directives. If the policy was fair, people would abide by it.

The people who seek guns in these Islands fall into three categories; those people who are mostly farmers or sportsmen who have hunted rabbits and birds for the protection of their farms and to provide food for their people. The other category would be those people who feel the need for a gun to protect their businesses or their personal property - businessmen who have to move in the night with large quantities of cash; and the third category are the members of the Gun Club. It is my understanding that if one wants a gun licence one only has to say that one is a member of the Gun Club. One does not have to prove it. One does not have to produce any membership card. One only has to say that he is a member of the Gun Club, state how many weapons he wants and can be given a licence for six, eight, ten, one, or whatever number he can afford to buy and own.

This policy is wrong, because we are discriminating against the honest, law abiding citizen. There has been no problem that I know of concerning people with licensed guns. The problem has been with the unlicensed guns. If a gun is licensed and somebody is shot there are ballistic experts who can determine whether a particular bullet was fired from a particular gun. They can tell us when the gun was last fired and if it turned out that the bullet had come from a snub-nosed .38 Smith and Western gun the Police would know who owned that particular gun, and with their computers and records it would not take an expert detective to trace the gun.

This motion will not pass since the Government has announced that it will vote against it. But even if the motion does not pass it will have served its purpose if it awakens the Government to the fact that they cannot be autocratic and get away with it. It will serve its purpose if it can bring about a review of the licensing policy adopted by the Government, because I am not accepting that the Commissioner of Police alone is responsible for the licensing policy.

I have seen several of the new licences that have been issued. I have seen the restrictions put on some of them. I remember a man showing me a licence written on it that the gun must be confined to his own land, and naturally, if he owned the plantation many miles away and wanted to hunt rabbits it would be physically impossible to do so since he could not remove the gun from his house to his plantation without travelling over somebody else's land.

I saw a licence where the use was restricted to 8.00 p.m. Of course it was the language that is so badly used that it could be assumed that it would be quite all right to use it after 12.00 a.m. in the night. So he would have to put up his gun at 8.00 p.m., but he could break it out at 1.00 a.m. It could not be used after 8.00 p.m., but probably could be used, if the language was strictly interpreted, after 12.00 a.m.

Then there was the very strange case where, despite the restrictions on it, the man was given both a general and a restricted licence as the licensing officer had not struck off one or the other. So the person asked me what he should do and I said that he should hide that licence because it could well become a collectors item. And he is walking around with a licence that can be either general or restricted whichever way he wants to use it.

I fully support this motion because its presence in this House today is an indication that the Government has again gone wrong in one of its weird policy decisions. If it means setting up an authority to bring sense into the licensing policy, I, too, will support that motion. If, however, the Government after listening to the debate can construct a reasonable policy and hammer out reasonable directives to the Commissioner of Police, and, if he in turn can act in a reasonable manner, the need for the licensing authority would disappear. But until such time as we get an indication from the Government that it is willing to act in a reasonable manner I will stand by my conviction, that the present policies are unreasonable and should be changed, and will support the motion.

I congratulate the Members who have brought it. I am sorry I was not here at its introduction and so do not know what comments were made by the Second Elected Member for West Bay who moved it. He has been accused of not addressing certain problems, but in fairness to the him I must say that when he brings a motion he seems to do a considerable amount of research. This is commendable and although I do not always support all of his motions I must say that this one can be supported with alacrity because this motion is an indication that an injustice is being done to the honest citizens of this country - and if we continue with our present policy we will find that no honest citizen will have a licence for a gun and all the guns will be unlicensed and in the hands of the criminal element who will not even bother to apply.

If the policy is too strict, Government will defeat the very act they are trying to carry out. I know that if I were the Commissioner of Police I would like to see the situation where there were no guns at all in the Cayman Islands. But, there is a big difference between the ideal situation and the practical situation. I dare say today that we have fewer shotguns in the Cayman Islands than we had when I was a boy because it is my recollection that nearly every farmer in those days owned a shotgun. So it has been traditional for Caymanians to own guns and there has been no serious increase in crime due to licensed guns.

We want a Firearms Law that is reasonable. We want a law that the public will respect. We must endeavour at all times to satisfy the public. I dare say that if Government were to announce that they would give a licence to anybody who applied we would not see a big rush to get licences because many of our people are afraid of guns and many of them do not want them in their homes, but there are many people who have lived with guns from the time they were children and they have grown up with a responsibility. They know the dangers. They have been taught from infancy that they must not play with a loaded gun and if they handle a gun the first thing they should do is to find out whether it is loaded or not.

What is the situation when the criminal knows that there is no gun in the House? Will this not encourage him to break into it more quickly. If he is kept in a state where he does not know whether he will meet a shotgun blast in the night, he will keep away from the house.

I will relate one personal incident. I do so simply to illustrate the point because I do not want the use of that gun. During the time when I was on Executive Council my life was threatened by a person who believed that I was responsible for the police work. This person had been involved in drugs. He put a contract on my head and offered a man $5,000 to shoot me. I saw Commissioner Stowers and he loaned me a useful gun - a .38 snub-nosed Smith and Western with bullets as big as one's thumb (LAUGHTER). I carried that gun with me day and night for about three months. Since the new election, a police officer called on me and took the gun away. He said, "We see that you have been loaned a gun," -- it was written in the book, it was all documented -- "and we must have it back.", and the gun was taken away from me.

Now, if this was done to me whom I consider to be, even if I have to boast, one of the leading citizens in this country, what will they do to lesser people? I still have a gun which I have had for many years. It is a .22 Barreta - it is really a toy - and one could not stop a man with it. I suppose for speaking about this the police will not take it (LAUGHTER).... but they came and took away the gun. They did not give me any choice - they took the gun - and I am not mentioning this because I hope I will never need it again, but the person of whom I speak was a foreign national. He has been deported or has been made a prohibited immigrant and I trust he will not come back. However, honest citizens are in danger of their lives.

If one looks at the Police Report on crime which was Tabled in this House it can be seen that of the three highest categories of crimes committed two were burglaries and thefts - and burglary is a crime where a person breaks and enters into private property - which means that last year many homes were broken into. I mentioned in my debate on the Throne Speech that the Magistrate had told the Rotary Club that, of the drug offenders coming before him, at least 50 percent admit that they steal to satisfy their drug habit or to support the drug habit; and it is my belief that responsible citizens in this country could be threatened by people crazed and wanting money for drugs. In the middle of the night one could well have somebody coming into his home with a gun demanding money. And I believe that a man has a right to defend himself and his home and I think that if any man breaks into anybody's house in the middle of the night, the owner of that property should defend himself and he should use as much force as is necessary - if it means killing the intruder, kill him. So, we do not want to encourage a situation where the responsible citizen is left in the hands of the criminal element. It is true that we are told that the police will protect us, but no matter how many policemen we have they cannot help if somebody knocks on one's door in the middle of the night.

The Government must change its policy. I know that there is a danger in handguns. The United States is today suffering because it has had too liberal a policy with regard to the use of handguns. One can walk into a store in the United States and purchase a gun quite easily, in fact almost as easily as one can buy a stick of chewing gum. A gun can be ordered by mail in the United States quite easily, but Americans have always been a people from the days of the old West who are not afraid to live by the gun. I am not advocating so liberal a policy, but I believe that anyone who needs a gun and who wants a gun, providing that person is a responsible, honest citizen, that person should have the right to have a licensed gun and should be held responsible for its use and held responsible for its care and safekeeping.

The slipshod policy of this Government will avail nothing. We will breed a new type of criminal - the honest person who has become a criminal because of an unjust law. If people have a law that they cannot bear they will break it.

A lot was said against this motion with regard to the difficulties of the committee or the authority, to the problems of revocation and I could spend probably another hour if I cared to deal with those matters; but today I am not concerned with the mere technicalities. I want to confine my debate, as one Member said, to keep it on a high level and deal with the principle. The principle of the tight-fisted control is wrong and Government must change it.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? Sorry, I noted you wish to speak and you caught my eye. I was simply going to ask whether you would prefer that we took the break before you spoke? I should otherwise expect to take it within ten minutes or. So if you were going to speak for less than that you could complete your speech in the time. If you want to speak for longer you may prefer to defer starting.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

I speak from notes, Sir. I may be ten minutes, fifteen or maybe twenty minutes, Sir. It is probably better to take the break now.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Very well.
In that case I will suspend proceedings for about fifteen minutes.

AT 3:11 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:27 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I rise to support Private Member's Motion No.4/87 which basically calls for the establishment of an authority for the licensing of guns.

Once again, Mr. President, I am sorry to hear that Government is not going to accept the motion nor to entertain, pro or con, our arguments because it is obvious that they make up their minds before they hear the rationale as to why these motions have been brought.

The Honourable Third Official Member in speaking on behalf of the Government bench quite correctly stated and repeatedly emphasised that the police, that is the Chief of Police and the Deputy who now do the licensing of guns have many year's experience in the handling of guns. But, Mr. President, I am of the opinion that that is only half the weight that should be given to any decision concerning whether or not anyone should be given a gun licence. I feel that the other half that I submit is knowledge of the person who is applying for the gun licence and knowledge of the traditional use of guns in the Cayman Islands is sadly lacking in those people, or at least in the way guns have been licensed in 1987.

Mr. President there are many people in my constituency who have had gun licences for many, many years. In instances the guns were handed down from their fathers and they used the guns to protect their plantations and to hunt on other people's plantations. Mr. President, I enjoy a rabbit stew as much as any man and I had a general licence for a .12 gauge shotgun which I used to use to hunt rabbits on our families property and on other people's property from whom I had permission. Often people say that rabbits are destroying their provisions and so if one wanted a rabbit one would go and shoot one if it was feeding at some place.

Now, when I handed in my licence to have it renewed this time it was renewed as a restricted licence to home and family lands for hunting and not to be used on the streets after 8.00 p.m. I, like many other citizens in this country and in my constituency, have problems with that kind of a restriction because some of our family lands are completely surrounded by other people's property and although some people may say that because I have some connections with a helicopter I could get dropped on to my land without breaking the law. But I would be breaking another law because the helicopter cannot land on that land. Furthermore, some of that land is located in places of an hour's walk from any road. Rabbits often feed as everyone knows on the tide, and if we have sunlight until 6:30 or 7:00 o'clock when I am down in white mud, for instance, hunting rabbits I am going to have difficulty getting my gun back in my house in Little Spot by 8:00 o'clock.

Mr. President, I was told rightly or wrongly by the Chief of Police that these new directives from Executive Council were going to reduce the number of general licences and that Executive Council was supporting him fully in the matter. If any of these honest citizens who had general licences had any inference of the law, or if there was any reason to restrict the licence or if Government was to take a decision and say that no more general licences were going to be issued I could understand that. But why go against the traditions of Cayman and not inform these people. There was no press release and neither was there any attempt to communicate to the public what Government's rationale was, if there was one, to change people's licences from general to restricted. And Mr. President, I am not altogether certain, I hope that it is not the case, but it is my understanding that a few people have been allowed to retain general licences. Now I hope that that is not the case, because in that case this little poem would have to apply: It is not what you know, but who. It is not only who, but what they are willing to do for you. Why should they do it? because they know you; because you are around; because you are good publicly - not quietly. When one is close to the seat of power it rubs off like lint, so take a few specks and put it on your sleeve for all to see that you are one of them.

Familiarity will always breed promotions. If, as I was told by the Chief of Police, that Executive Council had taken a decision to reduce the number of general licences then they should have decided to remove them all.

Mr. President I do not accept the Honourable Third Official Member's submission that no new evidence has been put forward here today than was put forward in November when the amendment was filed for the law as it was being amended at that time. To the contrary, Sir, I believe that these licences are evidence of exactly what we were complaining about in November when we filed the amendment to create an authority to licence guns.

Mr. President, I heard of one peculiar incident from a constituent member of mine who is a courier of large sums of money at weekends for a big firm in town. He used to take his gun along when carrying large sums of money. He had a general licence for his gun, but when he renewed it in 1987 it was restricted. He came to my office. I called the Chief of Police and attempted to explain the particular circumstances surrounding the case. The Chief of Police may have listened to some of what I was saying, but he maintained that no one should carry a gun when taking funds to the bank and that this man was not entitled to have a gun with him. So, I asked the Chief of Police if he would be prepared to have the police provide an escort for this man because of the particular circumstances and the large quantities of money involved. Now, the Chief of Police assured me that would be done. We made arrangements for this gentleman to call the police from the store at 11:00 'clock at night when he was leaving. The Chief of Police assured us that the police would provide an escort. The gentleman and his boss called the police. They waited an hour and the police did not show up. They went to the bank, came back and the police had still not shown up. I called the Chief of Police the very next day and asked what had happened. He said that he was not sure at that point but that he would investigate and get back to me. Approximately four weeks later I am still waiting to get that call. The reason that gentleman was employed by the establishment was because he had a general licence and was prepared to take it with him when going to the bank, and because the police had stated in the past that under no circumstances were they going to provide courier services.

A lot has been made about this authority not being able to be at the scene of a crime to revoke a licence, etcetera, etcetera. But, Mr. President, that can be handled just like the Caymanian Protection Board. The Board does not walk around in masks and apprehend people. They have enforcement officers to do it, and certainly the Law can be amended.

We have a new brilliant Attorney General and I am sure that he can find a way to provide for a Police Officer to revoke or to take someone's gun at the scene of a crime, or as the necessity arose, without having to get the authority out of bed and dressed to go down and have a board meeting to find out whether the man's licence can be taken. That is not the issue. That can be dealt with under other sections and areas of the Law. The issue here is the democratic principle. And I believe that the authority can combine knowledge of people in this country, knowledge of the traditional use of guns in this country and experience and knowledge about guns to make more democratic decisions about a gun licence than one person.

The Honourable Third Official Member said that this whole procedure was brought about by Government attempting to fine-tune the Law. In that fine-tuning process, Sir, they took out some integral parts of the engine and I think it is going to be very difficult to get it running smoothly again because the people have lost the respect and confidence in the process. There are law abiding citizens in this country who feel they have been unjustly victimised for reasons that they cannot comprehend, and it is going to be very difficult to restore that respect and confidence in any one person even if we now create an authority to issue licences.

I agree fully Sir with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town that we cannot enforce a law in this country that the people do not accept, and the majority of law abiding citizens in this country do not accept these new directives about gun licensing. It is obvious that the people are unhappy with it. They are not accepting it and all we are going to do is make criminals out of people who previously were good law abiding leading citizens in this community. It is unfair to the citizens because it is an unnecessary step. If the police or anybody in Government can put forward a series of events that demonstrate that farmers and law abiding citizens in this country - who have had for years and years and years general licences for .12 gauge shotguns for hunting, whether it be for their plantations or other people's - have done something wrong and where they deserve to be treated like criminals, I will support it.

Mr. President, when Government makes these kinds of decisions it has to give cognisance to the traditional practices of this country otherwise the people are not going to accept it. As the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town suggested this could lead to the situation where the only people in this country who have guns are criminals who are not worried about licences. What we are doing is victimising law abiding, honest citizens who have traditionally lived this way of life because of what they believe the criminal element might do.

Mr. President, I believe that the citizens of this country have a right to protect themselves and I told this to the Chief of Police. He did not agree with me. He told me so, but he has his opinion. I believe that the only thing this change in policy is going to do is to increase the number, the quantity, the calibre and the size of unlicensed guns in this country. My personal opinion is that anybody who pushes anti-gun legislation is a traitor and should be treated as such.

I support the motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member of Executive Council.

The Honourable First Elected

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, politics makes for strange bedfellows, Sir, (LAUGHTER) and as regards the poem I assure the Member that cannot apply to me.

I do not own a firearm. I will never have a firearm, if I can help it, because I do not believe that I am trained to use it. I believe that a firearm in the hands of an untrained person is almost as dangerous as the right to speak given to some people. (LAUGHTER)

Now, Mr. President, I would like to elaborate a bit on what the Honourable Third Official Member said. I am not going to go into the technical aspects of the Law, but I believe that he would welcome some elaboration on one or two points that he made and, in fact, one important one which he pointed out to me that he neglected to make altogether.

Maybe at the commencement of my deliberation, Mr. President, I should say that with reference to the statement that is purported to have been made by the Commissioner of Police, the statement is denied by the Commissioner and my understanding is that what he said was, in words to the effect, that in respect of the particular licence application, the subject of the discussion, his decision was firm and he pointed out the right of the applicant to appeal his decision.

Mr. President, as a result of constituency representation which we received, we held informal talks with the Commissioner of Police and the Deputy Commissioner and as was said by the Honourable Third Official Member they readily understood the sensitivity of some of the forms of restriction which had been placed or that was being placed on licences and that they were prepared to consider varying the existing restrictions which had been placed, particularly, on licences for hunting or protection of farms.

For example, Mr. President, I believe that the system that was being applied was that people were being asked to state the property on which they would be hunting, or in other instances it said that it was restricted to family property. I believe that the authority, in considering the varying of this restriction, will be amenable to accepting the change of that wording to something which would say: "restricted to hunting on property where permission of the landowner has been granted".

It is just as dangerous, Mr. President, for people to enter other persons' properties without permission as it is inconvenient to persons not being able to use the property to shoot; because if a person has not given permission for his land to be used for shooting he would not be expecting hunters to be there and could end up being shot innocently.

The 8.00 p.m. curfew, too, Mr. President, I understand will be reviewed and the thought behind that was to ensure that guns were not being carried indiscriminately around the place. However, when it was pointed out that the sun sets at different times, very late sometimes, of the year - after seven o'clock in many instances - the eight o'clock curfew was unreasonable. This was readily admitted and I believe that they will probably copy from the Motor Vehicle Law a suitable time after which the gun should not be on the street or in the person's possession in public. As Members will realise, for example, the Motor Vehicle Law does not state that car lights must be turned on at 6:00 or 6:30. It says that they must be on half an hour after sunset. Whatever the decided time would be, after sunset, when the police would not want guns in general areas and whether it is considered expedient to say one and a half or two hours, I believe that they will be content to name that time in the same way that the Motor Vehicle Law requires vehicles to have lights on one half hours after sunset.

Reference has also been made, Mr. President, to the licensing of firearms for persons to accompany large amounts of cash from some of the stores that stay open late to the bank. It is my information that the only gun - and that was a handgun - that had been licensed for that purpose has been renewed, unchanged, this year. Now I gather that during the course of actually taking the cash to the bank, some security guards who had been hired on the premises began taking along their shotguns, for which they had no licence, and when they did apply they were denied because a shotgun is not regarded as an appropriate weapon or firearm for a guard whilst accompanying cash to a bank at night. The licence of the handgun for this purpose was renewed.

Mr. President, I want to make it abundantly clear that the statement attributed to the Commissioner of Police has been denied. I want to make it abundantly clear that that includes the reference to Executive Council having issued new directives.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does the mover of the motion wish to exercise his right to reply?

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Members who supported the motion.

Mr. President, I thank those

The Honourable Third Official Member raised quite a few matters and I realise that Government is not accepting the motion. I do not think, however, that they have given any reasonable excuse not to. It is just one of those things and I think the Honourable Member was a little bit too big for his breeches saying that this cannot be done. A lot has been said mind you.

The Honourable Member in his reply said that I introduced no new evidence to convince them that this Board should be created. Mr. President, I do not see how much more evidence I could create. All the evidence that is needed is there. People have not been treated fairly and Government knows this. We just heard the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council deny something that the Commissioner of Police was purported to have said. I think there is enough evidence if they honestly want to support a Board. Even if I brought a basket-full of evidence, it would never change their minds. Again it is likened to them saying that they cannot do something because the Governor is in charge. All that, the Honourable First Elected Member talks about, 'babbling' could have been stopped short with those few words: 'The Governor is in charge, it is not done anywhere else, therefore this colony is not going to do it.'. That is all they needed to say and this motion could have been dispensed with a long time ago, but I do not intend to get to hot with them this afternoon.

The Honourable Third Official Member asked whether the Lesser Islands needs were going to be addressed. He said that the motion did not address the needs of the Lesser Islands. Mr. President, I do not see how the Honourable Member of Government could say that. Section 30 of the Firearms Law (Revised) states:

"(1) The appropriate authority for the grant, amendment or revocation of any Gunsmith's Licence shall be the Governor.

(2) The appropriate authority in Grand Cayman for the grant, amendment or revocation of any Firearm Import Permit, or Firearm Export Permit, or Firearm User's (Special) Permit shall be the Commissioner and the appropriate authority in the Lesser Islands shall be the District Commissioner.

(3) The appropriate authority in Grand Cayman for the grant, amendment or revocation of any Firearm User's Licence shall be the Commissioner and the appropriate authority in the Lesser Island shall be the District Commissioner.

(4) The appropriate authority in Grand Cayman for the grant, amendment or revocation of any permit not specified in subsections (1) to (3) shall be the Commissioner and in the Lesser Islands the District Commissioner."

Mr. President, this is the section that I am asking be removed. The proposed new section states:

"(1) There is hereby established the Firearms Licensing Authority which is the appropriate authority for the grant, amendment or revocation of any licence or permit.

(2) The appropriate authority shall consist of a Chairman who shall be a public officer and five other members, two of whom shall be public officers and three of whom shall be persons who are not public officers, all of which members shall be appointed by the Governor to hold office, unless the appointment is sooner terminated, for a period of one year and shall be eligible for reappointment.

(3) In the exercise of its functions and powers the appropriate authority shall comply with any general or special directions given to it by the Governor."

So, Mr. President, the Honourable Member could have answered this himself if he had read the motion because the Governor is the person who makes the appointment - and what would stop the Governor from appointing the District Commissioner as a member of the Board?, and the Board will then deal with the applications for permits from the Lesser Islands. I do not think that his argument, in relation to the needs of the Lesser Islands not being addressed in my motion, has any substance whatsoever. I think that the Honourable Member missed the boat deliberately or that he did not read the motion, or that he did not take the motion and relate it to the Law. Do not play with the Elected Members of Executive Council d'ya hear! - they can get you lost more than that.

The other point the Honourable Member made was that whoever is denied a licence can appeal. Now - appeal to whom? When a licence is turned down and one goes to the present licensing authority they say it is not they who changed the policy but Executive Council who took the decision not to renew licences in their former category. Then one goes to Executive Council and hear just what the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council just said. I mean, where would anybody be? People would be running up and down in a stupor! I had this happen to me with the licensing of taxes. I went to one authority and was told: 'Look boy, I cannot help you - you know this is what Executive Council says.'. Then when you go to Members of Council they say: 'Look, we did not say this, this is what the Member is supposed to do and he should tell you so.'.

Where does a Member of Government stand in cases like this when constituents come to him? Besides that, Mr. President, there is what is known as appealing from Caesar to Caesar. I understand the Honourable Third Official Member, Mr. President. He and I are not going to get into an argument. I know who is directing whom. But one thing that I must take umbrage to is the part where he interjected - I do not see how he related it, however - about the reference to a scandal of the increase in crime in the country. Mr. President, I can only believe that he was referring to my debate on the Throne Speech when I said that it was a scandal in the country, a scandal in the Government and a scandal on previous Governments for the increase in crime. I stand by that, Mr. President. I will not change my mind on it. I do not see how it related to this unless they are talking about all those unlicensed, illegal firearms in the country that we hear about.

I am going to give way to the Government bench so that one Honourable Member can get up and tell me and inform this country what they are doing about all these illegal firearms. I would like to be told about them. We all hear about it and every Member has complained about it.

MR. PRESIDENT:
speech, because....

Has the Member finished his

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

have not finished my speech, Sir. (LAUGHTER) I was giving way to Government to inform us what they are doing about the use of all these firearms coming into the country.

No Mr. President, you know I

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
about that.

They are obviously not worried

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

It seems that they are not worried about it. They are worried about the man with the shotgun who has been shooting rabbits for the last 25 to 30 years. Mr. President, that is what I call a misguided policy. I do not see the Honourable Member's reference to the scandal that I talked about, but I would like them to do something about the crime rate.

Now, Mr. President, the other point the Honourable Member made was about the expertise of the present authority. Again, that is very simple. For the sake of continuity the Commissioner or his Deputy could be the Chairman. The democratic part is that there would be other members who would, as in any committee, be able to express their views and cast a vote so that we can abide by the democratic process. So why this talk about not being able to do it because the expertise of the present authority has no bearing on this motion. The whole thing that Members are missing, deliberately or because either because they are blind, is that the Governor's prerogative is there and he will be the one to appoint the Board and to say who will go on it. I have that much respect for the Governor. I think I know him well enough that he ought to know who is good or bad in this country today.

All this talk about giving people firearms has no place in this debate. I cannot see why the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council said that giving a person to right to a firearm is almost, mind you, almost as dangerous as giving someone the right to speak. I did not know that there was any plan to take away the right of anybody to speak. These are the sort of red herrings, Mr. President, that are drawn across in debate when I bring a motion to the House and it is done so that same Member can go to his constituency to get along with those little people whom he knows do not support me and say, 'What an idiot that McKeeva Bush is, eh!'. He has the knack of happily doing that. But that statement the Honourable Member made, like many others, will hound him to eternity.

The motion is lost. There is, however, only one other observation I have. It seems funny, extra funny how Executive Council seems to know a lot about the details of the policy and the changing of it that they said they did not have anything to do with in the first place. It seems awfully funny that they seem to know so much about it.

Anyway, Mr. President, the democratic process will be put in motion and will decide the fate of this motion. I would beg them though I think I would ask the Honourable Second Official Member to take the Firearms Law No. 17 of 1964 and really go through it because it does need some straightening up.

Thank you Sir.

AMENDMENT

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO.5/87

A MOTION REQUESTING THIS HONOURABLE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY TO PETITION HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY TO CHANGE THE CAYMAN ISLANDS (CONSTITUTION) ORDER, 1972 WITH RESPECT TO QUALIFICATIONS OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY AND ELECTORS

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, in moving Private Member's Motion No.5./87 I would like to call your attention, Sir, to Standing Order 24(7), and that is that I have in fact circulated an amended version of the motion. In as much that it does not materially change the substance of the original motion that was circulated, I think I need your signification that it is in order to proceed with the amended motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

This is quite right. The Member did approach me in accordance with the procedure laid down in Standing Order 24(7) and sought to vary the terms of his motion. In my view the variation that he wished to make did not significantly alter the terms of the motion. I asked that he arrange for copies of the motion, as amended, to be circulated to all Members and my understand is that it has been done. It is therefore in order for him to move the amended version of the motion.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I therefore would like to move Private Member's Motion No.5/87 in its amended form.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, I second the motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Private Member's Motion No.5/87 has been duly moved in its amended form, and seconded. Perhaps I can just check - was it the Honourable First Elected Member's intention to read out the terms of the motion, or, as with the earlier motion today, to avoid doing that in view of its length?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I intended to read the motion, Sir

MR. PRESIDENT:

Very well.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

..... because I would like it to be fully understood what we are doing and I will be dealing with it section by section as I go through my presentation.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I make it that we have about eight or nine minutes left today. I think probably it will take at least that long to read the motion. Perhaps the Honourable Member would like to do that. We will let him do that, but his speech on it would have to be deferred to another day I think. Would that be convenient?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

That is fine with me, Sir. I am ready to carry on if I have time, but, whatever.

The motion, Mr. President, is a motion requesting this Honourable Legislative Assembly to petition Her Most Gracious Majesty to change the Cayman Islands' Constitution Order 1972 with respect to qualifications of Members of the Legislative Assembly and Electors thereto. The body of the motion, Mr. President, reads:

"WHEREAS for many years Caymanians long established in the Islands have feared that they would become at a political disadvantage in relation to immigrants and Caymanians who had been living abroad for many years and who would return to the Islands attracted by its increased prosperity;

AND WHEREAS it is now projected that native-born Caymanians will be outnumbered by immigrants by approximately the year 1990;

AND WHEREAS it is felt that unless steps are taken to control those persons who can be elected to the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands and those who can vote in elections therefor it will lead to social instability and unrest;

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED THAT this Honourable Legislative Assembly humbly petitions Her Most Gracious Majesty that the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1972 be amended in respect of the qualifications as a Member of the Legislative Assembly and as an elector in substantially the following terms, that:

(1) Section 18 be deleted and replaced by a new section 18 reading as follows:

"Qualifications for elected membership. 18.(1) Subject to the provisions of the next following section, a person shall be qualified to be elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly if, and shall not be qualified to be so elected unless -

- (a) he possesses Caymanian status; and
- (b) he has attained the age of 21 years; and
- (c) he is, at the date of his nomination for election, domiciled and resident in the Islands; and
- (d) he is a qualified citizen; and either
- (e) he was born in the Islands, or was born outside the Islands in the circumstances mentioned in subsection (2)(b) of this section, has resided in the Islands for a period of not less than seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election and, subject to subsections (3) and (4), the number of days on which he was absent from the Islands in that period does not exceed 400; or
- (f) he was born outside the Islands, has resided in the Islands for a period or periods totalling not less than fifteen years out of the twenty years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election and in the seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination has not been absent from the Islands for more than a

(2) For the purposes of subsection 1(d)..."

..... and, Mr. President, for clarity that is the definition of a qualified citizen.....

..."of this section, a qualified citizen is a British Dependent Territories Citizen by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands, who either -

- (a) at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship and has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship for which he may be eligible; or
- (b) was born outside the Islands, has or had at least one parent or grandparent who was born in the Islands and possesses Caymanian status (or if deceased would if alive have possessed Caymanian status at the date of nomination for election), and who at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship save for any right he may have to some other citizenship by virtue of his birth outside the Islands.

(3) For the purposes of ascertaining whether a person has been absent from the Islands for the purposes of subsection (1)(e) any period of absence by reason of the following shall be disregarded -

- (a) attendance as a pupil at any educational establishment;
- (b) attendance as a patient at any hospital, clinic or other medical institution;
- (c) employment as a seaman aboard an ocean-going vessel; or
- (d) employment as a crew member on any aircraft.

(4) In the case of a person referred to in paragraph (e) of subsection (1), the requirement that he shall not have been absent from the Islands for more than 400 days in the period of seven years immediately preceding his nomination for election, shall not apply if that person was, on the day immediately preceding the appointed day, qualified to be elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly."

(2) Section 20(3)(c) be deleted and the following be substituted therefor:

"20(3)(c) If he ceases to be a British Dependent Territories Citizen by reason of his connection with the Islands or he ceases to possess Caymanian status;"

(3) Section 25 be deleted and replaced by a new section 25 as follows:

"Qualifications of electors. 25. Subject to the provisions of the next following section, a person shall be entitled to be registered as an elector in one electoral district only but he shall not

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

Before continuing with the business listed on today's Order Paper, I have two brief announcements to make. The first is by way of an explanation from myself to the House, because inadvertently, it seems to me on reflection, that I made a mistake the day before yesterday in a procedure that was followed after the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council had moved the adjournment under paragraph 1. of Standing Order 12. On re-reading my Standing Orders more carefully, and referring to Erskine May, it is clear that when an adjournment of that kind is moved, the purpose is to enable the House to discuss a matter of urgent definite public importance; not to enable the House to adjourn and proceedings to come to a temporary halt. What should have happened the other day was, that we should have suspended proceedings. My purpose in mentioning this now is simply that I would not want it to be on record that I had allowed an adjournment to be moved under that Standing Order, and for the House to go out and discuss something privately, rather than for a debate to take place, and for people to say in the future, "well, that was a precedent because it had been allowed by a former Presiding Officer, and therefore it must have been what is in accordance with our Standing Orders".

I would like to apologise to the House for failing to spot the point myself at the time, but to make clear that the procedure we then followed ought not to be followed in future. It is perfectly proper to move a motion for the adjournment in terms of Standing Order 12, under the precise terms of that Standing Order, but what follows is a debate in the House, not an immediate adjournment. That was the first point I wanted to make.

The second was, that I have myself, a commitment which will require me to leave at about midday today. I have asked the Honourable First Official Member if he will be kind enough to take over temporarily as Presiding Officer. In the event that it chanced that at the time, or during the period he was presiding, which probably would be three quarters of an hour or so before the lunch break, we were to come to the Merchant Shipping Registry Bill which is Item 2.9, then, he would ask the leave of the House to defer that Bill and to take another one first.

Government Business.

Continuation of the Debate on the Throne Speech. Unless any further Member wishes to speak, I shall invite the mover to reply.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

CONTINUATION OF THE DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, although at this end of the Chamber sit the Officials of this Honourable House, I feel it appropriate to publicly congratulate the Honourable Richard Ground on being appointed as our Attorney General. In the years that I have known him, Sir, I have found him to be professional, capable of performing the duties of that high office, and I have no doubt that the public will come to this same conclusion of his ability, in a short time if they have not done so already.

I also offer my congratulations to Mrs. Georgette Myrie as our Clerk of the Legislative Assembly. She is well known to me as an efficient and capable officer, and I am sure we are all pleased to have her amongst us.

Mr. President, one of the common threads of concern of all Honourable Members is the increase in drug related criminal activity. I believe that all of us, that is, every one on the Cayman Islands, must take a stand against drugs and offer every assistance to the Police Department in apprehending these offenders. But in order to accomplish this to its fullest potential, the Police must ensure that information given to them is kept confidential, and made public only when the case is prosecuted through the Courts, and then only, if necessary, to obtain a conviction. I feel that we need to take that stand now, and move forward in a comprehensive approach utilizing Social Services and the Education Department to educate the public with assistance from the Churches and Service Clubs, that is, Rotary, Lions, Kiwanis and all the other groups available. It would be helpful in my view, to get more children involved in sporting activities, by providing games that challenge them and keep them out of mischief.

I have had the privilege to serve in this Honourable House for five years, and I must say that the behaviour and the decorum of some Members is now of great concern to me. When they are spoken to about it, sometimes the reply is "I know my Standing Orders and I know how far I can go". I sometimes think that the Legislative Assembly Immunities, Powers and Privileges Law should not protect those Members in this House who take advantage of this and ridicule the good names of innocent people. By innocent people I mean, Mr. President, those who cannot stand in this House and defend themselves. For example, I refer to the staff and Board of Cayman Airways, and also the Public Service Commission members.

We have heard members of the Public Service Commission attacked over the appointment of a new Sergeant-at-Arms, with inference that he was picked as a political crony. Mr. President, the members of the Public Service Commission are persons of integrity and are well respected in these Islands. I believe that the Civil Service will be a better career for Caymanians, if those members continue to serve on that Committee. Their services, Mr. President, to this country are for all intents and purposes, free, except that they receive CI$25.00 a meeting to pay for travel expenses to and from their district and to meetings. Another Member attacked them on the way in which they promote people in the Service, indicating that seniority should not be the criteria. For the Members' information Mr. President, let me read for him what Public Service Commission Regulation No. 19, which lays down the law for the selection and promotion, says about it, and I quote Mr. President:

"In considering the claims of persons in the public service for promotion, ability, efficiency, experience, merit, qualifications and seniority shall be taken into account."

Members should read the 1985 Public Service Commission Regulations Mr. President. Seniority is only one element, as we have all heard, and in recent times, my understanding of it is, that merit is taken into account more heavily than any seniority. Seniority is only used Mr. President, as I have experienced, when you have two officers who are to be considered for a post, and their ability appears to be the same, their efficiency appears to be the same and their experience is of a similar length, and on merit it is difficult to say which is the better. Then you have in my mind, no alternative but to favour the person who has been performing in that way over the other. But Mr. President, some of us know what this is all about. Sometimes when people cannot get their way with certain things they make all sorts of remarks.

There was another point moving on from that Mr. President, onto trying to answer some of the other points that were raised, points which are of concern to some Members.

The Member for East End raised a point about the Broadcasting Station. I have taken the time Mr. President, to examine it with the staff of the Broadcasting Station. From my investigation, I can say honestly, that that broadcast or that interview which they wanted broadcasted was stopped or not put on by a decision of the staff at Radio Cayman. Their view was that since they had played segments of the tape of the proceedings in the Legislature, that that was sufficient. Now, I am not saying that the Members will agree with that. But, the decision was taken by the senior editorial staff of Radio Cayman, and not by any Member of Government.

The Member raised another point in relation to the Police. He is aware of 'a policeman' who, it seems, has been passed by in respect of promotion in preference to younger persons. I know, Mr. President, that this can happen. The Police have given considerable assistance and encouragement to serving officers, by providing opportunities for the promotion of those officers. But, in the attempt to train people, and I do not know which policeman the Member is talking about, but we all know that sometimes you need to have some criteria for promotion, and unless the person meets that criteria, promoting him is not in the best interests of the efficient running of the Police Force. This, Mr. President, I am sure the Member will agree with in general, because I do not know the person of whom he is talking.

Moving on a little further Mr. President. There were comments about the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, and what has it done for...I hope I am not misquoting anyone Mr. President, if I am I ask them please to correct me...what the signing of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty has done to Cayman. The inference is, that it has ruined us Mr. President, but I really do not know where this information is coming from. Every little piece of information that I can find does not lead anyone to those conclusions. I have talked to bankers, to trust people, to lawyers, to accountants, to people in company management, to people in real estate, to people in insurance and the only thing I have heard as a reply Mr. President, "we have never been busier". Never in these Islands have we ever been busier. So the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty must be helping us somehow Mr. President.

Even just looking at a few facts on the financial industry; we signed the Treaty, to the best of my recollection, on the 3rd July, 1986. So we have had a little look to see what has happened since June of 1986. There are 'B' Banks that have upgraded their licences to a category 'A' licence, which allows them not only to do offshore business, but onshore business. And, sometimes when you are dealing with an offshore transaction, a little bit of it could be related to the domestic side. In addition, they want to move forward in their organization and upgrade it.

We have about four or five banks now Mr. President, and we are not talking about private banks, we are talking about well known internationally reputable banks which are in the process, one I can say for sure is, of moving their operation from New York City to Grand Cayman. This is what the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty is doing for us Mr. President, and anybody who looks around in the Compass will find that Banco de Portuguese Atlantico is advertising for staff. That is one of the banks I am mentioning, I will not go on to mention the others Mr. President, because we do not know what lies in the future. But, they are talking about coming to Cayman. When they start advertising for staff, I will tell you, it looks as if it is going to happen. The number of international banks who have requested licences from the Cayman Islands Government since June 1986, is 18. And, since June 1986, banks licensed in the Cayman Islands have increased their working capital, perhaps it is not working capital but it is an increase in their capital funds, by $200 million. They could not be concerned that the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty was going to hurt them if they are putting their money here Mr. President.

The Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty - we will still monitor it; we will see what effect it has, but we are over six months now Mr. President, since we enacted the legislation, it is not ratified yet, but we know it will be, it is only a matter of time. The experience so far is that it has had, if you want to make a decision about it, a favourable impact on the Cayman Islands' financial centre of operations. Mr. President, I have been talking to the Director of Lands and Survey, and only the other day, he told me that in January 1987 he has collected more stamp duty in that month than we have ever done in any comparable month if you go back a hundred years. Over $800,000 Mr. President in one month, and we say the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty is hampering us. If they are going to hamper us in that way Mr. President let them continue, I like it. Bring the money on, Government can use it. The Members on the other side are always asking for a little bit more money to do things. Bring the money, the Financial Secretary will take it. But remember what the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty is for, we do not need any criminal money, just the good ones.

Mr. President, so much was said about the 1986 accounts, the 1987 Estimates, the surplus, public debt and to top it all off, I could not believe my ears, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said that "the Economic Development Plan is a joke". All these matters fall under my responsibility Mr. President, and therefore I will have to answer him, because the public may be in the position of the motorist who was being told by the professor that something was wrong with his car. The conversation goes back and forth between the professor and the motorist. The professor said to him, "I say, your tubular air container has lost most of its rotundity", and the motorist says, "Says which?" The professor speaks up again, "The cylindrical apparatus which supports your vehicle is no longer inflated." The poor motorist says "I beg your pardon?" The professor comes back with another one, "The elastic fabric surrounding the circular frame which successive revolutions bears you onward in space has failed to retain its pristine roundness." A little boy had to come to the motorist's aid, he said, "Hey mister, you have a flat tire."

Well I am going to try to play the role of the little boy and to simplify for the public what, if anything, is wrong with any of the items mentioned earlier. But before I do, let me say Mr. President, I am not angry at the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town, and maybe a little rhyme will help us all to make a similar resolution. I will read it for the benefit of Members Mr. President:

"A little less impatience with those we deem too slow
A little less arrogance, because of all we know
A little more humility, seeing our worth is slight
We are such trivial candles compared to stars at night
A little more forgiving and swifter to be kind
A little more desirous the words of praise to find
The word of praise to utter and make a heart rejoice."

Mr. President, I know that the Honourable Members of this House have a keen interest in knowing how financially, the year 1986 ended. And it was for this reason that I gave preliminary unaudited figures, although I warned some of them that year-end figures can be misleading if not treated as they are stated to be. That is, Mr. President, "Preliminary Unaudited Figures." It only gives you an indication of how the year might finally end, but it can change up or down by a half a million to a million dollars, depending on a number of year-end adjustments which have to be made. The first figure was $2.9 million; the most recent figure produced by the Treasury was $2.2 million. In my opinion Mr. President, the final figure will be near to $2.2 million. Mr. President, Honourable Members, what are we trying to achieve by playing with figures? Can anyone tell me of another country in the world which is likely to finish 1986 with a $2.0 million surplus? We should thank God Mr. President, that we have the Heads of Departments that we do. They, nor I, are perfect, but which one of us is perfect? The last one who was, we the people crucified him.

I explained to the Member when I gave him the answer to this question last Friday, why the surplus position is now less than the revised 1986 position which we prepared about five months ago. Mr. President, I think that I had better read it again: "According to the figures provided by the Treasury, as at the 11th January, 1987 the unaudited closing balance of Government's surplus on the books for the year ended 31st December, 1986 amounts to $2,248,132.77. Honourable Members will immediately become aware that this figure falls short of the projected surplus of $3,319,939, by a sum of $1,071,806". And I went on to say Mr. President, "that the factors contributing to this difference, based on a analysis of trends of recent years, and especially the pattern of collections from January through December of 1986, the aggregate revenue was revised at $65,887,873. However the actual position as reported by the Treasury showed total collections as being $65,185,768 resulting in a difference of $702,105 below the revised limit". I went on to comment, "On this marginal shortfall between the actual and revised revenue figures, Honourable Members are aware that even with the best of estimates, the end result will always differ from any predetermined position. In this regard, allowance has often been made for a three percent variation between the actual and the revised figures. The end result in this instance however, is approximately one percent, which if looked at positively", which I always like to do, "could be regarded as reasonable".

And, on the expenditure side Mr. President, "The revised position through 31st December was estimated as $61,444,387.00 while the actual position as reported by the Treasury through 31st December showed total spending at $61,803,000.88 an excess of $358,701 over the revised limit". I went on to say that Honourable Members, "would have observed that the total derived from these differences, on the revenue side $702,105 and on the expenditure side $358,701 closely approximate the overall difference between the actual and the revised surplus realised". That figure I gave you earlier, $1,071,806; "further analysis on the expenditure difference between the actual and the revised expenditure of $199,879.00 or approximately $200,000 of this sum resulted from the Government being called upon to make a pecuniary settlement which was not provided for in the revised figures, as it was not foreseen that an agreement leading to such a settlement would have been reached before the end of the year".

At a meeting of Finance Committee on the 18th December, where the Honourable Member took much time in talking about it, Honourable Members were appraised of the circumstances leading to the settlement. The remaining excess of expenditure, that is, the difference between $200,000 and $358,701 or approximately $159,000, is largely due to the carrying out of various adjustments to the final accounts by the Treasury.

Now Mr. President, the reason why you call Finance Committee is to approve supplementary expenditure; is to abide by doing a particular year. The agreement which Government has made over the recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee, some of those approvals Mr. President, given in December were for the writing off to expenditure of advanced accounts. So, Mr. President, we were moving forward to stay within the agreed guidelines of the Public Accounts Committee, and, we will do it again because we agreed that the accounting situation in any year, should reflect as closely as possible, any financial activity of that year.

The Honourable Second Elected Member for Boddan Town is very much aware that during the presentation of any annual Budget to this Honourable House, a revised estimate of the proceeding year's position is always used as a basis for deriving the projected end of the year surplus or deficit position. In areas where the revised figures for the proceeding year, together with the projected expenditure for the end of that year, are observed as being in excess of the voted allocation, the figures, as revised, are incorporated into the Estimates. The following of this approach therefore means that subsequent to the budget presentation, the approval of Finance Committee must be sought to cover those areas of excesses in expenditure, arising from the differences between the revised and originally approved Budget.

This approach therefore accounts for those items which were submitted for the approval of Finance Committee on 18th December, and for which, the only exception being, the making of a pecuniary settlement for approximately $200,000. Further, as the revised figures are used in the determination of the surplus or deficit for any given year, this means that any variation between the revised and actual position when known, will either have a positive or negative affect on any such surplus or deficit as projected. It therefore becomes obvious that the excess in expenditure of $358,701 and shortfall in revenue of $702,105 are the areas which accounted for the $1,071,806 less than the projected surplus. If the total of the items dealt with on the 18th December by Finance Committee were not provided for as a part of the budgeted figure, as suggested by the Honourable Member, the end result when combined with the proceeding shortfall of $1,071,806 in the surplus position, would have resulted in a net surplus of approximately $1.1 million, and not $2.25 million as reported by the Treasury for the year ended 31st December, 1986.

So Mr. President, the remarks which the Member made, and I am reading it from the newspaper as I was not in the Chamber at the time, that the 1987 position is likely to end with a $4.0 million deficit, is really stretching my imagination. I cannot see it, but he is a better speaker than I am Mr. President, I give him full marks for that, but I believe that my mathematics is a little bit better than his too, so we are about even.

The Member has also said that the borrowings are used to present a surplus position. But Mr. President, any person who examines the 1986 Estimates, will see that on page 23., Revenue Sub-Heads 69-005 and 007 which show total receipts from borrowings of $8,454,000 and, on page 144., Sub-Heads 42 and 43 which show the expenditure side; the total expenditure is $8,454,000. So, we spend on paper every penny we borrowed. Therefore, the borrowings have no affect on the 1986 surplus. No affect whatsoever. The bottom line has not changed it is as if I gave you a hundred dollars and then I turn around and took it from you.

In 1987 those same sub-heads, 42 and 43 the Expenditure side, found on page 147, total expenditure is $7,702,432 and the Revenue side, Sub-Heads 69-005 and 007, on page 22., show total receipts for borrowing of $7,702,432. Again, the borrowings have no affect on the 1987 estimated surplus. So, Mr. President, I do not believe the Member is right in some of the things he has said, and I hope the public too, understand that he went off the rails a little bit.

The Member also, Mr. President, and I am not sure that I have any notes on this, but I know he also said that the Economic Development Plan is a joke. He said the Plan indicates a five-year period from 1986 to 1990, and 1986 is a closed issue, and so is 1987, so he does not see how the Plan is going to affect it. But, Mr. President, I have the Plan with me this morning, and, to examine it we go to the respective summary, there we will see Mr. President, if you look at the amount of expenditure for the year 1986, you will find that it corresponds very well with the 1986 Budget. You will find there that Transport has a figure in the Economic Plan for 1986 of $2.5 million, and all we need to do Mr. President, is go to the 1986 Estimates and look on page 69 and continue to look under Sub-Head 08-043 and it says, 'Subsidy, Cayman Airways $2.5 million'.

Also in 1986, Mr. President, in the Draft Estimates it has a sum of $400,000 for Housing. It is Civil Service Housing Mr. President; Civil Service Mortgages found on page 70 of the 1986 Estimates, Sub-Head 019-003, 'Civil Service Mortgage Loan'.

But this Plan Mr. President, I am not saying it is perfect, I told everybody that it was a draft, I wanted your input, that is why we brought it here. And, as I said when the Member for North Side was moving the motion, it was one of the best things we decided to do, but you always need the political will, Government Officials cannot do it on their own. This Plan took almost eighteen months to prepare, so I am not going to spend eighteen months in bringing a Plan forward when the political will is not there and I have wasted one and a half years of my life.

Further, Mr. President, I am looking at, and it took me some time to find it, but I know it was there - the Draft Economic Development Plan, Table 1, Total Cost of Projects. I have dealt with the Air Transport sum in 1986 which is chapter 2.4, I have dealt with chapter 2.11, Housing, and let me now tell you about chapter 2.3 - Airports. I am going through this Mr. President, because the Member's inference is that there is no relation between the 1986 Estimates and the Draft Plan, and I just want to prove to him, to his full satisfaction, that there is. The 1986

Airports sum in the Draft Economic Plan is a sum of $1,691,285, and if he goes to the back of his 1986 Estimates on page 147, he will find a sum under 042-003 for Airport Development of $1.9 million. So it is evident, that we budgeted to do more in 1986 than we even had in the Draft Economic Plan.

On Water and Sewerage Mr. President, chapter 2.8 of the Draft Economic Plan, I call the Member's attention to page 147 of the 1986 Estimates again, Sub-Head 042-004 Water and Sewerage $2,914,000, a little bit less than we planned for in the Economic Development Plan, but, $30,000 will not make that much difference when you are dealing with those kinds of figures. And, just to continue for a little bit longer Mr. President, if he goes to the 1987 Estimates under Air Transport, chapter 2.4 the allocation in the Summary of Projects in the Draft Economic Plan for 1987 is $1,050,000. I will lead him now to page 66. of the 1987 Estimates, Sub-Head 008-043 - Subsidy, Cayman Airways, this is in the 1987 Estimates $1,050,000. Then, let us look at Airports again Mr. President for 1987, and see how the Economic Plan compares to the 1987 Budget. In the 1987 Estimates on page 149; Airport Development $743,465, on page 150; Sub-Head 042, $1,115,029, a total sum of roughly $1.9 million. Then we look at the 1987 figure in the Draft Economic Development Plan, it is roughly $1.9 million.

Water and Sewerage is $5,132,264 in the Economic Plan for 1987; in the Estimates for 1987 it is $4,731,359. The Plan is intended to be a guide Mr. President, and you can only do what the country can afford. The projects that cannot be funded in one year, will be deferred to another year, on the basis of this Honourable House having given priority to the projects it wishes to do in each year. That is why we are in Finance Committee dealing with the Appropriation Law, and going through the Estimates. I think there has been enough on that Mr. President. I am sure he knows now that there is some relation between the 1986 and the 1987 figures in the Draft Economic Plan, and also in the 1987 Budget. But I am sure he knew it already Mr. President, I did say he was a good talker.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

No, Mr. President, what I said was that we have not yet passed the Plan, so how can it relate to expenditure which has already taken place, that was the point I made.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

I think I have just told you how. We were using it as a guide when we were preparing the 1986 and 1987 Estimates. But I know Mr. President, everybody is itching to debate this Five-year Economic Development Plan, and if it is the last thing I do, Mr. President, with their assistance, I will bring it here on April 27th and let us have a go. I am not worried about it Mr. President, I am not worried at all. I know I am going to hear some wicked things, but, I have heard them before too. Just remember though, Mr. President, if you give a punch, the punch might come back!

Mr. President, I am just about finished with the winding up of the Throne Speech, but, before I sit Mr. President, I wanted to say to the Sergeant-at-Arms how grateful we are for his assistance. I took it personally, it was a favour to me that he agreed to do the job, when I found myself in a pinch. I am sure Mr. President, that his services here, will be long remembered for the way in which he has conducted himself and of his pleasant personality. I wish him well and hope that some day I can be of some assistance to him, as he was to me.

Thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

BILLS

THE INTERPRETATION (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

FIRST READING

CLERK: THE INTERPRETATION (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Interpretation Law is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE INTERPRETATION (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Interpretation Law.

Mr. President, this is a short Bill which adds a new Section, Section 51(a) to the Interpretation Law. It is intended to meet an anomalous position that has arisen due to a large number of laws which have been enacted over the years, which create statutory posts. Many of these posts now are embraced in, what can colloquially can be called, the Civil Service; that is that they are offices of emolument in the Public Service, and they are generally staffed by Public Officers. In other words, people holding offices of emolument in the Public Service. Nevertheless Mr. President, many of these laws provide alternative means for the appointment of such Officers so that generally, nowadays, there has to be two appointments; the first by His Excellency under the Public Service Commission Law to the Civil Service office, to the public office that is, and the second, an appointment under the Statute.

Mr. President this is an unnecessarily complicated process, it is one where the second appointment under the Statute may on occasion be omitted, which can give rise to problems, and it is one which this Bill is intended to amend and simplify, and do away with.

Mr. President, for the information of the Members, there are, as I have said, a large number of such offices now created by Statute, and just so they may understand what the Bill deals with, some examples are, and these are just examples and they are not intended to be a comprehensive list. The Development and Planning Law which sets up the office of Director of Planning, and that is now an office in the Civil Service, The Banks and Trust Companies Regulation Law, which sets up the office of the Inspector of Banks, The Insurance Law which sets up the office of Superintendent of Insurance, and then there are other laws such as the Prisons Law which has the Director of Prisons, and also provides for the appointment of Prison Officers, The Customs Law, which sets up the office of Collector of Customs, and also provides under the law for the appointment of Customs Officers. Mr. President, these and many others will be caught by the Court and dealt with by the proposed amendment to the Interpretation Law.

With that introduction Mr. President, if I might just read the amendment:

"Appointment to Statutory Public Office

Notwithstanding the provisions of this or of any Law where provision is made in a law for a public officer to be appointment to an office under that law, which involves the exercise of functions, powers or duties pursuant to any law or regulations, and where no such appointment of such person has been made under that law prior to the date when an appointment was made to such public office, the person appointed to such public office shall for the purposes of any such law or regulations be deemed to have been appointed under that law on that date."

In other words Mr. President, the Public Officer appointed by His Excellency, under the Public Service Commission Law is deemed to have been properly appointed under whatever other law sets up and creates the statutory post.

In my submission to the House, this is beneficial, it will avoid a lot of potential problems in the future, and it is a Bill which I commend to the House.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Interpretation Law be given a Second Reading. The motion is open for debate. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION PUT: DEBATE ENSUED:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I rise to object to this Bill, it seems to be an innocent Bill, but it is not. It is, in effect, retroactive legislation. I take my stand against retroactive legislation which seems to have become a way of life with the new Government, since 1984. They seem to be passing and have passed several pieces of legislation which are retroactive, and this seems strange because we have heard from the public platforms during the 1984 campaign, that there would be no more retroactive legislation. They said that Governments in the past had sinned by having passed retroactive legislation, and now they have made it their way of life. At every sitting we are contending with retroactive and retrospective legislation as well.

The portion of the Bill which reads "be deemed to have been appointed under that law on the date when he was appointed to such public office," seems to me to make this Bill retroactive. Why can the Government not leave well enough alone. Whatever may have happened with these appointments in the past, happened. If the Government was simply putting in a Bill to make provision for appointments from today onwards, I would support it. But no, they must carry out their actions just to show the public that they will not keep their word! just to show the public that now that they have been elected, they can do as they please and do not have to consult the public on any matter, do not have to keep any campaign promise, but they can now do as the cat did when he fell into the barrel of liquor; he told the rat, "If you will be kind enough to pull me out of this I will see that you will not be eaten". So, the unwary rat pulled the cat out of the barrel, and as soon as the cat had dried off he made advances to the rat. And when the rat reminded him of what he had said, he said, "Brother, I said that when I was in my liquors", and I believe they are now treating their campaign promises of no retroactive legislation, as words spoken when they were in their liquors.

So, Mr. President, I will not support any form of retroactive legislation, and will vote against this Bill.

MR. PRESIDENT: Does any other Member wish to speak? Does the mover wish to reply?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I would just like to deal very briefly with the point of retroactivity. Strictly, retroactive legislation is something which reaches back in time before the law and seeks to change the law which used to apply to a situation. This law does not do that, and is not intended to do that.

Now the Honourable Member has pointed out the deeming provision which could have the affect of deeming a public officer who had been appointed before the law, to have been satutorily appointed under whatever law we are dealing with after the coming into effect of that. It is just possible Mr. President, to construe that as retroactive, the criticism may have had some bite if examples had been brought forward of officers to which this would apply. No such examples have been brought forward Mr. President. This law is certainly intended to apply to the future, and it is not, in my submission, an example of the Government or of anybody, seeking to tinker with the past, and it is tinkering with the past which is the vice of retroactive legislation.

MR. PRESIDENT: The motion is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a law to amend the Interpretation Law be given a Second Reading.

QUESTION PUT: AYES AND NOES

MR. PRESIDENT: I declare the motion carried, and I will now suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: THE INTERPRETATION (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

Bills, First Reading. Item 2.2.(2).

THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

FIRST READING

CLERK: THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Bill entitled a Bill for a law to amend the Elections Law 1983, is deemed to have been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: Mr. President, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a law to amend the Elections Law, 1983.

This amending Bill Mr. President, contains a number of unconnected amendments arising out of the recommendations of the Select Committee of this Honourable House, appointed by the Legislative Assembly, to consider amendments that have arisen as a result of the experience encountered following the 1984 General Election.

Being a 1983 Law, the 1984 General Election was the first opportunity to have experienced the provisions of that Law, and a number of recommendations have been made as a result of those experiences, in order to better serve the purpose for which the law is intended.

Turning to the Bill itself Sir, the first proposed amendment is to Section 2. dealing with the interpretation and definitions, and the proposed amendment is to stipulate that an Election Agent shall be a registered voter in the constituency where he is an Agent.

Clause 3. of the Bill provides for the appointment of a Deputy Supervisor of Elections.

Clause 4. of the Bill provides for the establishment of a Registering Office where persons may register as voters.

Clause 6. provides for a further by-election in a constituency where, at the time of a General Election there have been less candidates than seats, and also to alter the latest date for the withdrawal of a candidate, from three to ten clear days before the date of the holding of the pole.

Clause 12. of the Bill proposes an amendment to enable postal voting by persons who will be outside the Islands on polling day, and,

Clause 13. seeks to clarify that a postal ballot may be returned either by hand or by post for the issue of a replacement ballot in substitution for spoilt ballots.

These unconnected amendments Mr. President, should tidy up the legislation under which our General Elections are held, and should provide the necessary proper guidelines for the smooth and efficient conduct of Elections.

Much discussion took place in the Committee on this subject, the Committee which was under the Chairmanship of the Honourable Second Official Member. Perhaps one or two controversial items may have been considered, and may not have been mentioned in the final Bill that was recommended. I do not care to deal with any of those subjects Sir, because I was not a member of the Committee at the time. I leave it to any Honourable Member who wishes to raise those issues to do so during the course of the debate.

I unhesitatingly commend this Bill to the Honourable Members, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Elections Law, 1983 be given a Second Reading, and the motion is open for debate. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION PROPOSED: DEBATE ENSUED:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I have to object to this Bill. I cannot think what has gotten into the new Government, because it seems unreasonable for them to continually change the Election Law; to continually change the Standing Orders of the Legislative Assembly; and to continually change the Constitution. Why are they tampering with these three instruments so often?

Since 1984 they have amended the Standing Orders, the classic example was where they changed a matter relating to questions, and then had to come back and change it again. Why are they continually tampering with these documents? Is there some fear that they might be at some disadvantage at the next Election, and they hope to tailor-make the law to suit specific individuals?

They cannot really be serious about one of the amendments proposed in this Bill, and that is the one that would stipulate that an Election Agent shall be a registered voter in the constituency where he is an Agent. They cannot be serious about that because this stipulation is not required of the candidate. A candidate need not be a registered voter in the district in which he is elected. Why are they putting this imposition on the candidate's Agent?

During the last Election, I was not a registered voter in the Bodden Town District. I cast my vote in George Town. Why is it that the candidate's Agent must be registered in the district where he acts as Agent? Why this restriction on the rights and freedoms of the individual? Is it because they are afraid that when 1988 comes, that I will take Mr. Truman Bodden, who will be a registered voter in George Town, up to Bodden Town to be one of my Agents, and oversee the Election on my behalf, is this the reason? But remember, if you prevent my doing this, it could also affect other people. Our Election Law has stood the test of time, and there have been many instances where the candidate did not live in the district, we have several examples.

The Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council lives in George Town, but ably represents Cayman Brac. In fact, probably does a better job than if he lived in Cayman Brac, because he is here in George Town where all the action and the decisions take place. I understand that there were times in the past when the late Dr. Roy McTaggart and Mr. Burns Rutty who both lived in Grand Cayman represented Cayman Brac. If the candidate is allowed to live in one district and be a candidate in a different district, why is it that the candidate's Agent cannot do the same thing? What is the reason behind it? The Member introducing the Bill, has not mentioned any single reason why this should be so, and in the lack of such a statement, I can only assume that this is a part of the continuing programme of the present Government, to limit and take away the rights and freedoms of the individual.

Another area in which they are tampering with the established custom, in the hope of influencing the next election, is by setting up a registered office where persons may register. We have had a system of registration which has worked well in the past, why are we changing it? Under the old system, a Registering Officer would physically visit the homes and put down the names of people to be registered. In addition to that, the person to be registered, the voter, could contact the Registering Officer if the Registering Officer had missed him out. Also, there was a provision for a revision of the list where anyone who had been left out could get his name put down. Now with the change in the system, what can happen is that some people who have been used to the system whereby somebody called on the person for the purpose of registration, may unwittingly still await that visit, and may find that he has failed because he had neglected to go to the registering office. So, why this change? Is it to confuse the public, and to make matters worse?

We see another change with regard to the deposit which can be refunded when a candidate withdraws from the Election. Under the law which had existed, if a candidate withdrew from an Election, he could get his deposit back once his withdrawal had been made known three clear days before the holding of the poll. Now they are changing those three days to ten clear days, and ten clear days are a lot of days, because we do not count the first day and we do not count the last day, so that in total, we are really talking about twelve days. So, if the Election is to be held on the 15th of the month, a person would have to make known his decision, a total of 12 days counting the last day and the first day, plus the ten clear days.

Here again I question, what is the purpose for putting this burden upon the candidate who may want to withdraw, or putting this burden which did not exist before? We know they have, as the Jews had, their paid mourners in the past. We know they have their paid political candidates who are set up in districts to catch a few votes. We had some of them in Bodden Town the last election, paid political candidates, just catching a handful of votes with no hope of ever being elected, in the hope that these few stray votes would influence the Election. Is this change being brought about because the Government wants to determine very early in the election process, a whole two weeks before polling day, who the true candidates are? What a ridiculous situation!

We already know that the paid political mourners will withdraw just in time to get their deposits back. But there are also other reasons for withdrawal. Sometimes there is a genuine reason, the candidate may die, in which case I imagine the deposit will be refunded to his estate, or, the candidate may become terminally ill, or, may have some sudden disease come upon him, some illness, which on his doctor's advice, he may be told to live a less strenuous life. There are a lot of other circumstances; the candidate's spouse may die, his/her father may die and the candidate would have to take over the family business, some change in occupation may prevent the candidate from going through with the Election; pressures might be put on him by his employer. There are varied reasons, and I think the reason why there was that three-day limit was in order to allow the maximum refund for the candidate, who at the last minute had to quit the Election. The fact that the paid political mourners benefit from it, should not influence our decision in this matter. So, why are we making these silly and stupid changes? Just because some Member gets up and says this is what I would like to see, this might be all right in some other laws, but not in our Constitution; not in our Standing Orders; not in our Election Law.

And, of all the wishful thinking, they have made a provision for a by-election in case there are not sufficient candidates for the seats. That will be the day in Cayman when you cannot find two people in Bodden Town at a General Election to contest the Election; that will be the day in Cayman. Last Election we had nine candidates for the two seats, and the last count I have had, for 1988, we will have 11. So, we do not need to fear that a situation will ever arise where you will not have two candidates for Bodden Town, two for Cayman Brac, three for West Bay, three for George Town, one for North Side and one for East End. Why make this additional provision? Why bring all these trivial things into the law, is it just a change for change sake?

There are some other changes which are cosmetic in nature, and I have no argument with them. But because they are incidental to the Bill, I will have to vote them down when I vote down the principal parts.

There is the provision for the appointment of a Deputy Supervisor, one more person to be on the payroll. What are we thinking about? A General Election is held every four years, and the practice had been in the past to appoint a Supervisor at the time of the Election, and I see no need for the Deputy.

So far, 90 percent of the Government's time in Executive Council and the Legislative Assembly has been taken up with things that really do not matter; things of no consequence, and the important issues are ignored and neglected, simply because the slate is cumbered with trivia.

We hear stories coming out of the Courts this week where young boys are being fined $1,500 and their boats confiscated for catching a couple of conchs, and the serious crime goes unnoticed.

We are here today discussing frivolities, when the economy of Cayman Brac is in a shambles, and the homosexuals storm our shores. What is wrong with this Government? Why does it not pull up its britches and attend to the important matters; leave the urgent matters alone and deal with important matters.

In closing Mr. President, I must say that it is really alarming to see how lightly this new Government is treating the sacred matters such as our Constitution, our Elections Law and the Standing Orders of this House. And how, every time we meet there is some motion to change one of these documents. What is the purpose?

AT 12:00 NOON THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER PRESIDED

MR. PRESIDENT: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable First Elected Member of Council.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Yes Mr. President. This is not the only time that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town has outdone himself again in his rhetoric, because as the Member well knows, the reason for this amendment being before the House is because the Elections Law 1983, (Law 36 of 1983), which his Government was responsible for preparing and passing through this House, and which governed the Elections in 1984 was a shambles.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: These sections were copied from your Law in 1969, tell the truth.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: No Mr. President, the public knows that when the Elections were held in 1984 they were posted in conspicuous places over each Polling Station, a number of what I think the then Government called 'errata' to correct the mistakes which were made in this law. They had the sections of the law referred to the wrong forms, and the forms referred to the wrong section of the law, and numerous other irregularities existed in the law. And, it was as a result of those irregularities, mistakes and omissions from the law which, as a result of that, is why a Committee was established to go through the law, clean up those irregularities, omissions and the rest of it, and look at any other matters which might have been brought to light during the course of the 1984 Elections.

The motion was in fact moved by the Honourable First Official Member, and it was moved as a result of a memorandum dated 31st January 1985, by the Governor, addressed to all Members of the Legislative Assembly and the Supervisor of Elections, inviting them to make comments for the amendments to the Elections Law in the light of the experience of the 1984 Elections. In other words Mr. President, it had been abundantly and clearly demonstrated that the Elections Law 1983 was a flawed law, and as I have said, all these notices had to be put all over the Polling Stations, and each candidate had to explain it to his agents, and all of this, and make amendments in handwriting within the Elections Law by which we were being governed. It had never happened before, so he cannot put it on any law that went before, and I invite the Member to examine the two Bills, and he will see that they bear no resemblance at all.

Not only is he misguided in how this came about, but he is at a loss when he talks about appointing somebody to go and represent him in Bodden Town on Election Day, because "Election Agent" bears no reference in the law to a Polling Agent or Accounting Agent who are the persons who will be present on Election Day. The Election Agent refers to the person who can attend in the absence of the candidate at the posting of postal ballots, and since the reasons why postal ballots are being sent can be questioned, there is no person better than a person living in the district in which those ballots are being sent out, to be there to know that the circumstances which have been stated, are in fact correct.

Now the purpose of this Motion Mr. President, is not to gerrymander anything. What it is designed to do is to prevent applications made on behalf of people who are quite able, well and willing to come to the Polling Station on Election Day, having a request sent in often, unknown to them, for a postal ballot, so that somebody else can get the market. Now, it will put a stop to that. When I say put a stop to it, it will ensure that the likelihood of that happening is less, and certainly, Mr. President, the Member should not object to that type of improvement within the electoral system.

The question of the registering office does not do away with the system of still going and collecting names. What it facilitates is that if a person knows that he is not going to be at home when the registering officer comes around, and Members very well know that these tasks are usually undertaken by full-time Civil Servants, and they usually do the registrations in late evening or early night. So, if someone knows that registration is going on in his district, that is, his area of the district, he knows he is not likely to be there when the registering officer comes, he can go to the office established and have his name put on the register. He has to have the same qualifications and the rest of it as would have been required had the registering officer come to his house. So there is no opportunity here for skulduggery. What it is, is a facility to the voters to make sure that everybody who wants to get on the register, has an opportunity to do so, it is an improvement to the system. And as I have said Mr. President, this was not done out of any desire to change laws and spend unnecessary time. And further more Mr. President, if the Member feels as strongly as he does about this amendment, he could have attended the Committee Meetings and registered his protest there, or sent letters of representation to the Committee. But as is the habit, the three Members of the Unity Team, the fragments of the Unity Team, boycott every committee which is set up, and then the holler when the Committee reports, or the Committee's recommendations are put into effect.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Because you will not even let us discuss anything in the Committee. You move closure motions to stop us, and we do not come back.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Everybody knows that it is difficult to keep your mouth shut. You could not do that if you rammed a baseball down in it, you will always get your point in. You will get an opportunity to talk if you come to the Committee. But what you would not get an opportunity to do is to railroad any of your rejected and worn out ideas which have not stood the test of time on the Committee. The Committee will make up its mind, based on all the facts before it at the time.

Mr. President, I do not intend to belabor this motion. In fact, I did not intend to speak on it. But I just wanted to make it clear that Executive Council does not enjoy having to clean up the mess left by the last Government, but we would be negligent in our duty if we did not do so. Maybe the Member could help the process some, if he were to attend the Committee Meetings and tell us why such and such a thing was done or why it was not done, and we might get through the matter quicker rather than longer, searching for the motives as to why certain things were done. We would enjoy spending more time in our offices, pushing the many plans and whatever we have to do there to get it accomplished, rather than having to sit down and undertake clean-up-messes like this one.

But it is a mess that was left by the last Government, and we have to clean it up.

We have added one or two provisions which we think improve the electoral system. I do not mind the Member debating that, that is fair game, but do not come talking about the Government tampering with the Constitution, and the Standing Orders and the rest of it. I will deal with the Constitutional change that is proposed, when I get to it. I am not going to dwell on it now. I am dealing now with the Elections Law, and I want everyone to understand that why this motion is here is because as they will remember, in the 1984 Elections, you could barely see the wall for the amount of paper that had to be posted around the place to correct the serious anomalies and omissions - sins of omissions and sins of commission - in this law, this 1983 law. That is what we are clearing up.

Thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I rise to support the Bill to make certain amendments to the Elections Law, 1983.

I support these amendments because the majority of them are necessary. They are necessary to remove evils which were discovered during the electoral process in 1984.

I support the fact that the Election Agent under the law, should come from the constituency, and should be a registered voter in that area, because I feel, that such a person can better perform the function that he is asked to do under the law, and better serve the candidate who he is representing, if he comes from the area, knows the area and knows the people. I do not subscribe Sir, that these amendments are little insidious tampering exercises designed to confuse the people. I believe Sir, that these are necessary to expedite matters, and to remove anomalies in the law to make the 1988 Election operate more smoothly.

And, I believe it is the duty of Government whether it is tampering, as one Member has said, with the Standing Orders, with the Constitution, with the Election Law, I do not subscribe Sir, that these are sacred documents like the Ten Commandments handed down to Moses on a mountain, that cannot and do not contain any anomalies. We are a developing country, and there will be times when changes are going to have to be made. And it is the responsibility, and it is incumbent upon us as members; it is the responsibility of the sitting Government at the time, and it is the responsibility of Members to support such changes which are necessary, to expedite the administration and development of our country.

Now Mr. President, I support the increasing from three days to ten days, for the withdrawal of candidates. Firstly, it should allow for the reprinting of ballots. A great deal was made by one Speaker of 'paid political mourners', or political candidates or whatever. But if they can withdraw three days before an election and still get back their money that they put up, and their name still appears on the ballot paper on Election Day, then they have achieved what they set out to do, if that was their purpose in drawing off votes from other candidates, to allow a minority to elect a candidate in any constituency. Because if their names are on the ballot, those people who will have supported them will have a chance to vote for them. But the ten days will give time for the Election Authority to reprint ballots, if necessary, to remove these people who have withdrawn. The only ones we cannot get to of course, will be those who have gone out on postal ballots.

But here again Sir, it is a necessary amendment. It is quite simple and quite possible for someone who receives a postal ballot to inadvertently spoil it, and it certainly is unfair under the 1983 law that that person could not under any circumstances get another ballot. Whereas, those people who walk to the polls to vote could spoil a ballot, go and get it, return to the officer and get another one, and have the opportunity to vote. Whereas those people on the postal ballot system who had the same entitlement to vote as that person, did not have that opportunity under the 1983 law, and I think it is a necessary and an important amendment to the law.

Mr. President, the new provision in the law for a by-election where there are not enough candidates, is not as frivolous or entirely unnecessary as some people might believe, because Sir, in 1972 the unopposed candidate from my constituency beat the clock by five minutes. Otherwise that constituency would have been without a representative for four years, because there was no provision to have a by-election, because no one was nominated under the law. So I think it is necessary to put it in to the law.

Again Sir, the spoilt ballot situation and why it is necessary to have the ten days - if new ballots are reprinted, which as I have said before is quite possible, those people who had voted by postal ballot for those candidates who had withdrawn, that would then be a spoilt ballot, and they could get a new ballot which does not contain the name of those Jewish mourners, or political paid candidates, or whatever, and I think that is fair game.

Now Mr. President, I have to be consistent, as usual, and say that I am disappointed that the Committee once again, did not adopt my recommendation for single-member constituencies. But I will carry on the fight, because I feel that that represents the single greatest threat to the electoral process in this country. Those are my personal convictions, and in this case, as usual, I abide by the majority vote, but it will be brought back for them to face again. And as I gather ammunition and information, I will continue to bring it back. Maybe one of these days, like the doctor at the hospital for 24 hours, we will be successful.

Mr. President, it was absolutely necessary to correct the forms which were incorrectly referred to in the law; to correct incorrect references to the incorrect forms, etcetera. And I support the amendments before the Election Law, but as I have said, I am disappointed that it does not contain an amendment to create single-member constituencies in Bodden Town, George Town, West Bay and Cayman Brac, but I can promise Members to carry on the fight for that Sir.

I support the Bill.

MR. PRESIDENT:
West Bay.

The Second Elected Member for

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, the Bill before the House is very short, and I had no intention, really, of speaking on the Bill. However, because of the remarks made by the Member for Bodden Town, and the fact that I was part of the Committee on the Elections Law, I feel that I should make a short statement at least of my support for the amendments.

The Elections Law, a representation of the people's law is actually what it is, is a very important one and one, yes, that our people hold sacred. However, when there are necessary changes, we must not fail to make those changes, and I have stressed this, not only about our Elections Law, but any other law that we find. If we find a situation that we need to change, we change it if it suits our country.

I remember in the last Election Mr. President, I was threatened to be put in prison because of the same postal ballot situation, and it was all because of a big misunderstanding by an election agent who was not from my constituency. And although it was in the law that he could have been from elsewhere, I took great exception to him being there. That particular agent who could not vote in West Bay, caused more disturbance at the Election, than at any other election in West Bay, or in the history of elections. He held up the process at that particular time, when they thought they had a chance to lock me up and get me out of the elections. And because he was a lawyer he felt he knew more than we did. When it came to the count, he held us up, and maybe we should have gone further. Maybe we should go further and say that people who are going to be involved in the elections, should be from their district, and know something about the law. Because, obviously he did not know one thing about the Elections Law. It got to a point Mr. President, where the Returning Officer had to threaten him with removal, for disturbing the election count.

The amendment relating to the ten days withdrawal notice, I support this one hundred per cent. When a person under the old system, withdraws, his name is left on the ballot, and maybe other Members have stressed this, but I think it is worth mentioning, and not only the postal voters, but other people as well, come in and place their vote for that candidate. It happened in the 1980 Election. We have a very prominent man who withdrew from the Election, and he received 13 votes. The Honourable First Elected Member of Council won by 19. So you can see how detrimental it can be - how it can influence an election under the present system with the withdrawn candidate's name still being on the ballot.

We have had instances where the candidate was the nominator and the nominator was the candidate under the old law, and I have yet to determine whether that was the law, or whether it was the ignorance of the candidates, but no one challenged it. It was in an Election which I lost in 1980, and I think it happened in 1976. So, the changes the Government has made are very necessary. I know that our people hold the Election Law, the electoral process as sacred, and that is why we went to our people with this amendment before it came to the House. We took it, it was explained and the people agreed, that is, those people at the meeting. So I give it one hundred percent support. I think the Government has done the right thing in this instance.

Thank you Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? In that case, does the mover wish to exercise his right to reply?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON:

Mr. President, only to say many thanks to the Members for their contributions to the debate on this piece of important amending legislation. The quality of the debate served to highlight some of the fears that were being experienced with regard to the provisions of the 1983 law, and I think the debate has elucidated that rights and freedoms of individuals, are indeed being preserved and extended, and are not intended in any way to be limiting.

Thank you very much Sir.

Bills, Item 2(4), The Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands Bill, 1987.

THE CIVIL AVIATION AUTHORITY OF
THE CAYMAN ISLANDS BILL, 1987

FIRST READING

CLERK: THE CIVIL AVIATION AUTHORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS BILL, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and is ordered to be set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE CIVIL AVIATION AUTHORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS BILL, 1987.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a law to establish the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands, and for the regulation of aviation matters and for all purposes connected therewith and incidental thereto.

As stated in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, this Bill seeks to establish the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands, and to regulate aviation matters in the Islands generally.

Provision is sought to be made for the proposed Authority to take over the responsibilities of the Cayman Islands Corporation, and for that Corporation to be dissolved.
Provision is also sought to be made for the repeal of the Airports
Regulation Law (Revised), and the Cayman Islands Corporation Law (Revised), and for the saving of all existing subsidiary legislation made under those laws.

Mr. President, at the time Government borrowed money from the Caribbean Development Bank to help finance the construction of the new Owen Roberts Airport Terminal. A condition of the loan was that an independent statutory body should be established to handle the financing, along similar lines to the Port Authority. The terminal at Owen Roberts has been in operation for some time now, and so it is necessary and timely that the Civil Aviation Authority be established. Besides the commitment to the Caribbean Development Bank on the loan side, it is a sensible arrangement for at least a semi-autonomous body to be given responsibility for the running of our airports, receiving the revenue generated by airport operations, paying the expenses incurred and controlling the budget, with a view to hopefully showing a profit, or at least breaking even at the end of the day.

As we all know, the Port Authority has worked quite well, and it is expected that the Civil Aviation Authority will perform equally as well. With the growth and expansion of Civil Aviation, in keeping with increased tourism developments, the Civil Aviation Authority will additionally lend itself to a smoother and more practical means of airport operations.

The Bill in section 3(2) sets out the composition of the Authority, which shall consist of a Chairman, who shall have a casting vote, but not an original vote; who will be appointed by the Governor in Council, and who does not necessarily have to be the Member responsible for the subject, the Chairman plus a Deputy Chairman and seven other members, three of whom shall be public officers. It is my view that this provides a proper balance, and affords the Authority the benefit of input and advice from top level and experienced public officers, plus, it allows contributions from members of the private sector to be made. The frequency of meetings is also laid down in the law, where it is stated that at least six meetings must be held annually. The Director of Civil Aviation will also be the Director of the Authority.

The functions of the Authority are set out in subsection 4, and these are:-

- * to deal with aircraft registration, certification and inspection
- * air safety
- * air traffic control
- * certification of aircraft operators, and
- * the licensing of air crews, and the licensing of airports.

Also, the Authority is responsible for the general management and control of airports. It will have responsibility for the enforcement of this law, and any United Kingdom Law dealing with Civil Aviation matters which are applicable to the Cayman Islands.

Provision is also made for start-up funds to be provided to the Authority, by approval of the Governor-in-Council, and certified by the Honourable Financial Secretary, which funds are of course to be repaid to Government.

The proper financial procedures are laid down for the timely handling and accounting of revenue and expenditure, with involvement of the Financial Secretary, which I support and believe to be a very workable arrangement.

Herein in Section 7(2)(a), specific responsibility is given the Authority for repayment to the Government, of all sums which have been borrowed by the Government for airport purposes, and the repayment of which is outstanding at the commencement of this Law, in addition to the other financial obligations of the Authority which must be paid out of revenue earned. Mr. President, here I would like to draw Members' attention to the fact that in the green copy, that subsection 3 of section 7, due to a printer's error has been omitted, but it was actually included in the white copy which was previously circulated to Members. That subsection (3) reads:

"The Authority may, with the approval of the Financial Secretary, invest its reserve funds at interest."

Mr. President I have also given notice of a Committee Stage amendment which has also been circulated to Members, which seeks for the Bill to be amended by the deletion of sub-clauses (4), (5) and (6), and the renumbering of sub-clauses (7) and (8), as numbers (4) and (5). This deletion is necessary because the provision to raise loans, or otherwise borrowing powers are in fact provided for in section 12 of the Bill. Therefore, subsections (4), (5) and (6) of section 7 are unnecessary as this would be a duplication.

With regards to staffing for the Authority, this Bill provides for public officers to be seconded from Government to the Authority. This arrangement preserves the rights and benefits of officers, and allows for the established machinery in Government to continue to deal with staff-related matters, recruitment, disciplinary action and what have you. Any advances, grants and guarantees provided the Authority by Government, must have the approval of the Legislative Assembly. The Authority must also have in place a proper accounting system, which must be kept to the satisfaction of the Financial Secretary. Annually, the Authority's audited financial statements, together with its operating report, must be laid on the Table of this Honourable House.

Section 23 establishes the procedure for dealing with persons contravening the law. Disciplinary action must be taken as necessary, in order to ensure the effective control and good management of the airports and surrounding areas.

Additionally Mr. President, Regulations may be made by the Governor in Council, covering a wide range of functions of the Authority, such as prescribing fees, and imposing fines and so on.

Mr. President, this Bill embodies into one piece of legislation, the Airport Regulations Law and the Cayman Islands Corporation Law, which are therefore being repealed. It introduces no substantially new nor controversial provisions. In fact, most of the provisions in this Bill were borrowed either from the Port Authority Law, or the two laws which I have just mentioned, being the Airport Regulations Law and the Cayman Islands Corporation Law. This Law is necessary, it is equitable, reasonable and timely, and with those brief remarks, I would recommend this Bill to the House, and ask Members for their support.

Thank you.

THE PRESIDENT PRESIDING

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a law to establish the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands, and for the regulation of aviation matters, and for all purposes connected therewith and incidental thereto, be given a Second Reading.

The motion is open for debate.
The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, the Bill before the House is a necessary one, but it is hard for me to understand how the Member had the courage to speak on it.

A few short years ago, we passed in Cayman Brac a Housing Authority Bill on similar lines as this one. A Bill that was modeled on the Port Authority Law, upon which this Bill is modeled, and he, together with another Member of Executive Council went to great lengths to complain about that Bill. I took the time to research the Hansards, but as it is ancient history, I will not go into it, although I know my friend the First Elected Member of Executive Council cannot help going back into antiquity, because he is buried in the past, and therefore cannot function in the present.

The Bill has one really bad provision, in that it shifts the onus of proof from the prosecution to the person prosecuted. Section 24, dealing with the presumption of venue, it says:

"Where an offence is alleged to have taken place at an airport it shall be deemed so to have taken place unless the contrary is proved."

This section is totally against English law, it is totally against the British system. It has always been that when a person was accused of an offence, the prosecution would have to prove the person's guilt. The Government is reversing this situation in this law, and I understand the fine distinction where being at the Airport is really not a crime, but will certainly be one of the ingredients necessary to prove the crime for which the person is being charged.

I do not know why this Government continues to revert to the Napoleonic system of law, rather than the English or Anglo Saxon system.

We recall this Government putting forward a Bill quite recently, making changes in the Drugs Law; shifting the presumption of guilt. I guess this is just because the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council, when he passed the Cayman Protection Law as far back as 1972, which law came into effect in 1973, in one section of it he shifted the onus of proof with regard to Gainful Occupation Licences, so that when a person comes before the Court, charged with having worked unlawfully for reward, the onus of proof is shifted and the person has to prove that he was not working for a reward, instead of the prosecution proving that the person had worked for reward. So, it is something that explains why he gradually goes back into antiquity as the Member from North Side mentioned a couple of days ago, and as I am mentioning now, it seems to be a common trait of character. I certainly would like to see this provision removed from the Bill, because how in the world can somebody prove that he was not at the airport? So the onus of proof is shifted by this section from the prosecution to the offender, and because it is very important, I shall read it again:

"Where an offence is alleged to have taken place at an airport it shall be deemed so to have taken place unless the contrary is proved."

One of the defences against a crime at the airport may well have been that the person was not at the airport, but it seems that that defence has been removed, because the person would have to prove that he was not at the airport, rather than the prosecution proving that he was.

The Authority also seems to have been given unlimited power in the borrowing of funds. Section 12, mentioned by the Member who introduced the Bill, gives unlimited powers to the Authority. It says:

"The Authority may borrow sums required by them for meeting any of their obligations or discharging any of their functions."

Of course, this is subject only to the approval of the Executive Council. I would rather see the approval for large sums of money being subject to Finance Committee, or the Legislative Assembly, than merely to Executive Council which is the body that will appoint the Authority. I believe this was one of the sections that makes the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council feel guilty, because he had objected strenuously to the unlimited powers that were contained in the Housing Authority Bill. Under this law Executive Council is given the power to impose penalties not exceeding two years imprisonment and fines not exceeding $5,000. Now, I objected sometime ago when the Executive Council was given similar powers under the Marine Conservation Law, to impose penalties of $5,000 for very trivial offences. And under the Airport Regulations they were also given powers to impose penalties of up to $5,000 for very trivial offences. I believe if a person dropped a chewing gum paper at the airport, the person could be fined $5,000 for such trivial offence. I objected strenuously to it at the time; the person could also be sent to prison for two years.

The same thing applies to the Marine Conservation Law. Recently I have received calls from people who feel that they have been mistreated in the Courts, because very heavy fines have been imposed with regard to the taking of conchs. I agree with these people, because I never supported the Law in the first place. I thought at the time the penalties were too high, and the result is that I hear about young boys being fined $1,000, their boats being confiscated, and yesterday I heard of another person being fined $1,500 maybe for catching one conch or two above the prescribed amounts, or for other similar offences. But it is not the Court to be blamed, the blame lies with the Members of this House who have given to Executive Council the power to prescribe these harsh laws for crimes which are not in the category of hard-core felonies. I know they are offences, most of them are simple misdemeanors and should not bear these harsh penalties.

The Government has been unreasonable, and here again in the Bill before us, the Executive Council has been given the power to prescribe penalties up to $5,000 for simple offences, and imprisonment for up to two years. I imagine a simple offence would be like my going up there and taking down that second baptismal plate which they put up after the airport had been opened. Now I know that an airport must be secure, and I know that certain offences could be committed at an airport that would require very harsh penalties. For example, anyone obstructing a plane when it was landing or taking off; anyone engaged in any act - hijacking of a plane. There are very serious crimes that could be committed at an airport, which would really need to be punished with harsh penalties.

But in this law Executive Council has been given the power to impose these heavy fines and heavy sentences under section 27(g) which says, "that the Governor may make regulations for the imposition in respect of a contravention of the regulations of a fine not exceeding $5,000 or imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years, or both such fine and imprisonment". It has been shown by the regulations made by the Government in recent years, that they will not hesitate to impose very harsh penalties for petty offences, and I trust that for once the Members on this side of the House will vote to limit the free hand which has been given under this law, and that only certain offences would be subject to these harsh penalties.

I remember sometime ago the Interpretation Law, I think, was amended so that there would be a blanket provision for the making of regulations and the imposing of severe penalties. Several laws have been brought in which had prescribed penalties, and amended in such a way, that the Executive Council can have a free reign of imposing unwarranted sentences and abnormally high fines.

The airport will be put under an Authority. I think the Caribbean Development Bank will be happy, they have always wanted this. But there is one other matter that we must consider. This law turns over to the Authority which it has created, Government's largest single asset. The lands which are vested in this Authority by this law comprise an excess of 300 acres. I did not total all the little parcels, but I noticed that in Grand Cayman one parcel 20C 46 is 227 acres and a parcel in Cayman Brac 93C 70 is 59.7 acres. And in addition to those two large parcels, there are another seven parcels in Cayman Brac and another five parcels in Cayman that will also be vested in the Authority. This is why I complained at the beginning of my speech, that we were giving unlimited powers to the Authority, because Government's largest and most valuable asset is at stake.

There is nothing to prevent the Civil Aviation Authority from using these lands for their purposes, to the detriment of this country. They are empowered to take out mortgages. If we look simply at section 7(5) we see that they can:

- "(a) create, issue, sell or negotiate debentures and other securities;
- (b) Redeem, fund or convert its existing liabilities; and
- (c) Do all things necessary for the accomplishment of paragraphs (a) and (b)."

And in section 12. referred to by the Member they are also given borrowing powers, subject only to the approval of the Governor-in-Council. And because that approval is given by the same Body which will appoint the members, I think the approval control is almost useless, and I would like to see this changed, because our Executive Council has shown that with the exception of one or two Members, they do not have the courage to stand up and be counted. Men not having the courage to stand up when the occasion demands it.

If it had not been for the Honourable Third Elected Member of Council, the Member for Communications and Works, who had the courage to stand up against tremendous odds from his cronies, and move that suspension motion, we would have been swamped with homosexuals, we might still be having a floor show from the homosexuals!

So, I think we are here dealing with a sensitive issue, far more important than the matter which was difficult to resolve this week. If we allow this large asset to be encumbered beyond our ability to redeem it, this would be a severe blow to the Government, and would perhaps wreck Government's ability to borrow in the future. And, it is not only the 300 acres of land which will be vested in the Authority. It is also that magnificent terminal which is unique in the history of airports, as being the only one to have a second baptism; one by the person who was responsible for it, and one by those who would like to tread in his footsteps, but also, future assets such as the new terminal to be built in Cayman Brac, will one day become the property of the Authority. I am not satisfied that our present Executive Council can take a decision. We found here this week that in a simple motion seeking the appointment of an Order of National Heroes, we could not get them to make a decision, and I will not add to that the other ludicrous matter of homosexuality.

The Bill follows the model of the Port Authority, and we must give praise to the late Mr. Berkeley Bush who was the Member responsible at the time the Port was built, and who was responsible in this House many years ago, for the passage of the Port Authority Law which has become the precedent for this Bill. We also must not forget the part played by the Cayman Islands Corporation, the body which ran the airport over the years. We have come a long way in aviation.

In my short lifetime I can remember the days when we had no airport, I can remember when the airport was built, because I quarried many a load of rock and was glad to sell them for its construction. I remember when the first plane landed. I remember when we moved into the jet age, and the first jet landed, and was also present during our Administration when the concorde landed, and was also present when the jet carrying Her Majesty the Queen landed. I have been at the airport on many memorable occasions when the late Sir Alexander Bustamante visited Cayman, and the day Caymanians stood up and chased away the Cubans. So, we have come a long way; like Virginia Slims, we have come a long way baby!

We must be grateful to those people who made aviation what it is. We remember Mr. Norman Bodden who was the Manager of Cayman Airways, and of LACSA before that, and those pioneers of the aviation industry. I must also credit my colleague from Bodden Town, Mr. Jim Bodden as the father of modern aviation, and dare say, if it had not been for him, we would not have the beautiful terminal which is there now. Although the Member for North Side often complains that we have outgrown that terminal, I think he does not truly believe that. He knows that that terminal will serve for many years to come, and we do not need a John F. Kennedy Airport nor a Miami International for this Island.

So, the Bill before the House will serve to consolidate the day-to-day running, the day-to-day operation; the Bill before the House will establish a creature of law which never existed before, although he may have evolved from the Cayman Islands Corporation. I think we should be proud of this, but at the same time, I expect the Member when he makes his closing remarks will have, by that time, consulted with his fellow Members of Executive Council, and will have, if he is smart enough, obtained their permission to change the sections which are obnoxious.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I support a Bill for a law to establish the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands, and for the regulation of the aviation matters and for all purposes connected therewith and incidental thereto.

Mr. President, this Bill clearly defines the functions and the responsibilities of the Authority, and like the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, I would like to give credit to the members of the Civil Aviation Authority which this Authority will replace. But Sir, not for the one that was established under their administration, because there are no minutes of any meetings, or of anything ever held by those people, that was a one man one show operation. The Member is quite correct that I have often complained that the magnificent, beautiful airport has outlived its usefulness, and not even Sir, the second baptismal that he often refers to, could extend its usefulness, and if he disbelieves me, I would like him to tell me where in that terminal on the departure side we are going to find space to put Pan Am Airways when they come in March, if they want space in the terminal, we are talking about this terminal now. We will see that the one in Cayman Brac, when it is built, has the potential for expansion, unlike this one.

Mr. President, as I was saying, for many years the Authority had not met, that will not be possible without contravening this law, because this law clearly says in section 3(6) that the Authority shall meet at least six times in every calendar year.

Mr. President, there is also a subtle, but what I believe is an important change in the constitution of the Board which you will appoint for this Authority, in that, unlike the Water Authority and the Port Authority, it does not appoint the Member responsible as the Chairman. I have always advocated that serving politicians should not be Chairmen of Government Boards, and I think that is a step in the right direction. There are many people in the private sector with many years of experience and expertise, who can be called upon to chair these important Boards.

Again Sir, another important aspect of this legislation which seems to give the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town some concern, is the financial aspect. But here again, unlike the Water Authority and the Port Authority, it is clearly defined in here what the procedures are. It does not give the Authority unlimited, unbridled power to borrow money for anything under the sun. This Authority cannot borrow money to buy a car for its Chairman. Before taking any action under the financial procedures, the Authority shall publish in the Gazette a prospectus showing (a) the amount and particulars of the proposed loan, (b) the rate or rates of interest that are to be paid, (c) the classes of persons who may subscribe, (d) the proposed applications of the amount raised, and (e) provisions for repayment of the loan. Under section 7 it further clearly and specifically defines the purposes and the reasons for which money can be borrowed. So I am not concerned about the Authority abusing its powers to borrow. And even section 12 that the Member complained about, says:

"Subject to subsection (2), the Authority may borrow sums required by them for meeting any of their obligations or discharging any of their functions."

But it clearly says that it is subject to subsection (2), and subsection (2) which the Member did not refer to, says:

"The power of the Authority to borrow shall be exercisable only with the approval of the Governor, as to the amount, as to the sources of the borrowing and as to the terms on which the borrowing may be effected. An approval given in any respect for the purposes of this subsection may be either general or limited to a particular borrowing or otherwise, and may be either unconditional or subject to conditions."

As regards to the accounting procedure, as I have said, it has not followed in the footsteps of the Water Authority, or the Port Authority. This law makes it quite clear under section 16:

"It is the duty of the Authority so to exercise and perform its functions so as to secure that their revenues are sufficient to meet all the sums properly chargeable to their revenue account (including, without prejudice to the generality of that expression, provisions in respect of their obligations under section 14 and 15), taking one year with another."

Section 17 Sir, says:

"Accounts and Audit:

(1) The Authority shall keep proper accounts of all its transactions to the satisfaction of the Financial Secretary and in a form which shall conform with the best commercial standards and such accounts shall be made up to the 31st day of December of each year and shall submit with vouchers to the Auditor General to be audited, who shall report thereon to the Authority and the Financial Secretary.

(2) The Auditor General shall be entitled at all reasonable times, and on the directions of the Governor, to examine such accounts and vouchers."

It goes further Sir, it says again, which is not in the Housing Authority, the Water Authority nor the Port Authority Law:

"The Authority shall within one month of its receipt of the Auditor General's Report prepare a report of its activities during the period to which the Auditor General's report relates; and both such reports together with the audited accounts, shall thereupon be laid on the table of the Legislative Assembly."

So Mr. President, this law is not given a carte blanche to any Board to operate Sir. That Board has to report its performance as well as deliver its audited accounts to this Legislative Assembly, and as long as the present Member, the Second Elected Member of Council is responsible for it, I have no fear of it because we are all quite aware of the improvements and the timeliness with which the accounts of Cayman Airways, for which he is also responsible, are now laid on the Table of this Honourable House. If he could clean that mess up and deliver the accounts here, I believe he can start from scratch in this situation, and deliver the accounts and the reports timely and properly.

And, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town stated that if somebody dropped a piece of chewing gum paper at the Airport they could be fined $5,000. I do not think that falls under the auspices of this law Sir, I think it falls under the Liquor Law, and the fine would be $500. So we have to be careful how we digress and cross over laws, before we misinform the public.

Mr. President, my experience tells me that there are few offences which are committed within the confines of an airport, which could be categorized as being petty.

Now, I do not have any great concern because Government is going to vest what may be considered one of its largest land assets in the hands of this Authority, because as I have pointed out, I believe the safeguards are built in to this law to assure that those assets are going to be handled properly. But Sir, there is also the other side of the balance sheet, where they are also handing over the liabilities to this Authority for that property. This Authority is going to have to maintain that wonderful, magnificent airport, you know those two wasted cedar Swiss chalet-type roofs where you have to spend a tremendous amount of money hiring people to crawl up on scaffolding to scratch the masses of cobwebs off, and if you leave it too long, you will have to tie a rope on to the man, because the cobweb will keep him up, and you will not get him back down. So there is some liability involved in these assets.

So Mr. President, I really have no reservations in supporting this law. I think the law sets new precedents in public authorities, which I am happy to see and which I hope in the near future, Government will see fit to amend the Water Authority, Housing Authority, Port Authority laws, to provide these same safeguards in terms of the accountability of the finances, etcetera. So I have no hesitation in supporting this Bill Mr. President.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Before inviting any other Member to speak, I think I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 3:18 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:40 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Continuation of the Second Reading Debate on the Civil Aviation Authority Bill. The Elected Member for East End.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Mr. President, I wish to commend the Member on his presentation of the Bill which is before us. I fully understand the necessity of the Bill, and I feel that it is timely.

This is an area which I feel must be properly regulated, and as far as I am concerned, this Bill seeks to do so. There are several areas which need proper control, and I consider that this is one and the Port is the other. I can see nothing wrong with Government's property being placed in the control of the Authority. In the past it has been vested in the Corporation. Furthermore, I am also satisfied that this Bill, if passed into law, offers the necessary safeguards.

The Member has clearly explained the reasons for the Bill. He has cleared up a query which I had on the Bill. It is my hope and trust that the Civil Aviation Authority will work as well, or even better than the Port. However Mr. President, I am confident that with its able Director, things will continue to run smoothly, and I am sure that proper judgement will be used.

I support the Bill before us.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Member of Executive Council.

The Honourable Fourth Elected

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, it is a foregone conclusion that when I rise in my set, I would support the Bill, being a Member of Government.

I first of all want to say that it seems as though the Election campaign for 1988 has been going on very strongly in here, in this meeting. It seems as though it pleases the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town to always speak about the Marine Parks. He seems to have a very special liking for that particular institution. Mr. President he is complaining that the Court is making harsh fines on individuals, for breaching the regulations.

I would like to say in this Honourable House Mr. President, that the Marine Park when it was proposed back in 1985, was taken through the length and breadth of these Islands; not only Grand Cayman, but also Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, where Marine Parks have been established. And, it was through a mandate of the people, that the regulation introducing Marine Parks was finally accepted by Government. The fines imposed under the law were well known to one and all. And Mr. President, if the court is not going to exercise its authority and its duty to properly deal with those who breach the law, then enforcement will be of no avail. The Government is spending money to appoint a Marine Parks Inspector because the people have been so interested in ensuring that the Marine Parks arrangement is a successful venture of this Government, that they are watching very carefully to see whether Government is going to properly enforce those regulations.

I have heard comments from various residents on the Island, making comments about the Marine Parks, its effectiveness and its usefulness and I dare say if anyone goes public and says to the residents of these Islands that the Marine Parks are not a useful system, I am afraid that they will be told otherwise. We are going to administer those regulations, enforce them, and ensure that the Marine Parks serve their usefulness in these Islands.

Mr. President, looking at the Bill which we are now examining, I would like to say that when the airport was first constructed in 1955, this Government raised a loan from the Commonwealth Development Corporation of the United Kingdom to build that airport, and it was a requirement of the loan arrangement that the Government establish a law to administer Civil Aviation. That law as we know it, is the Cayman Islands Corporation Law.

In those days the Corporation was not a financially independent institution, for its revenue could never support or match its overhead costs. The Commonwealth Development Corporation was not very demanding in insisting that the Corporation takes on the entire operation of Civil Aviation, and so Mr. President, it was decided that the Corporation would administer the technical side of the operation, and that the financial and staffing side of it would be dealt with under a department of Government which we know as the Civil Aviation Department.

In recent times when Government had to approach the Caribbean Development Bank for a loan to construct the Air Control Tower and Terminal building, that loan agreement required that Civil Aviation be administered by a Corporation, in the same way as the Port Authority and other Corporations which have come into being since that time. Mr. President, it was therefore a foregone conclusion at the time of the terminal building loan negotiations, that this new law was necessary and it would need to be brought into effect at the earliest possible time. So, what is presented here today Sir, is a piece of legislation to which this Government had already been committed.

Many of the provisions of this law Mr. President, have been borrowed from the Port Authority Law, because the two operations will have much in common. And so if there is any area of it which seems extraordinary, perhaps we could refer to the Port Authority Law, but I will leave the details of it for the Honourable Member presenting the Bill to comment upon further. Mr. President, this Bill as I have said before, was committed to by this Government and with the understanding that it be introduced at the earliest possible opportunity, I think the time is proper for it to come into effect, and I therefore support it to its fullest extent.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member of Executive Council.

The Honourable First Elected

HON. BENSON D. FRANKS:

Mr. President, I did not intend to speak on this Bill Sir, because I am sure the Member piloting the Bill is competent to deal with the issues raised. Nevertheless, I believe that I will save the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town's voice if I say what I am going to say, now, because I am sure he is going to come with the same contribution when the Community College Bill is to be discussed. So I think I will save his voice and the Assembly's time if I say what I have to say, now.

Now, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said that I was so engrossed in the past that I was unable to cope with the present. And of course he said that since the Housing Development Corporation Law was history, he would not go into it. But Sir, there is an old saying which says that the person who does not learn from history is doomed to repeat mistakes that have been made, and I am going to give the Member a little history lesson because I have the Housing Development Corporation Law 1981 in my hand.

I can also go back into the past Mr. President, with confidence, because anything that I said in 1981 I can say today. I have never made a contribution on any matter before the House, based on the expediency of the time, it has always been a principled debate. It is a fact that I opposed vehemently, many of the provisions of the Housing Development Corporation Bill when it was presented in 1981, and I am not going to go into all of the reasons why I opposed it, I am just going to highlight a few, and those provisions are not to be found in the Bill creating the Airport Authority which we are debating.

I should also mention Mr. President, before getting into it, that the Member also said that from 1971 when I introduced the Caymanian Protection Law, I had included in that a reversal of the onus of proof. For the benefit of Members and himself, I would say that he is referring to the fact that if the onus is on the person caught performing a duty for which a wage or a remuneration would normally be expected to be paid, to prove that he was not in fact being paid. I am sure that the Second Elected Member for West Bay is glad that that provision is in there, because in the pursuit of representing the working class in our district, he was accused once of hiding in a grape bushes to see whether a particular couple were in fact working at an establishment on West Bay Beach without a permit. The daughter of the couple who was the Manager of the Complex, came to me to complain bitterly, saying that the couple were not being paid. I asked if they were working, and was told that now and again they painted a couple of rooms. I said "well you are contravening the law", and I explained the implications and I believe she left the Second Elected Member alone when she saw him in the grape bushes the next time, and she kept her parents indoors.

Now Mr. President, to the Housing Development Corporation Law, I want to show some of the unreasonable provisions which were in it. Section 7(3) of that law Mr. President gave the Member, that is, the Member responsible for Housing, the Authority to order the Chairman to call a special meeting of the Housing Development Corporation. If one goes on then to subsection (4) you will see that the Member had the right to designate who would be Chairman of the meeting, and we go on to the most obnoxious of all provisions in that Bill, section 12 provides that:

"The Corporation shall, at such salary and upon such terms and conditions of service as it may determine and with the prior approval of the Governor appoint a General Manager."

And it goes on to state in subsection (2) the functions of the General Manager. And, if you go to subsection (3) you will find that in the event of the absence of the General Manager, and no time limit of absence is stated within the law or within this section:

"The Corporation may by instrument in writing and with the prior approval of the Member, appoint any person to act as General Manager during the period of such absence upon such terms and conditions as the Corporation may determine."

You see Sir, that would have meant that the Member could have effectively appointed the Acting General Manager at a salary to be determined by the Member, and that the person could have acted for the full life of the Housing Corporation. That I opposed in 1981, and if anybody brings it back in another Bill, I will oppose it now, I will.

If you check Section 17 of the Housing Development Corporation Law, the functions of the Corporation, you will find that they could do anything from being a contractor to building roads, build and maintain public gardens and amenities, and so on down the line. We also found that any material imported by the Corporation is free of customs import duty. I regarded that as unfair competition to other contractors in the Island, and I maintain it is so even today, and I would suggest that this Bill, the Housing Development Corporation Law is the next step which this Government will have to take to clean up. I know the Member for Bodden Town will say it is wasting time, but Mr. President, we cannot live with this type of obnoxious legislation on our books, not this Government.

Section 21 of the Housing Development Corporation Law says:

"The Corporation shall establish a Reserve Fund which shall be dealt with and applied in accordance with any direction which may from time to time be given to the Corporation by the Member."

You will find Mr. President, that the Bill before the House has no such obnoxious power in the Member.

Section 23 says that the Corporation will keep accounts, they were to be audited by qualified accountants appointed by the Corporation. This Bill before the House makes provision for the accounts of the Airport Authority to be audited by the Auditor General under the provisions of the Public Audit Law, and of course, that gives the right to the Auditor General to go in at any unspecified time and with your direction Mr. President, make a surprise audit. Nothing like this is provided for in the Housing Development Corporation Law. Of course the report from the Auditor was to be sent to the Member and not the Financial Secretary, as is the case with the law before us. And it did say that the Member would have to lay the accounts on the Table of the Legislative Assembly with due despatch. But we know from experience that in the case of Cayman Airways, 'due despatch' means in due course, and that for the whole four years or whatever that the same Member was Chairman of Cayman Airways, every time we asked about the accounts we were told 'due course', 'due course'. So we would have expected to get basically the same thing in the case of the Housing Development Corporation.

And Mr. President, again, the Member is worried about the assets of Government being put into the Airport Authority to be administered by the Authority, and with the safeguards which the Member will explain, are in there. The Member should take a history lesson, read the Housing Development Corporation Bill, and look at what they could do under section 26. The Member would direct what to do with the lands and building, the property of the Housing Development Corporation. The same thing applied to the Reserve Fund, the Member directed how to invest it. So I opposed it in 1981, and I oppose any such powers being given to one individual, today. In the case of the Bill before us of course, as the Member will point out, the Reserve Fund is handled by the Governor in Council.

Now, I do not know why the Member continues to try to draw red herrings across the trail. He mentioned that this Executive Council is incapable of making decisions, because we would not, according to him, make a decision on the motion a few days ago called the National Heroes Motion. I think what the Member was trying to say was that Members did not get up and speak. But that was a decision Mr. President, and I think no Member in Government declined to vote on the motion, their votes were recorded, that is a decision.

Now Mr. President, I too was disturbed about the boat load of homosexuals who visited the Island on Tuesday or whenever it was. I made some enquiries as to how they got here, and why they came here, and I have been reliably informed by my research team that the steamship companies in the States were at a loss to understand what the Unity Team Government Members and their cronies were talking about, when they were complaining that Cayman was not getting enough tourists. They had a meeting, and they said that Cayman is doing better than the competition, they are out performing the competition, what else can these people need? What will satisfy them? I understand some bright spark said that maybe a boat load of homosexuals will satisfy their complaints, and that is as I understand it, why they came, and I understand too that there was a welcoming committee on the dock, ready to welcome them with open arms. But, because they were disappointed in the quality and quantity, they complained to the Member who came in and raised all the smoke that afternoon, and that is how it got onto the floor of the House. But that is my understanding of how they got here, and why they came.

Thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? Then I invite the mover to reply.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, I would like to thank all Honourable Members who spoke on the Bill to establish a Civil Aviation Authority, and thank those who gave it their strong support.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town raised several points which I have to clarify, and made some comments which I would like to address. He started off by saying that he did not understand how I could have the courage to bring such a Bill to the House, when in 1981 I did not support the Housing Corporation Law. This is correct Mr. President, I did not support the law at that time, and my objection was as I recall, that that Bill when it became law would have given very wide ranging and almost unlimited powers to the Member. I think it is not a fair comparison to compare the Bill now before this House with the Housing Corporation

Bill at that time.

The Member expressed concern on section 24 of the Bill which he claims shifts the onus of proof. This is a bit technical for me because I am not a lawyer, and I do not profess to have a lot of legal ability. So, I consulted the Honourable Attorney General on this section, since it did give me some concern as well. His advice plus the research on section 24 tells me that this provision is not new, nor unique, because a similar provision is contained in the Port Authority Law which was passed in 1976. So we did not bring in anything new to shift the onus of proof. The purpose of such a provision as I understand it, does appear to relieve the prosecution of proving that an offence was committed within an airport, this is correct. But the reason behind this is that in the ordinary run-of-the-mill cases, possibly involving traffic or parking violations on the roads of the airport, for example, that strict proof of the fact that the land was part of an airport is likely to be very onerous, totally unnecessary and very time consuming. So this is the reasoning behind that, and I feel that there is every reason why that section should remain there.

The Member next dealt with borrowing powers, where it states in the Bill that only with the approval of the Governor in Council, and he expressed worry and concern about large sums being borrowed and that it would be with the approval of the Legislative Assembly. He also went on to point out the section dealing with mortgages and so on. I am sure that he remembers in my presentation that I did say subsections (4), (5) and (6) of 7. would be amended and removed from the Bill because of the duplication with section 12. The provision for borrowing is to be approved by the Governor in Council, and neither is this new nor unique to the Civil Aviation Authority. It is the same as in the Port Authority Law, as in the Water Authority Law and similarly it is in the Cayman Islands Corporation Law, which this Bill when it becomes law will replace, and which allowed or permitted borrowings with the approval of the Governor in Council. It is felt that to remove this and put it so that approval must be obtained from the Legislative Assembly, that this would undoubtedly hamper the day-to-day operations of the Authority. If it was necessary to do this in the Port Authority, or the Water Authority Law then I think a precedent has been set, and we have found something that is practical and I think it should be retained.

The Member next dealt with section 27(g) which deals with the power to make regulations where Executive Council can make regulations, and expressed again, concern over the $5,000 or two-years or both, which can be levied for violations. This section, here again, comes directly from the existing Airport Regulations Law. The Regulations covers the access to the airport, and the safety and well being of persons, and the care of property connected with the undertakings of the Authority. And there may, as the Member admitted, come a time when a regulation imposing such a large penalty is appropriate. He mentioned as I did, when this was brought before the House about two years ago, that there are very serious crimes for violations that can occur, such as hijacking an aircraft, or stealing an aircraft, or even arson and it is the intention that this provision would only be applied to very serious offences.

It is important to note here the breach of regulations would not automatically attract this penalty. Most of the Airport Regulations which we would propose to also adopt, have a special penalty for their breaches which is much lower. For example, under the Airport Regulations Law which was brought into effect in 1985, there is nothing about dropping chewing gum paper on the airport here but the fine for the driving or placing of a vehicle carelessly or dangerously is $25.00. Failure by the driver of a vehicle to report to a constable or to the person in charge of the airport, any accident, $30.00. There are simple penalties, very low penalties that are already in effect, which we would propose to use in the future. So, the $5,000 and two years, or both, would be applied to very serious offences.

Mr. President, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town also dealt with the section dealing with the vesting of lands; the turning over to the authority of Government's largest single asset. This is the same power that was vested in the Cayman Islands Corporation from the very beginning, and that has never, ever been abused. I do not believe that there is a single case that can be pointed out where there has been any intentional abuse of the Cayman Islands Corporation's power. And, he went on to say that there is nothing to prevent the Civil Aviation Authority from using lands for their purposes, to the detriment of the country. He also pointed out the valuable assets that the Civil Aviation Authority would be responsible for, that is, the new terminal at Owen Roberts, the terminal in Cayman Brac, and he went on and made what I would consider, several frivolous remarks which I really will not deal with, about two baptisms and that kind of rubbish. But, the Second Elected Member went to great pains in his usual clever manner, and, while there were remarks which should be treated with the contempt they deserve, his inference that Executive Council is incapable of appointing a strong, efficient Authority to which the valuable assets that were held by the Cayman Islands Corporation can be transferred, and capably administered, is totally ridiculous.

The way he went about phrasing his words and approached it, this was the inference that he was making, that Executive Council is incapable of conducting their affairs in a very high and professional manner. Of all the things that he has said Sir, I can treat them with the contempt that they deserve, but not this one. Because I can challenge any Member in this House, or any member of the public to prove otherwise, than that the Members of this present Executive Council can stand scrutiny in their private lives, in their family and home and in the successful operation of their personal businesses. We can stand examination, and I can challenge any man to prove otherwise. As an Executive Council, we are more than worthy of any power or authority entrusted to all Honourable Members of Executive Council. We were elected by the people; we were elected by Members of this House to Executive Council, and we are fit, willing and able to perform the duties entrusted to us in this high office, and I resent any Member who tries to infer differently.

In closing Sir, once again I would like to thank Members for their contributions and support.
Thank you, Sir.

THE TRAVEL TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

FIRST READING

CLERK: THE TRAVEL TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

MR. PRESIDENT:

A Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Travel Tax Law, 1976 is deemed to have been read a First Time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE TRAVEL TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, I move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a law to amend the Travel Tax Law, 1976.

This major part of this Bill is simply to deal with the establishment of the Civil Aviation Authority.

At the present time the travel tax is payable to the Collector of Taxes who in essence is the Financial Secretary, and this amendment to the travel tax is to allow travel tax that is collected at the airport to be turned over to the Civil Aviation Authority. I think that part of the Bill is straight forward and needs no further elaboration.

Members have received, however, a Committee Stage Amendment to this Bill. It is Government's intention to increase the cruise ship travel tax from CI$3.20 to CI$5.00 effective 1st January, 1988. The cruise ship programme and their selling of rooms on board the ships is normally planned 9 months or so in advance. Therefore, we want to put this amendment now to enable them to deal with the additional cruise ship tax of CI$1.80.

The reason for all of this, Mr. President, is that at the present time the Port Authority and this Government are considering the installation of mooring buoys for cruise ships in selected places in the Cayman Islands so as to preserve the reefs in line with the thinking on conservation.

The additional travel tax of CI$1.80 will be used to help repay the loan that is going to be required for the purchase of cruise ship buoys. At the present time the buoys and the installation thereof, together with the anchors and chains, are likely to cost in the range of US$650,000 and, Mr. President, CI$1.80 is a nominal fee to pay for the mooring of a ship that is worth millions of dollars. The cruise ships are not going to pay it anyway. We know they are going to pass it on to the passenger and I do not foresee CI$1.80 causing a passenger to make a major decision not to come to the Cayman Islands. It is peanuts.

Mr. President, I recommend this Bill to Honourable Members.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a law to amend the Travel Tax Law, 1976 be given a Second Reading. The motion is open for debate. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION PROPOSED: DEBATE ENSUED:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I oppose this Bill, particularly the section which increases the travel tax on cruise ship passengers.

The Honourable Member has put up a case which would make one believe that it is a small matter. He spoke about an increase of CI$1.80 per passenger, but that increase is more than a 50 per cent increase because the original tax had been CI$3.20. So it is a substantial increase and furthermore it brings the total tax up to CI$5.00.

Furthermore, I do not like the way the tax was brought in and I will deal with that later, but let me finish on the increase. The tax now becomes CI$5.00 and if a cruise ship brings in 1,000 passengers per week those passengers would pay CI$5,000; and if they came in for 50 weeks of the year, CI$25,000 would actually be collected from one ship. So it is not peanuts, it is a substantial figure.

I have said that I do not like the way the tax has been brought in. The Bill before the House had been circulated to make certain amendments as the Honourable Member explained in connection with the passage of the Civil Aviation Law. Executive Council, however, seems to have had an afterthought and said that they should never miss this opportunity of increasing taxes since their business is to raise taxes. So an amendment was circulated to us quite recently - and this was why I was fumbling with the figures in it because I have not had time to really examine this increase. It has been done in such a hurried manner just like all the other tax increases and all the other legislation that has come to this House since 1984. The Government does not seem to know what it wants to do and if it does put forward anything, before it reaches the Member an amendment is underway and there is never time to discuss any matter - and if you do discuss it you can bet it will be changed by morning.

For example, last week I discussed a constitutional change and before the newspaper could print it this morning we received amendments which substantially change what I told the members of my constituency.

So, this type of legislation is not good enough. Government should sit down and decide what it wants to do, publish it and then give sufficient time for the matter to be digested before they deal with it.

There have been many complaints about this Island becoming expensive for tourists and the Government, since 1984, has taken many steps which make the situation worse. This Bill is another example of their policy to squeeze the tourist, or in fact to squeeze anyone who is helping the economy of this country.

I can understand that certain changes were necessary in this Law since we will now have the airport run by the new Authority that we have created. This Bill seeks to make another substantial change in that the revenue from the travel tax will no longer go to Government, but will go to the Civil Aviation Authority. I disagree with this because it will mean that when we are making up the 1988 Estimates, Government will just be short of the revenue from this source and so to balance its budget I imagine Government will have to seek new ways of finding additional revenue. So Government, having depressed the economy so that our standard lines of revenue are not yielding sufficient funds, should not at this time be cutting out of our revenue this particular item.

The Bill before the House, if passed, will come into operation with the exception of, I believe, the sections relating to the revenue, so that the cruise tax will not be collected until 1st January, 1988. And if I have read it correctly, the revenue from the travel tax will not go the Civil Aviation Authority until 1st January, 1988. The Honourable Member I think, has explained the reason for this, but what bothers me is that only three months ago Government put forward its Budget with the bold announcement that there were no tax increases. And despite the fact that the tax will not be increased until 1st January, 1988 they have already broken their promise of no tax increases because they are making the tax increase today, or whenever this Bill is passed, despite the fact that it will not be operational until 1st January, 1988.

Like the collateral for the Tower Loan, the only reason why they did not spend it was because it had been fixed to the Tower Loan. The only reason why they are not collecting this is because the cruise ship lines need to build this into their rate schedules and so would not be able to collect it until after they have published new rate sheets for their cruise packages. So the Government is doing no favour. Even if they pass the Bill, the cruise ships would not be able to collect the tax unless they were to change their rates during the middle of the year. So, I am disappointed in this Bill and disappointed that the Government has used this opportunity to impose yet another tax.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Does any other Member wish to speak? The Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
Mr. President, I wish to support a Bill for a Law to Amend the Travel Tax Law, 1976.

This is in keeping, or necessary, with the new Civil Aviation Authority that we created last week and that Authority has to have this source of revenue in order to meet the expenses that it will incur. But Mr. President, I am a bit perturbed, if I understood the Honourable Member moving the Bill correctly, in that the section of the Bill which seeks to increase the travel tax to tourist ship passengers is necessary because we are going to install mooring buoys. I would be happier, Sir, if this cost for the installation of mooring buoys was done, in what I believe to be a more common practice in international shipping, by charging the ship a fee, whether it is based on tonnage or per passenger, for berthing at the buoy rather than as a travel tax. I am not claiming that in this case the ship would not again pass the expenses on to the passenger, but I think it is more appropriate that a berthing fee be charged to tie up to the buoys than simply increasing the travel tax to offset it.

With those few words I support the Bill.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Does any other Member wish to speak? Does the mover wish to reply?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:
Yes Mr. President.
Firstly to thank those Members who spoke and for their comments, but perhaps to thank those who did not speak more than those who did!

I think, Mr. President, that the Financial Secretary has to take full blame for the Committee Stage Amendment and not other Council Members because to tell the truth, which I like to do, it was approved by Council quite some time ago. What actually happened was that we mistakenly thought we had sent it down and the wrong draft was printed as the Green Bill. So if it was anybody's fault it was mine and I take full blame for it.

Mr. President, we have heard that if 1,000 passengers each pay $5.00 for every visit, each visit will cost $5,000. Well, that may be true, but look at it and analyse it and it still arrives at the fact that the person paying the bill only pays a $1.80 increase. That is not going to turn anybody off, at least I do not think so. We are not squeezing it, Mr. President. For example in Bermuda they charge a $20.00 cruise ship tax - $20.00 per person. So we are not squeezing anything. We are trying to use the funds from cruise ship operations to assist in establishing a safer way for the cruise ships to stay in the George Town harbour and at the same time not further damage the ocean floor.

I think perhaps I need to go over this Bill again because the first part of it which was printed in the Green copy deals with the legal and administrative function of giving to the Civil Aviation Authority, whenever it is established fully, the travel tax that is paid by tourists departing Owen Roberts Airport and Gerrard Smith Airport as well.

The second part of the Bill deals with the cruise ship traffic and that will not go to the Civil Aviation Authority, it will go only to the Treasury Department. The reason for this is that Government was requested to assist the Port Authority in establishing these buoys. It is a lot of money for the Port Authority to come up with, approximately US$650,000. Our view was that we should increase the cruise ship tax to help pay for it. If it was collected as a berthing fee it would not accrue to the Government, but it would accrue to the Port Authority and I think it would be much more cumbersome to collect, and troublesome. I always like to keep things simple, Mr. President. The simplest way we can do it the better and the more chance there is of collecting it on a timely basis and of my estimates being closer to the actual sum.

I believe I have covered the points, Mr. President, thank you very much.

THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (REGISTRY) BILL, 1987

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (REGISTRY) BILL, 1987

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill for a Law to Confer Certain Powers on the Governor in Council in Respect of the Registry Relating to Shipping.

I do not believe that there has been more advice given to this Government on a subject than the registry of shipping. In my research, going back to 1976 and 1977, a man by the name of Raul Colin Vaux came here and gave some advice in July of 1977, on whether or not an exempted company satisfied the requirements of a particular section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, to own a British ship. His report was about 30 pages long and even today some lawyers believe he is right while others disagree with his advice.

By December of 1977, Mr. President, a Mr. White came here to give advice on the possibility of having the International Convention of Load Lines 1966, and the Safety of Life at Sea, 1960 and 1974, extended by the United Kingdom Government as an existing signatory to the Cayman Islands' Administration, which is a British Dependency under the Crown, and to estimate the possible cost to the Administration of providing this facility. Government acted on the Report and His Excellency the Governor in those days, Mr. Thomas Russell, wrote to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on the establishment of a full scale ships' register, along the lines of Bermuda and Hong Kong, provided that the Cayman Islands would financially support the establishment of a registry fully geared to cope with an expanded operation; and provided that the necessary legislative requirements could be identified and executed.

Mr. President the Foreign and Commonwealth Office's reply was quite positive. It said that the Department of Trade expressed a willingness to assist our Government to achieve its objectives and said they would do all they could to help. They went on to point out the problems as they saw them; the problem areas and the task ahead to accomplish Cayman's objective.

Later in 1979, Government obtained the advice of a Mr. G.V.C. Young, OBE, the First Legislative Draftsman in the Isle of Man, who was recommended by the British Government to draft the necessary subsidiary legislation to establish a full registry of shipping. In my research of the Cayman Islands' registry of shipping problem, I found a piece of FCO correspondence marked in my file if I could take a minute to find it anyway, what it said was that as the Cayman Islands were moving forward to establish and to have the Safety of Life at Sea Conventions extended to it ... and this correspondence, I am sorry, Mr. President it is not FCO, it came from the British Embassy in Washington ... said that the United States had spoken to the authority in Washington and the Coast Guard and said that the pressure was now off the Cayman Islands and that they were turning their eyes elsewhere.

Almost eight years later the same kind of situation, but not necessarily identical, has occurred where the Coast Guard is involved and we are starting to have problems again with the United States' Coast Guard. I wonder if it is not caused by the fact that we have not done anything about improving the registry and making it reputable in the eyes of all concerned.

In 1983, Mr. President, a Mr. Duec advised us on the shipping registry and what he thought should be the way in which the Cayman Islands should proceed. We had meetings of the Standing Finance Committee on it and the decision of the Committee at the time was that we should restrict the register and should not deal with ships any larger than 500 tons. Then, in order to carry out this exercise I met, on a visit to London, with those responsible in the Department of Transport, mainly the marine section, and they were quite helpful and cooperative; and may I make it crystal clear that whatever we do here the legislation dealing with the registry of shipping cannot come into effect until the United Kingdom Government makes an Order in Council. So I hope we do not make too much noise and go in a different direction because I believe we will have some difficulty on our hands.

This legislation, Mr. President - coming now more fully to the Bill - we brought forward a Bill in, I think, May of last year. We took the First Reading and subject to representations from the private sector we did not go any further. This Bill is not exactly like that one because it does not restrict the future of the registry in any way. And those Members who have seen the Committee Stage Amendment that was circulated on the 16th, is the result of meetings which I had with the private sector to gain their input. This was the method of dealing with this Bill President, and it was Council's decision that I should do so. The Bill gives the Registrar of Companies the authority to refuse to register ships. At the moment he has no authority whatsoever. If someone can find a section in the Merchant Shipping Act of 1984 that gives the Registrar any power to refuse to register a ship, I would be the most surprised person.

We have to clean up our act. We were talking just last week about drugs in the Cayman Islands and the increase in drug-related criminal activity. We passed our Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty legislation in September of last year and today we are here trying to get Members' agreement to do something about our shipping registry.

Mr. President, I just want to read for Members' information the kinds of problems that are cropping up on a daily basis with the registry. I will give you the name of the ship, the gross tonnage and I will give you the embarrassing incident.

* A ship by the name of Byrding 499.48 tons.
No certificate, coupling shaft not guarded, engine and exhaust pipe in bad condition. That is a ship that is on our register.

* The Bini 631.68 tons.
Seized by soldiers in Ghana.

* The Big Orange 3,442 tons.
Seized in Singapore with the Bank of Nova Scotia.

* Benardo Strozzi 22,000 tons.
Contravention of 1972 Collision Regulations.

It is a long list Mr. President, there are at least 50 ships here.

* Misterioso seized by US Coast Guard in Key West.

* Morazan 2,300 tons.
Seized in Barbados for non payment of fees.

* Line Island Trader 101 tons.
Seized by the US Coast Guard with drugs.

* And we all remember the Lago Izabal 1,139 tons.
Seized by the US Coast Guard with drugs.

There are all sorts of variations of infringement and embarrassing situations. On one occasion I wrote to one of the Officers about a ship that was seized in Hawaii. The Registrar of Shipping could not get a response out of them. Three months later they still could not tell him anything about it and I wrote to them and said that this was really not good enough. I was admonished, Mr. President. They said that I was accusing them unjustly and that what I was saying was unjustified. But what I said was that those are the kinds of situations that not only embarrass the Cayman Islands, but also the United Kingdom Government that is getting all the pressure from, what people call, UNCTAD.

We have to clean up our act. We get up in the House and boast about Cayman and its seamen saying that they are the best in the world. We did not lose too many seamen Mr. President, and I think it is our responsibility to make sure that some other country does not lose their seamen because the Registrar of Shipping does not have the authority to refuse to register a ship, which he believes is unsafe or that has a detrimental effect on merchant shipping. That is what the Bill, together with the Committee Stage Amendment states. I will read clause 3 together with the Committee Stage Amendment so that the full effect can be known:

"3. Notwithstanding the provisions of Part 1 of the Act
....."

... and the Act in this case means the Merchant Shipping Act of 1894 of the United Kingdom.

"..... relating to the registration of ships, the Registrar may refuse to register any ship in respect of which an application for registration has been received, unless he is satisfied that:

- (a) every share in the ship is owned by a company formed and registered under the Companies Law or by an existing company as defined in subsection (1) of section 2 of that Law; and
- (b) having regard to the safety of the ship and to the safety, health and welfare or otherwise of the persons employed or engaged in any capacity on board the ship, it is not detrimental to the interests of the Islands or of international merchant shipping for the registration of the ship to be transferred to the port of George Town."

I believe that is showing responsibility with regard to the shipping register, Mr. President, and that clause, together with the Committee Stage Amendment which I propose to move, is structured along the same lines as the Isle of Man legislation; and most of us know that in the last year the Isle of Man Shipping Register has been the one which has been growing, and growing substantially. It grew more than any other register in the world according to my information and if I am wrong I hope someone will correct me.

Under clause 4, Mr. President, the power is given to the Governor in Council to direct that the Registrar -

" ... remove any ship which is on the register maintained by him under that Part, and in respect of which, having regard to the safety of the ship and to the safety, health and welfare of the persons employed
...."

- those seamen we talk about -

"... or engaged in any capacity on board the ship, or to the possibility that the ship is being used for criminal purposes, the Governor is satisfied it is detrimental to the interests of the Islands or of international merchant shipping for the ship to be registered at the port of George Town."

That power, Mr. President, is exercised where there is a case of which we are not satisfied meets the criteria set out in clause 4 - and we will direct the Registrar to remove it from the register.

The Committee Stage Amendment, Mr. President, proposes to delete clause 5 which deals with the prescription of classes of ships and we propose to delete it mainly because it is our intention, when hopefully this Bill is passed, to request some time from the responsible persons in the Department of Trade dealing with shipping matters, and for a team of Government officials and others if the United Kingdom will allow us, to visit London to sit down with them and talk about our shipping registry with a view to upgrading it - but with a view also of not restricting it.

I do not mind spending a little money in having a marine section established in this Government and to employ marine surveyors, if that is what is required for the United Kingdom Government to extend the Safety of Life at Sea Conventions to this country. I am speak for myself, Mr. President. Those words are mine, mine alone, and nobody else's. I believe it is justified for us to now seek to establish a register that can withstand any kind of scrutiny by any organization whether it is UNCTAD, the United Kingdom, the United States' Coast Guard or anybody else. I do not like being on the defensive, Mr. President, it makes me uncomfortable. My attitude is offence all the time - take the offence and do something about our shipping registry. One cannot wait to be told what to do. Do not wait for people to say that something is wrong with it. We must open your eyes and see for ourselves.

Clause 6 of the Bill, Mr. President, is similar to clause 3 which I read earlier. The Committee Stage Amendment proposes to amend clause 6. I will read it for the benefit of Members and the listening public:

"Notwithstanding section 53 of the Act, an application made for the transfer of the registration of a ship to which that Act applies from any port of registry outside of the Islands to the port of George Town, shall not be granted by the Registrar, unless he is satisfied that:

- (a) every share in the ship is owned by a company formed and registered under the Companies Law or by an existing company as defined in subsection (1) of section 2 of that Law; and
- (b) having regard to the safety of the ship and to the safety, health and welfare or otherwise of the persons employed or engaged in any capacity on board the ship, it is not detrimental to the interests of the Islands or of international merchant shipping for the registration of the ship to be transferred to the port of George Town."

That basically is all that this short Bill is attempting to establish; that is to give the Registrar of Shipping the authority to refuse, under certain conditions, and to also give the Registrar the authority to refuse a ship to transfer from some registry to the Cayman Islands, under certain conditions which I read out; and under clause 4 to give the authority to the Governor to direct that the ship be removed from the registry.

I think it is a good system of cheques and balances, Mr. President. If the Registrar makes a mistake and registers a ship which he should not have registered, the Governor has the authority to tell him to remove it. The Governor in Council has that authority. It could be that when he registers a ship he does not have all the information that he should have had when registering the ship. He might have the certificates and everything except that one piece of paper which might have caused him to refuse to register the ship.

Mr. President, I am no shipping expert. I am only a layman at this. I spent a couple of years as a seaman, so I have a layman's understanding of what sea life is all about. But, I believe that our fathers and forefathers would turn over in their graves if they knew that we would not take a stand to improve the unsatisfactory position with regard to our shipping registry.

I thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to Confer Certain Powers on the Governor in Council in respect of the Registry Relating to Ships, be read a Second Time.

The motion is open for debate.

The Elected member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I find myself this morning in somewhat the same position in that of which the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town complained of earlier. I had intended to oppose this Bill very vociferously in the form in which it was originally circulated. I still have some reservations even though the amendments, that are to be moved in Committee stage, drastically and substantially change the original Bill that was circulated. Happily,

Sir, it does change it for the better.

The Honourable mover in his opening remarks gave a long list of those persons who had given advice on the subject of ship registration in the Cayman Islands and most of that advice appeared to have been positive, but maybe he was in the position regarding ship registry, when he received that advice, as he was in the Economic Plan in that although he personally appeared to have had the administrative will to improve the ship registry he did not have the political will to do so. I hope that he has the political will to do so now. He certainly knows that he has my support to make the Cayman Islands' ship registry something that this country can be proud of and not ashamed of.

Mr. President, what concerns me is that this Bill may have an adverse publicity affect on the good companies that register ships in the Cayman Islands, in that they may fear that their ships can be removed by the Registrar of Companies and I am not altogether certain that the Bill in its present form is going to achieve what the mover, and certainly I, would like to see done - and that is to prevent the ships that are giving us a bad name from getting on the register in the first place.

I do not believe it is going to do us much good, if, after a boat has been seized in Florida or some other place for contravening some international shipping law, or for ganja or anything else, to then remove the ship as we will have already suffered the embarrassment. What I would liked to have seen presented to this House this morning Sir, was a much more comprehensive Bill and, from the mover's presentation, it seems as if the advice is there to bring such a Bill. But he has not been getting his full political support to bring the Bill, I am going to try and convince those who may have been dubious or doubtful that ship registration can be clean and respectable, and it can be profitable in the Cayman Islands. Hopefully, the Honourable Member will then have the full political support that he needs to bring this Bill.

A lot of the advice or answers that I have been given in the past about ship registration in the Cayman Islands by the Government, and the reasons why it could not work here, etcetera, does not appear to jive with the advice of the experts as outlined by the Honourable mover of the Bill this morning. I have been told that we could not set up a registry here because it would not make any money. I noticed, however, that last year that we made over $200,000 without proper legislation or a proper ship registry. So, Mr. President, I started to dig around to see if I could find some answers for myself. Another reason I was given was that England would not support a full ship's registry in the Cayman Islands. I believe that I have also found the reason for that, and I will give that reason as I go along.

Mr. President, I have always been convinced that ship registration could work in the Cayman Islands and in listening to the Honourable mover of this Bill this morning, and to the number of experts and in view of the many years that this Government has been spending money and exercising its mind on ship registration, I still believe that the country would have been better served today if we were discussing comprehensive legislation to put this Bill in place. I think, Sir, that this Bill should be withheld and maybe we could have that comprehensive legislation in April, because while I agree fully with the Honourable mover of the Bill that we certainly want to clean up the windows of our ship registry, we do not want to knock down the walls of the house while we are trying to clean or repair a few broken panes.

I was heartened to hear that the United Kingdom Government was prepared to extend to us SOLAS, Safety of Life at Sea, etcetera, if we wanted it, because I have been told in the past that they were not prepared to do that and that we could not have a proper ship registry because we were a Crown Colony, while the Isle of Man and Bermuda and countries with similar constitutional positions as ours have full ship registers. I agree with the Honourable mover that the Isle of Man is the fastest growing full ship registry in the world today. Those countries are making money from ship registration, so there is no reason why the Cayman Islands should not do so.

Mr. President, the legislation can be like the Isle Of Man's which is very short, brief and sweet and contains only four clauses coupled with directives from the Harbour Board. Or we can go to the Bermuda Merchant Shipping Act, 1979 which is very comprehensive and has 82 clauses; or we can go even further, but maybe I will be told that we cannot go this far, because the Bahamas is an independent country, but their shipping legislation, Sir, covers almost every possibility, and has 288 clauses. I believe, however, that somewhere within the bounds of these respective legislations we can find a medium that is suitable and applicable to the Cayman Islands because of any of the advantages that these three countries - the Isle of Man, Bermuda and the Bahamas - can boast of having over other territories which have full ship registration, I believe the Cayman Islands can boast of them too. I believe we are certainly as expedient in our bureaucratic system and probably more expedient than most of these countries. We have as good financial services, we have better communication services, and I will continue to say, Sir, that we have superior seamen.

Mr. President, in trying to determine, as I have been informed, as to why England was discouraging us from opening a full ship registry, I believe I found it in the Nautical Magazine, Volume 234 No.2, August 1985. This contains an article on foreign registry of British shipping increasing. And it states:

"Something like a quarter of British owned shipping is now registered outside the United Kingdom, and the proportion is rising, said Mr. Brian Shaw, Chairman and Managing Director of Furness Whitty Group to the General Council of British Shipping in his inaugural address as President, at its annual meeting."

And Mr. Shaw goes on to say, and I quote:

"Mr. Shaw said that at least in defence there now appears to be some realization that British shipping mattered. On March 19th, 1985, I assume, in the House of Commons, the British Prime Minister said in answer to a question from Sir Edward du Cann ..." - (and I quote the Prime Minister's answer) "... 'I can recognize that it is of strategic importance to have a good British merchant fleet of considerable size'."

And I believe, Sir, that that may be some of the reasons why the Cayman Islands may have been discouraged in the past from opening a full registry. And I believe that that statement is going to make the job of the mover of this Bill and his delegation which he hopes to take to England of getting the Order in Council to bring it into effect, more difficult.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would it be a convenient moment for the Member to pause in his speech at this point, so that we can take our morning break? In that case I will suspend proceedings for approximately 15 minutes.

AT 11:19 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:42 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated.
Proceedings are resumed.
Second Reading debate on the Registry of Shipping Bill. The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, before we took the break I quoted a statement made by the British Prime Minister in Parliament. In order that people do not become confused by what I was saying, I am fully aware that her statement referred to their need to have access to the ships in time of war because there is another article in this same magazine that concerns Government studying future ship requirements, and it states:

"The choice for the Government is whether they want a fleet in being, earning its keep and available in the Navy's elegant phrase 'to be stuffed' ships taken up from trade, or whether they prefer to rely, as our American cousins partially do, on a reserve of idle ships costing money and rusting quietly in the backwaters."

When I said that the Honourable mover of this Bill and his delegation would have to face Britain's opposition to the creation of ship registries in places like the Cayman Islands with obvious advantages, I firmly believe that that is going to be the greatest obstacle because even the labour unions and shipping unions in Britain are coming out against the creation of these ship registries and therefore are going to put pressure on the politicians not to grant us permission. But I think, or I hope he will be successful.

Secondly, Mr. President, I have been told repeatedly over the past two years that there was no money to be made from shipping registration and that if we tried to set it up the bureaucracy to administer the ship registry was going to be so great that any revenue which might be derived from a ship registry would be gobbled up by this enforcement bureaucracy, and that we might wind up having to subsidise it.

That does not appear to be true from what I have found in doing some research on the subject. As I said earlier I have been told that the Isle of Man has one Inspector who is a retired British certified sea captain and we all know that we have plenty of fully qualified retired and, even still active, sea captains in the Cayman Islands. I expect someone will jump up and say that Caymanians may only have a Liberian licence and that it is not as good as a British licence, but I have seen evidence in some of these magazines, Sir, that shows that that is not so because in one article, in particular, which unfortunately I did not mark because I did not feel that I would have to deal with it, it states that when someone gets a British license it is good for life and that one never has to go back and do an examination, or update it or anything else. Holding a Liberian licence means that you have to be reexamined every five years and one has to produce proof that he has been sailing, etcetera, or he will lose his license. And Britain, in that article, is now attempting to introduce the same type of system in British shipping and they were being advised by the Liberian Examining Council on how best to do it. So I think that the Caymanians who have their Liberian licenses are qualified to do the job.

Mr. President, getting back to the revenue/expense side of it. I was told that the cost of annual inspections would be prohibitive. That is not so. The cost of these inspections are passed right on to the ship owners. The Bahamas Gazette on the 23rd December, No.51, clearly outlines all the inspection fees and they are charged to the shipping companies who own the ships. Initial survey $200; periodical survey $100; periodical inspection $50.00; $100 for safety inspections and they charge for sea worthy inspections and record searches. So we would not be doing anything unnatural in ship registration if we did, as the Honourable mover suggested in earlier debates, pass the cost of this administration on to the shipping companies. Just as we do with our cars - we pay a registration fee for the automobiles we drive on the road and when we get them inspected Government does not inspect them free of charge; and if we fail the inspection we have to go back and pay the inspection fee. It is the same under the Bahamian Shipping Registry. If they fail one item on the inspection list, for example a boiler was leaking and they have to send an inspector back, they charge them for it.

If we got these international conventions extended to us I do not believe that it would be necessary for us to have a Caymanian representative in every port in the world. Some of these other organizations could do these inspections for us and bill us for them. So I do not think, as I have been told, that it is a case of bureaucracy whereby we will have to employ 2,000 people and have them stationed in every port all over the world in case a ship happens to come into port and needs an annual inspection. We have, as I have said, good communications and we can transport people from the Cayman Islands fairly rapidly, and we will know where the ships are going and which ports they are going to be in when they need their annual inspections. So I believe it can be handled, and I believe it can be handled at a reasonable cost.

Mr. President, we in the Cayman Islands, if we use our present fee structure, should make a lot of money on the ship registry because the Registrar of Companies told me that presently we charge a registration fee of $290 up to 1,500 tons and $420 above that. Added to that is a tonnage fee of 30 cents per ton up to 1,000 tons, and 10 cents a ton after that - the minimum being $60.00.

Under the Bermuda Shipping

Registration and Tonnage Fees Act, 1976, Sir, the registration fee not exceeding 15 tons is $350; annual tonnage fees - $200; exceeding 15 tons - $350-$500. If the ship is owned by a person other than a corporate body and does not exceed 15 tons it is $75.00; exceeding 15 tons it is $150. Other ships are 25 cents per ton subject to a minimum fee of $500, plus an annual tonnage fee of 10 cents per ton subject to a minimum fee of $200. So there is room to increase the Cayman Islands' ship registry fees and if we can make $200,000 on fees that we charge now, we should be able to make even more money. So I believe that the revenue is there, Sir.

Another thing I have been told during the last two years about shipping registration in the Cayman Islands is that it was an exercise in futility and a waste of time because shipping and ship registration is on the decline. That is not so, Mr. President. A small country like Vanuatu, which I believe was formerly the New Hebrides, was one of the first open registers to offer lower fees to help owners combat the effects of the shipping recession. The register is now 5 years old and in October it was announced that the number of ships had risen to 133, which amounted to 355,000 gross tons. The largest ship on the register was a 130,000 ton tanker. Their Parliament is debating a new Shipping Register Law, part of which is concerned with updating mortgage arrangements to include revolving and multi-currency mortgages and schemes to match facilities offered by other open registries. That was reported in the Nautical Magazine of December 1986.

In the Caribbean Shipping Magazine of November 1985, there was an article entitled 'Ship Registry - Curacao Offering Advantages. Curacao enjoys excellent telecommunications with the rest of the world, as well as good airline connections with the United States, South America and Europe. There are a number of international banks and reputable accounting firms established on the Island - partly because of the high service standards and partly because of special tax provision and various treaties, a large number of offshore investment, holding finance royalty, real estate and shipping companies have been established in the Netherlands Antilles, and especially in Curacao.' There is nothing here of which the Cayman Islands does not have better.

It goes on to state the registration costs in Curacao. It costs between US$1,500 and $3,500 to register an ocean-going vessel. This all-embracing category includes yachts, barges, submersible, offshore rigs, etcetera, as well as other standard ocean going vessels.

In the same magazine we find another article 'Bahamas Open Registry - a New Dimension in Sailing. In 1976 the Bahamas took a giant step in assuming a dominant position in ship registration. It was then that the Merchant Shipping Act of 1976 was enacted, which proves a comprehensive plan for the registration and regulation of ships under the Bahamian flag. Since beginning this service the amount of tonnage registered is over 4 million tons, including 19 United States owned ships.' And it goes on to say that one of the reasons why the Bahamian flag is virtually trouble free for foreign-owned vessels; the practice of setting up a Bahamian Corporation is not necessary, and ships can be registered in New York, London or the Bahamas. A stipulation permits provisional registry when there is not the time for the international transfer of documentation.

Some other reasons that make the Bahamas an attractive choice for registration include the fact that Bahamian laws do not encroach on a ship owner's style of operating his business. They do not impose minimum wage standards and nationality rules for officers and ratings serving on board foreign ships. They do not impose profits or other taxes apart from the registration and annual fees, or legislate the recognition of trade unions on foreign owned ships. The economy of the Bahamas is based primarily on tourism, banking and insurance. The emphasis is on the service industry. Here again, Mr. President, they do not have anything that we cannot boast that we have as well, or better.

On the same page 'The Bermuda Register - State of Growth. Bermuda's Shipping Register was, in mid September, nearing the 900,000 gross ton mark with three new additions over the past two months. The local registry dipped to 450,000 tons in 1982, but it has subsequently been rebuilt.'

So, Mr. President, in all of this I cannot find where the Government got its evidence in the past that ship's registration was on the decline and that it was a waste of time.

In that same magazine under the News Brief section is the caption 'Bermudan Rise'. This is a very interesting piece of information because it states that '...the addition of five new ships boosted the Bermudan Shipping Registry to over 1.6 million gross tons as of September. A 1,613,601 gross tonnage registration ship. The register is now at its highest level since 1980.' And this is the interesting part, Sir, '...in another move affecting a Caribbean registry, a Norwegian owner, Leigh Hougal, transferred three bulk-container vessels to the Caymanian flag. The three 1,660 container bulk carriers were previously under the Norwegian flag and the move has been made as part of a financial reorganization.

This is what I was talking about when I said that the danger in this Bill, as I see it, is that we might frighten people like this away who can bring good, legitimate ships to our ship registry. We should not take the approach of simply giving the Registrar authority to remove ships, but should instead bring to the House a comprehensive Bill clearly defining the areas and reasons why and where the Registrar may remove a ship from the registry. By doing this, as I said earlier, we will be closing the gate before the horse gets out. We should set the standards in the legislation at a level whereby we would not get the ships that are causing an embarrassment to the Cayman Islands and whereby, as this Bill purports to do, we may be remove those ships from the register. I believe our objective should be to keep them off the registry in the first place, and this Bill does not do that, Sir.

Now, Mr. President, the only article other than that already mentioned on the Norwegian ships that were transferred to the Cayman Islands in the Caribbean Shipping Magazine of May 1985 about shipping in the Caribbean, the only article in this about the Cayman Islands is entitled "Cayman Islands - Fastest Growing Financial Community". So we have all the things, as I have said, that the Bermudans and the Bahamians might brag about, or offer as a service to other ships. Further proof, Sir, that ship registration and the shipping business is not on the decline as I have been told is also found in this nautical magazine of August 1985. "Ellerman's Registering Ships in the Isle of Man":

"Ellerman Lines are registering six ships in the Isle of Man.

Hong Kong Shipping Registry.

Hong Kong has established an independent Shipping Registry, but is endeavouring to ensure it will not become another flag of convenience. Owners of ships in the Registry will be limited to companies incorporated in Hong Kong, or persons with the right to live there. More than 1,500 ships, totally 55 million tons gross are owned by Hong Kong Companies."

I have not found any evidence of any great decline which would make any effort that we might make to establish a proper ship registry in the Cayman Islands, worthless.

Now Mr. President, I read in the Compass a few days ago, where the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council said that he would be leading a delegation to London, and he would get it for the Cayman Islands. Correction Sir, he says that he did not say he was leading it. Anyway the Member referred to a delegation, whether he was going to be part ... and I know he likes to be leader, Sir, that is why I assumed he was going to be leading it. Anyway he is going to be a part of a delegation which is going to London to get us this ship registry. And I think he said in that that he was going to get for the Cayman Islands a better arrangement than the Isle of Man has. I hope so, Sir, because what the Isle of Man has is pretty good, and I would be quite satisfied, and I think the people of this country would be if that delegation comes back with a ship registry for the Cayman Islands that is better than that of the Isle of Man.

In this magazine again it says:

"Good Progress - The Shipping Register.

When the Manx Government's acceptance of the SOLAS Convention comes into force on July 1st, the Isle of Man will have a fully independent shipping register. This will be administered by the Island's Harbour Board, which has already the professional staff for surveys, engaged and working on ships which have already been submitted for registration. We are having a steady stream of enquiries which is what we want, as this means our surveyors are not overloaded. Throughout the negotiations for setting up the Registry, we have worked closely with the British Government and the Register is being set up with their approval, said Board Secretary Mr. Harold Moore. It has always been stressed that the Register will not be used as another flag of convenience, and is backed up by a modern code of maritime law which will be strictly enforced. Ship owners will benefit from Manx taxation levels, although they will have to have an operating office on the Island, as Manx registered ships are for taxation purposes Manx territory crews will also benefit when sailing Manx registered ships."

So the only thing that I see that could be added to this which would make it better than the Isle of Man would be what I have always advocated, in that, ships registering here should carry a Caymanian crew where possible, and where available. And if he can come back with it in addition to that which the Isle of Man has, in that ships registered in the Cayman Islands will give qualified Caymanians first right of refusal for crewing the ship, I believe that he will have done something for the out-of-work seamen in the Cayman Islands today.

Now, I believe that enough evidence is here to show that ship registration can be beneficial to the country, and that it can be established fairly easily, and with the help of the international associations and authorities it can be administered fairly easily.

So, Mr. President, that is why I feel that this Bill should not be before the Assembly. This Bill should be withheld, and we should draft comprehensive legislation which can be brought to this Assembly to be enacted into law. As I said earlier, I support the right for the Registrar to remove ships from the registry of the Cayman Islands which are an embarrassment to us, which do not have the proper safety equipment, whether there are Caymanian seamen or other nationals on board. But the approach that I would prefer to see is that we do that by establishing the criteria for registration at a much higher level, and not by removing them after they have gotten themselves into trouble.

This Bill, Sir, really only protects the Registrar, it cannot remove ships that are owned by Caymanian companies, and that gives me some cause for concern, because you can have boats that break laws or whatever, and are owned by Caymanians or Caymanian companies. I will leave the determination of this to the experts, but I believe that there is a ship which sails into our harbour at least once a week that is contravening load lines rule. She has a triangle on her side, not a circle with a line through it. And I believe that if it were investigated further, who knows, maybe the tonnage at which the ship is registered in the Cayman Islands is at the lower of the two tonnages which it allows, and Government might be deprived of some revenue. But I am not an expert on shipping or on the legal maritime law, but I believe it is food for thought for the Government. They can all go down to the dock next week and watch for the ship to come in, and see whether she is contravening the load lines or not. And they can get somebody to tell them what the difference is between a triangle painted on the ship's side and a circle with a line through it.

But, Mr. President, my concern with this piece of legislation is that we may, in fact, get more adverse publicity because of the unlimited powers given to the Registrar to remove ships. If this Bill clearly defined and was very specific as to what reasons ships could be removed from the registry, I would be more inclined to support it. But I still feel Sir, that the approach that I could support much more would be to draft the proper comprehensive legislation and bring it to this Legislature. I think the evidence as put forward this morning by the mover of the Bill clearly says that most of the experts agree that it could be done, and he even indicated that there was cooperation offered from the British, which is the first time I have heard of it, but I am glad to hear it. I would be much happier supporting a Bill for comprehensive legislation for the Cayman Islands, because we have lived with this problem for many years, and I do not believe it that should take us another six years to draft the legislation, or to know whether we are going to get England to agree to extend the various conventions to us or not, and I think we should determine that before we pass such legislation. If they can be extended to us, then we should draft the comprehensive legislation and clean up our act in that way.

I cannot support this Bill, because I do not agree with the way it is trying to achieve its objective, and I think the country would be better served to enact comprehensive ship registration.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:
George Town.

The Second Elected Member for

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, in my usual objective manner, I would take this opportunity to thank the former speaker, the Member for North Side, for what, I think, was a very level headed contribution on this Bill. I think, Sir, that I could have stood here and said I fully endorsed what he has said, and then sit down, because he has expressed the sentiments of what I wish to say.

I would, however, congratulate the mover of this Bill, the Honourable First Official Member, for the strong support he has given to the Bill, even though I feel that in its present form it is woefully inadequate, and from the Committee Stage Amendment to this Bill which he has subsequently circulated to Members, I believe my view in this respect is fully justified.

I feel that this Bill should be withdrawn, and that further study should be given to this matter, when it is possible after having received as much input as possible, that this matter is treated in a very comprehensive manner, and resubmitted to the House.

I personally have received offers from some of the big shipping magnates from Greece and other areas, and I believe that the Greeks are some of the leaders in shipping, and that they would be more than happy at their own expense, to assist any Committee here in deliberations leading to comprehensive legislation for shipping in the Cayman Islands.

Mr. President, this Bill is totally different from that which is being circulated in the amendment. This alone highlights the rush and the ad hoc, piecemeal manner in which this Bill has been prepared. This Bill in its present form, is a Bill for a law to confer certain powers on the Governor in Council, in respect of the registry relating to ships. Yet, Mr. President, in the first amendment to this Bill it is found that even the heading was unnecessary, because the amendment in clause 3 is substituting "the Registrar may" for "Governor may direct the Registrar to". So it points out that sufficient thought was not given in preparing what is considered a most important piece of legislation. I am not here to decry the Member for bringing this, because I believe that he did it with all good intentions. But regardless of the good intention, and the emotional situation behind these intentions, I feel that the interests of the Cayman Islands are paramount, and as the Member for North Side has said, if we have lived with the situation for so many years, and if we are going to correct it, it should indeed be done in a proper manner.

From what I see in the original Bill before us, it severely restricts the powers of the Registrar of ships, and increases the power of the Governor under the Law. Now we have an amendment which changes all of it. What I am suggesting, Mr. President, is that it is somewhat confusing not only to Members but also to members of the public when we have a situation like this occurring. And it would not hurt the Government bench, or indeed this country, if more time was given to further looking into this matter. The Member himself has mentioned that a delegation will be going to England. Now I wonder how much study and deliberation has been given to this matter, to prepare these Members for what would have to be meaningful discussions in England, for us to get the type of registry we need in the Cayman Islands.

In my view, Mr. President, the Bill in its present form would seem to be, excluding the proposed amendments, a retrograde step in the smooth and sensible development of the Cayman Islands. Shipping registration for the Cayman Islands can indeed be a boom to our economy, but handling legislation in this manner is not right. It is not in the best interests of the Cayman Islands. I cannot see the need for this big rush. The Honourable Member alluded to the success of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, which I do not plan to debate, but I would remind the Member that we are yet to see any tangible form of success of this Bill. I contend that with or without the Treaty, we would still be experiencing the same upsurge in our economy because it is as a result of a worldwide upsurge in the economy, and the world knows that when other countries catch a cold, we are already sneezing in the Cayman Islands. So it is nothing that we have done which has produced the upsurge in our economy which we are now experiencing. As a matter of fact, the Treaty has not yet been ratified by the United States Congress.

I feel Sir, that rather than reducing the functions of the ships registry, it would seem to me that a wiser course to take at this time would be to appoint a committee to fully study the advantages and disadvantages of a Ships Registry, rather than trying to form a Bill here to present to the House, taking it to a bunch of lawyers and other people, and then having them say "no you went wrong in this clause, let us amend it so it can be better presented to the House". This is not right, Mr. President, we need to be spending more serious time and thought on matters of this magnitude. We certainly need much more comprehensive legislation, and I would have thought that Government would have been wise to have waited until they return, or at least until they have had time to sit down and discuss this with people who are professionals in the field. It would be of interest to see who will comprise the committee that will go to England to discuss shipping registration with experts in England.

The Member alluded to several people who had visited the Cayman Islands in 1983, a Mr. Collin Vaux, a Mr. White, a Mr. Young in 1979 and of course, Mr. Dusec, or Duec whatever the pronunciation of his name is, in 1983. But, Mr. President, even though Finance Committee may have sat with Mr. Duec, it would appear to me from the minutes which I have read that his advice was completely ignored. In 1983, Mr. Duec of the United Kingdom Department of Transport Marine Section visited the Cayman Islands and discussed the future of the Cayman Islands registry of shipping. It would be most helpful to me and perhaps other Members of this House if his report was made available to us, so that we could satisfy ourselves of the advantages and disadvantages of expanding or reducing the functions of the Registry of Shipping.

Mr. President, if we are going to bring experts to the Cayman Islands, we need to pay due regard to the reports they make. It is no use if a bunch of people get together with no particular expertise on the subject, decide that they are going to ignore the recommendations, or in effect ignoring the recommendations that are made by experts. It is a waste of money and time to bring these people if we are going to do this. Mr. Duec had informed the Cayman Islands Government that the United Kingdom wished the Cayman Islands to make a decision whether or not to adopt a registry for all types of ships, all ships under 500 tons, or ships over 500 tons, and this would be subject to the maintenance or setting up of a Marine Administration Division for the Cayman Islands.

A proposal whereby a central computerized registry would be established for shipping in the United Kingdom for the United Kingdom and the Dependent Territories met with some opposition, that is, in the United Kingdom. But we were told that further study was being given to this. And I am sure, Mr. President, that had our Government pursued this matter, we would not now be trying to push what is in my opinion an ad hoc piecemeal Bill which will just touch the fringes of the problems before us. As far as I am aware, the Cayman Islands is still awaiting information from Mr. Duec which would allow a decision on what type of register should be operated here. Perhaps the mover of the Bill will advise whether such information has yet been received, and if so, whether that report can be made available to Members of this Honourable House. Perhaps, as has happened in the past because of lack of communication to Members, my views may have been overcome by events. Mr. President I hope that this is not the case because such an important report should have been made available to Members of this House.

As far back as September 1983, Mr. Duec informed our Government that the United Kingdom was anxious that all Shipping Registry under the British flag have the same safety standards, and conform to the same conventions. It was noted at the time that our Registry of Shipping lacked many of the criteria stipulated. However, sufficient time has to date elapsed to enable us to correct whatever weaknesses we may have had in that respect.

We have been told that in order to operate a full registry, similar to that of the United Kingdom and the Isle of Man, we would be expected to adopt all United Kingdom regulations for safety and control of shipping in the Cayman Islands. Also that the cost to operate a full registry would be substantial. However, against this, Mr. President the overhead cost must also be considered against the possible revenue that would be derived by the Cayman Islands. Also, of similar consideration, are the employment opportunities which would be open to people living in the Cayman Islands, and indeed to all residents of the Cayman Islands. This would include some of the top people in the marine industry in the world today that we find right here in the Cayman Islands, but because these people cannot find jobs available, they are still forced to go and sail on American ships wherever this is possible. This is becoming more and more of a problem for our seamen, to even find jobs on American ships these days.

I do not feel that anyone should attempt to ignore or discount the inherent obligations involved in the development of a full, or even a limited registry in the Cayman Islands. And this is why on one hand I welcome the idea of a delegation going to England. But my concern is that the delegation going to England should be better briefed before going there, and expecting to come back with a registry that is superior to that of the Isle of Man. And I hope Mr. President, that the mover of the Bill will assure us that he has all the ammunition necessary for this trip.

During Mr. Duec's meetings in the Cayman Islands, Government officials cited a number of cases in the operation of our registry that needed improvement. The mover of the Bill also today gave us a list of some of the problems we have had with our shipping in the Cayman Islands. But, the points highlighted by the Member, or the mover of this Bill really only highlight the need for us to establish a very good standard; the need for us to ensure that we have comprehensive legislation; the need for us to spend more time in studying this matter. It is not a simple matter, Mr. President, it is a serious matter. And I trust that the member will not take this lightly, which I am sure he will not, and that this Bill will be withdrawn at the end of the day.

I believe even Bermuda had a problem with their registry. Their registry was almost closed down on account of the number of refugees, I think they were Vietnamese, picked up at sea. So in my support of expanding our registry, or at least looking into the pros and cons of doing so, I am mindful of the problems which other countries have experienced, and indeed some of the problems that we in the Cayman Islands have experienced in this respect.

Mr. President, it is my understanding that Bermuda and some of our other competitors are considering expanding their Shipping Registries. And while I am not suggesting that we need necessarily follow these countries in all that they do, I nonetheless feel that it might be in our best interests to further examine the full feasibility and viability of expanding our own registry, rather than trying to restrict it in any way. If we are to restrict our registry Mr. President, then let it be after we have given the matter a lot of serious thought, and after we have attempted to bring comprehensive legislation, governing a Registry for the Cayman Islands.

It would seem, Sir, that by restricting our Registry at this time that we are pushing good business away, we are discouraging good business that could be coming to the Cayman Islands. This type of legislation that we have here could have the effect of running people, good people who we would normally want to register in the Cayman Islands. But Mr. President, if there was comprehensive legislation on this matter, there would be very little ground for misunderstanding or ambiguity.

Mr. President, we have been told that our new Governor will be coming from Hong Kong, and in view of the experience that places like Hong Kong have had with ship registration, perhaps we should be asking him if he could also assist us in giving some advice, or ensuring that we get some expertise in this matter. He would at least have ideas as to the channels through which we could request relevant information from that country. As I have said, this should not be very difficult, especially in view of the position which he held in that country.

Quite frankly we have to take the decision to improve and expand our Registry or to discontinue it. This is why it is a very important decision, and we cannot stand here even though we might be fully convinced that what we are doing is correct. This is no reason why other Members of the House should feel that they have to support it at this present time. I am supportive of comprehensive legislation; I am supportive of doing whatever is needed to establish a proper registry for the Cayman Islands. But Mr. President, what we have before us now is woefully inadequate for that purpose. My position is to examine the feasibility of expanding our own Ships Registry along the lines suggested by Mr. Duec, and other experts that we have had here. Accordingly, I could not, in my best judgement, and this is with due respect to the mover, a gentleman for whom I have a lot of respect - I cannot at this time support the Bill before the House in its present form. We would be doing an injustice, not only to the Ships Registry or the development of the Registry, but we would be doing an injustice to the smooth and efficient development of the economy of the Cayman Islands.

Mr. President, I cannot support the Bill before the House in its present form.

Thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Fourth Elected Member.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, this seems to be a convenient time to take the luncheon adjournment Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, I was just establishing first whether any other Member wished to speak during the debate.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Yes, I....

MR. PRESIDENT: You do wish to? I was not sure whether you were getting up simply to suggest that we took the break, or to ask to speak. If you would prefer that we took the break before you started speaking, that is quite acceptable I think.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Yes.

MR. PRESIDENT: Very well. In that case I will suspend proceedings until approximately 2:15 p.m.

AT 12:37 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:20 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated.
Resumption of the Second Reading Debate on the Merchant Shipping Registry Bill. The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, I rise to support the Bill for a Law to confer certain powers on the Governor in Council, in respect of the Registry relating to ships.

This Bill, in my view, is a very simple one, it is a provision to strengthen the Cayman Ships Registry. It is really not a Bill to establish an international port of registry in the Cayman Islands, because that is a completely different exercise, and the mover of the Bill explained this morning that that move will follow the end of this meeting of the Legislative Assembly.

There has been quite a lot said about the Bill, and a lot said of the reason why it should not be introduced at this particular time. Mr. President this is not a Bill to convert what Cayman was always termed in the past "a flag of convenience registry", but the time is coming when we want to establish a registry on a better standard. And as I said a while ago, that exercise will follow.

Our ship registration in the Cayman Islands is controlled by the United Kingdom. It is controlled under the British Merchant Shipping Act, and so whatever facility we establish in these islands, whatever additional standard we want to apply, or whatever additional provisions we want to introduce, they have to be with the consent of the British Government, and I am sure that that fact was clearly made by the Honourable Member moving the Bill. And so Mr. President, whatever we wish to achieve in ship registration, whether it is the simple amendment of this Bill which is going forward, or to establish a Ship Registry of acceptable standard, we must depend on the British Government to provide it, we can only request it.

This Government has for many years in the past made brave attempts at improving the Cayman registry. A strong attempt was made at this between the years 1977 and the present time. The British Government was consulted on many occasions about allowing the Cayman Islands to establish a proper Ship Registry of acceptable standard, and the purpose for this was that especially in years gone by, the economy of this country was very meagre, and it was the hope of Legislators that the British Government would see fit to allow the Cayman Islands to establish an acceptable port of registry which could be a supplementation to the income of this country, by providing another facet of the economy. But Mr. President, this has been a very difficult task, the British Government in examining our case said that the Safety Conventions, Load Line Convention, Crewing of Ship Convention and all the other conventions had to be given serious consideration. They said that because of their association with the European Economic Community that in establishing a new port of registry within the Commonwealth, and especially in Dependent Territories, that they would also have to bear in mind the views and comments of their associates from the EEC countries.

The Government did not rest on this, it continued to probe and investigate the possibility of improving its Ship Registry. It even sent its Registrar of Shipping for an attachment to the Board of Trade in London at one time, in order that he might become qualified to administer a Ships Registry of a more acceptable standard. The Government did all that was possible at that time to put the proposal forward, and for acceptance by the British Government.

In 1979/1980 because of our insistence, the British Government sent an advisor here to examine our case. The advisor was dealing with the Isle of Man at the time, and thought it was a useful exercise for the Cayman Islands to be included. The advisor prepared and structured the draft legislation which would establish in these Islands the ship registration we were hoping to achieve. I think that draft legislation still lies on the table somewhere in the Board of Trade, no move was made to implement it.

As time went on, and I am speaking of the days of the early 80's, ships within the Commonwealth faced quite a lot of problems. Someone mentioned this morning the case of the Bermudan registered ship which picked up a load of South Vietnamese refugees and carried them into an English port, hoping that the British Government would relieve the ship of these refugees, since refugees are considered an international problem to countries. But, Mr. President, the British Government would not. The British Government said that your ship is Bermudan registered and therefore you should take your refugees to Bermuda. Fortunately enough, the Canadian Government relieved that ship of those refugees.

There were other cases similar to that afterwards, and by these incidents the Cayman Government was seeing more and more every day, that ship registration was not altogether a simple exercise, or a simple operation. What crowned it was the exodus of Cubans to Florida. I think it was in early 1980, the case of the Mariel boatlift, when a large number of Cubans were taken into the United States. One of those boats in the exercise was a Cayman-registered boat, and the question was asked at that time, what if the United States Government refused to allow any of those ships to land those refugees in Florida? And the answer was that those ships would have to take the refugees to the country of registration. If that ship had been refused landing in Florida, Mr. President, we would have had a lot of Cuban prisoners and sick people to contend with. What we would do with them would have been another matter.

And so at that stage the question of ship registration became almost something of the past, forgotten. And it is only in recent times that the matter has become alive again, and simply because in the years that the matter was placed in some abeyance, the Isle of Man was able to achieve what it set out to do some time ago, and that is to introduce themselves to the system of ship registration. I understand according to the mover and other reports that came to this Government, that the Isle of Man is doing well today, that the British Government supports that ship registry, and in fact it is probably one of the fastest growing registries in the world today. Well, my view is that if the British Government could relax its attitude towards the Isle of Man, although the Isle of Man is very near to Britain and can be considered part of the British Isles, then it goes without saying, that we should make our attempt again to see whether the Cayman Islands cannot be considered as an acceptable port of registry.

Mr. President, the Bill before us is quite simple, it is a very short Bill, and it says in plain language what is being requested. One of the provisions, section 3, provides for the refusal to register a ship. I dare say that any system or any institution which is being structured, and to be put on good solid grounds, must have some flexibility by law to control the growth and development of that registry.

In the case of banks registered in these Islands, if the law controlling banks and trust companies was not geared to control the type of banks that we admit into these Islands, I dare say that we would not today be able to boast of our banking system in these Islands, and that goes for many other things. The control which is being introduced in this Bill in the registration of ships here is no less than that which is provided in the Banks and Trust Companies Regulation Law. But I heard Members who spoke here this morning talk about the type of registry which we should be building in these Islands, something that we can be proud of. Well Mr. President, if we have ships on our Registry, or we have an application here to register a ship which is Cuban, which is Communist, which is trading in drugs, which is involved in criminal activities and we have no authority under the law to say "no we cannot register you", or if we find them there, to remove them from the registry, I mean what kind of registry are you talking about now? We might as well not have one.

We have heard cries recently, all crocodile tears, but nevertheless, of Communist ships on our registry. Well if that became a fact, Mr. President, and we have denied that, but if this was a fact and a reality, would it not be good if the Government had a lever within its laws, to remove those ships from the registry?

A lot was said here about comprehensive legislation. Well, I am not too sure what was meant by comprehensive legislation, but let me say that any legislation that is to be introduced to establish a proper Ship Registry in these Islands must also carry these provisions, otherwise you might as well not structure a ship registry here. And in any case Mr. President, any amendment of this nature must have the blessing of the British Government, and I am sure that the honourable mover of the Bill will tell you that too. It cannot come into operation, in fact, I think he said so this morning. It cannot come into operation until it has been given approval in Council in the United Kingdom.

We, the Government, believe that these amendments will vastly improve the ship registration system of these Islands, and we have no hesitation in supporting this Bill that is being presented here, Mr. President. I, for one, have no problem in supporting it. I think it is a good Bill.

I know that we will have opposition to everything that is introduced here, some of it pure politics. But I am not going to get myself involved in politics at this stage. Other things that were said here this morning too about the economy and so on, I will leave that for another time, when I start my election campaign!

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, I support this Bill. Thank you, Sir.

Mr. President, I support this

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I rise to oppose the Bill in its present form.

I have always been of the opinion that a proper ships registry can work, and can make money for this country. I have always been of the opinion that we could make enough money to cut down any further need for taxation on our people.

Mr. President, it is noteworthy that the Member for North Side has always advocated and has insisted that a full ships registry could work, and the facts and the statistics which he produced in this House today bears him out, as does the information which the mover unveiled today, going back as far as 1976. I agree with the Member for North Side that the problem seems to be that the mover had the administrative ability, and the recommendations to set up a Registry, but not the political support. The Member for North Side has certainly done his homework, as we always do when we feel strongly about a subject which could benefit our people. He has done his homework, and I must say I agree with him, I cannot support the Bill because I am most concerned that we can run away good business, and only remove the bad ships after they have already done the damage. It is in a sense what I have been saying about drugs, we are catching some users, but we are not stopping them from using the drugs. In this case we will take off the bad ships which get caught, and that is because the Bill does not spell out the criteria to ensure that only good ships get on the register, which a proper ship registry would do. So we are not in fact cleaning up our act. All these many years we have been used, as far as I am concerned, by the British registry as a flag of convenience.

I am glad to hear that some Members of Council will be going to London to discuss this ship registration business, and I trust that the Mother Country will look favourably on us as they have done with other colonies, and give us a proper ship registry. I agree with the Member for North Side's objective for the delegation, that is that the ship must carry a Caymanian crew where they are available. I hope when this is set up that this will be a stipulation.

Mr. President, the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council gave us a long history on boat lifts and refugees, but I think he bore out what we have been saying. He said that even though we could not refuse to register any ships, in the case of the example he gave, we would have had to pay the consequences, by taking the Mariel boat refugees. So this only confirms what we have said all along. We need a proper Ship Registry which sets the criteria, I emphasized the refusal. I trust that the delegation will be successful in its objectives, but the Bill before us cannot help us, I do not think. I am not convinced anyway, and I am not going to support it at this time.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, as the debate goes on, it becomes more and more increasingly difficult for anyone to support this Bill. This Bill is a clear example of the present Government's inability to put forward a cohesive policy, to put forward a Bill in which they truly believe, and to put forward anything that is not subject to the whims and fancies of special interest groups.

The history of this Bill has been outlined by the mover. He mentioned that a Bill on shipping registration had been brought to this House some time ago, it had gone through the First Reading. There had been strong representation from the private sector, and so the Bill had to be buried. I would not want to say smuggled out of this Assembly - but was quietly and stealthily withdrawn by a simple withdrawal motion.

Among the papers for this meeting we received a Bill entitled 'a Bill for a Law to confer certain powers on the Governor in Council, in respect of the registry relating to ships'. No sooner had this Bill become public, that the special interest groups again got hold of the Executive Council, and compelled them to change it. We received an amendment which has substantially changed the Bill with which we are dealing. Later on I will compare the Bill which is on the agenda with the amendment which almost entirely supersedes it.

The history of shipping has been a long one in this country. Caymanians have been associated with the sea for as far back as history records. The motto "He Hath Founded It Upon The Seas" had been well thought out, and it was only natural that it should become a part of our Coat of Arms. It seems to be the wish of all people that these Islands could develop into a port for the registration of ships. Attempts have been made in the past, but so far we have really not seen a good registry emerge. However what we have seen is that Government's revenue from ships has increased substantially over the last ten years.

If we go back ten years we will find that the income from ships registration was very small indeed. But in recent times the income is of some significance. In 1985 we collected $127,504 from ships registration. One year later this figure had doubled. The revised figure for 1986 was $250,000 from ships registration, and this was perhaps a significant increase. In our estimates for 1987 we have projected that the Government will receive in revenue from ships registration the sum of $300,000. So, the revenue has been moving up, and I dare to say if there had not been a public outcry, the Executive Council would have had the Government's coffers full with the income from the Russian ships, because they had collected from a few, and we hear stories of lots of money that would have been flown in from the Russian ships, and I do not know if this new amendment has anything to do with the Russian ships, but the story of that will never be told.

The Bill which we had received sought to empower the Governor to direct the Registrar to refuse to register any ship, that was clause 3 of the Bill. For whatever purpose unknown to us, as it has not been explained by the mover, the amendment which has been given to us makes a substantial change in that they have passed the buck from themselves to the Registrar. And they say that the Registrar will not register a ship now if he is satisfied that:

"(a) every share in the ship is owned by a company formed and registered under the Companies Law or by an existing company as defined in subsection (1) of section 2 of that Law."

Although clause 4 still gives the Governor in Council the authority to remove any ship which is on the register. So there has been a substantial change brought about by the amendment to the Bill, which is to amend the Law. In the original Bill it read:

"Notwithstanding the provisions of Part 1 of the Act relating to the registration of ships, the Governor may direct the Registrar to refuse to register any ship in respect of which an application for registration has been received."

And that has been changed to read by the amendment that:

"Notwithstanding the provisions of Part 1 of the Act relating to the registration of ships, the Registrar may refuse to register any ship in respect of which an application for registration has been received unless he is satisfied" with certain things.

So, while the Bill which came to us was unlimited in its right of refusal, the amended version has now limited the refusal, and limited it in two ways. Under section 3 the Registrar has to be satisfied that:

"(a) every share in the ship is owned by a company formed and registered under the Companies Law or by an existing company as defined in subsection (1) of section 2 of that Law; and

(b) having regard to the safety of the ship and to the safety, health and welfare or otherwise of the persons employed or engaged in any capacity on board the ship, it is not detrimental to the interests of the Island or of international merchant shipping for the ship to be registered at the port of George Town."

These restrictions are put on to the transfer of the registry in clause 6, so that where the original Bill said that the transfer would not be granted except with the approval of the Governor, there seems to be some limitation. And

I believe the Government does not know what it wants to do with this Bill, because the Member gave us many incidents where ships had been found with dope, and all these different offences committed by the ships. But the amendments which they are making here are not going to stop this. As the Member for North Side pointed out, these amendments will simply deal with the matter after the act has been committed, and after we have become embarrassed by the exposure. If we look at the matter of the transfer, the Registrar has to be satisfied that the ship is owned by a company formed and registered under our Companies Law, but does that really help us? The fact that the ship is owned and registered does not help us, if the beneficial owners are drug dealers, or the Mafia.

In clause 3 we have the same thing, where it had said that the "Governor may direct the Registrar". It now reads "the Registrar may". But whether the direction comes from Executive Council, or whether the Registrar acts in his discretion, does not in any way, help the problems which we have. I believe that what the Member for North Side was trying to get across, or my impression of it was that we need to spell out in great detail what ships we will register. We have to have our own criteria as to what we will accept and then go on to set out how we will deal with these ships, if they are to be later removed from the registry. So, while we make these pure cosmetic changes with who will take the blame and who will carry out the dirty work, it does not in essence change the type of registry, it does not change the substance of the Bill, it only shifts the onus from Executive Council to the Registrar. So neither does the change in clause 3 change from Governor in Council to the Registrar, nor the change in section 6 dealing with the transfer, neither one of these changes really substantially makes the Bill any better.

This Bill is a stopgap motion of the worst kind I have ever seen, because it does not plug the leak, and it does not do what the two Honourable Members of Government who have spoken so far claim that it will do. It may do what the other two Members will say, because we know there will be a difference of opinion, since there is no longer any respect for collective responsibility.

Governments in the past have failed to establish a proper Ships Registry. But what the present Government is doing today is to destroy forever the chance of any future Government or even the present Government establishing a registry. They are out to wreck the registration of ships. If this Bill is passed, it is bound to have a bad effect on shipping. I know to be registered by a company, the company may have to be registered here ... but I do not see any outside investor putting his ships on our registry. And I do not see any individual unless he is a local person who has nowhere to go, if this Bill passes.

The Member had the courage some time ago to withdraw the other Bill dealing with shipping. And I must say it was done without any calls from the Members of the Legislative Assembly. Here today, several Members who spoke before me, have made the call for the withdrawal of this Bill. And I trust, being the good man that he is, he will make the application to withdraw this Bill when he comes to wind up.

We know that despite the occasional nod from the British Government, that they are against these Islands developing a Ships Registry, they are afraid of us. They are afraid that if we do so, we will hurt the Isle of Man. They are afraid that if we do so, we will hurt their own registry in the United Kingdom. They are afraid that the special little godchild Bermuda will also be hurt. So they do not want us to develop a Ships Registry, and they make it seem that it is an insurmountable task.

I can recall a long time ago when the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council was the Financial Secretary, that at one Finance Committee, we actually approved monies to pay technical people if the Ships Registry had become a reality. Substantial sums were approved, I did not look them up, but if one cares to research it, one will find that the Finance Committee actually voted funds to pay for some of the technical people we would have needed had we gone ahead with the Ships Registry.

We were told of the difficulties of extending the Safety of Life at Sea Convention to Cayman. A difficulty which did not arise with the Isle of Man, with Hong Kong nor Bermuda. We were told of the difficulties to be encountered if they extended the load line certificates to us. And all the while all the United Kingdom was saying was that they did not want us to have a registry, but they were too polite to tell us so. They even used the UNCTAD Convention. The report from the United Nations Committee on Trade and Development was given as an excuse at one time for not going through with the registry, and the irony of that was that the UNCTAD Report was aimed at Great Britain. The United Nations Committee which was spurred on by developed countries like France and some of the other Common Market countries, were trying to get rid of the British registry, or at least have a share of it for themselves, and this is why they worked out the formula which would be adopted, that a ship should not be registered in any country unless the ship had a direct economic link with the country. And by a direct economic link, they meant that the ship must be owned by the nationals of the country, or the ship must be used in trade to and from that country. In other words, they were trying to fix it so that the United Kingdom itself could not register any foreign ships which did not have economic links with Britain, and Britain was smart enough to do unto us what they were having done unto them by telling us that we would have to await the outcome of the UNCTAD Agreement.

So, stumbling blocks have been put in the way, and if we adopt this Bill today the British Government will smile from ear to ear because I believe we will close forever the chapter on Ships Registration in these Islands. So, while as I believe two of the Government Members have already said, there have been in the past, a few positive indications from the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, I believe the Member for North Side was right when he surmises that the delegation going to London will not have an easy task. They are not eagerly awaiting our arrival for negotiations on this matter.

One Member saw this Bill as an improvement on shipping. But I am glad for his own sake that he did not elaborate on that statement, because we would have had to laugh. This is no improvement, this is the destruction of shipping.

Another Member said that this Bill would strengthen our shipping register - no such thing, it will destroy our registry.

This morning we passed a Bill to squeeze a little bit more travel tax out of the tourists who are coming here. If we can develop it, we have a gold mine in shipping. The last research I did on this matter, I found that countries such as Panama and other countries are deriving large incomes, one of them as much as $25 million a year from the registration of ships. And while it may be difficult for us to get the British Government to allow us to set up a Ships Registry, and to extend to us the sections of the Merchant Shipping Act which are necessary, to extend to us the SOLAS Convention, and to allow us to issue all the proper inspection certificates and loadline certificates, we must not give up because despite the fact that not very much has been achieved in the past, we are still in the game, and as long as we are in the game there is a chance of winning. So, we must not close it today, and although three Members of Executive Council have already spoken on this Bill, we are coming up close to coffee time, and perhaps instead of drinking coffee, they could have a meeting in which they could knock their heads together and come back in and withdraw this Bill.

Now Mr. President, I will turn to the Bill and its amendments, and will try to deal with it.

MR. PRESIDENT: If the Member is continuing for some further period, perhaps it would be convenient now if we broke. I thought you were nearing the end of your speech, but I see I am mistaken.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: No Sir, I am barely starting.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, let me give you a pause for breath. I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 3:27 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:44 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated.
Resumption of the Second Reading Debate on the Registry of Shipping Bill. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, the amendment to the Bill before us has let Executive Council, like Pilate, wash its hands of the Bill, in that, in clause 3 Executive Council will not refuse to register ships. I do not know if the Russian ships have anything to do with it, but the onus will now be on the Registrar. Also in clause 6 of the Bill which will become clause 5 because of the amendment, the onus will be on the Registrar to decide, and not on the Governor as originally planned. Also clause 5 of the original Bill has been deleted, and here again this takes Executive Council from having any responsibility for gazetting prescribed classes of ships.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Mr. President, thank you.

I rise in support of a Bill for a Law to confer certain powers on the Governor in Council, in respect of the registry relating to ships.

Mr. President, the mover of the Bill has very ably put forward his case behind the purpose of this Bill being brought to the House. In the process of doing so, he has pointed out the many instances wherein ships registered in the Cayman Islands have for one reason or another been seized in foreign ports. Although I have no intention of speaking at length on this particular Bill, I would like each of us to ask ourselves whether we can sit back and see our Islands used as a port of registry for ships, ships that are nothing but deathtraps, junk and tools of criminal activities.

I see this Bill as appropriate, timely and I feel that Members of this House should do all that is possible to assist in its early passage. Not only was the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty meant to clean up our act, and clear our good name, but I see this Bill, and I feel that it must be seen in this light, to be yet another step in ensuring that we maintain an unblemished reputation which we have to guard carefully.

I feel that it is of paramount importance that we be seen in the eyes of the international investor and indeed in the eyes of the entire international community, as being a country whose business dealings in all aspects can withstand any scrutiny whatsoever. This Bill in my view, Mr. President, is yet another major step being taken to ensure that these Islands stand on a firm financial footing, and in order to do that we must maintain a clean reputation.

In looking over this Bill and in listening to previous speakers, some of the points raised have not come to my attention at all. One of those points which I would like to make mention of here is that the Registrar of Shipping does have the ability, the capacity to refuse to register a ship. I see no place here in this Bill where there is anything to prevent him from registering a ship once he is satisfied that it is not the type of ship which should be registered in these Islands. It goes on to state the reasons why he may refuse such registration. Not only can he register it and then remove it, it clearly states here that he can refuse to register it in the first instance.

Then it goes on to say that if, having registered the ship, he finds that (1) the safety of the ship is in question, or (2) the safety, health and welfare of the persons employed, or engaged in any capacity on the ship, is jeopardized, or even if there is a possibility, and I would like to stress that word "possibility, he does not even have to get concrete evidence that the ship is used in drugs - but if there is any indication whatsoever, he, in his discretion may refuse, or terminate the registration of such ship. In addition, the Governor may at any time, once he is satisfied that registration of this ship would be detrimental to the Islands, or even to international merchant shipping, this registration can be terminated or refused.

Mr. President, in supporting this, Bill I wish to state that it is my sincere hope that the delegation, whomever the delegation might consist of, in going to the United Kingdom, I feel that they will be going there suitably equipped, well briefed and with the tools which are necessary to return here with legislation for the registration of ships, which will not only be better than what we have now, but will probably be as good, if not better, than is available anywhere.

Mr. President, I support the Bill, I have no problems with it. I see it as another step in the right direction - what more can I say? Except that I think it is timely, it is necessary and I congratulate the mover of the Bill in his fine presentation, and I give it my wholehearted support.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member of Executive Council.

The Honourable First Elected

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I really did not intend to speak on this Bill. I thought the mover had done an excellent job in presenting it, and I know he will do an equally good job in summing up. But, since we have been all around the mulberry bush with this simple amendment, I thought I should voice my support, in case anyone should interpret my silence as not being fully in favour of the amendment.

I can understand why the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town would oppose this Bill, and would be upset at the fact that it appears that Government is on the verge of a breakthrough in getting an improved and extended ship registry.

From 1972 in the manifesto of ... I do not know if they call themselves Help then or Unity ... this is where they were going to get their money from to finance all the grandiose schemes they were promising, and up to this point they have not been able to do anything about it, or at least until they went out of office.

Now Mr. President, we have heard a lot about fighting drugs and so on, the other day, and the increase in drug-related crimes in the country. What was not highlighted in that debate, and I would like to highlight here, is that many of the crimes, particularly the drug crimes, were in fact committed not by Caymanians, but by foreign nationals, particularly coming in on ships or vessels.

In the Caymanian Compass of Tuesday, 10th February, there was a headline - 'Caymanian Registered yacht seized in Florida'. And if anyone has taken the time to read that article, they will have seen that there was a definite connection between that boat and the one which the local police apprehended and seized, also loaded with ganja.

Without the provisions which we are seeking to put into this Law, there would be no way of removing that ship from the register, except by sale, which I am sure will take place once the United States Government has put it up for auction. I understand that they make sure that no boat is sold to persons of character that would use it again for the drug trade.

Mr. President, regardless of what has been said about the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, it has polished up the image of the Cayman Islands in the international arena. The Financial Secretary in his winding up debate on the Throne Speech certainly gave statistics to show that it has had a positive effect on our financial industry.

One Member said that if the amendment which the mover of the Bill has given notice of, passes through the Committee Stage, it would make nonsense of the Bill. But Mr. President, I would like to draw your attention and that of the Member and other Members of the House to Standing Order 52(11), and when one checks that Standing Order it will be seen that the mover was quite right in not attempting to move an amendment to the title of the law, because it will show that suborder (11) of Order 52 says:

"If any amendment to the title of a bill is made necessary by an amendment to that bill, it shall be made at the conclusion of the proceedings detailed above, etcetera."

and it is obvious that it would have been a waste of time to even serve notice of that, unless the amendments of which he had given notice, were successfully carried through the House, and our Standing Orders make provision for changing the title, if and when the amendment is carried.

As I have said earlier, Mr. President, the Unity Team or Help or whatever they called themselves in those days, laid great store in 1972 to increasing the Ship Registry to finance their grandiose schemes. But I accept that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town is a good student, he is a good debater, and I know that if his colleagues had suggested a means of improving the Ship Registry in Cayman, he would have been able to remember and say what steps they had taken to correct, or to improve the situation which existed. The true position is that, that government was at sea when it came to ship registration.

We heard during the last Session about Russian ships being registered in the Cayman Islands, Mr. President that is a total impossibility. Now a ship which has been built in Russia, or any other country can be registered on our register, but, only and not unless it has been purchased by a British citizen, or a British company, including a company registered in the Cayman Islands. A British ship must be owned by a British entity.

The other thing that I would like to make clear, Mr. President, is that the Caymanian Ship Registry as we call it, and I think it is important that we understand that the Caymanian legislation to which we are referring in this Bill is called the Merchant Shipping Registry Law, 1987. The law which governs that law is the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, with amendments, of the United Kingdom. The point I am making is that our Registry could be termed basically a sub-registry of the United Kingdom. The final resting place for all registration of ships done in the Cayman Islands is at Cardiff in the United Kingdom. So, that a ship registered in the Cayman Islands is to all intents and purposes a British ship.

This brings me then to the argument which one speaker put forward, as to why the United Kingdom was not anxious for the Cayman Islands to increase its Ship Registry, was because they did not want to deplete the British Ship Registry. But they have access in time of war to any ship registered here, unless in the negotiations which go on, provision is made, that is, the negotiation is about to take place and arrangements are made to circumvent that procedure. And why I mentioned the circumvention of it, Mr. President, is because one Member mentioned the Bahamas, and read an article which said that American ships were registered in the Bahamas.

Now Mr. President, it is possible to register an American ship in the Cayman Islands under one condition only, and that is the system known as 'double registration'. Now, we do not yet have that facility, but that is one of the facilities which we hope to get in our negotiations with the British Government. In other words, it is possible to have a ship owned and registered in the United States, time-chartered to a Caymanian registered company, and it is possible with proper amendments to the Shipping Registry to have that ship placed on the Caymanian Registry for the duration of that time charter. That is the only way an American ship can be registered in any colony of any metropolitan country. In the case of the Bahamas, they are an independent country and of course, they have no use for ships in case of war. If it were a lobster boat they could probably make use of it. So they have boldly stated in their legislation as I understand it, that American ships, or any ship, or an American ship registered in the Bahamas would revert to American ownership in the event of America going to war.

So I want to make it abundantly clear, and for the benefit of the Member who had some concern, that the team going to the United Kingdom would be properly briefed. I can give that Member the assurance that the team will be properly briefed, we will know what we are going about, and we will not have to turn back from New York, and come home and say that we did not go because we were not properly briefed. We will know the purpose of our mission, and we will know what we want to accomplish.

The amendment, in my opinion, is a necessary one, and quite acceptable. I mentioned the drug yacht seized in Florida, and registered in Cayman. There was a time when it would have been simple enough to try to eliminate the registration of yachts, believing that we would eliminate the drug carriers. But as has been demonstrated by the mover, by quoting the size of the ships which have been involved recently in the narcotics trade, it is obvious that you could not attempt to control the ship by saying that you are not going to register a ship of a certain size. Only last week the United States Coast Guard, I understand, brought two twenty foot containers into this port which it had salvaged from a boat, which I understood sank. I am not sure that it did not have some assistance in sinking. Nevertheless, it showed that it could not have been a little pleasure yacht that those twenty foot containers were on.

So, the Bill gives the Registrar the power to refuse to register ships that are not owned by companies in the Cayman Islands, and also if the boat is in poor condition and is a risk to those who sail it, and others who sail the oceans. The same provision applies to the power to refuse transfer, and of course, similarly, to remove the ship.

Now Mr. President, we are going to the United Kingdom to say to them that we want to increase the amount of shipping on our Registry, we do not want a flag of convenience Registry, we want a proper Registry and one of the highest standard in all respects. And I would pose the question as to what better evidence and proof could we submit to the United Kingdom that we mean what we say, than by passing this legislation today. This is positive proof that we are not seeking to register drug trafficking boats or rust buckets, junk, that our ships will be of the highest standard, both in quality and in terms of the ownership. If for no other reason, Mr. President, this Bill in its present form as amended, should commend itself to Members of this House, and they should support it. As the mover and other speakers have said, and I have highlighted this by pointing out that we are talking here about amending the Cayman Merchant Shipping Registry Law, but which is in fact, controlled by the Merchant Shipping Act, 1894, of the United Kingdom, and it will be impossible for us to sit down and draft comprehensive legislation until we know what the United Kingdom is prepared to countenance in such a law, hence our mission to the United Kingdom.

We are not going to put any money into the Budget to pay for salaries for experts until we know what experts we have to hire. Neither are we prepared to draft legislation until we have sat around the table and negotiated with the United Kingdom. I believe that this is the way to go. We are showing the United Kingdom and the world that we do not intend to run a convenience registry, and while I do not like to mention other sovereign countries in my debates in this House in a derogatory fashion, I would hasten to say that the ships under Panamanian Registry are not our objective. There are too many good ships from good registries waiting to transfer to the Cayman Islands when and if we can establish a reputable register. I submit that the route we are going will be telling the world that we want a reputable register, and I have no fear, Mr. President, that with the undertaking of this Government, that this is the purpose of this Bill. No ships presently on our register will run. Why would they run Mr. President? If they were a couple of drug yachts that were registered in the past, happy riddance to bad rubbish. But I am satisfied that any reputable ship on our register and their owners, will be glad to see that at last in the Cayman Islands, they understand what is meant by a reputable register, and that we are prepared to go for it.

I thank you Mr. President, and I support this Bill one hundred per cent.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? Does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Yes Mr. President.

As I listen to the debate, Mr. President, the majority of what I have heard seems to point in this direction, that because the government did not bring forward comprehensive legislation to this House, some Members cannot support the Bill presently before us.

One Member, if not others, even went on to say that this Bill is the destruction of the shipping register, perhaps Mr. President, just like the narcotics agreement was with the destruction of this country. But what do they mean by comprehensive legislation on shipping? The only thing that I can imagine is that back in 1979 when I was the acting Financial Secretary, we had a man whom I referred to in moving the bill, a Mr. Young, who told us - and we were looking at the SOLAS Convention in those days too - who told us that we needed to draft 15 different laws plus two orders. Maybe that is what is intended when they talk about comprehensive legislation. But any legislation that we are successful in passing also needs the United Kingdom's blessing, because as indicated by an earlier speaker, it forms part of the British Merchant Shipping Act of 1894. I went far enough to understand what will happen, Mr. President. And just for their benefit, let me read for them what this Order in Council will say:

"MERCHANT SHIPPING

CONFIRMATION OF LEGISLATION, CAYMAN ISLANDS ORDER, 1987.

Made..... 1987
Laid before Parliament..... 1987 coming into force.....day..... 1987

At the Court at Buckingham Palace, this....day.....1987.

Present

The Queen's Most Excellent Majesty in Council

Her Majesty in pursuance of section 735 subsection 1 of the Merchant Shipping Act of 1894(a) is pleased by, and with the advice of Her Privy Council, to order, and it is hereby ordered, as follows:-

This Order may be cited as the Merchant Shipping Confirmation of Legislation Cayman Islands Order, 1987 and come into force on.....day.....1987.

The Law enacted by the Legislature of the Cayman Islands which may be cited as the Merchant Shipping Registry Law, 1987 is hereby confirmed."

That is the process, Mr. President. And certainly, we cannot draft comprehensive legislation without talking to the British Government. But on one hand they say one thing and on the other they say the other. It sounds like an economist, on the one hand he has one thing and on the other he does not have it. Maybe we need a few here!

Mr. President, one could get the impression that what some of the Members are saying is do nothing, leave it as it is. You could form that opinion rightly or wrongly, you could form it. My attitude on Government's is quite different, let us do something about it. Let us put forward, even if they call it an ad hoc Bill, I call it the first bite of the cherry, if we can use that term. We know that comprehensive legislation has to come, and we believe that we will be in a better position to put it forward after the discussions take place with the United Kingdom Government, which we referred to in moving the Bill, and to which the Honourable First Elected Member of Council also referred.

But just to give some more information, Mr. President, clause 3 which deals with the refusal to register a ship is almost identical to the wording of the Isle of Man legislation. If that is the case, how is it going to frighten anybody away? And let me tell them why we made this Committee Stage amendment Mr. President. It was our intention from the very beginning, even when we recommended this Bill to Council, that before we came to the House, I would meet with Members of the private sector to take their input. And whatever their input was, assuming that it was reasonable as it usually is, a Committee Stage amendment would be made, and that is the reason for the Committee Stage amendment. We thought it was more practical to say that the refusal to register should be carried out by the registrar of companies, otherwise a person wanting to register a ship might have to wait for a week, if the Governor in Council is going to deal with it.

One member said it was "passing the buck". It is not passing the buck, Mr. President, to the Registrar. The Registrar has been dealing with the registration of ships ever since he has been in office, and he knows what is required by the British Registrar of Ships, in the Department of Transport, Marine Section. There is no need to pass any buck, just give him the duty which he has always been doing, but give him the legislation which he can use when he believes he should not register a ship, and he has nothing to fall back on, and he gets pressed by lawyers and owners of ships. One Member asked "how is this Bill going to help you if the ship is owned by a drug trafficker or the Mafia?" He should have read clause 4 a little bit better. It says that the Governor in Council can direct the Registrar to remove the ship from the register.

I know that what I have in front of me here, this Bill, the only thing it will do to the Cayman Islands is to make it look a bit more respectable in the eyes of everyone, and if I can accomplish it with this ad hoc piece of legislation, Mr. President, I will go home and sleep well tonight. Thank you very much.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that a Bill for a Law to confer certain powers on the Governor in Council in respect to the Registry relating to ships be given a Second Reading.

GIVEN A SECOND READING.

MR. PRESIDENT: I declare the motion carried. I make it about twenty eight minutes past four, and subject to the views of the House, I would think it is probably sensible to adjourn, rather than to embark for about two minutes on a new piece of business. I do not know, I am afraid I have not sounded Members about this. Really there is only one more Second Reading, and there is one Motion to debate, which we might be able to complete tomorrow. I do not know whether Members would wish to sit late tomorrow if necessary to complete them, or whether they would prefer to spill over to Wednesday if necessary, but maybe Members could confer amongst themselves a little. It is simply that I know it is very inconvenient and hard on Members if they are not forewarned if the House is going to sit at late, and I am not suggesting that it should. I am giving Members an opportunity to consider the matter themselves.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I would say the motion for tomorrow, the Constitutional Motion will probably require a full scale debate and may take a couple of days.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well it may indeed, perhaps we had better see how things develop, it could develop into quite a long debate, I quite understand.

BILLS

THE COMMUNITY COLLEGE OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS
BILL, 1987

FIRST READING

CLERK: THE COMMUNITY COLLEGE OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS BILL, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to establish the Community College of the Cayman Islands, and for all purposes connected therewith and incidental thereto is deemed to have been read a First Time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE COMMUNITY COLLEGE OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS BILL, 1987.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Mr. President, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill shortly entitled the Community College of the Cayman Islands Law, 1987.

The Memorandum of Objects and Reasons of this Bill states:

"This Bill seeks to establish an educational institution to be known as the Community College of the Cayman Islands and to make provision for the control and administration thereof."

Mr. President, there has been in existence in the Cayman Islands since 1975 an educational institution known as the Community College. At its inception, the Community College was undertaken under the direction of the Department of Education. It used the facilities of the Cayman Islands High School, and its teachers were drawn from amongst the teachers of the Cayman Islands High School's staff in the main. It was started mainly as an adult educational facility, aimed at those adults who, for one reason or another, had missed out on their CSE, GCE 'O' Levels and 'A' Levels, or even for those persons who desired to gain additional subjects in those areas, or improve the grades which they may have already attained in those examinations. Classes such as typing and shorthand were also offered, to enable those adults already in employment to improve their skills or to achieve skills not already possessed. It was designed as a pilot project to establish the acceptance or otherwise of the concept of adult education in the Cayman Islands, and it was the intention to expand it into a technical and vocational as well as an academic institution.

From the outset, Mr. President, the numbers attending the College made it abundantly clear that acceptance by the population was guaranteed. In 1977 or 1978, for reasons best known to the Government of the day, instead of expanding the Community College as originally envisaged, additional institutions of adult education such as the Navigation School, the Hotel Training School and the Building and Trade School were established under the aegis of the Portfolio of Tourism, Aviation and Trade. From as early as December 1983, a consultation was carried out on the question of the provision of adult education in the Islands, including vocational and technical subjects, as an independent institution to incorporate the programmes being carried out by the Community College and those vocational/technical subjects under the aegis of the Portfolio of Tourism, Aviation and Trade. As far as can be determined, no action was taken on those recommendations.

Upon the change of Government in November 1984, the vocational and technical subjects formerly carried out under the Portfolio of Tourism, Aviation and Trade were transferred to the Portfolio of Health, Education and Social Services. And all of these fragmented efforts were incorporated under the aegis of the Community College, with a Director in charge.

In 1985/86 steps were taken with the assistance of an Advisor made available to us under the auspices of the Commonwealth Fund for Technical Cooperation, to establish the Community College of the Cayman Islands as a separate and autonomous institution of post-secondary, technical and vocational education.

The Bill now before this Honourable House seeks to establish such an institution.

Clause 3 of the Bill deals with the establishment of the body corporate called the Community College of the Cayman Islands.

Subsection (2) of section 3 states that the government, management and control of the College shall be vested in the Board of Governors of the College.

Subsection (3) of section 3 deals with the composition and appointment of the Board of Governors. It reads:

"The Board shall consist of the Principal, who shall be a member ex-officio, and the following other members to be appointed by the Governor:" (meaning the Governor in Council)

- "(a) the Financial Secretary or his nominee;
- (b) a representative of the Member" (meaning the Member for Health, Education and Social Services).
- "(c) four members selected from lists to be obtained from bodies representing financial, industrial, commercial or other institutions and from professional organizations;
- (d) if the Governor considers it desirable, not more than two members, called honorary members, from outside the Islands who have in the opinion of the Governor appropriate academic qualifications or experience (such two members not being entitled to a vote at meetings of the Board); and
- (e) two other members, all such members mentioned in paragraphs (a) to (e) inclusive to be appointed for three years subject to section (14)" (which deals with how a member other than a Government Member may resign from the Board).

"A member shall be eligible for re-appointment. The Governor shall fill any vacancy which arose in the Board."

Other sections of this section, that is, section 3, deal with other aspects of appointment to the Board, and the Board's functions. For example, subsection (4) states that:

"The validity of any proceedings of the Board shall not be affected by any vacancy amongst the members or by any defect in the appointment of a member."

Subsection (5) says:

"The Governor shall appoint one of the members listed in paragraph (c) or (e) of subsection (3) to be the chairman of the Board, and another to be deputy chairman."

That means, Mr. President, that the Chairman and Deputy Chairman of the Board of Governors will come from the four members selected from the bodies which I mentioned earlier, or the two other members mentioned in (e).

Subsection (6) gives the Governor power to:

"... appoint a person to be a temporary member, to act for a member whom he is satisfied is incapacitated by reason of illness, absence from the Islands or other sufficient cause from performing the duties of his office, during such incapacity. A temporary member appointed under this subsection shall, while he acts as such, be deemed for all purposes to be a member of the Board."

Mr. President, I do not think it is necessary to read the other subsections. They deal specifically with the functioning of the Board.

Section 4 of the Bill deals with the functions of the College, and are standard provisions in similar institutions.

Section 5 of the Bill deals with the remuneration of members of the Board:

"The College shall pay to each member, in respect of his office as such, such, if any, remuneration and allowances as the Governor may determine and to the chairman, in respect of his office as such, such, if any, remuneration and allowances (in addition to any remuneration or allowances to which he may be entitled in respect of his office as a member) as may be so determined."

In other words, Mr. President, this clause is standard, for example, as members of the Planning Board, the Protection Board or any other Board functioning under other similar laws within Government.

Section 6 provides for the granting of loans by Government for the start up of the College, and reads:

"The Government may, with the approval of the Standing Finance Committee of the Legislative Assembly, lend the College such sum as the Financial Secretary may certify is required to enable the College to commence its functions, to be repaid by the College at such times and by such methods as the Financial Secretary may, with the approval of the said Standing Finance Committee, determine."

Section 7 of the Bill deals with the requirement for the Board to balance the revenue and expenditure of the College in connection with the management and its operations, and states:

"It shall be the duty of the Board to exercise and perform its functions so as to ensure that, taking one year with another, its revenues are sufficient to meet all sums properly chargeable to the College, including, without prejudice to the generality of that expression, provisions in respect of any general directions under section 15."

Mr. President, Section 15 enables "the Member, after consultation with the Board, to give general directions as to the policy to be followed by the Board concerning the function of the College". But it specifically excludes directions in respect of "the appointment, termination of appointment, promotion or discipline of members of the staff, and the admission, evaluation, discipline, academic promotion, certification or award of particular students". The one exception, Mr. President, is that the appointment and dismissal of the Principal shall not be made by the Board before consultation with the member.

Section 8 makes provision for public officers to be seconded to the service of the College, and determines the general terms and conditions under which such secondments may take place. The Governor, in the exercise of his own deliberate judgement and subject to such conditions as he may impose, may approve the secondment of any public officer for service with the College."

Subsection (2) of 8 states:

"Any public officer seconded under subsection (1) shall, in relation to salary, pension, gratuity and the like and to other rights and to discipline, be treated as if he was not so seconded."

Members, Mr. President, will have received a Committee Stage Amendment circulated by myself for this clause which will make it abundantly clear that where the Governor is used in this section of the Law, it is the Governor and not the Governor in Executive Council. And the subsection dealing with public officers seconded, makes it abundantly clear that no civil servant shall be at a disadvantage in respect of his salary and pension, and all the other rights, when he is serving at the Community College.

Section 9 is a standard clause which waives liability of members of the Board in respect of acts carried out in the functions of their duty in good faith.

Section 10 of the Bill deals with loans, grants and guarantees which may be made to the College from time to time, and states:

- "(1) The Government may make loans and grants to the College out of such sums and on such conditions as may be approved by the Legislative Assembly.
- (2) With the approval of the Legislative Assembly, the Financial Secretary may guarantee, in such manner and on such conditions as he may think fit, the payment of the principal and of interest on any authorized borrowings of the College made otherwise than by way of loan under subsection (1).
- (3) Where the Financial Secretary is satisfied that there has been default in the repayment of any principal moneys or interest guaranteed under the provisions of this section, he shall, with the prior approval of the Standing Finance Committee of the Legislative Assembly, direct the repayment out of the revenue of the Islands of the amount in respect of which there has been such default."

Section 11 deals with the accounting procedures adopted and followed by the Board of the College, and makes provision for the tabling of the audited accounts and report thereon in the Legislative Assembly.

I do not propose to go into that matter in detail, Mr. President, other than to say that this section conforms to the finance and audit provisions of Government which I understand are in legal form, and which Bill will come into operation sometime at the beginning of March.

Section 12 makes provision for the establishment and management of a reserve fund of the College, and I should read this in detail, Sir, for the benefit of Members, and I am taking pains to read certain sections of the Bill which I consider important because although the Bill has been circulated to Members for a long time, it was not gazetted until the 18th or 19th February. So maybe the public has not been made fully conversant with the provisions.

I imagine it will be a long time, except through the generosity of some benefactor, before the College has a reserve fund, but nevertheless we are making provision for it. And section 12 which deals with this states:

- "(1) The College shall maintain a reserve fund to meet future anticipated liabilities and commitments in respect of its obligations under this Law.
- (2) The management of the reserve fund, the sums to be carried from time to time on the credit thereof, and the application thereof, shall be as the Board may determine:

Provided that -

- (a) no part of the reserve fund shall be applied otherwise than for the functions of the College; and
- (b) the power of the Member to give general directions to the Board shall extend to the giving of directions as to any matter relating to the establishment or management of the reserve fund, the carrying of funds on the credit thereof, or the application thereof, notwithstanding that the directions may be of a specific character."

Section 13 of the Bill deals with the powers of the Board, and I think I will read this Mr. President:

- "(1) The Board shall have the following powers -

- (a) subject to any direction under section 15" (and that is the section I quoted a while ago, where the Member responsible for Education has limited power to give directions to the Board) "to control and exercise general supervision of the affairs, functions, purposes, policy and property of the College;
- (b) to admit and provide for the welfare, academic progress and discipline of students;
- (c) subject to the provisions of subsection (1) of section 16, to appoint such academic, administrative and other staff as appears to the Board to be necessary, on such terms and conditions (including salary, allowances and other remuneration, promotion and discipline) as the Board may determine."

Again, Mr. President, the exception there referred to in 16 is where the Board must refer to the Member in relation to the Principal of the College only.

Continuing with the powers of the Board, Mr. President. They have power to:

- "(d) to determine courses of study and admission standards;
- (e) to conduct examinations and make rules for maintaining academic integrity;
- (f) to award diplomas, certificates, and other academic distinctions;
- (g) to award and administer bursaries and scholarships tenable at the College or elsewhere;
- (h) to receive on behalf of the College, donations, grants or other moneys;
- (i) to make rules for the remuneration of staff and other members of the College;
- (j) to create or abolish such departments or academic programmes within the College as the Board may consider necessary or expedient;
- (k) to enter into agreements or arrangements on behalf of the College with other institutions of further or higher education for the provision of instruction, or the granting of degrees, diplomas, certificates and other distinctions; and
- (l) to make rules for furthering the work and interests of the College.

(2) Subject to the approval of the Member, the Board shall have the power to -

- (a) acquire and dispose of real property;
- (b) fix fees; and
- (c) determine the annual budget for the College."

Section 14 requires that the Board shall submit to the Member an annual Report on the work of the College.

Mr. President, this Report is in addition to the Report which must accompany the audited accounts of the College, and in fact it is the principle management tool which the Member will have at his disposal.

I have mentioned section 15 already, Mr. President, where the Member has limited powers to give directions to the Board, of a general nature.

Section 16 deals with the appointment and functions of the Principal of the College, and it reads:

- "(1) There shall be a Principal of the College who shall be appointed by the Board with the prior approval of the Member.
- (2) The Principal shall be the head of the College and shall have the following functions -

- (a) to supervise the academic work of the College;
- (b) to supervise and direct the academic, administrative and other staff of the College;
- (c) to present to the Board an annual Report on the work of the College; and
- (d) to perform such other duties as may be assigned or delegated by the Board.

(3) Disciplinary action may not be taken against the Principal by the Board except with the prior approval of the Member.

(4) In the temporary absence of the Principal, and in the absence or in the case of non-appointment of a Deputy Principal, the Board shall appoint a senior member of the academic staff of the College to act as Principal:

Provided that such an acting appointment shall not exceed six months without the prior approval of the Member."

Section 17, Mr. President, deals with the appointment and duties of the Deputy Principal:

"The Board may appoint a Deputy Principal who shall act for the Principal in his absence, and who shall have such other duties as may be assigned by the Board or by the Principal."

Section 18 deals with the vesting of Government property presently existing, or existing in the future in the College, and I will read that section Mr. President:

"(1) Subject to the approval of the Governor, there is vested in the College all such equipment and other goods the property of the Government used for the purposes of or in connection with post-secondary or adult education prior or up to the date of commencement of this Law, which shall be recorded in an inventory prepared at the direction of the Financial Secretary and approved by the Board and entered as assets in the accounts of the College.

(2) Subject to the approval of the Governor, all land with the buildings and works thereon and all equipment and other goods, the property of the Government, which at any time after the commencement of this Law may be considered necessary by the Board for carrying out the functions of the College shall vest in the College."

This provision Mr. President, is found in the Bill, to enable Government in the event that it finds that it has buildings and land suitable for the College's use as opposed to building new buildings, or buying additional land, to enable the Government to transfer that land or buildings, or both into the name of the College.

Section 19 of the Law deals with the appointment and responsibilities of an Administrative and Academic Committee of the College which it is permitted to appoint, and subsection (1) says:

"There shall be an Administrative and Academic Committee of the College, established in accordance with the provisions of the Schedule to this Law.

(2) The Administrative and Academic Committee shall have responsibility for considering, approving, or submitting for approval by the Board (as required), recommendations on all matters pertaining to the functioning of the College, including -

- (a) curriculum policy, development and implementation;
- (b) appointment, promotion and discipline of staff;
- (c) admission and discipline of students;

- (d) examinations and certification;
- (e) award of bursaries and scholarships;
- (f) planning, budgeting and other financial matters;
and
- (g) such other matters as may be referred to it by the Board or by the Principal."

Section 20 of the Law, Mr. President, is another standard clause which gives the Governor in Council power to make regulations in respect of the better carrying out of the functions of this Bill, the Board and College, and I will read it. Section 20 says:

"The Governor, on the recommendation of the Board, may make regulations for the better carrying out of its duties and powers under this Law, and may (without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing words) by such regulations provided for all or any of the following purposes -

- (a) the safety or well-being of persons and the care of property connected with the undertakings of the College;
- (b) the regulation of commercial transactions (including trading) in or upon any premises the property of the College; and
- (c) any other matter which may appear to the Governor to be necessary or expedient for the purposes of giving due effect to the provisions of this Law."

The Schedule to the Law which is the constitution and procedure of the Administrative and Academic Committees, established under Section 19(1) of the Bill, reads:

1. The Administrative and Academic Committee shall comprise the following -
 - (a) the Principal as Chairman;
 - (b) the Deputy Principal;
 - (c) two members of the Board, as determined by the Board;
 - (d) the Heads of Departments;
 - (e) the Co-ordinator of Extension Services;
 - (f) the Faculty member elected by the Faculty; and
 - (g) a student representative elected by students, subject to the provisions of paragraph 2.
2. The Principal may require the student representative on the Committee to withdraw, when matters pertaining to examinations are to be considered.
3. The Committee may also include such senior members of the academic or administrative staff as the Board may decide.
4. The Committee may invite other members of the College or persons outside the College, to attend its meetings on an ad hoc or regular basis, for the purpose of giving advice to the Committee on matters within their competence, provided that such persons shall not have the right to vote in the proceedings of the Committee.
5. The powers of the Committee shall be not be affected by any vacancy in their number.
6. A quorum of the Committee shall be not less than one-half of the total number of its members.
7. The Principal shall assign a member of the administrative or academic staff of the College to be secretary of the Committee.
8. Subject to the provisions of this Schedule, the Committee shall have the power to make rules to regulate its own procedure and the conduct of its meetings."

Those, Mr. President, are the main provisions within this Law. I think I can safely say that this Bill has been the most widely discussed and commented upon document, by all relevant departments of Government ever to come before this House. It will be seen that the corporation will be allowed to function as autonomously as possible, with very little, if any, interference or direction from the Member or anyone else except the requirement that certain returns necessary to ensure that the Member, Government and this Legislative Assembly can account for and verify the proper functioning of the corporation in the areas where the Member, Government and this Legislature are responsible to the general public.

Mr. President I am confident that this Bill, when passed into Law, will become the model for all future statutory corporations formed by Government. It is a good Bill, and I unreservedly recommend its acceptance by Members of this Honourable Legislative Assembly.

I thank you Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill

The motion is open for debate.

support of the Bill before the House. The Member moving the Bill certainly gave us a full rundown, and some of the questions I had on the Bill have been answered satisfactorily. So I will speak briefly on a few areas.

Mr. President, I rise in support of the Bill before the House. The Member moving the Bill certainly gave us a full rundown, and some of the questions I had on the Bill have been answered satisfactorily. So I will speak briefly on a few areas.

Mr. President, no one can doubt that money spent on the development of the College is money spent in the best interests of the future of this country. The future of this country hinges on several things. However, of one thing we can be certain, absolutely certain, and it is that this country's future depends greatly, and I would stress "greatly", on the height to which it takes its educational level. More and more of our success depends upon the courses and programmes which the College should offer, and I am trusting, will offer.

More and more of our success depends upon the courses and programmes which the College should offer, and I am trusting, will offer.

The technical aspect we realize is seriously needed, and it is something that I have been pushing for ever since I got involved in public life. I know I sometimes get criticized for speaking passionately on subjects, and am told that I am not offering any solutions, and I have not made any suggestions, well, if you search the Hansards of the House, you will see that I have stressed quite often the need for the revamping, and I have posed questions in the House, concerning this College. This country is in need of plumbers, carpenters, refrigeration technicians electrical people and Mr. President, these are the kinds of courses I am trusting will be successful in the College. I will say with all humility and sincerity that we have to start encouraging our young children to consider taking the kind of courses which I mentioned. There is no disrespect in being a plumber or an electrician, these are services which this country needs.

I have stressed the need, as I have said, for these courses, in this House, and it is because I realize that we have to import, and depend to a great extent on outside help in these areas. There is much attention paid to the academic side of education in this country, and I will call our young people's attention to the opportunities, which also exist for technical and technological careers, and would hope that the old prejudiced idea that academic education is in every respect superior and more desirable, that that idea will soon fade away. I trust that our young people will seize all opportunities that are offered to qualify in technical subjects.

This Bill, Mr. President, is for setting up an educational institution and I am hoping one day to see this country in a position where we are able to train our own teachers, we are now training our own lawyers, and the next step is to train our own teachers. I believe it can be done and it must be done for the reasons I have stated before in this House, and there is no need for me to elaborate on today.

I believe it can be done and it must be done for the reasons I have stated before in this House, and there is no need for me to elaborate on today.

There is one area which I would question, and I know that there was a situation where a person attending the College some few years back, who went overseas for further training on the course he was taking, but was unable to obtain credit. I am trusting that section 13(1)(k) which says:

"to enter into agreements or arrangements on behalf of the College with other institutions of further or higher education for the provision of instruction, or the granting of degrees, diplomas, certificates and other distinctions;"

And I am trusting that this section and also section 4(1)(d) which also talks about the functions of the College, which says:

"to enter into association or affiliation with universities, colleges and other relevant institutions within or outside the Islands for the fulfillment of its functions."

So I am trusting that the area which I have just mentioned will be taken care of in those sections.

What I am talking about, Mr. President, is a person who might study at the College for one year, on a course, let us say in Economics, and my question is, would it be possible for that one year to be credited to his time if he went to the United States to attend a College, doing the same course of Economics?

Mr. President, while I am dealing with this Bill, I believe it is a good time for me to say that I think that the Government should state its position with regard to the International College of the Cayman Islands, whether it is recognized by Government, or not. But some official statement should be made as to Government's position on its functioning as a viable educational facility in this country.

There is one other observation, and I trust that it will be explained. In section 8(1) and (2) it says, talking about the secondment of public officers, that:

"(1) The Governor, in the exercise of his own deliberate judgment and subject to such conditions as he may impose, may approve the secondment of any public officer for service with the College.

(2) Any public officer seconded under subsection (1) shall, in relation to salary, pension, gratuity and the like and to other rights and to discipline, be treated as if he was not so seconded."

Now, Mr. President, when I put this section together with section 15, it says in talking about general directions:

"The Member, after consultation with the Board, may give such general directions as to the policy to be followed by the Board concerning the functioning of the College:

Provided that such directions shall not apply to -
(a) subject to subsection (1) of section 16, the appointment, termination of appointment, promotion or discipline of members of the staff?"

And, when you put those two together with section 16(1), (2) and (3), which deal with the Principal, it says:

"(1) There shall be a Principal of the College who shall be appointed by the Board with the prior approval of the Member."

Now, that is misleading to me because section 15 talks about the Member, after consultation with the Board may give such general directions as to the policy. And section 16 is talking about the appointment of the Principal. Section 16 subsection (2) says:

"The Principal shall be the head of the College and shall have the following functions -

- (a) to supervise the academic work of the College;
- (b) to supervise and direct the academic, administrative and other staff of the College;
- (c) to present to the Board an annual Report on the work of the College; and
- (d) to perform such other duties as may be assigned or delegated by the Board."

Now subsection (3) of 16 is the part which I need to have explained to me. Subsection (3) of 16 says:

"Disciplinary action may not be taken against the principal by the Board except with the prior approval of the Member."

That is, the Member for Education. The Bill does not say to what extent discipline is applied. And in relation to these sections, it is a bit confusing. Section 8 deals with the secondment of public officers, and we know that all public officers are hired by the Public Service Commission, and the Public Service Commission performs other disciplinary functions also. So as I have said, there is still not in my mind, a clear idea as to where the authority of the Member for Education and the Board ends, and where the Public Service Authority commences in respect of any disciplinary action with regard to the Principal. If I am reading it correctly, and the Member has some authority over disciplinary matters as to the Principal, who is on secondment from the Public Service, then there seems to be a serious anomaly in the Bill. The member would be opening himself to something which our system of Government does not allow. And as I have said, the Bill does not say to what extent disciplinary action is applied.

I am quite certain that whoever drew up the Public Service Regulations never at any time contemplated that a statutory body was going to be charged along with the political directorate with disciplinary control over any member of the civil service. Control over the service, as I understand it, is vested solely in the Public Service Commission which is essentially independent and not subject to anybody's control. These sections are, as far as I am concerned, stating dualities of system and I believe it to be a bad thing.

The amendment to the Law, tabled by the Member, substantiates what I am saying concerning the appointment of the Principal by the Board, in consultation with the Member, and any disciplinary action which might be taken against the Principal.

I have criticized other Bills, specifically one other Bill brought by the previous Government, with similar stipulations. And I cannot in good conscience condone such action by this Government, or any other Government that I probably would have some say in. I trust Mr. President, that this can be explained to me, and I am not told that I am an idiot because I am asking about it.

Section 11(6). Before I go to that Mr. President, I would say that I have been satisfied with the Public Service Commission, and that we have people of high integrity in that Public Service Commission, people whom I have respected all my life. I have not found anything yet where I can say I need to criticize them on, and if I did, you would have heard about it, and the country would have heard about it, because I would have said something on the floor of the House.

Section 11(6) deals with the accounts, bookkeeping and reporting, and subsection (6) specifically says:

"The report of the Board together with a copy of the certified statements and the Auditor General's report, if any, shall be laid by the Member on the table of the Legislative Assembly as soon as practicable after he receives it."

Well, Mr. President, this is something that I cannot agree with, because "as soon as practicable" could mean from here to eternity if somebody wanted it to be so. And I have often heard in this House, this thing about "due course". When I was in the gallery I never did agree with it, it is not good for the country. Something must be stated to say "when" and a period as soon as practicable is not satisfactory to me. I would prefer to change it to "next meeting".

The Bill, with these few exceptions which I have mentioned, is needed, and I support it.

Mr. President, as I have said, these are the things that are not clear to me, and I trust that you will not hear that I was babbling, or that I am an idiot, or some other derogatory remark, because I question certain things.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think perhaps this may be a convenient moment to take our customary morning break, and I will therefore suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 11:11 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:36 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Continuation of the Second Reading Debate on the Community College of the Cayman Islands Bill.

Does any Member wish to speak?

No Member wishes to speak, I shall invite the mover to exercise his right of reply if he wishes. Does the mover wish to exercise it?

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Mr. President, as the Financial Secretary did yesterday, I would like to thank the Member who spoke, and I would also like to thank those who did not speak!

I think the Member who spoke, raised some very interesting points, and it is probably because of the uniqueness of the situation which is why certain things did not fall into their logical sequence.

But, starting with the reference to his pride in the establishment of the College, I would just like to put on record, Mr. President, that he, along with myself had the establishment of a much needed college of post-secondary education for the improvement of the skills of our youth and adults as item 6 on the manifesto on which we ran in 1984. And of course the Third Member for West Bay as well. Probably that was one of the things that enabled us to have such a success at the polls.

I can assure the Member that technical subjects will be well covered within the College. I think there are two points which need elaborating on, and he quite rightly picked the right sections of the Bill. Section 4 which allows the College to enter into affiliation with academic institutions abroad, is designed for specifically the reason that he identified. That is, to enable the courses at the College to be given recognition by those institutions. In fact, it is not inconceivable that the College in its early days will be able to issue certificates, diplomas or even degrees maybe from other academic institutions. That is also why, Mr. President, the composition of the Board makes provision for at least two academics from outside the Islands, who are considered to have suitable qualifications to sit on the Board.

Already the college is working towards offering courses which have international recognition. For example, Members will have read in the paper where recently, the College, even in its present state before it is properly constituted under this Law, has entered into an arrangement with the Educational Institute of the American Hotel and Motel Association, so that in future students receiving a certificate from the college will have an endorsement by that institute, or a certificate will be issued by that institute itself.

We certainly will be striving for excellence in the College. And I believe that with the able assistance we have had from our consultant, and the interest and drive from the present Director, the college can look forward to a bright future.

As regards the past, with someone having studied there, and not being able to get accreditation from a United States College, maybe the individual did not apply to the right College, because while I would not expect the Ivy League Colleges in the United States to accept the subjects, or the time spent at the Community College, I know of other colleges which might have accepted it, even though we are still an unknown quantity. Because I am reminded of the Caymanian who made application to a college in the United States, and the application had on it High School attended, and he had not been to a High School, but he gave the name of a gentleman who used to barber under a grape-tree, and he said "Mr. So and So's High School", and he got that accepted.

On the question of accreditation Mr. President, that is the name of the game. The College has to strive to set examinations that have recognized standards. For example, in typing, shorthand and that type of thing, pupils sit the City and Guilds Examinations. The College has been and will be teaching subjects which lead to the qualification of the Institute of Bankers and so on.

The question that seems to have raised some concern is the question of discipline of the staff. I can best explain that I believe, Mr. President, if I say that in considering this matter, we have to start out with the premise, or the acceptance that the staff of the College will normally not be civil servants. And, if we start with that premise, we will see where the rest of it fits in.

For example, section 8 together with the Committee Stage Amendment which I have circulated, will make it clear that the secondment of public officers to the service of the college is the prerogative of His Excellency the Governor, and that those public officers will remain for all intents and purposes a civil servant, even though they are seconded to the College. It is not envisaged that persons will be seconded to the College as public servants for long periods. And certainly, if the person is doing a good job, and he enjoys his position at the College, he would be invited to make up his mind whether he wanted to join the College, or remain a civil servant, in which case, I am afraid, that might even mean the parting of the ways, or if he continued, well, he would not in some respects, have what I would term the academic freedom which other members of staff would enjoy.

By this I mean, this being a post-secondary College and under a Board, normally for example, a civil servant is prohibited from writing letters to the paper. We would find in an academic setting of the standard we hope this College will reach, that we might have for example, an economist on the staff, who might care to express himself on some matter of public importance, or probably even publish a thesis on something within the local newspaper that might become a bit controversial. But this is something that one expects to find in the atmosphere of institutions of learning such as this will be. And this is where the thin line would come between a public servant and a regular employee of the College. So, the provision is here to allow as much academic freedom as is possible. In fact, as I said in my closing statement at the opening, the Bill places on the College and its Board, only such restrictions as could not reasonably be left out when this Legislature and the Member will have to answer to the public for things such as the Budget and other sensitive things such as the fees charged, and so on.

On the question of the laying of the Auditor General's Report on the table of this House, Mr. President, I did not read this section in detail, and I will point out why the words "as soon as practicable after he receives it", is placed after "shall be laid by the Member on the Table of the Legislative Assembly". I believe that that gives the greatest flexibility to the speed with which the Member is required to lay the Report, and I would have no serious objection, or reservation if a time limit was placed here which was commensurate with the other timetable which is laid out in that section. But, to place a time limit there might delay the laying of the Report, or encourage the delaying of the Report rather than speeding it up. And maybe I could go through section 11 which deals with the accounts, the audit and the laying on the table, and then it would become more clear why this language was accepted.

Subsection (1) of 11 states:

- "(1) The Board shall keep such books and records of account and in such form and manner as the Financial Secretary may direct.
- (2) Within the period of four months after the 31st day of December of each year the Board shall prepare and submit to the Auditor General in respect of that year -
 - (a) a statement of assets and liabilities of the

- College as at the close of the year;
- (b) a statement of revenue and expenditure by the College during the year; and
 - (c) such other statements as may be specified by the Financial Secretary.

- (3) On receipt of the statements referred to in subsection (2), the Auditor General shall examine and audit the statements and shall certify the statements to such report, if any, which he may think fit.
- (4) the Auditor General shall, within a period of seven months after the close of the year to which they relate, return to the Board the certified statements together with his report, if any.
- (5) On receipt from the Auditor General of the certified statements and his report, if any, the Board shall prepare and submit to the Member and to the Financial Secretary a report of the Financial activities of the College during the year to which the certified statements relate, which report shall include a copy of the certified statements and of the Auditor General's report, if any.
- (6) The report of the Board together with a copy of the certified statements and the Auditor General's report, if any, shall be laid by the Member on the table of the Legislative Assembly as soon as practicable after he receives it."

So, Mr. President, why that phrase was used was because I could see that within seven months of the end of the year, the Auditor General would have sent his Report, and then the Board would submit their Report which is basically similar to a Government Minute, on the Auditor General's statement and report to the Financial Secretary and the Member, and that is what will be laid on the table as soon as is practicable after it is received. The idea being, that if we said "the next meeting", it would mean that if the Member received the Report the day before a meeting commenced, the Member would be obligated to lay the Report and what is equivalent of the Government Minute on the table without having had an opportunity to study the report in consultation with the Financial Secretary, in the event that there might be an irregularity or recommendations for improvement on it. If such was the case, where it had to be laid without the benefit of consultation and study, it would mean that Members would have the right, as they had with the Police Report which was laid during the course of this meeting, to get up and debate the Report, without the Member or the Financial Secretary having had the opportunity to consult, or even get explanations which they may need from the Board, to intelligently debate the Report once it is laid on the table. So this is why it says "as soon as practicable", because with the meetings being four a year, if we put "next meeting" or a specific time it could, as I have said, pose problems.

I can assure this House that I believe that this language is acceptable and workable, since the Report goes to the Financial Secretary and to the Member. The Financial Secretary would have consulted with the Assembly on certain matters, for example the start-up money, loans or whatever. So the Assembly is not in the dark on the operations of the College, and certainly would have the right to prod. And since timetables are laid down for the preparation of the accounts and for the Auditor General's Report, I do not think that the Member would be able to give the answer in due course. I think it is a naturally flowing process, and Members can be assured that this certainly, as I have said, meets the requirements of the audit and accounting procedures within Government.

Mr. President, I would like to thank all Members for their support, either verbally or by their silence, and I submit the Bill to the vote.

AGREED: THE COMMUNITY COLLEGE OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS BILL, 1987 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I declare the motion carried.
The House will now go into Committee to study a Bill entitled the Interpretation (Amendment) Bill and other Bills.

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Please be seated.

The first of the Bills referred to the Committee is a Bill for a Law to amend the Interpretation Law.

The House is now in Committee.

Committee is a Bill for a Law

But before I invite the Clerk to start taking action in respect of it, perhaps I could just check that it will be the wish of the Committee that in accordance with our usual practice, we invite the Honourable Second Official Member to make any necessary corrections of printing errors and the like, even though the attention of the Committee is not specifically drawn to them, and that he is therefore empowered to take action, and we are not obliged to take note of them as we go through the Bill.

There is one Bill to which we will come later where in the printed version, a whole clause has been missed out, and I think probably that should be mentioned specifically when the time comes. The clause was in the white copy of the Bill that was circulated to Members in advance, but it got missed out by the printer. So it is not that particular, rather major error that I think we should authorize the Honourable Second Official Member to deal with, but it is all the minor ones, and I am sure there must be a number.

So, may I take it that that is in accordance with the Committee's wishes? If nobody dissents I think I will assume that is so, and we can proceed.

THE INTERPRETATION (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

COMMITTEE THEREON

CLERK:

Clause 1. Short title.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The question is that the Short Title do stand part of the Bill. Unless any Member wishes to speak, I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

CLERK: Clause 2. Insertion of new section 51(A) in Chapter 70.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 2 do stand part of the Bill.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, as I mentioned in my debate on the Second Reading, I am against any Bill that even remotely smells of establishing retroactive legislation, and I object to clause 2 and will certainly vote against it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am sorry for that delay, I thought the Clerks had a point to make about this particular Bill, that I might need to bring to the notice of the Committee, but in fact it relates to another Bill, there was a misunderstanding.

Does any other Member wish to speak? In that case I will put the question. The question to remind the Committee, is that Clause 2 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED BY MAJORITY. CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

CLERK: A Bill for a Law to amend the Interpretation Law, Chapter 70.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that the title and enacting clause do stand part of the Bill. Unless any Member wishes to speak, I will put that question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED BY MAJORITY. TITLE AND ENACTING CLAUSE PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: The second Bill on the Order Paper is a Bill for a Law to amend the Elections Law.

THE ELECTIONS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

COMMITTEE THEREON

CLERK: Clause 1. Short title.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 1 do stand part of the Bill. Unless any Member wishes to speak, I will put that question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

CLERK: Clause 2. Amendment of section 2.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 2 do stand part of the Bill. Unless any Member wishes to speak I will put that question.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to see the Election Law remain as it was with regard to this clause. The Bill will change the Law to make the election agent be a voter in the district in which he is an election agent, and as it is not a requirement for the candidate to be a voter in the electoral district in which he stands, I can see no reason at all for it. The candidate I feel, has the responsibility for appointing a suitable agent. If he fails to do this, it is his hard luck, and I view this as a further restriction on the freedoms of the individual, where a registered voter, if he happens to live in another district, perhaps he may just have moved there, does not have the right any more to serve as an agent for a candidate that may desire his services. So, I am really against this, and will certainly vote against this clause.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does any other Member wish to speak?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Only to say Mr. Chairman, that I think that this provision, as I understand the Law, the election agent comes in as I have said during the debate, primarily at the despatch of postal ballots. It is not the agent whom you appoint on polling day, as such, or at the counting. And the fact that the candidate need not be from the electoral district in which he is running. The requirement only is that he be nominated by two voters in that district. It makes it all the more reasonable why the agent should be from the district in which the candidate is nominated. In my years in politics, I cannot remember one instance in which an agent actually attended at these despatches of postal ballots, and so on, and the revision of the list, it has always been the candidate. But it could be useful if the candidate happens to be from outside that district, to have someone from the district who knows the people who are claiming to be registered, or attempting to remove people from the register, or is attending the despatch of postal ballots.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, I think the Honourable Member who has just spoken has actually defeated clause 2 of this Bill, because it is a fact and it has been the practice that wherever possible, the candidate himself would be present at the issuing of the postal ballots, and would normally only use an agent if he, the candidate, could not be present. So, if the candidate is present, and need not be a registered voter, why should that requirement be put on an agent whom the candidate has appointed? And I thank the Honourable Member for supporting my argument.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. Chairman, I am afraid if the Member understood me to be supporting him, he is totally incorrect on that.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

I only know what you said, I do not know what you had in the recesses of your mind.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

I am sure he was having a good try, but perhaps it would be proper that I should remind the Committee that this Bill is not strictly a Government measure at all, it results from a Select Committee of the whole House which reported ... now I have not refreshed my memory, but I do not recall a minority report. I think it was a unanimous report by the whole House, and this Bill reflects faithfully the precise detail of what that Committee recommended.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

In which case, Mr. Chairman, may I humbly request that you release the Members of Executive Council from their collective responsibility, so that they may vote their consciences on this Bill. I think this has been done in election matters.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

I had always intended that they should vote according ... it is not a Government measure as such, and I do not think that an Elections Law should be a Government measure, I think it would be quite wrong. It ought to be something that reflects the wishes of the whole House, so that it can be seen to be impartial, and not something that is in favour of the Government of the day. I had not ever supposed that Members of the Executive Council would be bound by collective responsibility. But I had supposed that since this Bill reflected the recommendations of a Select Committee of the whole House, it was reasonable to assume that Members would support it. Anyway, may I put the question on clause 2?

CLERK: Clause 6. Amendment of section
18.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 6
do stand part of the Bill.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, as this clause seems to be in three parts, I wonder if you would put the question on the parts separately, because I am objecting to (b), the substitution of ten for three. That is the number of days for withdrawal when monies can be refunded for the deposit.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am just looking it up. I am not sure there is provision to do that. I think what you would have had to do, unless you can draw my attention to a provision that enables me to split up the question in the way you have suggested, I think what you would have had to do was move an amendment to the clause to strike out the part to which you disagree.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Well, Mr. Chairman, the (b) section to which I refer is very important, because it is reducing the person's right to his refund, by making it so that he must drop out ten clear days before, rather than three. It is very important because once ten clear days have gone by, if there are only nine clear days left before the elections, if the candidate became ill or had to leave for some other very important reason, he would lose his deposit, and the deposit is now a substantial sum of money, it is $1,000 and will probably increase as the years go by. Ten clear days, as I mentioned in my debate, is actually twelve days because you do not count the first day and you do not count the last day. So actually you are putting the candidate at a grave disadvantage, and if I have to vote against the whole clause to prevent this amendment from going through, I certainly will, but I think it is a matter that Members should reconsider, it has always worked well in the past, and today we have moved in to an age where everything can be done more quickly. I think we should leave the three clear days rather than change them to ten.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Does any other Member wish to speak?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I am not sure whether that is an amendment or a proposed amendment, or whether the Member is just making a comment on the clause.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

I took it he was making a comment. If the Committee were to agree, having looked at Standing Orders, it would, I suppose, be possible for me to put the question on subclause (a) of clause 6 and subclause (b) and subclause (c) separately, so that a vote could be recorded against one particular part. But I am concerned about doing that, that if we start to do that and what amount to amendments get made as a result. It may mean that the amendments make nonsense of the wording of the Bill, because they will not have been proposed as specific amendments. I really think it would be better if people do want to object to part, but not the whole of a particular clause, that they should move amendments that make clear exactly what it is they wish done. Now I was not given an amendment, and the Member has not given me notice, but I think he has made clear to the Committee what his views are, that he is, as I understand it, silence denoting consent, he is not objecting to subclauses (a) and (c), but he is objecting to subclause (b) and would vote against the whole clause if necessary, and I think perhaps we had better leave it at that.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. Chairman ...

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

In that case ...

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. Chairman, I agree with the Bill, and particularly this section, and for the record I would state again my reason for agreeing.

In the three day period if a candidate wanted to withdraw, his name would end up on the ballot on Election Day. If we pass it in substitution for ten, he has every chance that his name will come off the ballot paper, and Mr. Chairman, my reason behind this in giving this longer period of time is that there is confusion on Election Day, and the confusion of having the name of the candidate on the ballot paper can influence, and Mr. Chairman, has influenced an election in this country already. It influenced the election of the Honourable First Elected Member of Council in 1980 when his opponent had 19 votes less than he had, and the candidate who withdrew had 13 absentee votes alone. He then had on the open vote twenty plus votes, I believe, but the Member might disagree with me, if that vote had not gone to the candidate who had withdrawn, he might not have been in the House in 1980. The Member might take the opposite side, but I believe that the candidate's opponent would have beaten him, by very few votes, but would have beaten him. So, it does cause some confusion on Election Day, and that is why I support this. His name would be off the ballot.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. Chairman, while I agree with the Member agreeing with the provision, I would disagree with his conclusion. I think I would have won by a bigger margin ... (LAUGHTER) ... but be that as it may.

The thing I think that should be remembered here is that we are making provision for a person, being an absent voter, to get another ballot, the same as a person who spoils a ballot at the voting station, not in this clause Mr. Chairman, but in the Bill. There is provision within this Bill for an absent voter to get another ballot as well. And in fact, if a voter has voted for someone who is not a candidate, he has spoilt his ballot. The Member is quite right, in the case of the absent ballot, he would have spoilt the ballot. Even those persons voting at the station, if a withdrawn candidate's name still appears on the ballot paper, and persons unintentionally, because very often, Mr. Chairman, people are encouraged to vote say for candidates 1, 4 and 5 and they get those numbers stuck in their craniums, and that is what they do when they go into the booth. It has happened, that persons who have withdrawn at the last minute have had their name remain on the ballot paper and have collected votes during the course of the Election. So I think the ten days provides for the ballot being reprinted. In the case of an absent or a postal ballot, the person can get a new ballot, and it removes the confusion from the process at the polling station.

To take the point made by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, regardless of what time is here, whether it was one clear day, two clear days, three clear days or whatever, the occurrences which he mentioned could take place within any of those times. But what the ten days does, is to give time to reprint ballots where one or more nominated persons in the district have decided that they are not going to run. I think it can only lend itself to a fairer and more properly run Election. So I support that amendment in the Bill, Mr. Chairman.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. Chairman,

MR. CHAIRMAN:

You support the Bill as it stands I think, yes. Yes, the Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

I am not going to discuss the reasons why this amendment is being made, as was suggested or alluded to. I do support the amendment, I think it is a good amendment. I feel that candidates should not be allowed such short periods to change their minds, whereby they could influence election results.

The point I would like to make, Mr. Chairman, is regarding the procedure on a clause or clauses where there is more than one section to the clause, such as in the particular clause before us, clause 6, which deals with three new subsections. It would seem that the procedure, or Section 51 of the Standing Orders on Procedure in Committee on Bills contemplates that there would be the possibility of amendment to subsections or sections of the clause, or part thereof. So, in this particular instance I see no precedent here or procedure, because there is no particular definition as to the meaning of a clause. I see no reason why the subsections could not be dealt with separately, because we could be considering that the subsection is a part thereof of the clause, and there is nothing to say that it cannot be done. So I do not think that it would be out of order for this time, or in future if a clause is made up of more than one section, that the sections be dealt with separately; there seems to be nothing specifically mentioned on that point.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Mr. Chairman, I agree with this clause, in fact my own feeling on it is that ten days should be a minimum. Ten days is sufficient time of course if the ballots need to be reprinted. But as in the case of absentee voters, even ten days is hardly enough time to get a new ballot to cross overseas and back again, unless we are going to use courier despatch services, so I can see ten days certainly being a minimum amount of time allotted, and I support the clause as it stands.

MR. LINFORD PIERSON:

Mr. Chairman, on the point I raised, I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member could give his view on this, because I think it is important enough, that it be ...

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Perhaps I could reiterate what I said before. My reading of Standing Order 51(1) is that it would be possible to do as you suggest, because 51(1) says:

"When a bill is under consideration in Committee the Clerk shall, unless the committee decides to have the bill read in any other manner, call the several clauses in order ..." (and so on).

So the Committee could, I think, decide to have it read in another matter. I was saying that it seems to me that there is a danger that you could find that if you tried to split up a clause and take one part, and then another part, and then another part. And if one part, when you did it like that, got voted against, and the others got voted for, you might find that what resulted did not altogether make sense. If you vote against a whole clause I do not think there is a danger of the Bill not making sense. But it may be that my fear is misplaced, maybe the Honourable Second Official Member will tell me that really he does not foresee that kind of danger ...

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: If I may say before you speak with him, that subsection (3) of Standing Order 51, I think, contemplates that:

"In the case of uncontested clauses, the question may be put not on each clause separately, but on a group of clauses."

It does contemplate that there is this possibility that there will be contested clauses, or part thereof. So, in that case there should be no reason why the part thereof could not be dealt with.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Mr. Chairman ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: I do not honestly think that 51(3) is relevant.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Mr. Chairman, I rather think Sir, that your initial ruling or interpretation of section 51 is the correct ruling. If you go down subsections (2) and (3) of section 51, these substantiate your ruling, because they do not refer to subclauses, they refer to clauses. I think the decision which the Committee could make relates to having more than one clause read, and voting on more than one clause which has happened before. But I have never in my experience seen a clause voted on by subclause, unless there has been a substantive amendment proposed to a subclause.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, my point is that in the absence of the full definition of a clause, it would seem that the subparts of a clause form an integral part of it, so the subsections to the clause would form a part of the clause, and this is why I am asking our legal advisor here if he could just clarify ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think what I would soonest do, if this would commend itself to the Committee, rather than try and reach a final conclusion today, is to have an opportunity to reflect on the matter, and perhaps even write to the Overseas Office in the House of Commons to find out whether it ever is the practice to split up clauses when considering a Bill.

As I said earlier, I do not interpret Standing Order 51 paragraph (1) as ruling out the possibility, but I am a little nervous of introducing the practice, and I would rather get considered advice, perhaps from Westminster, before I invited the Committee to reach a conclusion about the matter, I think it would be wiser.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I would like to point out that this clause 6, in it we are inserting three new subsections which are not only new, but are entirely different, and it could well be that a Member would agree with subsection (a) but not subsection (b) or subsection (c) and apart from (a) there are also (b) and (c) which are not related to (a) at all.

MR. CHAIRMAN: But I did make earlier the point that any Member who wished, had the option of moving an amendment in the ordinary way to strike out a particular part of the clause, and that would achieve the precise objective that you are after.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: I would just like to say Sir, that I still feel that three days is sufficient for printing the ballots because if the Election were held say on a Friday, the candidate withdrawing would have to give his withdrawal notice on Monday, and it would leave three clear days in which to do the printing, and in this new age, certainly, three days from Monday to Friday should be sufficient time to print a few ballots.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well, if I may I will on the one hand give an undertaking to explore the matter for the future as to whether it would be appropriate or unwise to consider clauses subclause by subclause rather than one at a time. But meanwhile I will put the question on clause 6.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. Chairman, before you do that, I do not know whether it would help or not, but in the debate on the Parliamentary Pensions I mentioned a similar desire, and afterwards you told me that it was not practicable to do it, and so I had to support the whole clause of which I was complaining. Now I do not know whether that sets a precedent or not by you, but I put the information before the House as a reminder to you, which is why I am telling you this.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well I must confess I am not regarding it as a precedent because I had totally forgotten the incident.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I thought you would say that Sir.

MR. CHAIRMAN: But at least it does suggest that I have been consistent does it not?

CLERK: A Bill for a Law to amend the Elections Law, 1983, Law 36 of 1983.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that the title and enacting clause do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. THE TITLE AND ENACTING CLAUSE PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: That does not in fact conclude proceedings in Committee, because we have several further Bills to deal with, but I think probably it may be convenient for Members if we suspend proceedings for luncheon now, and resume in Committee after lunch. So I will suspend proceedings until approximately two fifteen.

AT 12:46 P.M. THE COMMITTEE SUSPENDED

COMMITTEE RESUMED AT 2:23 P.M.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Please be seated. Proceedings in Committee are resumed.

The next Bill which was referred to the Committee, was the Merchant Shipping (Registry) Bill. In respect of that Bill I have been given notice of a proposed Committee Stage Amendment, or a series of amendments of which I think all Members have had notice, because they were mentioned during the Second Reading Debate yesterday, and they affect clauses 3, 5, 6 and 7.

THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (REGISTRY) BILL, 1987

COMMITTEE THEREON

CLERK: THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (REGISTRY) BILL, 1987. Clause 1 Short title and date of commencement.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that clause 1 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 1 PASSED

CLERK: Clause 2. Interpretation.

MR. CHAIRMAN:
do stand part of the Bill.

The question is that clause 2

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 2 PASSED

CLERK:

Clause 3. Refusal to register.

MR. CHAIRMAN:
do stand part of the Bill, but as I have said, I have been given notice and I think all Members have, two proposed amendments to this clause by the Honourable First Official Member, and I will ask him to move the amendments if he will.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:
Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) and 52(2) I move that the Merchant Shipping (Registry) Bill, 1987 be amended as follows in clause 3.

(a) substituting "Registrar may" for "Governor may direct the Registrar to" in the second line;

(b) by deleting "." at the end thereof and adding "unless he is satisfied that -

(a) every share in the ship is owned by a company formed and registered under the Companies Law or by an existing company as defined in subsection (1) of section 2 of that Law; and

(b) having regard to the safety of the ship and to the safety, health and welfare or otherwise of the persons employed or engaged in any capacity on board the ship, it is not detrimental to the interest of the Islands or of international merchant shipping for the ship to be registered at the port of George Town."

MR. CHAIRMAN:
That amendment having been moved, does any Member wish to speak to the amendment? The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Yes Mr. Chairman.

I oppose this amendment because the qualifications for refusal do not seem to be sufficient; do not in any way give the desired effect as set out in the Memorandum, and as given by the mover as the reasons for amending the Shipping Law. It can only have an adverse affect on our Shipping Registry, and can only have a bad affect on the economy of the Islands, which will result in investors having uncertainty about the safety of their ships on our Registry. And when I say "safety" I am referring to whether the ships can be at any time removed or not put on, because once we start this it will only be a step when we go down to clause 4 before the Governor can direct the removal of a ship. So there will be so much uncertainty that I believe that ship owners will look elsewhere to register their ships, and I totally oppose the amendments.

MR. CHAIRMAN:
earlier indicated he wanted to speak. The Member for North Side

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Yes Sir, just to ask the mover

if there are any existing guidelines which are intended to be used when the Registrar is making a decision as to whether a ship is safe, for the safety, health and welfare and matters like that. Or is he going to be referred through regulations to any of the international convention standards? Is it going to be his own independent determination of whether a ship is safe, and whether the safety and welfare of the crew is examined? Because I can support it if there are some guidelines to be applied. My problem with it is that if the decision is going to be made strictly by the Registrar, without reference to or without having to abide by some of these international accepted norms and guidelines, for instance, having so many life vests for the crew, so many boats etcetera.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

The answer to the Member is yes that he will have the guidelines when he is dealing with the Register, or whether to refuse to register a ship or not. This particular clause is almost identical to the Isle of Man's legislation and as the Member seems not to believe me, so I have it right here in front of me Mr. Chairman.

In the Isle of Man legislation where it talks about the power to refuse to register a ship, it reads this way:

"(1) Notwithstanding the provisions of Part 1 of the Merchant Shipping Act 1894, an Act of Parliament, relating to the registration of ships, the Board may -

(a) direct the registrar of British ships to refuse to register under that Part any ship in respect of which an application for registration has been received unless the Board is satisfied that every share in the ship is owned -

- (i) by a British citizen resident in the Island; or
- (ii) by a company incorporated under the Companies Act 1931 which is resident in the Island and has its principal place of business in the Island and, having regard to the safety of the ship and of the safety, health and welfare of the seamen employed therein, or otherwise, it is not detrimental to the interests of the Island or international merchant shipping for the ship to be registered in the Island."

So it is our intention, Mr. Chairman that the Registrar of Shipping will use the same guidelines when he is dealing with this section, as they are doing in the Isle of Man. And when, hopefully, the SOLAS Convention is extended to this country, those guidelines will also apply in this respect.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: I am wondering Mr. Chairman, if the Member would undertake to bring in an amendment to incorporate these guidelines in our Law, by making them as a schedule to the Law.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. Chairman, this Member always wants somebody to undertake something. But I can say to him that the comment that he made earlier is different from what I have been hearing. I have met with just about every person on this Island who is providing a service to ship owners, and they say that this Bill has no negative affect on the Cayman Islands. That is what they tell me.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, as I stated in my debate yesterday, I was concerned with the provisions of the original Bill, and the appearance of the Bill being amended, in what seems to me to be an ad hoc manner. But, Mr. Chairman, having heard the explanation given by the Honourable First Official Member in his winding up of the debate, and his admission of Government's intention to bring about more comprehensive legislation in due course, I am satisfied that this amendment is a necessary stop gap measure, to satisfy the British Government that we have shown good faith in this matter in tightening up the Law, even though as I have said, I still feel that much more is required, but I feel that as the Member said yesterday, he will bring about the necessary legislation in due course.

So, Mr. President, in view of his summing up yesterday and the assurances he has given, I am happy to support the Bill.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I will concede in fairness to the Member that the amendment is an improvement on the outrageous Bill which he had presented to us first, but I am still not satisfied.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: We thank him for his approval, Mr. Chairman.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am sure the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town is thankful for any crumbs that come his way.

So just to remind Members in case anybody has now forgotten, what is being put is that clause 3 of the Bill should be amended in the two ways that are set out in the Notice of Amendment circulated and read out by the Honourable First Official Member. It may be perhaps as well that I should add for the record, that my interpretation of the second part of the amendment, that is being moved, were it says (b) adding " implies that the full stop at the end of clause 3 after the word "received" gets deleted and the words "unless he is satisfied " follow thereafter. I do not think there could be any doubt about that, but that is what I think is intended.

So I will put the question that clause 3 of the Bill be amended as proposed.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED BY MAJORITY, AMENDMENT PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question now is that clause 3 as amended do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED BY MAJORITY, CLAUSE 3 AS AMENDED PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: So I declare clause 3 as amended, part of the Bill.

CLERK: Clause 4. Removal from Register.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 4 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED BY MAJORITY, CLAUSE 4 PASSED

CLERK: Clause 5. Description of classes of ships.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 5 do stand part of the Bill.

The notice of Committee Stage Amendments contains a proposal for the deletion of clause 5. My understanding of the practice prescribed in Standing Orders is that we do not seek to amend clause 5, to delete it, but those who are persuaded that it ought to be deleted, simply vote against the clause. In other words, there is no need to move an amendment, and indeed I think it is not permissible under Standing Orders to move an amendment for the deletion of a clause, one votes against it.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I would think clause 5 should remain ... (LAUGHTER) ... because what is really happening is that Executive Council or the Governor in Council is washing their hands of the Bill. They should assume some responsibility for prescribing the classes of ships which are not to be registered, and as I said in my debate they cannot act like Pilate and wash their hands. I would like to see clause 5 remain, so I am going to vote for it to remain.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am sure we are surprised to learn that.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. Chairman, my view is that clause 5 at the moment would serve no useful purpose. I would expect to see such a clause in the comprehensive legislation, if it is not by the Governor in Council and we have to establish a Shipping Board or whatever, that authority would have that responsibility, and when we know what we can get from the United Kingdom, because I would think that this would have to do with the classification of ships, condition of the ship, and age of the ship and so on. It would serve no useful purpose until we know how many of the international conventions and so on, would be extended to us by the United Kingdom.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If no further Member wishes to speak, I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AYES AND NOES

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think the Noes have it. I declare the clause does not stand part of the Bill.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: CLAUSE 5 DELETED

CLERK:
Registry.

Clause 6. Transfer of

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The question is that clause 6 do stand part of the Bill. But there is a notice of a proposed amendment to that clause, and I will therefore invite the Honourable First Official Member to move the amendment of which he has given notice.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52 (1) and (2), I move that the Merchant Shipping (Registry) Bill, 1987 be amended by:

(a) Clause 6 be re-numbered as Clause 5; and

(b) by substituting -

"by the Registrar, unless he is satisfied that -

(a) every share in the ship is owned by a company formed and registered under the Companies Law or by an existing company as defined in subsection (1) of section 2 of that Law; and

(b) having regard to the safety of the ship and to the safety, health and welfare or otherwise of the persons employed or engaged in any capacity on board the ship, it is not detrimental to the interests of the Islands or of international merchant shipping for the registration of the ship to be transferred to the port of George Town."

for "except with the approval of the Governor" in the last line.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The question is that ... (INTERRUPTION) ... Let me just put the question to the ... I am not asking for them to vote, but I am just saying what is to be debated. And the question now under consideration is that clause 6 should be re-numbered and amended as moved by the Honourable First Official Member.

Now, if any Member wishes to speak to the amendment he may do so. The First Elected Member.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

I have been taken a bit by surprise by Standing Order 50(2), because yesterday I quoted Standing Order 52(11), but ...

MR. CHAIRMAN:

I am so sorry, could you say that again. It is Standing Order 50, paragraph 2.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Standing Order 50 suborder 2. I guess ... not that is just a general provision. It is correct to be done I think under 50....

MR. CHAIRMAN:

I do not honestly think that that affects ...

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

No 52(11). I was talking about the title.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

I think perhaps if you want to talk about the title let us wait until we come to the title and enacting clause.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Yes, but 52 does talk about the title, but I see what it is saying, that you can do it in Committee now, it not the procedure. The procedural part is covered under 52(11). I just happened to be looking at the Standing Orders, and I was, out of an abundance of caution, I wanted to understand where we were really going Sir, but I see it is to be done under 52(11).

MR. CHAIRMAN:

So now we can come back to clause 6, and what is under consideration is the proposed re-numbering and the amendment to clause 6. Does any Member wish to speak? In that case I will put the question that clause 6 be amended as proposed.

QUESTION PUT: AMENDMENT PASSED BY MAJORITY

CLERK: Clause 7. Repeal.

MR. CHAIRMAN: In respect of clause 7 I have been given notice of a proposed amendment, simply to re-number the clause. I think perhaps it is best for the record that the Honourable First Official Member should formally move that the clause be re-numbered.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I move that the Merchant Shipping (Registry) Bill, 1987 be amended by re-numbering clause 7 as clause 6.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Before I move on to the amendment proposed by the Honourable First Official Member, the Clerks think that I forgot to put the question that Clause 6 as amended stand part of the Bill. I certainly put the question that clause 6 be amended, but I may have forgotten, and in case I did forget and because the Clerks think I forgot, perhaps I may go back now and put the question that clause 6 as amended and re-numbered do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED BY MAJORITY. CLAUSE 6 AS AMENDED PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: So clause 6 as re-numbered, stands part of the Bill. We move on to clause 7. The Honourable First Official Member has moved that it should be re-numbered. I think perhaps I had better put the things in two parts. First, as to the re-numbering, unless any Member wishes to speak to that, I will put the question that clause 7 be re-numbered.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. AMENDMENT PASSED.

MR. CHAIRMAN: And now I will put the question that clause 7, re-numbered, do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 7 AS AMENDED PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: We would normally next turn to the title and enacting clause, but, and I think this is the point the Honourable First Elected Member was making earlier, I think an amendment to the title of the Bill is necessary as a result of amendments to the Bill, and subject to the views of the Honourable Second Official Member, I suggest we should consider re-entitling it.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. Chairman I have thought about a form of an amendment and the insertion of the words "Registrar of Ships and the" before "Governor" in the second line might meet the requirements of the amendments.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well my understanding of Standing Orders 52 paragraph (1) and 51 paragraph (2) is that in effect we deal with this in the way that we deal with any other clause. That is to say that, we first deal with the proposal to amend the title and then if that proposal is agreed, we put the question that the title is amended, and the enacting clause stand part of the Bill.

So would you like formally to move the amendment? ... Whichever Member.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. Chairman I ask for permission under 52 (1) and (2) to move the amendment to the title of the Bill.

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is 52(2) really, and clearly it would be appropriate to grant leave because there was no way you could reasonably give notice. It was not possible to know until the Committee had decided on the other clauses that the title would have to be changed. So, I grant leave for the amendment to be proposed without notice.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. Chairman in accordance with Standing Order 52(11), I move the amendment to the title of the Bill, to read as follows:

"A Bill for a Law to confer certain powers on the Registrar of Ships and the Governor in Council in respect of the Registry relating to ships."

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The question is that the title should be amended, in effect by inserting the word "Registrar of Ships and the" before the words "Governor in Council".

Does any Member wish to speak to the amendment? Then I will put the question that the title should be amended as proposed.

The question now then is that the title as amended and the enacting clause do stand part of the Bill.

THE TITLE AND ENACTING CLAUSE WERE DEEMED TO HAVE BEEN PASSED.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. Chairman, just as a matter of clarifications in 52(11) it states here that:

"(11) If any amendment to the title of a bill is made necessary by an amendment to that bill, it shall be made at the conclusion of the proceedings detailed above, and no question shall be put "that the title (as amended) stand part of the bill."

So maybe it is not necessary to put the question that that amendment be made.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Yes, I think you are quite right. I had not taken that point. Yes, by agreeing to the amendment, we must be deemed to have agreed to the title and enacting clause. You are quite right, thank you.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Well Mr. Chairman, I would just point out that under Standing Order 50, sub-paragraph (2) it has to be reported to the House.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Yes, yes it would have to be reported to the House.

That deals with the Merchant Shipping Registry Bill, and the next is the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands Bill. In respect of this, I have been given notice of a proposed Committee Stage Amendment which affects clause 7 of the Bill, and this was the Bill in respect of which I was speaking when I mentioned that a major portion had been omitted from the printed version. And if Members compare the Bill as printed with the their white copies as circulated originally, they will see that clause 7, subclause (3) which was in the white copy, has not been printed. the green printed copy goes from clause 7(2) to 7(4). I simply draw that to Members' attention so that when we come to deal with clause 7, Members should understand that we are dealing with clause 7 as printed, plus the subclause (3) which was in the white paper, and the Attorney General and the Clerk should be authorized to include that subclause (3), provided the Committee approves it in the Bill, and in the Law.

Now this is quite a long Bill, 29 sections. Subject to the wishes of the Committee, I would propose to ask the Clerk to deal with three or four sections of it at a time. If Members have sections they want to debate, we can obviously go back to the particular sections, and we will have to pause at clause 7 anyway, in order to deal with the amendment.

THE CIVIL AVIATION AUTHORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS BILL, 1987.

CLERK:

Clause 1. Short title.
Clause 2. Interpretation.
Clause 3. Establishment of Authority.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The question is that clauses 1 to 3 stand part of the Bill. Unless any Member wishes to speak, I will put that question, that clauses 1 to 3 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSES 1 THROUGH 3 PASSED

CLERK:
Authority.

Clause 4. Functions of Members.

Clause 5. Remuneration of Clause 6. Loans by Governor.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The question is that clauses 4, 5 and 6 do stand part of the Bill. Unless any Member wishes to speak, I will put that question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSES 4 THROUGH 6 PASSED

CLERK:

Clause 7. Financial procedure.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

This is the clause in which as I have said, firstly, I have been given notice of a proposed amendment, and secondly, in which subclause (3) was inadvertently not printed.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the provisions of Standing Orders 52(1) and (2), I move that the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands Bill, 1987 be amended in clause 7 of the Bill, by deleting subclauses (4), (5) and (6) and re-numbering subclauses (7) and (8) as (4) and (5).

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The question is that clause 7 of the Bill should be amended in the manner read out by the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

Does any Member wish to speak?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, I hope I understood the Member correctly, is he proposing to delete subclauses (6), (7) and (8)?

MR. CHAIRMAN:

(4), (5) and (6), and (7) and (8) then get re-numbered as (4) and (5).

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Taking out (4), (5) and...

MR. CHAIRMAN:

(6).

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

(6).

MR. CHAIRMAN:

wishes to ... I do not know if the Member

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

I cannot agree with that Mr. Chairman, because it takes away the little bit of control there is in the Bill. When we come down to 12, I will be dealing with the borrowing powers. But such as the matter of publishing in the Gazette, the amount and particulars of the proposed loan, the rate or rates of interest to be paid, the classes of persons who may subscribe, and so on. Why are we taking out all of this, and why are we doing it at this stage? I do not remember being told the reasons for it. This would substantially change the controls which would be there.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, the reason for this amendment is because in discussion with the Honourable Second Official Member of Government, it was determined that subclauses (4), (5) and (6) of section 7 actually deal specifically with the matter of the raising of loans and borrowing powers, and it was felt that in section 12, dealing with borrowing powers, that this was sufficiently provided for, and that the subclauses which we seek to remove, were actually a duplication.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Perhaps, Mr. Chairman, I might elaborate on that. Subclause (4) as it stands is plainly a straightforward duplication of 12. Subclauses (5) and (6) appear to deal with the creation of loan stock and the sale of it to the public or prescribed classes of the public. If one looks at subclause (6) it is plainly not applicable to the normal ways of raising loans that any commercial enterprise is going to embark upon, and certainly, that a statutory authority is going to embark upon. The gazettement of the classes of persons who may subscribe and so on is not something that is going to arise when this Civil Aviation Authority goes along to a bank or commercial enterprise and asks to borrow money. In other words, (5) and (6) which have been incorporated earlier and really have been borrowed wholesale by the draftsman, from earlier legislation, appear to deal with a very narrow class of loans, which in the modern practice is unlikely to arise. It was therefore recommended that they come out, because clause 12 allows the Governor in Council to impose conditions upon any particular borrowing, other than borrowing from Government, and should it arise, that that particular borrowing is going to be by way of inviting subscriptions from the public to loan stock, then it may well be that the Governor in Council would want to impose conditions as to the publication of prospectuses and rates. But in the absence of that, these provisions were rather archaic and cumbersome and out of place in the present Bill.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Unless any Member wishes to speak further, I will put the question that clause 7 of the Bill should be amended as proposed by the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED BY MAJORITY. AMENDMENT PASSED BY MAJORITY

MR. CHAIRMAN: I will not put the question that clause 7 as amended stand part of the Bill, and remind the committee that clause 7 contains a subclause (3) to which I drew your attention, which is not in the green printed version, but which is in the white version, and so when we are voting on whether clause 7 as amended should stand part of the Bill, we are including the subclause (3) as a part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 7 AS AMENDED PASSED

CLERK: Clause 8. Secondment of public officers.
Clause 9. Vesting of property.
Clause 10. Liability of members of the Authority.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clauses 8, 9 and 10 do stand part of the Bill. I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSES 8 THROUGH 10 PASSED

CLERK: Clause 11. Powers of Governor.
Clause 12. Borrowing powers.
Clause 13. Advances, grant and guarantees.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clauses 11, 12 and 13 do stand part of the Bill.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, there is from this Member here, strong objection to clause 12.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Do you want the clause taken separately?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: No, no. It does not matter what I want today, it is only going to be a voice crying in the wilderness. But, the authority to borrow shall be exercisable with the approval of the Governor. I feel this is wrong, it should be exercisable only with the approval of the Finance Committee. The reason for this is that we know all of these statutory bodies eventually come to Government for a guarantee when they are getting large loans, and sometimes the lender insists that there be a Government guarantee. Furthermore, the Executive Council should not be guaranteeing or approving these loans if it involves Government in any commitment. The Legislative Assembly, or the Finance Committee who is charged with the spending of the money will be the body to eventually pay up. So, it is wrong to have this clause structured in this way, and I would certainly like to see it considered, although I am not crazy enough to make an amendment.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I take the point. I was going to say that the second portion of subsection (2) of 12 really sets out that "An approval given in any respect for the purposes of this subsection, may be either general or limited to a particular borrowing or otherwise, and may be either unconditional or subject to conditions." It appears to cover the cases where the Authority is borrowing on its own, and I believe clause 13 deals more clearly with the point raised by the Member.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: That is correct, Mr. Chairman.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I do not agree with that at all, because I think that clause 13 deals with the Governor making advances to the Authority, it does not really deal with the Authority getting money from another source, an outside source. So ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: 13(2) deals with guarantees if the Member likes to

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Yes, that well may be. But certainly if it is the Finance Committee that will ultimately pay, when there is a default on a loan, or if there is a Finance Committee that will be called upon to guarantee the loans, I think they should have the first say in approving substantial loans, because if we were looking at say, money for the construction of a new airport or something like that, we would be talking about millions of dollars, and this approval should be given only by Finance Committee. If we put in a limitation that the Governor in Council may approve loans up to a certain amount, I could go along with that. But the power to borrow unlimited sums should not be in the Authority, solely with the approval of Executive Council.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, this I believe was borrowed directly from the Port Authority Law which seems to work very well, but also if the Member who is raising the point regarding the approval by the Governor in Council may allow me, any authority to borrow, which would be approved by the Governor in Council could be, and would normally be conditional on final approval by Finance Committee in any case.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, if we look at 13(3) we will see that when there is a default in the repayment, the Finance Committee of the Legislative Assembly is going to be called upon to make the default good. So, I do not feel that the Executive Council should commit the Government, and then we turn to the Finance Committee to bail them out ...

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Well Mr. Chairman ...

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: So the section is wrong, and I think we should put a limit on the amount of money that can be borrowed with the approval of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Mr. Chairman, section 13(3) to which the Member is referring, refers to moneys guaranteed under the provisions of sections 13 subsection (2), which means that it has to be with the approval of the Legislative Assembly, before the guarantee is issued. Clause 12 deals with minimum borrowings where the lender does not require a Government guarantee for, and which I am sure the Executive Council would consider to be within the ability of the Authority to repay. Section 13 is very clear. Where Government is going to guarantee money, it has to be done with the approval of the Assembly, and the repayment after default naturally has to be done by the Legislative Assembly, and that is only in respect of the moneys guaranteed by the Assembly, it does not cover general borrowings not covered by guarantee.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: No, Mr. Chairman, I cannot agree with that. 12 is not limited to small borrowings, it says "... may borrow sums required by them for meeting any of their obligations, or discharging any of their functions". There is no limitation at all on the borrowings under 12, as to amount. So, 13 does specifically mention loans approved by the Legislative Assembly. But if Executive Council approves a loan under 12(1) and there is a default, who pays it, Executive Council out of their pockets?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: But, Mr. Chairman, Executive Council would not approve them borrowing substantial amounts which would materially affect the finances of Government, if it was called on to repay. That certainly means that if they wanted to borrow $10,000 or $15,000 we would not have to call a Finance Committee meeting to authorize it. But 13 deals with more substantial sums, such as the building of an airport, where the Government would have to guarantee it, then we have to come to the Legislative Assembly for their approval, and 13(3) refers to the instances where there is a default in that money which has been guaranteed by the Legislative Assembly. We must again come back, that is very clear Mr. Chairman.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: But, Mr. Chairman, the Member cannot speak for Executive Council. He may not be here after 1988, in fact, he may be so frustrated he may even leave before that, but he cannot speak for what Executive Council will do, because even with his presence, they may override him, there are six Members against just he alone. So he cannot speak for them, and Executive Council, and I am not saying the present one will do it since this is such a good one that we have, they may not do it, but he cannot speak for a new Executive Council, and I would like to see a limitation put on the borrowings which could be approved by the Executive Council, we should not leave it wide open.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well, I am afraid in the absence of any proposed amendment, I can only put the question that clauses 11, 12 and 13 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: CLAUSES 11 THROUGH 13. AYES AND NOES

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: May I have a division, please?

MR. CHAIRMAN: Of course.

Clause 22. Arrest of aircraft.

Clause 23. Arrest of persons.

Clause 24. Presumption of Clause 25. Suspected persons.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, clause 24 dealing with the presumption of venue is a bad clause, it should not be in this Bill. I spoke against it, it changes the system of justice we have been used to. Instead of the prosecution having to prove that a person was at the airport, and committed an offence, this clause would change it around so that the person would be deemed to be at the airport and would actually have no defence at all. He would have to show that he was not there, and this could not be a defence, it is totally against the system. I know this present Government has used it on one or two occasions before, but it is wrong. I feel strongly against it, and we should not have this type of clause in our Law.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. Chairman, if I might just speak on this because it deals with a matter very much within my province. The effect of this clause is not to deem that a person who is alleged to have committed an offence was at the scene of the offence, it is to deem that where the prosecution have proved (a) that an offence has been committed and (b) that the person accused was at the scene. If the prosecution proved those two things, then it is deemed that the scene was an airport within the meaning of these regulations. In other words, it saves the prosecution having to call in every single parking violation, a surveyor or somebody similar to prove that the car or the violation happened within the designated boundaries of an airport. But what it does not do, and is not intended to do, and in my submission cannot be construed as doing, is to relieve the Crown of the burden of proving that the accused person was at the scene of the crime.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Yes, Mr. Chairman I understand that perfectly, I understand that this does not prove the crime, it is only one of the ingredients necessary for the proof, and I am saying that the prosecution does not have to supply this ingredient, and does not have to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that the person was actually at the airport. Once they prove that a crime was committed, this would follow, and it is wrong, I feel the prosecution should have to prove its case, it should have to prove that the person was at the airport, not only that the person committed an offence.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

My understanding of what the Honourable Second Official Member has just said, was that the prosecution would have to prove that the accused was at the airport, but that they would not have to prove that, let us say, the parking lot at the airport formed part of the scheduled airport, is that not it?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. Chairman, yes, the prosecution would still have to prove that an offence took place, and the person accused was where the offence was said to have taken place. So for instance, if the accused seeks to set up an alibi saying "I was not there" it remains for the Crown to prove that he was where the offence took place. All this deals with, is whether the offence with the person accused, were within the technical boundaries of the airport, or not. I hope that makes it clear.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, I do not think it is that simple, because this Law vests certain specific parcels of land in the Civil Aviation Authority. The Law designates, I hope, certain areas, it defines what an airport is and if we need, more regulations can be more specific. But the point is, that all we are doing by this clause is making it simple to get a conviction, and this is contrary to the principles of English justice, and I am against it.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Does any ... yes. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

It is just a simple matter, Mr. Chairman. On the second line of clause 22 I know that the errors will be corrected, but just to bring this to the attention of Members it should be "over which it has a lien", I think.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Yes, it should.
Does any other Member wish to speak? In that case the question was that clauses 22, 23, 24 and 25 do stand part of the Bill. I will put that question.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The question is that clauses 26, 27, 28 and 29 do stand part of the Bill.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, I have a strong objection to clause 27(g), which gives the power to Executive Council to set penalties in the regulations, which may not exceed $5,000 nor exceed two years imprisonment. I think it is wrong to give this power to Executive Council without limiting the type of offences, without having different categories of offences. Because they may put in these abnormally high penalties for very frivolous misdemeanors, as they have done in the Conservation Law and the regulations under it, and as they have also done in the Airport regulations. We see the result of it now in the Courts where little boys, for having one conch over the total, are paying fines of $1,500 and having their boats confiscated. It is all because the Executive Council, in my opinion, abused the authority given to them to make regulations, because while the Law says that the fine shall not exceed $5,000, it does not mean that you must put in a $5,000 maximum fine for every offence. I am very perturbed at what is happening, because the power to tax and the power to impose fines and the power to send people to prison are so great in these regulations. We have a Law where Government under the Customs Law can impose taxes, I feel disturbed that this enters into every Bill, and I will certainly cast my voice in the wilderness against clause 27(g).

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, this is identical to what is already provided for in the Airport Regulations Law, which has been in place for several years now, and it is my understanding, and I think the corporation has demonstrated its intention of only applying those smaller fines for traffic violations and so forth, and to reserve this high penalty for offences which would be equivalent and would warrant such a high fine, which was explained in the presentation of the Bill regarding theft of aircraft, or hijackings and things of that nature. I think that a penalty sufficiently high enough is needed to discourage this type of violation which could be committed.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does any other Member wish to speak? In that case I will put the question that clauses 26, 27, 28 and 29 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. TITLE AND ENACTING CLAUSE PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: The next Bill set down for the Committee to deal with is the Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill. And in respect of this Bill I have been given notice of amendments which the Honourable First Official Member intends to propose to clause 1, clause 3, clause 4 and clause 5, and I think all Members have a copy of the Notice.

THE TRAVEL TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

COMMITTEE THEREON

CLERK: Clause 1. Short title and commencement.

MR. CHAIRMAN: This is one of the clauses in respect of which I was given a notice of amendment, and I will therefore invite the Honourable First Official Member to move the amendment of which he gave notice.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I move the following Committee Stage Amendment to the Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1987:

"Clause 1 be amended by:

(a) inserting 'sections 1, 2, 4 and 5' immediately after 'and' in the second line;

and

(b) adding ', and section 3 shall come into operation on the 1st day of January, 1988'."

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 1 of the Bill be amended as now proposed by the Honourable First Official Member. Does any Member wish to speak to the amendment? In that case I will put the question that clause 1 be amended as proposed.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. AMENDMENT PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: Now I will put the question that clause 1 as amended do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 1 AS AMENDED PASSED

CLERK: Clause 2. Amendment of section 2.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 2 do stand part of the Bill. No Member wishes to speak, I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 2 PASSED

CLERK: Clause 3. Amendment of section 4.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Honourable Member did give notice of a proposed new clause 3, but in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 52(8), consideration of the proposed new clause gets postponed until we have dealt with all the clauses as printed in the Bill, and then we come back to the new clause.

The Honourable First Official Member also gave notice that the present clause 3 should be amended both by re-numbering it and by amending it. The re-numbering we take later, after we have considered whether to add the new clause which is going to be proposed, but the amendment to it we should take at this stage I think. So I will invite him to move the amendment.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I move the following Committee Stage Amendment to the Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1987:

"Clause 3 be amended by inserting the word 'further' immediately after the word 'is' as it appears in the first line."

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 3 of the Bill should be amended by inserting the word 'further' immediately after the word 'is' in the first line of the clause. Unless any Member wishes to speak to the amendment, I will put the question that that clause be amended as proposed.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. AMENDMENT PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: I now put the further question that clause 3 as amended do stand part of the Bill. No Member wishes to speak, I will put that question. I declare that clause 3, as amended, stands part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 3 AS AMENDED PASSED

CLERK: Clause 4. Amendment of section 5.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The only amendment in respect of which I was given notice with regard to clause 4, affected its numbering and to that we shall return later as I explained, in the case of clause 3.

So the question is that clause 4 do stand part of the Bill. Unless any Member wishes to speak to that, I will put that question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 4 PASSED

MR. CHAIRMAN: Now my understanding is that it is at this stage in accordance with the provisions of paragraph 8 of Standing Order 52, that we take the proposed new clause, and I would invite the Honourable First Official Member to move its insertion, and simultaneously to move that the clauses 3 and 4 which we have already approved should be re-numbered 4 and 5.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. Chairman, I move in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 52(1) and (2) the following amendment to the Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1987, by inserting the following new clause as clause 3:

"Amendment of s.4 3. Section 4 of the principal Law is amended by the deletion of the words '$3.20 in the case of (b) above' and the substitution therefor of the words '$5.00 in the case of (b) above.'"

AND THAT

Clauses 3 and 4 be re-numbered as clauses 4 and 5."

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that a new clause 3 should be inserted in the Bill, the wording of which was read out by the Honourable First Official Member, and has been circulated, and that the subsequent clauses be re-numbered accordingly.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I spoke against this increase in taxation again. This increase is a very substantial one, it is much in excess of a 50 percent increase, and comes at a time when many people are complaining about the high cost to the tourist in these Islands. And when the Government boasts of the surplus they had, and the reserves they put aside, and in the Budget Session they claimed that there was no need to put in new taxes, I cannot see why they are bringing this now, although I understand it will come into effect if it is passed, on 1st January 1988. So I am strongly opposed to it, and hope the Member will withdraw his amendment to increase the taxes.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Mr. Chairman, I know that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town hates the word "conservation". But I think as I explained to him in the debate on the Bill, this charge is really not a tax, and it certainly does not affect anybody in the Cayman Islands. It is a charge to recoup the expenditure which will be made on establishing permanent buoys for ships to moor on to, or to be tied to, rather than for them to drop their anchors indiscriminately and further destroying the reef in the harbour and at Spotts. And hopefully too Mr. President, in West Bay, although we have good white holes for them to anchor in in West Bay.

It was also explained that although the landing jetty at the moment is somewhat under the control of the Port Authority, this is one area of revenue, that is the landing tax on tourists, which goes directly into the Treasury, rather than into the revenue of the Port Authority. And it seemed proper that since Government was going to pay for the buoys, even though the Port Authority will manage the tying and untying to the buoys, that the revenue should go direct to Government, since Government was bearing the expense of installing the buoys. I do not think that the Member should use this as an opportunity to try to indicate that the government is increasing taxes.

The Honourable Member moving this Bill pointed out, Mr. Chairman, that for example, in Bermuda they charge $20.00 per head per passenger as a landing tax. I am not sure, but I would not be surprised that if in addition to that, the ship is charged a berthing fee. Certainly, this is the case in the Bahamas where I understand the landing tax is somewhat higher than our own, and they have recovered the cost of building their dock, by charging the cruise ships a berthing fee which is customary, basically in any port. And in fact the Port Authority here charges freighters or any boat that comes alongside, a berthing fee. So if we are basically substituting a permanent mooring or buoy for a berth, and I understand that under the Port Authority once the ship is affixed to a permanent buoy, it is in fact considered to be berthed in the terminology of the Port Authority. Therefore it is not unreasonable that a very small charge of $1.80 be added to each passenger instead of the berthing fee.

In many instances Mr. Chairman, I am sure, and we have already had indications that the shipping companies will welcome this. And in many instances it will save them money, because when the weather is a bit unpleasant, as at the moment, their own anchor is not sufficiently reliable for them to lay at anchor and they have to do what is known as "keep up". In other words they have to keep their engines running. So when we provide these permanent moorings, it will also relieve them of that added expense. I am not sure that the shipping company will even add this to the cost of a cruise. But if they did, certainly Mr. Chairman, it is not even the equivalent cost of one beer. So it is not a burdensome thing, and I would like to stress that it does not cost anyone in Cayman anything.

Thank you.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, I must restate that I consider this a substantial increase, it is a 56.25 per cent increase on the existing tax, and does bring it up to $5.00, which is high. It may be true that Bermuda or some other country may charge more, or less, but we should not be concerned with that. The Member who has just spoken said that the funds are needed for helping with the establishment of the mooring buoys, and that may be so. He seems to regret the fact that we do not have a dock for the ships to berth alongside, so that we may charge them a berthing fee. It seems to me that what the Member should be doing is giving full support to the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council in his quest for a new port, because this is pennyanti stuff, and if he really wants to increase the revenue he should look at the wider picture, and give support to the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council. I am certain he would appreciate it, because he has a big job now to sell his port to the public after one Member of Government came out against it.

This is a large increase, and I oppose it.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. Chairman, I do not wish to prolong the argument, but may be the Member has a different understanding of the proposals for the North Sound than I have. But I did not understand that that was a proposal from which Government would get the landing fee, or berthing fee. I thought it was being proposed to be done by a private company, and not to be owned by Government.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

No wonder the Member was so confused when he spoke against it, because he does not have any concept of what ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: I expect that both the two Members are so anxious to have the last word that we shall not complete the debate on this particular clause, if I do not intervene at some stage, and I hope we are not going to be led too far up the North Sound.

My inclination is to put the question now. The question if you remember was, that a new clause 3 be inserted and that the subsequent clauses be renumbered accordingly.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The last Bill referred to the Committee was the Bill for a Law to establish the Community College of the Cayman Islands. As there are 20 clauses to that Bill, I would propose to invite the Clerk to read them, several at a time. But in two cases, I have been given notice of proposed Committee Stage Amendments, and I think the notice has been circulated to all Members. The clauses affected are clauses 2 and 8, and so we will have to pause when we come to them.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. But before inviting any debate on that question, since notice has been given by the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council of a proposal to amend clause 2, I will invite him to move that amendment.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

In accordance with Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I beg to move that the Bill entitled the Community College of the Cayman Islands Bill, 1987 be amended in clause 2 by inserting immediately after the word "Governor" the following words "except in subsection (1) of section 8", so that "Governor" would now read "Governor except in subsection 1 of section 8 means the Governor in Council".

In accordance with Standing Order 52(1) and (2), I beg to move that clause 8 be amended by deleting the words "the exercise of his own deliberate judgment" after the word "in" in the first and second lines and substituting therefor the words "his discretion" so that clause 8 would now read "the Governor in his discretion and subject to such conditions as he may impose may approve the secondment of any public officer for service with the college."

I am not sure whether it is intended to stay or not?

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

I think it could be treated as a printing error, Sir. I think it was spotted that the word "such" was superfluous.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

I think it is superfluous. It is not a normal printing error which is why I draw it to the Committee's attention, but I do not think it makes any sense. In that case, perhaps unless any Member dissents, and the Committee would agree, we could ask the Honourable Second Official Member to treat it as a printing error. PRAYERS

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Shall we Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Let us pray together.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread; And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us; And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil; For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us; the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us; the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY THE PRESIDENT

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Before embarking on Government Business, there is just one brief announcement I would like to make to the House, if I might, and that is that I have a commitment at midday today, and shall need to slip away quietly just before twelve o'clock. I have asked the Honourable First Official Member if he will preside for the final three quarters of an hour or so before lunch. I hope to be back by two fifteen, or a moment after.

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: Mr. President, in accordance with the provision of sub-order 5 of Standing Order 24, I beg to move Government Motion No.1/87 entitled Cinematographic Authority. The Motion reads:

"WHEREAS under section 2 of the Cinematographic Law, Cap 18, provision is made for the establishment of an Authority consisting of the Governor, three Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly and one member nominated annually by the Governor to carry out the stipulation of the above cited Law and Rules made thereunder:

BE IT RESOLVED THAT the following Elected Members be appointed by the Legislative Assembly to the Cinematographic Authority for a period of one year as from the 28th day of February, 1987:

Mr. Linford A. Pierson, JP, MLA
Mr. D. Ezzard Miller, MLA
Mr. W. McKeeva Bush, MLA."

MR. PRESIDENT: The Motion before the House is Government Motion No.1/87, the wording of which has just been read out by the mover. I will not read it again, but it is now open for debate. Does any Member wish to speak? The Member for North Side.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I declare the motion carried.

The remaining business on today's Order Paper is the commencement of the debate on amended Private Member's Motion No. 5/87. It may help if I remind the House that, I think it was probably on Thursday of last week, anyway some days ago, it was announced that the Member had been given leave to issue an amended version of his motion. I think all Members have copies of the amended version, and the Member did read out in full, the terms of that amended version last Thursday. The debate can now begin, and the Honourable First Elected of Executive Council was speaking when the moment of interruption came last week, and may continue now.

ON

AMENDED PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/87

A MOTION REQUESTING THIS HONOURABLE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY TO PETITION HER MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY TO CHANGE THE CAYMAN ISLANDS (CONSTITUTION) ORDER 1972 WITH RESPECT TO QUALIFICATIONS OF MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY BY ELECTORS.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, as you have quite rightly pointed out Sir, at the moment of interruption last Thursday, I had completed reading in detail amended Private Member's Motion No. 5/87, and I would like to now speak to the motion.

Mr. President, in opening the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 5/87 standing in my name, I would like to make some preliminary explanations and comments.

The first is, that Honourable Members will know that the motion seeks to have this Honourable Legislative Assembly humbly petition Her Most Gracious Majesty to amend sections 18, 20(3) and section 25. Those are the sections dealing with the qualifications for membership of the Assembly, and qualifications of voters in substantially the language used in the motion. It follows therefore that we accept that when this is translated into constitutional language the wording might differ slightly from the way it is written in the motion. But as long as it is written, or the substance of the motion remains the same, I do not see where we have a problem.

I should also remind Members Mr. President, that certain consequential amendments of a technical nature not mentioned in this motion, will be necessary as a result of the motion receiving approval. For example, the term "appointed day" is used in several places in this motion, and it will therefore be necessary to amend Section 50 of the Constitution to make provision for "appointed day" to be given a specific meaning in respect of these amendments, when these are put into the Constitution. But these are legal drafting matters which I do not think we have to worry ourselves with unduly.

The second comment I would like to make, Mr. President, is that we have no reason to believe that Her Most Gracious Majesty will deny our request, but in the unlikely event that there is difficulty, it would be my intention to request through His Excellency the Governor, that the appropriate official from Her Majesty's Government visit the Cayman Islands for discussions with all Members of this Honourable Assembly, and if necessary the public. In any event Mr. President, it is my intention to keep Members fully informed of developments in connection with this motion, as they unfold through the British Government.

Permit me also to beseech Honourable Members of this Assembly to treat this motion with the statesmanship, honesty and integrity which it deserves. Let us put politics aside and put this beloved Island of ours first and foremost in our thoughts at this time.

Now, Mr. president, a few pertinent comments concerning the motion.

Yesterday's Caymanian Compass carried an editorial which I seek your permission to read. It is headed - "A Serious Step:

An amendment to a Constitution is a serious step for any country to take, and the Cayman Islands are no different in this respect. The proposal now before the Legislative Assembly should be well understood by the people of these Islands before Members take a final vote.

The proposals aim is to exclude non-Caymanians from the Assembly."

And Mr. President, that is the point I wish to make. The motion does not seek to exclude non-Caymanians from the Assembly.

"But some have commented that the proposal might be interpreted in such a way that some people who are normally considered Caymanians, could be excluded from being elected as Members of the Legislative Assembly. This apprehension must be cleared up before the proposal is passed."

And I hope to do that today Mr. President, before I sit down.

"No ambiguity should be permitted in such an important document as the Constitution. If it means holding the proposal over for the next Assembly Meeting, so be it."

Now Mr. President, I would also like to read from a letter written to the Caymanian Compass on 26th February, 1982 by Mr. D.L. Panton. I am reading this to relate the editorial which was written a few days later to the letter. This will give Members and the public the connection between the editorial and the letter to which the editorial refers. And this is what Mr. Panton's letter said:

"In my usual way, I take it upon myself to offer a little advice to my fellow man. I beseech you in good time to leave no stone unturned in seeing that you are registered as a voter for the next General Election. It may be the last General Election which Caymanians may control. If every one of you are not registered and fails to vote, take it from me, wake up and be vigilant, because I can tell you that others are alert, ready, willing and aspiring to have a big say in your Legislative Assembly.

Secondly, please get behind your current representatives and prevail upon them the necessity and importance of amending the Election Law, defining who, apart from the born-Caymanians are allowed to vote. Our country is fast being taken out of our control, and the depressing thing about this is that we have some of our own people who are lined up against us for their own aggrandizement, greed, power and honours. With alertness, unity and determination we can overpower them. Better to do so my fellow men, now is the time, it may be the last time.

(O.L. PANTON)"

Mr. President, that letter was published on the 26th February, 1982, and the Caymanian Compass saw fit on Tuesday, 2nd March 1982 to write an editorial based on that letter, and this is what the editorial said:

"Orman Panton's Advice

In a letter appearing in last Friday's edition of this newspaper, Mr. Orman Panton, in a few words, invited this territory to consider the realities of politics in the decade of the 80's.

Specifically, Mr. Panton advised Caymanians to ensure their names are properly entered on roles, in order that they will be eligible to vote in a General Election. It is out of the ordinary that such forthright advice on political matters are entered in the columns of this newspaper. Out of the ordinary, because in matters political this community at large is fairly docile in its outright expressions, unless an election is imminent; that at least has been the case over the past seven or eight years. Often when we write on diverse matters in this column we refer to the various elements of Caymanian life, as needing to keep in step with the economic progress this colony has experienced in the last decade. Health services, the educational system, societal balance, the levels of competence and integrity of all these should be in line with the prosperous image of the Cayman Islands at home and abroad.

Mr. Panton's suggestions bring to mind yet another area in which there should be relevance sophistication in the face of all the progress about us. That sophistication involves an appreciation of the rules and regulations which govern the colony's electoral system those political facts and considerations which determine the actual elections. That wise, though elemental vigilance which almost always guarantees that people with the power to vote get the Government they want and deserve".

And I want to emphasize the next paragraph Mr. President.

"Paramount in all this is the necessity that Caymanians having been brought thus far up the ladder of economic success continue in charge of their personal destinies, and that of their homeland. Their priceless vote is their guarantee of this, and we believe this is the point Mr. Panton makes in his letter. All this is not to arouse unnecessary political activism. The prosperity and stability of this territory has long been based on a reputation of political peace, and the greatest activism has undoubtedly been in the endeavours of thousands of Caymanians who through their pacifist natures continuously endear tourists and investors, and mere friends, to Cayman. It is simple that we take Mr. Panton's point that Cayman's fair image thrives not only on the good nature of its people, but also on an astute approach to matters political which could keep that image fair and stable. In a word, it boils down to responsibility."

Mr. President, I have taken the time to introduce these two editorials to show how inconsistent newspapers can be. It is possible that editors have changed, but this highlights the necessity for Caymanians to be in control of their own political destiny. This is our last stand, our last bastion. Even in the papers we have foreign nationals as editors, who come and preach to us what we should do, based on the whims and fancies of the hour.

I wonder, Mr. President, if somebody in that paper has got status since 1982, and has a desire to sit in this House, and probably feels that this amendment will preclude him or her from doing so, it may be. Or are they really championing the cause of someone else who had aspirations, and feels that this may deny them that opportunity?

So my advice to fellow Members and the public is to treat the editorials in this paper with the contempt which they deserve, treat them as I will treat them.

Now Mr. President, it has also been said that there is no mandate to bring this resolution before the House; that certain Members campaigned on a manifesto for no constitutional change. I do not know whether that refers to the manifesto on which I and my two colleagues from West Bay ran, but I want for the record, to read what item (1) on that manifesto said, and refer to the relative clause in the motion, to show that there is no inconsistency with what I am doing today, and the manifesto on which I was elected. That section of our manifesto said:

"We would retain our present Constitution, bearing in mind that our stability and prosperity are dependent upon our remaining a British Crown Colony."

And remember Mr. President, "... bearing in mind that our stability and prosperity are dependent on our remaining a British Crown Colony."

In the third "Whereas" in the resolution, Mr. President, this is what it says:

"AND WHEREAS it is felt that unless steps are taken to control those persons who can be elected to the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands and those who can vote in elections therefor it will lead to social instability and unrest."

It is perfectly consistent with our manifesto, and I can further state that this matter was taken to our people and we had no dissension from those present. But, Mr. President, I can go back further than that for the benefit of these students from Kalamazoo, who know nothing about the political development in the Cayman Islands, and believe that he has been sent here, has returned here as a saviour of this country. My opinion is, that he would have difficulty getting out of a wet paper bag.

And again, Mr. President, I wish to read from that famous document prepared by Lord Oxford and Asquith, the Constitutional Commissioner in 1971, or 1970. I am going to take the time to read a fair section of this Report. He was talking about the history and evolution of political development and constitutional development in the Islands:

"There was still in these years some groping after constitutional change. In 1966 and again in 1967, Select Committees of the Legislature considered various possibilities and reported on them but their recommendations fell a long way short of any request for self-government. The recommendations of the 1967 committee included requests for a majority of Elected Members in the Executive Council, the appointment of a Speaker to preside over the Legislative Assembly and the abolition of Nominated Members in both these bodies. But when Members discussed these suggestions with their constituents, the conclusion was reached that they had no mandate for pursuing the matter, and that there was little desire for change.

In 1969 the Legislature resolved that a Select Committee should once again be appointed to consider amendments to the Constitution. This Committee failed to reach unanimity and in June 1970, submitted majority and minority reports the texts of which are reproduced at Appendices I and II. Although differing from one another in a number of details, it will be seen that both these reports bore some resemblance to that of the 1967 committee. They repeated the three requests mentioned in paragraph 17 above, except for the Executive Council the minority report recommended a parity rather than a majority of Elected Members."

This is the important part Mr. President.

"Both the reports added recommendations designed to modify the qualifications for voting and candidature in favour of persons of Caymanian origin."

And we go on, Mr. President, to where he speaks of his contact with the Legislature and his meetings with the public:

"To assist in the formation of these judgments, I visited the colony, arriving in Grand Cayman on 22 January, 1971. My consultations, spread over a month, included talks with the Administrator and senior officials, meetings on several occasions with Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly and interviews with members of the public, including lawyers in private practice and members of the Chamber of Commerce. I made myself available for interview at all main centres of population in the Islands and some people took advantage of these opportunities.

My initial discussions with Elected Members revealed little change from the opinions which they had recorded in the previous June. In my interviews with the public, what struck me most was the absence of any marked widespread divergency among the views expressed to me."

And it went on to say that: "except for a small minority, most people wanted changes of a cautious and not very far-reaching kind." Although expressed in more general terms, the opinions of this majority group bore many resemblances to those in the majority report of the Select Committee. They followed a consistent pattern and may be broadly summarized as follows:

Mr. President, I am not going to read the whole paragraph, but I am going to read (c) from that paragraph which in fact forms the basis of the first "Whereas" in the motion:

"(c) Fear that Caymanians long established in the Islands might come to be at a political disadvantage in relation to immigrants and also in relation to Caymanians who had been living for many years abroad but might now return to the colony attracted by its increased prosperity. This led to demands for a long residential qualification both for candidates and for voters."

The motion, Mr. President starts:

"WHEREAS for many years Caymanians long established in the Islands have feared that they would become at a political disadvantage in relation to immigrants and Caymanians who had been living abroad for many years and who would return to the Islands, attracted by its increased prosperity;"

So, Mr. President, it will readily be seen that it has been a long established opinion among politicians and all Caymanians alike, that steps should be taken to preserve the Government of this country, in the hands of people born in, or closely connected with, the Islands. This is not new; the only person to whom this appears to be new is that little student from Kalamazoo.

Since 1971, Mr. President, of course the Constitution came into effect in 1972, and just in 1983, this Honourable House amended these specific sections of the Constitution, to increase the residential qualifications and to narrow down those persons who can vote, and who can sit in our Legislature. I am relating these because whatever might be said about the Lord Oxford and Asquith Report, it was the one in-depth study that was made without political rhetoric into the wishes of the people of these Islands, and I lay great store by what that produced. People went in and spoke man to man with that gentleman, and nobody has ever questioned the validity of his report. It was seen as necessary in 1984, I think the decision was taken in 1983, to increase the residential qualifications and narrow the nationalities of those persons who could vote for candidates to our Legislature, and who could sit in our Legislature.

Mr. President, the other thing that I would make clear about this motion and it is this, there is nothing in this to be ashamed of. People like to hold the great United States up as the example of the melting pot, where different nationalities come together and have made a great nation, no one can deny that, Mr. President. But the United States is a country of 230 million people, or something like that, a great land mass. In the Cayman Islands we are told we have 20,000 residents. There is only one part of this motion where I have a reservation Mr. President, and that is where I state that by the year 1990, we are going to be outnumbered - I believe we are outnumbered today.

I have talked far and wide with people in this country, and if there is any criticism which I have heard of this motion, it might be as some feel, that we should have restricted it even more. But, Mr. President, back to the United States. The President of the United States must be a natural-born American. He cannot be a naturalized citizen. In fact, I have heard the view expressed, although it has not been tested in a Court of Law, that an American born by caesarian section, possibly could not run for the Presidency of the United States. Now since the order of succession in the United States, as I understand it, goes: the Vice-President would become President in the event of the death of the President, and next in line of succession would be the Speaker of the House. It goes without saying that those people also would have to be natural-born Americans.

In the Cayman Islands we vote for people to the Legislative Assembly. The voter at large does not vote for Members of Executive Council, which is our highest elected office. The voter votes for people to the Assembly, and the 12 Elected Members in the Assembly elect four of their number to Executive Council. Therefore, it will be seen that the control to the highest elected office in this country is attained by election to the Legislative Assembly. Therefore, our efforts must be concentrated on who can run for the Assembly, who can vote to put them there. This same student from Kalamazoo talks about how we can be assured that we are only going to get what we ask for? I do not know what would be his problem with it Mr. President, but I do not have any problem with it, and I am going to give a simple analogy.

If I went to the supermarket or shop, or drugstore and asked for two items and I got three, I was going to say that I asked for two, and here is the third one, no thank you. If payment was refused for the two, I would say, I cannot be bought, or I cannot be bribed, so take all of it back, and that is my position with this Constitution. Of course, simple elementary things like that Mr. President, that genius from Kalamazoo cannot understand. And while I am on it Mr. President, that is the same individual who was running around here a couple of months ago, with a petition to upset this country, the government of this country, and I believe in a letter to the Editor he talked about the political knowledge and how to manoeuvre which he had learn from his trips abroad.

Well, we must be doing something right in this country, Mr. President, and whether it is he or any other Caymanian who has spent most of his life abroad, has to come back and cut his spurs, see what makes this community tick before he can run for this Legislature, or vote for the people who will sit here. If they want to play politics, go back to where they have been living, or serve their apprenticeship here. We are not saying that they cannot run. What we are saying is that they must come and find out what makes this community tick, and that is the gist of this motion. We are not saying that no Caymanian can run. In fact we are not saying that non-Caymanians cannot run, or sit in this House. What we are saying is that in the case of the non-Caymanian, he must have achieved British Dependent Territory citizenship through his connection with the Cayman Islands.

In other words, as Members and everyone knows, the British Dependent Territory Citizenship is not something peculiar to Cayman. All Dependent Territory citizens are known as British Dependent Territory Citizens. So, unless we put in the section which said that because of his connection with the Cayman Islands, it would mean that people from Turks Islands could come here and run. And God knows, Mr. President, as I said the other day, I do not like to reflect on other countries' misfortunes, or political situation, but they are the last people we need as representatives or leaders. They could achieve it by being in Montserrat, the British Virgin Islands, or Anguilla. And they could also achieve it by a combination of residence in any of those countries, including two days in Cayman to make up the required number of years.

So, we are saying that if you want to sit in this House, you have achieved your British Dependent Territories Citizenship by connection with the Cayman Islands. You will have lived here for 15 out of the last 21 years. Mr. President, at that time Caymanians will be able to assess that person, and if he is deserving of a seat in this House, I would hope that, having met all the other qualifications which I am going to enumerate on a little later, that he would be elected.

But, he is going to cut his spurs; he is going to give us time to evaluate him; and he is going to cut his ties with any other country. He cannot come here and mess up our country and then run back home. He could if we did not have what we are putting into this motion in our constitution. Run for election, succeed, pass a Bill for example, to authorize casino gambling in the Cayman Islands, receive a couple of million dollars for having done so, and take the next plane out. I am saying that in this day and age of sophistication within these Islands, we cannot have such a situation.

I would suggest that the Compass pay close attention to what I am saying today, and then go back and write an editorial that might enlighten the people, instead of putting their own petty prejudices forward.

You know, Mr. President, the other day they bemoaned the fact, this is the Compass again in an editorial, that Government did not state its position on the National Heroes Bill. Who they talked about? Sir Gary Sobers, Garfield Sobers and some Shastran Khani or something like that. That is about what they would expect of this country, to teach them about one West Indian or one Caymanian National Hero every year. We could do better than that Mr. President. It is now being taught, and we are going to intensify the teaching of our own history in the schools, so that people who would be editors of these newspapers cannot come here and mislead the youth of this country, as they are trying to mislead us.

And now, Mr. President, I think with that introduction, I can now get down to the meat of the motion, and for the benefit of the paper, and the student from Kalamazoo, I want to say this - that instead of this motion coming back in April, I hope that we can bring the amendment to the Constitution, because we do not want it to be clouded in electioneering and political rhetoric.

I made the point ... I had said I was going into the motion Mr. President, but I have one more thing to clear up first.

I made the point that as far as I am concerned, I have no fear that I am today doing what the majority of people in this country, who have roots here, want us to do. And Mr. President, you know I like to put the record straight. I do not believe in beating around the bush, or telling Anancy stories, or half the truth. It is true that I asked the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town to second this motion, and there was precedent for that Mr. President. In 1983, when the resolutions were brought to the House to amend the Constitution at that time, it will be remembered that the motion was moved by the a Member of Executive Council in his private capacity, and it was seconded by myself, whom they considered the leader of the opposition in those days. It was to show that there was unanimity or certainly across the board support for the changes.

So, the leader of the opposition having been absent, I approached his echo, and what he told me was not that he did not agree with the motion or that he had not taken it to his people. He told me that he would probably support the motion, but his constituents would not understand him seconding a motion brought by me, and that is the truth. That is the way it went. Now I see something different in the paper, that is up to him.

As I have said, I am going now to deal with the qualifications for elected membership in the words of course, which we are asking be substantially in this form.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I wonder whether before the Member turns to the detail, it might be convenient to take a break.

HON. BENSON G. EBANKS:

Yes Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

In that case I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 11:13 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:35 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Private Member's Motion No.

5/87. Continuation of the debate. The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON G. EBANKS:

Mr. President, since the motion was moved and seconded almost a week ago, I would just like to add that the Second Elected Member for George Town has seconded the motion. He agreed to do so, and this again was because he believed in the motion and because he happens to be the most independent and unattached Member on the opposite side. And we want to show to the United Kingdom that we have reasonable and hopefully, majority support for this motion.

We have asked in the motion, Mr. President, that Section 18 of our Constitution be deleted and replaced with a new section. This section deals with qualifications of elected membership to the Legislative Assembly. As I read, I will elaborate on the various provisions as I go down and to try to explain why they are there:

"18. (1) Subject to the provisions of the next following section, a person shall be qualified to be elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly if, and shall not be qualified to be so elected unless - "

And Mr. president I am going to lump together those sections which the candidate must have, and then I will deal with the alternatives which he might have.

- "(a) he must possess Caymanian status; and
- (b) he must have attained the age of 21 years; and
- (c) he is at the date of his nomination for election domiciled and resident in the Islands; and
- (d) he must be a qualified citizen;"

A qualified citizen, Mr. President, I should step down to that section now and explain what a qualified citizen will be.

- "(2) For the purposes of subsection 1(d)" and that is the section which I have just read, he must be a qualified citizen, "a qualified citizen is a British Dependent Territory Citizen by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands, who either,
 - (a) at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship, and has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship for which he may be eligible; or
 - (b) was born outside the Islands, has or had at least one parent or grandparent who was born in the Islands," that is the Cayman Islands, "and possesses Caymanian status," that is the parent or grandparent, "(or if deceased would if alive have possessed Caymanian status at the date of nomination for election), and who at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship save for any right he may have to some other citizenship by virtue of his birth outside the Islands."

What we are saying here is that the person must have his British Dependent Territories Citizenship by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands. If that citizenship was acquired through naturalization, or birth outside the Islands, it has to be because of the time he spent here, or because his parents or grandparent was born here. We are saying that having attained British Dependent Territories Citizenship in that fashion, he must possess no other citizenship, and, in the case of those who might be eligible for another citizenship, he must have taken no steps to claim it.

Mr. President, what we are attempting to achieve here, and I think we have achieved it, is to say that if an individual, let us say, if a Caymanian marries a foreign national and the laws of that foreign country would give him the right to citizenship in that country, but he has not taken any steps to claim that citizenship, then he is not debarred from sitting in our Legislature.

In the case of someone born outside these Islands, once his connection with the Islands is through one of his parents or grandparents, having been born in the Islands, and those persons possess Caymanian status, or if deceased, if they were alive would have had status, and that he possesses no other citizenship save for any right which he may have to some other citizenship by virtue of his birth outside the Islands. This provision is here, Mr. President, because it is our understanding that citizenship by birth is a difficult thing to shed, and although the Caymanian might have been born abroad, he can spend all his life here, just like all of us have done, and we are saying that since he still has British Dependent Territories citizenship, if by birth he was entitled, or has another citizenship which he cannot get rid of, then he should not be debarred. After all Mr. President, people from this country have had through force of circumstances such as medical reasons, to have been born abroad. They had no option, or in the case even of the nature of the employment of their parents.

I should possibly state here, Mr. President, that there is already, a section in the Constitution which makes it illegal for anyone who, through his own acts, has taken, or owes allegiance to some other foreign country. So this is not changing the Constitution in that regard. We are preserving those Caymanians who, shall I say, by accident of birth, happened to have been born abroad, and cannot shed that citizenship, or the right to that citizenship.

Now, I gave the four things which the person who is going to sit, or be qualified to sit in the Legislature, must possess, and I will repeat again:

- * He must possess Caymanian Status.
- * He must have attained the age of 21 years; and
- * At the date of his nomination for election he must be domiciled and resident in the Islands; and
- * He must be a qualified citizen.

As I have explained, which is covered in subsection (2) of this section.

Now the person having those qualifications can qualify with either of two other provisions. Either:

(1) he was born in the Islands, or was born outside the Islands in the circumstances mentioned in subsection 2(b) of this section; and I read that a while ago, Mr. President; or has resided in the Islands for a period of not less than seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election and, subject to subsections (3) and (4), the number of days on which he was absent from the Islands in that period does not exceed 400, or

(2) if he was born outside the Islands, and has taken up his British Dependent Territories Citizenship which I have mentioned as being one of the requirements, and divested himself of any other citizenship that he might have had before he was naturalized. And he has resided in the Islands for a period, or periods totalling not less than fifteen years out of the twenty years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election, and in the seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination, has not been absent from the Islands for more than a total of 400 days.

So you see, Mr. President, what we are saying is that the person born outside the Islands, or born in the Islands, but who has lived for substantially all of his life abroad, must return to the Islands and reside, serve his apprenticeship of which I spoke, cut his spurs and understand what makes this community tick, for at least seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election. And he must not, except for two provisions which I will read later (I do not want to confuse the issue), the number of days on which he was absent from the Islands in that period, cannot exceed 400. So that is, the Caymanian-born or Caymanian connected person who returns to the country, he must reside for a period of seven years.

Now Mr. President, the person without Caymanian connections, the person whom the Compass calls the "non-Caymanian" that is, a person born outside the Islands, and once he has got the other mandatory requirements, including the British Dependent Territories Citizenship, by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands, he could have been born anywhere, once he has that and has cut his ties and cannot run after he has messed up our country. If he has resided here for not less than 15 years out of the 20 years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election, and in the seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination, has not been absent from the islands for more than a total of 400 days.

So that takes care of, shall I say, the non-Caymanian. But Mr. President, it is my contention that anybody who fulfills these requirements, I would be prepared to call him a Caymanian. So, we have taken care of him, that non-Caymanian whom the Compass said we were trying to exclude - he is included in here. They should come to me for a history lesson.

Now, I mentioned that the 400-day qualification had two provisos to it, and I would now read these:

"For the purposes of ascertaining whether a person has been absent from the Islands for the purposes of subsection 1(a) ..."

(that is for the period of 400 days, his residential qualification):

"any period of absence by reason of the following shall be disregarded -

- (a) attendance as a pupil at any educational establishment;
- (b) attendance as a patient at any hospital, clinic or other medical institution;
- (c) employment as a seaman aboard an ocean-going vessel; or
- (d) employment as a crew member on any aircraft."

And, a further proviso that:

"In the case of a person referred to in paragraph (e) of subsection (1)," and that is the person with Caymanian Connections, "the requirement that he shall not have been absent from the Islands for more than 400 days in the period of seven years immediately preceding his nomination for election, shall not apply if that person was, on the day immediately preceding the appointed day, qualified to be elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly."

Section 20(3) which is a consequential amendment, since one of the mandatory requirements for qualification is that the person must possess Caymanian status - Section 20(3)(c) would have to be changed to read:

"If he ceases to be a British Dependent Territories Citizen by reason of his connection with the Islands or he ceases to possess Caymanian status."

Mr. President that is double-barreled actually. It covers both the citizenship and status, not just status alone. It might be interesting Mr. President, to state here that I remember, in fact I was ... I do not know whether you would call it a sponsor or one of the references given by one of the early applicants for Caymanian status. The person was given it, and he stayed exactly two years after he got it. He got the offer of a better job in the Channel Islands, and I am not sure that he has even come back to visit us. I certainly do not get a Christmas card from him. So, if there is any regret that I have, it is that thought that my reference may have helped him get the status. Of course everybody knows that he does not have it now, because having had status and you do not stay here for five years, you automatically lose it, so he does not have it any more. But I am going to be watching the paper for his picture, if he applies again.

Section 25. Mr. President, which deals with the qualifications of electors. We are asking that that be changed in the following way:

"Subject to the provisions of the next following section, a person shall be entitled to be registered as an elector in one electoral district only but he shall not be entitled to be registered as an elector for elections to the Assembly unless -

- (a) he possesses Caymanian status and he is a British Dependent Territories Citizen by reason of his connection with the Islands, of the age of eighteen years or over; and
- (b) he is domiciled and resident in the Islands at the date of registration; and either
- (c) he or one of his parents or grandparents was born in the Islands and he has been ordinarily resident in the Islands for a period or periods amounting to two years out of the three years immediately preceding the date of registration, or
- (d) he has been ordinarily resident in the Islands for a period or periods amounting to seven years out of the nine years immediately preceding the date of registration, and in the three years immediately preceding the date of his registration has not been absent from the Islands for more than a total of 300 days."

I am, going to stop there, Mr. President, before I get on to (e), because I think these sections bear clarification.

A person can be registered as an elector, or voter, whatever we want to call him, (a) if he possesses Caymanian status, he is a British Dependent Territory Citizen by reason of his connections with the Islands at the age of eighteen years or over, and he is domiciled and resident in the Islands at the date of registration, and either he, or one of his parents or grandparents was born in the Islands, and he has been ordinarily resident in the Islands for a period or periods amounting to two years out of the three years immediately preceding the date of registration.

So you will see that the person who was born here, or was born abroad of parents, or is a person whose grandparent was born in the Islands, he can vote once he has resided in the Islands for a period or periods amounting to two years out of the three years immediately preceding the date of registration. That person, again, Mr. President, is required to come back and look at the scene for at least two years, understand what makes it tick before he casts his ballot. I think it is a generous provision, and I do not believe that any well-thinking person with a Caymanian connection will feel that he is being shafted by this provision.

In fact, if the person comes back two years before an election, he can vote. If he happens to come back immediately after an election, he can vote in the next election. He is only caught if he happens to arrive two years preceding the election. We are saying that he must have been resident here for two years to understand what makes this country tick. And as I have said, Mr. President, in spite of the differences which may be expressed from time to time in this Legislature, this Legislature and the people of the Cayman Islands must be doing something right, since we are the envy of many around us. And in fact, we have prospered and progressed to the point where many who thought that the country did not afford them the opportunity of a reasonable livelihood and education for themselves and their children, are now returning.

And I believe that they would wish to see that prosperity and harmony, and social and political stability continue. They have enough knowledge, Mr. President, to know that the situation at which we have arrived was not attained accidentally. It has been cultivated over the years, and they and we must guard it zealously.

Now in the case of the person without Caymanian connections, but having received his British Dependent Territories Citizenship by reason of his connection with the Islands. He needs to have been resident in the Islands for a period amounting to seven years out of the nine years immediately preceding the date of registration. And in the three years immediately preceding the date of his registration, he cannot have been absent from the Islands for more than a total of 300 days.

It should be simple to understand why we are more generous with the person who was born here, went away to seek a livelihood or was born abroad of persons of Caymanian parentage, to a person who was born here or that person's parent was born here. The simple reason, Mr. President is this, that there are not many people of Caymanian origin living abroad today, who do not know who all the Members of this Legislature are. Even if they do not know the individuals, they have been gone too long, they certainly, when their parents tell them "well if you do not know Benson, you remember Captain Benson". If they do not know him, they will remind them of Thomas Obediah, and they all know what stock I come from, when they tell them that, and it is true for every other Member in here. So they have a reasonable knowledge of whom they would be voting for.

So we say two years, you come back and you look over the scene. In two years you will be qualified to make up your mind whether you are going to vote for Mr. John Brown or Mr. John Dowe or whomever. But he is not at the same disadvantage in knowing the ancestry of the person for whom he is voting, as is the person who has no Caymanian connection. So, in the case of the person who has no Caymanian connection, we say that he must be resident here for seven years out of the nine years preceding the date that he is registered as a voter. In other words, he cannot come here and be taken into a little corner, and told who I am, or who the Second Elected Member for George Town, or Bodden Town is, or who the Member for Cayman Brac or the Member for North Side is, and that you must vote for him.

He will have lived here for seven years, and as someone said yesterday, I think it was in here, about rumour and was testing it out, you do not do too much in Cayman that is not known in seven years, and therefore he would be presumed to have reasonable knowledge of whom he is casting his ballot for.

So, those provisions, Mr. President, protect the future of this country as to who will vote. Now what we have also done in this section 51r, is to say:

"or, (a) he is to say that he is on the day immediately preceding the appointed day, entitled to be registered as an elector."

In other words, when, if a person is qualified under the existing Constitution and the Elections Law provisions, to vote, the day that these changes are made to our Constitution, he retains that right. Now, with the effluxion of time, the number of persons who do not have that Caymanian connection, or that residential qualification of which we talk, will gradually get smaller. And by accepting this motion and these provisions, we will have preserved the future of this country for succeeding generations.

You know, Mr. President, there is an old quotation which says, and it goes something like this:

"Breathe there a man with soul so dead,
who never to himself hath said,
this is mine own, my native land."

Those are patriotic, inspiring, blood-warming words, Mr. President, but they mean different things to different people. When I say that, or any Caymanian says that, he is talking about Cayman. When a non-Caymanian says that, nine times out of ten, he is talking about where he was born.

I went for dinner a few nights ago, Mr. President, and during and after dinner we had a little wine with the meal. And that group of people began to sing. And what did they sing? They did not sing "Beloved Isle Cayman". In fact I could tell you the truth, Mr. President, we started off by singing hymns, and when they found out that I knew more of the hymns than they did, they switched to "When Irish Eyes are Smiling" ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

A real drunken party.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

... they did not sing, Mr. President, "Beloved Isle Cayman", and you know what I did, I said "You want to hear a real Cayman song", and I sang "Munsey Boat in the Sound" for them.

HON. THOMAS JEFFERSON: remembered it.

I did not know that you

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

I finished the night by singing "Blessed be the tie that binds for them". But Mr. President, there is also another quotation which goes something like this, "God give us men, honest, strong, courageous and true", I am paraphrasing it. I hope that this is what we will show ourselves to be when dealing with this motion, and I hope that by so doing we are going to preserve the heritage of this country for our children, their children, and their children's children. Because we have evolved, as I have said, to this present position, in a gradual fashion.

We thought the Caymanian Protection Law in 1971 was sufficient protection for us, and it has served its purpose well. But the truth of the matter is, Mr. President, as the motion states, we are gradually or rapidly, whatever you want to say, becoming an endangered species in our own country. We are becoming a minority. The commerce in this country which was in the hands of Caymanians in 1971 is no longer there, and this is our last stand, our last bastion; the Government of our country, and unless we take the steps to preserve this, we will not only become an endangered species, we will be put on the extinct list.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member of Executive Council.

The Honourable Fourth Elected

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, I rise in support of Private Member's Motion No. 5/87. A motion which is requesting an amendment to the Constitution, to change the qualification of Members to the Legislative Assembly, and elect as those who would vote for Members to the Legislative Assembly.

The poet Lowell once said that "they are slaves who fear to speak". And I want to say that in this respect I am not a slave, for I have no fear of speaking, and so I will add my penny's worth to the debate on this motion.

Mr. President, a constitution in its simplest form guarantees the pursuit of happiness and the safeguard of liberty. And this is the main object of this motion being presented at this time. It is a motion to ensure to Caymanians and those who claim to be belonging to the Cayman Islands that happiness and liberty will always be the bright star in the lives of the people who live here.

Shakespeare said "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown". Now Caymanians do wear a crown, they wear a crown of happiness and liberty. Anyone who comes to live in these Islands can discover this almost immediately. They come here and they find a sort of attraction which is not found in too many places around the world. They come for a short visit, and in little or no time they are back, and this is followed by many visits. When you ask them what is the attraction they say "well we do not know, it is something hidden, but it is here". And so, Mr. President, that is the attraction which comes from what Caymanians cherish so dearly, that happiness and that liberty which enshrines their lives.

But as Shakespeare said, "uneasy lies the head that wears a crown", Caymanians are becoming quite concerned; they are becoming extremely uneasy about what the future holds for them in the way of that happiness and that liberty which we speak about. It is going to be that way if the situation regarding the qualification of those who stand as Members of the Legislative Assembly, or those who vote for Members, which is equally as important, remain unchanged. As the Honourable Member who moved this motion said, that time is drawing near when Caymanians are going to be outnumbered. And, if this situation remains unchanged for very long, Caymanians can find themselves not only in the minority, Mr. President, but probably would find themselves like the man who was preaching on a barrel, and when the spirit entered him he started to pound the barrel with his feet, and he was saying "in a little while ye shall see me, and in a little while ye shall see me no more", and at that very time the barrel head broke in with him, and out of sight he went.

This is perhaps what will happen to Caymanians if they are not prepared to make, or to take this bold step at this particular time, to safeguard their own position.

Nobody else is going to do it, we have got to do it ourselves. And, it is said that 'procrastination is the thief of time'. It is not only time, it is many other things, and if there is a job to be done, by all means, have it done, get on with it, do it now and do it quickly. And, it is with that thought in mind that this motion is now before this House.

The motion seeks to put forward that concern which the Honourable Member has just finished speaking about, the concern of true Caymanians; concern because of the uneasy situation which they see facing them in their future prospects of retaining control of this Honourable House, their Legislature. That is what the concern is about, Mr. President, and if you lose that happiness and that liberty which we speak about, and which we find in this very House, then it is going to create a lot of concern and a lot of problems for the future of these little Islands.

Mr. President, those evil days may not be too far away, and if we procrastinate, just sit around, wait and take no action, then, we might have quite a lot to regret, because we will be waiting on the time when Caymanians will be outnumbered by immigrants, as stated in paragraph two of the motion, which said:

"AND WHEREAS it is now projected that native-born Caymanians will be outnumbered by immigrants by approximately the year 1990."

It is therefore important that action be taken now to avoid those evil days. And the action that is being requested in the motion is that it be placed on persons who can vote at General Elections, and those people who can stand for election in this Honourable House; those who will seek political office in the Islands, that the redefinition of those who can be eligible be examined, and that the appropriate action be taken.

Mr. President, the motion is not unreasonable. If we look at other countries today, we will see that they too have concern for those who can govern their subjects and the necessary safeguard is built into the laws of the country to ensure that. I think that Caymanians have been free and easy for a long time. They have been so friendly to people who come here, that they have really taken no heed of their own position, their own status. And so, they just drift along being friendly and being nice to all who come here. But since this Government came to office, we found that there are many Caymanians who are concerned about the situation which this motion speaks of. They have come to Government, Caymanians, concerned Caymanians, and they have requested Government, Members who are their representatives to look into this situation, and so, this motion is not merely originating from Members of this Government. It is originating from people on the outside who have made direct representation to this Government to deal with this situation. The Government, in examining their concern and their request, have found good grounds in dealing with that concern.

And so, the Government has decided to support their case by putting this motion forward. I understand that since those representations have been made to Government, that the support for this move by Government, my Government, is being strengthened by the day. It has gathered a lot of support on the outside, from those people who are genuinely concerned about the future of this country, and the future of representation in this Legislative Assembly.

Mr. President, Caymanians do have a great amount of pride, and as we look around in the Island today, we can see the results of that pride, from what we see here; the development that has taken place over recent time. Those who visit the Island are surprised at times to see some of the things we have here. So, Mr. President, that national pride is very evident all around. Apart from that, we do need to stop at this point to carefully and honestly evaluate the concerns expressed in this motion.

The Cayman Islands is a country of immigrants. Everyone living here can trace their ancestry back to other countries. Some families have been here longer than others. Some families have been here for generations, and as a populated country, we are considered relatively young, just under 300 years if my memory of the history book serves me well. Caymanians have a great pride, too, in their ancestry. They are willing and quite happy to sit down and tell anyone at any time of their great, great, great grandparents, where they came from, and when they came here too. Some came from the United Kingdom and Ireland, some from North America, Central America and the West Indies.

In the early days life here in these Islands was fairly difficult. There was no easy communication, supplies were small, and there were a lot of drawbacks. But the people led a fairly contented life, and they developed over the years a pride, an honesty and a friendliness that seemed unmatched in our twentieth century world. Nowhere in any other country can you find that pride, that honesty and that friendliness that we find in these Islands.

Mr. President, immigrants and new citizens trickled in slowly and adapted themselves to the way of life, the morals and the attitudes of the citizens of this country. Today our vigorous economy, our easy communication and our up-to-date air travel facilities are bringing to the Cayman Islands, people from other countries, and at a very rapid rate indeed, that Mr. President, is one of the concerns today. So many people coming here! Exciting! And most of these people are coming here only for a short time, but at the end of an initial contract or visit, or whatever it may be, they want to renew their contracts, they want to extend their stay. Others like the country to such an extent that they remain as long as is possible to do so, and give the Immigration Department quite a lot of difficulty in controlling them.

Mr. President, among these new citizens are those who are contributing to society. They are making an effort to become a part of our community. It is this group of people Sir, whom we are somewhat concerned about, because they care only for the present Government policies that will keep the money flowing today, but care little about what Cayman will mean tomorrow. At this point, Mr. President, Caymanians have much to lose, and they have many to help them to lose what they have if they are not careful. Because we know what the Caymanian attitude is like we are not too certain what some of the others coming here are like.

We have much in these Islands to preserve, we have our way of life which we have cherished greatly over the years. We have the attributes which have helped to create what we have here today, the attributes which have built the cornerstone of the successes of the Cayman Islands as we see them today. And, on the other side of the coin, we do have a lot of people who are willing to help to preserve what we have today.

The motion, Mr. President, is not seeking to limit the composition of Government to Caymanians only. I think the mover of the motion has clearly indicated that in the proposed amendment to the Constitution. The term "Caymanian" is one which today defies easy definition. It is difficult to really define it because of the composition of the people who live here.

There are many families who went abroad during lean years, during the days of the depression and in times past, who lived abroad, later they returned to Cayman, they are Caymanians. There are other families, that were not born here but they have lived here for so long that they know no other country. There are those too, who have known many other homes, but think that the Cayman Islands are the greatest of any they have seen, who would like to settle here and make this their home, they never want to leave. But the point here, Mr. President, is that we cannot expect those people who have lived here for a long time, who have come and have worked amongst us, who have helped to build what we have here and who come to think of the Cayman Islands as ultimately their home, those are people who have been here a long time, and who would like some form of security of tenure, and I doubt very much if there is anyone who would deny them that.

This has to be taken into consideration in order to preserve the stability and the good growth of the social environment of these Islands. We have to be careful how we deal with people, because you know there is quite a lot of grumbling on the outside. It is a very touchy thing when you are trying to preserve something for yourself. But, we have got to preserve our rights, those of us who claim this territory, this country as our own. We have to reserve the right not to extend voting for Members of the Legislative Assembly, or the right for someone to stand for election in this country, to the qualification which is being suggested in this motion which will eventually become, we hope, a part of the Constitution.

Mr. President, I do not think it is fair and equitable for anyone who has come to these Islands on a work permit for three, four or five years, to have the right to vote in our election. I certainly do not ascribe to that. It is a gross inequity in our law for that to happen, an inequity that has bothered Caymanians for a long time, and this is what we are seeking to rectify in this motion. I believe that the Government of these Islands must lie entirely in the hands of the people who have inherited the right in these Islands to claim the Cayman Islands as their home. And, Mr. President, I do hope that goal is achieved.

We are the peoples' representatives, this motion is brought by the peoples' representatives ... I said the Government a while ago but I did not mean that. It is brought by the peoples' representatives, and we as the peoples' representatives, can only carry out their wishes. We do hope that there will be a large number of Caymanians on the outside who will support their elected representatives in putting forward this proposal. Time is becoming short to effect this change, but as I said earlier, the job has got to be done and we must demonstrate eagerness and willingness to do so. We must not procrastinate. We must secure the ability to redefine the term "non-Caymanian" and place that new definition in the Constitution so that we can restrict elective powers to those in our midst who have an active interest in these Islands, who care deeply for our country, the Cayman Islands.

Mr. President, the details of the motion have already been explained by the Honourable mover, and so there is no need for me to elaborate on the contents. I will just at this stage, Mr. President, restate again that I very strongly support this motion.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

We have actually gone a little bit longer than the normal break time for lunch, so at this time I will suspend proceedings until approximately two fifteen.

AT 12:40 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:19 P.M.

THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER PRESIDING

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.
Continuation of the debate on amended Private Member's Motion No. 5/87. The Elected Member for East End.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Mr. President, the Member presenting the motion which is before the House has taken time to go in depth in explaining to us the importance of this motion, and for this I am very grateful. However Mr. President, I support the idea behind Private Member's Motion No. 5/87 but I must say I cannot support the motion as it is drafted. I believe that every Member in this Honourable House agrees with the idea, but in some ways, we are not satisfied with the motion as it is. I believe Sir, that we are going about this matter in the wrong way, and I would urge that further study be put into this.

I wish to commend the Young Businessmen's Association. I feel that their efforts in this matter are good ones. However, we must go about it, as I have said, in the right way. Change in the Cayman Island's Constitution has always been a touchy subject, Mr. President, and I would urge that we take caution as we enter into this venture.

Since the last election, in 1984, I did give to the Governor of these Islands my views on whom I thought should be eligible to stand for election in these Islands. Mr. President, this is how strongly I felt about it from then, and today I still feel strongly about who should be eligible to sit in this Assembly and represent our people. At that time, I stated that I felt the political destiny of these Islands should be in the hands of our Caymanian people. It should be a born Caymanian of born Caymanian parents, that is how strongly I felt about it. And, I am certain that many will agree with me and many will disagree with me, but those are my views.

I believe, that if the necessary steps are not taken now, come the Elections of 1988, we can consider putting our Islands into the hands of the unknown. There are no two ways about it Sir, this has surfaced before, and I am certain it will surface again. I believe, as a previous speaker has said, it is our last opportunity to do something about it, and to try to protect the future of our children and their children. I would say that parts of our Constitution are like what Thomas McCauley once said of the United States Constitution and I quote, "Your Constitution is all sail and no anchor." I believe that the time is now for us to anchor our Constitution and to anchor it in favour of the people of these Islands.

The big question, Mr. President, is how should this be done? As I have stated, I fully support the idea, but I disagree with having a Petition drafted to Her Majesty the Queen. I do not think that this is the correct way of going about it. Furthermore, Mr. President, I believe we would have been much further ahead had we sat in the Conference Room for a few days and knocked our heads together, and had come back to the floor of the House here as a united front, rather than having to stand in here and to more or less waste time in debating what could have easily been thrashed out in Committee Stage.

I feel that the Governor of these Islands should acquaint the Foreign and Commonwealth Office with regard to the various proposals in this motion. I would think that the right course would be for us to invite a delegation to come down and to meet with us, to meet with the people of these Islands and to try to solve this problem which we seem to have with our Constitution. I believe, Sir, that that would be a much better approach, rather than going the forceful way of a Petition. There are no two ways about it, Government has in the past, sought advice on other matters. I would say matters that are not as important as the one before us now, and I feel that it is only right that we should also seek advice on this very important issue.

Some years ago, Mr. President, there were certain things said with regard to changing the Constitution, which I believe made it abundantly clear that if the Constitution was tampered with, it would give Her Majesty's Government an opportunity to do what they saw fit, or what they wanted to do. The Member who presented this motion, in his presentation, gave an example of a person going into a store and buying one item, and he referred to the person being given two, and he would put one back and say no thanks. I believe that this is a poor example, because as the Member rightly knows, this is a much more complicated case than going to a store to buy an item.

We have our hands in the mouth of a lion as it is said, and I think we have to go the correct way to have it removed. There is no way that anybody can convince me that if the Mother Country hands down something to us, especially concerning our Constitution, that any Member of Government will be able to say we do not want this, and that that is going to make an immediate difference. I believe that if Mother Country gives us something in the Constitution, it will be as it was before, regardless of whether it is suitable to each and everyone in these Islands, we will just have to accept it, and I found the example given very misleading.

As a layman, Mr. President, I can see in this motion many areas that will create problems, and already many have been pointed out. I have been very concerned over sections 18(1), (2) and (3). It seems to me that in these areas there are already visible amendments necessary. In Section 18(1)(e) I believe a provision should be made for potential Caymanian candidates who spend time abroad due to medical treatment, employment or for educational reasons, and this would not exclude them from the 400 days of absence. It is my understanding that the mover intends to make some amendments, and it is my hope that if the motion is not withdrawn, at least we will try our endeavours to tidy it up as much as possible.

I believe that with an issue as important as this one, it should also have been taken to open pole. We utilize the radio for other issues, we have the programme Open Line, and each and everyone who is interested can air their queries or whatever, and I believe as I have said, that with an issue like this, it should have been handled through Open Line, and this would have given us a fair idea of what the cross-section of the people in these Islands would like.

Mr. President, it has been the wish of the majority of the people to remain a British Crown Colony, be it good or be it bad, I guess that is not for me to judge. And although I have my own opinion on this, I will reserve that at this time. I feel that if at any time the majority sees something wrong with their Constitution it should be sent in the manner I have suggested to Her Majesty's Government, and it is my belief that it will be looked at and corrected, rather than having to take the route which is now being suggested.

I would like to say again, Mr. President that I too am very concerned about the political future of these Islands, and the idea I support wholeheartedly. The only problem I have is with the present way it is being put forward. I appeal to those presenting this motion, to let us take a little more time, let us withdraw the motion, let us give it further study, let us get more input from the people of these Islands, and let us do it the correct way.

Mr. President, I support the idea, but I cannot support the motion as is.

(THE PRESIDENT PRESIDING AT 2:21 P.M.)

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member of Executive Council.

The Honourable Second Elected

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, I rise to support Private Member's Motion No. 5/87 seeking approval for this Honourable Legislative Assembly to petition Her Majesty's Government for an amendment to Sections 18 and 25 of the Cayman Islands Constitution, dealing with the qualification of Members of the Legislative Assembly, and electors.

As the mover has requested, I will attempt to treat this important motion with the statesmanship that it deserves. It can perhaps be said that this is a big bold step into the future, but at the same time, it must be acknowledged that it is a necessary step at this time.

The Cayman Islands are no longer the "Islands time forgot". By God's help, prudent planning, sound decisions and the ambition of the Caymanian people, today we have a progressive country with a buoyant economy, a high standard of living and generally a happy, hospitable population which is the envy of many countries. But we cannot take these fine assets for granted, and it is Government's task and our responsibility to strive to maintain that enviable position. It is indeed a compliment to all Caymanians, and to these Islands that conditions are so favourable that many who come here to visit or to work like it, and they wish to remain in many cases.

But with due respect to all concerned, it is my view that we must continue to be selective as to with whom we wish to share our country. We must find a way to protect the inherent rights of Caymanians without becoming over protective. One can call it a delicate balancing act if you may, but this is essential to the future peace and harmony of these Cayman Islands. Yes, time has indeed brought its changes, and the transformation of our country is bound to continue, hopefully on a sure and steady course. It is true that in the process, we have seen Cayman and the Caymanian way of life transformed into a more modern and materialistic life-style, where things Caymanian are fast fading into the past.

For 20 years and possibly more, past politicians in pursuit of doing what they deemed was best for their country, outstanding members of our community in the private sector, the majority of the public in general have long expressed the concern that the election process can one day place persons in our Legislature who are not intimately associated and strongly connected with the Cayman Islands. To be frank and fair, individuals whom Caymanians do not consider and accept as being true Caymanians, and who are therefore not deemed to have an inherent right to stand as a candidate for election to our Legislative Assembly.

And of equal concern is for those who should have the right to cast their votes, and thereby influence the outcome of a General Election. Local persons and representatives of various organizations have personally expressed to me recently, and in the past, their concern about these possibilities, and the need to put in place safeguards which would prevent an unacceptable situation from developing in these Islands.

I have read reports dating back several years wherein Select Committees have, in the past, made recommendations designed to modify the qualifications both for candidates and for voters, in favour of persons of Caymanian origin. So this is nothing new, Mr. President. There has always existed and still does, a growing concern which becomes greater as our country grows and develops. When we examine this closely, we find that this has been a nagging concern that will not go away, and so once again Legislatures in 1983 made an attempt at change, and certain changes were requested from Her Majesty's Government, and were in fact made to Sections 18 and 25 dealing with qualifications for elected membership, and qualifications of electors. These changes became effective in 1984, but these changes now need to be more securely fastened and tightened up, and so today, we have before this Honourable House an important motion, important to Cayman, its people and our future.

The details of the motion have been very ably dealt with by the mover, and at this time I too would like to put forward my understanding of what the proposed changes are intended to accomplish.

In order to qualify to be elected as a Member, there is a tightening up proposed in Section 18 which clearly establishes beyond any doubt, that Members to this Honourable House will be only those persons who are Caymanians, whose roots are not only planted but grounded in these Islands, whose ancestry can be traced to these Islands, and who hold no acquired rights by their own volition to citizenship of any other country. In other words Mr. President, he or she must be fully committed to this country, their stakes must be here and their lot must be fully cast in the Cayman Islands, now and in the future.

Firstly, to be elected as a representative of the people, a person must be at least 21 years of age, and must have Caymanian status. He must be domiciled and resident in the Cayman Islands. He must be a British Dependent Territories Citizen by virtue of his Caymanian connection, and he must either be a Caymanian citizen and nothing else, and have taken no steps to claim any other citizenship to which he might be entitled. All those conditions must be met. Or, if he was born outside the Islands, at least one parent or grandparent must have been born in these Islands, and must possess Caymanian status, and the candidate at the date of his nomination for election must hold no other citizenship save for one given to him by birth in a foreign country.

Mr. President, this recognizes the long established connection and custom where many times out of necessity, due to medical or other reasons, persons of Caymanian parentage are born abroad. This protects their inherent rights which are also conditioned to the fact that that category of individual with strong Caymanian connections must also spend at least seven years before the date of his nomination for election, and provided that his absence from the Islands during that period of seven years does not exceed 400 days, unless his absence from the Island was for the purposes of education, medical or employment abroad as a seaman or as aircraft crew.

It should be pointed out here that rights have been preserved in subsection (4) of section 18 where it is stated that the 400-day requirement shall not apply to those persons who qualified prior to the effective date of this amendment. It is also worthy of note here, that if a person was born in the Islands, or if born abroad, providing he has a Caymanian parent or grandparent, then he is allowed to be absent for more than 400 days, if as stated earlier, for studying abroad or if employed as a seaman or aircraft crew, or for medical reasons outside the Cayman Islands.

Provision has also been made in subsection (f) of 18(1) for the person born outside the Islands, of no Caymanian connection. In other words, who has no claim by descent, but who has resided here for at least 15 years out of 20, and who, in the seven years preceding the date of his nomination was not absent for more than 400 days. However, this category of person must also satisfy the requirements of possessing Caymanian status, must be domiciled and resident in the Cayman Islands, and he must be a qualified citizen as defined.

Now turning to those who are allowed to vote in a General Election. He must first have Caymanian status, and must be a British Dependent Territories Citizen through his Caymanian connection. He must be domiciled and resident in the Islands, and he, or one of his parents or grandparents must be born in the Islands and he has been resident for two out of three years before the date of his registration as a voter. Those conditions must be in place. And, as the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council said earlier this morning, I honestly feel that persons who come here who are on work permits, even though it might be for several years, should not be able to influence the outcome of a General Election in this country. The conditions for electors which I mentioned earlier must be in place, or if neither he nor his parent nor grandparent were born in Cayman, then he must have been resident for seven years out of nine, and in the three years before his date of registration as a voter, must not have been absent from the Islands for more than 300 days. Plus, he must possess Caymanian status and be a British Dependent Territory Citizen through his Caymanian connections, and be domiciled and resident in the Islands.

These are all conditions that must be met and are a substantial tightening up of the qualifications. It is also worthy to note that provisions have been made here for the existing rights of voters to be protected.

So, Mr. President, this motion quite rightly deals with three categories: (1) those who are Caymanian by birth; (2) those who can trace their ancestry and have their roots in the Cayman Islands, or those who were born abroad of Caymanian parentage, and (3) those who cannot claim those Cayman connections, but who have resided here for a long period of time and who have made a contribution to our country. I feel that this is fair, reasonable and equitable.

Mr. President, our country is small, sensitive and susceptible to change, and would not really take long to reach saturation point. It is not the least bit unusual for a country of our size and composition, dependent to a great extent on outside labour and experiencing a substantial population growth - it is not unusual for them to ensure that the legislative process remains in the hands of its sons and daughters of the soil. Much larger countries have had to take the necessary steps to preserve and maintain this position, even the Mother Country and I refer to the British Nationality Act of 1981. In my view, this is a safeguard against their country being overrun by foreign nationals who could someday direct the course of their country, and they are a much larger country than we are.

To recognize that while our economic growth and development has been and remains dependent on the outside investor, Caymanians rightly expect to remain in political control so that stability and a proper balance in our country is maintained. These measures are intended to achieve this, and to ensure that the harmonious relationship is always maintained and recognized as a two-way street.

I believe that investors will welcome this change. Investors need political stability, and anything that tends to strengthen this, provides confidence, security and good faith in Government.

The objection expressed in some areas that an approach to the United Kingdom for changes in sections 18 and 25 to our Constitution might result in other Constitutional changes being thrust on us, seems totally unfounded. This did not happen, and was not the case in 1983 when a similar change was requested and made, and it is my view that the United Kingdom would not suddenly seize this as an opportunity to force other unnecessary, unwarranted and unwanted changes upon the Cayman Islands. This has not been their practice, and neither would it be acceptable. Caymanians have always held and maintained an intense loyalty towards the Crown. This still remains the case today, and should remain so far into the future for therein lies the keys to our stability and success. I will only repeat here and now what I have said many times before, and that is that under no circumstances whether in or out of this Honourable House, will I, as a Caymanian, support any moves that would take the Cayman Islands into full internal self government or independence.

Mr. President, this concern that I mentioned is not unfounded, it is genuine, it exists and it must be directly addressed because it stems today from the same continuing conditions which created it in the first place, and that is, that Caymanians can in due course, be placed at a serious political disadvantage and become a minority in our own country through economic development and an escalating population growth rate which is needed to service and support that development on which we depend. Up until 1979 and taken over a nine-year period, our rate of growth stood at six per cent, and interestingly enough, the population growth rate by origin over that period of time established that the growth rate for Caymanians was five per cent - whereas the growth rate for non-Caymanians stood at nine per cent.

Without wishing to become bogged down in statistics, if one analyses the population growth rate for 1979 to 1985 it will be found that the proportion of non-Caymanians to total population rose from 19 per cent in 1979 to 31 per cent in 1985. This is considerable, Mr. President. And as the motion states, even with assuming a very conservative rate of growth, and with reasonable controls in place, to keep the ratio of Caymanians versus non-Caymanians at an acceptable level, even in spite of these checks and balances, native-born Caymanians will be outnumbered by approximately the year 1990, through the Immigration process.

Mr. President, our country must continue to grow and develop at an orderly pace. We will, for a long time into the future, be dependent on outside forces for certain levels of labour. Our economy is dependent on investor confidence, and in order for this to continue, we must maintain stability and harmony in our society. And I see the proposed amendments to our Constitution as one step in the right direction, and towards maintaining those elements so vital to our continued success.

I am proud to be a Caymanian. I am proud of the Cayman Islands. We have a country of which we can all be justly proud, and we must strive now to keep it that way. Prevention is better than cure, and therefore it is only prudent and wise at this stage in our development to provide the proper safeguards that would prevent an unacceptable and unpalatable situation from developing in our Cayman Islands.

In conclusion, Mr. President, this motion is timely, necessary and important, and to borrow a few words from a model constitution, "bearing no malice or ill will to anyone," but wishing to preserve the position of Caymanians which will allow us to maintain our rightful roles in our own native land, and look to the future with confidence and faith.

I give this motion my full support. Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Does any other Member wish to speak? The Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
Mr. President, I support Private Member's Motion No. 3/87. In saying that I support the motion I have to make my position clear. My position has been and shall be, that to sit in this Honourable House you should be a second-generation Caymanian, that is plain and simple; born in the Cayman Islands of at least one Caymanian parent. But, Mr. President, half a loaf is better than no loaf at all. Since I could not sell that to the majority of Members in the Assembly, I will support the motion before us.

The mover of the motion said that the motion was intended, or seeking to exclude non-Caymanians from the Assembly, except in a particular case under (f) of section 18(1) of the motion. Now, I was willing and did modify my position to where I would support people of Caymanian ancestry, not born in this country, after having met other qualifications which are contained in this motion, to be Members of the Assembly. But I cannot in true spirit support subsection (f) because, Sir, I believe we will always be able to find people born in these Islands, or born outside the Islands, of Cayman ancestry, to fill this Chamber.

While we are allowing these people who meet this qualification to seek office, I believe they will have a hard time getting elected because the voter in this country is becoming more and more sophisticated, and more and more aware of what is and is not going on in the country. Elections in the future, I do not believe will be determined as much by who knows who, as the connections might have been in the past, as they will be on one's ability and merit to hold the office.

Now, Mr. President, some Members have said and I assume others will say, that we have no mandate from the people to make this Constitutional change. I can say Sir, without fear of successful contradiction that I have such a mandate, because in my manifesto on which I was elected in 1984, I clearly stated that I would not seek any change to our present constitutional status quo, and at no time would seek independence for the Cayman Islands. This motion does not do that, Sir. I also said in my manifesto Sir, "finally I must state that social justice, fair play, the dignity of the people and a stabilizing influence in government and society will be our aim and aspiration".

Now, Mr. President, I am concerned about the danger which we Caymanians are in, in the political process in our country and I would subscribe to what the mover said, in that I believe we have already become outnumbered in our own country by voters, or at least there are enough out there to unduly influence an election and cause people whom the true-born Caymanian might not like to see representing them in this Assembly.

I support the conditions as laid down in section 18 that they must possess Cayman status, attain the age of 21, be a qualified citizen, born in the islands. I have voiced my reservations regarding (f). I support the definition of the qualified citizen, but the only thing that concerns me Sir, and I am now saying, maybe we are in an unfortunate position in that there are some people who are now in the position to qualify even under all of these requirements, to run and get elected in this country. What further concerns me, Sir, is that even though they may take up the additional requirement of the British Dependent Territories Citizen as is defined, and a qualified citizen, give up their British Citizenship if necessary, to take up British Dependent Territory Citizenship - the only thing that precludes them from being regranted their British Citizenship by the Secretary of State on a similar application for it, after they have got elected to office in my country and ruined it in some form or fashion - the example given by the mover of casino gambling is a good one - they could simply request to have their British Citizenship reinstated, and go back to England unless they had gone mad in the process. And as I have said, while there may be nothing that we can do at this stage, maybe the electorate will be wise enough, I hope, not to elect those people who could qualify and who could then go back to England and get their British Citizenship.

Mr. President, I have no apologies to make to any of these people for supporting this motion before the Assembly today, or in stating that I believe only people born in the Cayman Islands of at least one Caymanian parent should sit here, because in 1981 when the British Government wanted to stop the threat of the East Indians and to some extent, the West Indians and the Africans in their country, they did not write to Ezzard Miller and ask him if he would like to be a British Dependent Territories Citizen or a British Citizen. They told me I was going to be a British Dependent Territories Citizen, and that was it. I feel that this is my land, this is the land of my children and their children, I have an obligation to protect it for them, and I think we are making a step in the right direction.

I have nothing against these people coming here and enjoying themselves, we welcome them to our shores to enjoy the fruits of our development. In many instances, some of them have contributed to our development. But Sir, they did not do that for my benefit, they did it for their own benefit, and they have reaped the fruits of the fields that they have sown during the development process, and I see no reason why we should continue to remain in the danger that they may one day, not only control the commerce in our country as they do now, because if you look around you Sir, you will see that they come here as lawyers, accountants, bankers and as soon as they get Caymanian Status then they start developing swimming pool service companies, and they take over gardening services, and they start opening dress shops downtown, etcetera, etcetera.

I have nothing against these people, as I have said, reaping the benefits of the development that they have assisted with, but I see and I feel that I have no obligation whatsoever to allow these people to influence the political direction of this country, or to do with me what the Europeans did to the North American Indians. They are not going to put me on any reservation up on Eastern Old Man Bay Sir, and I agree with the mover, this is our last stand. Of course, as I said in the beginning, I would prefer it had we stood up a little stronger, because the motion is a little bit watered down from the way I would like to see it, but we have to take the stand now, and I am prepared to take that stand.

Mr. President, in 1983, amendments were made which narrowed it down the number of people who could qualify to vote, and the people who could qualify to sit in the Assembly. This is the only reservation I have about this motion that is before us today, is that we are simply only narrowing it again. I believe that the day is going to come when we are going to have to bring a motion back and say you have to be born here in order to sit in this Assembly. A lot of people who are trying and searching around for reasons to give you as to why we should not do this, and are using the example which the mover did of the United States, in that it is the greatest melting pot of nationalities, or certainly the most successful one in terms of economic development of any country in the world. But to be President of the United States you have to be born there or born of a citizen of that country.

This Legislative Assembly, our Parliament, is the highest office at this time in our Constitutional development, and that is why I feel the same way. Mr. President you know, there is an old "saying you can take the man out of a country, but you cannot take the country out of the man". We can bring them here and they can meet all these qualifications, but they are not really going to be like us, and they are not really going to think like us, they are going to think as if they were back home.

Another argument that I have heard some of the opposers to this motion put forward, is that we should put no great faith in the figures that were revealed in the draft Economic Plan. But Mr. President, those figures are straight forward mathematical computations based on facts that exist today. And the argument that they try to give me is that we have already in this country controls such as the Caymanian Protection Board, so that if we do not want to be outnumbered, all we have to do is to stop giving work permits, and stop doing this and stop giving that. But it is not possible, Mr. President, it is not a reality, we cannot stop the economic train of development in this country, and hold it in positions a, b or c until Caymanians can catch up with it in numbers or otherwise.

The people of the country are demanding of the Government more and more services. The country is progressing, we have to educate our people more and more every year for them to fulfill and take over positions of importance in our country. We have to provide increased medical benefits and a lot of these things, Mr. President, are not just wants for the people, so that we can say that they are not really needs, we can stop the train and not provide it, and give it to them. And then they tell me that the only reason we are making this amendment is that we all want money. Money is not the determining factor Sir, money is only the grease that makes the wheels on the train turn. So I do not subscribe to that argument that we already have in place in the Caymanian Protection Law sufficient provisions to stop those people from taking over this country and putting us on a reservation as they did in North America. And I think this motion is a step in the right direction to stop it.

I think it is needed, I think that without it we are going to lose the political stability, the social stability and the economic stability that this country has, because Caymanians, you know, will take a lot, you can push them a lot, but now when they are ready to retaliate, they are going to retaliate a lot. Our people have been under a lot of pressure economically and otherwise in this country over the last decade to keep abreast with the development. If we tell them that in the next decade they are not even going to control what happens in their own country, I do not think they are going to accept that. I believe that if we as Legislators are not prepared to take the necessary step, if it means amending the Constitution as it does in this case, so be it, it has to be done. As my good friend the Second Elected Member for West Bay reminded all of us of this morning, Moses broke up the tablets when he brought them down from the mountain the first time, so even those had to be reconstructed. So, if we have to change the Constitution administratively to allow for safeguards like this to be built in, it is a responsibility on us to do so.

Now Sir, we have also heard a lot about us not going about it the right way. If this is not the right way, I do not know what the right way is, and maybe somebody will enlighten me. As for the other argument about us not having taken it to the people, that is the fault of the individual politician who has not done so, because he has had the time. I took it to my people in my constituency; I had a public meeting and I did not have one single person that dissented from what is in this motion. Caymanians understand what this is all about, they understand that we are talking about their children's future and their own future, and they understand that it is being done to protect us and their children. Anybody who goes out there and tries to tell them otherwise and make them believe that if you go and ask for this, England is going to dump a whole calabash of vegetables on your lap, it is doing a misservice and a disservice to the country, because they cannot give us anything that we do not ask for, we do not have to accept it.

MR. PRESIDENT:

If the Member has reached a pause in his speech unless he is very near the end, I wonder if it would be convenient now to take our afternoon break?

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: I will probably speak for another five hours Sir, so we will take a break.

MR. PRESIDENT: Very well. I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 3:25 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:39 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated.
Continuation of the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 5/87. The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, lest it be misconstrued, let me read what 18(1)(f) says, which I have said that I do not support. 18(1)(f) says:

"he was born outside the Islands, has resided in the Islands for a period or periods totalling not less than fifteen years out of the twenty years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election and in the seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination has not been absent from the Islands for more than a total of 400 days."

Now Mr. President, as I have said, I do not believe that we have to go that far to look for able people to serve in this Assembly. And while I am grateful as I have said, for what contributions such people have made to the economic development of this country, I believe that they themselves have benefited economically and otherwise from their contributions to this country. I do not believe that it should give them any right, whether they have been here fifteen years or fifty years, to be in a position to make political decisions as to the direction this country might take in the future.

There has been filed an amendment to this section of the requirement of 400 days. Now Mr. President, here again, I cannot with a clear conscience support that amendment because if serving Members of the Legislative Assembly have not been resident on the Island, or have been absent from the Island for that long a period of time then they are not doing their job as representatives, and I do not see where we need to make any special dispensation or provision for them under the Law. But as I have said in the beginning, Mr. President, this motion does not narrow the scope of people who can stand in this Assembly, as much as I would like to see it narrowed. But in the absence of being able to successfully pilot such a motion, and I must say Mr. President, that if this motion had not come in this meeting, my motion was going to be tabled, and the mover is well aware of that, because I appraised him of the motion, and that motion simply said that to sit in the Assembly you had to be born in Cayman, of Cayman parents.

But as usual Sir he has a lot of advice for you, and sometimes he is right and sometimes you have to let it go in through one ear and come out through the other one, he is only passing it on to you. In this case he might be right in his cautious approach, and this motion does achieve some of what I was trying to achieve in the motion that I was going to table, so I can support the motion. Mr. President, I believe that the mover and the contents of this motion have been generous to these people who have migrated to our shores, and would like to govern; because section 25(e) says "that he is on the day immediately preceding the appointed day, entitled to be registered as an elector". So all those people who could vote in 1984 will still be able to vote in 1988.

Mr. President, when I said I was going to speak for five hours, I had intended to use up all the notes of the Second Elected Member for George Town, but he has come back and has discovered that I have taken his notes, so I will not be able to speak for as long as I would have liked, because I know he is only waiting on me to speak, in order to get up and talk about that radical from North Side only wanting people born in Cayman to sit in the Assembly. But I was quite pleased yesterday to see that he had modified his position somewhat, and he now thinks that I am beginning to learn and had done a good job.

But, as I was saying, I do not see where these people have anything to complain of, because here again and as forthright as I like to be Sir, I am going to be straight with you and tell you that the motion that I was going to bring was also going to clean up the voters list because I wanted them taken off the voters list as well. I did not want it grandfathered back for them, but again, maybe I do have some reservations supporting legislation which might tend to remove the rights of individuals which they had previously enjoyed. So in this case I will support those who are on the voters list who should not be on the voters list, but since they are on there, they had the right in 1984, I think they should be allowed to vote in 1988. After this motion is passed, those people will remove themselves by the process of death and attrition if by no other way. So I think if we can prevent any more getting on the voters list, then as I have said, we have made a step in the right direction.

Mr. President, I agree with the mover of the motion that this is an issue which should be treated with statesmanship, with honesty and integrity, and putting politics aside. Mr. President, I have been honest, I have been forthright in stating my position. I support this motion because I could not successfully pilot a motion through the Assembly which would have limited legislators to those people born in the Cayman Islands, of at least one Caymanian parent, and I fully realize that this motion does put the future generations in this country in a much better position than they are in today, and I therefore support the motion before the House.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member of Executive Council.

The Honourable Third Elected

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, it is not my intention to prolong the debate as there is very little that I can add to what has been presented to the House by the Honourable Member presenting the motion.

However Sir, I wish to associate myself with the intent of the motion, and I support it to the fullest. I helped to formulate the motion and I honestly believe that it is in keeping with the wishes of my people to have their own Caymanians govern and determine the destiny of our Islands, and to decide who can vote here. The two areas of concern are the qualification of Elected Members and the qualification of electors. This concern of course is not new. The Rt. Hon. the Earl of Oxford and Asquith when he was here in 1971, found that our people were worried about this very problem. In his report he said:

"Fear that Caymanians long established in the Islands might come to be at a political disadvantage in relation to immigrants and also in relation to Caymanians who had been living for many years abroad, but might now return to the colony, attracted by its increased prosperity."

That fear today is no longer a fear Sir, it is fast becoming a reality. Time is of the essence and we must act now to protect ourselves, all native-born Caymanians and those who are now fully qualified and committed to our Islands. We have been told that by the year 1990, Caymanians will be outnumbered in their own country. We must therefore stand firm together, united with one resolve to solve this grave problem. It has been said that the most dangerous of all days is when a man discovers how easy it is to talk about tomorrow. The gate must be closed now before the horses get out. We are not trying to do anything that would harm or hurt the expatriate living and working here. Their rights must be protected and respected. However, we are determined to be masters of our own destiny and chart the future course of our Islands without fear, favour or interference. This motion does not seek to exclude people of non-Caymanian origin, but it clearly sets down what they will have to do to qualify.

In 1981 the United Kingdom passed the British Nationality Act 1981, to protect their country and its people, and we are trying through this motion to protect our people. I believe that the United Kingdom will be sympathetic and support what we are trying to achieve now. The stability of our Islands depends on harmony and goodwill, and the passing of this motion will go along way to achieving this goal. We are no longer the Island that time forgot, we are very much in the forefront, especially in the international world of finance, and I hope we will remain there. We must preserve the future of these Islands for the continued enjoyment and comfort of our children and our children's children. I believe this motion when passed will achieve what we hope it will, and as I said at the beginning Mr. President, I would not belabour or delay this debate any longer, as I do not feel I can add anything to what has already been said. Therefore, Mr. President, I would like to state that I support this motion fully.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

I was hoping, Mr. President, to have got some of the other Members up by going to the coffee room, but it seems that I would have missed my turn here today, which I would not want to do.

The motion before us today is, needless to say, a most timely and important motion as it deals with a matter which is near and dear to the hearts of Caymanians. Private Member's Motion No. 5/87 is a motion which is requesting that this Honourable Legislative Assembly petition Her Most Gracious Majesty to change the Cayman Island's Constitution Order 1972 with respect to qualifications of Members of the Legislative Assembly and electors.

Firstly, Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the Young Caymanian Businessmen's Association for their invaluable assistance rendered to the Government in this issue, and for spearheading the move for the changes contemplated in the motion.

I was asked by some Members of the House, not by my constituents, as to why I seconded this motion. And my answer was simply that I seconded the motion in the interest of the people of the Cayman Islands, and I wish to congratulate the mover, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council for the strength of his convictions in bringing this sensitive issue to the House at this time.

Mr. President, before going into my debate, from the letters I have seen in the newspaper and from the editorials I have seen in the Compass, I wonder whether the interests of the writers are in the best interest of the people of this country. Over the Christmas holidays I heard a story which was in the form of a joke, and I do not intend to be trite on a matter which is as serious as the one before us, but it seems so apropos of this issue that I could hardly let it pass because it tends to highlight the need for good common sense by some of the people, especially some of the qualified lawyers that come back to this country feeling that they are God's gift to the intelligentsia of the Cayman Islands. And this joke, Mr. President, was with three individuals who were on the Wheel of Fortune, and one was a Cayman lawyer, a young Cayman lawyer just returning, I do not know which country it was, I heard a number of countries mentioned here today, but I am not sure from what university, and there was an Englishman and an American, and he was asked the question for the first part of the prize which was $10,000, the big prize was $1.0 million. The Englishman was asked the first part, he was supposed to complete the sentence, so the person on the Wheel of Fortune said "I want you to complete the sentence and you will win $10,000", so he said to the Englishman "Old Macdonald had a...." and the Englishman said "a plantation, of course". The man said "no, no you are wrong", and he turned to the American and he said "Old Macdonald had a....." and the American said "an estate of course", and the man said "no", but the little Caymanian lawyer was there clipping his fingers, so anxious to give the right answer, so he turned to the Caymanian lawyer and said "Old Macdonald had a...." and the Caymanian lawyer said "a farm". The chap said "correct, $10,000 is yours. Now for the big question, how do you spell farm". The Caymanian lawyer so anxious to answer said "e i o".

Well, Mr. President, this is exactly the point I am making. Some of these chaps have the answers, but they do not have the common sense to apply it, and this is what is happening to a lot of our lawyers on the Island.

Now, I want to make reference to a letter which appeared in the issue of the Compass of Tuesday, 10th February 1987, and it was captioned "Caution Urged on Speaker", and I will not deal with that, we have dealt with it even though, in my opinion, not successfully, and "Constitutional Amendments Motions".

Now Mr. President, when one reads this letter, it tends to insult the intelligence of the people of the Cayman Islands. We see here "Caution" we see here "Caymanians", what is the definition of a Caymanian? Well if this young man who is writing this article does not know the definition of a Caymanian, then I wonder why he is even addressing this subject. I would have thought that with his intelligence he would have known the definition of a Caymanian, as he purports to be a Caymanian. The other section, Mr. President, he stated here, as I noted in a letter published in the paper of 2nd September, 1986:

"'no constitutional change' was a popular slogan of successful candidates in the General Elections of 1976, 1980 and 1984, thus as I see it a clear mandate for constitutional change should come from either new General Elections or a referendum."

And he went on, Mr. President, in the usual, lengthy manner that he adopts for his letter writing. I will not go into these details. But I would like to make it quite clear here that I am not seeking any constitutional change that would lead to any form of full internal self-Government, or ultimate independence for these Islands, and this is the impression that is being given by this individual and a number of other people associated with him here in the Cayman Islands, that constitutional change necessitates a move to independence. This is not so. I said in my political manifesto for the General Election in November, 1984 and I quote:

"I am against any constitutional changes designed to lead us into internal self-Government, and ultimately, independence for these Islands."

Mr. President, my position has not changed. As a matter of fact it has been reinforced, and my position today is as then, that we need no constitutional advancement to the state where we would be seeking independence. I want to make that abundantly clear.

In yesterday's issue of the Caymanian Compass we see where they were dealing with the issue of the Constitution and possible amendments. Mr. President, it seems somewhat contradictory that they would write on a subject regarding the change in Constitution, and in the same paper they have admitted that the motion for constitutional change was amended to satisfy the same matter that they are dealing with in the editorial. To me, it would seem somewhat mischievous for the papers to be doing this. And on this subject, Mr. President, I am not at all afraid to speak against what I see as a biased attitude of the paper. I have said this in the House here before, and I have been taken to task in their papers, but I want the listening public to know that the papers will not intimidate me, and I want them to listen to the broadcast in this House, and compare it to what is being placed in the papers.

I have sat here in the House, I have debated subjects, but the papers will slant it in any direction that suits them. One only has to look at the reporting they have done for this sitting of the House, and one will see they take a very slanted and biased approach. During my Throne Speech I mentioned briefly that I did not support capital punishment, but I dealt with very important issues such as the necessity for a multi-storey car park and many other issues, but the only thing that the Compass could find to write, was that Linford Pierson says abolish hanging. This is the sort of reporting that is intended to discredit people in the Cayman Islands, and you can use the truth sometimes to discredit an individual, if you slant it in the wrong way.

I want the public to know that if they want to get the facts regarding my stewardship, or what I have said in this House that they should listen to the broadcasts, because it is verbatim, and not pay any attention to what is placed in the papers, because the papers print what they want to print, and what suits them. On that issue I want the people to know that my personal conviction is what it was, and I am not going to deal with this in any length, but that if it is their wish, that this matter not be pushed by me regarding capital punishment, their will will be followed closely by me, and I will not be pushing this issue any further. A lot of people said yes, they want it, a lot of people said no, they want no change. So if this is the way the paper feels, that they will discredit me, they are doing it in the wrong way. Even on matters raised here in the House. All you see is that Linford Pierson, MLA for George Town supported the issue or did not support it. You do not see one quotation made, yet other Members who come up and speak after I do in this House, and quote exactly what I say, they are quoted verbatim, but there is no mention of what I have said, so my people in George Town and in the Cayman Islands I want to you know that this is the punishment being dished out to me, because I refuse to buckle to the Caymanian Compass, and I will not do so.

Regarding their editorial of yesterday, I am surprised that they would come out with this a second time, and I am wondering whether it is because they have some special interest in this issue. Why is it that a bunch of people who have no close connections with the Cayman Islands are trying to dictate to the people of the Cayman Islands? In an issue like this it might be better if they kept their views to themselves. I do not need to smother my feelings in this House because I am afraid of the Compass. I am not afraid of the Compass. If the Compass is to run in this country, and it is to run the news of the debates in this House, then they should do it in an unbiased manner and without partiality. I feel that any time I see that this is not happening, they are going to hear from me. I know that I will see an editorial tomorrow trying to pass derogatory remarks, I will see it, but I am prepared to deal with it as I have done in the past.

The editorial they are saying here is "A Serious Step", a serious step for whom? Is it a serious step for those people who feel that they will be affected by these constitutional changes? I have lobbied, I have talked to a lot of my Caymanians and I am yet to find one who has said to me that he opposes the changes contemplated in the motion. Why is it that the Compass is continually harping and taking such a negative approach to this issue? Is it because they feel that maybe somebody near and dear to them could be affected? One wonders!

They said, Mr. President, that "an amendment to a constitution is a serious step for any country to take, and the Cayman Islands are no different in this respect". We are aware of this. We really do not need the Compass to tell us this. And the only reason I am dealing with it is that my fellow Caymanians read this paper. But I want you all to know that you take it with a grain of salt, what you read in there, and I will continue to say this until I see more unbiased reporting. "The proposal now before the Legislative Assembly" they went on to say "should be well understood by the people of these Islands, before Members take a final vote." A good recommendation, but do we need it? We are sensible people in this House, we do not need that kind of recommendation, they should keep their ideas to themselves. All this is doing is giving the public the wrong impression of what we are trying to accomplish in this House.

If a referendum was taken tomorrow, Mr. President, 99.75 percent of those people eligible to vote would vote in favour. The only fear I would have is that many of them would want to see much stronger measures taken, because many of the people I spoke to said to me that the only fault they found with it is that (1) it was not brought earlier and (2) it was not strong enough.

The editorial went on to say "the proposal's aim is to exclude non-Caymanians from the Assembly". This is not true, this is another misleading statement by the papers, and I trust that as the Honourable First Elected Member said, that the public will treat the editorials in the papers with the contempt that they deserve until they are more objective. It said that "some have commented that the proposal might be interpreted in such a way that some people who are normally considered Caymanians, could be excluded from being elected as Members of the Legislative Assembly". Yet Mr. President, they have printed the whole text of that motion, but would try to mislead the public into believing that if this motion passes in this House, that it is going to harm the people of the Cayman Islands. This is the mischiefousness that this paper is creating, and the worst part about it is that they are the only paper circulating, so they have a complete monopoly, and nobody can contradict them. Not even the radio can, since it is a Government radio, and not supposed to get involved in politics.

The editorial further states that "this apprehension must be cleared up before the proposal is passed" - where is the apprehension? I do not see any apprehension.

Who is afraid of this? The people of the Cayman Island are not afraid of it, and I have talked to a lot of people. I keep in very close touch with my constituents. I have not heard any of them complaining about it. As a matter of fact, as I said earlier, they welcome it, so where is this apprehension? Is it in the minds of those people, again, who would feel that they would be affected by it? "No ambiguity" they went on to say "should be permitted in such an important document as the Constitution", and I agree, but there is no ambiguity, there is no ambiguity in it. No Mr. President, it is quite clear. It is quite straightforward, where is the confusion, where is the ambiguity? Mr. President, the only confusion is in the minds of the writers.

"If it means holding the proposal over for the next Assembly meeting, so be it". Why should we do it, the people of the Cayman Islands want it now. Is it to allow more letters to appear in the paper? Is it to allow special interest groups to go around and influence the people to their way of thinking? Is this why we are pounding away to have this matter taken into Committee? Mr. President, it is time that in this House and in this country that we cease to allow the tail to wag the dog. There are too many people outside there that are dictating terms to this House. As soon as something is recommended for implementation, they jump into the paper and start writing letters. They go around lobbying people in the hope to change things to suit themselves. This cannot happen, you must have a Government.

Mr. President, it is no secret, the Honourable First Elected Member and myself have not always seen eye to eye in this House, and this is good, this is what intelligent people will do, but my position in this House has always been that I will support whatever I feel is good for this country, and every morning when I pray, I pray to God to make me a good representative. I am not praying to be a good Dignity Team Member, or a good Unity Team Member. I want to be a good representative for my people, and when I saw this motion coming before this House I was very happy to support it. I will even go further, as a matter of fact, when I first discussed this matter with members of the Young Businessmen's Association I suggested to them then that I would have brought it to the House as a Private Member's Motion. But they said no, they had been talking to Government and they intended to continue talking to Government because they felt it would be successfully dealt with through Government, and I am glad that they took that route. So I was very pleased to support it, and I can hardly see any valid reason that any Member of this House would have for not supporting an issue this important.

I am not going to be passing any remarks about any previous speaker, but I cannot understand how speakers will say that they cannot support an issue because this is wrong, or that is wrong, and not propose areas of solution. I would think, Mr. President, that if there are some fundamental changes necessary to be made in this motion, that we will hear them aired during the debate time.

We have seen letters suggesting that we should not make any changes to our Constitution. We have seen letters suggesting that we should go and lobby our people, we should inform them of what is happening, this is true. This does not necessarily have to be done through public meetings, because for those Members who keep close to their constituents, they can let them know what is happening, as I do, without having to call a meeting every month. I see my people daily, I do not wait until every time we have a Legislative Assembly Meeting here to meet with my people, so they know what is going on because I talk to them, and when I say "my people" I think of a complete cross-section of the constituency of the George Town District, and indeed the people of the Cayman Islands.

Mr. President, I hold in my hand the Cayman Islands Constitution Amendment Order 1984 which as a result of the British Nationality Act coming into effect necessitated the change in qualification for elected membership and electors. Mr. President, I am yet to see any public meetings held to discuss this with the members of the public. I stand to be corrected, but I am not aware of any public meetings being held. I am not aware of this matter being dealt with on Open Line. The reason it was not done is that the British Nationality Act of 1981 which came into effect in the Cayman Islands in 1983, did not give us any choice. We had no choice in the matter. We were told that we were being reduced from the status of a citizen of a United Kingdom colony to that of a citizen of a British Dependent Territories Citizen, this is what we were told.

This is what has caused all the problems, and this is why we today have to make the changes we are making.

Let us put aside politics, Mr. President, this issue is bigger than politics. Let us think of the people of this country whom we represent. There is no way that we can get up in this House and on one hand we say we support it, but on the other hand we cannot support it. It is as the Honourable First Official Member said yesterday, this is one of the things he has against economists, because on the one hand they say this and on the other they say the other, and this is why I suggested to him that the best economist is the one handed economist, because they cannot say on the other hand. And I submit that we have a lot of politicians like that. On the one hand this is right, but on the other hand I cannot accept it.

Mr. President, I am very, very moved by the whole subject that this motion contemplates, because it is a very serious matter.

Section 18 of the amendment replaces the old section 18 contained in the Cayman Islands Constitution Order, 1972. And I would like to read it, Mr. President. The old section 18 stated:

"Qualification for Elected Membership

Subject to the provision of the next following section, a person shall be qualified to be elected as a Member of the Assembly if, and shall not be qualified to be so elected unless he possesses Caymanian Status and is either a British Citizen or a British Dependent Territories Citizen."

This is what we are trying to change. We want to move away from the dual nationality. If we allow this to continue, Mr. President, there is nothing to stop someone sitting in this House with dual nationality, who will one day say that he is fed up with what is happening in the Cayman Islands, and will take the plane and fly back to his own country. I personally have nowhere to go. I am a Caymanian, and this can be traced back very far. I have no problems with this. But there are certain individuals who now under the present provisions of the Constitution, have the privileged position where they have dual nationality, and if things get rough in the Cayman Islands they can run away to the other country and forget about the Cayman Islands.

Section 18(2) of the proposed new section 18 states specifically that a qualified citizen is a British Dependent Territories Citizen by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands. This therefore Mr. President, prevents individuals with dual nationalities qualifying for elected membership. For example, Mr. President, under the present provisions of the Constitution, an individual with say, British Nationality and Caymanian Status could qualify for elected membership, but under the new provisions, only those citizens with British Dependent Territories Citizen status will be eligible for membership.

We are not saying here in the proposed amendments that people with Caymanian status could not sit in this House, this is not true, Mr. President. The motion does not state that. What the motion states is that you cannot have your cake and eat it. If you want to sit in this House, then you be a true Caymanian, but you cannot have dual nationality. You cannot be a Canadian and a Caymanian at the same time. You cannot be from the United Kingdom and be a Caymanian at the same time, and sit in this House. If you want to sit in this House then you must show good faith, and you must renounce any other nationality, or any other citizenship, and you must be a Caymanian for all intents and purposes.

This section of the proposed amendment in the motion protects the born-Caymanians from being pushed into the background as second class citizens, and losing control of these Islands. Many countries, Mr. President, have protected their citizens against the danger of being swamped by individuals who have been granted citizenship as opposed to those who have citizenship as of right through birth.

There are two good examples, and the examples are the United States of America and the United Kingdom. For example, under the Constitution of the United States, specific provisions and conditions are contained therein outlining the qualification for membership to their House of Representatives.

Specifically the United States Constitution states in Section 1 of Article 2, and I quote:

"No person except a natural-born citizen, or a citizen of the United States at the time of the adoption of this Constitution, shall be eligible to the office of President, neither shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of 35 years, and been 14 years a resident within the United States."

(and I am quoting from the United States Constitution).

I believe, Sir, that the United States Constitution was adopted during the presidency of George Washington or thereabouts. So it is doubtful that any individuals who would have qualified then under the grandfather clause would still be alive. So they are indeed talking about generations since. So one can see why the United States, regarded by many as the greatest country in the world today, found it necessary to protect their own people. So why should the people of the Cayman Islands not have the right to protect their destiny? There is no reason why we should not, and what we are doing here I feel will be welcomed by the expatriates, or by those who have gained Caymanian Status in our community. I feel that it will be welcomed by them. I do not think that they will feel that we are trying to harm them.

My position has been, Mr. President, and again this was stated in my manifesto, that I do not feel that we should be talking about pushing people aside, or pushing them out of the country, but rather we should work towards integration. When it comes to the idea of sitting in this House, we are dealing, as one Member said earlier, with our national pride. We are not talking about walking down the street or going to some cocktail party. We are talking about representing our country, and I feel that we should have enough pride in ourselves to put aside politics today. I know this motion will pass with or without the dissenters, I have that confidence. I would like to see it unanimously passed because the excuses I have heard that it is not covering every possible condition, is not good enough.

You show me one document, even Erskine May, the bible of the House, I feel would not cover every possible condition. We can amend, we amend our laws from time to time, we are not going to get a situation here that is perfect, but Mr. President I feel that we are moving in the right direction.

Further, Sir, our Mother Country the United Kingdom, found it necessary as I have said, to protect their own citizens in 1981, to bring about the British Nationality Act. They did not come to the British Dependent Territories to ask their permission, they went ahead and they did it, whether we liked it or not. And I submit that a lot of the problems which some of our people are facing today because they were born abroad is coming as a result of this British Nationality Act.

Mr. President, I think I am coming close to time ...

MR. PRESIDENT:
afraid I have to interrupt you now.

You are quite right, I am

It has been suggested to me that some Members would prefer to sit on late this evening in the hope of being able to complete the business and the meeting today. I am conscious that Members have not been forewarned that there was an intention to do so, and it may be inconvenient for some, but of course I am in the hands of the House. If Members would prefer to stay on and sit late, then naturally, I am prepared to do so. If not, not.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:
a public meeting for tonight at eight o'clock at Breakers, and if I should have to stay beyond four thirty it will really put me at a great inconvenience. If we continue, I certainly cannot finish my speech in the little time between now and then, and I would like to be here for the vote, so it would be almost impossible for me to remain.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:
Mr. President, I am wondering if Members would consider carrying on until six o'clock which would ensure that we should certainly finish tomorrow. Otherwise we are probably going to come back here again on Friday, and unfortunately I have other commitments for Friday.

MR. PRESIDENT: I expect that there is nothing we can do that will suit everybody.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, I personally would support what the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town has said, because personally I am having a lot of trouble with my throat too, and that is why I did not want to speak now, but I would support the idea of stopping now and perhaps waiting until tomorrow, because I believe that if we go on until six, it is still going to make it difficult, he could speak for four hours.

MR. PRESIDENT: If the Honourable First Elected Member's principle concern is not to go on until Friday, I do not know whether the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town can tell us how long he plans to speak?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Probably about an hour. I would like to point out Sir, that about half the Members have spoken. I do not suppose ...

MR. PRESIDENT: I know, I think more than half have spoken actually ...

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: ... the Government Members will have much to say....

MR. PRESIDENT: I do not think the Official Members are likely to speak, so I think it is only about another four Members at most to speak, and I think we would finish tomorrow.

It would seem to me not unreasonable to have a general understanding that if necessary, we would sit late tomorrow, so that we could finish tomorrow and not have to continue on Friday. I do not think we are going to finish today, and I do think it would be wrong to inconvenience Members seriously, or to prevent a Member from making a speech that he wished to, when we had not given notice of an intention to sit late. So although I am in the hands of the House, my feeling is that we should agree to sit late tomorrow if we find we need to, but that we should move the adjournment now.

Would anybody seriously object to that? I think I sense ...

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Yes Sir, that is a sensible thing to do.

MR. PRESIDENT: Yes, I think that is probably reasonable. In which case I will invite the Honourable First Official Member to move the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, in accordance with Standing Order 10(2) I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that this House do now adjourn until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Honourable First Official

PRAYERS

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread! And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us! And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil! For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us; the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us; the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated.

Private Members' Motions.

Continuation of the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 5/87. The Second Elected Member for George Town to continue.

AMENDED PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/87

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Thank you, Mr. President.

Continuing the debate on the amended Private Member's Motion No. 5/87, which is a Motion requesting this Honourable Legislative Assembly to petition Her Most Gracious Majesty to change the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1972, with respect to qualifications of Members of the Legislative Assembly and Electors.

Before moving into a further explanation of qualifications for elected membership, and for electors, I wish to make a reference to some of the remarks made by previous speakers yesterday. It was interesting to note a reference made by the Honourable First Elected Member and the Mover of the Bill regarding a letter from Mr. O.L. Panton. I have always regarded Mr. Panton as one of the leaders in our community, and his views are respected by many of our Caymanians and residents here. It is interesting to see that as far back as the 26th of February 1982, about five years ago, Mr. Panton's views are coinciding with what we are trying to do here today. It was interesting that the Compass at that time, did in fact advocate that Cayman should remain in the hands of Caymanians. But due to the vagaries and the effluxion of time, today their position seems to have been changed on this matter.

As I said here yesterday, it is obvious to many people because they have indeed spoken to me about this, that the Compass will try to make those in the Assembly look good who they particularly favour. But again I would say to my people that I will continue to speak in this House about any issue, whether it suits the Compass or not. There are certain people that come here to take notes of the debates and when I see them I need not read the paper the next day, because I know that I will not be given a fair coverage. My people will know in time, I will be advising them, on this issue from time to time. If I do indeed see a change in the editorial and journalism of the Compass, I will be the first one to say so, but for the time being, I am satisfied to feel that they will be there, not being in my best interests.

In reference to letters that have been written on this subject, the same, Sir, that some of the people that would be opposed to the constitutional change, or changes, are living in the past. They are not keeping up with our developments in this country. Attitudes to constitutional change have become redundant through obsolescence, and has become obsolete through the effluxion of time, and they need to keep up with the changing times in our society and our country.

The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Council made a very good point. He said that we need to safeguard our liberty in this country. I could not agree with him more. We have to safeguard that liberty, we have to ensure that happiness and liberty will be retained. He also said that Caymanians will become outnumbered within a few years. It is very true. This is the danger we are facing, and this is one of the main reasons why we are today making the necessary efforts to try and cope with that danger.

The Elected Member of East End also made some very good points. One was that he feels the political destiny should be in the hands of our people. He also went a little further to say that he feels that they should be born Caymanians. These are strong statements, and I believe that at the end of the day, even though he had some reservations toward the composition of the present Motion, that he indeed will lend his support to it because I am sure he, like many of us, realises that we cannot bring a perfect situation to the House. There will be need from time to time to make necessary changes, but I feel that we have moved in the right direction, we have our foot in the door now, and we need to keep moving on this issue. He also said, if necessary are steps not taken now, we consider if our Islands are placed in the hands of the unknown, what a problem this would bring to our country.

It was pointed out here that by the year 1990 we will be in a minority position in this country. It was also pointed out by the Second Elected Member of Council that our population growth is moving by only five per cent, while the non-Caymanians in this country, the growth is moving by nine per cent. This is a serious situation, as this is almost doubling the growth rate of the Caymanians. By the year 1990, as I said, which is in three years time, we could be outnumbered in this country.

Mr. President, on the 11th of February 1987, the Compass carried an article which stated "Motion calls for change in voters, candidates, qualification". I would have thought that from this article which was a report on the meeting held by the Honourable First Elected Member, and the mover of this Motion, that this alone would have cleared up any doubts that anybody, including the Compass, would have had in their minds as to the intentions of this Motion. I would be remiss in my duties this morning if I did not congratulate Captain Percival Whorms for the very interesting letter, constructive letter and views that he had on this subject in the papers.

Mr. President, I could stand here and read the summary of the meeting that the Honourable First Elected Member had, and this would cover in a nutshell, exactly what the Motion is contemplating today.

Moving on to the substance of the Motion, I wish to deal with section 18(1) of the Private Member's Motion No.5/87, and this section deals with qualifications for elected membership. It states that:

"Subject to the provisions of the next following section, a person shall be qualified to be elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly if, and shall not be qualified to be so elected unless ..."

- and I would like you all, and the listening public, to listen to this very carefully:

- "(a) he possesses Caymanian status;" (that is the first requirement)
- "(b) he has attained the age of 21 years; and
- (c) he is, at the date of his nomination for election, domiciled and resident in the Islands; and
- (d) he is a qualified citizen."

I would like to comment briefly on the meaning of a qualified citizen, so that there is no doubt as to what this means and who would qualify for elected membership.

Section 18(2) deals with the question of a qualified citizen, and it states:

"For the purposes of sub-section 1(d) of this section" (which I just read) "a qualified citizen is a British Dependent Territory Citizen by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands ..."

This is the major change in this, because as a result of the British Nationality Act which came into effect here in April 1983, we then had a situation where the Constitution was changed to accommodate the British Nationality Act where the people who qualified could also be British subjects, and British Dependent Territory citizens. It is felt by the Members of this Honourable House that anyone sitting in this House should have one citizenship, and should not be allowed to have dual citizenship. I do not think any country in the world would allow that. It goes on to say:

"... by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands who either :

- (a) at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship ..."

This does not suggest that non-Caymanians or expatriates cannot sit in this House, if they have Caymanian status and if they fulfil the other requirements of this Motion. This does not suggest that. But they would have to give up any other citizenship that they have, and retain only the Caymanian Status or British Dependent Territory citizenship.

The second part of this says:

"...and has taken no steps ..." (and we should note this carefully): "has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship for which he may be eligible."

And I would like to comment on this. It could also read to mean that he is taking no other step. I understand that this was a concern of one of the Members, and it said "... and has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship ...", because there may have been constituents, who, in the past, took steps to obtain other citizenship. But this is easy to be changed if this is a matter that is causing some concern to any Members of this House, it could read to say "... he is taking no other steps to claim any other citizenship for which he may be eligible ...". So that nobody that would qualify in other respects would be disenfranchised under that particular sub-section.

(b) of this section states:

"(b) was born outside the Islands, has or had at least one parent or grandparent who was born in the Islands and possesses Caymanian status (or if deceased would if alive have possessed Caymanian status at the date of nomination for election), and who at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship save ..." (and you must make note of this) "... save for any right he may have to some other citizenship by virtue of his birth outside the Islands."

This was specifically put in this Motion to protect many of our Caymanians, because in the years gone by our medical facilities were not what they are today, and this is the reason this section was put there, to protect even Members that may already be in this House, to ensure that their rights are not taken from them.

Mr. President, I have decided to go into detail on this, even though I feel it was fairly well covered by the mover of this Motion, but as the seconder of this Motion, I feel as responsible to the people of the Cayman Islands for this Motion as the mover. Because under our Standing Orders, this Motion could not be effective without a seconder. So I am as responsible for this Motion as the mover, so I will take time to go through this. And I support this 100 per cent.

I think that fairly covers the question of qualification and what is a qualified citizen. So there should be no question in the minds of the Compass or the general public as to what is meant by a qualified citizen, this is quite clear. Members have stood in this House and said that they feel it should go to a Select Committee. What I fear is what we have experienced here in the past, where we have taken things to a private committee, but before we could start with our deliberations, it was in the press, it leaked out. Should we delay this to give chance and time to others who may want to go around lobbying against this Motion, when this is such an important issue? I say no, Mr. President, and I feel today in this Honourable House this Motion will indeed pass.

Regarding a qualified citizen it says:

"he is a qualified citizen if either he was born in the Islands or was born outside the Islands in the circumstances mentioned in section 2(b)" (which I have just read to you), "has resided in the Islands for a period", (and you should listen to this carefully), "for a period of not less than seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election. And subject to sub-section (3) and (4)" (which I will come to in a minute), "the number of days on which he was absent from the Island in that period does not exceed 400".

There are many Caymanians or those who could claim right to Caymanian status that have never even lived in this country, yet under the present Constitution they could come out of New York with all the habits of New York, not having lived in the Cayman Islands one day of their life, but because of their connection, could claim Caymanian Status and run successfully, get into this House and not have an idea of the wants and needs of the people of this country. So we are saying for those people that have not spent any time in the Cayman Islands, whether they are Caymanians or not, that they should come and serve their apprenticeship. They should not be able to just walk into this country without any idea of the needs of the country or constituents, and come and sit in this House. They have a right to sit here, but they must serve their time. And it goes on to say that they "should not be away from the country for more than 400 days in the seven years".

Mr. President, that is a long time - if you divide 400 days into seven years, you will find out that they have to away from this country several months a year. So, I see no reason why this should not be accepted as being a reasonable provision in this clause.

In connection with the 400 days, there have been questions in this House as to whether this Motion will disenfranchise even Members of the House, as I mentioned a while ago. Somebody mentioned to me that Mr. Jim Bodden would be disenfranchised. This is absolutely incorrect. As a matter of fact, section 4 of this Motion specifically provides for people that have to spend a lot of time abroad on business. Also, the fact that he may have been connected with the United States is also protected under this. So this will not, and I repeat, this will not affect people like Mr. Jim Bodden, and many of our people here. I would not be supporting it if it would affect him. I want the people of this country to know that.

Section 4, before I deal with 3, since this is directly related to what I am saying, states:

"In the case of a person referred to in paragraph (e) of sub-section (1), the requirement that he shall not have been absent from the Islands for more than 400 days in the period of seven years immediately preceding his nomination for election ..." (and note carefully) "... shall not apply if that person was, on the day immediately preceding the appointed day, qualified to be elected as a Member of the Legislative Assembly."

Therefore, even if we had Members of this House that have to spend a lot of time abroad, this would not disenfranchise them.

One Member yesterday said that the Motion should protect people who have to go away for medical reasons and so on. Well I would like to point out quite clearly that this Motion does in fact protect these people, and it goes much further, and I will deal with this at this time. Section 18(3) of the Motion states:

"For the purposes of ascertaining whether a person has been absent from the Islands for the purposes of sub-section (1)(e)" (which deals with the 400 days) "any period of absence by reason of the following shall be disregarded " (and note carefully):

(a) attendance as a pupil at any educational establishment;"

So if your children are going to school in the United States, this would not be held against them.

(b) "attendance as a patient at any hospital;"

If you had to go and spend a year in a hospital abroad, it would not be held against you.

(c) "employment as a seaman aboard an ocean-going vessel."

This protects any of our people that would have to still go to sea for a living. Any time spent aboard an ocean-going vessel would not be included in the 400 days. And very important I wish to make this particular point very, very clear:

(d) Employment as a crew member on any aircraft."

This was a matter that was questioned - what would happen to our people employed on Cayman Airways. They are protected in this Motion. So we have not left any stone unturned. I even hear people in this House saying that we should be doing this and doing that to make the Motion better, I want them to state specifically what improvements that should be made to this Motion. It is easy for anybody to get up in here and say the Motion is not a good motion, and that it should be made better. But what I want to hear is constructive suggestions as to how this Motion should be improved. Everybody accepts that it must, it is high time, that something like this be done. Let us stop playing politics, and let us deal with this very important issue which is before us.

And now, I come to the very touchy issue of section 18(1)(f). This deals with the expatriates or those that have gained Caymanian Status amongst us. I want no ambiguity or any double meaning put to this, it is quite straight forward and there should be no need for any misunderstanding on this issue. And I trust Sir, that after we have finished deliberating this in the House that the same prominence the Caymanian Compass gave to their concern about this Motion would be given to the clarification which we are now offering. Section 18(1)(f) states: "... he was born outside the Islands ..." - this is an individual who was born outside the Islands but who has been granted Caymanian Status, who also would comply with the other requirements of this section.

"(f) He was born outside the Islands, has resided in the Islands for a period or periods totalling not less than 15 years out of the 20 years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election."

This is fairly generous. We are not saying that he has to be here 15 years after receiving Status, we are saying 15 years from the first time he came to reside here. This is not at all blocking an individual who has obtained Caymanian Status from running and taking a seat in this House. Many of my colleagues felt that this was too generous - some of them felt that this sub-section should have been removed from the Motion. But, as seconder of this Motion, I feel that this is a reasonable subsection, and I am supporting that this remains in the Motion, since I do not feel that these individuals, if they comply in other respects, that they should be disenfranchised from really showing their main interest in the Cayman Islands. But what they will have to do is give up any dual citizenship that they may now have, that they got if they were a British subject, Canadian, American citizen or whatever, if they want to sit in this House they must give up that citizenship and retain only British Dependent Territory citizenship. This is the point Mr. President.

This sub-section goes on to say that in addition to the 15 out of the 20 years, immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election, out of the seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination, has not been absent from the Islands for more than a total of 400 days. Here again, this is a very reasonable sub-section, because you have a lot of people who would want to run for election, but they decide that they are going to spend nine months a year at home, when it is summer here they run away from the heat, when it is cold over there they come here. So they spend most of their time abroad, yet they would want to qualify. Let them stay here with us, and go through the good and bad, let them serve their apprenticeship, let them prove to the people of the Cayman Islands that they are worthy of representing the people of the Cayman Islands.

I do not think that I have left any stone unturned as to the qualification for elected membership, but if I have I would be more than happy to meet with any Member in hearing of my voice this morning to further clarify what this Motion is all about. So far, I have met with a lot of people on this issue, and as I said yesterday in this Honourable House, I have yet to find one Caymanian, or interested person with Caymanian Status, that objects to what we are doing. They feel it is good for the country, they feel that it is a necessary move in the development and maturity of our country.

Mr. President, section 20(3)(c) has been deleted and the following has been substituted therefor. The new section 20(3)(c) will state now:

"If he ceases to be a British Dependent Territories citizen by reason of his connection with the Islands, or he ceases to possess Caymanian Status;"

The main change here is that before it also included a British subject.

And now, a very important part of this Motion deals with the people who can vote in this country, and here again there have been attempts to try and mislead the general public on this issue. I wish to make it abundantly clear that this new section of the Motion does not, in any way, disenfranchise or prevent any voter that was eligible to vote in the last election, from now voting. As a matter of fact, the mover of the Motion and myself went to pains to make sure that this clause was grandfathered, or that no changes were made that could affect people who could now vote. So Mr. President, I want the listening public to know that no-one is trying to prevent them from voting. If you were eligible to vote in the last election, you can still do it. This point has to be made abundantly clear, because there have been attempts to try and tell some of our people in the country who have been living here that they will not be able to vote. I would not be a party to such a situation, and I feel that my people have enough confidence in me to know that I would not support a Motion that would be against them, or that would disenfranchise them under the Constitution.

Mr. President, section 25 has been deleted and replaced by the following - the new section 25 deals with qualifications of electors, and it states:

"25. Subject to the provisions of the next following section, a person shall be entitled to be registered as an elector in one electoral district only, but he shall not be entitled to be registered as an elector for elections to the Assembly unless the following conditions apply:

- (a) he possesses Caymanian Status, and he is a British Dependent Territories citizen by reason of his connection with the Islands, of the age of eighteen years or over; and
- (b) he is domiciled and resident in the Islands at the date of registration; and

(c) either he or one of his parents or grandparents was born in the Islands, and he has been ordinarily resident in the Islands for a period or periods amounting to two years out of the three years immediately preceding the date of registration."

This is a most reasonable section of this Motion, because it states here the qualifying period to be resident in the Islands is two out of three years immediately preceding the date of registration. Here again, Mr. President, if these individuals want to participate in our elections then they must prove to the country that they are worthy of that participation. They cannot fly in and out like birds of flight, and just come and substantially and materially change the course of this country at the stroke of a pen.

Mr. President, this section that I am coming to now is most important, because this is the section that will protect the Jamaicans living here, the Hondurans living here, the English living here, the Canadians, the Americans, whoever live in this country, this is protecting them to vote in this country. Sub-section (d) of section 25 states, and it is very clear

"(d) ..or he has been ordinarily resident in the islands for a period or periods amounting to seven years out of the nine years immediately preceding the date of registration ..."

This section gives protection to anyone who could have voted in the last election. He is not disenfranchised, he can still vote, Mr. President. So anyone that would give the impression to the public that we are preventing those people who could vote, would be doing an injustice and telling an untruth.

It goes on to say:

"... and in the three years immediately preceding the date of his registration has not been absent from the Islands for more than a total of 300 days."

That is 100 days a year, I do not know how many of us get vacations of 100 days a year, or how many of us would have to spend over three months abroad each year. But we have been very generous in this sub-section, and we are saying that we will give you 300 days out of the last three years, and that you should not be absent from the Islands for more than those 300 days out of the three years immediately preceding the date of registration.

In the catch-all clause which really protects the people and the voter, is sub-section (e) of section 25, and this states:

"(e) he is, on the day immediately preceding the appointed day entitled to be registered as an elector."

That covers all and sundry who were able to vote in our elections under the old system. This does not disenfranchise anyone, but what we must realise here this morning is that the duties and the job of those of us who represent cannot be one-sided. The fact that I have supported this Motion is indicative of my stand in this House. I have made it quite clear from the first day I stood here that I stand for what is right, and I do not believe that Members of the House should continually be opposing for the sake of opposition. It does not matter who brings an issue to this House, if it is in the best interest of this country, it should be looked at most objectively. It may seem strange to people that I support a Motion that is being moved by the First Elected Member of Executive Council. He and I have had our differences of opinion in this House. But it is an issue that I believe in - as a matter of fact, I had said to the members of the Young Caymanian Businessmen Association or some of them, that I would have been prepared to bring this Motion as a Private Member's Motion, in my capacity. But they felt that Government was looking into the matter, and I am happy this morning that the First Elected Member had the courage to bring such a sensitive issue to this House.

Mr. President, I give this Motion my full support, and I feel that the people of the Cayman Islands will be pleased with us that we were far sighted enough to take action at this time. I thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Bodden Town.

Second Elected Member for

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, constitutional change is a subject that has enthralled the minds of the people of these Islands from as far back as I can remember. Even more so from 1972 onwards, because it was in 1972 that we first received a Constitution which gave these Islands a Government which contained a very high measure of internal self-government. Many of the ingredients are in our Constitution. We have one particular matter which is found usually only in the Constitution of independent countries, that is the matter of collective responsibility. But before 1972 the Members of the Executive Council were simply associated with certain departments of Government. Since 1972 the Elected Members of Executive Council can be charged with responsibility and are answerable for matters falling under their Portfolio. Also another significant change is that we no longer have Nominated Members and Elected Members who are responsible and are in the majority in Executive Council.

During the last campaign, many Members told the public that they would make no changes in the Constitution. I claim today there can be no more fundamental change than that of qualification for membership and qualification for voters. It is my opinion that Honourable Members do not have a mandate to change the Constitution. I find fault with this Motion because it has not been taken to the people. Now we heard the Member for North Side say that if it were not taken to the people it is the fault of the Members. He is so wrong, he is totally wrong. Members knew nothing of this change. I only found out about it a few days before the House was due to meet, when the Member for West Bay called me, or spoke to me, and I went up to his office and he showed me a draft. And he asked me to keep it confidential, and I promised him that I would. So officially I had not seen this Motion. Other Members with the exception of the Member for George Town who seconded the Motion, knew nothing of this Motion until it appeared on the Business Paper for the Legislative Assembly and was forwarded to them by the Clerk. So we did not know about this Motion.

Furthermore, the Motion we are dealing with today is not the draft Motion which the Member had shown me, because one or more amendments were made to the draft which he showed me before it came to the Clerk. And then after the Clerk received it and mailed it out to the Members it was changed again, and the Motion we are dealing with today was only given to the Members at ten minutes past eleven on Thursday the 19th of February, that was last Thursday at 11:10 in the morning, and Thursday being the day for Private Member's Motions, the Member introduced it Thursday afternoon at twenty minutes past four. So in truth, the Motion which we are discussing was only given to the Members four hours and ten minutes prior to it being introduced on the floor of this House. So the Member for North Side nor any other Member had an opportunity to discuss it with anybody in their constituency. So this Motion has been put in here without due notice.

The Motion in front of us reads "Amended Private Member's Motion No.5/87". This is in contrast to the way we handled the constitutional changes that were made in 1983. The Second Elected Member for George Town who seconded the Motion, and other Members seem to be unclear in their minds as to the procedure we followed. I believe the Member for George Town said words to the effect that he does not recollect any publicity of our constitutional changes. I would like, Sir, to refer to the Motion which was brought to the House in 1983. Now that Motion was in a sense compulsory, in that the British Government in rewriting the British Nationality Act had virtually done away with the term "British subject" as appeared in our Constitution at the time, and replaced the British subject with three or four different types of citizens, one of them being the British Dependent Territory citizen. And so it was necessary to make that change. Of course, the opportunity was taken to make other changes in dealing with the qualification of Members and the qualification of voters, and for the establishment of the Cayman Court of Appeal.

But nevertheless, that Motion at that time was handled in a most democratic manner, and would have been an ideal model for the Honourable First Elected Member for West Bay to follow, had he chosen at the time to see the procedure. To refresh his memory on the procedure, although he was the seconder of that Motion, I would like to call his attention to the Hansard of this House which dealt with it. What had really happened was that in June of 1983 the House had accepted a Motion to make certain amendments to the Election Law, and had also dealt with constitutional matters. The Motion which was moved in September referred to the Motion which had been moved in June, and I will read it for the Member, since he is grumbling:

"Mr. President, I beg to move Motion No.4 which I shall read out in full."

(This statement was made in October).

WHEREAS the Elections Law was enacted and came into operation on the 4th day of July, 1959, and was subsequently amended by Law 7 of 1962, Law 3 of 1963, Law 21 of 1963, Law 18 of 1971, Law 2 of 1972 and Law 10 of 1980;

AND WHEREAS the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972 was made on the 26th day of July, 1972, came into operation on the 22nd day of August, 1972;

AND WHEREAS the British Nationality Act 1981 of the United Kingdom created three categories of citizenship and came into operation on the first day of January 1983, and changed the meaning of British Subject thereby creating the necessity for consequential changes in the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972;

AND WHEREAS on the 20th day of June 1983 the following resolution was passed unanimously by this Honourable House:

WHEREAS the present Elections Law was brought into operation in 1962 with various amendments in 1971, 1972 and 1980;

AND WHEREAS it is considered that the Law should be updated;

BE IT RESOLVED that this Honourable House appoint a Select Committee consisting of all the Elected Members and the Second Official Member, to consider and make recommendations as may be deemed necessary;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Second Official Member be appointed Chairman of the Committee with a quorum of seven members including the Chairman."

This was the Motion passed in June, but became a part of the October Motion, which goes on to read:

"AND WHEREAS the Select Committee has unanimously determined that it would be in the interests of the Cayman Islands to redefine the qualifications for elected membership of the Legislative Assembly, and the qualifications of electors, and that a resolution humbly petitioning Her Most Gracious Majesty be introduced in this Honourable House concerning such of the provisions of the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972 as relate to membership and voting.

NOW THEREFORE BE IT RESOLVED that this Honourable House humbly petition Her Most Gracious Majesty that the Cayman Islands Constitution Order 1972 be amended as follows:

1. That section 18 thereof be repealed and replaced by the following new section: ..."

and I need not read all that;

"2. That section 20 thereof be amended, that section 25 thereof be repealed and replaced."

And the Motion was moved. So what really happened was that notice was given, a Committee met in June, made the recommendation and the Motion was moved in October. Everybody knew about it. The mover of the Motion had this to say:

"Mr. President, simultaneously with the publication of this Motion which was proposed to be moved today, there was issued with it a press release, which set out very clearly to the public, and which I believe that all Members of this Assembly regarded as a fair statement ...".

So there was a press release. The resolution has been brought and the amendment has been brought after very careful consideration by all Members of this Legislative Assembly who unanimously agreed with the Motion. So the Members of the Assembly had been called together and had unanimously agreed. No such thing happened with this Motion. We hear the Member say that somebody from the Young Businessman's Association called on him and they formulated this Motion and that was it. And, while I have deep respect for the members of the Young Businessman's Association, they are not accountable to the public in these matters. The Member was wrong in putting it forward in this manner. It goes on:

"The Committees on the Election Law, the Caymanian Protection Law and the Nationality Law naturally continue to sit, but as mentioned in the resolution they have very carefully and in a very timely way looked at these amendments (that is the constitutional amendments) and I believe that they are in the interest of the Cayman Islands at this stage to be brought."

So there is no question about discussions. This never happened in this case. The Member goes on:

"... I was entitled to state at that time that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office has been advised of the proposed amendments, and would expect them to be acceptable to Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom."

The Honourable Member has not told us that he nor any other delegation has gone to London and discussed these matters. I understand through the grapevine that the Governor himself may have mentioned it on a trip to London, and I do not know if that is true, probably it is not, but this is not good enough for a change of this nature. I continue to read:

"What is most important, and I believe that this has been very tersely put by all Members of this Assembly, in their public meetings is that the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972 is one which deals with many sections which relate for instance, to the public seal ..." and so on.

So Members had an opportunity to discuss this important matter in 1983 at their public meetings. An opportunity which has been denied our Members, since they did not have sufficient notice. I discussed one of the many drafts at a meeting in Savannah last week Wednesday night. But what I told the people was incorrect, because on Thursday morning I was handed an amended version, which substantially changed many of the points, or some of the points that I had made. The Minutes show that "there will also be seen from this amendment that there is an alteration in relation to the right to sit in the Legislative Assembly and what has arisen here is that in effect, the words "British Subject" which were replaced by "British Dependent Territories Citizen" have now been enlarged to include a person who is also a British citizen" - that is putting it more generally, a citizen of the United Kingdom.

The minute goes on to state that "the details of the amendments have been set out in detail in the press release". A press release that was made before the document went to the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly. And I believe that both the Motion and the agreed release have been made public through the newspapers. I am saying that our public has had no opportunity to discuss these fundamental changes which will affect generations to come.

"I may also state", reading from the minutes of 1983 as I believe I would be entitled to, "that the amendment also has the blessing of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, and that both the resolution therefore and the amendment go with the blessing of that office". Neither the mover nor the seconder has given us the assurance that the Commonwealth Office will accept these changes.

What is strange about this is that the Honourable Member who now moves this Motion in 1987, was the seconder for the Motion in 1983, and at that time he held a public meeting and discussed it with the members of his constituency before the matter reached the floor of the House. Because he said on that day in October 1983, and I quote exactly from the Hansard:

"Mr. President, I took this resolution as printed, to a meeting of my constituents. I explained the effect of the changes to them in detail, including the proposed additional amendments and I had no dissension to this resolution. The meeting was fairly well attended for a meeting of this nature. The meeting was well advertised so that anyone who did not come, it was not the fault of the meeting not being given publicity."

It is true that I held, since this Meeting started, three public meetings, one in Breakers, one in Savannah and one in Bodden Town, but not all Members are able to do this. Because it is very difficult for a Member to hold a public meeting when he is under pressure here every day of the week, and for say the Members that are here from Cayman Brac, it is virtually impossible for them to go off and discuss these matters. The majority of the Members have not held meetings in their constituency. It takes somebody with a real good constitution to take this day and night. The public have been denied the right to discuss this Motion, to have any input into it because the Member moving it did not give us sufficient notice for a matter of this nature. Captain Charles Kirkconnell said in 1983:

"My colleague and I had a public meeting. It was well attended by the leading citizens of the Lesser Islands, and we went into the details of the amendments to the Constitution and the reaction was favourable."

Mr. Craddock Ebanks from North Side had this to say:

"I myself held a meeting in my constituency, and while the turnout was not as good as I would have liked to have seen it, I got full support from the number who showed up."

And this ingredient is missing, and this is why I am making a proposal - that we do not finalize this matter today, but debate it and defer the vote on it until the April meeting. This is not an unreasonable request.

The Attorney General at the time made this comment:

"I understand, Mr. President, that there may be another consequential amendment to be moved by my Honourable friend (meaning the First Elected Member for Executive Council). But in the meantime, I would say that if the Honourable Third Elected Member for West Bay wants to become articulated as a law student, he would be welcome in the new law school."

But I want you, Sir, as President of this Legislative Assembly, to pay close attention to the remarks made by the Speaker of the House at that time, or by the Presiding Officer at that time:

"And I would note for the record, because I think this may be of significance to report to the United Kingdom Government when forwarding this Motion to them, that my impression is that the House was unanimous in agreeing to this Motion. I think that is correct."

And the Attorney General:

"Mr. President, Sir, I was about to say on a Motion of this importance that perhaps a formal roll call would place it firmly on the record."

And Mr. President went on to say:

"I had given any Member who had dissented an opportunity to make his dissent known and I think I can take it that all Members have supported the Motion. I think that that is clear enough on the record, and I shall certainly feel entirely free to inform the Secretary of State that it has the unanimous support of the Assembly Members."

This unanimous support came about simply because the Government in 1983, in putting forward the constitutional changes, followed the procedure which I have outlined. They discussed it informally with the Members, they got the consent of every Member, and then they brought it to the House. This has not been done.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would this be a convenient moment to the Member to pause? In that case I will suspend proceedings for approximately 15 minutes.

AT 11:19 THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:40 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated. Continuation of the debate on Private Member's Motion No.5/87. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, at the time of the suspension I had been dealing with the matter of the Motion for the constitutional changes with reference to changing the definition of "British subject". On that day we also dealt with another Government Motion, No.5, which established the Court of Appeal for the Cayman Islands, and although I will not go into much detail on this, I will say that a similar provision had been followed on that motion. Captain Mabry S. Kirkconnell who spoke on the Motion to establish the Cayman Islands Court of Appeal said:

"I would like to state that we also have the consensus of the majority of members of our constituency of the Lesser Islands. My colleague and myself had a meeting at the Aston Ruddy Civic Centre recently which was well attended. We carefully explained the meaning of this Motion, and it was accepted by all."

The reason why I have touched on this second motion is that the words of the President, when he put the question, are again very significant, and I would like you, Sir, as President of the Assembly, and in your role as Governor, to take note of these words. The President said:

"As I said when Government Motion No.4 was passed, my understanding is that the vote was unanimous. If I am incorrect, will any Member who votes against please let me know so that I can feel confident that when the Motion is forwarded to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office I may say it has been passed with the unanimous support of all Members of the House. I take it I may say that. Thank you very much."

And the records show that both of these Motions were passed unanimously.

Now I understand on the outside the Honourable Member is trying to let people believe that the reason why he did not call a meeting was because Members would not attend. This is not the reason. I think the reason is he has ignored the wishes of the public, and by handling the matter in this way, he has effectively denied the public the right to discuss this matter and the right to make any changes.

I see changes that should be made and will deal with them later on in my debate. But I know the Honourable Member will not accept any change because he has the mistaken idea that anything he puts forward is perfect. When a person reaches that stage it is a waste of time, really, to deal with him.

The Member here has reminded me that there was never any special meeting to deal with this specific matter. We have heard about some strange meetings, the secrets of which were divulged by the Member for North Side and the lady-Member for West Bay. And I believe those meetings flowed from other meetings dealing with different matters. But on this significant area, no attempt was made to call the members together, and it is so important a matter that the Motion should not be put to a vote but should be sent to a Select Committee, or to a Committee of the House, discussed and brought back with unanimous agreement and decided on in April. So all I am seeking today is for a delay.

I was disturbed by the manner of the Honourable First Elected Member when he introduced this Motion. He was most belligerent, and it appeared to me, that he was handing down an ultimatum for war. He started out with a violent attack on the press, he started out by attacking the student from Kalamazoo, and this was followed up by his strong supporter from North Side. I myself have often criticized the press, but I would like to say today that the standard of reporting in the Compass is the best I have ever seen it in my lifetime. This is not like the old days when Mary Lawrence was writing for the Caymanian Star and she was a candidate for the election herself, and would report in a most biased manner on all the other candidates. This does not happen any more. We know that it is no secret that she always gave special mention of the First Elected Member for West Bay in all her coverage in the Nor'wester, and that the editor at that time, Mr. Jim Graves, always reported favourably for political reasons on whatever went on. This does not happen any more. The reports, I think, are fair and accurate, and I must say that I find Miss Carol Winker an honest reporter who makes every effort to report accurately and fairly on the proceedings of this House. So I cannot think why the Honourable Member acted in such a belligerent manner towards the press, simply because they had written an editorial. But if the newspaper cannot comment on the most important piece of business before this Chamber, what else can they comment on? Now this is not to say that I will not again in the future find fault with the press, but I like to give the devil his due, and I think the Member's comments were totally unfair.

What is the hurry for this Motion? If it is so that the Honourable Member would like to deal with it in your time, since we are all familiar with you, there will be another meeting in April, and the matter could be decided upon then. If he is worried about the next election, that will not be until the end of next year. So I see no need to rush this matter.

The Honourable Member referred to some people saying that it would be difficult for them to get out of a wet paper bag, and I can only wonder if he has encountered this difficulty himself. You know, science has found that the average man's foot is getting bigger each year. But the Honourable First Elected Member for West Bay never seems to have any difficulty putting his foot in his mouth, and he did so when he mentioned that I had told him I could not support his Motion because my own supporters would not like it if I did business with him. And this is true, I told him that, that was only one of the reasons. The other reason, or one of the other reasons was that I could never think of bringing a motion for constitutional change without discussing it with the public. And he made it clear to me that this Motion was not to be leaked to anybody. He spoke to me, called me aside one evening in secret and asked me if I had time to talk about a certain matter, and I told him yes, and we arranged an appointment. I went to his office and spent a long time, perhaps at least an hour with him. He showed me a draft copy of the Motion which he gave me to take away after exacting from me that I would not show it to anybody else. And I kept my promise to him because it was really his business to make it public.

Now I did give an indication in the Throne Speech that the Member had gone wrong in his method of dealing with this, because I said, if the Government wants to make a constitutional change, they should have the courage to go to the public and publish what they want to do, make it a part of their political manifesto for the next election. Let the people at the polls decide if fundamental changes are to be made. I personally believe in change. Francis Bacon once said "He that will not apply new remedies must expect new evils." If there is a necessity to make a constitutional change which is for the betterment of the Island, I think the change should be made, but we should go about it the right way, and on a matter as delicate and as complex as the Constitution, we should give it a lot of publicity so that the lawyers in the community, the man on the street, all the people affected by it can give their criticisms. But this Government is afraid of criticism, and they are so afraid of doing wrong that they cannot do what is right. If a Member does not have the courage to stand up and let the public know what he intends to do, well that person is no longer fit to be a Member.

The Motion before the House contains many ambiguities, many areas are not clear. But there are certain specific areas of the Motion which are completely wrong. And although I know the Honourable First Elected Member will not change anything he has put forward, we still have in this Chamber other Members who are reasonable. I would trust that between now and the close of this debate, that they will either talk some sense into him or overpower him, and let this Motion as it stands be amended. I would like to say at the onset of this Motion, that I commend the Young Businessman's Association for the initiative they have taken in this matter, and if they as a group feel it is necessary to have certain constitutional amendments, I think they have gone about it the right way. They approached a Member of Government, but the Government, after receiving the recommendations, have bungled the job.

In 1983 the two motions for constitutional change were put forward on the Agenda of the Assembly as Government Motions. The Motion which is before us today, although it comes from a Member of Government, seems to have divested himself of his governmental cloak, and put it forward as a Private Member from West Bay. But I believe, and there could be arguments about this, that the Government should make a declaration as to its stand in any important matter.

Before I deal with the Motion generally I want to mention four specific areas in which I think the Motion is at fault. In order for me to support this Motion, there would have to be amendments to these areas.

Section 18(1) deals with the qualifications for elected membership, and the little (e) in that section, which deals with the persons born in the Islands, or a special group born outside the Islands, has been made subject to subsections (3) and (4) of this Motion, which means that the time spent abroad for certain matters like sickness, going to school, certain jobs, does not count against them. (4) has a saving provision for those people who are now qualified. But I feel that not only section (e) but also (f) should be subject to (3) and (4); that is, not only the persons born in the Islands, or the persons born outside the Islands in certain circumstances, but all the people mentioned in (f) should also be subject to the exclusions given in (3) and (4).

Now (f) deals with the people called "he":

"He was born outside the Islands, has resided in the Islands for a period or periods totalling not less than 15 years out of the 20 years immediately preceding the date of his nomination for election, and in the seven years immediately preceding the date of his nomination, has not been absent from the Islands for more than a total of 400 days."

Section (e) above that, which deals with a different class of people, enjoy the exclusions for jobs, the exclusions for medical attention, and the exclusions for going to school. And section (f) should also enjoy these exclusions. If we do not we are discriminating against the class of people.

Without such an amendment, time spent abroad by a potential Caymanian candidate due to education, medical treatment or employment would not be excluded when determining the 400 days absence from the Islands during the seven year period immediately preceding the nomination. In 18(1)(e) the people in that category have the exclusions. I am asking that it be extended to 18(1)(f) as well.

Also in the new 18(3), in determining the absence from the Island, they have only included (1)(e), they should also include (1)(f), because what happens is - this would be necessary if they made the first amendment, which I mentioned. Now in (3) they have listed four categories of people that would have time spent abroad excluded from their qualifications for membership. And those four people mentioned are: attendance as a pupil; attendance as a patient; employment of a seaman; employment of a crew member on an aircraft. But what about all the other people that might be connected with other jobs connected with the Islands. Do you tell me it is fair that if a pilot spends more than 400 days abroad working for Cayman Airways, that he is allowed to be a Member, yet the manager of the office of Cayman Airways in Miami or Houston, if he were a Caymanian and spent the same time abroad, would not be allowed to be a Member? This could never be fair. This has to be nonsense, utter nonsense - that you can tell the captain of a ship that if he spends the time abroad, that he can be a Member of the Legislative Assembly, yet somebody who worked in the shipping office in Jamaica, who was a Caymanian, and was otherwise qualified would not be allowed - how can there be a difference? But what amazes me with that section is - why is it limited to men going to sea? Because that is a declining market in the Cayman Islands.

Why is it limited only to men going to sea and to crew members on an aircraft? What about real estate agents, what about lawyers, what about doctors that may have a consultancy in some other country? What about Members of the Executive Council who may have to be abroad on Government business? This is a very serious omission in this Motion. And when they talk about discussing it, this section was added piecemeal, because the part about working on an aircraft was not on the draft which he showed me, but he had so many drafts that day I do not think he knew which one he was dealing with.

Anyway, this here is not a laughing matter, because if the section remains as it is, we could well deny certain Caymanians the right to be Members if their occupation was such that they had to be away for more than 400 days.

But the most ridiculous part of this Motion is section 18(2)(a) which says:

"At the date of his nomination for election, possesses no other citizenship, and has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship for which he may be eligible."

This is for determining for the purposes of sub-section 1(d) who is a qualified citizen. The whole of it reads:

"For the purposes of sub-section 1(d) of this section a qualified citizen is a British Dependent Territories Citizen by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands who either at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship and has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship for which he may be eligible."

Now the Honourable Member, in introducing the Motion, gave a very foolish explanation which indicated to me that he did not even vaguely understand the meaning of this clause. He gave as an illustration that if a Caymanian was married to a foreign woman, and did not take steps to claim the citizenship he would not be debarred. That is what this says. But he did not deal with the other side, to say what would happen to him if he had taken steps. The truth is, had he taken any steps he would be debarred. The word "steps" is extremely wide in its application. What are the steps for getting the citizenship of another country?

Let us say a Caymanian man marries an American woman, or let us say it is a Caymanian whose father is an American. What steps are necessary for a person to get the American citizenship? Well first of all the person, or somebody on his behalf would have to apply, an application would have to be made. If this application had been made, the person would be debarred from Membership. This has to be nonsense. I can understand if the person possesses the citizenship of another country, you may debar him being a Member - I can understand that part. But to say if he took any steps in the past that he will be debarred has to be foolishness. But do you know why we get foolishness in this? Because whoever drafted this was purposely trying to exclude specific people. So this must be changed because it is vague and would put at risk any person who took any steps to claim any other citizenship. Are we going, as sensible legislators, to allow the man from West Bay to do this to our country? Or are we going to force him to amend it whether he wants to or not? I know there are some Members that would like to say what I am saying, but they are afraid to buck him.

Now, Mr. President, having dealt with those four major areas that must be amended, if this vote is going to be unanimous, I will now turn to deal with the Motion generally.

I would like to say that in fairness to the Member for George Town, I do not think that these matters were explained to him when he was invited to be the seconder. And he too must have certain reservations on these matters. Although I know this is not a Government Motion, I would like the Attorney General to explain to the House the effects of these sections, and let the public hear, not from me, but from him, that certain people can be excluded if they took any steps in the past, no matter how many years ago, to have any other citizenship, and also explain the effects of why the section dealing with exemptions because of employment only applies to people in specific jobs, and not to people in jobs generally.

These are very serious faults with this Motion, and I trust it will not be sent to London in this manner because we are likely to get what we ask for. Those people up in London are not too concerned with us, they do not care if Mabry Kirkconnell can sit in the House again, they do not care if Jim Bodden can sit in the House again, they do not care if Vassel Johnson can sit in the House again. They do not care if Orren Merren can sit in the House again. They do not care if Tom Jefferson, who may be an Elected Member one day, and has an American wife, will be able to sit in the Assembly as an Elected Member. They are not concerned with these petty things. But this Motion was purposely tailor made to exclude specific individuals who may be a threat to the establishment, and we must not let the First Elected Member for West Bay get away with this.

The Motion reads, in the third paragraph:

"WHEREAS it is felt that unless steps are taken to control those persons who can be elected to the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands, and those who can vote in elections therefor, it will lead to social instability and unrest."

What we are doing here today will lead quicker to social unrest, and social instability than the Constitution remaining the way it is. The one protection we have is that the most important single ingredient for being a Member of the House is not written, and that is, he must get the good will of the public. This has been found out in many districts, where would-be aspirants did everything honestly and dishonestly trying to get elected, but the one thing they could not do was to change the will of the Caymanian public. The most important ingredient in the business of membership is the ingredient of winning the confidence of the public, and we must never lose sight of that.

The Motion before the House changes some of the qualifications for membership, but many of the qualifications set out in the Motion already existed in the Constitution. One requirement is that the person must be over the age of 21. This already existed in the Constitution from 1972. Another requirement is that the Member must possess Caymanian status and this requirement has been in the Constitution. What we are changing is that up until now, or since 1983, the person had to be a British citizen or a British Dependent Territories citizen. But we are now changing it so that the person must be a qualified citizen, and a qualified citizen must be a British Dependent Territories citizen by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands. So if this passes, this will wipe out a whole lot of people that will not in the future be able to qualify. This will mean that once this goes into operation, unless there is any savings provision, and I will deal with that later, in future generations there will be no English people, no Jamaican people, no other person capable of becoming a Member unless the person becomes a British Dependent Territories citizen, connected with the Cayman Islands. In other words, a British Dependent Territories citizen from Turks Island, or one of the other Crown Colonies, would not be eligible because his British Dependent Territories citizenship is not connected with the Islands.

Now a savings provision is put in 25, which allows a person who is elected to vote, or who is qualified to vote, to retain that qualification. But when the grandfather clause was put into 18, which deals with membership, it was not all inclusive. In (4) it says "The persons referred to in paragraph (e)" (which are the persons with Caymanian connection) - and that means, shall not be subject to these amendments, there is a saving clause with regard to the people mentioned in (e), which is the persons with Cayman connections. But there is not a blanket provision like there is for the voters. So I think it is entirely wrong to take away any rights that existed on this date. What we need to do is to amend the Constitution to make provision from this day onward. And if we were doing what - I think it was the Member from North Side suggested - and doing it from today onward, I could agree, and I am referring to when he spoke about second generation candidates - people who were born here of persons who were Caymanians, and no-one else. Then people would know from today onwards that if you want to qualify, you had better meet your residence requirement, you had better have no other citizenship, and so on.

But this is an indication of what happens when somebody runs to the Member and says we would like a change. And he takes it upon himself to make an intricate and a delicate change in a matter whose complexity is beyond his ability to fathom. This is what happens when these amendments are made without any discussion from the other eleven Members of the Assembly, when it is made without any press releases, when it is made without any announcement on the radio, when it is made without the help of their Godchild, Open Line. This is a serious state. If we allow one man who is inflexible, and who is fixed in his opinions, and who believes that he is perfect to push through these changes, we would be weak indeed, and I could not be proud to be associated with these Members after today. So the only way open to the House is to force the Member to withdraw this Motion, or at least vote against it and defeat it if that becomes necessary, and bring it back when the House meets in April. You see, if a man is lost - I would not say if he is a fool - if a man is lost and knows that he is lost, he may find his way back, but if he does not know, nothing can help him.

So the fundamental changes that are made in the requirements for membership are that while the Constitution as it now stands, required a person to be a British citizen or a British Dependent Territories citizen, these requirements are narrowed down to where the person must be a British Dependent Territories citizen who is connected with the Islands. Another fundamental change that has been made, and one that has been sneaked in, probably even without the seconder mentioning it, because no Member has mentioned it, is that while the Constitution as it stood required the Member to be domiciled, the new amendment requires that he be domiciled and resident. No Member that has spoken so far has mentioned this fundamental change, and I will say that the First Elected Member for West Bay was smart enough to sneak this even past the watchful eyes of the seconder of the Motion. We cannot blame him, because he was only asked at the eleventh hour to second this Motion, and did not have the chance to change anything in it, did not have the chance to have any input into it.

Also in this amendment, they have created a new breed of man called the qualified citizen. That qualified citizen has to meet for the purposes of section 1(d), certain requirements. He must be a Dependent Territories citizen by reason of his connection with the Cayman Islands who, either at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship and has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship for which he may be eligible. And right at the outset, that would wipe out a broad spectrum of people, because we know the history of these Islands, we know that many of our forefathers went to the United States, became citizens, and their children had a right to citizenship and that many of them claimed it, and were glad to work in the United States on jobs where they could make money. Now it seems to me that even if these people gave up their American citizenship, or even if they did not go through with it as a class, they could be debarred.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I wonder whether this could be a convenient point for the Member to break for lunch? Very well, in that case I will suspend proceedings until approximately 2:15 p.m.

AT 12:46 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2.19 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Continuation of the debate on Private Member's Motion 5/87. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, we more or less agreed yesterday that we would make an attempt to finish this Motion this evening, even if we have to sit beyond 4:30 p.m. and as I know Members do not really welcome that idea, I will try to finish in a few moments, so as to allow other speakers time to make their speeches.

Earlier on, just before the adjournment, in comparing the changes with the existing section in the Constitution, I mentioned that the old Constitution said that the candidate must be domiciled in the Islands, and the change here said that he must be domiciled and resident, which is correct. But I should have gone on to point out that in 18(c) of the old Constitution, there is a provision for residency, or for the candidate to be resident, and it reads: "He, or one of his parents was born in the Islands, and he has resided in the Islands for a period totalling not less than five out of the seven years." And also in (d) "He has resided in the Islands for a period or periods totalling not less than 15 years out of the 20 years immediately preceding his nomination."

To sum up, I would like to again mention the points which I spoke strongly against. One of them is 18(2)(a), that of possessing no other citizenship, "... and has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship", to my mind, that refers not only to the state that exists on the day of his nomination, but to any action which the candidate may have taken in the past. It is my conclusion that if a candidate had taken any steps in the past to claim citizenship in another country, he could well be debarred by this section. I trust that this will be amended.

I also feel strongly about the section which makes the exemptions for employment, section 18(3), and to say that the employment should not be limited to seamen on ocean-going vessels and the crew of an aircraft, because there are many other people who may have to spend time abroad in connection with their jobs - jobs which are related to the Island. These people should not be excluded. The definition is too narrow.

Finally I would say that the amendment which the Member made and which appears in the Motion before the House to add that (e), 18(e) is subject to sections (3) and (4), that a similar amendment should have been made to (f), so that they too, would be subject to (3) and (4).

I view this matter as one which is very grave and one which is very serious, and regardless of how the Members may try to explain away their actions in the presentation of this matter, it was definitely very badly handled. Yet there is time for the Member to save his face by recommending that you do not put the question, that you defer putting the question, or that he simply withdraw the Motion, and when he has discussed it properly with his legal advisers, that he attempt to remedy the deficiencies which have been pointed out.

The First Elected Member for

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, Private Member's Motion No.5/87, a Motion requesting this Honourable Legislative Assembly to petition Her Most Gracious Majesty to change the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order, 1972 with respect to qualification of Members of the Legislative Assembly and Electors which is now before this Honourable House, a very important Motion. I think it is a necessary Motion. It does give me concern in certain areas, but, Mr. President, the figures are alarming. The Motion clearly states by the year 1990 the percentage of non-Caymanians could exceed Caymanians. I think the destiny of the Cayman Islands should be definitely in the hands of Caymanians, therefore I support the Motion.

I am one in this Honourable House who, whether fortunate or unfortunate, was born outside the Cayman Islands, although my parents and all my grandparents are Caymanians, and I am a Caymanian in every sense of the word, and a Cayman Bracker besides. But I sincerely hope, as it is my understanding, that there is nothing in this Motion that would limit people like myself who through no reason of their own, were born in another country; many of them, their mother was taken there for medical reasons, or their parents, through necessity sought employment outside the territory and they happen to have been living in another country at the time of their birth. This was no disrespect to the Cayman Islands, and much gratitude needs to be paid to all Caymanians who stayed here and built up the Cayman Islands that all of us have a place to return to.

I am proud of the progress that has been made in the Cayman Islands over the last many years. I am proud that we can boast over 150 years of parliamentary democracy here in the Cayman Islands. I think everyone who contributed to the state of our development must be congratulated, but I feel it is our responsibility to preserve what our forefathers fought the seas for, and over the years have made it possible that we have what we have here in the Cayman Islands today.

I would like to congratulate the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council for taking the bold stand of bringing this Motion to the House. I know it is not all the time that it is popular - I myself fear constitutional amendments. I campaigned in both elections that I am very determined that I would do anything within my power to maintain the Cayman Islands as a British Crown Colony, and I shall never change that view. I feel that our entire future depends on us being a British Crown Colony, and I would not stand in this House or outside and do or say anything that would jeopardize our position as a British Crown Colony. But I do feel that this is protecting the future of the Cayman Islands in order that we can continue to develop this territory, that generations to come will say thank you to the Legislature who sat here today.

Mr. President, maybe there are amendments, I have listened very carefully to all the debate, and I could go on and on and on for quite a long time reading what they have read and rehearsing all that has been put forth, but it is not in my style to stand up here and take a long time - I know we are trying to complete the debate today, and I shall not try to prolong it. But I would like to say that I, being one that may be personally affected by this constitutional change, do hope that due consideration is being taken that it will not inflict hardships on people who have contributed and do have the future of these Islands at heart. We have a lot of expatriates who have come here and have done much good to help us to develop, and I feel that we must consider and thank them for their help, and not try to in any way, disenfranchise them from their right to vote. I agree that if we are to be a part of the Cayman Islands, that we should be a resident here, a long standing resident, I do not agree that just because we have Caymanian connections we can come from abroad and be fully conversant on all that is happening here. I think the waiting period is wise, I support it. I do not feel that the time that we say, 400 days you can be away, is being too hard on people. I feel that if I was away from these Islands for over 400 days, I do not think that I would know what I was going on, in order that I could make an intelligent decision in choosing the candidates in my constituency when election time rolled around.

So Mr. President, with these few words I support the Motion and I sincerely hope that we are making history today in moving forward the future of the Cayman Islands.

Thank you Mr. President.

The Second Elected Member for

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President I was trying to give the Third Member for West Bay a chance to go before me this time, but as usual she prefers to see what I have to say. I guess I will get a slap now for what I will say. But let me warn anyone who so tries to contradict or misconstrue what I say here today, that I am prepared to hackle them into submission after I have finished.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I hope the Member is not threatening to disrupt the proceedings of the House.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Well Mr. President, with your protection Sir, I would not be able to. But you know, you and I have little thing going, I know you like to stop me when you want to, so ...

MR. PRESIDENT:

I do not think you will need too much protecting (LAUGHTER).

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

No doubt Sir, this Motion before this House has invoked much debate, not only in this House, but by the general public as well, because the Motion seeks to address and expresses a feeling which has been steadily growing greater and greater in this country. And that feeling is that we must take steps to rectify the growing imbalance between Caymanians and foreign nationals.

Mr. President, lest anyone get the wrong impression about where this Motion originated, I will say that a very long time ago, the Member for North Side drafted a Motion which was given to the First Member of Council, but the First Member of Council asked that it be held back. And so I believe that that is to a great extent, where the Motion originated, although others were pressing for similar amendments. But we must be careful where we lay, or to whom we try to give credit, if anyone can get credit for this Motion.

I will take this opportunity to thank the Honourable First Member for Council for bringing the Motion, and I would say, too, that I think his introduction was very good, at stages a very passionate plea, saying that this is our last bastion. I think that is the word he used. I sometimes get that feeling, Sir, and display it often in this House, and I am sometimes ridiculed for it.

Mr. President, the tenor of debate so far has been that the Motion will effectively preclude the manipulation of Caymanian electoral and legislative affairs by those who retain a foreign citizenship, by keeping them from (1) standing for election, and (2) by keeping them from voting. I will support the Motion, Mr. President, but I am not too sure that this resolution will bring about the desired effect it is being said it will. I feel that the door is being left open and it is only those who come after the passing of the Motion, and after Her Majesty has consented to its request, who will be hindered in any way. All speakers, especially the mover and his seconder, have made this quite plain. If, Mr. President, we are in danger three years down the road of being overrun, as is being said, then with all common sense, Mr. President, surely, that danger exists today. Will the proposed amendment lessen the danger?

If we are in danger of these foreign nationals taking over then we must ask ourselves whether the 15 years will serve as a deterrence to them. You know, Mr. President, that I am a blunt man. I speak very bluntly. That is why you often give the public the impression that I am doing wrong. I will pose the question: who are the people who are always mentioned concerning being a possible candidate for election? And we can think of a few names. And it is always those people who have the required amount of years in this country. I do not know whether they would ever seek election, but certainly this Motion gives them every opportunity to.

The British Nationality Act of 1981 says in section 12 and 13 and I would like to read section 12 which deals with renunciation and section 13 which deals with resumption of citizenship. Section 12 dealing with renunciation says:

"If any British citizen of full age and capacity makes in the prescribed manner, a declaration of renunciation of British citizenship, then subject to sub-sections (3) and (4) the Secretary of State shall call the declaration to be registered. On the registration of a declaration made in pursuance of this section the person who made it shall cease to be a British citizen. A declaration made by a person in pursuance of this section shall not be registered unless the Secretary of State is satisfied that the person who made it will, after the registration, have, or acquire some citizenship or nationality other than British citizenship. And if that person does not have any such citizenship or nationality on the date of registration, and does not acquire some such citizenship or nationality within six months from that date, he shall be deemed to have remained a British citizen notwithstanding the registration. The Secretary of State may withhold registration of any declaration made in pursuance of this section if it is made during any war in which Her Majesty may be engaged in right of Her Majesty's Government in the United Kingdom. For the purposes of this section, any person who has been married shall be deemed to be of full age."

That was the section dealing with renunciation. The part dealing with resumption, section 13, says that:

"Subject to sub-section (2) a person who has ceased to be a British citizen as a result of a declaration of renunciation shall be entitled, on an application for his registration as a British citizen to be registered as such a citizen if:

(a) he is of full capacity; and
(b) his renunciation of British citizenship was necessary to enable him to retain or acquire some other citizenship or nationality.

A person shall not be entitled to registration under sub-section (1) on more than one occasion. If a person of full capacity who has ceased to be a British citizen as a result of a declaration of renunciation for whatever reason, makes an application for his registration as such a citizen, the Secretary of State, may, if he thinks fit, cause him to be registered as such a citizen."

Mr. President, Sir, if we are so scared about these people who have the required amount of years today, but would be hindered because of possessing some foreign citizenship, it would seem that any one of them so determined and anxious to get elected can do exactly what the mover and some Members have suggested about a casino. Those who are here today for 15 years can give up their citizenship, they can prepare themselves for an election, and if we say we will be overrun in three years time, you can well believe that we are in danger today. They can get elected in a constituency like George Town, for instance. They can get elected, get the casino the mover mentioned, get the $5 million dollars somebody talked about, mess up the country, give up his seat, reapply for his citizenship, and there would be nothing to stop him from regaining his citizenship and going home, leaving these Islands holding the bag. These are the possibilities under this section. Now whether someone would go to that extreme I do not know, but if you are going to say you are going to do something, let us do it. Point blank. If we are so concerned, these are the areas we need to address. This is the area we are scared about, and this Motion would seem to be only window dressing, satisfying the dislikes of some people.

Now we heard all sorts of things in the debate. If we are so concerned about foreign nationals getting involved in commerce, starting this little business here and there, the little shoe store here, getting involved in the travel industry, getting involved in practically all the little other businesses, then if, as Members of the House, we are concerned about this, we have the means today to do something about it. But we must have the courage of our convictions and take the necessary steps.

I gave this Motion a lot of thought, and I have said, I will support it. But, I really do not think that some foreign national getting in this House today is the real or only problem which we need to give prominence to. It can be a first step, yes, but I believe more so, it is those out there who also are prepared, as I said before, and some people have said, to get into the little $5,000 businesses which Caymanians can get into or already have, that is a major problem. These are the areas that must be addressed. If any Member of this Assembly believes that the majority of the foreign nationals in this country will not support one of their own businesses, or one of their own who has a business venture, over me or you or the next man out there, we are mistaken. There are plenty who will call you in and give you business, but there are many who, because one of their own has a business, prefers to support him. And this is where problems are going to emerge in this country. They might not get into the pig business, or the hardware business, or wholesale business, but they are getting into those little businesses which Caymanians can get into because they require small amounts of capital, and Caymanians are getting hurt.

Mr. President, they will form all sorts of excuses to keep you out. I remember giving an example in November or December of an incident I found on West Bay Road. And, although I explained it fully and without any discrimination, as I usually do, I was called the next day and told I did not have a job which I was doing. I am a fair man, I can take competition, but what about the next man? What will he do about it? But are we addressing this problem? No we are not addressing that problem.

The Motion talks about Caymanians being outnumbered in three years time. The mover says we are probably already overrun. Well, let us have the courage of our convictions and take the necessary steps to do something about it today. I believe, it is now time that the Government embarked on a fundamental review of Immigration policy as a good step towards the preparation of modern legislation on which to base the future conduct of these Islands' immigration programme. And it should be done for several reasons. It should be done to clear up the problems we now have with those people who are having passport problems and so on, who are for instance married to Caymanians. And it should be done to provide foreign nationals living and working here with a clear understanding of what their position is in this country. We should be man enough to say to them you can work here, live here, but we are not going to give you status.

MR. PRESIDENT: I hope the Member is going to relate this to the present Motion, because you do seem to be going a little away from it.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: I figured you would stop me, Mr. President, but you must remember ...

MR. PRESIDENT: Cautioning you, not stopping you.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: No, but you are doing a good job of stopping me.

But if you were listening to other Members, Sir, you would know that they touched on these areas. And I think it is unfair now to ask me not to stray into them.

MR. PRESIDENT: I do not recall - maybe I was not paying as much attention as I should have - but I do not recall a discussion about Immigration policy.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: I believe you were sleeping Sir.

But, Mr. President, we are talking about Caymanians, the Motion speaks about - "it is now projected that native-born Caymanians will be outnumbered by immigrants by approximately the year 1990".

MR. PRESIDENT: The Motion is about whether they should vote and whether they should be able to stand for election.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President ... you know, Mr. President, with all due respect to the Chair, I think you are wrong. The Motion talks about this, and I am relating this to that section.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well I have not stopped you yet, I have just asked you to relate it to the Motion, that is all.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, with due respect Sir, it is related to the Motion, and you have stopped me.

What I am saying Sir, I believe if we come straight forward and say plainly what we are saying in so many little different ways, then it would be more welcomed. All those foreign nationals who have come here and made a contribution, and is of no hurt to anyone will appreciate us making the position clear to them. They want a clear understanding of what their position is. They have to plan their future. And it is only fair to them that they should have that understanding in clear and unambiguous terms, rather than coming here and saying it in so many little different ways. We need to tell them, "look, you cannot run, not under fifteen years". That is what we need to tell them. We need to tell them, "look you can come here and work, get your permit, stay here the required number of years, but you cannot live here forever". What I am saying is, that the people, the foreign nationals in the country, would appreciate this, and this would be better for us, we would know what we are doing, they would know what they are doing. But do not come talking about we are doing the right thing when we are only taking it a half step. A half a loaf is better than none, I agree, but are we going to solve any problems with it?

Now, Mr. President, you stopped me just now, and I suppose you will stop me again.

MR. PRESIDENT: Only if you do not stick to the Motion.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Oh, I am sticking to the Motion, you just stay awake up there and listen, with due respect, because what I am going to deal with now is those editorials that were touched on here dealing with the Motion that I brought. But if you tell me I cannot touch it, I am prepared to close up this book and sit down, because it is my right to reply to it.

MR. PRESIDENT: Carry on for the moment, because it is perfectly true that the editorials were touched on, and I thought at that stage were appropriately touched on.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, reference was made, as you have agreed now, to the motion I brought here for an order of national heroes which was defeated and reference was made to the two very good and appropriate editorials of the Caymanian Compass which supported that Motion.

Most Members mentioned national pride and awareness. Several Members did. This is what I was dealing with in the Motion that I brought, and this is what the Compass was dealing with in their two editorials. Now I am talking about the two editorials entitled "National Pride" and I will read them out.

MR. PRESIDENT: The editorials I remember other Members talking about were different editorials, I do not think those two ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: These were mentioned Sir, do not worry. These were mentioned.

MR. PRESIDENT: What I remember were the editorials that dealt with constitutional change and that sort of thing. This was appropriate, but we cannot reopen debate about National Heroes, I am afraid, and if you attempt to, I will have to stop it. Carry on for the moment, because you may be able to relate this to the Motion, we will see.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, it is hard to debate Sir, with your interrupting, and I can see that you are not going to allow me to make the point I was going to make, because I need several minutes to do it, and you have told me I cannot. But I would just like to say, Sir, and these were mentioned, they were mentioned. If you go and search the Hansards, you will remember the First Member saying something about Garfield Sobers or Cipriani.

MR. PRESIDENT: Yes, that is quite true, I have not stopped you mentioning them, I have just cautioned you against trying to ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: No, but you are certainly not giving me the chance to develop my argument. That is where me and you are getting heated here this afternoon.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am just nervous that your argument will tend to be a reopening of the debate that we had during your motion. But you carry on, and if I think it is, I will stop you when the time comes.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Well you have certainly distracted me so much now that I am kind of scared to get into it.
Mr. President ...

MR. PRESIDENT:
so easily frightened.

I did not know the Member was

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President ... no, let me explain to you, and I am not going to say any more on this, because I am not going to have the chance I want. But let me tell you this. When you say I am frightened, yes, because I am human in this House, and I know how much fun is made at me. And I know that often times you rule wrong, and when I get up to correct you, it is said that I am being disrespectful to you and it is made much of in my constituency. I am not going to say any more on it, it is just a pity that it was not passed, seeing that some Members came here and tried to talk about national pride and awareness after they sat down on the Government bench and said nothing. And all the Compass was drawing attention to, was saying, 'look you could at least have debated it'. But I am not going to get a chance, you have told me that, I know.

However, I will say this. I am sorry I did not give the kind of debate that I wanted to give on this Motion. You have quite rightly distracted me. I will support the Motion with what I have said, that we must be truthful with what we are going to do, we must tell the foreign national in this country where he stands, if you are going to tell Caymanians I am going to do as you ask and stop them from running, stop them from running. Do not say anything about 15 years. Do not say anything about 20 years. I can understand, when it comes to voting, because you cannot very well disenfranchise to an extent, but let me ask you this: if we found ourselves in so much trouble as we are saying that we will be in, and some Members are saying that we might be in already, what would stop us if we had to stop them from running? Mr. President, I could not go to Bermuda and run. I cannot go to Jamaica and run. I cannot go to England and run. And I think that the foreign national in the country understands that point. They understand that. But what I do not like is when we come here and say that we can do such and such a thing, and we really did not do anything, because the people that we hear mentioned all the time will be the candidates if they want to be the candidates, because they have the required amount of years.

Now, you all can go away and have your good fun and say that McKeeva did not make much sense. Well, I want to tell you, Mr. President, that you, this afternoon, have quite effectively stopped me from giving the kind of debate I wanted to give.

I am sorry, the Third Elected

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I rise in support of Private Member's Motion No. 3/87, a Motion requesting this Honourable Legislative Assembly to petition Her Most Gracious Majesty to change the Cayman Islands (Constitution) Order 1972 with respect to qualifications of Members of the Legislative Assembly and electors.

The Motion before us is not only necessary, it is urgent. With that in mind, we need to get on with the job expeditiously and having said that, I must hasten to add that in spite of this urgency, we must tread carefully when putting this legislation in place. In other words, we must move but we must move with caution. I think the Motion seeks to do just that. Back some 16 or 17 years ago in the report of the Earl of Oxford and Asquith, mention was made of the strong possibility of Caymanians being at a political disadvantage in relation to immigrants and those Caymanians who lived abroad who might return here. In those 17 years which have elapsed, the situation has not grown any less serious, but much more serious.

The Motion before us is seeking not to disrupt or to destroy the privilege of persons with "roots" in Cayman who have been abroad and returned, nor is it seeking to put at disadvantage those who have lived here and contributed to the welfare of this country. One might say although it seeks to curtail or to limit how far anyone can go in respect of naming his or her representative to this House, it does not mean that they will go unrepresented. I do not think that there is any minority group within these Islands today who could truthfully say that their interests are not protected in this House, certainly not if they consider the Members of the present Government. Having said that, the Caymanians who has lived here for a long time has given his best to this country, deserves to be kept in the forefront - the interests of those people who have stayed on this Island through thick and thin, when times were not so good, up until the present time, have to be considered. They certainly cannot be at a disadvantage through any lack of foresight on our part in getting this legislation across.

Mention was made of Caymanians being outnumbered. The Honourable First Elected Member of Council who is also the First Elected Member for West Bay, brought this Motion actually as a Member of the Legislative Assembly, did pose a question as to whether or not we may not already have been outnumbered even at this time.

Mr. President, much debate has gone on about this Motion, and I do not particularly wish to be repetitious nor to take up the time of the House nor of the listening public in just simply going over what has been said. But in considering this Motion, of primary importance to me is the fact that the very ingredient, that main attraction which drew expatriates to this country, which perhaps has even in many ways, resulted in the return home of Caymanians living abroad, could be easily destroyed if legislation of this nature is not put in place. In spite of our economic stability, our prosperity, our level of income for most people, standard of living probably the highest or certainly second to none in the West Indies or perhaps in the world - all that is well and good, but the basic ingredient, the most important aspect of this whole issue in my mind, is the fact that what has brought about that prosperity, that standard of living, came about because of us, the people of the Cayman Islands. That is what drew people here in the first place.

Mr. President, brewing within the minds and the hearts of many Caymanians is that thought that perhaps people may come here for something other than us. That their objective is a short-term objective. In some instances, this is not totally inaccurate. It is easy for an expatriate, be he from Canada, the United States, Nicaragua, Jamaica, the United Kingdom, wherever, having established himself in this country, to get himself a following of his own, to get himself a seat in Government, and carry an election in this Island of 20,000 people and in the long run, or in the short term, to manipulate in such a way that control of every important body in this country is not controlled by Caymanians with roots. It has been mentioned here that many, if any disruption were to take place in this country, would leave and return from whence they came. Many Caymanians are not in a situation like this.

Mr. President, what I want to emphasize this afternoon is this. This legislation is meant for more than one reason, and I can see it above all else preventing hostility, animosity and prejudices from developing in this country. This is a unique Island, or a unique three Islands. The Caymanian people are separate and apart from any that I have come across anywhere in the world, and I have had occasion to meet them of all classes, colours and creeds. We are a unique little group.

Mr. President, some years ago, in discussion with my grandfather, I asked him why is it that the size of this Island is not necessarily what makes it such a beautiful place to live? It is not necessarily that it is small and the population is small, because I am surprised to learn that in other Islands even in the West Indies with small populations, there is disruption, there is social unrest, many things go on which do not take place in our country. And he went on to tell me, Mr. President, that when these Islands were inhabited, many of those who came here first were people who after the abolition of slavery left their plantations in Jamaica and elsewhere, came here and many of them who fell among that class of employers who treated their slaves good, their slaves did not wish to remain behind, and so they came to this Island with them. When they arrived here, portions of property, division of property, large tracts of land were given to white, black and in-between. History since then will prove that some of the black families in this country happen to own some of the largest tracts of land, even along the Seven Mile Beach area and other places. He tells me, Mr. President, it was not unusual for some white families in George Town to have their slaves eat at the same table, some of them lived right in the same home, and the situation which developed was one of complete tranquility, peace, harmony, and that continued throughout the history of these Islands.

One of the reasons why I do not subscribe to the name Pirate's Week - and I will get off that immediately. What I am saying, Mr. President, what the Caymanian people are made of, what sets them apart, above many, is not necessarily what we have experienced over the last several years. It is what we had from the beginning of the settlement of these Islands. And this is what we want to preserve. These Islands are in trust, and this Government and the people of this country must ensure that when we turn it over to the next generation, they have something of which to be proud. We can offer them money, we can offer them a good standard of living, we can offer them many things. But what we are here to do with this Motion is to seek to retain for the people of the Cayman Islands their identity which is second to none in the world.

Mr. President, much has been said about the expatriate here, there and everywhere. As I have said often in this House, what we experience now in no small way must be attributed to the help and the expertise which we have been able to gain by the expatriate being in our midst. We have some bad apples. What we are to ensure with this Motion is that the bad apples do not disrupt the whole keg so that not even the good ones stand a chance. Because what we have to ensure in this country is that the few people who get Caymanian status, the few people who have been allowed to become one of us, as it were, does not institute a situation where even the person who is here to simply be amongst us and to do and be like the Caymanian people, finds himself the innocent suffering with the guilty.

Mr. President, this is what I see this Motion as doing. Not only protecting the Caymanian, but protecting the non-Caymanian as well. I have nothing against Jamaicans or Nicaraguans, United States citizens, United Kingdom citizens, Canadians. I remember, I am old enough to remember when our seamen made use of the opportunities which each of these countries afforded. I know that Nicaragua allowed our men the opportunity of fishing for turtle. I know that Jamaica gave us teachers and doctors, medical facilities, we did not have much to trade in return. They wanted our thatched rope and what else - a few other things. Even Cuba, before the ugly head of Communism arose in that country, was a country that assisted us in many respects. We went there for medical reasons, foodstuffs and other things we were able to get from that country. In Canada, many of the seamen from our Islands found employment from that country. The United States, what it has meant to us, I could stand here all night and perhaps not get through with the things we have been able to accomplish through our association with that country. The United Kingdom has stood by us, served us, watched over us, made us feel secure and until now, that country is one of the greatest, and perhaps will ever be in my mind. However, having said that, this is a small country of some 20,000 people, and we are only able to absorb so many within our midst.

This Motion, Mr. President, in one way or another, seeks to ensure that we hold our own destiny in our hands. We can befriend others, we can invite them into our home, to our shores, but we cannot let them take over. It is just as simple as that. The tourists who come to this place look for it as a mecca, as a haven, as perhaps one of the last places in the world where they can find complete relaxation and a genuine friendliness and harmony, a lack of social unrest, a lack of poverty, a lack of beggars on the street. Mind you, they pay dearly for it. This is an expensive place. But in today's world, with the turmoil and disruption every time we turn on the radio or television, it is here, there, almost everywhere. These little Islands are a mecca, are a home away from home for people who seek to replenish themselves, to cope with the stress of today's world. We must keep it that way. It is going to ensure that we follow carefully and be ever so watchful that we do not let ourselves be beguiled into thinking that rapid growth, a lot of people walking the streets, and a lot of money in our pockets are the only thing that will make this country survive.

Mr. President, we have to be careful. In our country today we have to be careful. I think, and I do not like to bring this subject up again, but I will take it as an example, I have had a number of Caymanian people who have said to me, why is it that the Taxi Association has been so infiltrated with people who do not truly represent the Caymanian? Their attitude, their behaviour, their drive and quest for the dollar, they forget the tourist and what the Caymanians have been giving to him over these years. We have to be careful, we have to ensure that legislation is in place that some other nationality does not come in and get their foot in the door of important organizations such as the Taxi Association and the Hotels Association. Do you know that on the Executive Board of the Hotels Association, almost every individual except one young lady, an office manager, is not a Caymanian with roots or not even one with status? Can you tell me, Mr. President, when this Island is represented abroad, that almost two thirds if not more, of the managers of hotels or condos are non-Caymanians, some of them only here for a couple of years. Why is this? Who can best represent these Islands except those who were born and bred and know what makes this place tick as the First Elected Member for West Bay mentioned in his earlier speech? Mr. President, even in the Police Department is it impossible to get so many people from one country in that place that the Police Department is almost totally non-Caymanian? Can you see how they could be manipulated and things could go wrong in this country?

There are those out there that are asking questions, I will not go into the editorials of the paper or other letters that were written, enough has been said on that and I think well covered. But what the listening public must remember is that legislation brought to this House through this Government is not done to harm any one individual or group, the total overall consideration is the people of the Cayman Islands, their children, their grandchildren and what this country is going to be when this Government is finished.

Mr. President, this Motion is a good Motion. I did have some notes, I do not know that I have followed them at all. What I am saying, if this country is left to individuals who seek to put their own in place, we are going to be in trouble. It is a known fact that certain individuals who have been granted status in this country, I can think right now of certain restaurant facilities, when it comes to a waitress or a cook, they can find a Caymanian, but you ask me how often you see a Maitre 'd' or somebody in a position that pays good money, can move up in that establishment. They will send to Europe, or Canada, or someplace else and they will keep bringing them in until they have gotten rich and left and then they will bring another one. This is the way it goes, and Caymanians are beginning to notice it.

You have people who come here and they get status, and when it comes to the important jobs they never can find somebody suitable in Cayman, and they bring in a friend, a brother or a sister, or someone, until they have got their pockets lined and then they bring in another one. But the real important, well-paying jobs are never for the Caymanian. We do not have every company like that, Mr. President. If we had we would have already reached that stage at which I am now expressing my concerns, but this is exactly the situation we seek to curtail, to eliminate and to avoid in this country. The Caymanian people must have their own destiny in their hands. With the help of Almighty God we have done it over these years and we can do it again.

And, Mr. President, we have many suitors out there. This Government is going to be faced with many a proposition which at face value may seem to be what the Caymanian people need. But I hope that the fact that we have a limited labour force, and we are an Island of 20,000 people, and that this country will move along at a slow and even pace without going headlong into destruction by bringing in too many people who will disrupt our way of life.

Mr. President, I support this Motion. I think it is a good Motion. There are many other reasons why it is before this House, but what I would like to remind this Honourable House of today is that the atmosphere and the peace and tranquillity we have today is too precious to lose it by not having such legislation in place, because unless the Caymanian people feel more secure in their own homes, there lies on the horizon a situation whereby even the tourist trade, the business and everything else which is attracted to these Islands will no longer be ours to enjoy.

Mr. President, I support the Motion and I thank this Honourable House for giving me an opportunity to speak thereon. Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? In that case I call on the mover to reply.

I know that the House has said they would like to finish business today, sitting late if necessary. If the mover thought he was not going to be more than half an hour or so, I would be quite content to suspend proceedings for a while. If he thought he might be an hour or more, I think in fairness to the House we might go straight on now.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I have no written reply so I would suggest that we take the break, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Very well, in that case I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 3:37 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:55 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please be seated. Continuation of the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 5/87. The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Mr. President, at this point Sir, I find myself in a bit of a dilemma, not the dilemma that the Second Elected Member of Bodden Town suggested I would find myself in or might even believe now that I am in, but the dilemma is, that had not particularly the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town raised issues which I must reply to, I would be happy at this time to sit down after thanking Members and ask you to put the Motion to the vote. Because I believe that the last speech was in fact on the high level which I asked Members to try to keep the debate to, and in fact, which I myself attempted to do, I might not have always succeeded in doing so, but that is the dilemma I am in. Not the one that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town thinks I am in. Because, Mr. President, I am going to put him so deep in a hole that he will not be able to dig himself out.

I would like to start by thanking Members for their contributions to this Motion, and I am satisfied that even those who have indicated non-support for it, if they are still here when I am finished will give their support to it in the end and we will get unanimity at the vote.

The first point I would like to make, or to reiterate is that I have no problem with bringing this Motion to the House because it is consistent with the manifesto on which I ran. And this is a published manifesto. On the front it has as near as possible, a replica of the Cayman flag and on the back it has the words of our national song "Beloved Isle Cayman" which we sang at each campaign meeting. Secondly, the first item on the manifesto we said that when we are elected on November the 14th, it is our intention to: (1) retain our present Constitution bearing in mind that our stability and prosperity are dependent upon our remaining a British Crown Colony. We are not tampering with the Constitution in any way that affects our position as a British Crown Colony. What we are seeking in this Motion is to preserve the stability, both social and political, that has given us our present prosperity. So, Mr. President, this Motion is entirely and completely consistent with our manifesto.

Therefore I also took the Motion to my people. We did not have a large turnout, there were no dissenting voices from those who were there, and the meeting was well-advertised, and I could only attribute the small number to one of two things: total satisfaction with the representation which the three Members have been giving them, or because the economy is so good that they were at work or over tired from having worked all day. Therefore I consider I have the mandate from my people to support this Motion.

Now, Mr. President, quite a lot was said about the fact that the Motion was amended, I think the Member said something like four hours and ten minutes, or four tenths of a minute or something, before it came to the House, and that it was substantially amended. I have the original Motion which was circulated to Members in my hand, and I have the amended version also. And there were two amendments to that original Motion. One was the addition to the section dealing with qualification for elected membership under sub-paragraph 3, a (d) was added stating employment as a crew member on an aircraft. That is those people to whom the restriction of 400 days did not apply. And another sub-section, sub-section (4) was added to make the application of the 400 days absence from the Island in respect of born Caymanians or persons with Caymanian connections, to make that 400 days not apply to the period prior to the coming into effect of this amendment if and when it is passed - that is, if and when it is written into our Constitution.

The Second Elected Member for

Bodden Town very well knows why that sub-paragraph 4 was put in there. I would have thought that his purposes would have best been served had he not called attention to that. Because, Mr. President, it was put in specifically to preserve the position of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town. Without that, he would now be disqualified if this came into effect, and as one Member said, when somebody can be absent from the country for more than 400 days as a representative of the people, one must question the representation that the people are getting.

Mr. President, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town does not like me to go back into history, but I love history, and like I told him the other day, I can go back into history with confidence because I never do anything for the expediency of the moment. I also believe that if the Member would accept the admonition which I gave him a few days ago he would be better off, and that is that those who do not learn from history will live to repeat the mistakes. Of course, he has made that mistake again today.

I am going to deal basically or chiefly with the comments of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, because while the Member from East End expressed some reservations, he indicated in general terms that he agreed with the spirit of the Motion, he did not agree with the method in which it was done, but the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town repeated and elaborated on the reservations which he had. So, I can deal with both their reservations to the way it was done by dealing with the Member from Bodden Town.

First of all, the Member for Bodden Town knows full well that he was the first Member of this House to have a copy of this resolution in his hand overnight. By his own admission a few days ago, he said that they do not, or he, and that includes all of the remnants of the Unity Team, do not attend meetings of committees of this House because, I think he said their voice is not heard. So, had I tried to call a committee to discuss this, it is unlikely that that Member would have attended. I did bring along copies of their Motion to a Finance Committee meeting called some weeks ago and I showed it to Members, and at the end of that meeting in accordance with the basic Rules of the House, I recollected, or retrieved the copies of the Motion at the end of that meeting because I thought the proper way for them to be circulated was through the Clerk which I later did and it was done in ample time. It met the requirements of Standing Orders for Members to have copies of Motions, and notices of Motions, in fact I put the notice in some several weeks ago that the Motion was coming and what the substance of the Motion was.

In my opening contribution, Mr. President, I said that I had attempted to get the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town to second the Motion. That attempt was made the day following the Finance Committee meeting to which I referred. It was on a Wednesday, and I asked if he could come to my office for a while, I was told that that was an inconvenient day, but we agreed that I would bring a copy of the Motion to Rotary, that he could study it overnight, and we would meet at 11 o'clock on Friday in my office. I delivered the copy of the Motion, we met and we discussed it, and I understood that he was not prepared to second it, so I spoke to the Second Elected Member for George Town, who was glad to do so. So that Member, the Second Member for Bodden Town, Mr. President, cannot claim ignorance of what was contained in the Bill. His reason for not seconding it was not that he opposed any of the provisions in the Bill, or in the Motion. Certainly if he had those reservations he kept them to himself and did not express them to me.

Now, we have heard that we should have taken it to a committee, and that I put forward an amended version at a very late date and he read extensively from the minutes of the meeting of this Honourable House held on Tuesday 13th September 1983. Now, I am not going to accuse the Member of telling an untruth when he read these minutes, but what I am going to say is that he did not tell the whole truth, and I will prove that from this Hansard. He complains that I amended the Motion, put it to the House, which is true, but I did it in accordance with Standing Orders. And of course he bemoaned that fact. He went to pains to say that I could state during that debate that I had taken the resolution as printed to a meeting of my constituents. And I wondered why I had been so meticulous, to use the word as printed. He, I gathered, during my absence, indicated that I tried to play lawyer and that a course at the law school would serve me well. I am not denying that a course in law would serve me well, but I can assure that Member that I am leaps and bounds ahead of some of those out there who are advising him and playing lawyer. Because he also said, and he laid great store by this, that simultaneously with the passing or publication of the Motion, a press release had been made which explained it fully to the people of the country. But what he failed to tell the people was that the Motion as published and as therefore covered by the press release, was not in fact the Motion that was passed in the House, or in fact debated fully, because the Member moving the Motion gave notice at the time of moving it, of an amendment which he would be making at a later stage. Now I want the people to get the significance of that difference. It was necessary for me, in order to accommodate the First Elected Member for Bodden Town to amend the Motion, which I did in accordance with Standing Orders. I have taken stick for doing this, but I believe that it is in keeping with the spirit of the Motion.

If we have erred in this Motion, it has been by trying to embrace those Caymanians that we know have an interest in sitting in this House, and we were extremely careful in attempting not to disenfranchise any of them. But even the fact that the Select Committee was unanimous as the original motion stated falls away because of the amendment which was put at the time the motion was introduced. That means that no Members of the House other than the mover - I as the seconder had been acquainted of it a few minutes before - that is why I could not discuss the amended motion with my constituent, and why I was at pains to say that I had discussed the motion as printed with my constituents. Because the amendment that was offered changed completely the sense of the motion, and that is why the Member could not, even if he had thought of doing it earlier, amend his motion in the fashion which I have done. You cannot amend a motion if the amendment alters substantially the intention of the original motion - it has to be done on a substantive motion after giving notice in the House unless one suspends Standing Orders.

So, Mr. President, that is the point which I want to ram home. They published the motion, they made a press release on it and then, when it was on the floor of the House, an amendment was introduced which the public had no opportunity to comment on. It also altered the sense of that resolution considerably.

Now, if that is what legal training does to an individual, I thank Almighty God that I have not had any, because I do not want ever to be accused of being anything less than totally frank with the people of this country and my constituents naturally, in particular.

I could go on and show the confusion that that amendment which was placed before the House at the introduction of the motion caused. In fact the mover was asked by the President, "I am taking it you are moving both the Motion and the amendment to be passed." The answer was "Yes, Sir". And then when I commenced my debate, I said, "Mr. President, in debating this Motion I would crave your indulgence to allow me to include in my remarks the amendment to section 20 which the Member is now referring to which he proposes to put at a later date." I was allowed to carry on for a while and I was stopped because I was reminded that the amendment was in fact, not before the House at that point and had not yet passed, so I had to deal with the substantive Motion which had been circulated. And I dealt with the amendment when the amendment was put before the House.

But you see, this is why I can go back into history, because those who use the moment at hand to try to press the argument of a particular position, always dig a hole for themselves to fall into later. And the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town would have been better served if he had not thought about this meeting. I might not be legally trained, but my God I have a good memory, and I knew that an amendment had been placed on the floor, so I sent for a copy too. These are public documents, and I want to see him or his lawyer, or lawyer friends including the little student from Kalamazoo, dig him out of that hole.

The Member also said, and he quoted the various Members about saying that they had taken it to their people and what the results were. And I would warn the Member to be careful how he always quotes what people said about what took place at public meetings, because if I am permitted to refer to some recent publications dealing with constitutional development, Mr. President, about the 1962 meeting held in George Town and the reports made by the then Members of the Assembly to that meeting, the public will know that in the case of George Town, where unanimous support was reported to have been obtained, the Member who made that report could not hold his meeting - when he introduced the Jamaican barrister to the platform, I have never heard so many car horns in my life - and it broke up the meeting. Similarly, no vote was taken in West Bay on that issue, yet it was reported that it was unanimously supported in West Bay, and I take pride in being one of those, although I was not involved in politics, who put the keys on the meeting before the vote could be taken. I am saying this because I believe that we owe this to future generations when they are reading the history of the development of constitutions in Cayman that the records be straight and not be tarnished by things. Again, do not get me wrong, Sir, I am not really berating the press, but I think when people attempt to write on our history, and they were not even in the Island, they should enquire from people who know exactly what went on, so that the history books will record our history correctly.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I am sure it is very laudable to get the history, right, but I hope the Member is going to come back to the Motion because ...

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Oh, yes Sir, I have finished correcting history now, Sir, I am going to make history now.

The other point, made by both the Member from East End and the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town is that the route to have gone with this was to a committee, which, as I explained, had it been called neither of them would have attended in my opinion.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

If I was notified I would have come.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

I must also in this connection refer to the reference made by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town in his Throne Speech debate to this Motion, when he indicated his disagreement with it, and said that if we want to change the Constitution, we should get up at the next election and tell the people we want a constitutional change, and let the people vote on it. Now, Mr. President, I believe that was a trap and an invitation to some Members to make that little bland statement in their campaign or in their manifesto without going into detail as to what the constitutional changes, desired were. And then they would say they had a mandate to go for full internal self-government and whatever. But I will never fall for that trap, that is why I have gone to the pains I have gone to enumerate what we are proposing in this Motion.

Mr. President, as you know, I felt so confident about my presentation of this Motion and I had such a clear conscience about it, that I even left the Member speaking and went to Rotary lunch today. So this is why I am having to fish around a little bit in my notes, because my colleague next door kept them for me.

Now, the Member said that I had been put under pressure, or approached, or something, by some organization and I had put off my Government cloak and brought this Motion as a Private Member's Motion rather than a Government Motion. I think he said it was the Young Businessmen's Association. The Second Member for West Bay mentioned the fact that those people had made representation, but he also put the record straight by saying that the Member for North Side had in fact intended to table a Motion, basically covering the same area in advance of that representation, and I told him to hold it a bit, let us study it and make sure that we were dotting our i's, crossing our t's and see that it was done to our satisfaction. But all of that only shows how widespread the support for this Motion is, and I can say without fear of successful contradiction ...

MR. PRESIDENT:

Not that I am contradicting you, but it is 4:30 p.m. and I would like to ask the Honourable First Official Member to move the suspension of Standing Orders in order to enable us to complete our business, because I think I sensed the House wished to do that today.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, in accordance with Standing Order 83, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) so that the business can be completed this evening.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Motion is that in according with the provisions of Standing Order 83, Standing Order 10(2) should be suspended in order to enable business to be completed today.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I rise to object to the suspension. I think if the business is unfinished we should come back tomorrow. The Member has been talking, or has been on his feet for many minutes, he has said nothing so far, he has not made any attempt to reply to any of the points raised by any Member on the Motion, and he is just wasting time. Someone should move for the closure of the debate, but of course you have to make the ruling, and you have been trying, Sir, to bring him back on track. But if he is not replying to the points raised, why should we waste the time of the Members. I am not supporting the suspension of the Standing Orders.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I am surprised at the contribution of that Member. We agreed yesterday evening that we would stay this evening and finish the business, and as an encouragement to do that, he promised the House he would not speak longer than one hour this morning, and I believe he used the morning and the afternoon, and as far as I am concerned, he never ever got to the Motion, so I do not know what he is complaining about.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

I raised four points which you have no answer for. Wasting time.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I am prepared to support the Motion to suspend Standing Orders, provided that we bolt the doors, because we do not want those people who we allowed to leave yesterday afternoon who talked all day today to leave now and say that they did not have the vote because we want all the votes recorded on this thing, the noes and the ayes.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? In that case I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AYES AND NOES

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, may I have a division?

MR. PRESIDENT:

Certainly.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I declare the Motion carried.

MR. EZZARD MILLER:

We are voting that no one is going to leave, right, on my amended Motion!

MR. PRESIDENT:

I am afraid I did not accept the amendment because I could not be responsible for the incarceration of Members!

The First Elected Member may continue.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Yes, Mr. President.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town has left because he could not take the trashing I have been putting on him, and will continue to do. But I am sorry that he did not wait, because he raised one matter, and one only, which could be a contentious matter, and it is a matter which I referred to in my opening remarks, that is, the opening of the presentation of the Motion, where I indicated that the word "substantially" in the following terms in the resolved section of the Motion were put there deliberately to allow for the constitutional lawyers to change the jargon, or the wording, into constitutional language and, that once our intentions in the Motion were not changed, we would have no problem with that. I wanted to give him that assurance, and I am sure with that assurance, he would have voted for the Motion.

Mr. President, he made the point that in sub-section 2 of the new section 18, sub-section 2 and (a) of sub-section 2, dealing with a qualified citizen, he takes the point, Mr. President, that as written, it might preclude someone who had taken steps in the past to claim another citizenship to which he might have been eligible, and would mean that if somebody had made application for U.S. citizenship or Jamaican citizenship some years ago and never received it, that it would disenfranchise him. I maintain that section (a) as written, is conditioned by the first section of that sub-section, which reads "at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship and has taken no steps to claim any other citizenship for which he may be eligible." I maintain that that introduction to that sub-paragraph conditions the sub-paragraph to his position at the date of his nomination, and would therefore mean, that providing there were no outstanding steps unfulfilled at that time, the Member would be an eligible citizen. I maintain that if it was intended to say in the past, we would have said words to this effect: at the date of his nomination for election possesses no other citizenship and had taken no steps in the past to claim any other citizenship for which he might have been eligible. I maintain that that is a present tense situation and would apply to his situation at the date of his nomination for election.

But, Mr. President, this is one of the areas that can be met by the constitutional lawyers, because I am going into this in detail to make it clear that this was not intended to apply to any prior action which might have been taken by a candidate. For example, if the wish of the Motion could be more accurately conveyed by "has taken" being replaced with "is taking no steps" I have no problem with that, because I explained in the introduction of the Motion why this was put in there, and as I said earlier, if we have gotten in to any problem with this Motion, it is because we have tried to preserve rather than to disenfranchise people. We were actually thinking there, Mr. President, in that section, of rights which anybody might have acquired or might have become eligible to as a result of having married a foreign national in particular.

We are not entirely sure of all the implications of the constitutions and requirements for citizenship all over the world, and Caymanians have in fact, married people from every corner of the globe. So we have put a general statement there saying that if by marrying a foreign national a Caymanian has become eligible for some citizenship, but he has not taken any steps at the time of his nomination for election to claim that citizenship, then we do not think he should be disenfranchised for having married the love of his life, or her life. A simple matter. And I hope that when this Motion has been passed and is being forwarded to Her Majesty's Government, that the copies of the minutes of this Meeting will be forwarded along with it so that Her Majesty's Government will be left in no doubt as to what we intended, and also the objection that some other Member might have to that clause or any other clause, so that it can be met if this language does not convey accurately the wishes of the people of the Assembly, then that is a job of the constitutional adviser.

In other words, the Member should be familiar with the phrase "drafting instructions" from the time he was in Executive Council. If he wants a Bill to be done by the Legal Department, he or his Principal Secretary gives the Legal Department drafting instructions so that the Legal Department can put the legal phraseology to what he wants. This is all we are asking, and this is what we are saying we are prepared to accept. I gave the undertaking to keep Members informed of what was happening with this Motion as far as its acceptance or otherwise by Her Majesty's Government, and I also gave the undertaking, Mr. President, that if there was a serious confrontation over this, that is, anything that would change the sense of the Motion as it was passed here, that I would seek through His Excellency the Governor for Her Majesty's Government to send the appropriate person out here to talk with us.

Now, Mr. President, I want to make it clear that that request will be to deal with these two sections of the Constitution, and I am not prepared to bring them out here to go further with the Constitution as I believe some people would try to do if they get them out here. I want to make that clear - he would come for a specific purpose, and that is these two sections, and any, like I mentioned, consequential amendment to Section 50 to clarify the appointed day, because we cannot very well put that in this Motion until we know the date. But I want to make it clear that I am not undertaking to bring anybody out here or anybody to come out for general discussions on the Constitution. When they come I will deal with this Motion, and this Motion only. If somebody else wants to talk about further advancement in the Constitution, that is their problem, they must get their man out. This takes me as far as I want to go for the foreseeable future, Mr. President, because that Union Jack with that little coat of arms in the corner there was not put on that manifesto accidentally, that means that as long as that flag serves us well, Benson Ebanks is not doing anything to disrupt it.

The other point the Member made, Mr. President, that some Members might have thought might have had some substance was to say that the proviso as to the 400 days which we had applied to (e) should also apply to section (f). But that is rubbish. If we do that, we will kill the whole intent of the Motion, we might as well not bring it. I believe that that was that little student from Kalamazoo that told him that should go in. Mr. President, you know who the little student from Kalamazoo is, Sir, or would you like an explanation?

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think I have a fair idea.

MR. McKEEVA BUSH:

(INAUDIBLE)

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS:

Mr. President, I think that the Second Elected Member for West Bay raised a good issue. But I hope when I have explained my understanding of that situation, and I thank him for bringing it up, because otherwise I might not have made the point, and I am not sure that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town did not confuse the issue with that too. As I said, I have got a bundle of notes here, but I am picking out as one of his constituents said, the most important parts. Because as Members know, he could have sat down after five minutes, he really never added anything to the debate.

The point that the Second Elected Member for West Bay made dealt with the person without Caymanian connections, the one that we are retaining his right to run for the House providing he has British Dependent Territories citizenship, and has lived here for 15 out of 20 years. The Member made the point that in the case of a British subject, for example, he could in fact cut sail or cut rope and run and reclaim his British nationality. But, Mr. President, I think in dealing with that section of the Bill in my presentation, I made the point that while, for the time being, the status quo would remain, that that number of qualified persons would gradually diminish with the effluxion of time.

We cannot look at the Constitution or this Motion we are passing in isolation, we have to read it in conjunction with the Caymanian Protection Law. And I already know that since this Motion got published, people who, by their own action, had the same nationality which I had, when the 1981 British Nationality Law came out, rushed and posted to me that they had got British Nationality, they now have dual citizenship, something like that. It turns out they do not have British Dependent Territories citizenship, and they have come to me to sign applications for them to get it. But I wish they would wait. I do not believe we have got too many of them, maybe a couple, but again I believe my understanding of the workings of the Naturalization and the Caymanian Protection Law is that before a person is naturalized, there is an understanding that the person will be given permanent residence or Caymanian status, which, as I understand the Motion, is also a requirement for standing in the House. And I have a feeling that the number of people without Caymanian connections that could get Caymanian Status in the future, will become fewer and fewer and fewer. So, I am saying that with the effluxion of time, those people that might have had, or might have B.D.T. citizenship for now will be okay, but the number that will come on the scene with all that in the future will be those that were born here.

We have got, Mr. President, and I hope that you do not consider this to be straying from the Motion, because it deals with this very ticklish point of nationality and Caymanian Status. But to finish with the point I was making in response to the very valid point which the Second Elected Member for West Bay made, it was considered very carefully, and it was decided that we should not use a sledgehammer to kill a fly. In other words, we see it as a very minute problem which Father Time, the great healer of all problems, is going to take care of. But having mentioned those persons who would get B.D.T. citizenship or Status in the future, I would like to assure, or reassure, those persons in our Island who I call, at the moment, basically, refugees or no-nation people, because they have not really taken all of the steps necessary to put their position right. We intend to clear that up in the very near future, and I hope that when the announcement is made that the representatives from the various districts will be making themselves available in the several districts to collect and collate the names of those people and where they stand, that they will respond to the invitation. We have to clear it up.

Mr. President, we would not be adding any new persons to our work force, and I think particularly, Mr. President, of those persons who came home as repatriates from Cuba in 1969. Many of them, their parents were born in Cayman, but they themselves were born in Cuba, so they have not got Status. Some of them had children born in Cuba, that is the third generation now was born in Cuba, and therefore ... and because their parents did not register them with the British Embassy as British citizens at that time, they really do not have British citizenship, and need to be naturalized. We have a whole conglomeration of this, Mr. President, some people who only need to get Status, some who need to be registered, and some who will have to be naturalized. It is a very large number of people. In fact, the first gentleman I saw knitting turtle nets when I was a very young boy and he was a young man, I have just found out that he was born in Cuba, and is in fact, not a Caymanian - we have to clear those up. But that is not adding new people, and we will take care of those. I do not want them to get the impression that we are not going to take care of them.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Member did say that he hoped he would not be stopped for straying from the point. I am bound to say I think he has strayed rather from it, and I hope he will come back to the Motion, because I cannot really quite relate the problem he has just been talking about, although it may be a problem of great importance, to the terms of the present Motion.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: It only tied on to what I said earlier, Sir, about the number of people who would get B.D.T. or Status in the future being reduced. So I want to make it clear

MR. PRESIDENT: I really think we were straying a little bit further from the Motion - I am now just hoping we will get back to it.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Oh, yes Sir, I have finished you know, I was just showing how it was tied on.

MR. PRESIDENT: If you have finished, perhaps we should take the vote?

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: No, Sir I have not finished, this microphone is dropping out of the socket.
Mr. President, I think that I should make clear the areas covered by the provision of sub-section 3, which excludes those reasons for which a person could be absent from the Island for more than 400 days, or it does not count towards the 400 days mentioned in the qualified citizenship of the person to stand for office, or it would not count when the 400 days is being counted against them for the qualification of voting as well. These are the exceptions: attendance as a pupil at any educational establishment; attendance as a patient at any hospital, clinic or other medical institution - I would suggest that that even includes what we know as Bellevue in Jamaica; employment as a seaman aboard an ocean-going vessel; or employment as a crew member on any aircraft.

Now I think the Second Member for Bodden Town tried to make out that that was not sufficiently widespread, and that we should cover, according to him, as I understand it, all those people who leave Cayman and go and work in some other country of their own volition. We might as well not pass the Motion if we are going to cover all that. We are only seeking to cover - in other words Mr. President, what I believe the Second Official Member would term in legal phraseology, force majeure, or something like that - maybe I am not pronouncing it right - but in other words, matters beyond one's control - you do not control when you get sick, the average person has no control over whether he is going to be recommended to go overseas for medical treatment. We certainly do not have tertiary education of a sufficiently high standard yet to say that a person could have received a university education in the Island, and many Caymanian seamen go to sea on American ships, but their home, their families are here and their money is sent back here, so this is still their residence, but for the avoidance of doubt, we have put it in. I understand that taking into account the normal working hours of an aircraft crew, they would not be abroad more than the time we have said either, but I understand that often they are sent up or they are left in foreign ports as back-up crew and so on, so we thought that out of an abundance of caution, we should make a provision for those people.

But, Mr. President, I would like to make it clear - I know that some of our national airline pilots have taken up residence in Miami, and this section will not cover them, because they have done that out of choice. So when you give up your residency in Cayman out of choice, we are not covering that. If your employment in one of these fields takes you abroad for more than the 400 days, you are covered. I think he also said if somebody was sent as Station Manager to Houston or Miami or whatever - up to now, as far as I know, the Caymanians working with airlines abroad are Caymanians who were already resident in those cities, and I do not know what the future holds, but I do not believe that we have any pile of people qualified to take over as Station Managers in those countries yet. I have a strong feeling that sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof. We have covered the foreseeable future, and I am not going to grope in the dark to please the whims and fancies of somebody who might have somebody working with Cayman Airways in Miami that they hope to slip in under this clause.

Mr. President, in summary, this Motion has my 100 per cent backing, and I am satisfied that it has 99 per cent of the backing of the public. The other one per cent that can be influenced by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town might not support it just because I brought it. That was the one per cent he was afraid of that would not understand him seconding it. So I am satisfied that 99 per cent of the electorate in this country support this Motion. I would not have brought the Motion if I did not think it was in a form that was just, equitable and right to those persons who lived here for long periods and are still living here. I would not have brought the Motion if I thought it was not in the best interests of Cayman and that it would serve to preserve the peace, tranquility and prosperity of which we hear so much today. It is but another step, Mr. President, in protecting that stability and prosperity, steps which have been made often in the past.

We had a Constitution in 1972, we amended these particular clauses in 1984, it was started in 1983 of course, and today we find ourselves in a position where if we do not act, the future of this country is in the balance, and as I said yesterday in my introduction, there is a line in poetry, or a couple of lines in poetry which go something like this:

"Breathe there a man with soul so dead,
who never to himself hath said,
this is mine own, my native land."

When I say that, I mean Cayman, I do not have anywhere else to run. I believe that as a previous speaker said, we hold this country in trust for future generations, and the least that we can do is to hand it to them in as stable a condition as we inherited it from our forefathers. I certainly hope that when this Motion is put to the vote that it will receive unanimous support.

I thank you Mr. President, and all the Members for their patience in listening, or bearing with me during this extended period.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Motion before the House is the amended version of Private Member's Motion No.5/87.

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Let us Pray.
Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT OF THE STANDING FINANCE COMMITTEE
(Meeting held 18th March, 1987)

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

the table of this Honourable House the Report of the Standing Finance Committee for a meeting held on Wednesday the 18th of March 1987.

Mr. President, I beg to lay on the details of that Finance Committee Report, approvals were given for Supplementary Expenditure of $273,000. This approval was to provide funds to deal with the Court's decision recently made, and that is, the proposed execution block to be constructed at Northward Prison.

MR. PRESIDENT:

So ordered.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

In addition, Finance Committee unanimously approved that outstanding fees due to the George Town

Hospital in the sum of $95,325 be written off.

It also unanimously approved that outstanding fees due to the Faith Hospital in the sum of $232.50 as of December 1980 in respect of deceased persons be also written off.

A guarantee approved to Mirrlees Blackstone for the Cayman Brac Power and Light Company to purchase an additional generator was also approved.

Finally, Finance Committee unanimously approved a five year moratorium on the current loan for Wesleyan Christian Academy in order that construction of well-needed teachers' cottages may be undertaken with the use of the funds they have at the moment.

Thank you very much, Mr.

President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

In accordance with the provisions of paragraph 4 of Standing Order 67, the House is deemed to have agreed to accept the Report.

Presentation of Papers and Reports, the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

REPORT OF THE HOUSING DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION
(For the years ended 30th June, 1985 and 1986)

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, Honourable Members, I beg to lay on the table of this Honourable House a Report of the Housing Development Corporation for the year ended 30th June 1986 in accordance with section 24 of the Housing Development Corporation Law 1981.

MR. PRESIDENT:

So ordered.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, the Report contained in the document just laid on the table of this Honourable House includes many things. There is a statement from the Chairman of the Board, and the accounts for 1986 which also has a comparison of the comparable accounts for the previous year 1985. There are other information contained in the Report, such as the operations, the administrations, the certificate of the Auditor General, the list of debenture subscription, and other statistical information.

Mr. President, it was thought that the report would be useful to Honourable Members to review the entire operation of the Board, and give information as to what the present position is. It will be seen from the balance sheet that the Corporation has ended its year 30th June, 1986 with a surplus of income over expenditure. This is an improvement over the previous year, which suffered a deficit as the account will reveal. The Corporation is with a reasonable amount of mortgage funds, and it is hoped that over the next year that some of this money will be lent. Quite a number of applications do come to the Board, but unfortunately many of them cannot comply with the guidelines laid down for the granting of loans by the Corporation. So those guidelines will be looked at shortly, and every attempt will be made to facilitate many of the applicants who need some of the money, but who cannot comply with the guidelines at the present time.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Questions.

West Bay.

The Second Elected Member for

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR WEST BAY TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR HEALTH EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES

NO. 39: Can the Honourable Member give a progress report on the National Sports Award pursuant to Private Member's Motion No.20/85?

ANSWER: An administrative advisory body known as the Cayman Islands Sports Council was established in December last year to advise the Member generally on the development of sports and sporting facilities within the Islands.

One of the functions of the Council is to advise on the person to be selected each year for the National Sports Award as envisaged in Private Member's Motion No.20/85.

The Council has met on two occasions and has been considering the criteria for such an award.

It is planned that the first award will be made on the Queen's birthday this year.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, a supplementary. I am wondering whether the Honourable Member would undertake to keep Members of the House informed on the progress of this Sports Award that was asked for in Private Member's Motion 20/85?

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: Mr. President, if plans materialise as is presently envisaged, the action will be taken before the House meets again.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I am asking for an undertaking in case it does not materialise.

HON. BENSON D. EBANKS: In that case, yes, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: Unless there is any further supplementary the Second Elected Member for West Bay may ask Question No.40.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR WEST BAY TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNICATIONS WORKS AND DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION

NO. 40: Can the Honourable Member say whether Government is still considering putting a tourist landing jetty in West Bay?

ANSWER: Yes, Government is still considering the possibility of putting a tourist landing jetty in West Bay.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: A supplementary Mr. President, will the Honourable Member say whether Government intends to put any money in the estimates this year for such a jetty?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I cannot say at this moment whether we are going to put it in or not, but I would assume that we are going to put in money for this jetty for next year, but it is certainly not in the estimates this year.

MR. PRESIDENT: Unless there is any further supplementary, the Second Elected Member for West Bay may ask Question Number 41.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR WEST BAY TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNICATIONS WORKS AND DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION

NO. 41: Can the Honourable Member say whether the Watersports Association would influence Government's decision as to whether or not the tourist landing jetty should go in West Bay?

ANSWER: Yes, the Watersports Association and the public reaction could possibly influence Government's decision.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Supplementary, Mr. President. I presume that any public reaction would mean that the West Bay public would also have a say in it?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I think when we have finally decided on the mooring sites we will make a release through the Government Information Service.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Member say whether Government's decision will be determined by special interest groups, or whether it will be determined by whether it is for the good of the country overall?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I would say the decision would be on whether it is for the good of the country overall, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there is no further supplementary, that ends Question Time. We turn next to Bills. First Readings.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

THE GRAND COURT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

FIRST READING

CLERK: THE GRAND COURT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT: A Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Grand Court Law is deemed to have been read a First Time and is set down for Second Reading.

CLERK: THE GRAND COURT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Grand Court Law.

Mr. President, this is a very short amendment to the Grand Court Law and is one of the steps being taken by Government to assist the Grand Court in coping with the present work load which faces it. As Honourable Members may already know, at the start of the recent criminal session, there were something like 23 jury trials waiting to be heard. They also may know that the Chief Justice himself is presently tied down and will be for several months in a long civil case.

At the moment, Mr. President, there is no adequate provision for the appointment of Acting Judges who can come in on a temporary basis to deal with particular cases or particular groups of cases to assist in times of stress like this. The present section of the Grand Court Law which provides for Acting Judges, is section 7, and reads at the moment as follows:

"In the case of the office of the Judge becoming vacant, or a Judge is unable to discharge the duties of his office by reason of absence or illness, the Governor acting in his discretion may appoint a person qualified under the provisions of this Law to act as a Judge during the period of such vacancy, absence or illness."

What is intended at the moment is that notwithstanding there is a full complement of the two Judges sitting and working in office, that on occasion it may be necessary to appoint a temporary acting third Judge. The amendment to the Law knocks out the old section 7, and reads as follows.

"Acting Judges. The Governor, acting in his discretion, may at any time appoint any person qualified under subsection 2 of section 6 to act as a Judge for such period as he shall specify in the appointment."

Mr. President, as I have said, this is a short Bill, it is related to certain other provisions with the same end, that we will get to when we deal with the Bill to amend the Judicature Law.

Mr. President, for the time being I commend this Bill to the House.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Grand Court Law be given a Second Reading.

The Motion is open for debate. If no Member wishes to speak, I will put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. THE GRAND COURT (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987 GIVEN A SECOND READING

MR. PRESIDENT: A Bill for a Law to amend the Penal Code is deemed to have been read a First Time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE PENAL CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Penal Code.

This Bill makes three unrelated amendments to the Penal Code, and these are three amendments which have cropped up at different times during the administration of the Law in recent years.

The first amendment, in clause 2, inserts into section 67 of the Code the "crossbow". Section 67 of the Code deals with prohibited weapons, and there are specific offences which relate to the possession of, or the carrying of, prohibited weapons. The present list of prohibited weapons is as follows:

"prohibited weapon" means any machine gun, sub-machine gun automatic rifle or any weapon of any description or design, adapted for the discharge of any noxious liquid or gas, and includes any black jack, bludgeon, flick knife, gravity knife or knuckle duster."

And then section 68 goes on to prohibit the import of prohibited weapons, and that is the main thrust of the definition of prohibited weapons, although there are also prohibitions on carrying them.

Mr. President, a questionnaire was sent round various interested bodies including the police, to see if they had any suggestions from experience of additional weapons that should be put in the list, and "crossbow" was the one meritorious one which came forward. I hardly need to point out to Members that a crossbow is a silent and deadly weapon which can be used to great effect by somebody wishing to do harm.

The next amendment is an amendment to section 222(a) of the Code. 222(a) is itself, a new section, inserted by an amending law in 1979. The gist of section 222(a) is that it makes it an offence for somebody to drive off in somebody else's vehicle without their permission - they do not necessarily need to steal it, but it is the taking without consent which is the gist of the offence, it is aimed at what is commonly called "joyriders", people who make off without permission with other people's vehicles, often at night, to get home and so on. There is and always has been a similar provision in the Traffic Law, although the provision in the Penal Code is better drafted and newer. However, it has recently been realised that the provision in the Penal Code does not give to the Court the power to disqualify or endorse the license of somebody convicted of this offence. Those powers are open to the court if the prosecution had been brought under the Traffic Law. It is of course, a nonsense to have similar offences in two different laws, than to have one with broader sentencing powers than another. And so this short amendment is simply to confer upon the court, when convicting a person of taking a conveyance without authority, the power to order that that person either be disqualified from driving or that his licence be endorsed, depending of course upon the court's view of the seriousness of the case.

The third amendment to the Penal Code is an amendment to section 244. Section 244 deals with the destroying or damaging of property. The section itself was re-substituted wholesale by an amendment in 1981 and at the moment the section says:

"Whoever without lawful excuse destroys or damages any property belonging to another intending to destroy or damage any such property or being reckless as to whether any such property would be destroyed or damaged is guilty of an offence and is liable to a fine not exceeding five thousand dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding ten years or to both such fine and imprisonment."

There are two consequences of that, and the first is that somebody who commits even very trivial damage is in theory at least, eligible for the fairly massive penalties set out there, and secondly that somebody who commits trivial damage always has the right to jury trial, so that one may find the time of the Grand Court and the jury being taken up for somebody who has done one, two, three or five dollars worth of damage. To meet this the amendment creates a split in the offence, choosing as the split the value of damage of $1000. Members may wish to note that it is the value of the damage which is the dividing line, not the value of the property damaged, because of course a few dollars worth of damage may be done to something worth many thousands of dollars.

The split is that for anything above $1000 worth of damage, the previous provisions remain, $5000 or ten years, and a choice as to whether to be tried before a jury or before the Magistrate's Court. Below the split, the offence becomes summary only, the maximum fine becomes merely $1000, and the imprisonment is a term not exceeding two years, which in any event is the statutory limit on the Magistrate under the Summary Court Law.

There is going to be a similar amendment when we come to the Bill to amend the Criminal Procedure Code to make the necessary corollary amendment in the schedule to that Law.

Mr. President, I commend this short Bill to the House.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE LEGAL PRACTITIONERS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Legal Practitioners Law 1969.

This short amendment deals with a problem which was perceived recently, although it has always existed, in relation to a lengthy trial that was held before the Grand Court. The problem was this: that in lengthy trials, local attorneys may not be willing or able to take on the legal aid representation of the persons accused because the legal aid rates, which may be acceptable for short trials, are not attractive to local attorneys for long and protracted litigation. One way around such a problem when it is felt that it is imperative, or at least essential, that the persons accused should have representation, is to seek from outside the Islands, and particularly in Jamaica, persons who would be willing to undertake the legal aid representation of people at the legal aid rates. The problem with this is that section 4 of the Legal Practitioners Law, which provides for limited admission to practice law in the Islands, stipulates that anybody admitted for the purposes of one case, in other words, limited admission has to be instructed by an Attorney-at-Law in the Islands. The common-sense of this in most cases is to stop the local attorneys being swamped by overseas lawyers coming in and practising here. So a local attorney normally has to be involved and has to give the instructions and therefore has to play his part in the case. In the instance of legal aid cases, that argument does not apply, because these are cases by definition, where the local attorneys have proved unwilling to take on the case.

However, the provisions of the Law as they stand provide a bar to bringing in outside legal aid attorneys unless the charade of getting a local attorney to formally instruct them is gone through. In order to avoid that, the amendment which is proposed is that, where the Clerk of the Court has certified that in his opinion, it is impracticable for a person who has been granted legal aid - impracticable for such a person to obtain representation in the Islands, such a person may then themselves go and instruct a person outside the Islands. In such a case I am sure I hardly need mention, that the legal aid rates prescribed under the Poor Persons Legal Aid Law continue to apply, and they are not waived in any way by the Clerk of the Court's certificate.

Mr. President, this will enable in those rare cases when the local practitioners are not willing or able to undertake a legal aid defence for the accused person as a last resort nevertheless to obtain for themselves representation. And for that reason, Mr. President, I commend the Bill to the House.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Legal Practitioners Law, 1969 be given a Second Reading.

The Motion is open for debate.
The Second Elected Member for

George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, the Bill before us, which is a Bill for a Law to amend the Legal Practitioners Law, 1969, has certain sections in it which I feel are worthy of comment. I am not totally opposing the Bill, but I am somewhat concerned with certain sections of the Bill.

Of particular concern, is section 2(b) of the Bill, which reads, starting from section 2:

"Section 4 of the Legal Practitioners Law, 1969 is amended by substituting section 2(b) where the Clerk of the Court has certified that in his opinion it is impracticable, in the particular circumstances for a person to whom a legal aid certificate has been granted under section 3 of the Poor Person's (Legal Aid) Law to instruct an Attorney-at-Law in the Islands by such a person, and a person who possesses the prescribed."

Mr. President, section 2(b) of this amendment Bill would seem to open the floodgates for overseas attorneys to practice in the Cayman Islands. For this particular reason, I find it difficult to totally agree with this subsection in its present form.

I would remind this Honourable House that we have a Cayman Islands Law School here, and within the next five years, we will have approximately 20 graduates from this Law School.

Before dealing with this, I would comment briefly on remarks made by the mover of this Bill, the Honourable Second Official Member, when he said, and I believe I am quoting him correctly, that one of the reasons which brought this Bill about was due to the lengthy trials in the Grand Court recently, and also that the legal aid fees are not attractive to local attorneys.

I believe that the main reason why this Bill is before us is that it is in fact the case that it is not attractive to local attorneys, and that those local attorneys have over and over refused to take these litigation cases in the Court because the other fees are much more attractive. This is what is of major concern to me. I am also a professional, and if I tried to apply my professional fees to my duties as a Justice of the Peace, I would sometimes not want to take up my duties in the Juvenile Court. But Mr. President, I gladly, when I am rostered, take time off to sit in the Juvenile Court, not so much for the $16 a day that we are paid, but because I feel a duty to my country and to my people. I believe that lawyers, especially expatriate lawyers, that are working here earning big money, should give a bit back to the country.

I alluded to the five Caymanian lawyers which will be graduating from Law School this year, and while some will no doubt be employed by Government, there are others who should not be denied the privilege of taking on legal aid cases, especially in the early years of their practice. This is done the world over. In fact, some of the calibre of the overseas attorneys that we may be able to attract for the legal aid cases would be of that particular experience and calibre. So why should we deny our people who are equally qualified, the opportunity of doing those jobs? And this will indeed be done, if we are going to allow the gates to be opened so that people from the poorer countries will come here and take jobs at half the cost that Caymanians would reasonably be expected to do.

As I stated, within the next five years, another 20 Caymanians will be graduating from the Law School, and their career opportunities should not in any way be jeopardized. They are Caymanians, and we often hear it sung in this House that we should try to protect our people. I am not suggesting that we should be using mediocre people to do the job, because it is my understanding, I have been reliably informed by informed individuals, that the Law School of the Cayman Islands is second to none in the world, we have the same standards that you have in London, in Jamaica, in Barbados, or wherever, and the students sit the same exams. So I am not suggesting that we should be using mediocre people. In addition to this, it is well known that the intellectual levels of the students, especially in this first graduating class, is comparable or in some cases, higher than many of the lawyers who have graduated abroad. This can be supported, and this is not just gesture. For those of the listening public, I wish to again make it quite clear that unless you fly into the Cayman Islands, whether it be from Little Cayman or wherever, as long as you come from abroad you are supposed to be better, you are supposed to have a better education, you are supposed to know it better, to do the job better. And this is a fallacy, Mr. President. We have some of the most intelligent people in the world who are Caymanians, and I am always proud to be associated with my Caymanians, because they stand up wherever they go.

But it would seem to me that this Law is particularly designed to protect those lawyers in this country who are making fat salaries, who refuse to go into the Law Courts to take on a legal aid case. This is particularly why I am concerned about this amendment. I was talking to an attorney, and he made a very good suggestion. He feels that perhaps the answer would be for each attorney, or each practising firm, to pay the equivalent of $1000 per year for each one of their staff into a Government fund, and that amount would go toward the salary of a public prosecutor. Maybe this is a better suggestion, but I am sure that the Honourable Second Official Member will deal with this in his summary. If this was done then perhaps we would be getting better representation.

But it is morally wrong for the lawyers in this country to refuse legal aid cases. It is morally wrong, it is their moral obligation, regardless of whether the legal aid fees are attractive to them or not. And I feel that those lawyers should be rostered, litigation lawyers, I am not talking about corporate lawyers, but lawyers who practise in the court room. They should be rostered. And if they refuse, they should be penalised, just like any other person would be. The same obligation that Captain Theo Bodden, Mr. Lawrence Thompson, Captain Eldon Kirkconnell, or any Justice of the Peace has towards this Government, they should have. They are businessmen that make a lot of money in their businesses, but who, because of their interest in the country, in the people of this country, will take time off to go and sit on the Juvenile Court when they are called upon to do it. Why should not the lawyers in this country be made to do the same? It should be mandatory that they either show up or they pay a fine. And one of the penalties should be that their practising licence be suspended in the first instance for three months, and for each additional time that they refuse to go in there, it should be increased. Otherwise, the alternative suggestion made regarding payment toward a fund to pay the salaries of a public prosecutor or whatever person is decided appropriate by Government one or the other should be done.

Mr. President, I have been in the company of some of our Caymanian lawyers, and it is a true saying. Your own people treat you the worst - that is an old but true saying. And you find that they are some of the first ones to criticise the students in the Law School. But what they do not realise is that those same students are not only coming out as qualified attorneys, but they are also coming out with an L.L.B. degree from a university in the U.K. And you take them and you compare them with some that have come out of the U.K., some of them very highly qualified, but you wonder how they got into Law School in the first place when you talk to them.

As I stated it is morally wrong for any lawyer to refuse, and as I said, I believe that this is where the whole problem is coming from, because they are so occupied with big money from big jobs that they are refusing to go into the courtroom to represent the legal aid cases. Most of these big firms have articled clerks now who are attending the Law School. Maybe this would be a good area for them to get the initial experience that they require. I can appreciate that the more serious cases in the court would require people of experience - seasoned lawyers - I appreciate this. But these young lawyers will never get the experience that they require, and the seasoning that they require unless they are given the chance. This is what we need in this country, that people be given a chance. You hear that this one cannot do the job, that one cannot do the job, but once they are given the chance, it is surprising how well they can do the job.

I trust that in the Committee stage of this Bill, that the mover and other Honourable Members of this House will entertain an amendment which I hope to make to this, and I hope that this will be done in the best spirit and in the interest of this country. Mr. President, this is a serious move, I feel that it is an easy way out, and I believe that this Bill is specially designed to assist or to complement and to help those lawyers out there who refuse to take on these smaller cases in court. Because of this, I cannot support this Bill in its present form, but I trust that in Committee stages we will be able to make appropriate amendments so that it will be possible for me to support the Bill.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Bodden Town.

The Second Elected Member for

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I have to object to this Bill. It seems to me that the Government has brought the wrong Bill to the House. We should be amending the Poor Persons (Legal Aid) Law, and not the Legal Practitioners Law. Government has recognised the problem, and the problem is simply that certain lawyers or certain law firms will not carry their share of the Poor Persons (Legal Aid) Law. We know that over the last three years we have heard that certain lawyers have great influence with the Government, and the Bill before the House simply makes it easier for those who have been dodging their responsibilities, to continue to do so. It is no secret that certain lawyers in this country earn big money. It is no secret that many of them are able to retire as multi millionaires after only a few years work. People who have come to this country in very poor straights can retire after having raped the country, overcharged the public, and I find it very difficult to understand why the Government now seeks to make it even easier for these evil practices to continue.

I think the Government should make an attempt to share out the work where legal aid is required for a person who is unable to pay for it. This legal aid should be limited only to very serious crimes and only to cases where the person has no assets that could be used to pay for the aid which he requires. But where there is a definite need for the aid, the aid should be given, and the aid should be provided by the law firms in proportion to the number of staff they have. We know there are some law firms that are continually seeking new lawyers simply because they want to attract more clients from abroad, simply because they are unable to handle the large amount of work that is channelled to them through the Banks and the Trust Companies who I believe are being paid off. This is no secret. Some lawyers out there are starving for work when certain law firms receive more through their cronies at the Banks and the Trust Companies that deal with the overseas clients, and this is bad, and here Government brings a Bill which will compound the bad practices which already exist.

I will hope that the Government will withdraw this Bill and seek to put some sanity into the Poor Persons (Legal Aid) Law, so that those persons who really need the legal aid will have it provided at a reasonable fee to the lawyers. I thank you.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
this Bill. I believe this is a dark day in the history of the legal profession in this country, and if I was a member of that profession I would be very embarrassed to have such legislation come before the Assembly.

Mr. President, I rise to oppose
Several things concern me about this Bill in its present form, Sir. One is, that we may import substandard lawyers. Is this an attempt to find employment for the twenty or thirty thousand English lawyers that are now unemployed, or are we going to bring them from some other country where they cannot find a job? Because they will come at some unrealistic rate to provide legal aid for poor people in this country? I would endorse, Sir, what was just said by the last speaker, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, in that the Law that might need amendment might be the Poor Persons (Legal Aid) Law, by increasing the fees or to make it mandatory in some form as a part of the privilege to practice law in the Cayman Islands. It is not only a fiscal privilege, because living conditions are better to practice law here, but there is a great economic privilege. The lawyers in this country are doing well, and I believe as one Member said, that they have a moral obligation to provide some type of assistance in some form to these people. Are we going to see in September a similar Bill that is going to allow doctors and nurses and pharmacists to refuse to give aid to poor people who cannot pay?

Mr. President, the cases are not that numerous, they are specific as to who is entitled to legal aid. Some of them, it is true, could be long and drawn out. But that is part of the legal profession, it is the lawyers that draw it out long, it is not the poor defendants.

I would hate to know that this Bill was passed today. We could have some lawyers get their foot in the door in this country by coming in to do legal aid and some of the high-powered law firms in the country take a likeness to their style of defence and then apply to the Caymanian Protection Board for a work permit, and when they get it and they will get them registered, and everything else. I wonder, Mr. President, why the Bill does not go on to include these privileges for people who are paying for lawyers, for people who can afford to pay lawyers. Why are they not allowed to bring in lawyers from the outside that they can hire at a cheaper rate, and it is only confined to the poor people? Because some of these lawyers, you know, Sir, will tell you when you walk into their office, they have a new phrase, Sir, you have to put me in pocket. And that is before you sit down, that $1000 in pocket, then you sit down, they listen to your problem. So they can afford to give a little time, because those same lawyers will call me up on the phone and ask for advice about medicine and talk for about half an hour, and tell you thanks, and then it is finish.

So, Mr. President, I cannot in good conscience, support this Bill. I think that the legal profession should be made, since they are not willing, in some form or fashion, to provide this assistance, and I think it is incumbent on Government to make it mandatory that they do so for the privilege to make a fortune in this country and retire on Seven Mile Beach after ten years labour.

Thank you, Sir.

The Third Elected Member for

MRS. DAPHNE L. DRRETT:

Mr. President, I rise to oppose this Bill before us, a Law to amend the Legal Practitioners Law, 1969.

I was a little bit concerned when I first read this Bill as to the reasons why this particular change would need to be made. As mentioned earlier, I feel that there are sufficient lawyers in the country to cope with the cases - I do not think that the issue here is that they are pressed for the amount of time needed to attend to the case. It would seem to me that the only reason behind this is that those persons who qualify for legal aid are not in a position to be able to obtain the service of the legal practitioners in this country. For that reason it is felt that those persons who we might be able to recruit from overseas would be only too willing to take these cases at a much lesser fee.

I do not have a whole lot to say on this, except that I firmly feel that the lawyers practising in this country are already in a position where they can give of their time at a lesser rate, or for free. I agree with the Second Elected Member for George Town that some type of a roster system could be introduced and each law firm would in turn, such as Justices of the Peace who have to sit in on Juvenile case in the court. Everyone's time in this country is worth something. It does not matter who the individual is, and if there are other individuals in this country who can give of their time and service in areas where they are needed, certainly, the legal practitioners ought to be in such a position. In fact, much more so. It is no question, everyone knows that in this country most lawyers are already wealthy, and those who are not are certainly on the road to reaching that status.

I feel that this is not necessary, I also have to agree with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town that the law which perhaps needs looking into is the Poor Person (Legal Aid) Law, and not necessarily the particular law which is before us now.

Mr. President, with those short remarks, I regret that I have to oppose the Bill.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, as usual I was going to speak on the Bill, but I have been even more heartened hearing the opposition come into this Bill today. I have been doubly heartened by my colleague from West Bay rising on her feet to oppose this Bill. It is a sign of good things, I guess. I do not know whether it is the election coming or not, but ...

Mr. President, the Government brought a Bill some time last year, I believe, where it removed Executive Council having a say in how many attorneys came into this country. That decision, which they had something to do with, is now left to the entire discretion of the Caymanian Protection Board. I opposed the Bill for two reasons at that time. One was, that I felt that they should not pass the buck, and the other reason was, that the floodgates had a possibility of being opened. And again today, I must ask Government to tread carefully here lest, as the Member for George Town said, the floodgates be opened. In fact, I would urge them to withdraw this Bill, they are not going to get any votes from this side, that is obvious. And I would ask you to remove yourself from the Chair, give the Chair to the Honourable First Official Member, and we can throw this Bill in the garbage bin where it deserves to go, seeing that we only have seven votes on this side. I know you are going to vote with them.

Mr. President, the previous Government started a Law School in this country, and while I opposed them, it was one of the things I felt that went greatly to their credit. On looking through the Law School, we have some very fine students there, students who I am sure, are going to make this country proud. Further to that, we have had just about two or three young girls just completed their schooling abroad and have now come back to this country, and I am sure also that they are going to play their part in this country and give the country its due. Are we not scared that we are going to hurt these young people in some fashion by this Bill which I hold in my hand?

I am not opposing the principle involved, to help poor people get a lawyer whom they will not be able to pay for - I agree with that one hundred per cent. But I too must ask whether we cannot get lawyers practising here to take on more cases. As a representative of the people, I have had occasions when I have had to go to certain law firms on behalf of my constituents to get some sort of help, and some have gladly done it, but others refused to help. Lawyers that have made and are making piles of money in this country, and they refused to even write one single letter to help some poor people in this country. That is a very bad position for this country to be in. We have some good lawyers here, and I believe that they should and can handle more legal aid cases. I am hoping that some system will be devised that they will agree with, that in the end will benefit poor persons who need legal aid.

I oppose this Bill for another reason, and that reason is, that I believe the situation will come about in this instance that has taken hold in other instances where certain people were brought in to do certain jobs ten, fifteen years ago, and they are still here in this country. They do not move. And you go to them and try to get some help, go to them, ask them to give you some money for a project for a church or for some other social function and they laugh in your face and drive you away from their door. That is what is happening in this country, it is a bad position for this country to be in. This Bill is not going to help that situation any. It is not going to help, in my opinion it is going to be detrimental to the future of some of our law students.

For those reasons, I am opposing the Bill. I believe we have seven votes on this side, and I trust that the Government bench will withdraw it, throw it in the bin, or you will remove yourself from the Chair and put the Honourable First Official Member there where we can defeat them.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I was intending to take our normal morning break, I think probably the time has arrived for it. So I will suspend proceedings for approximately fifteen minutes.

AT 11:14 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:45 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Resumption of the Second Reading debate on a Bill for a Law to amend the Legal Practitioners Law.

Does any other Member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands was the first who caught my eye.

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, the Bill now before this Honourable House, a Bill for a Law to amend the Legal Practitioners Law, 1969, has given me a lot of concern. I cannot accept the Bill in its present form. I realise the necessity of legal aid for those who cannot afford legal aid, and I do support that. I do feel it is the responsibility of the legal profession of the Cayman Islands to come to the aid in cases like this. I refer to the amendment to section 4, and in this Bill, subsection 2 section 4(b) which reads as follows:

"Where the Clerk of the Court has certified that in his opinion it is impracticable and in particular circumstances for a person to whom a legal aid certificate has been granted under section 3 of the Poor Persons (Legal Aid) Law to instruct an Attorney-at-Law in the Islands by such a person, any person who possesses the prescribed."

As I understand that, I do not think that "impracticable" is strong enough a word. The only way I could accept something of this nature would be, if every effort was made to get some attorney locally, and if every effort failed, then I could agree that we could go outside of the territory and secure legal aid. As I said in the beginning, I do not feel that because the person on trial is unable to pay for legal counsel that he should be denied because of his circumstances, but I do not feel that it should be done in too many circumstances. I feel we need this thing further defined. I am not a legal brain, as everybody knows, it may be impractical. The Honourable mover of this Bill will explain that it covers what I am trying to say, but to me it does not. I understood from the Honourable mover that in circumstances, it has been necessary to get counsel from outside of the jurisdiction, but I do feel that in a profession which is as lucrative as our legal profession is, they owe it to our country to give something back for the financial reward that they have received. I do not think any profession in these Islands has been more successful than Caymanian and expatriate lawyers in the community.

So Mr. President, I could possibly give a second look at this Bill, but in its present form I cannot support this Bill as presented. I would ask the Honourable mover to look at it carefully, and maybe there is some amendment that can be made to it in the Committee stage which might solve the provisions which I have stated.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:
End.

The Elected Member for East

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Mr. President, I was hoping that I would not need to speak on the Bill which is before us, because after listening to previous speakers, I was hopeful that the Government bench would rise and have this piece of rubbish withdrawn from the floor of this House.

Very little can be said that would not be repeating what previous speakers have said. We all know that the legal profession in this country is one of the better paid groups in these Islands. I feel today that if Government had taken a move such as the one suggested by my colleague from Bodden Town, we would be on the correct track. Why should we come here, put forward a Bill such as the one before us, and feel deeply within us that we are doing justice to our people? Mr. President, I feel I would not be doing my duty if I stood here today and supported the Bill in its present form. I believe Sir, that if even a third section was added here that gave us the assurance that this would only be done in cases such as murder trials, after the local legal profession was fully checked out, to see that aid could not be given. But as it is, it is too wide, and I cannot support it in its present form.

I am hopeful that when the Honourable Second Official Member gets up, instead of trying to explain this further to us, that he will make his contribution quite short, and say to us that he is going to withdraw this Bill.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to

In that case, I will invite the Honourable Second Official Member to exercise his right of reply if he wishes.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, though I regret that I cannot oblige the Member for East End by withdrawing the Bill, I do hope there are some things that I can now say to help to assuage the doubts which some Elected Members are obviously feeling about this amendment.

First of all, the amendment is not in any way intended to open the floodgates to people from off the Islands. For those Members whose real concern is that it will permit a lot of off-Island lawyers to come in here to the prejudice of the local profession, I would say this: that the word "impracticable" was intended to convey that the Clerk of the Court would only give such a certificate when all other efforts to find representation had been exhausted. In other words, as a last resort.

Now it is obvious to me from the contributions to this debate that Members do not feel that that word "impracticable" spells it out far enough. I am therefore and do now undertake that if this Bill is given a Second Reading, that I would move a Committee stage amendment to spell out that before the Clerk of the Court can issue any certificate, she/he has to be satisfied, that the applicant has made every possible effort to obtain representation within the Islands, and has failed to do so. And I would hope that that would meet the fears of those Members who see this as opening floodgates to a whole wave of foreign outside lawyers from off the Islands.

During the debate, much has been said about the moral duties of the law profession in the Islands. I would like just to say a few words on that. There are quite a lot of legal aid cases which come up each year and which are dealt with by the profession appearing in them and representing the accused, or in civil cases representing the party without representation at the current legal aid rates which fall, as I am sure Members are aware, far below the commercial rates going. And when I say they fall far below the commercial rates, they fall below what is necessary to pay the overheads on a lawyer. Because a lawyer who appears on a legal aid case, if he is an employed lawyer, has to have his salary paid, his office has to be run, there is a secretary sitting back there for him, and everything else. Lawyers may earn a lot of money, they are also costly to run and to provide the infrastructure for them.

In 1986, there were 72 legal aid cases in the Islands. 26 of those were criminal, and 46 were civil. The local profession discharged their responsibility in all of those cases except for one, or may split down to two, the recent murder case involving some parties from East End in which for two of the accused, originally three, but for two of the accused, it transpired that it was impossible to find a local firm who were prepared to commit one of their attorneys for the estimated length of the trial. The trial turned out to run for something like, I think, twelve weeks, which is, I am sure Members will appreciate, a fairly massive commitment to make for a litigation lawyer. All the lawyers on the Island that we are talking about as available to do this sort of work, do also have other professional commitments. And these commitments are not just commitments to going out there and making a lot of money, they are commitments to their other clients, and some of those clients will be commercial clients, and some of them will be Caymanian clients here who have their own problems of divorce, or their own problems of representation in other courts or their own business litigation which they need to go ahead. To take a lawyer out from that sort of practice for twelve weeks and effectively neutralise him in a serious and weighty case to which he has to give his full attention if he is to do justice to his profession and to his professional calling, to do that to a lawyer, is a very hard thing indeed to impose upon a professional man.

So I put forward those points so that Members might realise that some of the criticisms directed against the local legal profession are perhaps, overblown. They have contributed and continue to contribute to legal aid in the Islands. Having said that, the suggestion by the Second Elected Member for George Town that a public defenders scheme could be set up is something that at the moment is being actively considered, and is being actively considered with the Law Society. The suggestion is with them at the moment, and they are looking at it. I say it is with them at the moment, it is something which partly originated with them, and partly originated with the Chief Justice. And it would work along the lines mentioned by the Elected Member, that a fixed rate contribution would be made by local firms and in return for that, a public defender could be hired, given an office, and could take much of the legal aid burden off their shoulders. Of course, this depends upon two things: it depends upon all the lawyers in the Island being willing to do it, and some may not. It also depends on the amount of work that is going to fall upon the shoulders of the public defender.

72 cases may not sound a lot to you, but that can be a heavy load for a lawyer who has to spend all his days in the court and then go away and organise, prepare and interview witnesses, and get together his other cases. He may also find himself in difficulties if cases in the criminal courts and the civil courts are proceeding at the same time. So, although the scheme has merit, it does need working out in its practical terms so that all these little difficulties along the way can be taken care of. So it is not going to happen immediately, but it is certainly in train.

I should also like to say that I share very much the enthusiasm and optimism expressed by the Second Elected Member for George Town for the Law School and for those graduates who will be coming out of it we hope this year, and in the succeeding year. And yes, the small legal aid work is ideal for people like that to cut their teeth on, and one would hope they would rapidly graduate to doing whatever the legal aid system could throw at them. I have two comments on that. The first is, that not everybody who comes out of the Law School wants to do criminal work. From the outside one often assumes that the work in the criminal courts is what all lawyers are about, and what all lawyers aspire to. It is not. The bulk of lawyers do not want to go to the criminal courts, they want to do any of the wide range of civil practice which may mean sitting in one's office, paper pushing in a way; in another way, dealing with the heart of the commercial world, depending on how you look at it. To many people that can be just as exciting, and to many people, better suits their temperament. So there are going to be perhaps a large number of those coming out of the Law School who do not want to go to the Law Courts to do legal aid work, and whom it would not benefit at all to drive them there, to make them do something their personality may not be suited to, or what does not fit in with their ambitions. And also it has to be said that for somebody fresh from the Law School, they are not going to walk in and be able to do a murder case lasting twelve weeks on their first day out of Law School. It may not take them long to get there, but it is going to take some time.

So there are going to continue to be occasions when big cases, and by big I mean, complex cases which are likely to last a long time, are going to crop up when the profession cannot cope and when the output from the Law School in the short term cannot cope, and when if there is not some way that the person concerned can get legal representation, that person is going to be prejudiced and we are going to be faced with the embarrassing situation of somebody coming before these courts in the Island with nobody to represent them.

It was to meet that potentially enormously embarrassing situation that Jamaican lawyers were brought in in a recent large murder case under the legal aid scheme, after every effort had been made to recruit, or persuade, or cajole local lawyers into taking up the case. At one stage we also thought we had got a local lawyer who would represent one of them, he withdrew at the last minute, and he was a lawyer employed not by one of the expatriate firms who one Member suggested might be raping the Islands, but by a Caymanian firm. In the end, at the last minute, we were left in a situation where two people facing capital charges were going to be unrepresented if somebody did not come in from outside the Islands. It was to meet that situation that two Jamaican lawyers came in. And that situation may well arise again.

I think all Honourable Members are aware, I said it earlier today, of the increasing workload which faces the Grand Court, and among the 23-odd criminal cases at this moment awaiting trial, there are some serious and heavy cases, complex and long and involving in some instances, capital offences which are going to have to be tried on legal aid. When we get to those there may not be, whatever the moral position may be, local attorneys who are willing or able to represent them.

So this Law is intended to provide, in that last ditch case, a way out whereby the court authorities, the Clerk of the Court, can open a door to enable the person facing trial to obtain adequate representation.

Having said that, I should like to go back and reiterate the undertaking I gave a moment ago, because this is intended to be a last-ditch, an in extremis position, it is not intended to subvert the local profession or bring in a tide of poorly qualified lawyers from the U.K. or from anywhere else. It is intended to bring in adequate representation when all else has failed. And if there is any change in the wording of (b) in clause 2 of this Bill that will affect it, I am willing to move that change at the Committee stage, and the move that I propose at the moment is to put something in there which says that before the Clerk of the Court can issue the certificate that is necessary to allow the legal aid person to go outside the Island, the Clerk of the Court has to be satisfied that the applicant has made every effort to obtain representation in the Islands and has failed.

With that amendment, which I undertake to make, I hope that the fears of many of the Members will be allayed. And with the explanation which I hope I have given of the crisis situation that sometimes arises, and which this Bill is intended to avert, I hope that the fears of other of the Members will be allayed, and with that, notwithstanding the course urged upon me from the other side, I do commend this Bill to the House.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE CRIMINAL PROCEDURE CODE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Criminal Procedure Code.

Mr. President, I imagine that if I go on like this, Members are going to get very tired of my voice, and my voice itself might not last all morning. So I am going to try to do this one quite quickly. It makes three unrelated amendments to the Criminal Procedure Code. They are amendments which have cropped up at different times in the application of that Law in the criminal courts.

The first is, to meet a situation which has arisen due to a change in practice which has prevailed recently. The practice now is, following the United Kingdom, that where a person is charged with an offence, he may if he wishes omit other similar offences that he has committed and ask the court to take those offences into account on sentencing. And that as it were clears his record, he does not have to be worried about being caught for these other offences, and the court can sentence him accordingly. But he is never charged with those offences, he is never convicted for them. That procedure has been in operation for some time now, and the problem which has arisen in respect of it is that where we are talking about property of theft, or obtaining by deception, the person who admits having obtained something by deception and asks for it to be taken into consideration cannot be ordered to restore it to the person from whom it was stolen because the section in the Law, section 55 which deals with restitution, only deals with where somebody is convicted of an offences with which he is being charged. So the first amendment which is proposed is a minor amendment to section 55 of the Criminal Procedure Code. It is minor, but it looks long because the section has been repealed and substituted, but if Members compare it with the old one, they will see that little has been changed.

The effect of the amendment is to allow the court, where somebody stands up before it and asks the court to take into consideration an offence, that the court can then order restitution in respect of the subject matter of that offence. As I say the court has always had that power when convicting somebody of an offence.

The second amendment is the addition of a new section headed "Power to postpone or adjourn trial". There is a misspelling in the green Bill. This is to confer quite explicitly, upon all courts something which they have been doing all along, relying upon the common law, which is, if somebody is not ready for trial, or a defendant appears on a first occasion and asks for the case to be adjourned, or for whatever reason, the case has to be adjourned from trial time to time to allow the court to make that adjournment and in the meantime to remand the accused either on bail or in custody. The courts have been doing this all along, they have been exercising common law power to do this. It was felt that the time has come to make that quite explicit lest some time in the future there be any challenge to it.

The third amendment is the companion amendment of one that I have already canvassed this morning when discussing the Penal Code, and that is the split in the case of the offence of damaging property. Members will recall the split has been proposed at the $1,000 level for property damaged, and that above that the penalty should be a maximum of ten years or $10,000 and below that, 2 years or $1,000, and that above the limit the accused should be able to elect trial by jury if he wished, and below the limit trials should be summary only. This amendment here makes the equivalent amendments in the Criminal Procedure Code to bring it into line with the Penal Code as it will be, when it has been amended by that Bill.

With those short remarks I commend this Bill to the House.

THE ESTATES PROCEEDINGS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Estates Proceedings Law, 1974 is deemed to have been read a First Time, and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE ESTATES PROCEEDINGS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Estates Proceedings Law, 1974.

This very short Bill makes a quite significant amendment, so I ask for Members' patience if I go back to the beginning and explain at some length how this has come about, and what this Bill is intended to rectify - and I use the word rectify very advisedly.

The Estates Proceedings Law was enacted in these Islands in 1974, and it follows very closely upon legislation in the United Kingdom, which had been enacted in 1934. The purpose of the Law was to enable, in the case where someone died, causes of action which the deceased had immediately before his death to survive for the benefit of his estate. Thus if a deceased person was suing somebody for a debt, that cause of action did not die with him, but his estate could continue and pursue the action for the debt, and recover it for the benefit of the beneficiaries. Similarly, if the deceased person was suing for a wrongful act, such as trespass, or damage to property, the class of wrongful acts which lawyers call "torts", then again, if he did that cause of action would not die with him, but his estate could follow it for the benefit of the beneficiaries.

There were some exceptions to this, the cause of action for libel and slander was one which the law expressly exempted, and that always dies with an individual. There were some other things excluded from that - I do not think I need go through them all, but damages for seduction, adultery, breach of promise to marriage and also exemplary damages were excluded from the operation of the survival of causes of action.

Now, as I say, this Law is based upon a Law enacted in the United Kingdom in 1934. In the 1970's, in about 1975, a lawyer in the United Kingdom had a very bright idea in respect of this. He reasoned that if somebody is injured so that their life expectancy is shortened, the law has always conferred upon that person a right of action in respect of the shortening of his life expectancy. And he can recover damages for it, and those damages are usually calculated by working out how much he would have earned in the lost years, and multiplying it by a guess of how many years he had actually lost, of how much he would have lived if his life expectancy had not been shortened, and giving them to him, during his life, as compensation for him to enjoy and to spend, to compensate him for having lost years of his life. As always, it is a partially ineffective system, to try and pay somebody for having lost years of their life, but it was the best the courts could do.

Now what the clever lawyer realised, argued, and won, was this. That if somebody is killed outright, in the second before they die, the cause of action vests in them, and that cause of action is for all the years that they have lost, quantified by totting up what those years were likely to have been, and multiplying them by the likely earnings during those years. And this lawyer said that is a cause of action, it is vested in the deceased in the instant before his death, and it should survive for the benefit of his estate, so that his estate can sue for those lost years and can get the benefit of the money. The money in the estate, of course, is bound by the terms of the Will, or bound by the terms of the Intestacy if there is one, and it may be that the deceased has left all his money to a cats' home, but nonetheless, the estate is entitled to recover for the lost years, which may be a huge amount of money, and then it goes to the cats' home, or whatever.

Now, there always has been, quite separately from this, there always has been in the law of the United Kingdom and in the law of the Cayman Islands - I say always has been, at least for this century there has been - a completely different cause of action, right of action, which is designed to protect and benefit the dependents of somebody who is wrongfully killed. In the United Kingdom it is called the Fatal Accidents Act and here it is wrapped up in our Law of Torts, and what that does, and in my submission to Honourable Members is very sensibly and rightly does, is say that when somebody is killed, everybody who was dependent upon him is entitled to compensation for the loss of the dependency. So, for instance, the wife and the children of somebody who is killed can come along and can sue for the amount, quantified in cash terms, because that is the only way the courts can do it, the amount that they have lost by reason of the death of their husband and father. The way the courts do this, because there has to be some way of quantifying these things, is work out how much money would have been spent on the wife and the children, not just directly by giving it to them, but by the provision of a home, the provision of food, the provision of education, the provision of trips out and so on - fairly generous criteria are applied - how much money was spent each year, on each dependent, and then multiply it by the number of years that the deceased person might have lived - and that is always a fairly rough estimate. But the courts do the best they can, they come up with a multiplier, they multiply the annual rate of the dependency by the time that the deceased person has lost, they come up with a lump sum of money, and they give it to the dependents. And, dependents means anybody who was dependent and so it can mean wife, children, aged parents, people who have been taken into the household, uncles and aunts who are disabled, whatever, as long as there is a real dependency, a real amount of money going to them during the lifetime of the deceased, then they can recover after his death for it.

So, I think, as I hope Honourable Members will now understand, when someone dies there are at present two quite distinct causes of action that can be brought in respect of the death. There is the claim by the dependents for the loss of the dependency, and there is the claim by the estate for the lost years. Now in the case of many people, the case of a man who has a wife and a family, and spends all his money supporting his wife and family, those two claims are in fact going to be identical. The lost years adds nothing whatsoever to the claim under the Fatal Accidents Act. Where the claims begin to differ is where a man has not spent all his money on his dependents, but has spent some of his money elsewhere. And this will arise where a man has no dependents, or where his dependents are limited in number, leaving him an excess of money to invest, or put somewhere else for his own benefit. It is in cases like that where you start to get the award under the lost years being larger than the dependency, and when it is got into the estate, it need not benefit the dependents - it might, but it need not, it depends upon the terms of the Will.

Now this claim, the lost years claim, was rapidly recognised in the United Kingdom as being unfair and dangerous. It was unfair because for some people it was like winning the football pools - your second cousin might be killed, you might be the only surviving relative, you might have had no dependency, no benefit from him during his lifetime whatsoever, you might not even like him, but if you are the surviving beneficiary under the Will, you get the lump sum claimed for lost years - which may be huge. So, it was seen that did not benefit dependents, but it did benefit these collateral relatives, or collateral beneficiaries, often to no real explainable purpose, and of course, the classic example, taking this argument right to the absurd, is something like where somebody leaves all his money to a cats' home and a huge amount of money can be recovered from the unfortunate person who caused the death. That unfortunate person may not have been insured. If they are insured, it is the insurance company that bears the liability for paying off the windfall, and it is the insurance company who, in the end, puts up their premium because of this risk, puts up their premiums and harms the whole community.

It was these considerations that arose in a recent case in which the Chief Justice, somewhat reluctantly, felt himself compelled to make an award in respect of the lost years, in the case of a person who had died in a road traffic accident, and I would just like to read to Members, the opening remarks which the Chief Justice made when he turned to consider this head of claim. He said:

"The doctrine of damages for the lost years has a short history in England before it was abolished by legislation. I should imagine that this is the first claim under this head ever to come before the courts in these Islands. As it is, I feel that I have to treat that doctrine as being part of the common law of these Islands, brought here with them by the early settlers. This is so, notwithstanding the fact that the doctrine blossomed in England long after these Islands were settled. That is the case with many other common law doctrines. The doctrine of the lost years has its full share of anomalies, as the decided cases show, and it may be that Government will introduce legislation similar to that considered appropriate in England. The doctrine, while it lasted in England, was much criticised as capable of causing real injustice, as was illustrated by ..."

and he cites a case which illustrates one of the foolish lengths to which the doctrine could be taken.

In fact, the doctrine was considered in England, it was considered by a committee called the Pearson Committee, that was appointed to look into it, and they recommended that it be abolished, and it was duly abolished in England in 1984, in terms very similar to that which is now to be used in this Bill in the Cayman Islands. Indeed, this Bill is more or less copied from the U.K. abolishing legislation, just as our Estates Proceedings Law is more or less copied from the U.K. Estates Proceedings Law.

Having said all that about what the Bill is intended to do, let me just say a word about the mechanism for abolition which is proposed. What the Bill says or does is insert a new sub-clause into section 4 of the Estates Proceedings Law. Let me just read section 4 to you. Section 4 reads:

"Where by virtue of section 2 a cause of action survives for the benefit of the estate of a deceased person, the damages recoverable shall not include:

(a) exemplary damages; or ..."

and then we will put in, if this Bill receives passage, we will put in the following, new clause (aa):

"in respect of any cause of action which arose after the 31st day of May 1987, damages for loss of income in respect of any period after that person's death;...."

In other words it abolishes the claim for lost years for the benefit of the estate after the 31st of May 1987.

I should just say a word on why we have picked 31st May 1987. It is not intended that this Law should have any retroactive effect whatsoever. Anybody or any estate currently benefiting from a claim for lost years in respect of an accident that has already happened will not be affected. It was felt that it would be wrong to take away a vested cause of action. The date that has been picked is intended to be far enough in the future to enable, if this legislation is passed, the formalities to be gone through, for it to be published and brought to the public knowledge, and for the cut off date to be clear to everybody.

So, if I may just, after that little background recap - this Bill is intended to abolish what the Chief Justice described as "an anomalous cause of action". It is not intended at all to effect the quite different rights of action which dependents of deceased persons have to recover from whoever caused death, or from the insurance company responsible for that person, to recover for them the value of their dependency. That right has always existed, and I hope will always remain. It is not touched by this whatsoever. This is intended to abolish the sometimes ludicrous windfalls that can accrue to the estate by looking at the hypothetical, the theoretical lost years which the deceased had been deprived of.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Estates Proceedings Law, 1974 be given a second reading.

The question is that a Bill

The Motion is open for debate.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

received the Bill, I said I could not support it, and at this moment I do not intend to change my position.

Mr. President, when I first there was some talk concerning this Bill, and the Honourable Attorney General did some explaining on the reasons for bringing this Law, as he just did. The big thing, it seems, that they want to abolish, is "lost years". They want to abolish a deceased person's estate, making the claim for lost years. I cannot agree with it, and I am going to vote "no" whether I stand alone or not.

Mr. President, I object to it strongly. I do not believe that because it was abolished in the United Kingdom that we should abolish it here today. The United Kingdom just abolished capital punishment. Are we coming to this House to abolish it? To say that some person might get hung and five years down the road you find out that he was innocent, so we are going to abolish it? I say no. And I say, if there is a windfall coming for somebody, let the windfall come. I have, since being elected to this House, often wondered why the Government takes the actions they often do. Sometimes I come up with the answer as being necessity. For instance, it is necessary to bring the amendment I see before us for the Caymanian Protection Law. It is also necessary to bring the amendment to the Partnership Law, in my opinion. It was necessary for them to take certain actions they have taken since they took over the affairs of this country. But why is it necessary to bring this amendment to the Estates Proceedings Law? Every time we meet in this Legislative Assembly it would seem that Government takes away a right that the people have. For years, and they can say that it was a claim, I will get to that later, or they can still claim - but this right, something that people had, now today for some reason will be taken away, and I understand it is because the insurance companies are going to have some problems - that is the main cause, no other cause. I stand by that. We have three Members of Executive Council who are involved in insurance companies.

Now they agree to exclude from a possible court case the right to ask for loss of income for lost years. I ask you today Mr. President, and I ask them why should not the wife of some poor man still in the prime of his life, who has been run over, by a drunken person, or been killed through negligence in some other fashion, be able to ask for these years of income which she would naturally have gotten if her poor husband had not been killed.

Suppose she has children, who would know the want of that income? They will get some little measly claim for damages - I am talking about a position in this country, not in other countries - she will get some measly settlement. Suppose a child's education is put in jeopardy by not having those lost years of income. Where do you leave a situation like that?

I wonder whether Mr. President, if they have considered what they are doing to the general public. Have they not seen, have they not heard? It is totally unfair and wrong to take away an existing right by legislation given to the people. As far as I am concerned, it stinks of unfair decision making, and it is an abuse of discretion. It is acts like these that have caused the people to give the Government the name of "Rich Man Government". As far as I am concerned, it is a measure of wanton indifference to the circumstances and consequences which might arise in the future.

As I have said, one of their arguments, is that it has been removed from the statute books in Great Britain. Well, as far as I am concerned, those legislators in Great Britain committed a grave miscarriage of justice by the removal of that section. I have worked for insurance companies, and I know a little bit about the insurance market, and I say today, because of reinsurance, no insurance company is hurting in this country today. They are all doing quite well. Sure, their premiums will go up for reinsurance, and they will pass it on to the general public as they have always done. But they are not hurting, and it is only because of one claim, that we find the Government coming forward to remove this right that the people had. The Chief Justice's ruling - I am sorry, no disrespect to the Bar, but I do not agree with some of his rulings. But, as I said, I will keep my respect and say no more on it. God in his good time is taking care of them - they are looking like a dried up bunch of prunes now, but He is taking good care of them in His good time.

Mr. President, I understand they say that a right still remains under some other law somewhere about. Well, I will ask how will any person receive a claim if their right to ask for it is abolished? Government itself had a claim some time ago that I felt should have been bigger - I will not go too far into that matter, except to say that I think it was unfair for somebody dying in their young life, leaving a family, bills, and to receive little or nothing when you consider the pain and the anguish that was caused to the family. Now what we are dealing with here might not be the exact same thing, but it is the same principle I am arguing about. It is the same principle, and all of us who leave, would leave children, and if something was to happen to us, would hope that they could get the best of a situation.

Government is removing that right, I am not going to support it. This Bill - I am not going to ask that it be thrown out, Sir, because you are surprised what you get in this House, one minute they agree to vote with you on something, and when the vote is called, they vote "yes" or they vote "no". You do not know where to put them, you do not know how to trust them. But I will still ask every Member on this side of the House to vote against the Bill, and I will plead especially with the two that usually vote with Government, and I would ask them and all of us to think on this side of the House, if something was to happen to any of us, and our dependents wanted to put in a claim for lost years, how would you feel down the years, to know that you assisted the Government by giving them leave to put this thing through? You have small children too. As far as I am concerned the Bill is unreasonable, unconscionable, it stinks and deserves the no vote. And I would say let us on this side put it in the garbage bin where such atrocious legislation should be put.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think the time has come for lunch, and I therefore propose now to suspend proceedings until approximately 2:15 p.m.

AT 12:42 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

MR. PRESIDENT: Resumption of the Second Reading debate on a Bill for a Law to amend to Estates Proceedings Law, 1974.

wish to exercise his right of reply?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I would just like to repeat myself, and to stress in the light of what the Honourable Member said, that the abolition of the cause of action for lost years will not take away the rights of dependents. I have just circulated to all Members in the Chamber a copy of the Law of Torts (Reform) Law, which is the Law which confers the right of action on dependents for the amount of their dependency, so that Members can see for themselves what that Law says, and reassure themselves that we do have on the statute books a very firm and clear piece of legislation which confers upon dependents the right to bring their own action in respect of what they have lost by the death of the person upon whom they were dependent.

Thank you, Sir.

CLERK: THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

MR. PRESIDENT: A Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law is deemed to have been read a First Time and is set down for Second Reading.

SECOND READING

CLERK: THE JUDICATURE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law.

Mr. President, this Bill makes, again, a series of amendments which are not necessarily all related to each other. There is one very important one which is designed to facilitate and speed the operations of the court, and I will come back to that and stress it so that Members know which it is when I get to it.

But if I might take the clauses of the Bill in order, the first is to amend section 14 of the Law. Section 14 deals with the summoning of a jury panel, and fixes the time before the beginning of each session of the Grand Court before which, or at which the Clerk of the Court must summon the panel for the forthcoming court. It used to be 21 days before the session, it has now been extended to six weeks, and this is to fit in with the next amendment that we have in clause 3 of the Bill which amends section 15 of the Law.

Up to now the Law has been that the Clerk of the Court shall issue a summons to jurors who are going to attend at the session, and she has to do that six days, or no less than six days before the beginning of the court's session. Many jurors have found this a very short period of notice, it has inconvenienced them for fixing their own private business, and so that period has been extended to 21 days. So now a juror has to be notified no less than 21 days before the session to which he is summoned to attend.

The next amendment in clause 4 I would, Mr. President, with the permission of the House, just defer dealing with for a moment until I have dealt with the amendment in clause 5, because then it will make more sense. And the amendments contained in clause 5 are those which I mentioned a moment ago at the beginning of this as the important ones.

The amendment in clause 5 is an amendment to section 19 of the Law. At present section 19 of the Law provides for the balloting of a jury from the panel of people summoned to the court, and it reads:

"The jury to be empanelled for the trial of any given case in the court shall be balloted for by the Clerk of the Court subject to all the rights of challenge."

Now on one reading of that it only allows for one jury to try one case to be balloted for at any given time. There is now a perceived need in the courts for, on occasion, more than one jury trial to be heard concurrently - in other words, faced with a backlog, of as I said earlier, some 23 criminal cases, it is going to be expedient to have two judges sitting at the same time. This of course is conditional upon sufficient space being found for them - two judges running two Grand Courts, hearing jury trials. Now that needs an amendment to the Law simply to make it possible, and the amendment to the Law is contained in clause 5 to this Bill, and clause 5 works by designating the present section 19 as subsection (1) and then adding at the end of it:

"Provided that, where more than one case is to be heard in the court, whether concurrently or consecutively, as many juries as may be necessary may be balloted for from the same jury panel."

And that allows for more than one jury to be balloted for at the same time. I might just mention here in case Members have forgotten, that quite recently the Judicature Law has been amended to increase the size of jury panels from 36 to 72. So there is going to now be enough people in the panel summoned, to enable more than one jury to be drawn at the same time.

The clause 5 goes on to add a new subsection (2) to section 19, and that reads:

"In the cases of a jury empanelled under subsection (1), the court shall have power at any time after a panel has been summoned to release the panel or any part thereof temporarily and to give directions to it as to the time and place when and where its attendance will be required."

That is purely a mechanical provision, and it allows the court to, if I might put it so bluntly, shift the jury panel around, first of all from court to court for the balloting of separate juries, and then to release them temporarily so that they may go home, come back on a fixed date, for further balloting of further juries.

I had said that I would like to come back to clause 4 after I had dealt with clause 5 - now is the time to do that. Clause 4 makes a minor amendment to section 18 of the Law. Section 18 is headed "Effect of Informalities" and it says:

"No challenge to the array" (that is the jury which is drawn or balloted) "shall be allowed, nor shall the array be quashed, nor shall any judgment after verdict upon any indictment be stayed or reversed by reason of the neglect or default of any person to do or perform any acts or requirements in relation to the preparation of the jury lists, or in the making of jury panels."

In other words, technical errors by the Clerk of the Court in summoning the panel of jurors should not invalidate the result of a trial and the new Bill proposes to add into that the following words:

"any action by the court under subsection (2) of section 19 ...".

into the third line, so that it will read:

"by reason of any action by the court under subsection (2) of section 19 or of the neglect or default of any person."

In other words, any action by the court in sending the jury away and inviting them to come back or sending them to the next door court to be balloted, any technical informality in the words used or the date fixed for them to come back shall not invalidate any subsequent trial drawn from the panel so directed around.

The next, and as I said, these are a list of unrelated amendments, the next unrelated amendment we come to is in clause 6 of the Bill, and it relates to section 20 of the Law. And in particular it relates to section 20(6) of the Law, and that is the subsection that allows for majority verdicts. As Members will perhaps be aware, in all cases except murder or treason, the Law presently provides for a jury to bring in a guilty verdict on a majority. The present section reads as follows:

"On a trial on indictment for an offence other than murder or treason, the accused shall be convicted if found guilty of the offence by not less than five members of the jury."

Again, Members will recall that the normal jury panel is seven, so this allows for a majority of five out of seven for a conviction. That is fine as far as it goes. Unfortunately, there is one important area that that original section did not address, and that is acquittals. And as the Law stands at the moment, though you can convict on a majority, you have to have a unanimous jury to acquit - which is plainly wrong, but it would seem according to common sense that the same majority as is necessary to convict should also be sufficient to acquit. If you do not do this, you will find hung juries, in other words a jury which cannot decide, and you have to have a retrial in that case. Hung juries will happen where six people want to acquit and one wants to convict, that will not be good enough, will not be a unanimous verdict and you will get a hung jury. In order to meet that is the amendment in clause 6 of the Bill. It is borrowed directly from the U.K. law on this which preceded our own Law, and what it says is:

"Subject to subsections (4) and (5)," (and subsection (4) deals with the need for a unanimous verdict in murder and treason and (5) is a corollary of that) "on a trial on indictment for any offence, the verdict of the jury" (in other words the verdict either way, for guilty or for not guilty) "need not be unanimous if:

- (a) in a case where there are not less than eleven jurors, ten of them agree on the verdict; and
- (b) in a case where there are not less than six jurors, five of them agree on the verdict."

First of all let me say we have picked eleven and six because the Law also in subsection (3) of section 20 already allows one person to drop out from a jury panel for reasons of illness or whatever, so you are likely in some cases to have jury panels of eleven or of six. That is the reason for those numbers. The effect of the amendment is that in all cases, including murder or treason, a jury can acquit on a majority, and in all cases other than murder or treason, it can acquit and convict on a majority. And that as I understand it, brings the Law in line with what everybody thought it was anyway, certainly the Judges in the Grand Court have been giving this direction for some time, and clears up a small but possibly important point in the Law - it would be important to anybody for whom a jury was moving to acquit, but were stuck by the strict wording of the Law.

Moving on through the Bill, clause 7 simply is a spelling correction, the opportunity to correct which has been taken on this occasion.

Then we come to clause 8, which deals with the prescription of the court fees. The fees for the court, and these are fees which can be charged for starting proceedings in court, or for various steps in proceedings in court, and they are also fees which lawyers can recover from the other side, or rather that a winning party can recover from the other side on a judgement. These fees are laid down in the schedule. Presently the schedule can be amended by the Governor in Council on the recommendation of a judge of the Grand Court. The Grand Court does have already its own Rules Committee established under the Grand Court Law which deals with all other rules of court, and it was proposed to confer upon that Rules Committee, the right to amend the schedule. In other words, the right to prescribe the level of fees in the court - in other words, in the committee's own court. And having done that, the amendment goes on in the section (1A) which it inserts:

"The Rules Committee, constituted by subsection (2) of section 1 of the Grand Court Law may, subject to negative resolution of the Legislative Assembly, amend the Schedules."

Negative resolution of the Legislative Assembly is provided for in the interpretation law. What it means is that the Rules Committee makes the rules prescribing the fee, those new rules get laid upon the table of the House and they have to lay there for a certain number of days during which period if any Member objects to the amendment he may get up and move a Motion that they be annulled. So there is a residual control vested in this House over the Rules Committee, but it is the Rules Committee and not Executive Council which is the original body for implementing changes in the fee structure.

There is also, in clause 8, to which I should draw the attention of Honourable Members, a proviso that:

"no fee shall be payable by any public officers or public department of the Government in any case instituted by any public officer when acting in his official capacity; but in any such case, fees shall, in the discretion of the court, be recoverable from the other party if the decision be given against him."

This does two things. First of all it avoids the accounting nonsense of what in effect is the Attorney-General's department, every time they institute civil proceedings, of taking along to the Court's Office a cheque for court fees made out to the Government of the Cayman Islands. In other words, it says Government officials do not have to pay fees because the fees come back to the Exchequer anyway. But if one says that, there is one problem, and the problem is this: that someone whom Government sues for a debt or for whatever, is then going to be in a better position than someone sued by a private individual, because if a private individual sues, he pays court fees, and if he wins, he gets the court fees back from the person who loses, and the Exchequer gets the benefit, the Treasury gets the benefit of the court fees. If Government sues and wins, there is no reason why the person who loses, the person who has put Government to the necessity of bringing an action against him, why that person should get off more cheaply than somebody sued by a private individual. And so the second part of the proviso means, in effect, that if Government wins the action, the court, in its discretion, if it thinks it proper, may then order that the court fees that Government would have paid if it had been a private individual, that those court fees may be recovered, paid into the Treasury, from the person who lost. That provision is taken word for word from an identical provision in the existing Summary Court Law which makes that provision for fees in the Summary Court. It was simply omitted from the Grand Court Law, and that omission has been creating, as Government is compelled into more and more civil litigation, has been creating problems, and now the time has arisen when it seems appropriate to move that it be tidied up and brought into line with the Summary Court Law.

The final clause in the Bill is clause 9, and that simply, and it is very simple, tidies up the drafting of the Schedule by correctly designating each section of the Schedule as Schedule A, Schedule B, and Schedule C, instead of just A, B and C as it is now. It effects no substantive change, and merely brings the drafting of the Schedule into line with the drafting practices now used in other laws.

With that exposition, Mr. President, I commend this Bill to the House.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Judicature Law be given a Second Reading.

CLERK: THE MISUSE OF DRUGS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I rise and thankfully I hope I rise for the last time to move the Second Reading of a Bill, the last time at least today. I rise to move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Misuse of Drugs Law (Second Revision).

Mr. President, this Bill does two quite separate things. The first is dealt with in clause 2 of the Bill, and clause 2 of the Bill proposes to insert a new section immediately after section 6 in the existing Misuse of Drugs Law, to be numbered section 6A. It is headed "Destruction of evidence pending prosecution". The vice which this amendment is intended to meet, and I will read the amendment in just a second, is that in many cases now coming before the courts, large quantities of dangerous prescribed drugs are seized by the police. Sometimes these quantities, in the case of ganga, run into tons. These huge quantities of drugs present not only a simple logistical storage problem, but also present a very real security problem in guarding them and ensuring that they do not, by one means or another, get stolen or find their way back onto the market.

It is to avoid the risk posed by having large quantities of dangerous drugs lying around for often long periods while a case wends its way through the lower courts and then the appeal courts that this amendment is brought. And the function of this amendment is to allow the court to order the destruction of all but a sample of the drugs in those cases where the court is satisfied that it is safe and proper to do so. And in many cases coming before the courts, the volume of the drugs, or the type of drugs, or the way they are packed, has absolutely no evidential significance whatsoever. Once the drugs have been analysed by the Government analyst and a certificate prepared under section 6 of the Law, and once it is plain there is going to be no challenge as to the nature of the drugs, there simply is no point in keeping endless bales of ganga or large amounts of cocaine lying around in the Police Station or in some other place of storage. There may, of course, always be cases where there is some evidential value in the drugs themselves, or in the packaging, and for that reason the amendment proposes that there be a hearing before the court, and it is the prosecution who in the first instance asks for destruction, but the defence have an opportunity of being heard, and if they feel there is a reason not to destroy the drugs, they can say so and the court can weigh that reason. Let me at this stage read the proposed amendment. Section 6A will read:

"Subject to the proviso hereinafter contained, the court may at its discretion, in any proceedings in which an accused person has been charged with an offence against this Law, on the application of the prosecution and after giving the accused person the opportunity of being heard, at any time order the destruction of any controlled drug which has been or is intended to be produced, in whole or in part, as evidence in such proceedings:

Provided that such quantity of such controlled drug as the court may direct shall not be ordered to be destroyed and shall be produced in such proceedings."

Members will note from that as I have said, there is provision there for the defence to be heard, and there is provision there in the proviso for the court to order a sample to be retained if the court thinks it necessary.

I should point out that this section can bite at any stage in the proceedings. In some proceedings it may be proper and expedient for everybody that it bite very early on, in other words in the six tons of ganja type of case, it may well be that the bulk of the drugs can be destroyed right at the start and before the trial. There may be other cases in which this does not need to be done until after the first instance trial and before appeal. And for that reason the section explicitly allows this application to be made at any stage and gives the court power to make such an order at any stage.

Moving on from that to clause 3. This proposes a new section 13A in the Law, and it is headed "Powers of naval officer". The problem of drugs and of drug smuggling on all islands is that the drugs have to be brought into the island by some means, and a favoured means in these and I am sure other islands is the sea, and adequate patrolling of the sea is a function shared by the local Police Force, but also on occasion by Her Majesty's guard ship in the West Indies, or by any other Royal Naval ship that may be in the area. And should the time arise when in Cayman waters, within our territorial limits, there is a Royal Navy ship here, and it, using its massive and extended powers of detection through radar and other modern technology, is able to assist the local enforcement agencies by tracking down, monitoring and eventually stopping and seizing a boat suspected of importing drugs, then that whole exercise would be wasted unless the crew of the ship had similar powers to those currently enjoyed by police constables. If they did not have such similar powers, they could not stop a suspected vessel, they could not seize it, they could not arrest the crew and they could not search it.

Because of that, and to meet that perceived gap, this section is proposed to confer upon the captain of any ship belonging to the Royal Navy or any person acting under his orders (in other words, any member of his crew) shall have and exercise all the powers of a constable under certain sections of this Law. And then it provides also that where the captain or any member of his crew finds any controlled drug in any vessel that they stopped and searched under those preceding powers, they may then arrest the vessel and arrest anybody on it and take them, and this is the ultimate safeguard in all of this, they must take the vessel, anything seized on it, and any person arrested to a constable, in other words, an officer of the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force, or to a police station - they must do that straight away.

So this section is intended to add one possibly small, but one potentially significant weapon to the armoury of the enforcement agencies in the Islands. It is something which is not new in this field - the British Virgin Islands have enacted similar legislation, and it is hoped that other dependent territories in the Caribbean will follow suit to enable ships of Her Majesty's Navy to play their part in combating the evils of drug smuggling.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Misuse of Drugs Law (Second

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

been elected, this Government has made several amendments to the Misuse of Drugs Law. Amendments which the hope was, would alleviate to a certain degree, the mass importation, sale and consumption of hard drugs in this country. The opposite has taken place, unfortunately. There is more importation, more sale and more consumption than before the 1984 Elections especially the last year or two. So the efforts of the Government have failed in this respect. Now what is Government's reason for this amendment? Clause 2 of the Bill seeks the destruction of evidence pending prosecution. The reason given using the exact words of the Honourable Attorney General - the vice it is intended to meet is two things - storage and security. And the words that caught my attention was that guard against the drugs getting out on the street by some means or the other.

Mr. President, since we have

Now, I am not going to disagree with the amendment to any large degree, because in the case of large quantities of drugs confiscated, I will agree that it is dangerous to have them kept in storage. We all have heard stories circulating, I will not go into those stories now, but I have gone to the Governor on many occasions, several occasions, and told of some things myself. I recently got a Motion through this House to have a committee for the disposal of drugs, other than what was used in recent years.

I am wondering whether there is not some other reason, and the Government is not coming out and saying exactly what their fear is. Who is responsible for the security? Who is responsible for the storage of any drugs confiscated in any quantity, large or small? I believe I am right in saying it is the police.

I am wondering whether there is Now, Mr. President, using again the Honourable Attorney General's words, to guard against the drugs getting out on the street, by some means or the other, is that not saying something to us in this House? If the scare is that there is a possibility that there is some force in our police service in this country that drugs are getting out through them, this action is not enough. Government for too long has had complaints, the public has complained, and Members of this House have complained, about certain situations existing in this country, and it is brushed aside. Why? Who is being protected?

Now, Mr. President, using again

I promised, or I asked for an investigation into the Force. In 1983, I called for a Royal Commission of Inquiry, and I was told that we could not have it. I am saying today that the position is no better, and it is time that facts be put on the table for all to understand. If there are people involved, then they must pay the consequences regardless of who it is. For too long in this country there has only been a certain element of punishment, a certain element of people and others that we have to question when we see certain conditions existing. You find that not one word is said, and nothing is done, and when you do open your mouth in this House, your questions are cut up, the questions are not answered properly, and what do you find in the long run?

I promised, or I asked for an roundabout way which is not like McKeeva Bush, but I have learnt a lesson in this House too. If, according to the Attorney General's words, we must guard against the drugs getting out on the street by some way or the other, then this Bill can be put where I said the other ones should have been put that I spoke on, because it will not help the situation.

Mr. President, I am going in a

But I will say this much. Not too long in the distant future I am going to again ask for an investigation into the police force of this country. I will be bringing it on the floor of this House and Members can defeat it if they want. As I said, I will agree but there are a lot of unanswered questions which I hope somebody will be able to answer. Not like taking away a right and saying you still have it.

But I will say this much. Not

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Any other Member wish to speak?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I agree with the Second Member for West Bay in his comments on this Bill. This Bill is an admission of failure by the present Government. In moving the Bill, the Honourable Second Official Member gave as his reasons a lack of security and lack of space. If more space is needed, Government should build a storeroom, and if there is any fear of security, there should be a shakedown of the police force. We have a force which is large in number and we should be able to find someone whom we can trust. We should be able to find somebody that could be put in charge of the drugs. If the problem is that drugs go into areas where they should not go, this Law will not cure it, because it would be much easier if somebody wanted to pilfer some of the drugs, to take the drugs before they are presented to the court, rather than after they have been used, or put forward in evidence. I am certain that if the drugs are destroyed before the case is concluded, that some smart lawyer, on appeal, will be able to use the absence of the exhibits as reason for winning the appeal.

This Bill, like the other one which we dealt with this morning, does not help in any way, help the problem which exists. I do not put much reliance on the lack of storage, because there are only a very few cases in which we have abnormally large amounts of drugs. And certainly, it is very cheap these days to build a warehouse, and if it were needed, I understand warehouses are available for rent.

I believe, with the Second Member for West Bay, that this Bill should not be passed.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member.

The Honourable Third Elected

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, I rise to support the Bill for a Law to amend the Misuse of Drugs Law (Second Revision).

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said that this Bill is an admission of failure by the present Government that it has failed to control or to lessen the effects of drugs. Mr. President, nothing can be further from the truth. I think we have had better detection, I think that the police force has been very active in detecting cases which hitherto were not discovered, and they have now been able, with better equipment, with better training, to arrest and to stop some of the drug dealing that has been going on.

If there is a case where the police are taking the drugs as was insinuated, it is all the more reason why Government should destroy these drugs, take them from under the control of the police and only keep a sample. Once a sample has been taken and analysed, that is all that is necessary in the court. One does not find a truckload of marijuana or cocaine being hauled into the court as evidence. All you find in the court is the analysis and certificate to state that this is marijuana or this is cocaine, this is heroin, that is all that is taken to the court. So I can see an advantage in destroying this if, as has been claimed by one Member, that the police are taking this drug from where it is stored, that is reason enough why Government should seek to destroy it. This will be one less source from which they can supply the public.

There is no reason, or good purpose why the Government should keep a warehouse full of drugs when all we need is just a sample and an analysis as evidence to prosecute the offenders. I cannot for one moment agree that we have the wholesale of drugs by the police force of this country as has been claimed, and then to have the number of arrests that have been taking place within the last few years.

The second part of the Bill is a big step forward, as any British Naval ship in our territorial waters will now be able to stop any suspected craft, to board it, search it, and if they find they have drugs on board, they can then arrest the Members of the crew and bring the ship in and turn it over to our police force where it will be dealt with by law. I think this is a major step forward for us, and as our Honourable Second Official Member stated, another tool to fight drugs.

I thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable First Official Member.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, I had not thought of commenting on this Bill, but it seems as if sometimes when you plan you do not do it, and when you do not plan you do it.

I believe that what is in front of us President, is the only logical way of dealing with drugs. We know that there are cases that we have experienced in the past where 40 foot containers are kept for what seems like ages, because you cannot do anything with it until the court case is finalised. What is before us today is a system where the court maintains its control and decides whether the drug should be destroyed or not. But it also gives the flexibility in the Law where a sample can be kept of whatever drug it may be, whether it is marijuana, cocaine or some other prescribed drug, and the drug is then destroyed, keeping the sample for the trial. Why construct a building to store it when you know that inevitably you are going to have to destroy it? It leads on to say then you have to put a security system around the building until you destroy it. This seems like a much simpler way, and a more economical way of dealing with this matter.

Logic also dictates that if a British Naval vessel is in your waters, and you are committed to doing something about drugs, why not utilise all the facilities that they can bring to bear on this ill of society that we frown on? I believe the use of naval vessels in this regard is perhaps one of the most sensible things that we can do, and the Bill before us does state very clearly once the apprehension is done, and they are finished with the exercise of boarding the vessel or boat, whatever it may be, and arresting the crew if it is found on board, they should bring those persons to a police officer or a station as quickly as possible. All logical to me, Mr. President, and I support the Bill wholeheartedly.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Honourable Third Official Member.

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON:

Mr. President, as the officer in Government responsible for the Police Administration, I rise to clarify one possible area of misunderstanding, and to add my own comment to another comment that was made during the course of the debate on the Bill now before the House.

The point that needs clarification, I believe, Sir, is the fact that sometimes with the best intentions, statements are made to bring out a point but in the end it turns out that it casts yet further aspersions against arms of the service that leaves members of the public sometimes in doubt as to the real intention behind the statement. I have no reason to believe that the Honourable Second Official Member, when he made the statement that was quoted earlier had any intention of leaving in the minds of the listening public that there was any record, case or precedent where drugs had ever disappeared from custody or from exhibit rooms, and that in consequence to that, this Bill was being introduced. Yet, if you have listened to the debate carefully, some of the Members contributing to it, Sir, may have left that sort of unfortunate expression in the minds of the people.

We have no record, nor do we indeed have any information, that would suggest that any element in the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force are corrupt, dishonest or are in any way dealing in drugs, or are in fact acting as accessories to the disappearance of drugs that are held in custody. And the same also applies in the case of the Customs Service, Mr. President. Both of these agencies are now taking responsibility for the custody of their own exhibits and doing their own prosecutions, and not one single case has come forward, yet we hear the remarks being made of whether there is a possibility that such action may take place. We have heard of drugs disappearing from storerooms and from exhibit rooms in other territories, but we have not had any single case in the Cayman Islands where such has occurred.

My understanding of what the Honourable Second Official Member said was that this Bill was being introduced merely as a safeguard against any temptation that may exist, and that rather than have large quantities unnecessarily hanging around, we should dispose of it at the direction of the courts as soon as is conveniently possible.

The second point I would like to make is that reference was made to the manner of supervision of the destruction of the drugs, and in that regard, the system of destruction has been enhanced by the selection of additional independent persons consequent to the Private Member's Motion referred to, and these persons, along with the Justices of the Peace that previously supervised the destruction of drugs, now do so jointly, and my understanding is that it is being done quite satisfactorily, there is no allegation that any of these independent persons are dishonest, or are engaging in any dishonest practices, and so the destruction of drugs is currently taking place in a very satisfactory manner, and therefore I do not think there is any reason to leave in the minds of the public that anyone involved, either the police who are the custodians, or the Customs Department, or the persons responsible for the supervision of the destruction, none of these persons have in the past, nor are they at the present time, engaged in any illegal activities and I hope that we can abstain from leaving any poisonous taste in the minds of the public because the intention behind the Bill is to safeguard the public from these suspicions. We do know that rumours do abound, but if any Honourable Member does come into possession of valuable information that he or she thinks may lead to a successful prosecution, of course, you know the correct means by which to bring that information to the proper authority's attention.

MR. PRESIDENT: Does any other Member wish to speak? In that case I will put the question. The question is that a Bill for a Law to amend the Misuse of Drugs Law (Second Revision) ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Is the mover not going to get a chance, Sir?

MR. PRESIDENT: I am so sorry, you are quite right, thank you.

Let me give other Members one more chance. If no other Member wishes to speak, then I ask the mover of the Motion, the Second Official Member, whether he wishes to exercise his right of reply, with apologies for failing to ask him before. (LAUGHTER)

I think it is perhaps anyway time for our normal afternoon suspension. I will suspend proceedings for about fifteen minutes, and you can try again to catch my eye when we come back.

AT 3:17 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:34 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Resumption of the Second Reading debate on a Bill for a Law to amend the Misuse of Drugs Law (Second Revision).

I will try once more, does any other Member wish to speak?

In that case, I think I have tried to catch everybody's eye, I invite the Honourable Second Official Member to exercise his right of reply if he wishes.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I hope to be very brief.

First of all, I would be very sorry if anything that I said in my opening remarks could be taken to imply a lack of confidence in the Police Force, for me to let that stand would be unfair to what is a very fine force indeed. What my remarks were intended to mean and imply, is a recognition of the difficulties and the burden that the security of large amounts of drugs imposes upon all of those charged with their safekeeping.

Mr. President, this is not just a matter of providing storage space, a building, or hiring a warehouse, but of constant security. Large quantities of drugs represent, on occasion, a huge street value in terms of money, and to secure that requires round the clock surveillance. That is expensive, it is taxing on the manpower of the Police Force. To have those large quantities of drugs standing there will always constitute a temptation to unlawful elements in the community - not in the force but in the community - and the temptation to attempt to steal them by stealth or by violence will always be there as long as large amounts of drugs are in existence somewhere in the Islands. To minimise that danger is the purpose and the function of this Bill, to remove the temptation, to remove the accumulation of this evil substance from the earth as soon, as quickly, and as expeditiously as is commensurate with the needs of justice.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that a Bill for a Law to amend the Misuse of Drugs Law (Second Revision) be given a Second Reading.

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

MR. CHAIRMAN: Please be seated.
May I as usual preface our consideration of the Bills by saying that unless any Member wishes to voice an objection, I would propose that we adopt our usual practice and authorise the Honourable Second Official Member to make any necessary corrections where there have been printing errors, or something of that kind. Unless any Member dissents I will take it that that is the general wish of the Committee.
In that case, we can turn to the first of the Bills now before the Committee, that is, a Bill for a Law to amend the Grand Court Law.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think perhaps that might be convenient for the Committee, if Members agree, because an undertaking was given, and I think it is only right that Members of the Committee should have an opportunity to see and to study the proposed amendment. So with the leave of the Committee, I suggest that we defer the Committee stage of this particular Bill until tomorrow.

CLERK: Clause 2. Amendment of section 4.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that Clause 2 do stand part of the Bill. Unless any Member wishes to speak.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Yes, Mr. President.
My main objection in considering this, was on the question of lost income for lost years. The mover of the Bill tried to clarify this particular point, but I am not quite clear yet as to whether the amendment of section 4 of the Estates Proceedings Law, 1974 is clear in this amendment. Because that stated that damages calculated with reference to the loss or gain to the estates, the estate of such a person consequent upon his death, other than in respect of funeral expenses - I spoke to the Honourable Second Official Member after his winding up on this, and he explained to me that the claims were in two sections, claim by dependents and claim by the estate for the lost years, but I am still not clear as to whether the dependents would be entitled to income for lost years. I do not think he clarified that quite to my satisfaction. He did, in fact, give me a copy of the Estates Proceedings Law, 1974, but in looking at the savings of certain laws which is in clause 7, it does not really apply to any form of accident, or fatal accident, other than by air, Act 1932, so perhaps he could clarify this somewhat more.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I am just having handed to the Member a copy of the Law of Torts Reform Law, which I had circulated earlier among the Members in the Chamber. It is the Law which governs the claim by dependents, and it is clear from that that the cause of action, the claim, is brought by the dependents in their own right, and in the case of infant children the court appoints a guardian to bring the action for them. The Estates Proceedings Law is concerned only with what its title says, estates proceedings being brought by the estate, in other words either by the executor or in the case where there is no Will, by an administrator of the estate. The abolition of the right for the estate (that is the executor or the administrator) to bring a cause of action in respect to the lost years does not affect in this I assure the Member, is not capable of affecting, the right of the beneficiary to sue under the Fatal Accidents Provisions in the Law of Torts Reform Law, even though the dependent suing under the Law of Torts Reform Law is in a certain sense claiming for the lost years. They are doing it by a different route, they are not claiming loss of income for the lost years, they are claiming their own individual loss of what the deceased person would have given or paid to them out of his income during the lost years. I think all I can do is assure the Member that the cause of action in respect of fatal accidents for dependents under the Law of Torts Reform Law absolutely survives and is not affected by this amendment to the Estates Proceedings Law.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: So it would cover lost years, you are saying.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: No.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I am not saying it will cover lost years, because there has never been a claim in dependence for lost years. The claim for lost years has only ever been a claim that belongs to the man who dies, and then as I explained, by a lawyer's quirk, that claim belonging to the man who died got transferred to his estate, in other words to his executor for the benefit of the estate, and in my speech on this I had said that that happened in 1975. In fact looking at it again over lunch I see I was wrong, and that it was not until 1980 that the courts in the United Kingdom recognised this lawyer's quirk, this rather super-clever form of action, so it was only around for two years in the U.K. before it was abolished.

So there is no claim, never has been, in dependence, for lost years as such, but what they get is their own lost years of dependency, if I might put it that way, so that if a woman loses her husband and is widowed, and the likelihood was that he would have survived if he had not been injured, survived for fifteen years, and during that fifteen years have supported her, paid for her upkeep, supported the rest of the family, the widow would be able to cover what it would have cost him to support her for fifteen years. And the way the courts do it is that for each dependent, the widow, the children, the aged mother or whatever, for each dependent, they work out how much the dependency was worth to that person each year. And they do this in a quite detailed way - they draw up a list of food, accommodation, clothing, entertainment, everything that a dependent might expect to receive from the person upon whom they were dependent, draw up this list, come to a grand total for the year, and then multiply it by the estimated years of survival, if there had been no accident, no injury. And that comes up with a lump sum which is then awarded to the dependent. There are of course, certain adjustments to make sure that when you add together all the dependents you do not exceed the total income of the person who has been killed, in other words that you do not arrive at a fictitious figure, and there are numerous cross-checks in that way. But basically it is the task of the court to work out how much each dependent received from the person who was killed and then give it to them.

MR. CHAIRMAN: So it is a kind of form of lost years, or at any rate ...

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: It is a form of lost years, Sir, but I hesitate to use the term lest it confuse.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I understand why you hesitate, but ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: It is not lost years they can claim.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: I think the gating is coming down and dividing one side, which is this Bill presently before us, which deals with income, whereas the Tort Reform Law, as I understand it, deals more with expenditure on behalf of the individual to the family to keep the family's upkeep.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: But as it is now, Mr. Second Official Member, nobody will be able to claim for loss of income for lost years.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Well, perhaps the Member could explain what he means by loss of income for lost years.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Maybe you can explain it, you put it in the Bill. Are you taking it out?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think the Attorney General has explained it several times, it may be difficult to understand, but my understanding ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I think the House is being confused ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: Would you please listen for a moment. My understanding is, and I think this perhaps answers the point made by the Second Elected Member for George Town, that a dependent can expect to be granted under a Law that is, or to be able to claim, under a Law that is not affected by this Bill, money for future years, during which the deceased could ordinarily have been expected to live - whether you call that lost years or do not call it lost years is perhaps a sort of legal quibble to some extent - but at least it is income for future years, or money that is designed to cover income that the individual would have received in future years from the deceased. Is that not right?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Yes, Sir, that is right.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

And therefore the dependents should still be able to put in claims just like they used to.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. Chairman, I am going to still oppose this Bill, this section. I have given my reasons why, and nothing the Member is saying is convincing me that a person will be able to claim for loss of income for lost years. The Torts Reform Law tells you nothing about loss of income and what he is actually doing is trying to justify taking out this section so that he can get this thing through in a hurry.

Mr. President, if a person had to go to court to that extent, again, to claim, make up a list as he is saying, or schedule, it has got to go through lawyers, lawyers who are going to represent insurance companies on both sides. And that has happened, we know what is happening. What do you think is going to happen to that poor person? The sum he gets, or she gets is not going to be very sufficient.

Nothing they can say today makes it any different. Government is removing a right that the people had to sue for loss of income for lost years. That is exactly what is happening, and nothing in the Law of Torts Reform Law says anything about it. All this legal jargon I hear going on here is not doing the job. I am still going to oppose it, and every Member in this House should oppose it, because it is taking away a right from the people. Laugh if you may, but if it was you, or one of us in this House, we would be crying on somebody's shoulder. We must stop taking away people's rights that they have, and this is exactly what is happening.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. Chairman, I have listened to the comments made by the Honourable Second Official Member, and it is much clearer now, but the Law that he passed across, the Law of Torts Reform Law, really does not satisfy the question which I raised regarding the income for lost years. This mainly deals with actions maintainable against persons causing death through neglect. And it states the procedures that can be followed in cases of fatal accidents. I can understand that he is saying that the section somewhat implies that loss of income would be looked after when assessing damages, but I do not think the loss should be in any way not clear, it should not be ambiguous in any way, it should be quite clear on this particular point, because if it is not clear you can have various judges having different interpretations of what it really means. I would have felt much more satisfied if it was much more specific on this particular point. And I was hoping that the Law of Torts would have clarified it, but it really does not. I am not saying that I do not support the overall Bill, but I am concerned that this is not as clear as I would like to see it.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

First of all, may I just make it clear that the Law of Torts Reform Law is not limited to death caused by neglect, but is death caused by any wrongful act, neglect or default, and that may be legal language, but it embraces every single possible way that you might kill somebody in circumstances that would permit an action to be brought at law. So this covers the whole range of death giving rise to causes of action, and is exactly the same in its width as any claim for "lost years", if I might use that in inverted commas, any claim under the Estates Proceedings Law.

But turning to what I think was the thrust of the Member's comment, which is that this Law is not as specific as he would like it to have been, what the Law says is that every action brought under this Law shall be for the benefit of a dependent or dependents of the person whose death has been so caused, and shall be brought in the name of his personal representatives. In every such action the court may give such damages as it thinks proportionate to the injury resulting from such death to the parties respectively for whom and for whose benefit such action is brought. In other words, the court assesses the loss to the dependent and gives them recompense for that. The way of doing that, which I explained earlier, is something which has been developed and really quite finely honed by the courts over many years.

Members will notice that this, our Law, originally dates from a Law of 1845, and it has been reenacted and amended at various times. The common law as it stands on this, which is as I explained it earlier, is something which has grown up and been polished over the intervening years, both in the United Kingdom and here. It is very well understood by judges and lawyers and has been defined at the highest levels of the court and the Privy Council, and in the House of Lords, and is something which the practitioners in this field, and I apologise if this seems to fall back upon the mystique of the lawyer, but to practitioners in this field it is something which is well known and very clear, and there are huge works on the subject readily available which set out in great detail the rules which are applied. I say in great detail because though I portrayed this as a fairly simple procedure of totting up how much the dependent received and multiplying it by a figure, in fact, there are innumerable sophistications upon that to deal with an endless array of circumstances that crop up in real life, not least the hope of education of younger children and so on. All of these have been plotted out and worked out in practice, by the courts in the common law jurisdictions. And, though an attempt could be made to boil all this down into a law and into regulations, you are going to end up with something very complicated which in the end only has the same result as what you have now. And in the end, to a certain extent, I have to say to Members, that you have to trust the courts and trust the common law to apply this Law as it has always been applied and as the precedents well laid down demand that it be applied.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, may I ask the Second Official Member through you, if the passage of this Bill would prevent a wife or other dependent from claiming from the person who had caused the death of her supporter, from claiming the monies which she would have had if the man had not died?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

I think I can say categorically, that it will not prevent a wife or an orphaned child from claiming the monies that they would have received if the husband or father had continued to live. I think I can say that quite categorically.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

In other words this would in no way limit the income which she could claim, say if the husband had been bringing home to the family a thousand dollars a month, could she sue to recover that thousand dollars a month from the time of his death to say, the end of his working life at age 70 or something like that? Because if this is so, I am afraid I cannot support the Bill. During the meeting I sent a question over which was answered, and my understanding of that was that the estate could not sue to recover this loss, but dependents could. Now it seems to me like it is not so, and I will have to withdraw all of my support from the Bill. Because it does seem that we are taking away an inherent right which existed, and although we have buried it up in the legal jargon, the fact is that dependents of people who have died will have no protection now, and this will be a field day for the insurance companies.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

I am not sure that I have understood you, because you were just told that the dependents could claim.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Well I am hoping that they can, but it seems to me ...

MR. CHAIRMAN:

The Attorney General said categorically that they could. I will let him say it again, but ...

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

What I had said was, and if I got a "not" in the wrong place, I apologise. What I had said was that I can categorically say that there is nothing in the amendment to the Estates Proceedings Law which will prevent a dependent from bringing an action for what they, the dependent, have lost. So in other words, in the case where a working man has brought home to his family all his money and has passed across his pay cheque to his wife, and said go out there and provide for yourself, the little ones and me, the wife and the children will be able to recover from the person causing the death all they would have got from the husband, less that small amount that would have been spent on his own means. They will not get that back, but they would get everything for their own benefit. Where complications crop up is where the husband does not give everything to his wife and children, but siphons some off in other directions, and that is where the claim under the lost years, the claim that is being abolished, creeps in. But as far as your simple widow, your simple orphan, they can claim under the Law of Torts Reform Law, they have always been able to and they will always be able to, for the amount that they would have received from the husband for the rest of his life.

The courts of course, have to estimate how long he would have lived, and they are not always that generous in estimating how long he would have lived, but they use exactly the same method of guessing how long he would lived for proceedings under the Law of Torts Reform Law as they would use under the Estates Proceedings Law - exactly the same way of working out what is technically called the multiplier - the number of years by which you multiply the base annual sum. Exactly the same basis.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, can I ask the Honourable Member if there have been representations from insurance companies to make this amendment?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I may not be able to give a total answer to that. Nobody has made any to me, and nobody has made any that I know of. But I have read in the newspaper, insurance companies, on a report of the case that gave rise to this, insurance companies saying, well this will cost the community a lot. But I may not be the proper person to direct that question to.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: This Bill came about because of the complaint in a newspaper?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: This Bill largely came about because of the suggestion of the Chief Justice that we take steps to bring our Law into line with the United Kingdom Law, and abolish a cause of action which many professionals feel is unnecessary, unwarranted and unfair.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Unfair? Unfair to the insurance companies?

MR. CHAIRMAN: Unless there is any further question, I will put the question.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: One more question, Mr. Chairman for the record, to the Honourable Second Official Member. He states, is it not so that families - wife, children, are all part of an estate?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Yes, it may well be that a wife and children are part of the estate. They may also not be, and there are numerous instances of husbands and fathers leaving their money elsewhere than to their children. And that is one of the problems with the Estates Proceedings Law cause of action, that the money may go off to people who are not dependent or connected.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: But in ...

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: If you would just let me finish.

It may also be that wives and children do benefit under the Estates Proceedings Law, and in many cases the size of that benefit will be exactly the same as the size of the benefit under the Law of Torts Reform Law, and the case where the husband comes home, hands his pay cheque to his wife and says, look after this for me, is going to be a case where the two causes of action produce exactly the same arithmetical result - it does not matter which one they went under. There are other cases when the family arrangements become more sophisticated, or more confused or more elaborate, where the two causes of action may not be the same. And dependents may do better under the Estates Proceedings Law or some of them might and others do not. It is fairly random the way it is spread around, it depends on the exact family circumstances.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: So are you saying that a family that is part of estate will lose a right that they have, this right?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: No, I am not saying that. I am saying if the family is part of an estate, at the moment it has a simple choice. It can go under one or the other, or as is usually done in the courts, they go under both. And it is quite possible to sue under both.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: And that is the way it is usually done?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: The way it is usually done is to sue under both.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: But now with the abolition of this, they will not be able to do that, right?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: No, with the abolition of this they will, of course, only be able to sue under the one remaining cause of action.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Under which they would not get very much.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I think I have explained this so many times.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, just a short comment, but to avoid, I think, any sort of misunderstanding of what was just explained here by the Honourable Second Official Member, I think in his answer to me, he mentioned that section 4(1) of the Law of Torts Reform Law, he read it, states specifically that in every case of action the court may give such damages as it thinks proportionate to the injury resulting from the death. So this would seem to include damages for loss of income for lost years, when the court is making their judgement on this. Is that a correct interpretation?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: The injury which is compensated under section 4 of the Law of Torts Reform Law is the injury to the dependent in other words, what that dependent has lost - the injury to the dependent. In other words, the amount of money or monies worth that the dependent has lost by reason of the death. That money or monies worth will extend throughout the period which is sometimes referred to as "lost years", will extend forward throughout the same period. But it is not - I like to avoid using the word "lost years" for it, and limit "lost years" to the claim being brought by the dead man, as it were, through his estate, for his own lost years of life. And that is where the term "lost years" came from. The claim by the dependent covers exactly the same period, going forward, so it covers the "lost years". It is just rather confusing if one keeps talking about it as lost years.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: I think the basic difference, Mr. Chairman, is the income of two different people, one deals with the income of the person who is dead, and the other law deals with the expected income of the person who is dependent on the person who is dead. And basically, therein lies the two differences, and that is what all the ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: But the expected income of the dependent of the person who is dead is related to the income of the person who is dead.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Yes, but all this does is that you cannot claim - the dead man cannot claim his salary for the next twenty years - his own income.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Certainly it seems to me that in either case, whether you use the term lost years or avoid it altogether, people are going to get money which the person who is dead would have earned throughout the remainder of his lifetime had he not been killed. Whether you call it lost years or not lost years is perhaps a matter of legal technicality.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: He is still going to get it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well, it has been explained ad nauseam.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. Chairman, if it was that simple, why was it not removed from the Law of Torts rather than this amendment which is before us?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: It is not in the Law of Torts.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: What I am saying is you tried to play one against the other - why was the amendment not done on the Law of Torts rather than the one which is before us? Mr. President, honestly, the more the Honourable Member explains this, the more complicated it becomes, and I cannot say that I am fully satisfied with what I have heard.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: If I can answer the narrow question, why was it not done in the Law of Torts Reform Law? There is nothing wrong with the Law of Torts Reform Law. It is fine as it stands. The problem has arisen on a legal interpretation which happened in the United Kingdom in 1980 on the Estates Proceedings Law, and so it is the Estates Proceedings Law that one has to amend to shut what in effect is a loophole that was exploited by the person who made that legal interpretation in the first place. So that is the law to amend to shut it. Once that is shut by amending the Estates Proceedings Law, we can go back to the position that everybody was in since 1845 until 1980, in other words, the position governed by the Law of Torts Reform Law, which is fine and does not need amending.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Let me now put the question, that Clause 2 do stand part of the Bill.
