Immediately upon learning of the United Kingdom's decision to extend its own territorial waters from three to 12 miles, the topic was raised in Executive Council, and the Government established a working party with representatives from the relevant portfolios and chaired by myself to look into all the possible implications if the Cayman Islands were to indicate its interest to the United Kingdom Government in having this extension become applicable to this country. We immediately requested all relevant information from London, and this information is still being awaited. We have had preliminary discussions internally, and these discussions are continuing. I will not attempt to analyse any views that have been expressed so far either in Government or elsewhere on the matter, because at this stage the discussions are only preliminary. Suffice it to say that once the decision is taken, we should be conscious of all of the possible implications so that we are prepared to meet them. We have heard Members, who have spoken, say what in their opinion are some of the possible implications, and there are perhaps others. I would just like to make two points, Mr. President.

Firstly there is a sort of misconceived perception that it is a police responsibility with regard to enforcement in our territorial waters at the moment in relation to combating the importation of illicit drugs. And I would like it to be clearly understood that the enforcement of the illegal importation of any matter whatsoever into the country is a customs responsibility, and not primarily a police one.

We all know that the police have an unsatisfactory marine section and that it is attempting to undertake a variety of enforcement responsibilities, not just combating drugs. But the primary responsibility to guard against the illegal importation of any illicit product is a customs responsibility.

Reference was made to the replacement of the police vessel Lima II that was lost earlier this year in bad weather. That vessel is due to arrive shortly and will be put into service. It was chosen as a result of proper professional consultation and unlike the opinion expressed, it is really not a pleasure yacht designed to take anyone fishing, but it is regarded as a suitable and appropriate working vessel to be used for police purposes.

It is true, Sir, that Lima III which is the largest of the fleet is considered somewhat too large and cumbersome for the type of police work that is generally required of a vessel, and it is possible that that particular vessel may be put to some more appropriate use in the future.

Having made those two points, Sir, as I said, I am pleased that Government finds itself able to accept this motion because Government has already taken some steps to initiate the necessary enquiries to determine whether or not such a move is in fact in the best interest of the Cayman Islands.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:
the mover to reply, if he wishes?

Does any other Member wish to speak before I invite

The mover, if you wish to reply?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I am pleased that Government has seen fit to accept the motion, and I thank those members who spoke in support. I also thank, especially, the seconder of this motion, the Second Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. President, the point was raised with regard to the equipment necessary to patrol our territorial waters. I doubt that the Member was speaking to me, but there is no delusion on my part. I full well understand the need for proper patrol vessels. I have seen such vessels the size of approximately the Aggressor I or II. Ever since I have been in this House I have asked for that size vessel. Never mind the expense, Mr. President, I believe we could get one like that more cheaply than the one we bought (that glorified fishing vessel) for the police the other day.

Not only have I asked the Government here, but I full well remember my visit to London last year in September when I had an audience with Baroness Young, the Under Secretary of State for the Foreign Office. I requested some sort of coastal patrol vessel, whether it be a helicopter or a sea going vessel. So my interest has been widely known. I should hasten to say that I got nowhere with the request.

Mr. President, while I am happy that Government has seen fit to accept this motion, I really do not appreciate Government putting credit in one of my pockets and taking it out the other. I believe the Honourable Member responsible who spoke on behalf of the Government bench, spoke about Government learning about the United Kingdom's extension. I believe if the truth were told, it was only after I raised the matter, because I knew that after my motion was tabled with the Clerk. I sought the help of the legal department and the Attorney General set about the task of gaining information. And he was given a copy of what I have been given. That is the truth, Mr. President, we all know it. But I am not mad with them, or angry at them. I can accept how they go about these matters. The important thing is that they accepted the motion.

Mr. President, the matter was also raised concerning the 200 mile limit for fishing and other purposes. I believe that on reading certain documents some time ago, and from information that I have received from London on my own, that this was extended to the Cayman Islands by proclamation. But in cases where countries such as Honduras and Cuba, for instance, are less than 200 miles from us, certain treaties are necessary to define a median line and apparently the United Kingdom has been asked to negotiate on the Cayman Islands' behalf for this. Maybe somebody in the near future could bring the House up to date on this matter.

I have no more to say except that I am happy that the motion got full support, and I thank the House.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I shall now put the question accordingly.

QUESTION PUT: AYES AND NOES

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/87 PASSED BY MAJORITY

MR. W. MCKEEVER BUSH: You saw the purpose for the division, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, actually I see from Standing Order 43(2) that you are challenging the opinion of the Chair by claiming a division. I realise in fact you were not, you wanted a record.

We now proceed with Private Member's Motion No.18/87. The First Elected Member for the Sister Islands.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 18/87
SWAMP AND CLIFF LANDS - LITTLE CAYMAN

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL: Thank you, Mr. President.
Mr. President, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No.18/87 entitled Swamp and Cliff Lands - Little Cayman, which reads:

WHEREAS under section 20 of the Land Adjudication Law, 1971 (Law 20 of 1971) the tribunal awarded certain areas of swamp, low and cliff land of Little Cayman to the Crown;

AND WHEREAS these areas were registered in the name of the Crown;

AND WHEREAS due to this action taken many property owners are now without legal access to parcels of land remaining in their names after the Crown was awarded title to certain areas;

AND WHEREAS there are claimants, for the said parcels, who have come forward and made representation and others who have not yet come forward who may have just claims;

AND WHEREAS subject to the exercise of His Excellency the Governor on the advice of the Executive Council of the powers conferred upon him by section 9 of the Governor (Vesting of Lands) Law (Revised), and subject to the said claimants giving waivers and indemnities satisfactory to the Government;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT grants be made of the swamp lands and interior cliff lands that were adjudicated in favour of the Crown and the Little Cayman adjudication areas in favour of the claimants in such manner and to such extent as Executive Council shall consider fair and reasonable, having regard to the circumstances of each case and for the principles followed in making adjudications in the Islands of Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac."

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, I beg to second the motion.

MR. PRESIDENT: Private Member's Motion No.18/87 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL: Thank you, Mr. President.
Private Member's Motion No.18/87 in my opinion is an important motion. It seeks to correct something that has been outstanding for almost 12 years. It is common knowledge that the adjudication of lands in Grand Cayman started at the western end of this Island in West Bay and all swamp lands were adjudicated in favour of the landowners until it reached the eastern end where directives were issued and other arrangements were made.

The Hansard of this Honourable House record that similar motions, both Private Member and Government Motions, have been debated which sought to correct this situation that existed in the Island of Grand Cayman. These motions date back to 1975 and 1980, and I have copies of Hansard here with me.

Mr. President, at this time, I would like to make it crystal clear to all Honourable Members of this House and the people listening on the radio, that I, in moving this motion, represent all people who have land ownership in Little Cayman. I would also like to make it abundantly clear that I do myself have land in Little Cayman which has been adjudicated to the Crown, some of which I inherited from my mother's father, my grandfather, and my father. I want to make it clear that I am not here seeking for myself, but rather for the people who have owned land. I have letters here in my possession from numerous people who state that lands have been in their families for over 100 years. They have been deprived of the use of this land and because of the adjudications that have been made they are unable to get to the interior lands because the Crown owns the low lying land which separates it. Some of the claimants have also said to me that some of the adjudications were made on aerial photographs which, in their opinion, were not correct, but nevertheless the adjudications were made and the land is registered in the Crown. They say it is not swamp land, it is dry land, but it appeared so in the aerial photographs.

Mr. President, if we correct this injustice, as I would call it, we will provide additional revenue for Government, for it will enable the landowners to develop this land, it can be subdivided and sold or used for construction of homes where import duty on building materials would be made available. And, Mr. President, I would go further - it is my belief that the land title requirements of land should be equal for all the Islands, and with your permission I would like to read from the Land Adjudication Law, 1971, (Law 20 of 1971), section 16(1), which states:

"PART IV - PRINCIPLES OF ADJUDICATION AND PREPARATION OF THE ADJUDICATION RECORD

- Principles of adjudication. 16.(1) In preparing the adjudication record:
- (a) if the Records Officer is satisfied that a person -
 - (i) is in open and peaceful possession of a parcel and has been in such possession by himself or by his predecessors in title for an uninterrupted period of twelve years or more; or
 - (ii) has a good documentary title to the land and that no other person has acquired a title thereto under any law relating to prescription or limitation, and that he would succeed in maintaining or defending such possession or title against any other person claiming the land or any part thereof.

the Records Officer shall record that person as the owner of the parcel and declare his title to be absolute."

I would also like to refer to section 16(2) in which the proviso states:

PROVIDED that where it is established (whether by local custom or otherwise) that any parcel of land includes an area of swamp or cliff land, occupation or use of the other areas of such parcel shall be deemed to imply possession of the swamp or cliff land also;

- (b) "good documentary title" means a title evidenced by documents which establish that a person is entitled to land in fee simple ..."

Having read this, Mr. President, it is my interpretation that these people, whom I represent, are entitled to it and I ask all Members that we forget politics and all else, let us realise that we are all Caymanians, that we all want what is ours, and that we give unto Caesar what is Caesars. I ask all Members to support me and support this motion.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive

Council.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, I rise to support Private Member's Motion No.18/B7 dealing with swamp and cliff lands in Little Cayman.

Mr. President, I have learned over the long number of years that I have lived here that land is a very sensitive subject in the Cayman Islands, and so one must be very cautious in dealing with it, especially when Government is involved. Anyone who lived here in the early 1970's when Government put forward a package of land legislation, cadastral survey and registration laws, will understand what I mean.

Land claimed by an individual is not a difficult thing to sort. The individual can either go to the Lands and Survey Department and have his title investigated, or he can take it to a court of law to have the validity of title tested there. But, Mr. President, when the issue is wider than that, when it encompasses many land owners versus Government, then the process must be dealt with very cautiously.

In mid-1986, Government received a number of applications from Little Cayman land owners requesting release by Government of certain swamp and cliff lands in that small Island. These were sent on to the Land Registry, because naturally it involved an exercise to identify the parcels and to determine exactly their whereabouts, their boundaries and whatnot. We were quite aware that in the adjudication of Little Cayman there were something like 41 Crown cases. Six of those were either purchased or property claimed hitherto by the Crown, but 35 of those were awarded by the adjudicators to the Crown by default. That means, Mr. President, that while the adjudication was on in Little Cayman, although notices were sent out, posted, and the people were advised of the process of adjudication and their right to apply and make their claims, none of these did. And so at the end of the process the adjudicators had no alternative than to award these parcels to the Crown by default.

Mention has been made that the Little Cayman situation is exactly as the situation in Grand Cayman, but I would beg to differ somewhat from that. In Grand Cayman most of the swamp was claimed by private landowners. Not all, but most of them. In one area of Grand Cayman especially, and I am speaking about the Newlands area, the Crown laid a claim to swamp lands from the edge of the sea, midway into the swamp areas. The adjudicators awarded the Crown with those claims. Later on, by a motion presented in this Legislative Assembly, Government was requested to review their position and to release all the swamp lands to private owners. That eventually came to pass. In the Little Cayman situation there was no swamp land running to the sea. All the swamp and cliffs are mid-land, and so the situation there is a little different from what was obtained here in Grand Cayman.

Mr. President, we are quite aware of the fact that Government did not buy these lands, they were awarded to Government by default, and therefore in the same way that Government made concessions in Grand Cayman to return swamp lands to private owners, claimants, I think Government will sympathetically look at the situation in Little Cayman. I cannot commit Government at this stage to say what will happen, but I am grateful to the mover for the words used in the resolve section of the motion which makes it easier for Government to go forward and look at the claims from Little Cayman, and deal with them in a very amicable manner.

I should say that we had a recent case where landowners in Little Cayman claimed a fairly large portion of lands there. This was examined very carefully by Lands and Survey, and what was discovered was that a portion of that property was identified by the adjoining landowners as belonging to the claimant in this case. But there was a portion of that land which said that the property of the claimant was bounded by swamp and also the other private landowners, adjoining, said that their property adjoined the other by swamp, which was this other portion that we thought should not be included in the parcel which was claimed, or which was deemed to be the property of the claimant. And so Government made the decision to award only a portion of that property, and I think that the claimants were very happy with it - at least they got perhaps about two thirds of the area, the other third still remained with Government.

What I am saying is that all the other property in Little Cayman will be examined in like manner, and it may happen that all that is being claimed may not revert to the claimants, and a portion of them could remain with the Crown. We are quite certain that there are two bird sanctuaries in Little Cayman that will remain Crown, because I do not think any individual landowners there could lay claim to those two sanctuaries.

Mr. President, as I said, I support this Motion. The request in it seems to be quite reasonable, and what will eventually come of it remains to be seen after Lands and Survey have examined all the claims and have made a recommendation to Executive Council.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, I rise to support Private Member's Motion No.18/B7, Swamp and Cliff Lands - Little Cayman.

When the cadastral survey was carried out on Little Cayman, most of the landowners were absent and did not understand the importance of this survey, nor did they realise the consequences. I understand that the few landowners who were present when the survey was carried out told the survey team then that no landowner claimed swamp or cliff land on Little Cayman. Perhaps, Mr. President, the word "claim" was the wrong word to use, and the team should have been told that the land was considered of little or no value.

Certainly no one at that time realised that, if Government claimed the swamp and cliff land, their land would be divided and access to the cultivatable and valuable land would be cut off. We now have a twofold problem. The landowners of Little Cayman find their land divided, and legal access cut off, and Government finds that it owns land or swamp, and it is also legally cut off from access to the public road. So both of them, Sir, are handicapped. If the landowner's land is divided and legal access cut off, and then Government claims a piece of swamp in the centre of it, they have access neither one way nor the other. So it serves no purpose for Government to claim the swamp in the centre of a parcel of land. Even though the swamp and cliff land is considered worthless, owners of the adjacent land have used it for access for over 100 years.

To take away the swamp and cliff land from the landowners of Little Cayman in most instances would adversely affect them and would in fact deny them access to and from their dry land to the public road and also prevent them from developing their land. Perhaps the adjudicators should have examined the matter more closely, along with section 16(2)(a) of the Land Adjudication Law of 1971 (Law 20 of 1971) and the proviso which makes it clear who lawfully owns this land. With your permission, Mr. President, I would like to read section 16(2)(a) and the proviso of that Law.

"16(2) For the purpose of this section:

- (a) a person is deemed to be in possession of land if he does not acknowledge the title of any other person to that land and by himself, his agent, tenant or servant, actually uses or has used the land to the exclusion of the public;

PROVIDED that where it is established (whether by local custom or otherwise that any parcel of land includes an area of swamp or cliff land, occupation or use of the other areas of such parcel shall be deemed to imply possession of the swamp or cliff land also:".

MR. PRESIDENT: If I may interrupt the Honourable Member for a moment there, we are close to 4:30 p.m. Do other Members wish to speak on the motion? Should we attempt to finish this motion today by an extension of time?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: No, Sir, this is a very important motion ...

MR. PRESIDENT: I understand that.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: ... I would like to take some time on it.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Honourable First Official Member.

MESSAGE BY THE PRESIDING OFFICER

MR. PRESIDENT:

The first item, if I may take Members' time for a moment, is that we have received a reply from the Speaker of the House of Representatives of the United States following the message which this House sent to him in regard to the 200th anniversary of the Constitution of the United States. And the reply from the speaker of the House was as follows:

"To the President and Members of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands.

Thank you for taking the time to pass on your best wishes in recognition of the 200th anniversary of the Constitution. It was a pleasure hearing from you and, if you have the opportunity, please express my appreciation and good wishes to the Government and people of the Cayman Islands."

I think it would be appropriate, if Members have the opportunity, to pass the text along to their constituents. Thank you.

Questions. Number 90, the First Elected Member for Badden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 90: Would the Honourable Member state the total amount realised by Cayman Airways Limited from the sale of the Trilander and its spare parts in the 1986-87 financial year?

ANSWER: The Trilander aircraft and its spare parts were sold for a price of US$175,000.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Honourable Member tell us how this figure compares with the original purchase price of the aircraft?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the figure compares very favourably. The aircraft was purchased by Cayman Airways in 1979 for an original purchase price of US$396,272. The depreciation on the aircraft itself was US$283,045. The book value of the aircraft was US$113,227, and the spares package had a book value of US$59,545, which gives a total book value for aircraft and spares of US$172,772.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, just for clarification, I wonder if the Honourable Member would give me, although he may have done in the reply, the total purchase price of the existing spares that were sold.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I only have from the company the value of the spares package as shown on their books, and this amount was shown, according to them, at US$59,545.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Was there any commission payable from the US$175,000?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Not to my knowledge, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: There appear to be no further supplementaries. Shall we move to the next question, number 91, please?

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM, AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 91: Would the Honourable Member state if the balance of the 748 Hawker-Siddley's spare parts was disposed of in the 1986-87 financial year of Cayman Airways Limited and, if the answer is in the affirmative, what did the Company receive for it?

ANSWER: The Hawker-Siddley 748's spares were disposed of during the 1986-87 financial year at a price of 35,000 pounds sterling.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Cayman Airway's books are kept, I believe, in U.S. dollars. We all knew that the pound is not what it used to be. Could the Honourable Member give me the equivalent of this 35,000 pounds sterling in either U.S. or Cayman dollars?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I asked the management of Cayman Airways almost the same question. As far as I could gather from them, because of the fluctuation in the conversion rate at the time, the 35,000 pounds sterling would convert to US$56,000.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Was this the book value which has been written down by depreciation, or how was this value arrived at?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: The book value of the 748 spares was US$60,000.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: And evidently this money for the disposal of the Hawker-Siddley spare parts and the Trilandier was used up in the 1986-87 accounts of Cayman Airways. Is that correct?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, when the Member says "used up" I am not sure what he means. In the accounts it was shown as revenue derived from the sale of equipment and spares.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: It was used up, then, and accounted for in the balance sheet to arrive at the net negative position of Cayman Airways for 1986-87. Is that correct?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, it is shown and identified very clearly in the accounts which were tabled a few days ago. I do not have the accounts at hand but it was shown, I believe, as income derived from the sale of spares and equipment.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Is the Honourable Member saying, Mr. President, that the proceeds from these assets are shown as operating profits? Is this how they arrived at the operating profit?

MR. PRESIDENT: I do not think he is saying - you will have to rephrase that question - he has not said that at all.

MR. E. HAIG BODDEN: I am asking, Sir, if that is what he meant.

MR. PRESIDENT: You are asking for confirmation.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, in the accounts for the financial year ended 10th June 1987, the operating revenue of the Company is shown at $32,905,081. The operating expenses are shown at $32,045,324, which leaves an operating profit of $859,757. Under the heading of "non-operating income and expenses" is shown the profit on sale of assets.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: These questions are only being asked to show the true financial position of Cayman Airways, so could the Honourable Member confirm whether this money has been set aside and being held in a suspense account, or whether it has been utilised in the overall position of Cayman Airways which was presented to the House.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: No, Mr. President, those funds would not be treated in isolation and put in any suspense account, but the accurate financial position of Cayman Airways is very clearly demonstrated in these audited accounts.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I submit to the House that that is not a true picture.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, you are making a statement and you are going forward into a motion which you presented to me yesterday.
Next question, please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM, AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 92: Would the Honourable Member state:

- (a) the year of manufacture of the Shorts SD 3-30 aircraft recently acquired by Cayman Airways Limited, and its cost;
- (b) whether the aircraft was purchased or optioned by persons or a company other than Cayman Airways Limited purchasing it direct and, if so, provide details of such persons or company and its shareholders; and
- (c) give details of the financing of the aircraft and which financial institutions are involved?

ANSWER:

- (a) The Shorts SD 3-30 acquired by Cayman Airways Limited was manufactured on 26th October, 1978, and it cost the airline US$1,125,000;
- (b) The aircraft was purchased directly from Pennsylvania Airlines by Cayman Airways Limited; and
- (c) Cayman Airways Limited raised a US$1,300,000 loan to facilitate the purchase of the Shorts SD 3-30 and related spare parts. The loan is from Morgan Grenfell (Cayman) Limited and is secured by the aircraft and spare parts. It is repayable in equal monthly installments over five years from January 1987. It is repayable in equal monthly installments over five years from January 1987. The loan bears interest at the London Interbank offered rate plus one per cent.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: To substantiate the year of manufacture and how many hours it had been used, could the Honourable Member state how many hours was on the aircraft when it was purchased by Cayman Airways?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Now Mr. President, I do not have that information available on the number of aircraft hours at the time of purchase, but if the Member is interested, I can supply that information to him in writing.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well, evidently it has flown 22,012 flights since Cayman Airways acquired it, and not 26,000 as we were told yesterday. Is that correct?

MR. PRESIDENT: That does appear to be going outside the question. Could you give the reference, if you would, to the first statement you were referring to.

I did not quite follow it myself.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well, an aeroplane registers the number of hours it has flown and usually one can relate the number of hours flown to the date of manufacture. The two work sort of together to help substantiate that and that is what I am getting after. I think it has flown 968.45 hours since Cayman Airways acquired it. It has made 22,012 flights instead of the 26,000, and so I was trying to relate the year that it was manufactured, to see how many hours are on the aircraft.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the reply that I gave to a question posed by the Member a few days ago related to 2,600 flights which the aircraft had operated from January to October this year. This information was given to me by the management of Cayman Airways and, if it is incorrect, I certainly will investigate it. The Member is quite correct inasmuch as he is working from the total airframe hours of the aircraft at the time of purchase. He knows what the total flight time is now, and that can be deducted to establish the hours on the aircraft when it was purchased. I do not have that information. I can give him that, but as to the accuracy of the number of flights operated from January to October, that was given to me as 2,600.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, I am only trying to get accurate information, and I do understand that the logbook shows 2,212 flights.

MR. PRESIDENT: A supplementary?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Yes, Sir.
Did the figure of US$1,125,000 include the spare parts package, or was the spare parts package in addition to that?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, that figure did not include the spares. The spares package for that aircraft was US$345,000.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: These figures, then, are the accurate ones we have at the time of purchase. That is that about $170,000 was paid by Cayman Airways towards the purchase price. Is that correct?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Yes, Mr. President, that is correct. The Company supplied additional funds of US$170,000.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Do we have all the spare parts that we purchased on hand, or are we awaiting the arrival of them?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: All the spares that were purchased for the $345,000 are on hand at the present time.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: If we have all of the spares on hand, why is it that we are having so many maintenance problems and that she is having to wait on parts and so forth. Is it that we did not buy the spare parts package that we should have bought, if not, what is it?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the Member, I am sure, knows the answer to that very well. With any type of aircraft you purchase a spares package from a recommended list of the manufacturers. In the case of the Trilander, the 748, the 727, the Shorts or any other type of aircraft operating in this territory, there are occasions when spares are needed which are not on hand and they have to be bought in in order to effect repairs.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Would the Honourable Member not agree that it is impossible to operate an English aircraft without having these unknown breakdowns?

MR. PRESIDENT: I really think that is going a bit beyond the question!

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I do not agree, of course.

MR. PRESIDENT: We seem to have exhausted the possibilities of that question, I think.

There is, I think, a proposal for some alteration to the business paper, which the Honourable first Official Member - it is going to be moved by the Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Thank you.

MOTION
(STANDING ORDER 14(2))

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, under Standing Order 83 I seek suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order to complete the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 18/87 and also to permit debate on Private Member's Motion No. 19/87 which is to be moved.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Motion is that Standing Orders be suspended to enable us to continue debate on Private Member's Motion No. 18/87, which we adjourned yesterday. Does any Member wish to speak? I think it needs a seconder, strictly speaking.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I second the Motion put by the Second Elected Member for West Bay, because he spoke to me about it, and it seems to me that for the benefit of the audience, it would be better for us to finish the Private Member's Motion than to begin to debate the Budget Address which may last five, seven or even 10 days. To continue debate seven or 10 days later on the Private Member's Motion which commenced yesterday, the audience be at a loss to follow it.

MR. PRESIDENT: It appears that no other Member wishes to speak. It has been moved and seconded, I shall put the question that Standing Orders be suspended to enable the House to continue the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 18/87.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS NOS. 18/87 AND 19/87 TO BE TAKEN FORTHWITH

MR. PRESIDENT: In that case we resume debate on Private Member's Motion No. 18/87.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 18/87

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, when the House adjourned yesterday afternoon I had just read section 16(2)(a) of the Land Adjudication Law, 1971 together with the proviso and it makes it quite clear:

"16(2)(a) a person is deemed to be in possession of land if he does not acknowledge the title of any other person to that land and by himself, his agent, tenant or servant, actually used the land to the exclusion of the public:

PROVIDED that where it is established (whether by local custom or otherwise) that any parcel of land includes an area of swamp or cliff land, occupation or use of the other areas of such parcel shall be deemed to imply possession of the swamp or cliff land also".

Mr. President, I have seen several claims, and some of them certainly appear to qualify under this section. Land owners of Little Cayman whose parcels includes areas of swamp or cliff should be allowed to claim it if they can establish possessory entitlement to it.

I would like to point out that much of the land claimed as swamp land by the Crown is not really swamp land at all, as it is only under water during the rainy season. However, there are swamp lands which we call ponds that no one has ever used for access to their property, and these ponds are unquestionably Crown lands.

In 1980 Government realised that the adjudicators used a double standard when dealing with the swamp lands in the various districts of Grand Cayman. A motion was brought to this Honourable House to adjust the inconsistency, and it was unanimously agreed to return the swamp lands claimed by the Crown to the rightful owners. I am now requesting the Members of this Honourable House to extend the same consideration to the landowners of Little Cayman as was done for the owners of swamp land in Grand Cayman in 1980. I ask that all Members of this Honourable House give this Motion their support.

Thank you..

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I have to support the motion before the House. The motion seeks to change the title of land which had been given to the Crown during the adjudication process. As the Honourable Member who just spoke said, a double standard had been used throughout the adjudication process.

The first part of the Island to be registered under this Law was that of the West Bay peninsula. In most cases the adjudicator gave the swamp lands to the people who owned the adjoining dry land. When they came to South Sound, the same process was continued. However, when they reached Bodden Town, especially in the Duck Pond area, the system which had been used was apparently changed and up until this day nobody has been able to find out who changed it. The adjudicator put forward the theory that the Government, as owner of the foreshore in the North Sound area, had a right to half of the swamp. And so the people who had claimed that swamp land lost it to the Crown.

In 1975 a Member of the Legislative Assembly, Miss Annie Huldah Bodden, brought a motion which at the time had been seconded by me to try to give back these lands to the people who had claimed them originally. The motion failed. However, after the change of Government in 1976, I, as Member responsible for lands at that time, put forward a Government Motion which resulted in the return of certain lands in the Duck Pond and North Side areas to the original owners.

Also, at that time some of the claimants who had lost their lands took the matter to the Grand Court. The judge of the Grand Court in one case ruled that the adjudicator had erred. What the adjudicator had done was that he had taken a document, which at the time was sixty years old, and said the document was ambiguous and kept the land for Government. However, the Court reversed this, and the judgement which was handed down in the Grand Court had this to say:

"No custom can cut down that legal estate to the whole of the land claimed, and the title accorded to the Crown to half of the swamp land in this claim must therefore be cancelled, and the register altered accordingly."

And he went on to say that the deed mentioned was not ambiguous simply because it did not recite the extent or areas and the Court found that the document was a good route of title. The judge also said that Government would have had a better claim had it tried to claim the entire swamp land, rather than a portion of it.

At that time, there seemed to have been no serious representation to Government to correct similar anomalies which had crept into the adjudication of lands in Little Cayman, and the matter there was not dealt with. Now that the Member has brought it to the House, I think it is only fair that the Legislative Assembly should do whatever is necessary to see that the people in that area receive the same treatment which the adjudicator handed out initially, and the system which the court used because in dealing with that one appeal the Court indicated in the judgement that the other pending appeals should more or less receive the same treatment. So I fully support this motion, and I would congratulate the two Members who brought it to the House. I am in full support of it.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Elected Member for East End.

MR. JOHN W. McLEAM:

Mr. President, Private Member's Motion No. 18/87 is a very good one. I take this opportunity to commend the First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands for his efforts in trying to rectify a matter for his people.

This is not the first time such a matter has taken place. As has been stated by previous speakers, it had to be done here in Grand Cayman. In these Islands, Sir, land is considered by many as a special thing. If landowners in Little Cayman have adequate proof that they own certain parcels of land, I feel it is only right that we as legislators do whatever possible to return it to them.

I am certain that in many cases it may be the only parcel of land owned by the individual. If we should not return it, we could be taking away a right which might have been passed down from generations to him.

I support this motion, and I hope and trust that each and every Member will see fit to do so.

I know of an instance where somebody in Grand Cayman spent much time and lots of money in the law courts trying to get title to what was rightfully theirs. In the end they did receive the title, but what I am stressing is the strain, the extra expense, that was placed upon that poor individual and I would not like to see happen to the people of Little Cayman.

Again, I support the motion, and I ask for each Member's support. Again I commend the First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second

MR. W. McNEEVA RUSH:

Briefly, Mr. President.

I rise to support the motion. Over the last few years I have heard much about claims of property. It would seem that, in certain areas of this country at the time of the survey, individuals for one reason or the other failed to make claims. There are owners in my constituency who are still affected and I have been working to get the matter rectified.

PROPOSED AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 18/87

Mr. President, I think that the motion is a good one, however, I would hope that I could get an amendment to the motion. That amendment would read, in the third line of the resolve section, after the words "adjudication areas":

"... and any other area of the Cayman Islands that is so affected."

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think if you would permit me, I will repeat that so Members have a chance to take it down. This is an amendment being proposed by the Second Elected Member for West Bay under Standing Order 25(4), and the amendment proposed is as follows: that, in the third line of the resolution of the motion under debate, after the word "areas" be added the words:

"... and any other area of the Cayman Islands that are so affected."

The question you were asking me, whether due notice has been given - I am being asked, and I think this will next follow as a resolution. A motion will have to be put asking that notice be waived. I think that perhaps the Member might continue his speech and then we will take a short suspension because I think the Government will need time to consider whether they will wish to agree to waiving Standing Orders to permit the amendment to be taken.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Well, Mr. President, I believe that under Standing Order 25(2) you have the sole discretion of so allowing an amendment which has not been tabled within the two days' notice.

MR. PRESIDENT:

That is quite correct, but I think the Chair would normally take the will of the House on it, and particularly consult the Government. So would you like to go forward, and I think when you come to the end of your speech we will take a short interruption.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

In that case I will cut my debate short, Mr. President, to say that yes, I fully agree that with regard to properties which people can prove, to some extent, were theirs before this cadastral survey took place, must be given back. As I said, I have had representations made to me and I would crave the indulgence of the House to agree to this amendment that they, too, and any other person in Grand Cayman, may be able to get compensation.

I support the motion, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

What the House would normally do, I think, is hear other Members who wish to speak, and the amendment, if it is so authorised, will be put at the end of the debate. We are rather early for our normal morning break, so I suggest that if any other Member wishes to speak ... the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, I rise in support of this motion. I wish to congratulate the First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands for his foresight in bringing this motion to the House on behalf of his people.

Land in the Cayman Islands is looked upon by landowners as being, I would say, sacrosanct. Take anything else away from them, even their good name, but do not take their land. We go back in history a long way, and that point can be verified. It is unfortunate that in the last decade or so there has been so much turmoil brought about because of the actions of a previous Government in dealing with these issues.

As my colleague from Bodden Town pointed out, on the western area of Grand Cayman there was no problem with the swamp and cliff lands, and so forth, in the adjudication process that took place many years ago, but unfortunately when they started to go towards the east end of the Island, the policy was quickly changed and everything that had been done in the western area was changed 180 degrees. It was decided that the land owners would not get their rights, and would not be able to own the land which they, for years, had thought was theirs.

This policy was brought about by two Members who are now serving in the present Government. They were the architects, along with another who is no longer in the House, of the move to take away the inherent right of the property owners at the eastern end of the Island, the area that fronted the North Sound. So naturally that was also the policy that was used in the Lesser Islands.

My colleague from Bodden Town brought a motion to the House after a case had been fought in the Grand Court, and it had been decided that the property owner was the correct owner of the properties. My colleague brought a motion to restore the rights of the property owners who had been adversely affected. Unfortunately he did not include the Lesser Islands at that point. I wish that we had dealt with it at that time, however, maybe there were good reasons at the time, which I do not recall, why we did not.

Albeit the motion is before the House and I support it in its entirety. I would like to see the property owners of the Lesser Islands have the same benefits that we in Grand Cayman have. I am very pleased to see that a Member of Executive Council has seen fit to support this. I do not know whether that represents a complete Government commitment to support, or whether it is a vote or a speech of conscience. But whichever way it is, I am very pleased to know that maybe the attitude of the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council and his colleague the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council have changed their attitude with regard to this matter, and will give the people what is due them. I thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON O. FRANKS:

Yes, Mr. President. I had no intention of speaking on this straight forward motion, but I think that I should set the record straight since the water has been rather muddied in some instances. And, for the records, let it be known that in the West Bay area the Crown was recorded as the owner of some 78 acres of swamp adjoining the North Sound on the Barkers peninsula. That award, to the best of my knowledge, still stands, and undoubtedly it is probably one of the areas that the Second Elected Member for West Bay refers to. I know that attempts have been made to establish claim to that, and it is my belief that if proper claim can be established to the land, Government will deed the land to those persons who are considered the owners, just as it has in any other case. However, I am mentioning the fact that Crown was granted land in the West Bay peninsula only to show the inaccuracy of the statements that have been made.

What happened in the West Bay peninsula is that many people in the country were ignorant of the terrain in that area, and apparently still are. The fact is that along the north shore in the West Bay area, the sea shore of the North Sound, there is probably some of the highest sea shore in Cayman - it is standing cliff or ironshore. The only area in the West Bay peninsula that is affected by swamp is that area north, or just on the south side of the Barkers peninsula. The rest of it is what is known as "the rocks".

But, Mr. President, if there has been different criteria applied in different areas of the Island, it is not surprising, because section 4 of the Land Adjudication Law provides that Government (that is the Administrator, in those days) would appoint a land adjudication tribunal for each area of adjudication as it was set out; and the tribunal would consist of an adjudicator and two assessors having local knowledge of the adjudication area. And that, Mr. President, was in order to give effect to local custom in the area being adjudicated.

So if those assessors advised that it was not the custom in any particular area for persons to claim the swamp, probably that is what happened. I know it is a certainty that, in the case of the Duck Pond area, records of the old Assembly of Justices and Vestrymen will establish that one of the very persons whose estate claimed swamp land, that that person himself, in a debate in that Assembly, is on record as saying that Government owned the swamp land. That is a fact, and if anyone wants to check it, it can be checked in the debate held in the Legislature when Government was debating the lease of swamp land in the Duck Pond area to one Meisner Marine Engineers. And one of the Members of the Assembly on that occasion warned the Members of the danger of selling Government swamp land; and it was his estate that claimed some of that swamp land.

So, Mr. President, I am not surprised that the adjudicators did not adjudicate that particular land in that particular area. I do not think that anything that was done in the adjudication process was done with any ulterior motive or as a deliberate effort to deprive anyone of land. It was done in accordance with the process and to the best of the knowledge of those persons responsible for the process.

It is a well known fact, Mr. President, that whenever claims can be established that are in opposition to what the adjudication process did, Government has returned the lands to the claimants. So what is suggested here, as I see it, is a normal on-going thing and it will, hopefully, be continued.

Mr. President, I have received a note which indicates that having mentioned the reference made by the Second Member for West Bay that it might be understood that I was referring to inaccuracies made in his statement. No, that was not at all my intention, if that impression can be gained. I was referring to other statements made subsequent to his speech.

I am well aware of the claims that exist. We have not discussed it, but I believe that is what he is speaking about, because that is the one area of swamp in West Bay that I know of that was awarded the Crown. I would hope that the matter can be aired thoroughly, and if there is in fact a claim to this land, that it will go to the persons claiming it.

But I thought, Mr. President, as being one of the Members of this Government who happen to have been in a previous Government (that is the Government when this Law in fact came about) that I should clear the air about different processes of adjudication, because I can see where that could have arisen, inasmuch as there were different assessors for different areas. After all, much of the adjudication process was based on local custom in respect of the swamp and cliff lands. So I want to make clear is that I have never advocated, suggested or done anything which would have deprived owners of their rightful ownership to land.

I believe, nevertheless, that in the adjudication process many people got title to their lands which they would otherwise not have received, and all in all, the adjudication process has served to be a good one. There are a few instances where people have been deprived of land which they might have thought was theirs, but I believe that by and large the majority of the people in the country are happy with the results of the adjudication process and that in fact it was instituted. I know that it has certainly lent to the ease and certainty of dealing with land in Cayman. Prior to that, Mr. President, it was a very confused and complicated process and certainly the land sales that are taking place today could never have happened without the adjudication process having taken place.

Thank you. I support the motion, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think we could conveniently take our morning break. Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

AT 11:10 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:37 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Before we continue, may I just deal with the request from the Second Elected Member for West Bay to amend the motion in the way which he read out during his speech.

I have considered this amendment carefully. I appreciate the Member's concern in bringing it forward, but having looked at the original motion, which is very specific to Little Cayman, I regret that the proposed amendment is too wide to be taken in without substantially altering the intention of the original motion; so I shall not therefore be accepting it. But, as I said, in appreciating the Member's concern, I thought it appropriate to ask the Executive Council Member responsible for the subject to say a few words in explanation. The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. VASSIL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, when the Government decided to support Private Member's Motion No. 18/87 proposed by the First Elected Member for Little Cayman, we did so on the grounds specifically of the resolve section of the motion, which states:

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that grants be made of the swamp land and interior cliff land that were adjudicated in favour of the Crown in the Little Cayman adjudication areas in favour of the claimants, in such manner and to such extent as Executive Council shall consider fair and reasonable, having regard to the circumstances of each case and for the principles followed in making adjudication in the Islands of Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac."

Now, Mr. President, this was also in conjunction, that is to say our support of this motion, with the applications that we received from land owners in Little Cayman asking for Government's consideration of the return of swamp and cliff lands in that Island to land owners, or to people who had made claims on those lands.

What has happened in Little Cayman can happen in Grand Cayman or in any of the three Cayman Islands. If there is a claim in any of the Islands, the claim can be submitted to Government. There is a procedure in Government for dealing with these claims. It goes to the Lands and Survey Department for the necessary information which would allow Government to consider the matter, and then there is the recommendation from the Lands Department regarding the particular plots.

I gave an example of what happened in a recent case, where application was made to Government for a plot of land in Little Cayman leading from the same circumstances as others that are now being examined by Government. Executive Council has dealt with matters of this nature from time to time, and I would like to give the Second Elected Member for West Bay the assurance that on submission of any claim in his area, or claim submitted by anyone else, that Executive Council will give it the usual due consideration taking all the factors into consideration.

I am sure, Mr. President, that without having to amend this motion, other claims can similarly be made to Government. The Little Cayman situation is somewhat unique in itself, and although time has lapsed to the extent that Government has had title absolute to all these properties, it is nevertheless willing to sit down and look at these claims and make the necessary adjustments and amendments from time to time.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINDFORD A. PIERSON:

Thank you, Mr. President.

I rise in support of Private Member's Motion No.18/87 which seeks to rectify an anomaly which exists in Little Cayman, and at this point I wish to congratulate the First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands for bringing this motion to the House.

I am however, surprised that this matter was not attended to long ago, since the cadastral survey took place in 1976, or thereabouts, that is some eleven years ago. I must ask the question, why did not previous Governments look into this matter long before?

Mr. President, my position regarding the interests of the people of the sister Islands is quite well known and documented in this House. It is fully known not only by the Members of this Honourable House, but indeed by the people of the Cayman Islands. So I do not see it as a necessity for me to stand in this House today to capitalise on this very straightforward motion.

None of our people in the Cayman Islands, and no individual living in these Islands, should be deprived of their rights, including their legal access to parcels of land which they own. As I have said before in this House, the people of Little Cayman should be treated no differently from the people of Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac, and this would certainly apply to the question of the ownership of land. Most of the interior cliff lands in Little Cayman were adjudicated in favour of the Crown. I must again ask the question, why was this anomaly not rectified long before?

Mr. President, I do not find it difficult to support this motion, and neither do I find it difficult to support the stand taken by the mover of the motion when he said in the preamble that justice and fairness demand that Little Cayman should be given equal treatment. I am also supportive of the move alluded to by the Second Member for West Bay, but as was said, this matter can be dealt with in a different manner.

Perhaps in view of the possible pending claims in Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac, in addition to the problem in Little Cayman, perhaps a tribunal should be set up for the specific purpose of attempting to rectify the whole situation in the Cayman Islands.

As previously said, this is indeed a straightforward motion that should receive the full support of this Honourable House, and accordingly, Sir, I give it my full support.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Mr. President, I rise in support of Private Member's Motion No.18/87 regarding swamp and cliff lands in Little Cayman.

I, too, would like to commend the First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands for bringing this motion forward, and I have decided to speak simply for two reasons: to voice my support of the motion, and to say that while there may be some cases which fall into the category outlined in this motion, I would like to state here and now that, whilst there may be a few who felt they were not treated fairly, the adjudication of properties in Cayman was one of the finest things that was done as far as lands in this country are concerned. There were many people who I do not think would otherwise have been able to claim anything at all. I believe that the adjudicators acted in what they considered fair and reasonable terms to all concerned, and in spite of the fact that there might be the few who feel that they did not get a fair share, or what was rightfully theirs, I can assure you that even in the district of West Bay there were certain individuals (bearing in mind what the price of land has suddenly escalated to within a few years) who would probably have been deprived of a lot more.

Mr. President, I support this motion. I think that Government is doing the right thing in supporting it, and although I have noted carefully that the Fifth whereas says:

"... subject to said claimants giving waivers and indemnities satisfactory to the Government"; and as was pointed out by the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Council that these areas will be awarded to claimants:

"... in such manner and to such extent as Executive Council shall consider fair and reasonable, having regard to the circumstances of each case, and for the principles followed in making adjudications in the Islands of Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac."

I am sure, Sir, that members of the public shall be made fully aware of the stipulations attached and the conditions attached to this motion, and having said that, I give the motion my full support.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:
reply?

Would the mover wish to exercise his right of

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I shall be brief. I would like to take this opportunity to thank all Members who voiced their support to the motion, a motion which I feel very timely and very necessary. I hope that I can take it for granted that silence gives consent of the other Members who have not spoken, so I thank them also for their support.

Mr. President, the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council, I think, has outlined the procedure that will be taken. He also made reference to the 41 cases that were adjudicated in Little Cayman during the time that the cadastral survey was taking place, of which 35 awards went by default. I would like to say, as did my colleague from Cayman Brac, the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council, that there are a lot of absentee owners of property in Little Cayman, and also to say that many that went by default came about because Cadastral, when registering a claim, refused to take claims after the directive that cliff and swamp land would be given to the Crown had been established. So naturally, if no claims were filed by the individual owners, it had to go by default. So that was the reason for the high number of default cases.

I would like to ask the Honourable Member responsible for Development and Natural Resources, the Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council, if he would attempt to handle these claims as expeditiously as possible. They have, as the Second Elected Member for George Town said, gone on for a long, long time, and I wonder if it would be possible for a press release to be issued outlining the procedure that should be followed and that absentee owners be made aware of the procedure so that we can get this matter behind us, rather than having the matter coming up many years from now when it may be too late for owners to get any recompense. If it could be handled in this manner, I would undertake, at least, to get the release to all those persons who have contacted me asking for my assistance by bringing this Motion.

So with these words, Mr. President, again I would like to thank all Members for their support, for I do feel that we have made a step in the right direction in bringing equality to all the Islands.

Thank you, Mr. President

WHEREAS the importers, storers and distributors of liquified petroleum gas (propane) and other petroleum products are situated in highly residential areas which include the Cayman Islands Comprehensive School, the Cayman Islands Middle School, the Cayman Islands Preparatory School and the Catholic School;

AND WHEREAS the plants and their operations pose a potential threat to the surrounding neighbourhoods including the 4,000 school children who are the future of these islands;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT:

- (i) Government, together with these companies, take immediate steps to have the plants protected as far as practicable;
- (ii) Government institute local regulations governing the storage, transportation and distribution of all fuels and hazardous materials; and
- (iii) Government should examine whether suitable alternative isolated locations can be identified which would minimise the threat to life should an incident occur;

AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Government inform this Honourable House at each subsequent Meeting of the steps taken and the development thereon.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, I beg to second the Motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Private Member's Motion No.19/87 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I guess that this motion will be controversial. Neither is there any doubt in my mind that what we are seeking to do needs to be done.

Mr. President, it is said that per capita our consumption of petroleum is higher than the United Kingdom or Saudi Arabia. It is said that our consumption and the dependency on imports is among the highest in the world. All over the world authorities have been concerned and have had to fight disasters in whole neighbourhoods caused by storers and distributors of petroleum products. I well remember an incident in Mexico and I guess I should rephrase my words, not to say "incident" but to say "disaster" where lives were lost and the authorities there had to rethink their position and change their attitude on the way things were done in connection with liquified products.

Several years ago, I believe, a report was done for Government on these Islands by a group from the United Nations. This study on the oil companies was, however, not published, but the report expressed anxiety about the impact of the oil installations in Grand Cayman.

Mr. President, that report considered that both the Esso and Texaco terminals were overcrowded at that time. The tanks were too close together and it was likely that if any one of the tanks caught fire, there would be a chain reaction and all tanks would go up in flames. A serious fire hazard. It considered that in the case of a major accident, large volumes of oil would spill out into the sea, causing serious damage to a large part of the west coast of this Island. Among other things, it recommended, and I quote:

"... to increase significantly the storage capacity on the Islands. It is not recommended to expand the current facilities."

It put forward the idea that, and I continue to quote:

"A new tank farm in excess of 100,000 barrels could be constructed inland from the current terminals and south west of the airport, connected by a pipeline to the current marine off-loading facilities, and small three inch lines to the tank farms of Esso, Texaco and Home Supplies and even Caribbean Utilities. The terminal, including all associated facilities, could probably be constructed for about £2.5 million. Additional costs to consumers would be two to three cents per gallon. It is felt that this is a very small insurance premium to pay in comparison with the significant damage that an interruption in supplies could cause to the economy of the Island."

It went on to say, Mr. President:

"From an environmental point of view the tank farm would be considerably safer than an expansion of current Esso and Texaco facilities."

Mr. President, it strongly recommended that any expansion of current Esso and Texaco facilities should be discouraged in view of the fire hazards.

As well thinking and responsible legislators we must take cognizance now of the situation of the storers and distributors of petroleum products in this country, and the potential danger to thousands of lives which has glared us every day in the face. Each one of the companies, that is Esso, Texaco and Home Gas Ltd., are but a stone's throw from the schools mentioned in the motion. What a catastrophe, Mr. President, if we experience an incident from either of the companies which resulted in fires. As the United Nations report stated, we would get a chain reaction of explosions which would destroy the whole neighbourhood.

Now, Mr. President, we, in this House, can hold arguments as to the pros and cons of moving either of the two companies, and I full well realise that such a venture would cost millions of dollars. But this money would be peanuts in comparison to even one life. I do not even want to try to imagine what could happen, the havoc that could be wrought upon an unsuspecting neighbourhood at midnight or at 2:00 a.m. when the detection might not be as quick as at other times. I shudder at the thought.

I had one call which said that the homes had no business being where they are today, and I am not going to get into the pros and cons of that either. However, my observation is that, when these companies were in their infancy on this Island, probably no one could foresee the tremendous amount of development in this country, and the resulting necessary expansion of the two companies. We could probably say that the best of development policies were not set by Government. There should not have been residential development in an industrial neighbourhood, or there should not have been industrial development in a highly residential area.

As far back (and I was given some history on this) as the days when this country was annexed to Jamaica, representations were made to the then Governor, Sir Hugh Foot, asking that no licence be permitted to one of those two companies (I believe it would have been Texaco which was then coming in to the country). However, separate and apart from that, there is still development going on in that neighbourhood. Just a few months ago a tourist resort was completely remodelled with a restaurant within a few feet of one of the companies. Surely that is not the best of development policies.

But all of this is now hindsight. We, in this House, have a duty and a responsibility to the greatest of magnitude to all factions involved, but most important is our responsibility to humans and not to buildings.

It is my understanding that the two companies, Esso and Texaco have taken very modern precautionary measures and these measures are of a very high standard. That is good, and I am happy to know that these two companies, because of their worldwide experience, are aware of what could happen in South Church Street and even the danger to our school children on Walkers Road. However, many times, human indiscretion cannot be safeguarded, at least I believe it is a most difficult thing to try to do. And so we, as Legislators responsible to the people of this country, cannot be lulled into complacency by figures and costs thrown in our face. At some point, relocation will be most necessary.

Now, Mr. President, I turn to Home Gas Ltd., the other company involved. This is the company which is the most serious threat to our school children. Over the years, Sir, there have been at least several studies and recommendations to modernise the plants and their operations. It is also been recommended not to increase expansion. However, sad to say this has not been carried through to its full intent in respect of that company.

Recently, Sir, an ugly incident was experienced involving Home Gas Ltd. One of the lines had a leak, and two ladies who were walking with a group of women heard and smelt the gas escaping. They called a Compass reporter, Miss Carol Winker, who was a part of the group and she went over and took picture. Someone also called Home Gas, and Miss Winker called the Fire Department which came out in force. It was the officer in charge who made the decision to evacuate.

Mr. President, it was revealed from the findings that the lines used for pumping gas to the plant was something left to be desired and something which could not be ignored by the relevant authorities in this country. These pictures, which I would like to pass around for the enlightenment of the House, show that the lines are outmoded and it is a cheap and dangerous way to operate such a company, especially in this highly residential area in its present location.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Would you please table the photographs and Members can then study them at the next interval, because if you do not have copies for everybody, you cannot actually send them round. Thank you.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

I table the pictures, Mr. President.

One would have thought, with all the technology available today which could assist in the modernisation of the operation of that plant, that proper ways and means could be found and employed.

Mr. President, again, when the schools were built the plant was already in operation, but I believe that recommendations were made also not to put the plant where it is now located. Nevertheless, it is no excuse to allow large scale development and expansion of the plant without taking into due consideration its surroundings and the possible growth of the schools which has inevitably come about.

As far back as 1932 there were objections about the expansion of the operations. These objections were put to the Planning Board, but I do not believe that they received, at that point, the due consideration which they should have. There are all sorts of things to take into consideration, and this House has one fact to face, one main fact, and that is that the safety measures of that particular plant are not in keeping with modern standards. And I maintain that the threat to 4,000 of our children is indeed enough for all concerned to move expeditiously. I am sure that all of us in this House, as parents and grandparents of children who attend any one of those schools, would want to know that this threat did not exist.

Mr. President, the resolve section is asking Government to do certain things, that:

"(i) Government, together with these companies take immediate steps to have the plants protected as far as practicable;

(ii) Government institute local regulations governing the storage, transportation and distribution of all fuels and hazardous materials;".

Mr. President, when it comes to the transportation of petroleum products and other hazardous material, we should realise that our roads with respect to traffic are not what they used to be. Years ago one of these trucks could travel from George Town to West Bay and maybe meet two cars on the road. Not so today, Mr. President. There are traffic jams and you can believe that some of the drivers are not so courteous. But can any one of us in this House imagine what would happen if one of those trucks blew whilst being caught in one of the rush hour traffic jams? I shudder to think of the calamity.

Just this morning, while travelling on South Church Street, one of the tanks driving to the station (I believe it was empty - at which time they say they are most dangerous) nearly caught a passerby and two other cars. Luckily the drivers were attentive. I was right alongside the truck and you can believe I said a few prayers.

Mr. President, I am not saying that there is an easy solution to this request. I am not saying that we can make quick decisions on this particular matter, but we have made studies, people are concerned and we have experienced incidents. We must now act, and every possible avenue must be explored. There is no time for studies now. If a study is needed, Mr. President, I suggest they get the two studies that were done and act upon the recommendations. To sit back and worry about cost alone is playing with lives.

Mr. President, I have tabled many motions in this House, and you might hear, "Why is this one coming at this time?". Well, they come after much consideration on issues. I decided to table this motion, and also after much prodding by various individuals and bodies throughout this Island, I ask this House, Sir, to consider what I have put forward and accept this motion for the safety and peace of mind of our children and the surrounding neighbourhood.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I wonder whether Members might think that we should take the lunch suspension at this point. It is a very significant matter being debated and I have the feeling that contributions will not be short, so we will suspend until 2:15 p.m.

AT 12:25 P.M., THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:15 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak?

We were debating Private Member's Motion No.19/87.

Council.

The Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, since no one else is ready, Sir, I guess I had better state Government's position.

The motion before the House deals with a problem that has been with us for many years. The recent propane gas line leak has brought it once again to the forefront. It is causing much concern to the residents living in the area and to the schools which are in this vicinity.

Before we condemn the propane gas company we must examine the events leading up to the present problem. Firstly, the propane installation was established 27 years ago. At that time there were no schools and very few residents in the area, and it was considered far from populated areas of George Town. Secondly, the first school to be opened followed about six years after the propane installation was established. Thirdly, the church and Government did not recognise the potential threat of having schools built so near to this propane installation. Perhaps if they had done so they would have found an alternate site for the schools.

The Government has received letters from the Board of Governors of the Cayman Preparatory School expressing their concern, and asking Government to make arrangements for adequate safety measures to be implemented as soon as possible. This letter was really written on behalf of all the schools situated there. We are sympathetic towards their concern and we have been looking into the problems posed by the three installations, namely Texaco terminal, Esso terminal and the propane installation.

Part i of the motion says:

"(i) Government, together with these companies, take immediate steps to have the plants protected as far as practicable."

Mr. President, discussions have already taken place between Government and the three companies with a view to improving all possible safety measures as soon as possible. We have received a report from the Chief Fire Officer which states that Esso's terminal at Jackson Point is safe and well protected. It has an inbuilt fire protection system which is of the same high standard required by the United States' Government for similar installations in the U.S.A. The Fire Chief has told us that they have cooperated with his department and have done everything requested in a very professional manner.

The Texaco terminal at Jackson Point is not of the same high standard, but they are taking steps to bring them up to those safety measures and to the satisfaction of the Fire Department. The Fire Chief also said that the propane installation does not yet have adequate safety equipment, and the pipeline from the foreshore to the plant should be better protected. That is, he recommends that the pipeline remain above ground (it is safer than underground) and fenced on either side. He has made these and other recommendations to Home Gas Ltd., and we are confident that they will co-operate fully with the recommended safety measures and that they will be implemented as soon as possible.

Part (ii) of the resolve section reads:

"(ii) Government institute local regulations governing the storage, transportation and distribution of all fuels and hazardous materials."

The Government agrees to institute local regulations governing the storage, transportation and distribution of all fuels and hazardous materials as soon as possible.

Part (iii) of the resolve reads:

"(iii) Government should examine whether suitable alternative isolated locations can be identified which would minimise the threat to life should an incident occur."

Mr. President, Government also agrees with part (iii) of the resolution and we are recommending that a committee be formed to look into all aspects of this problem and to deal with it in a professional manner. I will probably have to name a committee and perhaps during this meeting I will get together with the mover of the motion and other Government Members to decide upon the appointment of persons. This would, however, certainly include the Fire Chief and his department. This particular problem cuts across two portfolios, namely the portfolio for Tourism, Aviation and Trade and Communications, Works and District Administration, so we will have to decide just who to put on this committee, plus Members of the House.

Government agrees with the resolution and it will inform this Honourable House at each subsequent meeting of the steps taken and any progress made in the safety and storage of petroleum products.

I support the motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Elected Member for Bodden Town.

If no other Member wishes to speak ... the Second

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I do not support the motion. The Motion seeks in part (iii) of the resolve section that Government should examine whether suitable alternative isolated locations can be identified. It seems to me that this part of the motion, if adopted, would require the removal of the three oil installations from their present sites. This exercise would be too costly to even think about it.

As the Honourable Member who just spoke said, the propane installation was put into operation some twenty or so years ago, and the Esso plant, I believe, was put in much earlier, or a few years earlier. In fact I think it went into operation in 1964, or early 1965.

It appears to me that the recent oil or propane leak has really spurred the action which we see today, and I am wondering if sufficient investigation has been made to find out whether that incident really warrants the relocation of the plant. I asked a few questions about this and I was told by the owner of the plant that the leak was caused by physical damage to the piping, either a motor vehicle or some other type of vehicle appears to have struck the valves or the unions or some part of the pipe system and this caused the leak.

The Member introducing the motion felt that the pipes were perhaps below the standard required, and this was one of the things that I examined at the time. I found out from information given to me by Captain Theo himself that the pipe which he is using is what is called "80 Schedule" and is a 2,200 pound test seamless pipe.

In consulting this document which was published by the National Fire Protection Association (the bible for the handling of liquified petroleum gases in the United States), I found that, for LP gases which would include propane, the type of pipe which should be used if the "gas vapour is in excess of 125 psig shall be Schedule 80 or heavier". So the pipes used in the propane installation are identical with the requirements of the National Fire Protection Association, which is the only standard, or is perhaps the recognised standard for the operation of these installations.

My further enquiries revealed that, despite what we have heard in the House, the propane plant does comply with the most modern systems known in operations of this kind. This is not to say that you will not find something wrong if an inspector goes there. It is probable that he will find something wrong, as he would find at any other plant which he inspected. But there is no guess work at the plant. The propane cylinders are not filled by guesswork. The weight is set, the cylinders are filled, the shut-off automatic when the required weight has been reached; the valves, which are very important, are removed regularly on a five year basis; and the personnel are trained in the operation. We only have to use our common sense to know the operation is sound.

This plant, as we heard from the Honourable Member, has been in operation for more than twenty years, and there have been no major catastrophes. There have not even been any small incidents which would cause alarm, with the possible exception of the recent gas leak that could have been dangerous.

I am not trying to minimise the risk which exists, because I am one of the few Members of the Assembly who spent five years at sea, mostly on a tanker, and I might say, on a tanker which suffered a major fire. So I know the risks involved in the handling of petroleum products.

We have, many times, throughout the world seen people who go and build as close to the airport as they can and then afterwards complain about the noise of the jets. At the time of the first oil bulk storage plant, there was some objection from certain Members of the Legislative Assembly to the siting of the Esso plant. Nevertheless, the plant was put in, and after a short time, Texaco followed in the same area. A few years later the propane plant was put in, in a much more isolated area.

The major developments, churches, schools, apartments and private dwelling homes were put in after these plants were installed 25 years ago. The Governments, over the years, have been guilty of allowing development in these areas. The people who have gone there to live have also been guilty, but what we have to remember is that similar installations are found throughout the world in populated cities, in as near proximity to developed areas as the ones in George Town. I believe that Government must do all in its power to see to the safe handling of bulk petroleum products. The machinery already exists.

We have on our books the Petroleum Storage and Handling Law, and I believe that regulations can be made under that Law to cover all the safety requirements that are needed. If the Law which is now on the books is inadequate in any area, or that it does not apply to the present installations, I should think that the Attorney General's chambers would look at a proper amendment to the Law by which we can make the necessary regulations to cover whatever problems exist.

I remember an incident which happened in the 1960's when I was a Customs Officer. I went to dip the tanks at the Texaco station after a tanker had unloaded a supply of gasoline. Mr. Tom Hurlstone, who was the manager of Texaco, and I climbed to the top of the tank and as we pulled the bung out of the tank, getting ready to insert the dipstick, somebody climbed up the steps, took out a cigarette and was ready to strike a match. We call have all been blown to hell that day, but fortunately we saw the action of the person and were able to persuade him that it was not the time to get his smoke.

I am relating this because no matter what facilities or which regulations exist, no matter how much one may conform to the safety codes, one careless act can destroy all the best plans made by man.

I believe that the oil companies - Texaco, Esso and Borden Holdings - will endeavour to co-operate with the Government and the Fire Department in order to guarantee the safety of their operations, because those who have the most to lose by any accident would be the owners of the properties. The first people to be blown to pieces would be those who work at the plant. Whatever monetary loss there is, the one to pay the cost would be the companies themselves. So they have a stake in this business.

to maintain a safe and adequate plant which is operated by standards set by the manufacturers and those who are in the petroleum industry.

I have heard calls for the pipes to be underground. This has to be nonsense, because everyone knows that as dangerous as the pipes are above ground, they are much better than if they are out of sight, because if you have a pipe leaking above ground it is much easier to not only detect the leak, but to actually identify the trouble spot.

Trinidad Leaseholds has actually 28 miles of pipeline above the ground, and I have heard of no major incidents where the pipeline above the ground has really caused any trouble. On the other hand, there was an item in the news about three years ago (it was on television) where 13 people died in California as a result of an accident caused by an underground pipeline.

I do not see the need for setting up a committee. We are now suffering (and I do not want to anticipate the law) but we are suffering from the work of a committee which met 37 times to frame a law over the last three years. I believe there is no need for the committee. We have the law, Government has the technical people, we have the Honourable Member in charge, and, if necessary, we can bring in an expert - we have brought them in to count wild parrots and to catch stray dogs; so this administration knows where to find experts, and they can find an expert if they need one.

However, I must congratulate the Member on bringing the motion because he has highlighted a problem of which there is no evidence at all that the Government knew existed. He has highlighted a problem and I know the Government, being afraid of any criticism, will endeavour to do what they can about it.

The Member introducing the motion mentioned that an expert had been brought in some years ago, an expert who had made some recommendations - and this is true. Some of the recommendations which he made at the time were carried out by the oil companies. I believe amongst those recommendations was one to relocate the plants and to put them in a more isolated place. Perhaps this would be the ideal thing. However, in our situation, I do not think it is practical at all. It would be much easier to evacuate the area and relocate all the other businesses and buildings, because the bulk storage plants need to be (not necessarily need to be) but it is convenient if they are close to the ships which bring the cargo that goes into the tanks.

We know that, unless the plans materialise for the dredging of the North Sound, there is really no other place where the ships could come in and pump the cargo into the tanks. Then there is also the cost of relocation. I have heard one estimate given at something over $2 million, but I believe that estimate is a little on the low side. If those three plants were to be relocated, I believe the cost for the new land, and for the obstruction of services and the new plants, would probably run in the vicinity of $15 million rather than $7.5 million for the three. So it appears to me that whether we like it or not, George Towners are now paying for a philosophy, by which they have lived, that everything must be in George Town.

For example, and to illustrate the point (I do not want to stray) the airport was put in George Town simply because the George Town Members dominated the Legislative Assembly at that time, and wanted it so. Years later, one of those Members came to me with a petition to move the airport and put it where it should have been, in the first place, behind Boddan Town in that level land there. And I had to tell him at the time that I would not sign the petition and would fight him because it was asked for and one be careful when asking for something because one may really get it.

The problem we have today is a problem that will not go away easily. It is a problem that I think we are going to have to live with, but it is also a problem where caution can be exercised, where safety can be exercised, and I believe that a child is much safer in the school up there by the storage tank than he is driving home in his mother's car from school. We have had many accidents where school children have been injured, and no one to my knowledge has been injured because of an accident as a result of the handling - no one in Cayman - of liquefied petroleum gases.

I cannot support the motion because supporting it, to me, would entail endorsing number (iii) of the resolve section. I cannot support it because it would also endorse the acceptance of number (ii) which is already covered - that is the storage, transportation and distribution of all fuels. It may be so that the existing regulations are inadequate, but if they are, I feel that the Portfolio responsible can sit down and churn out new regulations or amended regulations which are necessary.

I cannot support the motion because supporting it would endorse, or would entail the acceptance of number (i) which is that Government take immediate steps to have the plants protected. I believe this has already been done from the inception of the plants. It is my understanding that, when each of these three plants were built, they were inspected by people who knew, even before a single drop of propane or gasoline was put in the tanks. But standards and technology change, and what may have been the accepted norm in 1967 may no longer be adequate today. And in fact we find that the technology of one decade is obsolete in the next.

I am alarmed by the serious consequences that would result if these three plants were to be shut down until they could be relocated to any new area where there would be not one person who would not suffer from the toxicity of leaks or be endangered by the hazards of explosions. I do not believe these sites are too frequent in Grand Cayman, and are certainly not found in George Town.

Nevertheless, because the motion has at least made the Government debate it, we know that they are now aware of the problem, and we trust that they will deal with it diligently as we know they can if they want to. I will certainly be consistent as I am and vote against the motion, but I trust that its presence before this House will result in some action.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LIMEFORD A. PIERSON:

Thank you, Mr. President.

In listening to the debates on this motion and, in particular, to the presentation made by the last speaker, I wonder, Sir, if he took time to fully read the details of the motion. It appears to me that his only concern was with section (iii) of the resolve section, and I shall deal with that as I attempt to make my contribution to what I regard as a very worthy motion indeed; and I believe that I will demonstrate that I have shown perhaps more concern than most in that I took time out to visit the installations and to satisfy myself of some of the problems.

I have no doubt that this motion was indeed prompted by the recent fire which occurred near to the propane plant on Walkers Road; and I do not think there is any doubt in the minds of any Member of this Honourable House, or indeed in the minds of members of the public, that something should be done at this stage. That is why I feel that this motion attempts to make a reasonable effort to address this problem. It is not at all unreasonable, and I feel, Sir, that the Honourable Third Elected Member of Council did a very good job in his support of this Motion. He has pointed out exactly the necessity to set up a committee to examine alternative measures to cope with this problem.

Mr. President, the previous speaker said that he is alarmed at the consequences should three plants shut down until a new location could be found. I, too, would be alarmed, but this is not what we are talking about in this motion. It is not the intention to shut down any of the plants on South Church Street, and I would like to make that abundantly clear. This gives the public the wrong impression, Sir. Neither the Government, the seconder of the Motion nor myself have any intention of shutting down the plant because we are well aware of the chaos that would result.

In the contribution by the previous speaker, he indicated that a committee of this House would not prove worthwhile, but that it would be futile. Because of the interest of the safety of the people of this country, and in particular those who border the area where these tanks are located, I feel that it is incumbent on the Members of this House to set up a committee and be a part of that committee to examine the potential dangers of those areas. I, too, know that there are safety measures and safety standards in place, and I will touch on these as I go along.

I am happy, however, that the previous speaker did in fact mention that the propane tank was built some twenty-odd years ago. If my dates are correct, I believe that the propane tank installation was in 1962 and the others sometime in the 1960's. This is the reason, Mr. President, why we should perhaps be looking very closely at the safety aspects of these operations.

Once upon a time the Public Works Department was located behind the Public Library because that was sufficient at the time. Once upon a time the old post office housed about three or four Government departments. Once upon a time, the Governor, or the Administrator at the time, and his staff, were housed in a little wooden building. Times have changed, and this is why the Government must move with the changing times.

The same Member spoke of his experience at sea as a seaman and his encounter with petroleum and petroleum products. Even though I know that he spent more time at sea than I did (I was only at sea for one year), I believe that my year of experience with petroleum products perhaps exceeds that of any Member of this House. In in my tenth month at sea I was a seaman on the Sinclair Patroller which hit a war mine and exploded. Two of the chaps on that ship, including a Caymanian, died. So I know the dangers of petroleum and petroleum products. I saw the oil burn on the water that day as if a cane field had been burning. We were helpless. We were in lifeboats and could not go near the ship to try and help the two people who were trapped.

So, Mr. President, let nobody fool you, we are talking about a very, very serious matter one that should not be clouded by any political leanings or otherwise. Because of human weaknesses anything is possible.

The same speaker alluded to the dangers, the potential dangers, if somebody struck a match or something around one of those tanks. No matter how well regulated a system is, we cannot overcome certain personal and human weaknesses. So we should do all in our power to ensure that we put in place as many safety standards as possible.

In this respect, I am not suggesting at all that the present owners of those installations should have the financial responsibility of having to move those tanks. What this motion calls for, that is in part (iii) of the resolve section, is that Government should examine whether suitable alternative isolated locations can be identified which would minimise the threat to life should an accident occur. It says that Government should examine the feasibility and the viability of this. And, hopefully, all Members of this House would be a part of that committee.

But if I may, I would wish to touch on all three areas of the resolve section. The preamble says:

"AND WHEREAS the plants and their operations pose a potential danger or threat to the surrounding neighbourhoods, including the 4,000 school children who are the future of these Islands;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT:

- (i) Government, together with these companies, take immediate steps to have the plants protected as far as practicable?."

Mr. President, I do not believe that anybody in their right mind can accuse the previous speaker of the sin of commission. But it is not what is said, it is what fails to be said. I do not recall the Member reading that last section of the first section of the resolve. He stopped at "take immediate steps to have the plants protected ...". It went on to say "... as far as practicable". The sin of omission is sometimes worse than the sin of commission.

Part (ii) of the resolve section reads:

- "(ii) Government institute local regulations governing the storage, transportation and distribution of all fuels and hazardous materials?."

Perhaps the committee will come up with recommendations for the appointment of a Government inspector, perhaps within the Fire Department or some other appropriate department of Government.

Part (iii) states:

- "(iii) Government should examine ..."

... that is, Government should look into the viability and feasibility of the whole matter.

There are, however, two sides to this matter, and I wish to also point out the areas that I have checked into which would suggest to me that certain international standards are now in place. I would also point out that, in 1963, when the propane plant was built on Walkers Road, this was pretty much in an isolated area. There were no other buildings around at that time. It is my understanding that Government forced a certain family in George Town that owned the land where the Government schools are now located to sell that property to Government after they had knowledge that the propane plant had been located in that area. That was 24 years ago. So, Government is also to be blamed for building the schools around this propane plant after it had been built there. If we decided on section (iii) of this resolve, then I feel that Government would have to shoulder a major portion of any expenses to relocate those plants.

In my attempt to get as many facts as possible on this matter, I visited Captain Theo and his son Ablee at their office and attempted to glean as much information as I could. I am very happy to report that a lot of basic international standards are now in place, but it would appear as though certain areas could be upgraded. I also drove with Captain Theo to the area where the leak occurred, and it would seem that some vehicle or person had knocked the pipes off its racks causing the leak.

We are talking about cause and effect, and the effect, Mr. President, is what is of most concern to us. We sympathise with what may have occurred, or what may have caused the pipe to start leaking. But what we are more concerned with here is the effect, the damage and the devastation that could occur with a major eruption of those lines on the plant.

I was told, and I believe that the propane plant off Walkers Road is one of the most modern facilities in the Caribbean. I believe this. I was also told that unlike some of the plants you will find in Jamaica and other Caribbean Islands, the plant off Walkers Road is spray filled, which keeps the pressure down.

For example, in Jamaica, installations are liquid filled, and in order to keep the pressure down it is necessary to have a vapour return line to reduce it. The local installation does not need this type of return line because of the spray filled system that they have. This is a very modern feature, Mr. President. So, as I said, I will indeed point out the areas where standards are very high. However, later on, I will touch on some of the weaknesses.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Would it be convenient now to take a break?

MR. LIMEFORD A. PIERSON:

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

We will suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:15 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:30 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINCOLN A. PIERSON:

Thank you, Mr. President.

When I commenced my contribution on this motion, instead of saying there was a potential fire from a leak, I in fact said a fire. I wish to correct that. There was a leak which had the potential of causing a fire.

On that particular night, my understanding is that there was a lot of rain, therefore this was the reason why the area was not patrolled as had been the custom. It appears as though something like a tractor hit the line, which is propped up on some cement blocks, and because of this, it got a crack in one of the joints. Upon my examination of this particular area I would have to agree that, if this had not been tampered with or hit by some object, it should not have caused that particular leak.

I was also told by Captain Theo and Atlee that the pipe is a Schedule 80 pipe, which means it is a seamless pipe which stands up to about 2,200 lbs per square inch of pressure, and that this is controlled by safety valves. But they usually pump at about 200 lbs of pressure per square inch. The safety valve is set to relieve pressure at 250 lbs. So they have a lot of built-in devices for protection. I was also told that the likelihood of a major explosion or fire at the installation is remote and extremely small, but he agreed, in fact, at that meeting that he would put barricade the area.

We also discussed the pros and cons of putting the pipeline underground, and I have to agree with him that one of the dangers of putting the pipeline underground is that if there was in fact a leak, it would be much more difficult to locate and that a more serious accident could occur as a result of leaving the leak for too long.

Mr. President, on the question of relocation, it was felt that it would be very difficult. Both Captain Theo and his son mentioned this, and if it was something that needed to be done, they expressed the hope that this would be done within the long range plan of Government; and that within the next five or ten years that they would not be asked to move again. I said that this is not the immediate intention of Government nor of this motion, as it calls for a committee to examine the viability and feasibility of the matter.

I was also told that Tropic Gas provides manuals for the guidance of the management of the propane plant and that all their lines are grounded in case of lightning. I was further assured that the annual inspection by the police and fire department are carried out, and that they recently installed a system to keep the tanks wet in case of fire, costing some $18,000.

So, Mr. President, this motion was not brought here without seeking to obtain as much information as possible on the operation of these installations. Much thought and effort went into the preparation of this motion. I also contacted the manager of the Texaco installation, Mr. James Tibbitts, and I subsequently visited the Esso installation and discussed the matter with Mr. Gary McCaugart and his colleague. While at the Esso installation, I was taken on a tour of the grounds and was shown the various safety devices that are installed at the Esso tanks in case of a fire or in case of a major oil leak. I was also told that Esso and Texaco are now considering installing underground pipes for the purpose of transporting oil, that is diesel oil to Caribbean Utilities and the airport. This alone will reduce the dangers of accidents occurring with these big tank lorries that now have to transport oil to these various areas. I was told by Mr. Tibbitts that Texaco is quite aware of the importance of safety in the environment, and that they are doing all in their power to cope with this.

I also received from Esso a copy of what they call their Plant and Terminal Inspection Report. This outlines the various checks that are made not only by the international inspectors who come in on a quarterly basis, but also the monthly checks that are carried out by the managers of the Esso installation. I have no doubt that similar checks are done by Texaco. These checks are carried out on the safety conditions of the tanks, the pumps' manifolds and piping, the loading racks and barrel filling facilities, the buildings and other structures and equipment, and they are very, very careful with the question of smoking. They also examine the docks and piers and other miscellaneous checks that are done.

So, Mr. President, I have gone to this extent to point out that a lot of safety checks are now in place. But we also have the other side of the coin, and that is potential dangers. No matter how good a system, it can fail.

Back on the 10th of September 1982 (and at this point I wish to point out that I am not concerned about whose administration this fell under) the Caymanian Compass carried a headline "Oil operations unsafe". This was written by a gentleman for whom I have a lot of respect, Mr. Kent Eldemire, a conservationist. Sometimes in Cayman that seems to be a bad word, but I have a lot of respect for conservationists. In this article, Mr. Eldemire said:

"With the company handling volatile, hazardous and explosive material, the location of this compound in the middle of one of Cayman's best residential areas must certainly be considered a grave mistake in the first place, and to now grant further expansion only compounds an already untenable situation."

Mr. President, in the preamble to this, the Compass stated that Mr. Eldemire had disclosed to them that a year ago, that is in 1981, he wrote the Central Planning Authority to register his objections at plans submitted by Texaco seeking permission to erect storage on South Church Street. He copied the letters to the then Governor, Mr. Thomas Russell; the Member for Agriculture and Land, Mr. John McLean; the Member for Tourism, Mr. Jim Rodden; the Member for Health and Education, Mr. Truman Rodden; and the Member for Communications, Mr. Haig Rodden; and Mr. Dennis Foster, according to the Compass report in September 1982. I can recall, as far as my memory goes, because I believe that at that time I was the chairman of the Central Planning Authority. I can recall that Mr. Eldemire did in fact address this problem. He went on to say:

"I am amazed that Texaco, with their touted concern of the environment and own company safety considerations, appear to have a most unsafe terminal."

It is my understanding, Mr. President, that since 1982 Texaco has taken some strong measures in improving the safety standards on South Church Street.

Mr. President, I am reading from this because I feel that this in fact gives a very good account of the possibilities and the potential dangers of those tanks being situated and located on South Church Street. He continued:

"It is time to consider the obvious alternative of providing an area suitably located outside residential suburbs to establish a tank for all companies handling this type of commodity."

Mr. Eldemire's remarks were foreshadowed by a United Nations' report done on the oil companies here for the Cayman Islands Government. This report was not made public, but a source who had access to the report said that anxiety over the impact of oil installations in Grand Cayman had been expressed in the report which was submitted four years ago, that is four years before 1982.

The report allegedly said that the walls at Esso and the dykes at Texaco were too low and insufficient to hold the stored volume of the tanks as is required by generally accepted standards. Another point that the report is said to have made was that the tanks were too congested in the small area, and that in view of this, any expansion of the current facilities should be discouraged due to the high risk of the fire hazard.

Mr. President, even though this article which I am reading dates back to 1982, the concern is as real today as it was then. This is why the motion calls for these companies to do everything in their power and to take immediate steps to have the plants protected.

South Church Street, Walkers Road area and South Sound are perhaps one of the more choice residential areas in this country. Some of the most expensive homes and some of the most densely populated areas are around these particular installations. This is why we cannot do too much to ensure that proper safety standards are in place. This is why, when I was asked by the Second Elected Member for West Bay to second this motion (I think he will recall) in its initial drafted form I told him that I was not able to second it unless it had been amended, which he subsequently did. At that time I found it possible to support this, because even though the leak occurred at the propane plant, I did not feel it was fair to single out just that particular plant, when in fact the Esso and Texaco installations pose as much of a potential threat to the safety of the surrounding area as the propane plant does.

I fully support this motion Mr. President, and I would ask that this Honourable House agree, with your permission, to appoint a committee to examine the viability and feasibility of this whole matter before us today, of the safety and storage of petroleum products in the Cayman Islands.

I thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, rising to speak on Private Member's Motion No. 19/87 regarding the safety and storage of petroleum products, I wish to say that I share the concerns of the Members bringing the motion to this House. They have expressed these very serious concerns and a number of questions arise when considering this motion.

Of primary importance, of course, the safety of life and limb must be in the forefront of our minds at all times. However, there are a number of questions which have come to mind in thinking of this. It is a very difficult motion to deal with because on the one hand we want to do everything possible to ensure that not only the residents who live day and night near these petroleum storage facilities, but the school children and others who are in that area for several hours a day.

I have been around long enough to know that when those facilities were first placed there, there was certainly nowhere near the amount of persons living in the area, nor school facilities either, for that matter. But the situation exists and it is one which we have to deal with. However, even if it were possible, as the third resolve section says, that Government should examine whether suitable alternative isolated locations can be identified, which would minimise the threat to life should an incident occur. Putting aside the millions of dollars which it might cost for relocation of such facilities, I have wondered, Sir, where exactly would we place such a facility, if indeed a location were found. The storage terminals would of necessity have to be placed near the ocean. Where is there property on this Island where such a facility could be found? If that is not the case, any isolated area where such terminals might be placed away from a residential or school area, one would still have to use pipes from the ocean to wherever these storage facilities are located. Are we going to find any area on this small Island where these pipes could be located where one would not find a residential area or some other area which would be exposed to the dangers such as took place some months back?

Mr. President, the situation, as I see it, is one of taking every precautionary measure to ensure that everything which is done, everything which can be done and all precautionary measures which are taken by such institutions worldwide, are done here. I have no doubt in my mind that the companies involved, Texaco, Esso and Home Gas are all reputable firms. Texaco and Esso are known worldwide, and I doubt very much that they would have less interest in securing the facilities here than they would in any other densely populated area in any part of the world. As far as Home Gas is concerned, they are primarily located right here in the Cayman Islands. I do not think they have any interests elsewhere. However, I can assure you that the family involved in that particular operation is cautious and careful, and at all times bears in mind the very important part which they play in protecting the lives of those people who live in that area.

Mr. President, I have worked for that company, I happen to know Captain Theo Bodden and his family, and I have no votes to gain from anybody in this district. All I have to say is that I can assure you that they will do everything possible to ensure that these facilities are maintained at the highest standard possible to ensure the safety of the people who live in the surrounding area. (INAUDIBLE)

Mr. President, if the Member sitting next to me might try not to interrupt, I was saying that I felt that the companies concerned would do everything possible to ensure that the highest of safety standards were in effect for these petroleum storage facilities, and especially with the incident which took place some time ago, I feel that even now they are looking into every possible area of ensuring that such an incident does not occur again. I have nothing at all in me - I wish that it were possible to somehow solve this problem otherwise, but it would seem to me that Government's strict regulations and the safety standards of the companies concerned, plus an on-going effort to update the regulations and to put in place even stricter standards of safety, would be what we are looking at as a possible solution to the problems which we face.

Mr. President, it is not possible for me to support this motion. As I mentioned, I share the concern of the Members moving the motion, but I do believe that the companies involved will do everything possible to ensure that the highest standards are set and that we as a Government will look into seeing that the strictest regulations possible are not only in place, but are observed by the companies concerned.

With those few remarks, I find it not possible to support the motion at this time.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak? Would the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I am indeed satisfied that Government has seen fit to support this motion and I am grateful for the time that the seconder of this motion took to investigate the situation. I am grateful for his continued support in the matter.

The Member speaking on Government's behalf has indicated the need for a committee and I am glad that that is also being done. I would hope that the Fire Department would be involved because the Chief Fire Officer would know best this type of situation.

However, the Member speaking on Government's behalf said that, in dealing with the propane gas plant, it had been installed some 27 years ago, and it seemed that all the other Members picked up on this time frame. However, I believe he did go on to say there were no schools and hardly any residents; or he may have said that there were no residents. That is not entirely correct. There were homes in that area. In fact there was a home, directly across from the plant, even at that time; and at that time, from the inception of that plant, there was opposition to the plant going there. The property the plant is located on, as I understand it, was subdivided, to an extent, for residential purposes, and I believe that there was some quarrel about it being turned into an industrial property.

One thing I had failed to point out in moving the motion was that, as I understand it, this company is still not using any moorings, or that the moorings used by Esso and Texaco are causing continuous damage to the marine environment in that area.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town who spoke on the motion said that he could not support it because of section (iii) of the resolve which would make the exercise too costly to even think about. What, Mr. President, would the Member do? Would he consider moving the schools and the millions of dollars worth of property in that area? Let me make it abundantly clear that section (iii) of the resolve part of this motion does not ask Government to purchase land for relocation. The motion is worded as asking Government to identify isolated locations which would be available for such type of installations. And any Member in this House who says that we do not have those locations, do not want those locations. This is why the country has fallen back in certain areas, because there is too much patting on the back and friendship. I hold no brief with any one of them. I see a situation that needs to be rectified, and regardless if it was my mother, I would still hold my position. The necessary thing to do in the final analysis is to relocate.

The Member went on to say that the most modern methods are used in the operation of this kind. If what I see here is modern, then I have to wonder what would be considered outdated. They spoke about 27 years and no catastrophe - it is a wonder, and God has smiled on us. But when you look at this type of operation, you have to wonder - a pipeline with this sort of liquid, sitting on an eight inch blocks with a pieces of two by fours. Come, come, Mr. President, do these people think that everybody is fooled?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town went on to say that there are similar plants in cities throughout the world with similar operations. I challenge him on that. It could only be in some backward country where one would find this operation: in a country where the authorities had no feeling or responsibility to their people, and who maybe held large shares in the operation for them to allow it to operate.

In dealing with section (ii) of the resolve part of the motion, the Member said that we already have the solution in the Petroleum Law and the regulations. I agree. Regulations can be made, and that is exactly what this section is asking. He only looked at the last section and based his opposition on that. If you look at the Petroleum Law and its regulations, the regulations are ten times larger than the Law. These regulations only deal with the exploration and other aspects of the possibility of finding oil, and what would happen in the event of the discovery of oil. The Law and its regulations have nothing to do with the importing, storing and distribution of any petroleum products. So there is need, much need, for that part of the motion. I cannot find anything in these regulations to regularise the type of situation that we are facing. They are talking a bunch of rubbish, and they know it.

Mr. President, his story on the man and the cigarette is a good one. That is what I spoke about in my opening remarks. I do not know who it was who would have gone to Hell, but somebody might have gone. Human indiscretion cannot be safeguarded; it is a most difficult thing to do. And I would continue to say that we cannot be lulled into complacency because of friendship, or because someone was employed by them, or because someone attends church with them, or because they are my political team. Our children's lives are at stake, and that is the bottom line. If they do not have children in those schools, they certainly have grandchildren.

The Member opposed any committee that might be formed to look into these situations. They brought in a study. The studies that were done were done under their Government -- experts. This study was done eight years ago, and it recommended no expansion. It recommended a relocation. The costs would have been much less. However, friendship and political support were ruled in and common sense ruled out.

To remind the two Members opposing the motion, I will read again the United Nation's recommendations:

"It is strongly recommended to increase significantly the storage capacity on the Cayman Islands. It is not recommended to expand the current facilities. From an environmental point of view a tank farm would be considerably safer than an expansion of current Esso and Texaco facilities, and any expansion of current Esso and Texaco facilities should be discouraged in view of the fire hazards..".

That was their report, Mr. President, something that was never made available to the public. What are they talking about? Just a few days ago we stood in this House and said that we need to know what is going on and that we should get together. A Member of Government said he would form the committee. I will be there, if I am asked to serve. This is what I want.

Mr. President, he further muddled the whole issue by trying to impute that we would shut down the plants until we found a place to relocate. The motion does not say any such thing. If these operations were to be relocated, it would be in the future, and probably in the distant future. I do not see it happening right away, Mr. President. Any management team would not simply knock down the plants, close everything down and then go off somewhere else and build one. Backward government, Mr. President, to sit back and worry about cost alone could have a disastrous effect on the future of this country.

The last points to deal with are the points, if you can call them that, made by the lady Member. I am not surprised, Mr. President, not surprised at all. That Member supported a previous motion by me to look into the raised fees of propane gas. The effect of that motion eventually caused the cost to go down $5.00. She came crying on my shoulder that she should not have done it. Somebody must have tapped on her back. That is no lie, that is the truth.

The only sensible point she made was that were no schools were near the plants when they went up. That is the truth. Let me tell her that this is no excuse to have large scale development and expansion without taking into consideration its surroundings and the possible growth of the schools which has eventually come about. She said she has every confidence that the strictest safety standards are employed. She does not know who she is dealing with. She does not know what she is dealing with, but she is playing with our children's future, and maybe hers too.

Mr. President, I think the motion is well placed. It is needed. Any Member who votes no, is not a responsible Legislator. I maintain that the safety measures of the propane plant, and maybe a few measures of the other two companies, are not in keeping with modern standards; and I maintain that this threat to that area and to those schools is enough for all of us in this House to want to do something, regardless of friendship and regardless of the support from any one of the companies. As far as I am concerned I will always be a good representative because when I see a problem, regardless of who is involved, I try to solve it, and that is exactly what I am doing here this afternoon with the support of the Second Elected Member for George Town. We have done our work, now let us all do our work as responsible Legislators. Support the motion.

MR. LINEFORD A. PIERSON:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Our proceedings are resumed. Questions. No. 93, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 93: Would the Honourable Member state what was the total charter revenue of Cayman Airways Limited in the financial year 1986-1987?

ANSWER: The total charter revenue of Cayman Airways Limited during the financial year 1986-1987 was US$6,578,407.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, can the Honourable Member say how the revenue compared with the cost of operating the charters?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, the charters operated by Cayman Airways were conducted with the use of the 727 aircraft as well as a 737 aircraft which was leased. If you isolate the charter operation of the 737, compared with the cost and the income, that operation produced a profit.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Could The Honourable Member advise how many hours were flown in order to derive this gross revenue?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

No, Mr. President, I do not have the total number of charter hours because, as I said, on both aircraft (the 727 and the 737) I do not have the hours.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Could I have a commitment, Mr. President, that that would be circulated in letter-form to the Members of the House?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Yes, Sir, no problem with that.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

A further supplementary, Mr. President.

Could the Honourable Member advise the House of the charter hour rate used in this figure?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think that is a rather detailed question, going somewhat beyond. Would you care to reply to that in writing?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Yes, Sir. There would be two different charter hour rates, I imagine. Could I ask the Member if he is referring to the charter rate which the company charges the customer?

All right, there are probably eight or nine different charter destinations involved, and I can supply that in writing.

(INAUDIBLE)

MR. PRESIDENT: Sorry, would you please address the House, so we can all hear.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well there is not much use if my question is being ruled out of order.

MR. PRESIDENT: No, no, I asked for a reply in writing, because it was very detailed following out of the original question.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: No, it was a very simple question, Sir. What I was saying was that regardless of the route flown, whether it is from here to New York or a charter from here to Miami, it would normally be figured at the same flight hour rate.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: It depends on the destination, Mr. President, because the cost of operating into some airports is higher than others, and I think there would be a difference in the rate to the customer even though the different types of aircraft are used, or when the same aircraft is used, in fact. I understand that that is also a question which has been put down by the Member, so I would give that information whenever that question comes up.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Honourable Member say offhand if the charter revenue was more than, or less than, the expenses of the charters?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I dealt with that when I answered a supplementary question a while ago by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. The charter revenue that I have quoted is a combination of charter revenue derived from operation of the 727 and the 737 on charter business. If we take the revenue derived from the 737 in isolation and deduct the expenses for that particular operation, a profit is shown.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, what I want the Honourable Member to say is no or yes. Did he make a profit on the operation of the charters?

MR. PRESIDENT: On the total operation, is that what your question is?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I would say the answer to that would be yes.

MR. PRESIDENT: There appear to be no further supplementaries. Next question, please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 94: Would the Honourable Member state what was the total passenger revenue of Cayman Airways Limited in the financial year 1986-1987?

ANSWER: The total passenger revenue of Cayman Airways Limited during the financial year 1986-1987 was US$22,872,096.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Could the Honourable Member tell the House whether the per hour rate on the passenger revenue exceeded the per hour rate earned on the charter market?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I am sorry, Mr. President, but I am not able to answer that question. I do not understand a per hour rate on passenger revenue as compared to a per hour rate on charter. Maybe if he can explain further I might be able to give him an answer.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well, I thought it was a simple question. If an income of $22 million was earned on the scheduled route for say 8,000 flying hours, and if $6 million was earned by flying 2,000 hours; if you compare one against the other you would know which was the most profitable. I mean for a man with the experience as the Honourable Member should have had in this industry, I thought it was a simple question.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I can stand on my experience, Sir.
If the Member had phrased the question, 'What was the average per hour cost, comparing passenger revenue and charter revenue', then I would know how to calculate that, because I am not a dummy. I do not have that information with me, but if the Member wants it I can give it to him in writing. However that is a calculation that the management of the company would have to do.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, I apologise. I was not in any way making reference to the Honourable Member as being a dummy. I know much better than that. I am sorry he took it that way.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sure your apology is accepted in the spirit in which it is offered, and the spirit the House will note.
If there are no more supplementaries, shall we go to the next question?

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

MR. 95: Would the Honourable Member state what was the total cargo revenue of Cayman Airways Limited in the financial year 1986-1987?

ANSWER: The total cargo revenue of Cayman Airways Limited during the financial year 1986-1987 was US$1,688,136.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Is there any particular reason why the cargo revenue of Cayman Airways has declined so much?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Declined so much in comparison with what period?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well, we could take most any period, but for reference sake, I will take 1984.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: The decline in cargo, comparing 1984 with 1987, I think is due to various reasons. Taking one year in isolation as this, you can have a situation where importers have decided to bring more of their cargo on ships rather than aircraft. You have to take into consideration the cargo rate that was in effect at that particular time, Sir.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: The cargo rate is, I think, higher now than it was, taking the isolated year of 1984. The economy of the Island has grown probably 20 per cent in the last three years. So would it not be expected that the cargo revenue of Cayman Airways should have increased to stay in line with the supposed upturn in the economy?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, if there are better facilities and rates offered to the public by shipping, then that source and means of transportation can take business from air cargo, and I think that is a consideration that has to be made. I think there has been a lot more shipping activity as well, and a lot of the cargo is being brought in by ship rather than being flown in by aircraft.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Is it not true that this appreciable decline could be traced back to the actions of Government, I think in 1985, when the customs duty was re-evaluated with regard to freight cargo coming in by air?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I believe that probably for the first six months that did affect the importation of cargo by air. After that many customers, who had transferred to shipping, went back to bringing in perishable foodstuffs by air again. So it did have an effect for a short period of time. However, there was also a cargo operation with a DC-6 aircraft which was discontinued because that was found to be uneconomical in view of the one way traffic, the one way cargo that we have, with everything being flown in and nothing going out. So that also had an effect on the overall total revenue for cargo.

MR. PRESIDENT: Shall we move to Question 96? The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR WEST BAY TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO. 96: Can the Honourable Member say how many Caymanian teachers resigned from the civil service in the years 1980 to 1987?

ANSWER: During the period 1980 to 1987, 23 Caymanian teachers resigned from the civil service. Of these officers, 14 are Caymanian by birth and nine acquired Caymanian status.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Can the Honourable Member say, out of the number of Caymanians, how many had entered the service within the last three years?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I am not quite sure of what the Member is asking. Could he clarify it for me?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Well, Mr. President, if you have 14 born Caymanians, what I am asking is how many out of that 14 joined the service in, say, 1984-1987?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: The question, Mr. President, is difficult to answer because the period of the answer covers seven years. Although I have the names of the teachers, it is difficult for me to recall when particular teachers entered the service. Some, I can see, entered prior to 1983, but I am unable to give the detailed answer. If the Member wishes to have it, I can undertake to provide it in writing. It has to be researched.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Could the Honourable Member give their period of total service? Is that possible?

MR. PRESIDENT: Is this the whole category referred to, or only those in your supplementary?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Well, I would like to know about them all, but particularly the Caymanian teachers.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: The files of the 14 teachers, Mr. President, would have to be researched. I do not have that information before me.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I am wondering whether I could have the answer in writing to the last two supplementary questions?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: I think in the first case I offered, and in the second case, I am happy to do it.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, may the Honourable Member invite the Honourable Member for Education to answer this because he probably has the information.

MR. PRESIDENT: No, I am sorry, this is a matter for the First Official Member as head of the civil service, and it is actually in a public document.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I do not want to argue with you, but I think under Standing Orders, a Member can get the help of another Member when he does not have the information and it overlaps, as it certainly does in this case.

MR. PRESIDENT: That, I think, is up the First Official Member. He has undertaken to reply in writing, I do think we should leave it there. It is his business.

Next question, number 97 please, the Elected Member for East End.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NO. 97: Will the Honourable Member say what steps, if any, have been taken to remove the barricades which were erected around light poles on the Spotts - Bodden Town Road by Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd.?

ANSWER: Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd. was advised by the Central Planning Authority to submit proposals for alternative barricades to be erected. These plans were submitted in October of 1987 and will be considered by the Central Planning Authority at its next meeting on 15th November, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, I wonder if the Honourable Member could give this Honourable House an undertaking to monitor what takes place on this very important matter.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, I certainly will.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, can the Honourable Member say why it has taken so long to get action? This matter was first brought to the House, I think, over a year ago.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, I think the matter was passed to Legal, and then it went back to Planning before Caribbean Utilities could be advised of what was required by the Central Planning Authority. These things do take time.

MR. PRESIDENT: Perhaps we should pass to the next question, number 98.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNICATIONS WORKS AND DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION

NO. 98: Will the Honourable Member say why such a large portion of the much needed parking space in George Town by the old market has been taken for a flower bed?

ANSWER: Planning Control stipulated that the land area adjacent to the old market be heavily landscaped rather than total carparks.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Does the Honourable Member agree that this could have been done by using less of an area?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, originally the Planning Officer, in 1983 when the Member was in charge of the portfolio for Planning, recommended that the entire area be landscaped, and it was only when it came back and discussion took place between the architect and Planning that it was decided to only use a portion of the parking lot. So they landscaped a portion and they have seven parking spaces available.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Mr. President, I am aware of the recommendation which the Honourable Member is speaking of. I am certain he is also aware of the heavy problem we are faced with regarding parking. My supplementary is, are we going to defeat the purpose of a transportation exercise which is now in progress to go along with such a recommendation from the Planning Department?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I think the Member is referring to the recommendation that the ... (PAUSE)... Mr. President, I think I am going to have to give a written reply to that question, Sir. I do not have it here and I cannot get the information.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: That is all right, Mr. President. Acceptable.

MR. PRESIDENT: Supplementaries?

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: Mr. President, I wonder if the Honourable Member responsible could advise whether or not, in addition to the flower bed which has been placed near the new craft market, it is Government's intention to landscape other areas in town similar to this?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I am not aware of any other areas, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think that concludes Questions, so we move to Item 3 on the Order Paper, Government Business. The resumption of the debate on the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS
BILLS

THE APPROPRIATION (1988) BILL, 1987

SECOND READING DEBATE

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that a Bill entitled the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987 be given a Second Reading. The Motion is accordingly open for debate.

The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I would like to congratulate the Honourable First Official Member on yet another well constructed and ably delivered Budget Address.

With sincere pleasantries having been exchanged, Mr. President, I have to crave your indulgence as this is your first Budget Address as President of this Assembly (and it might well be my last as I have to face the ultimate test of the electorate who I am privileged to represent before the next Budget Address) to differ with what I have done in the past in delivering long and detailed Budget Addresses and make this one as short and as sweet as possible.

Government has once again proposed a balanced Budget with a cautious approach as dictated by the present world economic situation. I suppose they should be complimented for resisting the temptation of producing an electioneering budget which would have allowed much pork barrelling and which probably would have taken us into deficit financing. However, I think they have done the right thing and have tabled a realistic Budget taking into consideration, on a priority basis, the needs of the country.

The financial sector is still growing, despite the doom and darkness predicted by some people and the walkout on the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty. Even in the face of growing world economic problems, the assets which grew by 15.5 per cent in 1986 to US$202 billion have to be a positive sign to all - even to the most ardent detractors of Government and its economic policies, and they must now concede that those economic policies are sound ones. Further, the importance of this sector is clearly defined by the fact that 10 per cent of the working population is employed in the banking and trust industry.

The tourism sector of the economy is still growing. Ten per cent a year is a fair growth. However, Mr. President, I must be consistent and tell you and the Honourable Member responsible that I will not be supporting the $1.2 million subsidy to Cayman Airways for reasons which I have expressed in great detail in previous Budget debates.

Mr. President, information is always a growing important and key element in making decisions on any sound, scientific basis. Although in making these decisions one could always desire more information before formulating a policy, they have to be taken at times with the only available information. It is therefore very important that the private sector provide Government with the statistics they need to formulate proper, suitable and effective programmes for this country. The Chamber of Commerce advocating otherwise is not, in my opinion, conducive nor does it serve the purposes of good government.

Nearly all land sales' records have been broken in one form or another during the last year. However, I am not absolutely sure that Government is getting all that it deserves from the 7.5 per cent land transfer tax, and I am of the opinion, Sir, that this needs to be tightened in order to ensure that Government gets the total amount due on the 7.5 per cent transfer tax.

Mr. President, it is indeed good music to my ears to hear that Government is giving consideration to some form of health insurance plan which can properly fund the cost of health care in this country. The Health Department desperately needs to be established as a publicly owned corporation and run by a board of trustees with adequate and proper health care policies if this insurance plan is to be effective. There is much that needs to be done to improve quantity, quality, availability and accessibility of health care to the people of this country.

Education has come a long way in this country, and is in good shape. But, somehow, somewhere, we need to reintroduce into the system a work ethic. The value of a job well done has to be taught to the school children.

Social Services, on the other hand, has some improving to do, as some of the provisions of this Budget allows. I am disappointed that the Bill for the social security scheme is not before this meeting of the House. This is probably because of the unwarranted opposition from certain minority sectors of the community. However, it is interesting to note from a recent letter sent out by the Management Council of the Civil Service Association, that it advocated that as independent minded Caymanians they can provide for themselves and do not therefore need a pension plan. That, if taken literally, could alleviate a great concern of mine and others in this Honourable House as to the source of the funding for the Government Pension Scheme if, in fact, the Management Council is advocating that we do not need to provide one, and they can save for their later years in life. However, Mr. President, I still hope to see the Social Security Bill in the first meeting of the 1988 session.

Mr. President, the Farmers' Market was built at a cost of $228,000; a high cost for such a small building - approximately $130 dollars per square foot. However, the hard, cool facts, Mr. President, are that nothing is going to happen to improve the quantity or the quality of agriculture in this country until Government decides to tariff, in some way, those products which can be adequately produced by the local market.

The administration of labour in the Cayman Islands, I believe, will be greatly enhanced by the Labour Bill which is being presented at this meeting.

Revenue for 1988 is projected to be $71 million, or a nine per cent growth. That might seem to some people to be modest, but the greater percentage of countries in the world today are in fact recording negative growth annually. So we can feel somewhat satisfied in a nine per cent growth.

Recurrent expenditure, $62.4 million. Statutory: $9.8 million. Capital: a modest $16 million. The major capital projects being a community college, a purpose built computer building, needed extensions to the prison and juvenile rehabilitation centre are all worthy and necessary projects which I can justifiably support.

Of course, I support the changes in the Customs Law to allow easier administration and the small increase in revenue.

Mr. President, the public debt does not alarm me as it does some fellow Members, because in my opinion the vital statistic is not the total debt as a percentage of the annual recurrent revenue, but the cost to service that debt annually as a percentage of the corresponding revenue for that year. But, Sir, I do accept the Honourable First Official Member's caution and recommendation and agree wholeheartedly with him that to proceed with self liquidating loans is most prudent.

Mr. President, I support the $1.1 million salary increase to the Civil Service, but sincerely hope that the present review, although entitled "Salary Review", will encompass efficiency, effectiveness, organisation and management, and resource utilisation as well as the dollar and cents section of the salary. And I intend to move a motion in Finance Committee to move the salary of parliamentarians from the lower echelons of the budget to top management level.

Mr. President, it is said he who has the wheel determines the direction. He who now holds the wheel has set a good course in the 1988 budget. Let us, as stewards of Government, not fiddle with the weather reports to cause confusion over the direction.

I support the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I notice from Hansard of last year's debate on the Budget that there was a certain reluctance to speak, and I think that my predecessor mentioned fifteen seconds once or twice as being a decent interval. I propose to allow a great deal of flexibility, but I do think we must be reasonable about this. How about half a minute?

I imagine the Honourable First Official Member is not hoping to be saved by the bell. I do not want to conduct an auction, but I shall shortly have to invite the mover if he wishes to exercise his right to reply.

Well, as always, the Chair is in the hands of the House. I invite the mover if he wishes to exercise his right of reply. Saved by the bell. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I guarantee that you will not have a single pause awaiting speakers when I have finished. They will be scrambling and tearing down the microphones to reply because they have a lot to answer for. That answer, I imagine, will come tomorrow when I have exhausted my four hours, and if my request for an extension is denied by the House.

The past three years, which resulted in the Budget before the House, have been years of disaster as far as these Islands are concerned. The Member who spoke from North Side applauded the economic policies of the present administration, but what were they?

There was a policy of heavy tax increases in every of the three years completed. It continued into this year to a lesser degree when only a quarter of a million dollars of new taxes will be put in. We have seen tax increases that have produced roughly $8 million of new revenue. These tax increases all have been on local items and this has had a disastrous effect on the economy of these Islands, particularly in small businesses and the little man on the street.

We heard this morning, admitted by the Government itself, that they imposed a tax on air freight brought into this country which hurt not only Cayman Airways (the Honourable Member admitted it hurt Cayman Airways), but I maintain it also hurt businesses, particularly those in Cayman Brac. So can a policy like that, even if it is termed the economic policy of the Government, be any good?

We see from the estimates before us and from the estimates of the previous years, what this Government's economic policy is. I am saying this because the first two or three pages of the Budget Address seem to justify the pattern of this Government's economic policy, or at any rate, seemed to lay the blame for what has happened here on the world economy.

We have in this year's Budget, as we have had in the other three budgets, too much capital spending using borrowed funds. I will admit that this year the Budget does provide an amount of $8 million to come from loans. We have seen another dangerous economic action of the Government in order to produce what they call a balanced Budget in this year, and in the past years, and that was to delay vital capital works.

We see in the Budget this year provision for major capital works that should have been started in January of 1985, and not in 1988, because the policy of the Government has been, over the three years, not to spend money on capital works. This is a mistake. You do not pass the gas station without putting in the oil the car needs, because that action would be more costly in the long run.

The capital works programme which we are hearing about now with regard to the installation of the desalination plant - why was it not done in 1985, or 1986? The sewerage scheme - why did Hadsphallic not start in 1985 or 1986? The post office which is to be started in 1988 - why was it not started in 1985? These have simply been delayed so that those unaware of the true facts would not realise that the Government's action of not tackling these major vital projects which the country needed would result in the presentation of what appeared to be a balanced Budget in each year. I say this, Sir, because a good foundation had been laid for those three major projects. They should have been given priority when the Budget was presented to us immediately after the November 1984 election.

Government failed this country by giving a three year delay, which we heard during this session already, about the escalating cost. And when I say that the foundation had been laid for these three major projects, which are now the subject of this Budget, I would like to explain that, with regard to the water project, the previous administration had passed the necessary legislation and had established in Government a new department, or a new arm and entity called the Water Authority.

This Authority had done a lot of preliminary work. The reservoir had been put in in Lower Valley. The reservoir had been established in East End - the work was completed in May of 1985, which here again showed the reluctance of the Government to complete a project, because that project had been scheduled for completion in December of 1984. Other preliminary investigations had been done, but no concrete work was started for three years until the Government finally decided to hand out a contract for a desalination plant in George Town.

The second major project was the sewerage, and here again the foundation had been laid, the legislation was in place and the Water Authority charged with the responsibility. The land, which was a big item of the cost, had been purchased for cash at a reasonable price from George Seymour. Of course, the opponents of the Government made such political hay of that very responsible purchase that they were ashamed to start the sewerage works on it immediately. They had to wait for that to die down, so that was one of the causes for the delay in the sewerage system. Nevertheless, the foundation was laid, certain technical aspects of the scheme had been gone into, surveys had been done, preliminary sketches had been drawn and the Island expected that at least construction for the hotels on the West Bay beach would have started in 1985. But no, the Government had to delay it, and I think the actual laying of the pipes started sometime about a year ago.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Would that be a convenient moment to pause?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Certainly, Sir. Of course I have not finished with the sewerage scheme, but it is convenient for me to stop.

MR. PRESIDENT:

In that case we suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

AT 11:13 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:34 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings are resumed. The Appropriation (1988) Bill. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I want to make one final point on the sewerage scheme. Caribbean Development Bank had, prior to 1984, in November indicated that it would provide a certain amount of financing, albeit formal talks had not been completed and the details of the loan had not been worked out. So the Government knew that it would be able to get the financing it needed once it presented the necessary feasibility study and all the other financing documents.

The third major project which should have had priority in 1985 was a new post office. Here again, some ground work had been done. A study had been completed by the Universal Postal Union, or some United Kingdom organisation and they had identified the postal needs over the next twenty years, and presented Government with a very detailed report. The Public Works Department made a very preliminary sketch of a building, more or less to identify the location and the cost and so on. It would have been a small step for Government, if this had been treated as a priority, to work out the details of the costs and seek to have the construction started - if not in 1985 or 1986, then certainly in 1987. But here again a project like this would have meant vast capital spending.

So for three years we saw no capital spending, with the exception of the little things such as roads which had been promised during the campaign. Expensive roads were built that were not necessary, and even if they were necessary they should not have had the priority over certain major roads.

The Budget Address in essence tries to present a cautious approach to financing. It, however, fails miserably because the same Budget actually raises our long term debt to the highest levels in our 155 years of representative government. What is even worse in the Budget, as well as the others in the past, is the rate at which this debt has escalated.

Without wishing to open up this subject, one Member a few days ago tried to downplay the amount of the debt, but the estimate which is before us shows that on the 31st of December 1986 the public debt stood at $14,041,153.47. Everyone knew where it was in 1984, because both political parties made sure of this. In fact I think the Financial Secretary himself even published a Government statement at one time that set out the position of Government.

So although there had been a phenomenal increase in the public debt from November 1984 to December 1986, we see that it is still rising, and in fact the Budget Address tells us that by the end of 1987 the public debt will stand at $17.1 million. Further to this, in addition to the $17.1 million which the Financial Secretary has indicated will be on the books, we are presented here with an estimate of loans during 1988. Those loans will be in excess of $8 million. So if one adds the $17.1 million to the amount we will borrow in 1988, one will easily see that by November 1988 the public debt will be over $25 million; less of course any money that is repaid during 1988, and less, of course, any money which we may not draw down from the expected loans.

With the many big capital projects on hand this year it is my expectation that we may have supplementary requests during 1988 for loans, in addition to the $8 million in the Estimates (before the House today) which we have been warned about. So there is a strong possibility that the public debt will actually be $25 million by the end of 1988. Even if we use the figure which the Honourable First Elected Member of Council worked out for us, that is having had a public debt three years ago of some $9 to $11 million (and I do not know where he got those figures), we would see that the debt has more than doubled. In my own figures, by the end of 1988 the debt will have actually more than tripled. So this has been a disastrous term for the public at large, because really they are the ones who will be taxed in the future to replay all of these monies.

We have been told what a wonderful Budget we had in 1987 and what we will have in 1988. We have been told, in this Budget, that we may even have a surplus at the end of 1987. What I would like the public to understand is that even if the surplus materialises, it would not have been there had the Government not borrowed more than double the amount they expect the surplus to be. So there would not have been any surplus in the Treasury if in 1987 we did not borrow the $8 million. What makes it even worse is that we hear talk about transferring some of this money to our reserves. But if one examines the Budget one will see that they are bleeding the Currency Board dry to get this cash, which they would like to pretend they have earned, to put it into our reserves, or into the new fangled name they attach to it in these computerised estimates.

Now I am familiar with the Currency Law and I know the Law compels the Government to keep a certain amount of cash in the Currency Board. Once that amount of cash, or assets, exceeds the requirements of the Law, Government is then free to transfer any surplus into revenue. But this Government has not merely looked on this exercise the way it should as icing on the cake, they depend on it heavily year after year to help them balance their Budget, instead of telling the Currency Board that it has more cash which it should try to invest so that it can be in a much stronger position in the difficult years that may lie ahead. So they have used the funds from the Currency Board. Although permitted to do so by law, it is morally wrong to interfere with the Currency Board's assets or surplus cash in this way.

It is expected that the year 1988 will end with a surplus balance of $146,422. But this balance of nearly $150,000 is small in comparison to our total Budget which is in the $80 million range. Here again I would like the public to understand that we could not estimate $146,000 surplus if we did not transfer 10 times that amount from the Currency Board. We could not expect any surplus at all if we did not expect to borrow $8 million. This transfer to reserves and this estimated surplus is purely cosmetic. It is just an arrangement to make it look good. Money should be put in reserves from cash left over after all the bills have been paid, because it is foolish to put money in reserves and earn six per cent when you may be paying 12 per cent on other monies that are on loan. But it does make the Government appear to be in good state, and is a bookkeeping trick which can fool the unwary. With the advent of computerised accounts, it does enhance the overall appearance.

We are in serious problems with the loans. Some Members believe that because according to the Financial Secretary it will only take something like five per cent, maybe, of our recurrent revenue to service the debt, that we are in a good state. And perhaps, as some countries go, we could appear to be in a good position because I think it is accepted that a country could spend up to 10 per cent of its recurrent revenue to service its debt and still stay afloat. However, do we want to work ourselves into that position? Whether we want to or not, we have long been doing it in a rapid fashion since 1984. It is now taking almost double, it might even be more than double, the percentage of our revenue to service our debt than it took three years ago.

I recall in this House a very solemn warning given by the ex-Financial Secretary when in 1976 our public debt had reached the state where it was taking nearly 11 per cent of the revenue to service the debt. And he warned that we were getting into trouble. Fortunately Government was able to reverse this trend and bring the servicing cost down to a mere three per cent. But the present administration has let this get out of hand again, and I am not surprised because the two Honourable Members who now lead the Government were the two Members who led it when the debt had risen some years ago to almost unmanageable proportions. So the warning from the Financial Secretary about the incurrance of debt in our present world conditions is well received by me, and I do trust that those two Honourable Members will hear a little of it, as they do not appear to hear any other warnings.

It is amazing how the Member who was tongue tied at the start of this debate now cannot keep his mouth shut. (LAUGHTER) But this, Sir, is what I promised you and I would not be surprised if he jumps up before I am through. But it will not alarm me, Sir, I will give way if he wants. I am in no hurry today, my Rotary meeting has been postponed until next week.

To continue to look at this Budget which, to my mind includes the performance of different sources of revenue, we see that the income, the revenue from the tax on land sales, has been exceptionally high. I will challenge the Government today to tell us of one single land sale that has resulted from any direct action by them, because the land sales which we now see resulted from work done prior to 1984. If they can single out one super land sale which their direct action has brought about, I will be happy to hear it. And this is the consensus of the business world.

We know that in 1987 Government's revenue has been affected by the new hotels, and we are told about the number of beds that are being filled. Of course, the public knows that the major hotels were not the result of direct action from this Government because the Hyatt project was started long before 1984 and, in fact, the club house for the golf course had been opened before November of 1984. The same with the other major hotel, Treasure Island Resort. The old Paradise Manor had gone into liquidation. Meetings had been held with the parties concerned for the takeover and for the construction of the hotel. So they just came along at the right time and barely managed to keep up with the flow of the tide, but no action of theirs precipitated any major financial investment.

I hate to leave this first page of the estimates, and will deal with only one other matter in showing that this is not as wonderful as it looks.

We have in the estimates $975,000 for work on the new Fire Service building. This too is the result of delayed action on the part of the Government because they inherited, in November 1984, the most beautiful and well equipped terminal building in the entire Caribbean; one that is much better than many in the United States, and the only major part of that project to be completed was the Fire Service building. But instead of moving on to the construction of the Fire Service building they went to elaborate expense to re-christen the already baptized terminal building, and this conversion - I do not know whether it was to Catholicism or what, but it was to some new religion that the building was baptized a second time, and a new plaque appeared in devout praise of a Member of the present administration. But the real work that needed to be done lay in fallow for three years, and now we see coming up close on the eve of the next election that we are going to have a Fire Service building.

We have seen that these delays have resulted in escalated costs. This was pointed out clearly. I do not want to reopen the debate, but it was pointed out clearly by the motion which we dealt with for the desalination plant.

We expect to receive in revenue during 1988 the sum of $70 million, almost $71 million, plus loans of $8 million. This is optimistic, but I believe it may be reached because the Cayman economy seems to have a resilience that makes it function despite the actions of Government. Other industrialised economies seem to function because of the action of Government. Fortunately, with our uniqueness, ours seems to function despite the actions of Government. This again is where I believe the biggest fault lies with Government. There are some of them who do not understand what makes the economy function, and if they are offered advice, they do not seem to take it.

Just as one example, we heard this morning the Honourable Member for Tourism admit that the revenue of Cayman Airways, and therefore the whole Island economy at large, was affected by Government's action in 1985 with the introduction of a tax on the 75 per cent of air freight which no one had previously paid. He was told that would happen. If you search the Hansard you will see that I made that point quite vividly in the debate when I spoke against the motion that would have imposed that tax. But they did not listen, so now they suffer.

The same thing has happened with the introduction of all the new taxes. You do not increase the Island's economy by repressive taxes because what happens is that the more money Government takes out of circulation by imposing taxes, the more the economy is deflated. So if they lower the tax, or let it remain, more money will be in circulation by the private sector, where the money can be used to increase wages, to erect buildings, and to enlarge businesses. And so what we have here today is the result of a Government not understanding the basic philosophy of what makes an economy run.

In the Budget Address, we were told that a sum of money is included for a salary review for the civil service, and I say, thank God for that because those poor fellows have had nothing since November 1984. A satisfied civil service is very important. If one studies the history of economies that get in trouble, one will know that an agitated civil service, although they are not supposed to be, normally plays a major role. In this country it is much more so because Government is the single largest employer and they must set high standards for the civil servants and they must pay them well if they expect to get good results. And so I support this increase for the civil service.

Before I get too far into my speech, I would like at this time to take just a quick glance at the capital expenditure.

We had, during this year, an alarming situation in Cayman Brac which prompted a motion in the House, which prompted the appointment of a committee to make recommendations. There were two key factors which have been identified - two key problems with Cayman Brac. They have been identified, but they have not been made public. One of them was that over the last three years Government relegated Cayman Brac as they did Bodden Town and East End by spending only what they could not get out of doing. And so Cayman Brac, having lost the oil transfer, and having lost the large sums of money that had been spent during the eight years from 1976 to 1984, when Cayman Brac in some of those years received 20 per cent of the capital Budget, they found themselves with no employment. This is not to say that Government did not employ people in Cayman Brac, but not to the scale which had given them the comfortable position they enjoyed under the previous administration.

The second identifiable reason for Cayman Brac's position was the airlines. The useful, if not comfortable, Trilander, was taken away from them and they were given an aircraft called the Shorts which was short in so many ways that it has made the airline industry look ridiculous. Cayman Brac suffered and is suffering because the Shorts is not a dependable aircraft. I have been to Cayman Brac a few times over the last three years and every time I go I am worried about whether I will be back. The last time I was fortunate; I was able to travel on the jet because the Shorts was sitting here awaiting a part from half way across the world.

The Cayman Brackers are unhappy. They are very wise people and do not always voice their unhappiness because they are afraid of the repercussions, and afraid of being victimised, and so they bear their grudges silently. But they are unhappy. The Shorts cannot take any freight because it has no cargo door of any size. Cayman Brac depends on air freight and so the position is terrible indeed. This is why the summary of capital expenditure bears a direct relationship to the pitiful condition of Cayman Brac.

If one looks at this summary of capital expenditure, one will see at a glance that over the entire life of this administration, including 1988, one half or more of all capital expenditure came from borrowed monies. In 1988 we will use over $7 million from local funds, but we will borrow over $8 million. In 1987 we had a more serious position where the capital expenditure from local funds was over $6 million and borrowed funds was over $7 million.

In 1986 we had the same problem. The actual expenditure from local funds was $4 million and the loan funds was $3 million. The little better position due was just a fall over, an overrun from the past administration. So we really have a sorry sight here, and I trust the Members will understand what I am saying, although I know there is no reply.

In dealing with capital projects, I would like to mention that it is disgusting that the Government has proven to be so political in its capital works throughout the districts of these Islands. I refer especially to Bodden Town and East End, where the Government for three, or four years because they are not going to spend anything next year either, for four years has spent no money on any capital works in those districts. This is a sad indictment when people who are elected, who have received the trust of the people of these Islands, let politics cloud their expenditure of Government funds.

In 1988 they will spend in Bodden Town the sum of $5,000 to complete a channel at Newlands, simply because the work in that area was started by the previous administration and could not very well be put off. There have been so many requests, so much agitation for it. In some instances $5,000 is a lot of money, but when you are considering the capital expenditure for a district which was the first capital of the Islands, which is still the political capital of the Islands and perhaps one day will again be the administrative capital of the Islands, $5,000 is not a lot of money.

I see in the estimates that the Government is going to spend $5,000 to construct a wooden deck to the rear of the Attorney-General's house. So the $5,000 being spent there is equal to the rear deck of the Attorney-General's House. Now I know the house is really Government's, and perhaps the Attorney General needs to sun his buns the same as everybody else. I find no fault with it - I am just giving a comparison on the figures. And if you think $5,000 for Bodden Town for the four years (I am going to deal with the other three) is a lot of money, just look and you will see that they are going to spend $20,250 to put in a toilet block and a garden shed at Government House. I do not know of the sanitary needs of the Governor, or the people who visit Government House, and I believe they probably need this $20,000 for the toilet block. But they are actually spending more than four times as much for a toilet block and a garden shed - I do not know what that is - at Government House, than they are spending for the entire district of Bodden Town which I think is the third largest district.

There is one item for East End. They are going to build a ramp for $20,000 so we have not been left out altogether, but it is a sad indictment against the men who run the Government that they would take politics and do this with the Government's revenue.

MR. PRESIDENT: If I may intervene for one moment, you are not suggesting that politics enter into the Government House lavatories!

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, you know that thought occurred me, but I did not know how to express it the way you have.

MR. PRESIDENT: Perhaps a confusion between the public interest and the public convenience?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Our experience in the previous three years with capital expenditure has been no better. I understand in 1987 they are putting a hard court in Bodden Town, but I do not think this was what was really needed at the Civic Centre. Members know the Civic Centre was one big major project - the land had been bought, a police station had been built, a Civic Centre had been completed in 1984, and there was one other little bit of work that would have finished that job there, and that was to provide a playing field in the yard behind the Civic Centre. The land is there for it. Government owns about 4.25 acres or 3.25 acres, something like that, and all that was necessary was to fill it. And although a request has been made to Government over the three years, they cannot find it in their hearts to do this job, and this is sad.

There is no lack of capital works in George Town and West Bay where all of the Members of Executive Council are from, but there is a paucity in the other districts. They have been a little kinder to North Side and I am thankful for that, but they have taken us back 20 years because at that time, and prior to that, there was a philosophy that the Cayman Islands ended in Crewe Road, and that anything east or southeast of Crewe Road like Cayman Brac and Little Cayman did not exist. And it is time, if these Members are going to play international statesman, that they get these petty ideas out of their heads.

Now it is true that during the previous three years there was a major expenditure on the Bodden Town - George Town Road. I must say that I congratulate the Member and the Public Works Department because they did a fine job. There are some people who may not agree, but I believe that since that road has been worked on we have not had any really serious accidents that could be attributed to the road itself - although there always will be accidents. There has been a decided improvement in that road. However that is not a plan of the present Government. It did not appear in the estimates. It was simply a matter raised in the Finance Committee, and because, I believe, some of them were caught without their advisers (that is the advisers outside of Government which tell them what to do), they somehow or other agreed to it. The Financial Secretary endorsed it and they went along in good collective fashion. That work was completed and we are grateful for it. Of course a major road linking all the districts with the capital cannot really be considered a Bodden Town project.

If I were politically inclined I would deal with the many little projects that were done over the three year. Projects that were done which could have been left undone causing no great harm. But I will have to save something for a later date.

MR. PRESIDENT: Perhaps then, we might suspend for lunch if that suits?

Proceedings are suspended until a quarter past two.

AT 12:41 THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:16 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings of the House are resumed. The Appropriation (1988) Bill. Debate on the Second Reading. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, in concluding the part of my speech which dealt with the lack of capital works in Bodden Town and East End, I must congratulate the Government for including the $5,000 for the work in Newlands, and I hope that the money will be spent.

We have at the present time a major need for channel work on the south side of the Island. I know that the Port Authority has undertaken some work to mark and light some of the channels, and we appreciate this. However, in Bodden Town there is at this time a need for the clearance of a channel which would allow the boats to get in and out of the reef. The channel that should be cleared is the one we know as Big Channel, or Island Channel. This channel is perhaps the best one in the Bodden Town area, and it is my understanding that there are many shoals and rock projections that could be removed easily. Some clearance has been done on some of these shoals in the past, but these coral rocks seem to grow pretty fast and I would trust that, if this work can be done, the Government would see it as a priority during the forthcoming year.

Also, I would just like to mention that I am happy that the Ground Transportation Study will include some road works for our district. Here again, this is something that has been talked about for some time. There are several lines of thought on it - some people believe we should have a road that will bypass Bodden Town so as to take some of the traffic around the back of the town. There are others who believe we should have a road leading from the main road through to the north side of the Island. However, whichever way the work is done initially, it will be a great improvement to what now exists. Certainly it will open up the interior of the Island for development and agriculture, and also for more effective control of mosquitoes.

The need for these roads has existed for some time, and the need has been discussed on more than one occasion. I realise that the expenditure will be major. We are not looking at a little job to fill a few potholes so as to get a few votes for election. We are not looking at this type of work at all. We are looking at a major undertaking which costs money and which should result, in the years to come, in major developments and profitability to Government and to the land owners. So I am happy that the Ground Transportation Study has at least recognised the need for a major road in that area. Naturally we will have to wait and see what can be done with the funding which can be acquired, and wait and see what items will be given priority.

I think it is fitting at this time that I should turn my thoughts to some of the statements made in the Budget Address, which is a part of the motion before the House.

The Honourable First Official Member mentioned the part played by the banks, trust companies and insurance companies in providing employment, and he is to be commended for his comments because we do depend on employment. According to page 7, at the end of 1986 the total number of employees had risen to 967, with 758 of them being Caymanians, that is nearly 79 per cent. And of the increase of 77, 74 were Caymanians. This is very heartening news, but I believe more could be done to put Caymanians in management positions in some of these banks.

I do not like to call names, but the oldest established commercial bank in the Islands, which has been with us a long time, still seems very far from appointing a Caymanian manager. Over the years they have employed men like the Honourable First Elected Member of Council and others who have gone on to distinguish themselves in areas with more responsibility than that of bank managers, and certainly with more demanding work. Yet we find that none of these have been selected as permanent managers. I do not think there is any desire on the part of the owners of the bank to entrust these sensitive jobs to Caymanians. But I believe there are Caymanians who are capable of handling these jobs if given the opportunity.

The same thing can be said of other commercial banks. We have seen frustrated young men reaching plateaus from which they will never be promoted. They leave in frustration and go on to other jobs and continue to distinguish themselves. So while we appreciate what the banks have done in employing tellers and sweepers and messengers, we trust that they will have the confidence in us in the future to let us get some people in that other 20 per cent of employment where the real money is, where the real control is and where the real policy making decisions are made. It will not happen overnight. The local people will have to equip themselves for the job, they will have to take the banking exams, and will have to apply themselves diligently. But the material is here, and if given the opportunity, some of these banks in the future may be happy that they employed local staff and no longer have to fight with the Protection Board to get work permits, and no longer have to go through the tedious job of making the applications. I know I will hear that they have this supervisor and that one, and I know that is true, but I believe that up until now, no serious effort has been made to train and educate anyone for top management posts, although they have done some training in certain areas, and perhaps there have been one or two who did reach management or assistant management jobs.

I mentioned the Currency Board earlier and how the Government has transferred some of its monies into revenue. I notice in the Budget Address that the Currency Board will now remit its full line of regular circulating coins, 25 cents, 10 cents, 5 cent and 1 cent pieces. The speech did not elaborate on the reason, and I trust that if the Honourable Member replies to any of the comments made that he will let us know the reason for the remit. Up until that time, I can only assume that it is because the Currency Board has a lot of money and somebody is looking for work.

The recommendation has been made to do a new set of coins which will be profitable to the Mints, at least, that put them out. I see nothing wrong with the set of coins we have. I have heard no complaints about the coins. It is true that if they wanted to do something they could correct the mistake made on the $25 note where Cayman Brac is situated to the west of Little Cayman. But as so few people know there is an error in these maps, that too could be left alone. What I would like to hear is what advantage it is to the Cayman Islands to have their coins reminted, and whether that advantage will be greater to us than the people we employ to mint, circulate and sell them, and which people are really going to profit.

I am alarmed at the investments of the Government, particularly the heavy investments in the U.S. dollar. On the 31st of July 1987, fixed deposits amounted to $1.8 million, with investments in United States Treasury Bonds totalling CI$10.1 million. Revaluation of these investments for 30th June resulted in a net depreciation of CI$432,333. But, as a comparison, last year, we had a net appreciation of $454,536. The point I am making here is that I believe we now have, despite the advice of the experts, too much money in one type of bond. I believe we have too much money in one type of currency and I believe that we would be safer with a much wider diversification of funds. Of course, I know the U.S. dollar will strengthen, but it is something that needs watching all the time.

It is good to know that the Currency Board, for the second year in a row, has maintained the General Reserve which it needs, and the result of that has been good for the Government in that in 1986 the operating surplus of $1,489,591 was in its entirety transferred to the Government's General Revenue, and this made it the largest transfer ever made. The Government seems worried that next time they may not be able to get as many gallons of milk from that good old cow.

I am happy that the Budget Address recognised the record of Mr. Woodward L. Terry, who has resumed the full time duty in August 1987 as Registrar General, having completed his LLB degree and qualified as an attorney at law. I remember it was very difficult to get the powers that be to take this man into the service some years ago. It was very difficult. Pressure had to be asserted to get them to take him in. It just shows that sometimes we can improve the service by doing what we know is right.

Leading on, I must say that I am happy with the entire results of the Law School and would like to congratulate the other four people who also qualified along with Mr. Terry. I feel it is ridiculous for the Government at this time to be talking about a change in the entrance requirements to the Law School.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Excuse me one minute, I am quite prepared to give great latitude in this debate, it is an important annual debate, but I do think that matter was covered the other day fairly thoroughly.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Very well, I will not pursue it, Sir, but I think the Government has asked, in the Budget, to spend a lot of money on the Law School and we want to know that the money is well spent and that the people get the benefit they should. The change, I think, is going to hurt. I will leave it at that, but I am not finished with that matter yet, although I have finished for today.

We have been told in the Budget Address that tourism is looking up, and here again I must criticise the Government for not doing anything over the last three years to qualify more Caymanians for the top jobs in tourism. And for the mistake which I think they have made in bringing in hotel workers from Ireland when the Government knew full well that the new hotels which had been approved would need staff for them.

Also, the Government bewails the fact that Eastern Airlines has been the biggest competitor for Cayman Airways, and I have no sympathy for the Government because they made a mistake and now they must pay for it. Eastern Airlines commenced a daily service to Grand Cayman from Miami in January of 1987. That is a statement of fact from the Budget Address. But we may ask, why did Government bring Eastern Airlines into Grand Cayman when they could have sent them into Cayman Brac instead. Cayman Brac needed the boost for tourism more than we did here? I am familiar with the agreement whereby the American carriers have reciprocal rights on our routes, but it is my understanding that the Department of Aviation could have recommended that Eastern fly into Cayman Brac rather than into Grand Cayman, and Cayman Airways would not have lost so much traffic to Eastern.

Another statement of fact is that Northwest Airlines added a direct flight from Memphis, Tennessee. It is also my understanding that Northwest Airlines has cut out their early morning flight from Grand Cayman to Miami, and if this is true, it means that Cayman Airways is left to handle the traffic. This may be good for the airline, but sometimes this puts some pressure on passengers when there are not enough seats. This incident, as small as it is, will highlight the need, to the Government, of maintaining our own airlines. And that is why I can support the money in the Budget for the subsidy to Cayman Airways. The foreign carriers, whether it be Northwest, Eastern or any other airline, are only interested in the profitability of their flights into Cayman. They can have no other interest, because they have to answer to their shareholders and their directors. This is why I am happy that the Government has subsidised the airline and has put forward a new subsidy for 1988. The most important ingredient (and I have said this a hundred times in this House) in an Island economy is communications. If we do not have a good passenger service out of the Cayman Islands, we can forget balancing the Budget.

The strangest statement in the Budget Address is that the Government will place more emphasis - it reads:

"... more emphasis will be placed on training programmes for hotel workers through the efforts of the Hotel Training School now operated under the Community College, Cayman Islands Hotel Association, the Caribbean Hotel Training Institute and George Brown University in Toronto, Canada."

My question is, why has it not been done over the last three years? Why have they come at the eve of their departure, which is drawing nigh, making a statement that they are going to put emphasis on training workers for the hotel industry? Before the elections all we could hear was that the training schools must be shut down and training programmes done away with, which the Member for Tourism had established. And so today we pay the price of being political rather than being sensible. We find the Irish immigrants coming in and we find the hotels clamouring to bring in waitresses and bar tenders. I find this Government at fault.

The Budget Address paid special attention to Cayman Airways and mentioned it not only under Tourism, but also under Transport Sector. It made a positive statement that Cayman Airways continues to play its important role in providing the country with safe and reliable air transportation. I am happy that the Government, although it is on the eve of their departure, have finally come to their senses and have recognised that Cayman Airways can provide the country with safe and reliable air transportation. Perhaps, with their positive attitude, I can forgive their buying a vintage aircraft, the Shorts, for the Cayman Brac route and forgive them for the sale of the Trilander. I trust that we will see improvements in this area taking into account their new positive attitude which did not exist before.

We were told in the Budget Address that the Company leased an extra aircraft, which I believe was a 737, and had an extensive charter programme which proved to be a success. Needless to say, we were told much earlier on in this very chamber that one of the reasons for leasing the 737 was to find out if it would be more economical than the 727. I hope and pray, to whatever gods there may be, that they will not make the mistake of discarding the 727 and the good equipment which they have, for the low passenger appeal of a 737.

On page 17, again the Government bemoans the fact that on the Miami route, Eastern Airlines has undoubtedly created strong competition which is bound to affect the operating results of our national airline for the period ended 30th June, 1987. One can only question why the Government did not take those words into their negotiating meetings with Eastern and the American Aeronautic people.

Cayman Airways, we are told, has continued to meet its financial obligations. I will not discuss the finances, since I think it is the subject of a motion to come, but only to say in passing that as bad as the finances are, it would have been much worse without the huge subsidy which was granted to them in 1987. I have one criticism. It appears to me from the statement that the airline is about to depend heavily on their charter programme. It is my feeling that the charter programme should simply be the gravy and icing on the cake to give them a little more revenue and a little more utilisation of their existing equipment. The airline should focus on their scheduled flights and endeavour to bring them up to a profitable stage.

The Budget dealt with scholarships. Despite what the Honourable Member may feel, I think things are far from being all right with his department. Up until last night I had one young man who has become very frustrated, complaining to me about his difficulty in getting a scholarship. According to him he has been accepted at a certain university or college, and has been told that, if he can do well the first year and keep his grades up, they will give him the scholarship for the rest of the term, which seems very ridiculous. If he is not good enough to get a scholarship in the first year, how can he be good enough to get it in the second year?

Then we received an answer here in September which alarmed me. If I remember correctly we were told that no free scholarships had been given out this year. The 18 which had been given out (it may have been a different figure, but I think it was 18) up to the end of September had all been loans. So this means that no needy person has been given a scholarship. Nobody has been given a free scholarship. Caymanians as a whole do not want freeness, but we do have amongst the poor some very bright students who not only need free scholarships, but a little bit more. They come from homes which are poor and have difficulty in finding clothing for their backs, food for their tables and books and pencils. Yet we were told that no free scholarships had been given out, and there must have been the need. Of course, I know if the scholarships are given as loans the money can stretch a little further, but my contention is that this Government is not addressing the needs of the poor and it is an indictment against the Honourable Member.

We have had the same in Social Services. We were told about the vote which appeared in the 1987 estimates, that of the $100,000 which formed the expenditure for this year to provide houses for the needy. Roughly $92,000 was left in hand at the end of September. I had been told a couple of weeks before by one of the staff at Social Services that they had identified one needy project in Bodden Town and were prepared to pay for the materials if I could find the free labour. This was fair enough, but what they said was that they had to stretch the little money they had left, and at that time in September, unknown to me, they had $92,000 left out of the $100,000. So the Social Services Department in this instance is really not addressing the needs of the poor? and I hold the Honourable Member responsible. We must find out what is happening. It is his responsibility, he is answerable to the Legislative Assembly, and he had better make notes because I will not be easing him up on this matter.

The Customs section has been strengthened. I am happy to see this. We are told that there are going to be changes in Cayman Brac so there will be more control. We know that Customs, like the Police, are having lots of problems with drugs coming into the Island, and the departments need to be strengthened. The officers need to be trained. I believe the Government as a whole has not done very much over the last three years with the drug problem. It is simply getting worse. Every morning when you turn on the radio, you hear about the number of cases on the court's calendar for that day, and in many instances the majority of the cases are drug related. Many of the burglaries and thefts are simply ancillary crimes to feed the drug habit.

The Government made a mistake in removing the mandatory provisions, the mandatory sentences, that were in the Drugs Law and they are paying the price for it. The Government made a mistake in other areas related to drugs, and they are so sensitive that I do not like to mention them. But they know, they have been told before from this same microphone.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would it be convenient to break here, in your speech?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Yes Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:15 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:37 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I would like to continue the same trend of my address which, in the last moments before the break, were highlighting the unpreparedness of Government to cope with the escalating crime in the Islands.

Some Members of Government believe that I am their biggest problem, and some of them believe that the other Member, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, is also one of their big problems. However, the biggest problem this country now faces is the crime wave which has been with us over the last three years, decidedly marked by the arbitrary dismissal of Commissioner Stowers. Whether he had anything to do with it or not, I do not know, but all the police reports since that time have mentioned the amount of increases in crimes. It is sad to see that the Government now admits defeat. I think they ought to resign.

Page 31 of the Budget Address, in speaking about the prison, states:

"All available resources have to be committed to meeting the immediate demands rather than to the planning and implementation of strategies to address effectively issues related to rehabilitation of offenders."

That, Sir, is the most alarming statement in this 61 page address - that crime has reached such a stage in our country that the Government cannot look at the rehabilitation. What is even more important is the prevention of crime. It has to spend all of its resources in meeting the immediate demands which I take to mean simply the accommodation of the people at Northward. It is a big mistake, in any country, to concentrate on warehousing kids rather than on rehabilitating. It is a big mistake to put more emphasis on your detection rate after crimes have been committed, rather than on the prevention. We know it happened in the United States during the Vietnam war. They spent more money on killing one Vietcong soldier than they did on saving one delinquent boy. From this statement, it would appear that we are reaching this mark. Some time ago I heard some talk from responsible Government people that a minor social matter would have to await the construction of a new hospital.

The prison at Northward, when first opened, accommodated 60 or so persons. Shortly after the elections in November 1984, the population rose to over 100, and I think has remained consistently above the 100 mark. The prison accommodations need to be increased and improved.

The whole matter of dealing with those who come before the courts seems to need streamlining. We have no accommodation for the Magistrate's Court. A few weeks ago I attended one session of the Court and I was really perturbed to see the conditions under which the Magistrate had to work. Nobody seemed to know, up until three minutes before the Court would meet, even where it would be held. Apparently they had a system of pulling straws, and the person to pull the straws had not arrived. People were going up to the Grand Court and then up to the Law Court and, I believe, some were even sent to the Tower Building. Finally it was found out the Court would be held in the Town Hall, where there is no air conditioning and for whatever reason it was found that all the doors were locked. The windows were locked at the bottom and the Magistrate had to request that they open some of them at the top. There were no toilet facilities.

Two juveniles who were before the Court were crowded in a room with maybe a dozen or more adults, and when I enquired why they had put these two juveniles in this little four by four locker room at the Town Hall, I was told that they were arrested the night before and that they could do no better.

It is very difficult for the Magistrate to perform his duties under these conditions. I must say, I was really impressed by his performance and he seemed to be fair enough, but certainly the conditions under which he works must be improved and this is why I have maintained, since November 1984, that the Government has spent too much money and time counting green parrots, catching crocodiles and worrying about sponge coral rather than putting the emphasis where it should be. I believe it is the general attitude of Government that has caused these serious problems to fester and multiply.

We have, within the Legal Department, within the Police Department and within the Prison Service many dedicated officers, but I am not certain that these people are receiving the support of Government. I understand at the present time there are six detectives from Scotland Yard in one office digging up some fifteen year old files, when serious crimes that should have the attention of outside help are not remembered. Government is spending money, but certainly not in the areas that are important.

Some people complain about the police, but in recent trends it seems to me that the Police Department is one of the few things that stands between us and chaos. This is why I stood against an investigation of the Police Force as a whole some time ago, and I believe the officers who are trying to do a good job should be recognised and they should be encouraged.

We have been told in this Budget Address of the heavy load carried by the Legal Department in the matter of legislative drafting. But I believe that most of their work is unnecessary, especially the hundreds of hours which they must have spent on defining where the little school boy may throw his fishing line. And, although I am not anticipating the Bill, we will be dealing with a Bill where a Committee of the House had 37 separate meetings over a three year period, or almost three years.

It reminds me of the story of the man who made a fortune from hot dogs. When he started his business, Oscar Meyer asked one of his young workers, "What are you doing?". He replied, "I am planning." He came back the next morning, and said "What are you doing?". He replied, "I am planning." He came back the third morning, and he said "I am planning." And this man, who made a fortune afterwards, said to him, "Why the hell don't you get to work". I believe this is a problem with the Government. Why do they not get down to the brass tacks? Why do they not go to work? Why do they not stop spending their time putting out propaganda like we have been told here in this Budget Address that in 1986 they issued 500 news releases - two for every working day of the year.

No one can accuse the Government of not being busy. I think the Honourable Members are busy. I think some of them work, perhaps, a little too much and this may in the long run impair their good health. But I question whether 90 per cent of their effort is being directed in areas which would be profitable for the well being of this country.

I welcome one part of the Budget, and that is the part that will provide a much needed rehabilitation facility for juveniles, as well of the creation of much needed caring home and social work positions. It also ensures, if this report is correct, that children will no longer be sent to approved schools in Jamaica.

Some years ago, a previous administration came to the conclusion that it was wrong to send convicted persons to prison in Jamaica. They also came to the conclusion that a rehabilitation facility should be opened here. It is a pity that the juvenile facility had not been built at the same time, but something has to come first. So after three years of dragging their feet on this subject, it is good that at the twilight of their departure they now mention that money will be approved for a rehabilitation facility for juveniles.

I would like to commend the doctors and staff at the hospital for the work which they do. We know they have a very difficult time, and it is simply that the hospital in which they work is an old one, and it is probably today three or four times the size of the original building. Every week one little cubby hole seems to be added to it. It is certainly growing with the times. Perhaps the day will come when the Government will have the funds to establish a new hospital. But up until that time we will have to work with what we have.

I am glad to hear from the Budget Address that the Housing Development Corporation continues to provide mortgage financing for low to middle income Caymanians, and that the assets of that Corporation at the end of June 1987 now stand at $1,249,003. I remember the amount of opposition to this Bill, the Housing Development Corporation Bill, when it was introduced to the Legislative Assembly which, at the time, was meeting in Cayman Brac. But, in the long run those who opposed it, that is some of the Honourable Members of the present Government, now belatedly sing its praises.

It is comforting to know that a start has been made on the Farmers' Market. I understand it is a very fine building, although a few people have questioned the cost. But perhaps, Sir, it is like the toilets at Government House. When they do a thing, they do it in great quantity.

Another alarming section of this Budget Address is that an upsurge in the mosquito number has occurred in 1987, following a year of exceptionally low numbers. This, Sir, has been known to the public without a statement from the Department. Like the crime wave, it seems that the Government was not prepared to deal with the mosquito problem in 1987. Way back in the sixties when the programme for mosquito research and control was introduced, many people were skeptical as to whether we could do anything with the mosquito problem, but over the years, that Unit has shown its worth and we have effectively controlled the mosquitoes. I might say the Mosquito Unit is like Cayman Airways. The day we lose either one of them, we can bid goodbye to tourism. The tourists are not used to mosquitoes and they are not going to come here if we let them get out of hand.

In examining the budget for the Mosquito Research Unit over the three years of the present administration, there is nothing in it at all to impress anyone. It simply looks like a budget for the personal emoluments where you simply add an increment because twelve months have gone by. I think this Department needs a shaking up, and I would suggest that Honourable Members of Executive Council discuss this matter at a departmental level and find out what is necessary for us to keep the mosquitoes under control. Whatever it needs, more equipment, more manpower, more planning or whatever, let this not beat us the way in which crime has. Forget about trying to look good in the public's eye. Forget about the green parrots. Do not underestimate the mosquitoes, because just as crime is the greatest single problem in our country today, so the mosquito, although he is in a back room now, is the greatest single threat to our tourism. I believe that if we let the mosquito get a foothold again, we will find the new generation more immune to insecticides, larvicides and pesticides and we will find the new mosquito man more stubborn than his ancestors. So this is a problem which faces the Government, and we had better find out what is wrong.

I mentioned earlier that the opening up of the land behind Bodden Town would help with mosquito control. They were no idle words because some of the big ponds are situated in that area. A lot of swamp land is in there. Vehicles need access roads to dispense the insecticides and the men need to get in to spray the larvicides or whatever else they use.

Those of us who grew up with the mosquitoes know how troublesome they are, know how effective they are in the days when they killed cattle, making it virtually impossible for people to go outside after dark. And now after two decades of fighting them, we find out that they are fighting back. We must get on top of the problem, even if it means sending back your six Scotland Yard men and getting three entomologists instead.

The Budget places great emphasis on the 28 moorings that have been installed in Grand Cayman, 27 off Cayman Brac and 28 off Little Cayman - 83 moorings and we cannot get one ramp in Bodden Town for the launching of boats. We cannot get one channel cleared. So what is the Government doing anyhow? I would not say that they are trying to perpetuate their own existence, but it certainly makes me wonder.

We are told that during 1987 the Government appointed a Director for Trade and Labour, and they are gearing up for the implementation of new labour legislation. As that Bill will be coming in this sitting, I will not discuss it now, although I have rather copious notes on the subject.

I welcome the money in the estimates for the new post office, and trust that the Government will follow many of the recommendations in the report which they received on the needs for a post office. I see that we will have an adequate supply of post office boxes. I know the report recommended either 10,000 or 20,000 new boxes. What I would like to see, when the new post office is built, is the old post office turned into a museum. I understand there are other plans for a museum, and I understand there are other plans for the old post office.

The ideal spot for a museum is right where the post office is because it is within walking distance of the cruise ship landings. I would not like to see the museum located by the Harquail Theatre or some other out of the way place. I believe the museum can be a revenue earner, but only if like a shop, it is situated in the right locality. We know that if you start a business there are three things you must look at, whether it is a shop or a service station. The three things are locality, locality and locality. So do not let any conservationist, or any historical groups sway your thoughts on this matter. The museum, to earn money for the Government, must be in the old post office. The old post office itself is a museum piece, with its nautical ceiling and its intricate concrete block work of many decades ago. The new post office building will be an asset to Government and perhaps, if it is started next year, the only monument to the previous administration, because all the other works are really a carry over from the good old days.

There is a statement that the present post office building will be used for other Government purposes, and I trust that "other Government purposes" when defined, will mean the museum. And if you are not bold enough to make it known publicly now, at least try to build up your courage so that when the post office is vacated, you can simply move the museum in overnight.

The Government, during the year received complaints about the economy in Cayman Brac, and took some steps to lessen the effects of the slow down which they had created themselves. I will not argue whether the steps taken were good or bad, but I must commend the Government for having taken the steps which it did, and which they believed, even if they were wrong, would help Cayman Brac. They reduced the import duty on certain categories of building materials and basic household appliances to five per cent, but only for a certain class of people: foreign retirees, Caymanians living abroad returning to resettle, and condominium developers. Even if that reduction should encourage one person from each of these three categories to make an investment in Cayman Brac, it would have helped. There are those who argue that relief was given where it was not needed, and that the relief should have been across the board so that the local people in Cayman Brac would benefit. However, I have been taught that a cockroach has no business in a rooster fight so I will not take sides with either one, only to say that this was an instance where Government at least sought, in its own fashion, to correct the problems in Cayman Brac.

Now I notice that much work has been done on roads in George Town, and in fact roads were put in where they were hardly needed. One road which needed attention and which had been identified in a study done under the previous administration has not been touched. This is the entrance to the North Sound Road at the intersection where it joins Shedden Road.

During 1984, Mr. Clarence Flowers agreed with Government that he would move his blocks and that he would give a portion of his land so that a reasonable curve could be put in at this intersection which is so difficult to negotiate, particularly if one is approaching it from the airport side. Some people living in the area were unhappy with the original design and work was delayed. I had hoped that after the November election the Government would have tackled this problem road. I notice, however, that three years later they have done nothing about it. If one wanted to be critical, one could find one road that needed attention for each road that they have actually made or fixed. This is why I am worried when politics not only affects capital expenditure in Bodden Town, but also enters into road programmes in the second capital.

PRAYERS

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of the House are resumed.

Questions. The First Elected Member for Bodden

Town, number 99, please.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 99: Would the Honourable Member state what was other revenue of Cayman Airways Limited in the financial year 1986-1987.

ANSWER: The other revenue of Cayman Airways Limited in the financial year 1986-1987 was US$516,442.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Could the Honourable Member advise the House whether this amount included the sale of the Trilander, the Rolls Royce engine, the apartment building at Prospect and the various and sundry parts of the 748 which were all disposed of in 1987?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

No, Mr. President, the other revenue is accounted for through in-flight sales and ground handling services provided to other carriers, and mail.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Am I to understand correctly that the sales of these assets of Cayman Airways are being carried in a column "ground handling and sales to other airlines"? Am I correct, is that what it is?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

The explanation given to me by the management of Cayman Airways is that other revenue is comprised of in-flight sales which is liquor sales and other items sold on board, the ground handling services provided to other carriers, and revenue derived from mail. This was the explanation given to me by the management.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Further supplementary.

Well, could you advise us what part of the balance sheet contains the information with regard to the sale of these assets?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the balance sheet shows an item 'profit on sale of assets' which is shown under non-operating incoming expenses, and I take it that is accounted for under that heading.

MR. PRESIDENT: Next question, please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 100: Would the Honourable Member state what was the cost in the 1986-1987 financial year of Cayman Airways Limited of Flying Operations, Maintenance, Passenger Service, Aircraft and Traffic Servicing, General and Administrative?

ANSWER: During the 1986-1987 financial year the costs of Cayman Airways Limited were as follows:

Flying Operations	US$9,465,667
Maintenance	3,296,083
Passenger Service	2,921,765
Aircraft and Traffic Servicing	5,647,354
General and Administrative	3,447,822

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Under General and Administrative, this seems to have increased tremendously over the corresponding period of 1985-1986. Could the Honourable Member give any explanation for this large increase?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: A part of that increase is attributable to increase in salaries and other administrative costs, like communications and rentals and items of that nature connected with the administration of the company.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: The Honourable Member said 'increase in salaries'. Is it not a fact that some of the airline personnel have only received minimal raises since 1984, so this should not account for the large increase?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the company has, within its means, given the increase in salaries that it found possible at the time. I am not too sure that they have been minimal increases since 1984. I know that there has been some increase and I am pretty sure that a part of that increase is accounted for by the salaries' portion of the accounts. As I said, the rest of it must be attributable to other administrative cost increases such as rentals and communications costs.

MR. PRESIDENT: I was going to say before you pursue this one, it would be helpful to the House to know what the 1985-86 figure, comparatively for the general expenditure, you are referring to, because we cannot form any idea of what the questioning is about.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well in the 1985-1986 period, the cost for General and Administrative was $2,549,275. For this period it is $3,447,822, or about $888,000 more.

A further supplementary, Mr. President. Maintenance has increased tremendously over this period 1986-1987 from $2,696,548 to $3,296,083, an increase of approximately $600,000 for the year. Could the Honourable Member tell us whether this could be attributed to the numerous breakdowns of the Shorts for yesterday and today also?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Well, whatever the breakdown for the Shorts cost yesterday or today, it certainly would not be included in this. But the increase in maintenance costs that the Member is pointing out is substantial, and this is due to two factors primarily - the normal escalation costs of maintenance, and also the fact that there has been an increase in flying operations. In other words the flight time has increased substantially as well and therefore the maintenance costs would automatically go up.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Flying Operations have increased about 22 per cent over the corresponding period for 1986. That is an increase of 22 per cent on the basis of the additional revenue earned. Is that not a large amount for flying operations?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, the same things apply to flight operations as well. Increased flying activities, more hours on the aircraft, more operations in and out of various airports, and it is my view that these increases in flying operations and maintenance are attributable to increased flight time.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there are no further supplementaries, Question 101, please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 101: Would the Honourable Member state how many charter flights did Cayman Airways Limited operate in the financial year 1986-1987; state which cities; how many flights to each city, and the average load factor per flight?

(The First Elected Member for Bodden Town withdrew "and the average load factor per flight" from the question.)

ANSWER: Round trip charters operated by Cayman Airways Limited during the financial year 1986-1987 are as follows:

Between the Cayman Islands and:

Miami	187
Tampa	67
Baltimore	26
Philadelphia	26
Baltimore/Philadelphia combination	13
Costa Rica	1
Nassau	1
San Andres	1
Merida	1
New York	23
Chicago	20
Detroit	18
St. Louis	10
Memphis	16
Boston	11
TOTAL	447

Since the Member has withdrawn the portion regarding the load factor, I will not read the reply because I think that is a bit confidential as far as the charter operators are concerned.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, this is a very complicated question. I am awaiting the answers which I have not yet gotten. Could you bear with me a couple of minutes for supplementaries on this question?

MR. PRESIDENT: It is not at all normal, but I do not quite know what you mean by a couple of minutes.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: One hundred and twenty seconds in case you would like to time me, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, I think it is rather unusual. Perhaps what we could do - if you would put the supplementary in, and the Member will reply in writing?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: No, I would like to get this information now, if possible. Is there any way we could go on to the next question and then come back to this one.

MR. PRESIDENT: No, I really do not think we could. Sorry.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I need time to study the answer.

MR. PRESIDENT: There has been some time already. I mean within reasonable limits. I think two minutes is too long. Perhaps if there are some other supplementaries that could be asked meanwhile?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: No, Sir, I will get my supplementaries answered, I hope, in the debate which will ensue later.

MR. PRESIDENT: Good.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, if the Member wishes, I would take any supplementaries or additional information that he might need in writing and certainly give him the information he needs.

MR. PRESIDENT: The First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands.
Question 102.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR THE LESSER ISLANDS TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL AFFAIRS.

NO. 102: Will the Honourable Member say when the installation of the necessary equipment will be completed for FM transmission to be received in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman from Radio Cayman, and when is it expected that transmission will commence?

ANSWER: The installation of the necessary equipment for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to receive Radio Cayman's programming that is transmitted on its FM frequencies should be completed by the end of December 1987. Basic equipment should be ready for shipment to Cayman Brac by 30th November, 1987.

The next phase is for installation of the equipment on Cayman Brac which is contingent upon the availability of services of riggers for the antennas' installation and the availability of space on a privately owned tower at Stake Bay.

Transmission will commence immediately following the necessary testing.

MR. PRESIDENT: There appear to be no supplementaries. The next question please from the Elected Member for East End.

THE ELECTED MEMBER FOR EAST END TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES.

NO. 103: Will the Honourable Member say whether Government has taken a decision with regard to the preservation of maritime historic sites like the Wreck of the Ten Sails in East End?

ANSWER: Government has taken a decision with regard to the preservation of maritime historic sites by the enactment of the National Trust Law. A committee known as the Historic Preservation Committee has been set up under the National Trust Law to deal with such maritime historic sites as the "Wreck of the Ten Sails" at East End. Henceforth, all projects involving all maritime historic sites will be dealt with under the auspices of the National Trust and its Historic Preservation Committee.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JOHN B. MCLEAN: Supplementary Mr. President.
Will the Honourable Member say whether it is correct that a study has been presented to Government on these sites?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: A study was carried out by the Indiana University to develop a maritime park, and it was submitted to Government. Government has not yet, however, taken a decision to embark on such a project and now that the National Trust is in operation, with its special committee to deal with historic sites, Government itself will not be dealing with this report, but it will be forwarded to the Trust for necessary action.

MR. JOHN B. MCLEAN: Mr. President, a further supplementary.
Will the Honourable Member say whether this study was carried out with Government's approval?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: When the team from the University of Indiana contacted Government about this matter we asked that they submit a project document to show us exactly what they would do. They did this, and it was approved by Government.

MR. JOHN B. MCLEAN: A further supplementary, Mr. President.
Will the Honourable Member state whether it is Government's intention to carry out further investigation to ascertain what is left of such maritime sites?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: This will now be a duty of the Historic Preservation Committee of the National Trust and Government will withdraw from taking any active part, so to speak, in dealing with these matters. I am sure, however, that the National Trust is quite capable of dealing with these studies.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

A further supplementary, Mr. President.

I wonder if the Honourable Member would consider it important enough to give us the undertaking that that would perhaps be one of the instructions given to the committee he is speaking about.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Yes, Mr. President, in fact Government itself saw quite a lot of usefulness in developing that site in East End and I do hope that the National Trust will move on with the project. I will speak to them personally on the matter.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

THE APPROPRIATION (1988) BILL, 1987

SECOND READING DEBATE CONTINUING

MR. PRESIDENT:

We now move to Item 3, Government Business. The resumption of the Second Reading debate on the Appropriation (1988) Bill. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG RODDEN:

Mr. President, I would like to finish off the matter I raised yesterday concerning the action of Government with regards to certain road works, and to reiterate that I feel that the road work at the junction of the North Sound Road should be attended to within the next twelve months. There seems to be an ambitious road programme. $1.4 million is included in the capital expenditure and I trust that, since there is no other money for Bodden Town, a part of this $1.4 million could be used for the Beach Bay Road which has been talked about for a long time, or perhaps for one of the other roads in the Bodden Town district which need attention.

I would like to congratulate the Honourable Member on the continued growth and good management of the Port Authority, and I am happy to see that again this year there were sufficient funds to take care of the loan on the Cayman Brac port. This is more or less an obligation that was undertaken when the financing was agreed and that there are still some surplus funds.

There are two areas in which the Government can control or contain spending. These two areas are under the Capital Works and New Services. I have shown that Government failed miserably in its capital works programme by delaying major projects for three years and by obtaining loans in great proportions. The other area in which the Executive Council could have sought to contain Government spending is the area of new services. But here the failure was greater than the failure in capital works.

The other area of Government spending, recurrent expenditure, is very difficult to contain. If they failed in the two areas over which they had some control, it would be unreasonable to expect them to do anything about the recurrent expenditure. However, my time is running out, and I will only be able to deal lightly with the new services. This is a subject which could well have taken another four hours, because whenever we bring in a new service, whether it is a new building, a new piece of equipment or a new person on the payroll, that person or thing automatically brings with itself the concomitant responsibility for recurrent expenditure every year thereafter. If it is a building we have to look at electricity, air conditioning, telephones, cleaning, painting and so on. If it is a person the salary will be upgraded and particularly if it is a person in the higher echelons of Government, that person will certainly need a deputy before the year is out. And then the deputy will need an assistant and they will need secretaries and so on. So when we approve any new service, we must realise that like a new baby born into the world, that person or thing brings with it its own expenses which the Government, in this case of the new services, will have to bear.

Of course, the new services have been downplayed in these estimates. They warranted only one line, which reads "New services requested are: $2,000,000.". Only Sir Winston Churchill could have phrased a power phrase greater than that line. Its impact is sharp, clear, and concise. "New services requested are: $2,000,000.". However, I know this line must have taken at least one hour to write, because what follows it appears to me to apply mostly to the capital expenditure mentioned above. I have never seen a neater sentence. But the sentence is frightening because if we approve these new services we are not approving $2 million, but several multiples of two.

I would like Members to take a quick journey with me through the new services. To start off with we are approving the employment of a Liquor Inspector and we are going to pay him $10 for the year 1988. It says this is a token provision for a Licensing Inspector who will serve as secretary to the Liquor Licensing Board and as Inspector of the Licensees' properties taking such action as is in accordance with the law. And that $10 is a part of the $2 million, but the $10 is really not the cost. So when you approve new services, you can add the difference between $10 and the annual salary of that person.

Now I understand that Government, at the time of making the estimates did not know the exact salary of this person. But we are doing estimates so we should put in a figure that is a good estimate. And we did not have to look for outside factors because we are giving him a motor car allowance of $675 for the year. I know there is a policy in Government that the motor car upkeep bears a relation to the person's salary, so that if he earns above a certain amount he gets so much for motor car upkeep, and it is a sort of status symbol. So they know what this man will be paid, and it is not included. If it were included, we would not have that surplus of $140,000 at the end of 1988.

The next item is even more amazing. We are going to put up an immigration building for $10. And the immigration is a very large department now. They are in very cramped quarters and the need for a building is urgent. But we add $10 for the building, so it brings the total vote to $695 - $675 for the motor car upkeep, $10 for the salary of the Liquor Inspector, and $10 for the building. We do not know what that building will cost, but we can be reasonable and a reasonable estimate would be $1 million for a decent building to house the Department of Immigration. I understand that Government has to do a feasibility study - they need designs and costing before they know the exact amount - but they certainly know near enough. However, if we were to put in $1 million for the immigration building, we could not balance the Budget; we could not appear to transfer surplus cash to reserves; and we would not have the little mascara on our faces at the end of the year of $140,000 plus which is supposed to be there.

I notice that in a few instances reasonable figures are put into the new services. I am wondering why it has not been done throughout. For example there is a $25,000 item for training. There are reasonable quotes on the prison staff and there is even $60,000 for a patrol boat which evidently is not the luxury Bertram.

Further, we are getting some pretty cheap labour in these new services because we are going to employ a Puisne Judge for the Grand Court for $10, and this officer is to deal with the increased work in the Grand Court resulting from an unduly large number of cases expected to last as long as the Tower case. We know what Puisne Judges cost, we already have one, we already have a judge for the Grand Court and we know near enough what the cost is. But to put in a reasonable cost would defeat the appearance of the Budget.

Why I am alarmed at this type of budgeting is that on the same page for the same department under new services, we are employing an executive officer and we are going to pay him $26,352 and a clerical officer, $7,356, and a court usher $10,104. So while we are going to pay these three people lower down on the pay scale $43,812 dollars, we are only reserving $10 for the judge of the Grand Court! And if this is taken into account, and we realise that when we vote $10 here, we are actually saying go out and hire the man, put him on the payroll, and we will give you it through the year if we have it - supplementary expenditure or funds to pay his salary. But it will not matter then because the Budget has been debated and the appearance has been good. This is in practice what will happen.

I will not endeavour to deal with every page of the new services. But in my first examination I found that there were items on nearly every page which I could bring to the attention of the House. I notice there is $1,538 to provide students on holiday with work experience. And I can only say to that, their experience will be limited indeed.

Under Mosquito Research we are providing $3,500 for two return tickets to the United Kingdom for officers to collect colour plates which will be used in the production of the proposed scientific study. I do not know the reason for this. I do not know the details, but it seems like nonsense to me to have to buy two return tickets to the United Kingdom in order to transport colour plates. I have never heard of any product yet with today's technology that could not be shipped at lesser cost than paying two airline tickets to the United Kingdom. The most fragile and the most costly items today can be shipped under special arrangement - the most delicate of items. Yet, under new services we provide two return tickets. To me an unnecessary waste of money.

Under new services I see administrative officer, and there is nothing under salaries. Maybe that is a misprint or something. The note reads "To provide an understudy to the present Inspector of Banks" and an analyst who will be responsible for the production of the quarterly information from the hundred licensed banks in accordance with the Government commitment under the Basle concordat on the provision of banks. And there is a figure of $6,768, which perhaps will cover both the administrative officer and the Deputy Inspector of Banks - or maybe one is promoted to the other. And under Computer Services - I never thought that the mind of man could imagine the many new posts set out in the estimates.

I have rushed through this to show that Government has failed us in the new services. They receive requests every year from their departments, but the Executive Council should be the decision making body of the Government. When they receive the many requests as are here, I think they should cut them down before bringing the estimates to the House. I tried last night to count the many new bodies we would be adding under new services, but I must admit that I fell asleep in the process.

The new services will put not only the 1989

estimates out of line, but will affect all estimates in the years to come. It is not only the new services that show clearly that this Budget was not the wonderfully balanced budget which some people may have been lulled into believing when they heard the melodious tones in which the address was delivered.

There are token votes in the estimate, apart from the new services, and I just want to mention one of them. There is a token vote of $10 for seminars. I do not know what the $10 is, whether it is to send somebody abroad for a seminar, or to hold a seminar here, but there is a $10 vote, which just cannot do the job. And I hardly need to repeat that if the correct figure had been put up the end result - the bottom line in the Budget - would have been different.

Then there is also a token vote for the salary review which is scheduled, and that token vote is $1,074,000. A totally inadequate sum, regardless of the outcome of the review, unless Mr. Hall comes to the conclusion that there should be no increases in salary. If I recall correctly, the last time the civil service had a cost of living adjustment, the cost of living adjustment alone came to more than the figure that is put in here. I did not check the figures accurately, but I know that the salaries for civil servants now run something in the vicinity of about $30 million. So if they receive a modest 10 per cent increase, an average of 10 per cent increase, we will probably be looking at $3 million during 1988, just to pay the salary increase.

So when we put all of these different matters together - that is the token vote for the salary increase, the token votes in the estimates and the token votes in the new services - we really see the true picture of the finances for 1988; and I would say that we have an opportunity to do something about it. We can refuse the new services which are requested. We can cut them down - some of them are necessary, some will always be necessary, but I believe that heads of departments seem to be working on the principle that if you ask for everything you can think about, you will wind up getting something.

New services have been a bone of contention in the Legislature for a long time. I remember one address given many years ago by a person (who is not the present Financial Secretary) in which he warned against the new services. He pointed out the dangers which I mentioned at the beginning; that every new service brings with it new recurrent expenditures. So it will be up to the members of the Finance Committee to reduce these new services in whatever areas they can. If the Members do not reduce these services they will have failed the public and they will be just as guilty as the Executive Council who presented the Budget. We know the Budget Address is read by the Financial Secretary, but it always has the approval of Executive Council.

I understand from the President that my four hours are about exhausted and that he will be cutting me off shortly. There is a provision whereby I can apply for an extension, but all my requests, in the past, for extensions, particularly the one of the Mutual Agreement Treaty, were denied, and I suspect that should I seek to continue, I would not be allowed. Because I am a very slow thinker and a very slow speaker, I really cannot work under pressure. I find it difficult to make a speech when I am at my leisure, much less when I am under time constraints.

And so, Mr. President, I will close by summing up that the last three years have been the most disastrous in our country because they were years when the Government had an opportunity to do something for the country. They had the resources and the technology. They idled away their time in ways which I have mentioned often before, and we find today there is much lacking. We find, as a result, a Budget that is stuffed with capital projects that should have been completed and projects that should be earning money for this country.

I will give just one example of how a capital project can earn money. For example, a previous administration built the reservoir at Lower Valley at a cost of $135,000. Since that time, Government has collected revenue far and above the costs of the construction. The sewerage scheme will produce revenue, but not until it is built. The desalination plant will produce revenue, but not until it is installed, and the new post office will produce revenue, but not until it has been constructed. So Government has failed in its responsibility, and has played a little game in which they delayed these projects and now we will suffer eternally for it.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Perhaps Members might agree that we should take our morning break rather than request another speaker to take on. I suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

AT 11:05 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:29 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings are resumed. The debate on the Second Reading of the Appropriation (1988) Bill. We have a quorum. I shall allow one minute before inviting the First Official Member, if and when he is present, to reply to the debate.

Does any Member wish to speak?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, in light that it appears that no one wishes to exercise their opportunity to speak, I would draw your attention to Standing Order 36, and if you so rule, I so move.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, I was hoping that the Elected Members of Government with as much criticism as has been levelled at them would have exercised their democratic privilege by getting up to defend this Budget and to advise the people of the country just what is going on, rather than allowing this debate to be closed. I must admit that I was not properly prepared to debate the Budget at this time because I wanted to check out fully some more details so that I could make the type of presentation to the people of this country that I think they deserve. However, this is nothing new, and we should be at all times prepared to deal with these people.

Just to confirm that my watch is right, I would like to say that my watch shows 11:37 a.m., and I should have four hours to go, minus breaks, from this time, and at that time ...

MR. PRESIDENT:

I am happy to confirm that. My watch actually says 11:35.39, but I will give you four hours from that, excluding breaks, no problem.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

And at that point, I am prepared to ask the House for additional time in view of my having to go before I was prepared. I was hoping that the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council would have stayed to listen to the debate because I have quite a few touches to make at him.

I would like to compliment the Honourable First Official Member, the Financial Secretary, for his able presentation of what I know was an onerous task for him. Being the capable person that he is, I know within my heart that he found it difficult to get up and make the able presentation that he did in defence of a Budget prepared by the Elected Members of Executive Council. So I will humbly ask him to please take what I may say in the best manner possible because it is not directed to him personally, but rather directed to what he has to represent.

This is the Elected Government's budget. It has to be. That is why I find it difficult, Mr. President, to understand why they do not defend it and why they do not support the Honourable First Official Member in his endeavours to present this to the public. I, like most Members of this House, would like to go on record as thanking my particular electorate (which is the political capital and the capital to be again, of the Island), my people in Bodden Town, for giving me the honour to speak on their behalf in this House.

I also thank my Maker that I have been spared once more to present my views in this House. I also, at this point, wish to thank my God that this will be the last Budget that this elected administration will have the opportunity of presenting. The public at large has, since this Budget was presented, cast a great sigh of relief because over the last three years they have been used to budgets being presented which were full of new taxation and full of areas of discontent that worried the public. However, they can sigh with relief, and if you should walk around town, as I have a little in the last few days, you will see that the people have been looking up into the sky. Now do not be alarmed about this, they are not looking at flying saucers or demons from outer space - they are giving thanks to the great architect of the universe. They are saying, thank you Lord, for helping your unfortunate, downtrodden servant. I have lived through this storm, there is only one more year of suppression and aimless wandering like Moses as he led the Jews in the desert. There is no more time for the empty promises of the present administration. No more taxes and heavy borrowing. I thank you, dear Lord, for delivering me from the utopia and the Garden of Eden which these people promised me three years ago. I thank you, dear Lord, that I have lived through it.

Mr. President, if I ever get the opportunity to say the prayer which is said in this House every morning, I will have to say, as the people in the street are saying, thank you dear Lord and help us to be delivered from this oppression.

The budget of any democratic country has to be the budget of the Elected Members, and their full responsibility. If you depart from that principle you depart from the democracy that we say we have. It is only in communist countries or dictatorial regimes that the budget is prepared by one man and one man presents the view of the machine gun. This is not supposed to be the type of government which we have. So therefore the four Elected Members of Executive Council have a responsibility to the people of this country to air their views and support the Budget because it is their Budget. They may tell us that they have no idea of this, that or the other, but this is an area in which they must have some ideas. The people elected them to set the fiscal policy and the direction of this country, and if they are shirking that responsibility, then they are not carrying out their responsibility for the people. They were elected on a platform which promised utopia. Utopia can only be achieved for this country if one handles and directs the fiscal policy because everything which makes this country worthwhile must come through the finances of the country.

If anyone would delude themselves to thinking that this is not an Elected Members' Budget and not a Budget which is politically motivated, then the only thing they have to do to change their minds is to look into the Budget, peruse it from cover to cover, and find out what Bodden Town will get in the year 1988. It is not just for 1988, but this has been the policy since the election of 1984. My colleague, you are bowing too low. Ever since 1984, East End and Bodden Town (these two districts are still ably represented in this House by the Unity Team), much to our bitter regret, suffered and suffered badly. I cannot believe that the Honourable Financial Secretary, being the gentleman that I think he is, would have done this to the great capital of Bodden Town. It has to be politically motivated, so it is nonsense for any Member to sit here and tell us that this Budget is Tom Jefferson's Budget. This Budget has to be put around the necks of the four Elected Members. By the time I am through with my discussion on Tuesday or Wednesday of next week, God willing, I will have presented that point.

The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council was truthful enough in his reply to a question in this House. Although I was not allowed to follow through with my supplementary question to him, I am however placing it today and I hope that I will get a suitable answer. In reply to the question that was tabled in the House by my colleague from Bodden Town, the Honourable Member said that in an attempt to balance the Budget Savannah had had to suffer. Savannah is a part of Bodden Town. If Bodden Town is suffering, Savannah is suffering, and vice versa. So at least he was honest enough to tell us that he had taken steps to see that we would suffer. He admitted to us in that reply that this is what it should be, a politically elected Budget. I can only say in all fairness, Mr. President, that the generosity to my district of Bodden Town by the four Elected Members of Executive Council cannot be forgotten. It is unlike anything I have ever heard before. I can only say that their cup runneth over.

Let us try to imagine what the people of Bodden Town are thinking in that today we are in this Assembly debating a Budget of over C180 million for the coming year of 1988 and the foundation stone of this country is only getting $5,000. It is unbelievable. I believe that the native negro (I hate to use the term in the House, but I must at this point) of South African is treated much better. My colleague is usually very good on his percentages, and even he, with all his ability, has found it impossible to work out the minuscule amount that this $5,000, in relation to an $80 million plus Budget represents.

My people do not take this kindly, Mr. President, and my people, led by myself and my colleague are saying, 'Dear Lord, rid us of this burden that has been placed around our necks.'. On behalf of my people from the Bodden Town district, I state publicly that I cannot stand silently. I cannot stand humbly and meek, waiting for the bones to fall from the master's table after they have devoured the savoury meat. Would you expect it of us? Lord, I am meek and humble, but my bones are getting stiff. Although I may apologise, I cannot bow any further. This is too much humility to expect. Should I, in all humility, wish to bow and silently accept this treatment, then I am afraid that my ancestors could not rest in their graves. I carry the blood in my body of the old original people who pioneered this country - the Bodden's, the Eden's, the Watler's, the Coe's and the Jackson's, it is all in me. You can check the history of this country to see what those people have done in the building of this country. So, if I should be foolish enough to accept this kind of treatment, I am sure that after knowing what they did for the development of this country they could not remain silent in their graves.

We, like every country in the Commonwealth, have suffered degradation and repression. If you doubt this you only have to be a student of history as I pride myself as being. If you study the West Indian history, the Indian history and the African history you will see dictatorial repression and degradation to the people of those countries. I may have nothing else in life, but the one thing I have is pride and love for this little country of ours. If you have that manhood in you and speak out, believe me you had better be willing to face oppression and degradation from every corner. This is history. This is what has been used, in the history of this world, to control conquered people. If you doubt this, look at what happened to Gandhi, look at what happened to Nehru, look at what happened very close to us in the case of Mr. Bustamante of Jamaica. Look at all the other leaders today in the Commonwealth. You must bow or you go into subjection.

We supposedly, Mr. President, practice the democratic system of government and in conjunction with that we should have the freedom of speech. We have no bill of rights as such. We have nothing to fully guarantee our rights. But when we, as elected Members, speak in this House one fact must never be forgotten. However stupid we may sound, however long it may be, however immaterial it may seem to some people, we are speaking not as individuals, we are speaking as elected representatives of the majority of the people in our districts. We would not be here otherwise. That point must never be forgotten by anyone, regardless who it is.

The present regime has limited freedom of speech in this House. There is no limitation, Mr. President, placed on you in delivering the Throne Speech. There is no limitation placed on the Honourable Financial Secretary when he delivers the Budget speech. But yet we, who are caught unaware as to what the Budget or the Throne Speech will contain, are limited to four hours of speech. I do not believe from my heart of hearts that this can be right.

MR. PRESIDENT:

If I may intervene on a point of information, I do not think that the Throne Speech is excluded from the four hour rule. I do not think so. I would be very happy to have it included if that is the case.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

No, I am not trying to have it included, Sir, I am making the point that your Throne Speech does not, in my opinion, fall within the four hour limitation. The presentation of the Budget speech does not, in my opinion, fall within the four hour timetable.

MR. PRESIDENT:

You are certainly right on the latter point - that is specific, but I do believe the Throne Speech is subject to the same rules as other Members of the House.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I will not argue with you, Sir, you may be correct. The point I am trying to get across to this House is that the Honourable Financial Secretary, in conjunction with his Elected Executive Council, has days, weeks or probably months to prepare the presentation of the Budget before it comes to this House. We get it without any foreknowledge, and are then expected to start, within two days, to debate the lengthy document. We need to gather information and everything else in order to make a suitable presentation to our people, and are limited to four hours. One cannot dissect the Budget, or make an able rebuttal in four hours. So therefore the democratic right of the people has been fettered.

I, for one, wish that the four hour limitation could be changed in our Standing Orders. If you wish to keep the four hours with regard to debating Bills which are presented to the House, maybe we could live with that, but I think I am putting forward a capable argument as to why change should be made. If it is not made during this present administration, I can promise you that in the next administration, God willing, it will be changed.

We are tired of being subservient. We are tired of being spanked like kids. I got a lot of it when I was a kid because I was a good kid, but I can remember my father, with all the due respect and love I have for him, taking me over his knee, pulling my pants down and giving me a good thrashing. I think he was wise at that time in doing it, because it shaped my life. It helped make the kind of man that I think I am. But at 57 years of age, having sailed most of the seas of the world and having been through a lot of adversity, my pants cannot easily be taken down and my posterior spanked.

This administration, shortly after coming to power in 1984, amended the Customs Law to present the Legislative Assembly with new taxes without any previous knowledge of the Members of this House. It was just read out to us, the vote taken and it came into effect. We are not able to oppose that legislation. It is presupposed that it will pass, which is wrong under a democratic system of government. You may have the strength to legislate taxation, and you may know that you have it, but it should never be usurped and it is being usurped in this House.

Our great neighbour to the north experienced this and had a celebrated tea party because of it. It brought about a revolution because of the repressive measures that were being enacted that could no longer be tolerated by those who had backbones. It is always easy to tolerate anything if you are like a jellyfish. But, if you believe in principles and manhood, you cannot easily tolerate some of these things. If King George III had been content with just a little bit, maybe today the mother country could still be milking that cow. Think of what was accomplished by the greediness that was expressed during that time. It has brought about one of the greatest nations in the world. I am using this as an illustration to show that history will support just about everything I will say in this House for the next three or four days.

This elected Government embarked on curtailment of the local economy. They have been like a windmill in a storm without direction, like a boat at sea which has lost its rudder. There is no direction, no combined direction, of the actions of our Government at this time. It is like the old saying - one hand not knowing what the other is doing. The fiscal policy of this country is a shambles. The country has embarked on a massive borrowing spree. The Budget is fictitiously balanced, and I will save this for a later time in my debate. I crave the indulgence of Members to come back to this point, because these are some figures which I have not yet been able to fully determine. But I intend to take apart past budgets of this administration and I intend to dissect the coming year's Budget.

Our present local economy is top-heavy. All the money is at the top. None is filtering down to the bottom. The holes in the sieve are clogged. We have forgotten that we have a middle and poor class people in this country. This will never bring prosperity to this country. I know some Members will get up and say there is still a lot of money around and that there are more banks coming in and so forth. I will deal with all of that further along in my presentation. But the point I am trying to make is that the money may be there, but the economy is not buoyant. The man in the street is not getting the benefits that he should be deriving.

We are fast going back to the era of the Cayman Islands when the country and the economy was controlled by a brown paper bag. I grew up as a kid in that era. I know what I am talking about. Cayman had gotten away from it. With the help of the previous Governor who set this country back fifty years politically, and with the help of this present administration we have gone back to what people experienced in this country fifty years ago. At that time the wealth was in the hands of a very select few and the poorer class in this country were treated like grovelling dogs at the master's feet. Do not tell me I am wrong because, again, history will prove me right. There were a few in the merchant class who controlled the entire economy of the country, and they controlled it politically - that is, with what little political effort they could use - and everybody was obligated to this select few. One worked, one got his own brown sugar and flour in a paper bag with a piece of paper showing that one was still due three pence worth of flour the following week. That is what the economy was then. The poorer man in this country, literally, could not breathe. The Caymanian had to be a stalwart man or woman to have lived through an era like that and to have brought this country to where it is today, and that is why I am willing to fight for it. There are some people in Cayman who have backbones, I think, as I have. No country in existence which does not have a successful, prosperous middle class can prosper; and no government can properly function without a hard core of middle management. Both are missing today in our country.

I am proud that the Unity Team Government, of which I was a part, realised this. We provided the atmosphere for a thriving middle class, something which the country had really never had before. We provided the incentives. We helped in every way we could, without bureaucratic shuffling of papers, to help our people thrive and be prosperous. We did not put road blocks in their way. The entrepreneurial system prospered, and everyone who had ambition could show signs of prosperity. They could start their own businesses, and a lot of the people at that time did. They could build their homes, they could buy cars, they could buy televisions and satellite dishes. They could educate their children. These were things that the average Caymanian had had great difficulty in doing before.

Today, most of these benefits are disappearing. It is like education which I really have a long dissertation on. But I just mentioned that for once in an eight year period the people were getting a chance to further the education of their children. Before that, it had been the old paper bag mentality of who you knew and whose child you were. That is why today we are suffering and why we do not have the people with university degrees to hold some of the positions in this country. This is what I am embarking on to change so that in fifty years from now my grandchildren will not look back and say, 'Well, my grandfather did not try to help provide this for the country.'

I do not want to see Cayman slip back into what it was when I was a kid. They may say that they were good old days. They were good old days to a certain extent and I am proud to have the memory, but it is not the good old days that we want to go back to. Once you take away the benefits and the opportunity to create a vibrant middle class in a country, you are going to get a discontented population - and that is what we are getting now. You will get crime and turmoil, and a population that will eventually rise up because they cannot tolerate the whips on their backs any longer. That is not what we want to happen in this country. We want to build a country that we can be proud of in fifty years from now, but we will never be able to build it if we embark on the suppression of our people, because they are not going to be meek enough to accept it. You must remember one thing about the Caymanian. The Caymanian background has been the sea, and it is the toughest master that you can ever experience. If it made us tough to endure that, it is going to make us tough to fight the oppression at this time.

There has been an old saying - better red than dead. But, Mr. President, what I am saying to my people today is that it is better to be dead than to lose one's self-respect and become a slave. We must stand up. I will stand up for my beliefs as long as I live, and particularly as long as I have the opportunity to stand here and represent my people.

From the Budget we have been told that we have a work force of 10,034 - 74 per cent or 7,425 of which are Caymanian. If my mathematics are correct, this tells me that there are 2,609 people in the Cayman Islands workforce who are not Caymanian. I find it difficult to accept this figure. In my humble opinion there have to be more non-Caymanians than this because I have been privy, in the past, to the list which showed the number of work permits held; and if they hold work permits, they are not Caymanian.

It would also be very beneficial to know the geographical breakdown of this number of people. How many do we have from Ireland? If we had that statistic we could maybe look at it intelligently and assess whether or not we needed 15 more stewardesses from Ireland for Cayman Airways. The House should have this information, not just the Elected Members of Executive Council, but the entire House. We may be looked upon as minorities, but we are entitled, if we have a democratic system, to know what is going on in our country. We should have knowledge beforehand of the contracts being entered into with the Colombians. We should know what the water scheme is going to cost us and so on, and so on.

Another important statistic that this House should know is how many of those 7,425 Caymanians have positions in management or in the middle management areas. From that we would be able to tell the areas of discontent and the areas where something needs to be done. We would also know the amount in those 7,425 who are considered hewers of wood and drawers of water. Our people must have the opportunity to share in the wealth of this country. If we do not give them that chance, what is the use of developing this country. Are we going to totally develop this country so that the benefits may go to people offshore? No, we must develop this country hand-in-hand with people from the offshore sector because this country does not have the money to do it from within, but it must be done in such a way that some of the wealth stays in the right hands of the people of Cayman. Our policy must change. Caymanians who aspire to the higher positions in the workforce of this country, be it Government or the private sector, must be able to get those positions. They must be trained to take those positions. Our immigration policy must change completely. The rights of the indigenous population of this country must be protected, even if we have to have a bill of rights to ensure that.

Caymanian status in the future must be preserved for the indigenous population and not rewarded indiscriminately as has been done. Both groups in this House are guilty of doing that. It is not something that I am laying completely at the doorstep of the present administration. However, the time has come for changes. The time has come where our people should not be completely left in the minority position. We have to be very careful with our immigration policy. We need people from abroad in certain areas to assist, but it must never be thought of that we are importing them to be our masters. Diligence must be exercised.

In some countries of the world today it is easy to live in a little town for six weeks and get a police record which shows that your background is clear because in some countries they do not have the police network that embodies the entire area. In a town fifty miles down the road someone may have been guilty of murder. That example is probably carrying it a little bit too far for that probably would show up somewhere, but in convictions of lesser crimes they would not show up. It is a proven fact that once a person has become addicted to drugs the habit is hard to kick. Persons have been known to kill, prostitute, steal or do any manner of things to obtain the necessary drugs to see them through from one waking period to the other. Persons of this background have obtained work permits in our country, and we are all guilty to a certain degree for neglecting some of this. Some of these people have also been lucky enough to get good government positions. Some of them have married in this country. But we must not forget the things that I have just said. A person who has had a drug habit will find it difficult to kick, and persons have committed crimes to satisfy that urge. So, people who have fallen in that category will in this country, particularly if they are in places of influence, secure information which can be traded or given to people offshore which can severely hurt the country.

I would also like, at this point, to put one other suggestion forward and that is that all work permit holders and their dependents must in the future undergo an AIDS test to ensure that we will not further become the victims of this in our country. I sympathise greatly with this scourge that God has put on mankind, because it could happen, more or less, to any of us. It is a serious thing, and I hope that God in His infinite mercy, will bless all of them and will help the medical profession to, sometime in the near future, find a cure. But we must not forget that our country could be ruined overnight if we do not put in the type of restraints that can forestall further things of this nature happening in our country. I am hoping that the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council has not gone to sleep during this part of my presentation. I hope his ears are wide open.

Great emphasis has been placed on the banking industry, and rightly so. It has contributed a lot to the economy, and it has given our country much prestige. I give credit to them, but we must not forget that most of these are only plaques on the wall. We must not allow them to dictate the policies of Government. They employ but a small amount of our people. We must give credit and thanks, but we must view the other side of the coin also. We must approach the banks on a basis of equality. We must ask of them, "Is this a marriage for you in this community, or is it an engagement?". We may be considered the wealthiest offshore financial centre in the world, but if they are looking towards the future and want a future with us, if they want a marriage with us, can they not look out of their windows and see our problems? Are they not aware of the below average standard of living and housing? Do they not see the old and sick who cannot care for themselves? Do they not see the kids who lack attention? Do they not see the amount of students walking the streets under the hypnotic trance of addictive drugs, barefooted because the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council has not provided scholarships for some of them?

How long, Mr. President, will wealth abuse the poor? Do you think this society as we know it will survive? I consider, Mr. President, that I have done my share in building this economy and society. I think that I have nothing in life to be ashamed of with regard to my contribution to this society, because it is my land of birth, it is my first love, it is where my bones will smoulder. But, if the hate smoulders in my body from time to time, as it does, because of the inferior way we, as Caymanians, are sometimes treated, I do not wonder how other people feel, because I know.

I echo a word of warning to everyone who may listen. The people of this country, including myself, will not be further abused. We will not be subjugated. We will not become slaves in the land of our birth. We will not be further insulted. We will not bow any further. We will master our own destinies, or go down in the ashes of them. The country's future is our future, and we love this country. So I ask of everybody who may care to listen, please wake up, please look at the problems that exist. Please help us solve them, but please do so walking shoulder to shoulder, hand in hand and not with us having to walk twenty paces behind.

MR. PRESIDENT:

That may be a convenient moment to adjourn.

PRAYERS

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake. Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread; And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us; And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil; For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us; the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us; the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The proceedings of the House are resumed, and may I apologise to the House and to Members for keeping you waiting this morning.

Questions. The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

THE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER FOR WEST BAY TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NO. 104: Can the Honourable Member say whether the Cayman Islands Government recently entered into an agreement with Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd., regarding the use of a piece of property adjacent to the West Bay Fire Station, and, if so, what are the contractual terms and whether the present terms are an amendment to an original contract?

ANSWER: Government has not entered into any agreement with Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd., for the use of any property in West Bay.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Supplementary, Mr. President. Is there an agreement pending?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, there were negotiations taking place some time ago for the lease of a parcel of Government land in West Bay, but nothing has yet come of those negotiations.

MR. PRESIDENT:

There appear to be no further supplementaries. Question number 105, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR HEALTH, EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES

NO. 105: Would the Honourable Member give full details of any consideration being given to a policy of providing Government schooling for children from the age of three years?

ANSWER: There is no consideration being given to any policy to provide Government schooling from age three, apart from the special programmes currently in operation, the early intervention programme operated out of the Lighthouse School and the Hearing Impaired Unit operated at the George Town Primary School. Both admit, from the age of three, students who are experiencing particular problems.

The reception programme, now in operation in all Government primary schools, accept children who are three years and nine months. This is a voluntary, half-day programme.

MR. PRESIDENT: There appear to be no supplementaries. If so, Question number 106, please, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR HEALTH EDUCATION AND SOCIAL SERVICES

NO. 106: Would the Honourable Member state why it was recently necessary to employ another House Mother and House Father for the Frances Bodden Girls' Home?

ANSWER: The House Father at the Frances Bodden Girls' Home became ill the beginning of August, some two months before the contract of employment of both the House-Father and House-Mother was due to expire. As a consequence of the illness of the House-Father, the House-Mother was also granted compassionate leave until the end of the contract. Concurrently, it became obvious to all concerned that because of the continuing nature of the illness it would not be wise to consider renewing the contract. Consequently, the present House Parents were contacted and offered the job. They accepted and were appointed early in September.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Could a reported police inquiry have anything to do with this dismissal?

HON. BENSON D. FRANKS: Mr. President, I did not say anything about a dismissal, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Perhaps we should pass to the next question number 107, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

NO. 107: Would the Honourable Member say what is being done to locate two persons, namely Mr. Burnie Anglin and Mrs. Nadine Simmons, who disappeared recently and whether police dogs or outside investigators have been employed to aid in the search?

ANSWER: All possible avenues of enquiry have been explored and will continue to be explored, both here and overseas as appropriate. The tracker dogs were not brought in, as in both cases some period of time had elapsed between the time the people were last seen and the time police were notified. It has not been considered necessary to bring in outside investigators.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, may I ask the Honourable Member if the three Scotland Yard detectives who are here are connected with these enquiries?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: I know of no such connection, Mr. President.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Human life is considered one of the most valuable things in this world so why was it not considered necessary to bring in outside help to try to locate and find out what had happened to these people, when we spend money foolishly in so many other investigations?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: Mr. President, the answer has already indicated that all that could be done has been done and is continuing to be done in both of these cases.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Could the Honourable Member tell this House who determined that it would be impractical to bring in police dogs because some time had elapsed from the last time they were seen until the police were notified?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: The decision is always made by the officer responsible for the investigation of the case.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Does the Honourable Member or the officer responsible for the case have any idea as to the time period involved that the dogs would not be able to give any assistance?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: No, Mr. President, I do not have the answer to that question.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: If you do not have the answer to it, does any Member of the Government have that answer?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: If the Member so wishes, Mr. President, I could undertake to provide the answer to that supplementary question in writing.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well, could the Honourable Member state the person who made this decision?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: Mr. President, could I ask what decision the Member is referring to, Sir?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: The decision that I was asking about a while ago. The decision that tracker dogs would not work in a case like this.

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: Mr. President, I thought I had answered that supplementary, Sir, by saying the decision was made by the officer charged with the responsibility of the investigation in both cases.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Does the Honourable Member know how he could have arrived at this opinion, whether it was from stated facts or what?

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: I am sure that the answer to that, Mr. President, is that police officers make professional decisions based on their training.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there are no further supplementaries, we move to Item 3 of the Order Paper, Government Business. Resumption of the Second Reading debate on the Appropriation (1988) Bill. The First Elected Member for Rodden Town was speaking.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS BILLS

SECOND READING DEBATE CONTINUING

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, it is difficult to break a speech into parts, as I have had to do with mine, but I am thankful that I had the weekend to continue my research. As I explained in my opening, I would have thought that some of the Elected Members of Government would have seen fit to defend and put forward their Budget.

They have, however, preferred to play the waiting game to debate the Budget which, had I not risen, would have closed. I can assure the Members of this House and the public at large that there will be such a scramble for them to get to their feet when I am through delivering my speech that you will not know how to keep order and who will be the first one to his feet.

In waiting this morning at least we have some people in the gallery, and I also have some moral support. My wife has come to hear me as well as the school children whom I am happy to see here.

This country boasts of an atmosphere conducive to secrecy. It is our secrecy laws that have helped bring the prosperity of the country to the point it is today. However, I am warning this House, as I have done before and will continue to do in this debate, that this atmosphere will not continue if we, in this country, have to live as the native South African lives in his country. Our people must be trained for the high positions. A new policy must be instituted whereby a Caymanian must be trained for every job that exists here. If a foreigner is brought in to manage a business, a Caymanian must be hired to walk in his footsteps and be trained for that position. I submit to this country that this present elected Government should be indicted for their indifference to training our youth. They closed the training schools that the Unity Team saw fit to start. Those schools were becoming very successful. They stopped the allowances that were being paid to students who were attending the training schools.

They curtailed scholarships to our youth, and the old system of whose son or daughter you are, or who you know, prevails again. Is it any wonder that our youth are taking to the streets today as drug addicts?

We boast of the opening of two new hotels, but who are they employing? The Caymanian is not offered the good positions in most of these establishments. I have been to one of these establishments and I was ashamed to see that the few Caymanians in evidence were employed as what I would call foot men. All the good jobs have gone to the imported Irish people. A policy is beginning to emerge that the Caymanian is employed to shine shoes, and he is left there. There is no hope of betterment for him.

We all boast from time to time of the secrecy laws that I mentioned a while ago. I will ask this House what secrecy laws? What has this elected Government accomplished in bringing about the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty? If we had any secrecy it has been destroyed by the implementation of that Treaty. No Member of the elected Government except the Attorney General has knowledge of what is requested of us by the United States' Government. There is no political or elected input in any of these requests. The United States' Government has not ratified the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, yet we rushed headlong, like a stone falling down the hillside, to ratify that Treaty. It was pointed out, by well established law firms in this country, the Chamber of Commerce and Members of this House, the dangers that were inherent in that Treaty. But these groups of geniuses would not listen to anyone. The Treaty as it stands now does not legally exist. We are the only ones, with perhaps the exception of the United Kingdom on our behalf, who have ratified this Treaty. At the present time it stands in the position of being a bilateral Treaty. And I publicly accuse this Government at this point of compliance with this Treaty, compliance with the United States authorities, as if this Treaty existed. I publicly challenge the Attorney General and this Government to take an oath and prove that we have not supplied evidence as though the Treaty were in force.

We have reached a dangerous point. We cannot continue in this manner any longer. We allow the banks that do business in our country and flaunt our laws as they see fit. They set their own standards as to how they will operate. We have banks in this country that will only give a customer a small amount of cash or a local cheque up to a certain amount. Any other withdrawals that he or she wishes to make have to be done by the bank giving them a United States' cheque, usually withdrawable on Irwin Trust in New York, or some other large bank in the clearing system. This is done because those banks are monitored very closely. Every cheque of over a certain amount that clears one of the United States' banks has to be reported.

The banks in the Cayman Islands are making a joke of our secrecy laws. They are jeopardizing the rights of their clients. They are leaving many American citizens, who have trusted us for many years, in jeopardy and leaving them subject to indictments by the I.R.S. If you think that we can continue in the banking business, and continue to boast of a stable economy under circumstances such as this, then we are all deluding ourselves.

The trust between an accounting firm and a client should be like that trust between a doctor and a patient or a lawyer and a client. It will not be necessary to debate many budget speeches in the future if we do not attend to some of these ills that exist. We have in this country large worldwide accounting firms, and people trust them. People put their future into the hands of these accounting firms, and I particularly refer to people from the United States of America. They trust that what they give or say to the accounting firms will be kept in the strictest of confidence. But these accounting firms are fast being seeded with police informants - people who will do anything for the greed of money or self-glory.

Mr. President, no man in this world has ever been able to serve God and Mammon. Documents that have been sealed in containers and left in safe keeping, in the safes of some of these accounting firms by trusting clients, have been stolen and supplied to the police.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I must interrupt you for one moment. I think you are entirely entitled to speak on the question of secrecy and confidentiality in regard to the banking industry and its importance, and hence its relation to our sound economy and the Budget. But I think if you are going to make allegations about failures of security by individual companies, this is perhaps not the right place to do it.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I will accept part of your ruling, Sir, but I am trying to point out that this country's future is built on the banking secrecy and the other secrets, and that they are being eroded. And it will affect the Budget.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I accept that, I think that is entirely right, but you were proceeding to refer to a number of types of company, namely accounting companies, and I think at that point you should move to the next paragraph, if I may put it that way.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Does anyone in this country believe that Americans who have helped build this country will continue to trust our system? In my opinion this is a dirty trick to destroy our economy and put us in the position where we will have to be monetarily assisted by the Mother country as we were many years ago. Once we have to go back to the days, on bended knee, asking the Mother country for monetary assistance then we are in full subjection. We can no longer say that we have anything to do with shaping the destiny of this country.

I am very proud to know that I was a part of the Unity Team Government which was able to bring an end to the monetary assistance from the Mother country. I ask of this House today, what percentage of our people are in management positions in the banks and trust companies? What are we doing to ensure that our people will have the high positions? I say once more that there is no use in this country continuing to boast of our rapid development and of the five hundred plus banks that we have here, and so forth and so on, if our local people do not deriving some of the benefits by having us run pell mell to destruction.

I am proud of the Housing Corporation. The Unity Team Government saw the problem that existed and we set out to do something about it. Believe me it was worse than pulling teeth. It took years of negotiation with a committee to finally get it to where we could establish it and bring it into law. I could not believe that the bankers would place a loss of a couple of thousand dollars a year against the well-being of our people. I say that because the contribution that was being asked of the A-licenced banks was $50,000 a year on a twenty-year bond at 5 per cent interest. If they loaned that out at 10 per cent there was a difference of 5 per cent which means they would have lost $2,500. And that is what caused such a hue and cry from the banking society of this country, and that is why so few of them really tried to assist Government. It was a case of utter disregard for our people's well-being. But at the time, Mr. President, they had to deal with me and they had run up against an immovable object. When we left office in 1984 the Housing Authority was becoming a success, and many mortgages had been granted to our people who needed help. This was beginning to further instil the pride of ownership into our people, and was providing some happiness and contentment for them. For the past three years, like everything in this Government, the Housing Corporation has come to a halt and has stood still.

Mr. President, we do not want anything. The banks and many other institutions are making a lot of money in this country because of the stable atmosphere that we have, and because we have laws that are conducive to the capitalist system. We should not have to beg the banks and other financial institutions. The Honourable Member in charge of this portfolio should not have to come to the House and report that there are no responses to his pleas. We should make them respond. This country is a haven to hundreds of billions of dollars. Our society allows them to amass, yearly, hundreds of millions of dollars in profits. There are no controls on them; no reserves to keep on hand; no taxes. Profits can amass profits and all because the Caymanian people have built a society free of taxes and have maintained political stability. We need funds to develop our country through small business loans. Mr. President, if this is not attended to, if this is not done, in the next twenty years you will be able to count on your hand the number of local businessmen who will be in control of businesses in this country.

The banks and the financial institutions need to have work permits given to them by our country. They need to know that they can get Government support in many ways. I am saying publicly today that the banks should not get these work permits and should not get the assistance that this country gives them, if they are not prepared to help this country alleviate some of the problems that exist; particularly in view of the fact that to help alleviate those problems it would cost them so little. What is a loss of $2,500 a year on a deposit to Barclays Bank when it has probably amassed a profit for the year of over $100 million? How can they look at us and say, 'We cannot do this', when the Financial Secretary of this country has every penny which this country owns on deposit with them. They handle the total of Government's accounts. They have a captive audience, in that probably 1500 civil servants are paid each month directly through Barclays Bank and they in turn redeposit that money and make their loans with Barclays and so forth. It is a continuing spin-off effect. I do not want any Member of this House to think I am particularly speaking about Barclays Bank. I am using it as a source of reference to illustrate what is happening in our country. And I am not afraid to say that if the Caymanians cannot share in the prosperity and build for the future, then it serves no purpose for us to open the floodgate of immigration or to cooperate with any country or company if we are not going to survive and build something in these Island which our people can share in and be proud of.

Cayman today, in my humble opinion, is one of the most important gems in the English crown. I believe it is more important than the Star of India. Therefore I must insist that whoever we deal with should show the Cayman Islands the respect that it is due.

I have always been proud that our small Islands have been able to have its own currency. It shows one more area of growth for the country, and I am also proud that in the early days when this was first done that I was able to play a part in it. In the year 1986, 1987, I think it was, the surplus that existed in the Currency Board was $1,489,591. This, for the first time in the history of the Currency Board, was transferred in its entirety to Government's general revenue. This year, another good sum, of at least $1 million will be transferred into the general revenue fund. Yet with all this monetary assistance the Government of this country is still foundering like a ship at sea without a rudder.

I was pleased to see the changes that were made in the Companies Law. These changes were necessary, and in my opinion it will be necessary to further amend this Law. I deplore the fact, however, that explanation of the changes was not forthcoming in the manner which the Government bench has, in the past, explained legislation to the Members of this House.

I am pleased also to note that some system of preserving documents for posterity is being explored. If we do not find a way of preserving, in a simpler form, the amount of paper used by this administration, it will sink this Island. I am sure, Mr. President, that before any decision is made as to how we will preserve these documents, we will first have to expert consult it to death. We will have to go to the United Kingdom to select some retired expert and consultant to come here; we will house him on Seven Mile Beach for six months, we will give him a rental car, we will give him all the good food and booze he can drink, and then he will tell us, 'Do you know, I really do not know what to tell you because I do not know what to do about it myself.' Or he will give us a volume of paper that will further help to sink us. If we are going to preserve these documents, make a quick decision about it, spend the Government money and get it done.

I compliment the Registrar General, Mr. Woodward Terry. I congratulate him on persevering in his studies and being called to the Bar. He has proven, like so many Caymanians in the past have proven, that given an opportunity they will grasp it, they will work at it and they will succeed. I compliment him and I compliment the other students who passed their exams.

I am proud that the Unity Team Government established the Student Loan Programme that is mentioned in the Budget. We did this through funds borrowed from Caribbean Development Bank. At the same time we also established the Agriculture and Industry Development Board. I think that has probably gone by the wayside like all other good things done by the Unity Team Government.

I was pleased to see that 14 loans amounting to C$150,000 were granted in 1987 to worthy students. What hurts me, however, Mr. President, is that with all the emphasis that the Unity Team Government placed on scholarships for the youngsters in this country and in as much as we tried to train the youth, it has all been disregarded by the present administration. They should not have boasted about the 14 loans they made through CDB. What the Honourable First Elected Member should have been able to boast of is the fact that Government should have given 14 scholarships to 14 worthy Caymanian youngsters to go abroad and study and to come back and take their rightful place in this community. I will deal further with scholarships a little later.

The Unity Team Government saw the difficulties. We were fully aware what our young people encountered in trying to train in the legal profession. All the avenues open to them were blocked. They could only stand outside looking in while people from abroad gathered up the spoils in this country. I am referring to the legal profession. We were determined to correct this, and we did. We embarked on spending a lot of Government money, against overwhelming odds, to set up our own Law School and I am pleased that we did it. We did it because we saw the need and we knew that our people had to have a chance. If the Law School had not been set up it would have been as in the in the past when only a very selected few could ever enter the court house as trained attorneys. The cost per student was great, but five local men and women embarked on the uncharted waters, determined to succeed. They have succeeded, in that all of them have successfully completed the course of study, two of them with honours, and there are several others in the country today who are following in their footsteps. I say to them, well done, and the country is proud of you as I am.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:30 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Member for Bodden Town.

Our proceedings are resumed. The First Elected

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

No other country in the world, of our size, can boast of having its own Law School, so each and every Caymanian should be very proud of this fact. However, in all joy there has to be some grief. I am disturbed to know that it is being proposed to change the entrance examinations for the Law School, and to make it more difficult for our young students coming out of the High School to enter. I take this as an affront to all Caymanians, especially when it is being done without any Elected Members' input. I have to blame the Honourable Member for Health, Education and Social Services, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council, for allowing this to happen. Education is an integral part of his portfolio. I say, shame on you for allowing this to happen. Everyone must respect us as people - a people who have stood up and who have stood up in the face of much difficulty to bring this country to the point it is today. We must be treated with the respect that is due us. We are not monkeys hanging by our tails from some tree in the forest.

The Budget speech gave praise to an effective marketing programme, to the promotion and advertising programmes of the Department of Tourism as if there had been no success in this portfolio before. Compare the increases in tourism from 1977 to 1984 and you will see a phenomenal growth - a growth of good tourism, not the peanut butter sandwich type of tourism that, in my opinion, we have at this time. Compare, as I will, later in my discussion, the expenditure of the Department of Tourism in 1988 compared to 1984.

When I refer to the peanut butter type tourism, I would like at this point to report to the House a conversation which I recently had with an hotelier of about 20 years standing in our community. He expressed to me that he had never seen the type of tourism that he is encountering today. He reported to me that he has seen people staying at his hotel who go out and buy little styrofoam boxes, fill them with the ice from the icemaker and put their milk and sandwiches on the ice. They do not go into restaurant or bar to spend any money. He further told me that this summer his occupancy rate was so low even though he had lowered the rates in order to attract business. He thought, on many occasions, that he should close the hotel.

This is typical of what is happening in our country. We boast of the figures, but the figures will not help this country if a corresponding amount of money is not being spent in the community and is not being filtered down to the man on the street. We have two new hotels that have recently been opened, but do we delude ourselves into believing that these two new hotels can survive? Some of the airlines are selling four days and three nights and a return trip to Miami for a little over US$200. Do you think that this adds anything to the economy of this country when this happens? To service the interest payments on the Hyatt Hotel and the Treasure Island Resort it probably takes, for the Hyatt Hotel, at least US$14,000 per day. For the Treasure Island it is probably US$8,000 per day. Do you think they can stay in business with an occupancy rate of 40 to 50 per cent, at US$35.00 per day? In fact in some cases, I think the rate is even less than $35.00 per day. For these two hotels to survive, tourism would have to increase 40 to 50 per cent above the figure that it is today, and even at that, those two hotels would probably not run at more than 60 per cent occupancy. At these figures none of them can break even, and I am sure that none of them have a bottomless pit of money that they can pull from.

Even should our tourism increase by 20 per cent a year for the next three years, the hotels will not come to a break-even figure. We are presently doing, in the Cayman Islands, what every tourist destination in the Caribbean has done. Every one of the islands have done it to their eventual detriment, just to say that they have increased their figures. Our tourism business is bringing in every halt, lame and blind in an attempt to say that we have brought in five per cent or 10 per cent more than we did the year before. We must remember that one distinction of tourism is that class does not follow mass. It is the class that pay the prices, whether we want to admit it or not. We have a limited infrastructure, and if we do not get the people who can spend the money, this country will not survive eventually as a tourist destination. Class will not long tolerate the pushing, shoving rowdiness of mass tourism. If this Island wishes to pursue a policy similar to the policy as was in Jamaica a few years ago, that in order to attract foreign currency the north shore hotels were selling rooms for $10 and $15 a day. If that is the type of tourism we want and if that is what we think will build this country, then we are on the road to it. I give a word of warning, however, that road will only lead to our destruction.

I criticise strongly and condemn our present marketing and advertising programmes. I will deal with them later on in this discussion. I hope that somebody will listen, before it is too late.

We were envied in the past as a tourist destination. Today we are looked upon, in some areas, as a barefoot destination. We must not overlook the part that the up-scale cruise ships play in our economy. But in supporting the cruise ship traffic to this country, I emphasise that I do not support the cruise ships which bring in the cream puffs! In my opinion, whoever was responsible for that move should forever hang his head in shame. If you tell me that is the type of tourism that we want in the Cayman Islands, then I say to you, our policy is wrong. I am ashamed that that was ever allowed to happen.

Reference was made in the Budget speech to the successful charter programmes, but I emphasise again that this is another area which we must watch very closely. This is an area that was pioneered by the Unity Team Government. I am glad to see it is being built on today, although I do not agree with some of its attendant and I do not agree with the rates which I will deal with in my submission on Thursday, God willing.

If we are to exist in this country and keep the hotels with a decent type of occupancy, we must have the charter programmes. Since then we have to have them, I would like to know that the national carrier, Cayman Airways, is the carrier which brings them in. I do not think we should forfeit that right and let Jean Rich bring them in on her dilapidated DC-8s.

The Budget speech said that more emphasis would be placed on training, but this in my opinion should have been an on-going programme. The programme that was started by the Unity Team for political vengeance should never have been abolished, and today we would have trained Caymanians entering the hospitality industry. But instead of that, I guess they thought they would spite Jim Hodden, or Truman Hodden, or Haig Budden, or John McLean. They cancelled the training programmes. What will it do to this country if we do not train the youth? What is the sense of saying that more emphasis must be placed on training when we are not doing it? Who are we attempting to train? The Irish workers we are bringing in? I thought they were already trained.

Trade statistics as revealed from the Budget speech show that in the year 1987 there was approximately $134 million dollars in imports. This is good for the customs duty which we derive, and I must say that the Customs Department must be a very efficient department to be able to operate with such little money in relation to the other departments, and yet bring in so much revenue. But we must realise what these figures mean. We must realise that that represents a great deficit in the balance of trade. What efforts are we making to lure small manufacturing businesses, or to help promote local agriculture? These are about the only two areas open to us in which we can redress this imbalance of trade. There are still several dedicated local farmers. Today our help to them is minimal. The Member for Agriculture in the Unity Team Government did a magnificent job in dealing with agriculture and the farmers in our community. Today our policy to agriculture is in a shambles, and it is like everything else that this present administration is doing. They are foundering like a ship at sea without a rudder.

We can boast of one fact and that is that today we probably have the most sophisticated computer service in the entire world. I am sure that in the not too distant future the NASA programme in the United States will approach us and ask us to assist them with their launching projects. Computerisation is very vital and very important, but it has cost us vast sums of money to implement it. The point I really wish to drive home, Mr. President, is that we are in a very vulnerable position with regard to our computer service. I am making a point of warning to this country. Computerisation is at the nerve centre of everything we do, and it stores the Government secrets. There are secret codes which only senior staff are privy to. Those secret codes control the operations of the computer system. Those computers are interfaced with various terminal facilities in the United States of America - and there have been stories in the papers of even young kids being able to tap into sophisticated computer systems in the United States, and every company statistic and every government secret would be available to the United States authorities. We project in this Budget a new expensive building to be built to house all the modern technology which we now possess. I say to my fellow Members in this House, wake up, before we are led further downhill. No Caymanian graduates were employed in this department in the year 1987. It is almost totally staffed by foreign personnel. Foreign personnel who really owe no loyalty to this country other than waiting for the end of the month to come and the computer just spews out a cheque for their month's wages. We must not put such confidence on people who are not Caymanians.

The Budget speech revealed that there is evidence of hard drugs being landed on the remote Cayman shores. This is an area in which the police marine arm could be helpful, but what have we done with that enforcement arm? We fired the qualified Caymanian sea captain and we brought in a United Kingdom officer and put him in charge. I understand that when he went aboard ship the local officer approached him and said, 'Sir, I am going to the head.' He scratched his head and said, 'Well, my head is okay, I do not feel anything.' We need qualified people. We fire the qualified people that we have because they are Caymanian, and we entrust this arm to someone else.

The large police boat which was hired for the marine arm of Government has been laid up in Governor's Sound for nearly three years, gathering moss. The moss is about a foot thick on its bottom. I have only seen it put to sea one time, and that was about a week ago. The medium sized boat that we owned was, under expert guidance, wrecked on the reef of the North Sound. Now this country is preparing to spend, of the people's money, over C$2.5 million to purchase a pleasure yacht. That is all I can term it. Those of us who have any knowledge of the sea well know that that is not the type of craft that should be used in the law enforcement field, or that should be expected to operate in the ocean waters that surround us. That is strictly a pleasure yacht and, in my opinion, it will be used by certain people as a pleasure yacht. There is one consolation in this fact and that is that we do have, annually, a fishing tournament here, which, if you are the lucky angler, you may stand a chance of becoming a millionaire. So I can only hope that in the next tournament held that the police boat will see fit to enter. Maybe we will be lucky enough to catch a big marlin and win the big prize - and then we can say, 'Well, we got our money back!'

However, as far as hoping that any worthwhile law enforcement duty is going to be performed by this boat, we can forget it. The police Marine Branch is not functioning. It should be put under the Customs Department or the Port Authority, or perhaps a new branch of Government called the Cayman Coast Guard. The Customs Department and the Port Authority are in capable Caymanian hands, and I have the faith that they will do the job that is required if no one else can do it.

I was very pleased that ship registration is finally becoming a reality. This again is something that my colleague from Bodden Town and I brought to the attention of this House in 1972. However, over the years there have been many obstacles put in the way of its implementation. I am ashamed to see that the positions at the top in this department will not be filled by qualified Caymanians. We have Caymanians who have staffed offices in the United States' Coast Guard as deck surveyors, engine surveyors, and every job in the maritime field has been filled by them; yet they cannot come back to the land of their birth and fill these positions - those positions have to be given to someone else.

Serious crime is on the increase with the commission in the past few years of many murders and the large increase in drug trafficking. A blot that will forever stay on this administration was the uncalled for dismissal of Commissioner Stowers after the election in 1984, and the relaxation of the drug laws. We have just had two persons disappear off the face of the earth in thin air. Questions have been asked in this House about them this morning. It was not seen to be necessary to try and find out what happened. It was better that this Government expend its money in other areas. It is like these people were taken into the heavens, shrouded in ether and made into angels. We know nothing of what has happened to them. We seem to have but very little regard for human life. Did we bring in police dogs that could have followed the scent of these people from their clothing, even if it had been six months later? Did we bring in a team of detectives from Scotland Yard to try to locate them? Did we in any way try to determine the cause of their demise?

MR. PRESIDENT: If I may for a moment interrupt you. I think what you have said is entirely in order, although you have somewhat covered the same ground as earlier. But I think that if you take it any further, you will be raising the conduct of individual officers, and that must be done on a substantive motion if you choose.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well, Mr. President, it would have cost a few thousand dollars to put into effect what I have just said, and if we had spent the money in that way, we would not have been able to balance the Budget. The balancing of the Budget is the primary reason for its presentation and therefore it was not deemed necessary to put any value on human life.

It appears, Mr. President, that it is better to bring in teams of detectives and pay thousands of dollars (maybe per day) for housing, transportation, food and drinks, and to smear the reputation of politicians rather than to conduct enquiries into disappearances of people. It is only two lives that may have ended and it is much better to destroy political opposition than to worry about life? - I truly cannot believe that there is such utter disregard for human life and decency.

Mr. President, I can truly say to my people that (were it not that I feel I have made a worthy contribution in the service of my country and were it not that I was able to represent them), I become so disgusted with the human race and with some of my trips to this House. I see the treachery displayed like Jesus Christ looking down from the cross into the face of Judas Iscariot. I did not join in a motion recently brought to this House to investigate the police force of this country because I was of the opinion that it would have been destructive to the morale, and could only have destroyed the moral fibre of the police force. I believe very much in law and order, but an investigation of this nature would have only concentrated on our junior officers, most of whom are Caymanians. I now call on Government to investigate the senior officers of the police force, and some of the Elected Members of Executive Council.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, this is outside the scope of the Budget. You may move separate motions in that regard.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: With all due respect, I am still dealing with the Budget, because the money is spent and is a part of the Budget.

MR. PRESIDENT: That is correct, you may question the reasons for which it is spent, but you must not impute improper motives to any Member of this House, or any officer in the service of the Crown. That is what I am asking you to avoid.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I do not think I was imputing anything that has not been done in this House. I said I did not support a motion previously brought, but that I would support it at this time.

MR. PRESIDENT: Then you may bring the motion with proper notice. No problem.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I may do that. I call on this to be done because people in this country are getting tired of the South African tactics that are being used.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, I must interrupt you again. That is imputing improper motives quite clearly. I must ask you not to make that sort of remark.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I will try not to. Records are stolen. Electronic bugs are being used to monitor the conversations of people - and are being placed in strategic public areas. Electronic bugs are being placed by someone at the expense of this Government - on home phones and on lawyers' telephones. People's homes are being broken into and documents lost. This is the truth. It is not just an allegation. This has happened. It has never happened, I believe, in our country before, and it has happened at the expense of the people and at the expense of the Budget because money to do this has to be used. Where is the money coming from if it is not the people's money, from the people's Budget? I say that if we are to live in a democratic country, policies such as these must cease. I am not prepared to be Mr. Mandela. I may admire him for being a patriot, but I do not admire him for being a martyr. I believe and have always believed it is better to die for one's convictions than live as a slave. I will not bow, neither will I be a slave.

I have for 16 years been an Elected Member of this House, and during that time (the House records will reveal) I have always been a solid champion of the police force of this country. I have fought for the selection of our people to the police force, and fought to see that they were promoted. I have fought for good pay for them, and good working conditions. I have fought for proper training for them, I have also fought for them being commanded by a native Caymanian. I was a prime mover for the police cadets and the local constabulary that was established, and I take much pride in this. This present Government cannot afford to buy a constable a new shirt, but they can afford to go into every witch hunt type of investigation in the world. They can afford to pay great costs for condominium rentals and air fares, but they cannot afford to give the Bodden Town district more than $5,000 out of an $84 million Budget.

If we are going to become a police state, for God's sake give us prior warning of it. I say to the people of this country, and to you as President of the House, that a political vendetta to ruin my name and to ruin me politically has begun. It begun, I believe, from your elected Executive Council, because they know they have failed the people of this country. They know the people want a change. The majority of the people in this country, in my opinion, still have faith and trust in the Unity Team. They know that the Unity Team will bring them back the security and prosperity that they had in the years 1976 to 1984, and not the taxation methods that are being employed in the years 1984 to 1988. I cannot believe, neither can many other people, that all the standards of decency and of the legal profession are being destroyed. A precedent is being set in this country that will do no one any good, because in the future with every Government, on losing an election, and on the eve of a new election, there will be investigations of them. How long can we survive with this type of thing going on?

Mr. President, in an attempt to assist the population of the Lesser Islands, this House has made several attempts by lowering import duty and in giving other assistance to help its economic future. Building material was lowered from 20 per cent to 2.5 per cent, which meant that there was a great loss of revenue to the country. I agree with some of those changes. I agree it was necessary and I support the economy of the Lesser Islands now, as I have in the past, and as I will in the future. But I ask the House, who was the real person to benefit from this? Was it not one of the largest building material suppliers in Florida? The past Governor of this country, Mr. President, left here purportedly to build a home in Bermuda, and apparently he got side-tracked on the way to visit this building supplier. If he had been going to do an investigation of me, an investigation of him should be done to find out why he visited ...

offensive, and irrelevant.

Sorry, I must interrupt you, that is improper, and

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Thank you, Sir.

The point remains, Mr. President, that the economy of the Sister Islands has been strengthened by the moves which have been made in this Honourable House, and I would like to know who, in the end, will really benefit. Will it be the country or will it be a private individual?

We are celebrating one hundred years of public funded education in the Cayman Islands. I do not believe that this is entirely accurate, because history provides us the information that education in these Islands was promoted by the churches. The churches bore the brunt of the education expense in this country for many years. There was little or no support coming from the governments of the past for education. In my opinion, one of the greatest indictments against Government has been their lack of action in the field of education. That is why today we are suffering so much in having to employ so many expatriate workers. Government, or no one else, paid any attention to education in this country. The same thing happened to us, in the Cayman Islands, as happened in every colonial country in the world. The people were not educated. They were not given a chance to get an education, and the same policy continues in our country today.

In a previous administration, the Honourable First Elected Member to Executive Council signed an agreement to substitute the G.C.E. examinations for a Caribbean examination that would have taught our youngsters all the glorious benefits of Communism. This is a fact. We could not today boast that some of the youngsters in this country have passed six, seven, eight, nine, ten G.C.E. "O" level examinations if the present Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council had had his way, because we would have been teaching our youngsters all the merits of Communism and Black Power in the schools had he had not been stopped in his tracks by the stalwart actions of a Unity Team member, Truman Bodden. This is a fact.

We have been told in this Budget speech that the Department of Education employs 294 people. I ask today, how many of them are Caymanian? Do you know why there are no Caymanians there? - because history bears out everything I have said in this House in my speeches. No attention was ever paid to training the Caymanian. It was easier to bring in 40 more United Kingdom people - as we did a few weeks ago. At least the United Kingdom should thank us for one thing - we helped them tremendously with their unemployment problems.

There are now 19 Caymanians abroad in teacher training, and I am proud of that fact. However, I am sure that most of these were sent under scholarships provided by the Unity Team Government and not the present administration. I will go further with this in the later part of my discourse, Mr. President, so when I return to it, please do not think I am repeating myself, because I will not be.

Instead of providing better facilities for the training of the handicapped, we bring in consultants. We consult and we expert our problem to death. Why can we not see what is needed? Why cannot we see what our country and our people need, instead of paying millions of dollars for consultants and experts to tell us what we should not do. Most of us pride ourselves on having good common sense. Well, for God's sake let us for one time use it, rather than spend the people's money foolishly and idly as this elected administration has been doing.

I am of the firm opinion that what we should be thinking about in our educational system is the establishment of a middle school and a high school in the Bodden Town area to serve the eastern districts. This will alleviate the congestion at the present schools and give a better atmosphere to the training of our youngsters. I know that nothing will be done during this administration in this respect, maybe the next administration will come to grips with it.

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council informed this House that up to September of this year all scholarships granted have been on a loan basis. It is good to know that, even if it is done with loans, some of our people are being educated, but the students will have to work a long time for this Government to pay them back. Mr. President, the other side of the problem is that the parents have to be bonded for this money. Most of them are poor families who do not have the resources that the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council would probably accept for bonding purposes. So what they have to do is go out and beg their friends to sign the bond for their children.

I put it to this House, this is not the proper system for a developing country like ours. We should utilise all the brain power that we are able to harness. This action is discriminatory against the poorer classes. In the entire world, some of the best brains have come from people who started in life from a low estate. We should be sure in this country that any youngster, regardless of how rich or how poor he may be, will have a chance to earn a rightful place in the future of this country, if he has the ability to do so and if he has the intestinal fortitude to follow through with a course of education which will qualify him for a good future position. I can only ask at this time, Mr. President, if we do not follow the policy of spending the money to educate our young people, does the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council wish to continue paying the expensive prices for housing on Seven Mile Beach, air fares across the globe from Europe and large gratuities and high wages to the people that we have to bring in? Would it not be better to spend some of this money in educating our young people than to give the high gratuities that we give to some of these employees?

I am happy to know that this administration hopes to leave one other monument to its credit, and that is the rehabilitation facility for juveniles. They will then have left two monuments: the Farmers' Market which probably cost about $120 per foot to build, and this facility. We hope the cost for the erection of this facility will not be as great as it was for the Farmers' Market. The Members of this House, for many years, tried to get this facility built. We realise it will be of great benefit to the youngsters of this country who get into problems. We hope that we will be very careful in the selection of the House Mother and House Father for this facility when it comes about.

I have heard that eleven young Caymanians, some of whom had jobs in the private sector were lured by the present administration to quit their jobs and become student teachers for two years, on the promise that at the expiry of two years they would be given scholarships to train and qualify as teachers. I understand that some waited three years before they finally got hired and quit Government. As the time went by they were told that Government had no money to provide the scholarships, so they became disillusioned and quit - 11 whom we could have had as teachers. But, Mr. President, even if they had qualified and returned home, they probably would have been given jobs answering telephones. Their salaries would probably have been so low that they would have been comparable to the provision for an expatriate's housing allowance. And we wonder why our people become disillusioned and either leave the Island and never return, or if they return, they get out of Government service as soon as they can.

Mr. President, I do not know if you would like a suspension at this time, but I would appreciate it. My throat is getting a bit dry from this cold.

MR. PRESIDENT: Can I take it you have concluded on education for the moment, because that would then be convenient.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Well, I might come back on that a little further on, Sir, but it is more or less finished at this point.

MR. PRESIDENT: All right.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I have two other parts of this Member's portfolio to work on.

MR. PRESIDENT:

In that case the House will suspend, but we will come back a little before our normal time. We will take an hour and a half and resume at, say, ten past two? I see a call for two o'clock over there. Is that agreeable to Members? Two o'clock it is, then. We are suspended until two o'clock.

AT 12:36 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

In the area of health services, we are finally being told that the Government is aware of the devastating effects of drugs on our society, and that the rehabilitation services are being beefed up by employing a Drug Counsellor. In my opinion this is too little and too late. This is a problem above politics, and the Government should get input from all Elected Members of this House. The problems affect the entire country, regardless of race, colour, creed, wealth or poverty, education or illiteracy.

The drug problem is not only rampant in this society, it is rampant in the whole world. I think we can go to great lengths in trying to curb it in our small country. I believe in, and have always championed, strict enforcement laws in regard to drugs, but I also believe that sympathy is to be shown, and that we must wisely put a programme together to help our people who have become victims to this scourge. I call on Government to wake up, to do something positive, and to help our people who are afflicted and give them some hope.

Drugs are more prevalent in our society today than ever before because this administration in power lessened the drug penalties that had been put into the law by the Unity Team Government. They fulfilled their campaign promises by lessening prison sentences and setting a bad example for the country. At the same time, they summarily released the police chief of this country from his position. This did not help what was going on in the drug trade because much had been done by the Chief of Police at that time in combating the drugs.

We are told that the public education programme on AIDS has been successful. I am thankful for this. Action in this area needs to be taken, as I previously dealt with in my debate. AIDS has become a scourge of mankind, and it is no respecter of national borders, wealth, poverty, race or colour. I am sympathetic to anyone who may be afflicted, and I wish them God's blessings. We can only thank God and say, 'There, but for the grace of God go I.'

In the field of social services, Mr. President, nothing is being done. It is being sorely mismanaged. We vote money in this house to help the poor, and at the end of the year the vote lapses and the money supposedly remains in the Treasury because the present Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council responsible for these services does not wish to alleviate the suffering of the poor people of this country. He operates on the policy that because he may have some wealth, the poor do not exist. It is an often quoted phrase that the poor you will have forever.

In my opinion, Mr. President, it would be ridiculous for us to believe that it takes three days at the Government hospital to get the result of an ordinary blood test. How is this possible when we have so many consultants and experts? How ridiculous. One may lie dying and the doctor cannot get the results of your blood test. I have been told that in some cases it takes three weeks of booking in advance to be able to get an ordinary x-ray done. If this is so, it is incumbent on this House to make a proper investigation into the medical services of this country. If the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council alone cannot come to grips with it then let us as a united force of this House come to grips with it for the good of our people. The less fortunate in our country have to put up with some of these problems because they can no better do. They cannot afford to hop on a aeroplane to seek medical attention abroad. It is a shame that they are forgotten by this present administration. The Members of the present administration only remember these people when election time rolls around. They should have longer memories than that.

I am pleased that George Town will receive a public water system. However, we, as the Elected Members of this House should be shown the contracts and supplied with the full details as to what is involved. What are our obligations? How much is the contract? What will the full cost of this be? Is it another of the open-end contracts which this administration is so renowned for? Why did we have to vote another large loan of over $1 million a few days ago? They should have had the full figures available to them. It should have been properly researched. These types of open-end contracts should not be entered into by the Government.

The Unity Team Government stopped trading between Colombia and our country. We did this for various reasons which are now, and have been, apparent to the House. I submit that the explanation given as to why a contract has been awarded to a Colombian company is not acceptable. We must ask how many of these people have been brought in? What will happen to them when the contract is finished? What will happen in regard to repairing the roads that will be destroyed? Who will pay for those repairs? Is that a part of the contract the Government entered into with the Colombians? If not, is it an obligation that Government will accept over and above the payment of the contract price? If so, the cost to Government is going to be excessive. How could we figure $2 million to complete this project and it cost $4.2 million? It is my humble opinion that any fifth grade student in one of our schools could have calculated the cost of this contract better than was done by this Government.

When we see examples like this, should we wonder why we are in the mess that we are in? The Water Authority was started by the Unity Team Government. The well field and reservoir at Lower Valley was completed and operational, and the well field and reservoir at East End was nearly complete. They talk about their self-financing schemes, but these schemes were started before they came into power. The profit in the water scheme for George Town does not apparently go to the Water Authority, it goes to Caribbean Utilities Co. Ltd. (CUC). We should be given a good reason as to why this was done. Was it that somebody at CUC had a good, firm handshake? This contract should have been aired in this House and every Member should have full knowledge of it. If we were forewarned we would have no reason to question what is going on.

We should ask ourselves what is happening to promote agriculture in our country. What are we doing to give the farmers the property, advice and support that they need. Our colleague in the Unity Team Government from East End did wonders in promoting agriculture and bringing it to the forefront. What has been accomplished since he left that position? Relatively nothing. We do have a monument. We have a small Farmers' Market that has apparently cost us a fortune. Savannah has not obtained a cattle dip because the Budget has to be balanced and it was balanced at the expense of the Bodden Town District. East End, we were told, could not be provided with a cattle dip because no place could be found where the soil was not hard rock. This is unbelievable. It is ridiculous and it is utter nonsense; it is nothing but political victimisation. The people of these districts are suffering - suffering at the hands of political victimisation. What is being done about the much needed interior farm roads that were constantly being built in the past? What are we doing to open up the interior lands of the country to agriculture?

It is time also that more attention be paid to the Mosquito Research Department. If we do not control the mosquito population our tourism economy will be destroyed. I have to ask are we using a cheaper brand of insecticide? Is the insecticide that we are using approved for use in the United States or is it just for Third World countries? If it is only for Third World countries and export only, then we should check into this matter because in the long term this could prove to be disastrous to our people. I hope that due attention will be paid to this and that we will be advised in the near future whether the insecticides being used can be used in the United States, or whether they are only approved for export.

I am glad to know that finally Cayman Brac will be getting its new airport terminal. It is badly needed and in my opinion it will help to bring prosperity to the Lesser Islands. I am also pleased to know that the plans of the Unity Team Government to place Owen Roberts Airport facilities into a separate operational entity was done. This is a good self-financing project. We should have no difficulty in it meeting all of its obligations. I would ask, however, that the use of the car wheel clamps from England be discarded. They have not used it on my vehicle, but I just hate to see someone, whom we are paying as a security guard, walking around with a contraption that perhaps could have been used in the interior of the Vietnam conflict. This is alien to our society and our way of life. I would ask that they be discarded. I do not believe that we are that hard up for a few dollars.

I wish to compliment the Head of the Fire Service and his complete staff. This continues to be one of the most professional and proficient of the Government departments. I join in support for the new fire station at Owen Roberts Airport and the one at West Bay although I did say that, in considering the financial position of the country with us having to borrow so much money, it might have been worthwhile to delay the project.

I wish to go on record in publicly thanking the people of Dade County, Florida, for donating a fire rescue vehicle. This came about because of the twinning done during the Unity Team administration between our Islands and Dade County. Our Government's attitude in regard to accepting this gift apparently was one of extreme reluctance. I would advise the Members of this House that this action in no way reflected on the Unity Team Government, it only hurt the country.

Money has been put into the Budget for work to commence on the new post office building in 1988 - if we are able to borrow the money. If the financial sources do not begin to place us in the category of some of the South American countries, we will then be able to borrow over $8 million in the coming year. But I would say to the Elected Government that again the Elected Members of this House should have the details of the proposed building. How large is it? How will it be utilised? Where will it be put? What will it cost? It is my humble submission that we should give consideration to placing the proposed new post office somewhere in the airport complex. Government has adequate lands in that area. They can provide plenty of parking. It is easily accessible. The land cost is negligible, and it has easy access for arriving and departing aeroplanes. I suggest that this would be a very good area for the post office rather than using the expensive land that we have downtown.

I wish to thank the portfolio of Communications and Works for the completion of the Savannah School multi-purpose hall and the fine job that has been done on the Spotts and Lower Valley roads although it may have been expensive. I can imagine the fight that the Honourable Member responsible must have had in convincing his three other colleagues that the district of the Unity Team rebels should get something.

On behalf of the people of my district, I thank him for having this done for us.

I also wish to thank the many Members of the large civil service system whom I think are worthy of commendation. There are many people in the civil service who have done a very creditable job over a period of years although there are many who should not be there. However, overall I think they are deserving of praise.

The Financial Secretary, in delivering the Budget Speech warned that it would be imprudent for Government to make any further substantial borrowings in the near future as servicing the loans would create a heavy burden on revenue. I could not support him more in giving this warning to the people. This is a very wise saying and I fully endorse his words. The benefit which the people thought they would get from this administration has been minuscule. The burden has been great. Your great grandchildren will be paying off the debts of the last four years.

The Caymanian Compass, the daily newspaper, has a reputation of lukewarm attacks on any Government policy. In its editorial of Friday the 20th of November, it makes a scathing attack on Government policies on news releases. Government should be free with information and not hide from the public everything that it does. Government must set the example of informing the people and I must, at this point, ask of the Elected Government whether this is a new policy of the genius which it brought in, after the last election, to head the Government Information Services? Has the bull once more gotten into the china cabinet and cannot be contained? I say if this is his policy of direction for this Government, he should go as he went once before and this time he should go for good.

In 1984 the budget was $55,196,158, with no new services, and a projected surplus of $556,702. In 1988, the projected budget from recurrent revenue will be $75,948,327, an increase of 36 per cent over the four years. New services are budgeted at $2,010,949, and there is a predicted surplus of $146,422. In my opinion, this is an unattainable and unrealistic Budget, because the same method has been used for the last three years in an attempt to balance it and it is being used again this time. Unreasonable cost factors are being used. Under capital expenditure for the construction of roads, a figure of $34,000 has been put in. I would like to know what we expect to do with $34,000 in the building of roads. What can this build? What kind of post office building will we build with $2 million.

This Government boasted of transferring $2 million to Government reserves in 1987. In this administration, this is the first time that they have done this, but this is a bit ridiculous when you consider that this same Government borrowed, during that period, $7,855,942. It would have been better to have reduced the borrowings by $2 million, and only borrowed $5,855,942, rather than trying to put $2 million of borrowed money into a reserve, when you are paying a higher rate of interest than you can earn by having it there.

The 1988 Budget is only $2,582,410 more than the year 1987. A very slow rate of growth. Compare this rate of growth to the rate of growth experienced by this country in the years 1976 to 1984 under the Unity Team administration. The figures I have quoted here show only a five per cent annual growth. Recurrent expenditures are $7,515,120 more than 1987, or about a 12 per cent increase. In other words, we are expending 12 per cent more than we did in 1987, and we are only receiving an income of five per cent more.

This administration has not been able to assist the private sector with much needed financial support in the form of properly secured loans as we did in the previous administration.

I come to another submission that is a bit difficult for me to understand. Cruise ship arrival tax was $370,551 less in 1987 than it was in 1986. I have to question this, because apparently there were more cruise ships in 1987 than there were in 1986. In 1988 it is projected at $960,000 less than it was projected in 1987. Why? What has gone wrong with the figures in this section of the economy?

The revenue from liquor licences for 1988 are projected at $116,982 less than the $246,982 collected in 1986. Again, I ask why? Everyone in the country fully knows that this administration went on an indiscriminate binge in changing the liquor laws, allowing anyone at any place to get a liquor licence. They increased the fees charged for liquor licences, and they increased the import duty. Well then, why are we collecting less money?

Motor vehicle drivers' licences are projected at $25,589 less than the collections in 1986. Again, I ask why? I also, at this point, ask why we gave away the $92,000 licence fee to CUC that was in the previous budget? Why is the sale of water to the tune of $880,400 and sewerage charges of $1,166,468 were added to the revenue when apparently they were set up as autonomous bodies. This income should go to those autonomous bodies. These two figures together will give us, if deleted from the revenue budget, a shortage of about $2 million, therefore representing a $2 million deficit in the projected budget.

The fees from agriculture are $100,000 less than those collected in 1986 - another example to this House to show that the Honourable Member responsible is doing nothing in this area. Corporation Management licences will bring $116,252 less in 1988 than what was collected in 1987.

We have a figure in the Budget for royalties on water. The Unity Team administration negotiated with the Cayman Water Company, and this is apparently where this Government will be getting the $275,000 from. I submit that that amount or more would be forthcoming from CUC if this administration had not negotiated such a sweetheart deal with CUC. If I am wrong, please show us the contracts to back up what has been done.

Interest on cash balances in the Treasury in 1984 was put forward as $1,344,000. In 1988 it will be $650,000, which is quite a substantial difference over a four year period. In 1986 this elected administration took from the Currency Board $1,330,524. In 1987 it took $1,489,591. In 1988 it will take $1 million. My comment is that they are surely milking this cow.

$1 million is projected as revenue from the Civil Aviation Authority. At this point it is unsure. What happens if the Civil Aviation Authority, after it meets its obligation, is not able to make this donation? If this happens we will be another $1 million in deficit. If you do get it, you can thank the Unity Team and Jim Bodden, because although it has been christened twice, it is probably still the sinner it was before.

Under expenses, finance and development costs are estimated at $1.3 million less than was spent in 1986. We know this is unlikely to happen. I am pointing these figures out to show the country how ridiculous and unrealistic the Budget is. The administrative costs for Health, Education and Social Services have increased for the year 1988 by a projected amount of $352,000 more than was spent in 1987. This is a ridiculous amount for administrative costs, particularly in light of the little that is being done by this portfolio. Personal health costs have increased by $762,000. Can we be sure that the people of this country will get the benefit of this added expenditure?

The administration of Development and Natural Resources has increased its operational cost in the projected Budget by $675,000 to $1,368,813. Why? When this particular portfolio does so little, why should it cost us so much?

The Department of Tourism increased its expenditure to $6,249,927, compared to $3,298,708 in 1984 - about a 90 per cent increase in four years. I have to ask at this point why such a large increase when tourism arrivals overall from the year 1984 until 1988 has probably not increased more than 30 to 35 per cent. In my opinion, this is another case of indiscriminate spending.

Wages to be paid to civil servants in the 1988 fiscal year are listed as costing the country $36,079,993 - 51.54 per cent of the overall Budget. This is an alarming amount of money, yet there have to be further increases and I will deal with them when we come to the new services.

The utility costs to this Government in the various departments are becoming prohibitive. I refer to the telephone and electricity bills. Some attempt should be made to curb this expenditure.

In the 1988 Budget we have a projection that $1,800,000 will be paid in housing for the expatriate employees of the Government. In addition the freight and passage costs paid for these people amount to another $260,000, which means that for housing and transportation we are spending over $2 million. On top of that we have another large figure in the form of gratuities which I will deal with later. When you add all this together you will find that the benefits paid to the civil servants of the country are running over 60 per cent of the general revenue. Yet this administration is attempting to enlarge the civil service again. If they are going to enlarge it by putting only local people into these positions, then maybe they would have a good argument for enlarging it.

When I quote all these figures to the House and dissect this Budget we find that there will be an expenditure of $2,000 in 1988 for road safety. This is ridiculous. What can we do with $2,000 to promote road safety in our country. All this shows is the utter disregard for human life that this administration has.

The employee benefits in the finance and development area of the Budget will increase in 1988 over 1987 by $1,210,000 - an increase of about 100 per cent. The supplies used in the Finance Department have increased from $41,269 in 1986 to $180,750 in 1988 - an increase of about 350 per cent in two years. In the Budget we have a projection that $1,074,000 will be spent on a salary review for the civil service. I think I speak correctly when I say that under the present rules of the civil service no raise will be considered unless it is more than 5 per cent. Now if we apply those figures to the wage increase that is being promised to the civil service, and based on the amount of personal emoluments payable to them in the Budget, we can readily figure that it will take at least $1.8 million to meet Government's obligation in this area. Yet a figure of only $1,074,000 has been put in in an attempt to balance the budget.

There is a figure in the Budget for gratuity for contracted officers, and it is a large amount - $780,000. I keep stressing amounts and pressing my attacks to show that it would be better for this country if some of the money was used to provide scholarships for our poor people, rather than to continue using the money in these ways.

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council, out of his beneficence to mankind, put in a figure in his budget of $13,000 towards the drug and alcohol programmes. What does he really expect to accomplish out of this when he is probably going to have to spend $30,000 to get a consultant to come here to try to advise him what to do.

I am sure there is a good explanation for the following, but under the expenditures for the portfolio of Development and Natural Resources, utility costs increase from $15,647 in 1986 to $490,385 in 1988 - about a 3,200 per cent increase. I think the Budget reveals that this is for water. I do not know what water we could be buying that will cost us that amount of money at this point. There is also a further expenditure for utilities under the same portfolio of $60,000, with this increasing from $312 in 1986. I have to ask again, why?

The wages payable in the Planning Department in the year 1988 by about $140,000 - an increase of about 55 per cent in one year. The advertising budget for the Department of Tourism in 1988 will be $2,532,600. In 1984 the figure spent for advertising was $961,615. This represents an increase in four years of 160 per cent, or approximately 40 per cent per year increase. What have we really gotten for this money? We cannot be shown arrival figures to match this expenditure. If we are shown figures to match this, then it is not of the quality deemed necessary for these Islands to continue in big strides. The collateral and photography costs in the same portfolio for 1988 will be $510,875. In 1984 it was $306,106. This is an increase of about 65 per cent.

I have to ask why, in the projected Budget, are we spending no money in the year 1988 for hospital furniture and no money for school equipment or school furniture. There is one very good thing, though, with all this gloom, Mr. President, that I have been able to find in the Budget. In the year 1986 we spent, on the cemeteries of the Island, $69,963, but in 1988 I find in the same column that there is no projected expenditure for cemeteries. I wonder why? That is very heartening news, Mr. President. It must mean that we have all been spared and promised a longer life.

In 1988 we will spend $45,500 for disaster preparedness. Last year we spent $4,680. Now this, Mr. President, is about a 1000 per cent increase in expenditure, and this makes it quite plain that the Government of the day realises that we have to prepare for the disaster they created. And they have provided us $45,000 to do so.

Computerisation has become such a big part of Government expenditure that we will also spend another $400,000 this year to build a building to house it. Again, I would have to ask is this adequate because $400,000 at $120 per square foot of building will not build a very large building.

I have to point out again the beneficence of the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council. I see a vote in the Budget under capital expenditures for $2,000 for the Lighthouse School. I wonder what they are going to be able to do in one year with $2,000 at the Lighthouse School. His generosity matches his good looks.

HON. REMSON D. FRANKS:

If it did, they would be well off!

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, $250,000 is provided in the Budget for the Juvenile Rehabilitation Centre. Again, it would be wonderful if all the Members of this House knew what we planned to build, how big it was going to be and exactly what its aims are, instead of just saying that they will be spending $250,000. As I previously said, if it is going to cost us $120 per square foot to build, then we will not have a very large building for the $250,000.

Should the figures I have taken from the various budgets be correct, in 1986 this administration spent $1,310,022 on the sewer project. In 1987 they spent $6,194,767, and in 1988 we will spend $3,288,362. This is a total of $10.8 million. Yet to my knowledge, the Members on this side of the House have no knowledge of what that contract entails.

Before any Members of the present Government should jump to their feet and take the credit for establishing the sewer system, let me remind them that it was my worthy colleague from Bedden Town who laid the ground work for this project also, and that they are only carrying on what he so nobly set forth.

We have to ask is this the amount the scheme will cost? Are there additional amounts to be spent? The main thing to ask at this time is what is going to happen to the West Bay/George Town road? That road was built many years ago and it had been maintained in a very good fashion, but it will be ruined by the time these contractors get through with it. Are the repairs to that road included in the $10.8 million that we have already paid, or do we have to pay the funds to the contractor in addition to that, or is it that after the contractor has been paid will Public Works do the repairs? If so, we are not looking at the true cost of $10.8 million for the sewer scheme in three years. I am not up to date with the figures on this, but I am sure that it would cost probably another $2 million at least to resurface with black top the road from George Town to West Bay. So that has to be added to the cost. If we have not paid it already, we have to pay it in the future.

At this point, Mr. President, I would like to deal with new services, and to point out as my colleague has done, how ridiculous the preparation of this Budget has been.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Perhaps, might I interrupt you, because we are close to our normal break, and I make it that you have 22 minutes to go, so you might like to take a break now and come back to new services?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I would appreciate that, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

We suspend for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:07 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:28 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of the House are resumed. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, during the break, I was advised by the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council that the $92,000 reference I made in regard to CUC is still a part of the Budget and that I would find it under section 70-001, lumped with some other figures which amount to $775,000. I apologise if I committed an error here, but I really did not come across any place in the Budget that shows this. I looked into the areas where it would normally be, and I did not find it, so I supposed at that time that it had been taken out and that they had been given a holiday.

The same Honourable Member has also advised and given me some information on the road projects. I was about to come to that in my next submission. There is an expenditure for roads of $1,400,000, but under the capital side of it, on the loan portfolio side, there is the $34,000 that I mentioned. In total for the year of 1988 the country will spend about $1,434,000 on roads, of which $400,000 is projected for an expenditure in the Lesser Islands. In addition to that, we will spend $282,500 on the maintenance of roads. I do not want anyone to get the impression that I meant it was only $34,000. The point I was bringing out is that in this particular area of the Budget there was only an expenditure for $34,000.

I am made to understand, Mr. President, that the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council has been busy canvassing the stores in Miami that make plaques. The reason for this is that he feels he may have been left out, and that a plaque should suitably be made, inscribing his name and accomplishments, which will in the near future be put at the Farmers' Market on the lands of Government towards the airport. I, at this point, would like to ask him to be sure to extend to me an invitation for this ceremony.

Under new services, Mr. President, I find an item of $10. This $10, as was explained by my colleague from Bodden Town a few days ago, will go to pay the wages of a Liquor Inspector in 1988. I am very pleased to see that finally Government recognises that in this department we should have an inspector. But I wonder whether we are going to bring him from Ireland or some other place and whether he will work for $10 a year.

In the next column on this submission in the Budget, we find an item for $675 for car allowance for this particular person. Now the danger that is inherent when we make a token vote like this is that we accept the principle that the job will be filled. The $10 is a token fee, but the wages will probably amount to $35,000 to $40,000. So when we vote the $10, we are not voting $10 but the full amount of money that he will receive.

The same thing occurs in another column where it shows $10 expenditure for construction of the new immigration building. I have to ask what type of building this could be? Again, the danger, Mr. President, is that if this is accepted and voted upon, we are not accepting a figure of $10 but rather probably a figure of $1 million which is what it would probably cost to build. Where is the money going to come from to defray this expense? We are all aware of the position Government finds itself in. There is no money in surplus. If this is built we will either have to come to the House for some increase in the form of taxation to cover it, or we will have to borrow more money from some of the lending institutions. And as I will point out in the next few minutes, in my estimation this country cannot afford to borrow any more money. We have just about gotten to the limit with regard to the amount that we can borrow and the amount that we can service.

We also have a token vote of $10 for the salary of a Puisne Judge. Again, I agree that we probably need this position filled. However, we know the amount of money we pay to the other holder of the present position, so why did we not put that amount in the Budget and then ask for the vote? If that had been done though the Budget would not have been presented to us showing a surplus. I think this is a wrong type of budgeting.

The total under new services amounts to $2,010,949. As close as I can figure it, Mr. President, this will create about 80 new jobs in the civil service. Our civil service, as I have previously pointed out, is a very large one. It takes a lot of Government's revenue to pay the civil service and its many benefits, and if we extend the civil service by another 80 new posts we are creating a serious drain on Government finances. I would submit to the present Members of the Elected Government that they go through, department by department, and find out if some of the existing holders in the different departments could not be transferred or trained to take some of these new positions, rather than having to create new positions to bring more people into the civil service. To enlarge the civil service much further would, in my opinion be, ridiculous.

In 1984 the budget for this country was $55,196,158, with $11,715,502 going into capital expenditure. For that year no new services were brought in. During that time, and at the end of 1984 there was a surplus in reserve of about $11.2 million. This $11.2 million included the approximate $4.5 million that was pledged for the Tower Building. At that time, Mr. President, it took 2.4 per cent of Government's general revenue to finance the national debt, or about $1.4 million a year. Four years later, in 1988, we find ourselves in this position: in 1985 (according to Government's revenue budgets which were presented to this House) this present Elected Government borrowed $2,569,713; in 1986 it borrowed $8,454,000; in 1987 it borrowed $7,855,942; in 1988 it is projected that we will borrow $8,363,902 - the total in four years will amount to $27,243,557. This is a large national debt. It is a debt that will be with us for a very long time. It is a debt that will take the next generation to pay it off. We should be very careful how we vote anything for new services because in voting for new services, as I mentioned previously, the token fees could be disastrous. The addition of 80 new posts could again bring this Government into a very bad state of affairs.

In 1988 it will take about 5.4 per cent of the general revenue or approximately $4 million to service the national debt. This is up by an expenditure of approximately $2.5 million in four years - a large increase in four years. This would approximately be a 185 per cent increase in expenditure, in a period of four years, to service the national debt. What is happening, Mr. President, is that this country has embarked too much on a spending spree. We are spending money and not getting our money's worth.

Mr. President, if my watch is correct, I think I am within about three minutes of my allotted time span.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I was just going to signal you five minutes.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I have an additional 20 to 25 pages I would like to comment on. I do not know whether this House would be willing to give me the additional time, but in case they do not, Mr. President, I will end my present debate expecting that no additional time will be granted, by saying that I have wondered on many occasions why a person would ever seek political office. Having spent 16 years in this House, I continue to ask myself the same thing. Unfortunately, having spent 16 years, I still cannot answer that question. I am, however, thankful that my life has been spared and that the people of my district have given me the opportunity to stand once more in this Assembly to present the views of myself and those of my people. I hope that the Honourable First Official Member will be able to create great magic in the year ahead and, with all the tribulations and trials he may have in putting up with the present Elected Government, that God will help him to find the funds to have a balanced budget at the expiry of the year 1988.

MOTION

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 32(6)

I would ask at this time that I be allotted, if possible, another hour to complete my speech. I believe I would have to move this in accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 83.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I take it that you have moved for that. I need a seconder before we can proceed.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I second the Motion.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Motion has been duly moved and seconded that Standing Orders be suspended in order to enable the First Elected Member for Budden Town to continue for one more hour on the Second Reading of the Appropriation Bill. I shall put the question unless any Member wishes to speak. It is of course I think possible for any Member, who wishes, to speak for four hours on this subject, if he can be relevant. Maybe I should put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AYES AND NOES

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, may I have a division?

MR. PRESIDENT:

MOTION DEFEATED BY MAJORITY

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I think this proves my point.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate the Honourable First Official Member, the Financial Secretary, for a cautious though reasonable Budget. Mr. President, I would wish to describe this Budget as a reasonable Budget. If it is indeed the Budget of the Elected Government, I must say that they are to be congratulated on submitting a reasonable Budget to the House.

Before dealing with the meat of my debate, I wish to say that I am reminded that freedom of speech does not imply freedom from responsibility. So accordingly, Sir, I will bring to bear a level of responsibility in my contribution to this Budget debate.

I am further, Sir, reminded of a quotation from Plato, and I quote: "Wise men talk because they have something to say, fools because they have to say something". I trust, Sir, that I will not fall into the latter category.

Contrary, Mr. President, to a few pessimists, I believe that the capital projects being undertaken by Government are timely, worthwhile and needed. As this is the Budget Session I will refrain from dealing with detailed debate on some individual departments, and will leave this for the debate of the Throne Speech early next year, God willing.

It was most encouraging to hear the Honourable Financial Secretary report on the encouraging signs of economic expansion in our economy, in both the financial and tourism sectors. I would, however, be remiss in my contribution if I did not reflect on some other areas that could create a problem in our economy.

The Honourable Financial Secretary alluded to the possible problems from the Black Monday crash on Wall Street, and to other world problems. One of the biggest, most negative forces against us today and our economy is, in my opinion, the inappropriate policies and attitudes of the management and of certain members of the Caymanian Protection Board. Unless the proper policies and attitudes exist in this Board, our economy will be a shambles. I will not deal in any detail on this subject because I do not think that it leads itself to that, but it bears directly on the future development of our economy; not only in the financial sector but also in the tourism sector, and it affects the lives of individuals in the Cayman Islands. I believe Sir, that it is timely that a thorough investigation be carried out into the policies and practices of this Board and that this matter be dealt with without delay. Enough said on this.

It is my understanding that we are attracting better and more solid business since the signing of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty. I would still, however, be most cautious to not let down our guard as we have not had sufficient time to test the intervention or the intention and resolve of the United States of America. To the best of my knowledge the Treaty has not yet been ratified by the United States Senate, even though I feel that it would be to our best advantage if this was done sooner rather than later.

Mr. President, it is gratifying to note that the 1988 Budget has taken into account the uncertainty of the financial markets - fully appreciating our very delicate position. The Honourable Financial Secretary has therefore recognised the need not to undertake too many new capital projects which could result in the overheating of our economy.

The 1988 Budget totalling some $84 million, $71 million of which is estimated to be raised from local or ordinary revenue, is an increase of 9 per cent over the 1987 approved revenue figure. As I deal with this Budget, I feel that I am as qualified as any speaker on this floor to analyse and assess the Budget as presented. Accordingly, Sir, I will do my utmost to make a fair presentation of my analysis.

We see from the Budget that $3.8 million is allocated for statutory expenditure, $1.2 million being allocated for public debt; $1.6 million represents capital repayments; and approximately $1 million for public officers - that is pensions and gratuities totalling three quarters of a million dollars, widows and orphans about $16,000, and pensions for Members of the Legislative Assembly of about $280,000.

As can be seen from these figures, $2.8 million has been allocated to service public debt, which represents about 4 per cent of recurrent revenue. However, when the statutory costs for pensions, etcetera, are added to servicing the public debt, the percentage is increased to approximately 5.4 per cent of recurrent revenue. The capital expenditure allocation in this Budget is estimated at $16 million, comprised of local financing of $7.6 million and loan funds of $8.4 million. Also, Sir, new services are estimated at $2 million.

It is good to see from the new revenue measures that the increases are based on luxury items, that is items which are not totally regarded as essential necessities of life, even though, Sir, to some people they may be.

Of the eight major capital projects stated for 1988 I am indeed very pleased to see that provision has been made for the commencement of work on a juvenile rehabilitation centre, as this was indeed the subject of a recent Private Member's Motion brought to this House by myself. Although Government did not see fit to approve this motion, they nonetheless indicated their support for such a need by providing funds in the 1988 Budget, two months after the presentation of the motion.

The other capital projects stated for 1988, including on-going projects, are the water and sewerage projects; Gerrard Smith Airport terminal; the fire station at Owen Roberts Airport; Community College first phase; an abattoir; a purpose-built computer building; a visitors' building; extensions to the prison facility; and, as I said, Sir, a juvenile rehabilitation centre. Mr. President, I cannot think of any one of the above projects which are not totally essential and needed.

At this point, Sir, I wish to deal with the Budget in further detail. While I am basically supportive of this Budget, as I said earlier, I am nonetheless concerned with the very high sum allocated to new services; especially in light of the caution and financial prudence sounded off by the Honourable Financial Secretary, the mover of the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987, during his Second Reading debate. However, Mr. President, I will deal with new services in more detail in the Finance Committee, as I am surprised at some of the items included under new services, such as an additional post for a secretary to the Liquor Licensing Board, especially in view of the number of clerical and executive officers now on the Government's payroll. Of course, I appreciate that only a token provision has been made for this item.

At present, Mr. President, there are a total of 1,645 established posts in Government, not including casual or hourly paid workers, which now form some 58 per cent of recurrent expenditure. Of the $62,354,482 budgeted for recurrent expenditure for 1988, $36,079,993 is allocated to personal emoluments. This is very, very high indeed. On top of this figure is another $1.1 million allocated for a salary review, pending the report of the 1988 quadriennial salary review. The Honourable Financial Secretary referred to this amount of $1.1 million as a token provision. I trust, Sir, that it is not the intention for this salary review to exceed this amount. If we add the $1.1 million to the already high figure of $36.1 million, we get a total of $37.2 million, or approximately 60 per cent of the recurrent revenue. I feel that the Finance Committee will need to pay very close attention to some of the expenditures proposed under new services.

As I stated earlier, total new services for 1988 will cost this Government over $2 million. Mr. President, I wonder where this will end because almost every year we come here and find very high amounts being allocated to new services. We have to be very careful that departmental heads are not building up pyramids for themselves. We could be operating under the philosophy of Parkinson's Law which states that where there is a void it will be filled, and I hope, Mr. President, that this is not the case.

On the 1st of January 1988, Government had a surplus balance of $4,950,049 brought forward from 1987. I am, however, concerned that at the 31st of December 1988 the surplus balance remaining will only amount to $146,422. If past trends are repeated this small surplus could quickly be reversed and turned into a deficit. This is especially true if many of the token provisions that we see in the estimates are undertaken and funds will have to be provided.

On the subject of capital expenditure, of the $84 million estimated for 1988, $16 million or 19 per cent is allocated to capital expenditure. This is a healthy sign. Fifty per cent of the total capital expenditure programme for 1988 will be provided from local revenue. However, Mr. President, the estimated expenditure of $84 million exceeds the estimated revenue of $79 million by approximately $5 million, thus effectively reducing, or resulting in a deficit Budget. This could account to the small surplus balance estimated for the end of 1988, necessitating the need to dip into the revised surplus position which was brought forward at the beginning of the year.

On the question of capital revenue, of the $16 million provided under the capital revenue budget, $6,723,825 is estimated to be spent for local construction that will benefit the people of these Islands. Anyone, therefore, in our society or community today who says they are out of work, I would have to submit, are not interested in working. However, I would agree that much of the affluence that we see today is not being filtered down to the little people. I know that in this House that word is sometimes misunderstood, but when I refer to the little people it is not said in a derogatory manner, it is describing the less well-off amongst us.

Mr. President, with the capital expenditure provided in the estimates, I am pleased to see that Government is still committed to boosting and keeping the economy at a very prosperous level. No one in these Islands can truthfully say, as mentioned earlier, that they cannot find work. The problem in this country, as I mentioned, is not the want of work but the inappropriate policies of the Caymanian Protection Board in allowing people to get the necessary labour that cannot be found locally.

I am not quite sure whether the economic situation in the Lesser Islands has improved, but I do understand, Sir, that consideration is now being given to easing its economic woes by erecting a pyramid-like structure of an hotel. I trust, Sir, that the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will indeed benefit from this floating hotel. However, with some of the letters from the people of the Lesser Islands which I have seen appearing in the press, there seems to be mixed feelings with regard to the wisdom and sagacity of such a development.

Mr. President, I am not going to deal with this, neither could I in my best conscience knock this hotel because I recall in the last Meeting of this House that I was the mover of a motion asking for more economic development in the Lesser Islands. So I will await the results of the impact studies being done. I trust, Sir, that whatever is in the best interest of the people of the Lesser Islands will be done. The majority of the people of the Lesser Islands do not yet seem convinced that the floating hotel is the answer to their economic problems. As I said, time will tell and as soon as we receive the impact studies then we can form a better opinion on the subject.

I am pleased to see that included in the $6.7 million allocated for capital expenditure from recurrent revenue, there is an amount of $250,000 for a juvenile rehabilitation centre, and a further $1.4 million to further improve our roads. There are many, many important projects slated, but I was disappointed to note the absence of any provision for the long awaited civic centre for George Town. And, of course, I recall that in my motion I also asked for one for West Bay.

Mr. President, in 1985, the motion calling for a civic centre for George Town was passed in this Honourable House, and I will submit that to pass a motion with no intention to take any action on it is a complete waste of time.

I am happy to see, Mr. President, that of the $1.4 million allocated for roads, $400,000 is being allocated for Cayman Brac, and that under the capital loan funds, $1,427,832 is allocated to provide the new Gerrard Smith International Airport, and further a new fire station for $292,500. These are all welcome projects and I feel that they will encourage economic development in these Islands.

Mr. President, I now move to public debt charges. On the question of public debt, the balance as at the 31st of December 1987 was $14,041,153.47. However, as stated earlier, and as stated in my debate on Government Motion 7/87, the criteria, or the measure to be given major consideration when determining the acceptable level of Government public debt, is the level of debt required to service such public debt. In other words, Mr. President, it could be likened unto an individual going to the bank to get mortgage financing for his home. The bank will assess the ability of that individual to pay the loan.

I must say, however, that our Government is even more prudent than some of the commercial banks, because some of them give a much higher gearing and servicing amount than our Government is already asking. We are talking about 5.4 per cent while the bank will give up to 15, 20 or 25 per cent of one's total earnings. So I cannot understand this hysteria about our public debt. It is in a healthy position, and I say this not only as a past Deputy Financial Secretary of the Government, but as a qualified accountant. I see no problem with this. It is a lot of political rhetoric. Our Government is quite capable of carrying this responsibility. We have to take like with like. On one side we are looking at our public debt, but we have also to look at the proportionate revenue that we are earning now compared with 10 or 15 years ago. We cannot take figures in isolation. As I have said in this House, one of the biggest sins we have to contend with is not the sin of commission, but the sin of omission.

Mr. President, on reviewing the details of revenue it is pleasing to note that $1.2 million is expected to be collected under the sewerage scheme. Additionally, Government will stand to gain some $900,000 from the sale of water, as opposed to a revised figure in 1987 of approximately $100,000. Revenue derived from revenue stamps alone is expected to realise some $9 million, an increase of $2.3 million over the 1987 budget. Against this background, Mr. President, it is clear to understand why the postal services have outgrown their present accommodation and why a new post office is so badly needed. Therefore, I can with all good conscience support the provision made under capital expenditure for the construction of the new post office. I will, however, deal with this subject later on in my contribution. I only hope, Sir, that serious consideration will also be given to the construction of a multi-storey car park above this facility or as close to town as possible, as was initially envisaged by the Honourable Member responsible. I cannot overemphasise the need for such a facility in view of the crowding that we are now experiencing in central George Town.

Mr. President, I will not attempt to deal with all areas of the Budget as I do not consider it totally unnecessary, but the very fact, Sir, that almost 90 per cent of our total revenue is recurrent revenue (derived from local sources such as import duties, indirect taxes, bank and trust company licence fees, etc., revenue and postage stamps etc.), it is easy to appreciate the fluctuation and vagaries in the annual estimates. It is also reasonable to conclude that the healthy increase we have seen in Government's revenue position is a sign of a prosperous economy.

There are other areas of weaknesses which I have seen in Government, and they are aware of these. However, I do not think it is fair to say that the economy at this point in time is not prosperous. I, too, am concerned that the wealth is not being spread as evenly as it should be, but I feel that it is only fair to say that the economy is prosperous at this point in time. It is quite buoyant; there is no question about that. I have heard people complaining that they cannot find enough people to do the work. I am one such person. On top of that, you cannot get permits to bring people in so it makes the situation worse.

Mr. President, what is even more remarkable, when we consider the unstable situations that exist in the economies of the major developed countries of the world, is the condition of our economy at this point in time. I therefore have to endorse the sentiments expressed by the Honourable Financial Secretary when he sounded a word of caution. Applying this same philosophy, we will see, of necessity, fluctuations and vagaries in our recurrent expenditure figures. Some will be in direct proportion to the revenue fluctuations since they are recurrent by nature; others are fixed and others will be otherwise influenced.

Mr. President, while appreciating the ups and downs of recurrent revenue and recurrent expenditure which are a direct result of the growth in our economy, there are nonetheless certain expenses which require more detailed examination. One such expenditure provision is the annual subsidy to Cayman Airways, and the manner in which it is utilised. I will not debate this at any length, but I feel it is only fair that mention be made in view of the fact that it has been mentioned twice in the Budget and in view of the fact that the Cayman Islands Government owns Cayman Airways 100 per cent, and in view of the major subsidy being given to the airline to keep it going. However, may I make it quite clear that it is not my intention to give the impression that I do not support the subsidy for our national airline. I do in fact support it. My concern is with regard to its utilisation and the manner in which it is shown in our national carrier's financial statement. The way it is shown at present gives a wrong impression of the profitability of our airline, and this is no direct reflection on the management or staff of the airline. They are individuals for whom I have a great deal of respect. I find this an accounting problem, one of presentation and one for which the auditors of the company must bear responsibility. While I do not agree with the accounting treatment applied to Government subsidy in the presentation of Cayman Airways Ltd's audited accounts, I am nevertheless accepting that the performance of the airline over the past five years has improved each year. I will show the basis for this statement as I go along.

The audited accounts of Cayman Airways reveal that there has been an improvement in the operations over the past year. When we consider the operations of the airline, any layman would agree that we cannot include in operating revenue a subsidy that has been handed to the airline. This has nothing to do with operations in the same way that you would consider passenger revenue, charter revenue, cargo revenue and other areas that are in fact operational revenue. So, Mr. President ...

MR. PRESIDENT: Sorry, I was going to interrupt you for a moment. As you know, we have a motion coming up on the Cayman Airways Ltd's accounts, so I think that perhaps you have said enough on that topic for the moment, unless you were going to swing onto a wider aspect of it. Please go ahead.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Thank you, Mr. President, you are quite right, Sir, but, for example, the point I was making is that since Government is giving such a major subsidy to the airline and since we are 100 per cent owners of the national airline, it is only right that we account for the proper stewardship of it. Rather than to have shown a profit of $800,000, it should have been a loss of almost $400,000. However, as you rightly reminded me, Sir, this could form the subject of a motion now before the House, but I would just like to round that off and say that even with a $400,000 loss in 1987, this compares very favourably indeed to the $4 million loss in net income in 1983.

MR. PRESIDENT: If you have come to the end of a section of your speech, perhaps we should adjourn, if it is convenient.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Yes, Sir.

SECOND READING DEBATE CONTINUING

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Thank you, Mr. President.

At the adjournment yesterday I was dealing generally with the subsidy of approximately $1 million in the 1988 estimates relating to Cayman Airways Limited. I stated, generally, that on the basis of the audited figures the airline has come a long way and has shown improved profitability, the results of which in no small way must account for the dedication and hard work of the board of directors, the management and the staff of the airline.

In my opening remarks yesterday, I also referred to the Budget as a very reasonable Budget.

Further, I stated that the improvements in Cayman Airways Limited's profitability in five years is even more pronounced and credible when we consider the added competition, notably from Eastern Airlines, and I want to warn that we can look forward to even more competition as foreign flag carriers attempt to obtain better and bigger advantages in the airline market. There is a motion dealing more specifically with the operations of Cayman Airways, and I intend to speak on this more fully at that time.

Before moving on to the next subject, I wish to comment briefly on certain remarks made in the House yesterday. It was not my intention, Sir, to comment on this. It has, however, appeared on the front page of our paper, thus moving it away from the immunities and privileges of this House. Under the Legislative Assembly (Immunities, Powers and Privileges) Law, much can be said in this House and Members can be protected thereunder. But when it is put on the front page of the local paper it then becomes public knowledge, and some of the remarks in the paper this morning, if not proven correct, could constitute libel.

Up to January 1987, Mr. President, I was the managing partner of the local branch of a major international accounting firm. Due to the pressures of politics, I had to sell my interest in that firm. Over the night I have had a number of representations from some of the accounting firms on this Island, and more particularly from a partner, a Caymanian partner who is above reproach, of one of the major accounting firms. This gentleman was very upset by some of the remarks made. If there is any particular case or company, or firm, that the Member is knowledgeable of or has information on, then it is only fair that this matter should not be generalised, but the particular firm involved should be specified.

The profession of accountancy, worldwide, is one of high integrity and honour. Under the ethics of the profession we do not in any way conceal or condone wrong doings. I trust that since this matter has taken so much prominence that there are facts to substantiate the allegations I see.

On the front page of today's paper, Tuesday the 24th of November, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town is stated as alleging that large worldwide accounting firms were seeded with police informants. Mr. President, the Cayman Islands has a representation of all the major accounting firms in the world, of which, as I stated, I was the managing partner of the local branch of one of the largest international accounting firms. This is totally wrong with regard to the firm I represented, and from all accounts that I have been hearing over the night it is certainly wrong in respect of other major accounting firms on this Island.

With regard to the remarks made about the banks, I can only say that this will have to be left to the banking institution. I see statements such as:

"The banks are making a joke of our secrecy laws, jeopardizing the rights of clients, and leaving U.S. citizens in jeopardy."

I trust, Sir, that these can be substantiated because this is not only a reflection on a very high banking system in the Cayman Islands, but it also reflects on the controls made through Government's inspectorate department, and of course the whole financial structure of the Cayman Islands.

Further, Sir, a remark was made that certain information was stolen and supplied to police. I am very thankful, Sir, that in your wisdom you ruled this out of order and made it quite clear that this is not the place to make such allegations.

Regardless of the motives of the Member making these statements, I feel that it is totally wrong and in bad taste for such statements to be made in this House. When a Member, who is protected under the immunities and privileges of this House, abuses his position, it is wrong and I trust that the Accounting and Banking Associations will deal with this matter more fully. We should not be denied our democratic right of speech, but as I stated in my opening remarks yesterday, freedom of speech does not imply freedom from good responsibility.

Mr. President, I would now like to touch on the Legal Department. In doing so, I wish to take this opportunity to congratulate the head of this department, the Honourable Second Official Member of Executive Council, for the fine job he is doing, and indeed to congratulate him on his recent elevation to the rank of a Queen's Counsel - I think the term is called "taking silk". Well earned, Mr. President.

The recognition given to the Law School by the Attorney General in his contribution to the preparation of the Budget Address speaks well for the future development of that school, and may I join other speakers in congratulating the five graduates who completed their attorney at law and external LLB degree course earlier this year. I was surprised, however, by the recognition given to only one student, or that only one student was named by previous speakers in this House. Whether this was done for political reasons or otherwise, it was totally unfair to the other four who did equally well, and I would like to make it quite clear, Sir, that the gentleman whose name was called in this House is a very close and dear friend of mine. I feel that it is only right, however, if we are going to mention names, that all names should have been mentioned. So to repair that error I would like at this time to mention all five names and to congratulate them for the fine job they did. I will start with Mrs. Karin Martinez-Thompson, who did very well indeed, Mrs. Sharon Pierson who did well, Mr. Woodward Terry, Mr. Dwight Panton and Mrs. Twila Escalante. All did well. They all deserve much credit, not only the gentleman from the constituency of Bodden Town. They all deserve credit, and my congratulations go to each one of them, in particular to Mrs. Karin Martinez-Thompson and Mrs. Sharon Pierson for the exceptionally high job they did in gaining distinctions from the University of Liverpool.

In previous debates on this Budget remarks were made against the decision of Government to upgrade the entrance qualifications of students to the Law School. I cannot understand the reasoning behind the unjustified attacks. I can only write it off, again, as political rhetoric. We have first class students in the Cayman Islands. Cayman Islanders have proven themselves in everything that they have ever done. Even from the early days of going to sea we were reputed to be the best seamen in the world. I feel that the students of the Law School, and future students, would wish to maintain first class standards of second to none anywhere in the world, be it in the United Kingdom, Canada, Jamaica, Barbados or wherever. They should maintain the very high standards that they have already set.

Mr. President, I see nothing wrong in bringing the standards of the entrance qualifications up to that required by a university in the United Kingdom, which is the minimum of three 'O' levels and two 'A' levels. This will not applying to all students, it will apply only to students between the ages of 18 and 21. I wish to make it further abundantly clear that this will not come into effect until September of 1989, which really means that any student completing this year will have two years to qualify or to obtain two 'A' levels.

To suggest in this House that students completing school this year would take advantage or abuse the entrance qualifications, by waiting three years until they are 21 to be exempted, does not speak very highly of our fellow Caymanians. I feel, Mr. President, that any Caymanian worth his salt who wishes to aspire to the lofty qualification of an attorney at law in the Cayman Islands should be prepared to meet the minimum entry qualifications. There is no question in my mind that the qualification of an attorney at law in the Cayman Islands, through the Cayman Islands Law School, is as high as that which can be obtained anywhere in the world. I would put any of the five graduates against any of our Caymanian graduates from abroad for I have no doubt that they will be able to hold their own very well indeed.

Moving away from the Legal Department, I will now touch on the Education Department.

As in the case of the Legal Department, I must also congratulate the educational administration for the high standards being maintaining. This year marks 100 years of public education in the Cayman Islands. We are told that in 1887 the education budget was some fifteen pounds, or approximately $25 to $30, compared to a total expenditure budget of $8 million in 1987, one hundred years later. Our secondary education system is second to none. I am nonetheless concerned with the policy of not allowing certain students to graduate on the basis of minor juvenile infractions of the law. This is not fair, especially when these juveniles are taken to the Juvenile Court which determines the form of punishment they should receive (this is all done in camera, Sir, in privacy) and for the schools to then again attempt to punish them for minor infractions. I am not talking about the major infractions because there is no reason why they should be allowed the same privileges as other students when they have committed major infractions. This is an area that requires very urgent attention. The schools should not, on top of the punishment given by the legal authority, the Juvenile Court, again be punishing these kids on minor infractions.

Under the present school system, I am not satisfied that it is catering to the needs of the majority. It has long been my view that our Government school system is operated on the basis of a grammar school system, where only the brightest students benefit. Our system is a comprehensive system, and as such should be catering not only to the 20 per cent who will obtain four or more 'O' levels, but indeed to as many of the school population as possible. What exactly is happening to the 80 per cent who are not privileged to obtain four or more 'O' levels? I will tell you, Sir, they are given a School Leaving Certificate which means very little. When they go to the banks, the trust companies, the insurance companies or otherwise, they cannot use that School Leaving Certificate to prove anything they accomplished. Hopefully, Mr. President, the C.C.S.E. syllabus or system, soon to be introduced, will offer better opportunities to our children.

At the last graduation held, certain unfortunate remarks were made by the Principal of the school regarding the accents and background of the language, the 'patois' I think it was referred to, of the Caymanian children. Such remarks were unfortunate and I feel that it should not be repeated.

I am supportive, Mr. President, of any allocation that can be made to assist our children, for they are indeed the future of this country. My concern, which is well known to the Honourable Member responsible, is that the system is not properly catering to a wide enough cross section of the student population.

Moving on now to the Social Services Department.

Mr. President, I feel that the Social Services is doing a fairly good job, even though I feel that much more could and should be accomplished. There seems to be a problem in this department in getting projects completed by the Public Works Department, because it is my understanding that the Public Works Department is now overloaded. Where the Public Works Department is unable to assist with certain Social Services' jobs, arrangements should be made, if possible, through the private sector. I am aware of several needy cases in my constituency and otherwise that require assistance. The funds are available for materials, but unfortunately, nothing can be done because the labour is not available. I would again bring this forcibly to the attention of the Honourable Member, and ask him to look into this matter as soon as possible.

Even though we have a fairly buoyant economy, many poor people in this country are suffering because of the lack of proper service and facilities through the Social Services Department, which should be provided by them. I hope, Sir, that we will see more improvement in this Department. I would nonetheless wish to congratulate the hard-working staff for the work they are doing. Even though I would point out that much needs to be done, I would nonetheless wish to recognise the very hard work they are doing in trying to keep the Social Services of this country running on a smooth level.

The Health Department.

It was gratifying, Mr. President, to see the programme designed to assist with the misuse of drugs and to improve rehabilitation services for drug misusers and their families, and that it is being spearheaded by the medical services department. While there are a number of other programmes which are commendable, I am nonetheless still concerned by the number of complaints from the public about the poor services received at the hospital.

Up until very recently I have received a number of complaints about the very poor services being rendered at that hospital. It is our only hospital and as such I feel that it should be operated on standards as high and efficient as possible, and that none of our people should be allowed to suffer. I would therefore implore the Honourable Member responsible to take a much closer look at its operations. I do not want to single out any individual names which I have heard because this would be inappropriate, but generally I feel that much needs to be done at that hospital.

Moving on to the Housing Development Corporation.

At the last session of this House, I brought a motion which was successful, dealing with the problems being experienced by the poor people within the Cayman Islands. This was not only designed to assist people in Grand Cayman, but also for any cases in Cayman Brac or Little Cayman. As a result of this motion, I feel confident that we will make significant strides in formulating better policies for addressing the problems of low cost housing in the Cayman Islands. And, Sir, as mentioned in that motion, we are very fortunate indeed to have somebody of your calibre, having had a lot of experience in housing, to lend some assistance to us in this respect.

Already Sir, a meeting has been called by the Honourable First Official Member, but unfortunately there were insufficient Members, or numbers, present at that meeting to form a quorum. Since I have heard similar concerns expressed and voiced about the problems being experienced by the poor people in our Islands, I trust, Sir, that each Member of our Assembly, or at least each of the Elected Members, will attend these meetings. It is so often the case that most complaints come from those people who attend committee meetings the least. This could be because they are not aware of what is going on.

I am aware that most of us have a lot of responsibility. I know for instance there are a number of committees which I am not privileged to attend, but I would challenge any Member of this House to suggest that I do not at least keep up with the minutes of those meetings. One such committee formed was on labour legislation, and I believe that when I debate this Bill I will demonstrate to the House and the public that I know as much about that Bill as any Member who may have a record of 100 per cent attendance. The point is that if Members are going to be critical of areas in which they can assist, then they should be fair enough to let the public know that they could have assisted in and corrected the very matters they are criticizing, had only attended or even shown enough interest in attending committee meetings. Unless Members are prepared to attend these meetings they are only paying lip service and a lot of political rhetoric when they get up in this House, and are not really dealing with the matters as effectively as they could.

Accordingly, Mr. President, in view of this very important subject on low cost housing, I hope that all Members expressing their concerns about the poor people of this country will make every attempt to attend the committee meetings and lend of their valuable ideas, rather than waiting for an opportunity to say it over the microphone to be heard on the radio. We need all Members to assist with formulating policies for the well being of our people. There are very few, if any, Members in this House who have shown more concern for the poor people of this country than I, and I will continue to do so. But to suggest that the woes and the problems of these poor people are a result of a very stagnant economy is to tell the public of this country an untruth, because the economy is a booming economy. We must appreciate that under a capitalist system, which I hope we will continue to be under, we will have situations where we have the haves and the have-nots. Regardless of the per capita income of certain individuals, we will continue to have a situation of haves and have-nots, and equals, but not really all equals. This is a situation that we will have to accept. We can only, as Legislators of this Assembly, make an outright effort to assist our people to the best of our ability.

Mr. President, later on I intend to deal with this subject more fully when legislation regarding social security is brought to this House.

Touching now on the Water Authority.

Certain remarks were also made in this House that would tend to give the wrong impression that Government is prepared to allow the companies of Hadsphaltic and Petroservicios to destroy our roads without any protection. This is totally incorrect. In the case of the contract with Hadsphaltic for the sewerage system, terms are contained in the contract with Petroservicios to restore any damaged roads to their original standard. In all fairness, I must say that both those companies are doing a very, very wonderful job indeed. I was pleasantly surprised, when I was taken on a tour of the sewerage system plant, to see the amount of work that had been done. I wonder how many Members, who would get up in this House to oppose this, have taken the time to even examine what has been done.

As with the sewerage system, I was pleasantly surprised to see the amount of work that had been carried out on the water system; for example, the reservoir that has been built, the pump rooms, and the fine, neat way in which the work along the roadsides is being carried out. Let us be fair and let us give credit where it is due. Some Members seem only to criticise, and while I can appreciate that the role of certain Members is that of criticising, we should give credit where credit is due.

Mr. President, I cannot subscribe to the view expressed that because we may be backbenchers we can get nothing done. I agree that more could be done, and I am not very happy with the present system as I have expressed in this House. I feel that there is a breakdown in communication. I feel that there are many weaknesses that should be corrected, but there are 12 Elected Members of this House, not only four. Under our Constitution, four are elected to Executive Council, but if, because we may not be one of those four, we sit in this House and tell our people that we can do nothing to help them, then we should not be Members of this Assembly. There is a lot that we can do, and we should do it. We cannot all be on Executive Council. This is why it is important that the opposition play an active role. This is why in many countries the opposition is given equal status in pay with even the Government bench, because it is their duty to play an active role. No government is a good government without good strong opposition. But if we sit back and say that because we are not Members of Executive Council we can do nothing for our people, then we should not be filling seats in this Assembly.

I am pleased to see the progress and quality of work being carried out by the engineering company responsible for the George Town water supply. I would, however, remind the Honourable Member responsible for this project that the boundaries of George Town do not stop at Crewe Road or South Sound, and I look forward to seeing the water system extended to Tropical Gardens, Prospect, Red Bay, Spotts, and to all other areas of George Town.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

And West Bay.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

And West Bay, as the Second Elected Member for West Bay just stated.

I have had complaints from my constituents in those areas, and I promised them that I would speak to the Honourable Member and touch his heart, and work on him to ensure that as soon as possible we will have water in those areas.

Mr. President, the people living in the areas just mentioned are as much deserving of a proper water supply system as those in the areas we are providing at present, even though I wish to make it quite clear that I am happy that the residents of these areas, namely Crewe Road, South Sound, South Church Street and other areas will be receiving fresh water very soon. My point is, that other areas must be given similar and equal consideration.

Moving away now to the Civil Aviation Department.

I am pleased to see that as of 1st June this year the Civil Aviation has been operating as a separate legal entity, and I feel confident that, as in the case of the Port Authority, the Civil Aviation Authority will be operated as a profitable concern. One area of concern which I have mentioned to the Honourable Member, is that I would like to see the Civil Aviation take better care of the flowering plants around the airport. I was touched and saddened by the recent hacking of these plants and since they were put there to mark the visit of the Queen in 1983, if for no other reason, Mr. President, I feel that some pride should dictate that we take good care of these plants. At present I know that they are flowering and even if we have to ask for a supplementary vote to take care of this, I think it would be money well spent. I am one who is very concerned about aesthetics. I am very concerned about the looks of our Island. If I had the power today, perhaps I would have many, many more parks and beauty spots in the Islands. Perhaps the area between the Courts and Scotie Bank should be turned into a park when we get our multi-storey car park underway. And perhaps Albert Paston Street should be pedestrianised so that it could be locked off in certain areas. But these are points which we will address in due course.

On the Fire Department, it can truly be said, Mr. President, that the Head of this Department lives the maxim - 'if a thing is worth doing, it is worth doing well'. It is always a pleasure for me to speak about this Department as I regard it as one of the most efficiently run departments in Government. This speaks very highly and very well indeed of the Head of that unit. I therefore find it easy to agree to the capital loan being requested from the Caribbean Development Bank as I consider this to be money well spent - as with the case of the capital loan being requested through Caribbean Development Bank for the Gerrard Smith International Airport. I feel that a properly equipped fire station is essential to the future development of the Cayman Islands.

Trade and Labour.

I feel that the appointment of a Director of Trade and Labour in June of this year was a step in the right direction, and I would at this point in my debate pause to congratulate the newly appointed Head of this Department, Mr. Rudy Selzer. He is a gentleman whom I feel will bring a lot of expertise to the post, and already I understand that he is doing a fine job as newly appointed Head.

I will not speak further on this particular subject, as I intend to speak, not to too great a length, but for some time, on the Labour Bill which will deal with this. I do not wish to pre-empt or anticipate the outcome of the Labour Bill, since, as I mentioned, I intend to speak on this in detail when it is brought up later in this Meeting. I would, however, say that I feel that the proposed law, the Labour Bill, is most essential for our people and I trust that when it comes here it will be given very strong support, even though there are certain areas that will be queried.

I move now to the Postal Department.

I am very pleased to see that provision has been made to construct a new post office, and I trust that commencement of work will start as soon as possible in the new year. I would wish to take this opportunity also to congratulate the Honourable Third Elected Member responsible for moving ahead with this project.

On District Administration.

Mr. President, I am also happy to learn that Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are showing encouraging signs of economic recovery. By economic recovery and implication, it would suggest that the economic situation in the Lesser Islands was in fact in a depressed state. This was pointed out by me in a motion brought during the September Meeting of this House. I will not go into detail because it was debated at length at that time. My arguments in that motion, though, are further strengthened by the admission that the level of unemployment has been drastically reduced. It is certainly good news that new projects are providing a significant improvement in the unemployment problems which previously existed. It is also noted that capital expenditure in respect of roads for the Sister Islands is estimated at some $400,000.

On the question of the dental and medical services department in Cayman Brac, I am pleased to learn of expansion and improved facilities being provided. The total project is estimated to cost approximately $100,000. I am concerned, however, that a petition dated 25th July 1986, submitted by more than 500 citizens of the Lesser Islands, has to date not received the courtesy of a reply. This petition, Mr. President, which dealt with certain unsatisfactory conditions in the medical health services department of those Islands was addressed to the then Governor, Mr. Peter Lloyd, and copied to the Honourable Member responsible for Health, the Executive Council Member responsible for local administration and other Members of the Legislative Assembly. Unfortunately I only recently saw this petition which I received and I was asked to use my best endeavours in getting a reply. I am amazed that a petition containing over 500 signatures out of a population of 1,300 people, approximately 38 per cent of that population, would be unanswered and ignored.

I feel, Sir, that the people of our Lesser Islands deserve better treatment. I am not here to predict the outcome of the petition, but whether or not their petition proves favourable to them, is beside the point. The point I am making, Sir, is that they deserve better, and they deserve the respect of a reply after the contents of the petition have been fully considered by our Government.

It is also noted, Sir, that mention was made of the concessions granted to foreign retirees, Caymanians living abroad and returning to resettle, etcetera. I trust, Sir, that this will boost the economy of the Sister Islands. I understand already that there are certain new projects in the pipeline, and I also understand that the floating hotel that is being considered for Little Cayman may also provide some of the answers to the economic woes of the Lesser Islands.

Moving along, Mr. President, I wish to touch on the Master Ground Transportation Plan Study. It is most essential for the present and future economic and physical development of this country. I for one, Sir, will certainly look forward to studying the draft final plan which it is hoped will be submitted to Government in early December this year. We will have to take a closer look at the estimated expenditures made thus far by the firm Wilber Smith Associates, and the other experts connected with this project, but we cannot continue to fool ourselves if we hope to continue our development. At the rate we are going we will definitely have to provide the infrastructure facilities and any superstructures that are required.

Even up to this morning, I was reminded that if it is seen necessary for the Government of this country to have to recruit 15 to 17 new people from abroad for the Prison Department because they cannot be found in the Cayman Islands; if it is found necessary for our schools to have to recruit a number of teachers because they are not locally available; and if it is found necessary for other departments of Government to have to recruit from overseas, then it is totally unfair for the private sector of this country to be refused the people whom they need to assist them in their businesses. It is the local Caymanians that are suffering. I could name a number of small businesses in this country that have had to close down because they cannot get assistance, they cannot get people to help them.

Mr. President, I would be the first one to say that we should stop bringing in people if we had the local people to do the jobs, but the simple answer is that we do not have local people to do the jobs. To suggest that domestics and casual workers should be brought in from Ireland or some other country in the United Kingdom is unrealistic. This is not realistic. The cost alone of recruiting those people is prohibitive.

Mr. President, we are talking about protecting Caymanians. Who are we protecting them from? Why do we not formulate proper policies for the guidance of the members of our Protection Board. This is one of the single (biggest) problems of our economic expansion in this country. It is unfortunate, Mr. President, that we have heard remarks made, in the Chamber of Commerce and other public places, downgrading certain nationalities. It is most unfortunate when those countries being attacked have been our full supporters in years gone by. Most of us were fortunate to get our education in those countries. With regard to what I have seen happening in this country, how can we generalise? You might as well say to me that all Caymanians are bad because of the fact that we have a few in Northward Prison. It is unfair, Sir, and I trust that you will be looking into this matter very closely.

I know, Sir, that you are aware of some of the problems being experienced because I am aware of certain representations made. I am not saying that we should open the floodgates in this country, we do not want that, but there is a way of screening people; if not through character references, there are other ways of checking - through police records and otherwise. How do we know that we are not getting members of the IRA in here from Ireland. How do we know that? Yet we are quick to say that we should allow them in.

I trust, Sir, that the real reason for the concern, with regard to the policies and practices that we see at present, is really to balance the situation of nationalities in the Island. I hope that is the real reason. But let us not bury our heads in the sand. This is not a problem only for a few people. It cuts across all economic sectors of the Cayman Islands. This morning I took my car to one of the leading garages in this Island (and I think, Sir, I saw your car there), and the gentleman said that he was afraid that he might not be able to work on it because he could not get anybody to help him. The Protection Board, he said, would not allow him to bring in anybody, and he said that he was reminded that he should appeal the refusal. But from my experience, I had to tell him he would be wasting his time. The Protection Board should be completely revamped, and with a new set of policies, because it is harming our economy. It is not helping our economy. It is doing more damage than any good.

They talk about protecting Caymanians. It is not protection, Sir, when we throw people out of their businesses; when people, as a result of the restrictive and unreasonable policies of that Board, have to close down their businesses. I believe in the motto "out of many, one people". I have always stood for that, and my manifesto, Mr. President, supports this. I stated in my political manifesto, on which I ran in 1984, that we need an integration. We do not want a replacement of people. We have seen the damage that this has done in Jamaica. We have seen the damage it has done in the Bahamas. We do not want any social problems in this country. We want to live together in harmony, love and respect for each other. I submit, Mr. President, that we are on the wrong course. The way in which we are handling the situation is very, very unhealthy. I have spent the time on this subject because I see it hampering our economic growth.

Mr. President, I feel the simple answer to this is to issue certain directives allowing people to come here and work knowing that they would not be entitled to any benefit of status, permanent residency or otherwise. It works successfully in other countries. I understand it is working successfully in Bermuda. Why cannot we do the same here? What are we afraid of? Why does the Protection Board feel that they are protecting Caymanians? Who are they protecting them against? Why is there such an anti feeling against certain nationalities? Is this in the best interest of our country, a country in which we pride ourselves on our social harmony? I am afraid we are dealing with a time bomb, and unless something is done to alter this we will be heading in the wrong direction. I submit, Mr. President, that this not only be the responsibility of the Honourable Member responsible, but that of each elected and nominated Member of Executive Council, and they should look into this matter very seriously. We are not only talking of the 'little people' as we term them in this country and small businesses. This is a situation that is affecting a big cross section of the Cayman Islands, from the lowest to the highest in business. Why do we allow it to continue? We have a situation of the tail wagging the dog. This should not continue. We have a situation where it appears that one man is running this country. This is wrong.

Mr. President, I wish to move on to the new revenue measures.

Despite some of the concerns I expressed by certain individuals in this House, I feel that the new revenue measures are appropriate, fair and reasonable. There have been representations, nonetheless, made by certain groups. I received a letter from a group connected with a brewery or wine makers and I wish to point out it will not go unnoticed by me. I will certainly be addressing this issue in the Finance Committee.

As mentioned earlier I see the $260,000, to be derived from these measures, as being well thought out. These increases are not essential necessities of life. These increases are on liquor, wines, beers and soft drinks - luxury items. I wish to God that it was double what it is because we would have happier families in this country. So many families are going to destruction because of liquor. We hear talk about cocaine, gangs, and other areas of concern, but so often we forget that liquor is one of the most damaging drugs in the Cayman Islands today. I wish also that we had thought of increasing the revenue on tobacco and tobacco products. And I still hope that in Finance Committee we can do so.

These are the areas that we need to discourage in the Cayman Islands, because so often the problems that we related to cocaine and marijuana are directly related to the use of other drugs such as alcohol. I have no sympathy for these who despise the measures taken here. In my opinion these individuals got off very lightly. It should have been double because we need to discourage the use of drugs in this country. Members in this House talk about the problems we are facing with our young people in drugs, yet when measures are brought to effect the taking of certain drugs out of reach of our young people, those measures are criticised for the sake of being in opposition.

My position in this House is to speak against anything that I see is not in the best interest of our people. Regardless which side brings in a matter before this House, it is the responsibility of each Member to support it if it is good for our people. We are not only supporting four Elected and three Official Members of Executive Council, we are supporting issues for the best interest of the people of this country.

We need to move in the development of amenities for the youth of our country. We need to do more in providing proper facilities. Mention was made of the need to provide programmes. This is as ridiculous as saying that we should provide a syllabus for a school, but forget about a building and let the children sit outside! or as having a programme in place, but saying that you do not need the physical facility. This is why I impress that the need for a community or civic centre in George Town is most essential.

Remarks have been made that we do not need the facility in George Town, because the ones in East End and Cayman Brac are not being used or because the ones in Bodden Town and Breakers are only being used at election time. Regardless of the lack of use of these facilities in those districts, I can assure Members that if we had a facility in George Town it would be put to good use, and I believe that the same would be true of West Bay.

Mr. President, I got the full support of this House on a motion for a civic centre, but I was surprised that not even a reasonable allocation was made for this. When am I to expect to see the civic centre? It is not in the 1988 Budget, and next year is an election. It would appear that in order to get my civic centre I will have to be put in a position to enable me to get this done, and I trust, Sir, that my people are going to see to that. They will get their civic centre, I can assure you of that, together with all the other promises made which have not materialised. We will get these in due course. I will not say that due course is due course as I have heard in this House, I hope that that will be very soon.

As mentioned to earlier, I share the philosophy that a speech, to be immortal, does not have to be eternal, and it is not my intention to drag out this Budget Debate. I think I am documented in the Hansard of this House as having spoken for my four hours before, and have requested more time. However, as stated, I see this Budget as a reasonable Budget. I see it continuing to enhance the economy of this country, so it is not difficult for me to support it. With the exception of the concern expressed by me, which I hope to address in Finance Committee, I see the 1988 Budget as a good fiscal plan for the ensuing year, and as I said in my opening remarks, the Budget is indeed a reasonable fiscal statement for 1988.

I therefore support the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987, and again wish to congratulate the Honourable First Official Member, the Financial Secretary, on his splendid presentation of the Budget Address.

Thank you, Mr. President.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:32. A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Bill. Second Reading, continued.

Proceedings are resumed. The Appropriation (1988)

The First Elected Member for the Sister Islands.

CAPT. HARRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, I would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Honourable First Official Member, the Financial Secretary, for his clear and comprehensive Budget Address which he ably delivered to this Honourable Legislative Assembly on the 13th of November, last Friday.

The Address was very informative, and in my judgement gave a clear and true account of the local economy and a preview of the year 1988.

The Budget Address, Mr. President, is a valuable document. It is a document that I shall keep with my papers for reference, and again I congratulate the Honourable Member for the way in which it has been set out. The table of contents makes for easy reference.

I wish to express gratitude to the people of my district, the third electoral district of the Lesser Islands (Cayman Brac and Little Cayman), for the opportunity of making my eighth contribution to the Budget Address since I was elected in 1980. I do not know if this may be my last chance of addressing our budget, so I would like to express my appreciation to you, Mr. President, the Clerk, her staff, and all Honourable Members for all the help they have given me during the eight years that I have been in this House.

The outcome of the election next year is something we all anticipate, and if I am not back, I will have done, in my opinion, the very best I could with what I had to work with.

Mr. President, the Budget of C1684,165,807 is indeed a large sum for a country of three Islands with the small land mass that we have. It certainly shows that we are a very developed territory. It indicates that through very prudent management and the blessings of almighty God we have reached the standard where we are today, and that we can approach a balanced Budget of such a high figure.

I listened very carefully to the remarks and words of advice given by the Honourable First Official Member when he referred to the results of Black Monday. This has had resounding effects all over the world, and I am very grateful that thus far we have not had more resounding effects in our territory. I think it was very proper that those words were given to us in this Honourable House by him.

I turn now to banking and trust companies.

I fully realise the important part which the bank and trust companies play in our economy. As was stated in the Budget Address they employ approximately 10 per cent of our workforce, which is a large percentage. Apart from the monetary contributions which they make in fees and the tourist traffic which they generate through the banking business, we are very proud that this year 42 of the 50 largest banks in the world have chosen to seek licence here in the Cayman Islands. This is indeed very encouraging, in view of the rumours during the last Budget Address, by some Members, that this may not be a continuing success story.

The insurance industry continues to grow and together with the captive insurance business we are very grateful for that industry. It is hoped that we will get approximately $2 million in revenue from the insurance industry this year in fees. That is a large chunk of revenue for us. This industry also generates a lot of people to our shores and it has helped to make us well known internationally.

The Cayman Islands Currency Board.

I could not stand in this House without congratulating the Currency Board for the great job done. It is unfortunate that due to the weak bond market earnings will be reduced, but that is to be understood. We are very proud of our currency and we are also proud to know that numismatic coins will again be produced. This, too, will help to make the Cayman Islands that much better known throughout (the world).

I note with keen interest the development of company registration. As the Registry becomes fully computerised it will become far more efficient. It plays a very important part in our country. Delinquent companies are being removed from the Registry and this will provide a more realistic figure of those companies actively engaged in business in the Islands.

I turn now to the tourism sector.

This is again one of the most important industries of our economy. It is very encouraging to see that it has continued to grow. The 26.3 per cent increase over the year 1986 is encouraging. We must continue to strive to give a dollar's worth of service for every dollar paid. I again caution all our Caymanian people engaged in the tourist industry that we must treat our visitors as our guests. Remember they play an important part in our financial welfare, and without them the tourist industry would not exist. We must remember that the Cayman Islands has what the tourist wants, but that we want the tourist as much. Therefore I ask everyone engaged in the tourist industry to be as courteous as they can be and to help to further develop this industry to greater success.

I note with interest that the Community College is now engaging in hotel training courses that will better equip our young Caymanian people to serve in this industry. We are grateful for the cooperation that we have received from the major hotel operators and the other institutions.

Cayman Airways Limited.

Mr. President, those of us who live in Cayman Brac I think appreciate Cayman Airways far more than those residing here in Grand Cayman. As we all know, it is our only source of connection with the outside world. It is the only airline from which we can look forward to having any service. We are happy to see the improvement made in its balance sheet which we saw earlier in this meeting. Cayman Airways is very important to us. It is the only airline that will give the Islands a guaranteed service. Cayman Airways's first and foremost responsibility is to the people of the Cayman Islands who own the airline, and so therefore there can be no excuse to cancel flights because of load factors - and flights will return home when all other airlines find some excuse to not service the Cayman Islands. We can always depend on Cayman Airways, and so I would ask all Honourable Members, and all people hearing me today, to realise that it is absolutely essential, for a striving country as the Cayman Islands, for us to own our national airline from which we can demand service.

Mr. President, I give Cayman Airways my full support. We are grateful that service has improved with the Shorts aircraft to the district. There are certain things about the aircraft which have not met our hopes, but nonetheless it is a vast improvement over the previous aircraft. In answer to a parliamentary question it was revealed that with the introduction of the fuel supply in Cayman Brac the capacity out of Little Cayman will be doubled. We have previously suffered from the low number of passengers which the Shorts could accommodate out of Little Cayman, and if the capacity is doubled I believe the efficiency of the Shorts, in meeting the needs of the Lesser Islands, will be greatly improved and we look forward to the institution of this fuel service in the not too distant future.

I now turn to Computer Services.

I have noticed with keen interest and great pride the progress that has been made even in the Legislative Department with the introduction of computerisation, and this is so throughout the service. It is true that it necessitates a fairly large staff and great expenditure, but it is well worth the investment. If we are to move with the modern times, we must continue to improve our computer service. I support the Computer Services, and I congratulate all who are involved with it.

I turn now to the Customs Department.

The Customs Department is to be complimented in operating on such a small Budget and yet generate such large sums of revenue in the collection of import duty. I am very grateful to the Collector of Customs and her staff for the progress they have made. The task force, I think, is a great step forward and I note with keen interest the development of the marine patrol. This is a phase of Customs which I think the Cayman Islands has needed for many decades. Once this is implemented, I think it will earn its keep. It will certainly help control the illicit drug trafficking which, Mr. President, is damaging to our youth which is of great concern to me. If any money spent can curtail the drug problem, then I think the marine patrol it is a great future investment.

Ship Registration.

This is an area which I have very keenly been interested in, even prior to my election to this House. I am very happy to see that the necessary legislation has been enacted and that it will be amended to make it possible for the necessary conventions to be extended to the Cayman Islands so that we can have a ship registry of which we can be proud. I think it will generate, in the years to come, considerably large sums of revenue. Besides that, it will help make the Cayman Islands better known throughout the world. We are, by nature, a sea faring people, and I think it is very fitting that we become one of the world's leaders in shipping registration.

I caution all that we cannot have a proper registration without following all of conventions, and therefore we will experience some difficulty with the shipping registrations that exist today. I feel, however, that with the step we have taken to enact this legislation the Cayman Islands will move ahead in this area once the ship registration is properly established.

Mr. President, in the revenue and expenditure I note that the surplus brought forward on the 1st of January 1987 was $1,250,704. The local revenue was $67,415,868. Loans were $8,090,942. Taking recurrent, statutory and capital expenditures from that, plus local loans, the estimated surplus at 31st December 1987 is $4,950,049. This is indeed encouraging. We are very grateful that the country has had the blessings of a successful financial year. During the year we were not able to get all the projects that we wanted due to us not being able to secure the loans in time, but nevertheless I think we have moved forward during the year 1987 and look forward to 1988.

Much has been said about the public debt, but I think that any country, company or family are fortunate if they can keep their public debt down to where 5.4 per cent of ordinary revenue can service the debt. It certainly shows proper, prudent management. I am proud that we have the ability to borrow when it is necessary to provide capital projects, and to be able to spread that payment back over a number of twenty years or so. The privilege of borrowing, in my opinion is a privilege because unless you qualify you are not able to borrow. That we are able to borrow shows that the country is in good financial shape.

I turn now to Internal and External Affairs.

Radio Cayman is greatly appreciated in my district. We look forward to the introduction of the FM service and we hope it will be operational in early 1988. As I stated in the last Budget Address or Throne Speech (I am not sure which) I strongly recommend that the Legislative Assembly broadcast be switched to FM once the Lesser Islands receive it. This would limit the broadcast to within the Islands.

I would like to congratulate all the staff of Radio Cayman for the job they are doing. It is an important arm of information. It keeps all the districts of the Islands fully informed. Not everybody lives in George Town, so by the use of Radio Cayman, both international and local news are disseminated for all to hear.

Prisons.

The prison is something I wish the country could do without, but unfortunately it cannot be so. I am sorry for those who are forced to go there, but most are there because of their own actions and so they must therefore pay the penalty. I note that construction and expansion continues, because it is alarming to me that the population continues to grow. I am encouraged to see that a visitors building is to be constructed. This is very necessary for both the visitors and those incarcerated, and I think it should be a priority.

Mr. President, I would like to ask all Members of this Honourable House to give very serious consideration to establishing, as soon as our financial ability makes it possible, a proper rehabilitation system for our prisoners. Unfortunately, some of our young people are being incarcerated. They serve their allotted term and come back to society no better off than they were when they were incarcerated. Sometimes they are indoctrinated by inmates and they become once more a detriment to society. It is imperative that we provide for rehabilitation and the means of curing our addicts of their addictions. The percentage incarcerated at Northward is alarming in equation to the population of the Cayman Islands. We must do something to help to improve the position of the people, once they have served their term and paid their debt to society, so that they can come back into society, take place, and not be readmitted to further compound our problem with over-occupancy at Northward Prison.

Our Education Department continues to be a wonderful service. The country's best investment is in educating the youth and preparing them for their place in society. I see with interest that 1987 marks the 100th year of publicly funded education here in the Cayman Islands. It is hard to believe that Government's contribution to education in 1887 was the sum of 15 pounds, approximately CI$23.00 at the present rate of exchange. Our present 1987 budget for education is $8,067,645. This speaks for itself, Mr. President, that education is a priority of our Government, and it is justly so. I congratulate all involved in education and ask them to continue their good work.

The Community College continues to play an important part in our community. It is offering opportunities for our local people, who were not able to go overseas at a younger age, to further their education beyond high school level and also for school leavers to better prepare themselves to go into university at an elder age. I look forward to the time when Government can provide a proper, well established campus for the Community College. I had the opportunity of attending a college, and I know that benefits can be derived from higher education.

Our Social Services Department comes in for a lot of criticism, but I would like to compliment them for what they are doing. No service, regardless of how competent it is, can satisfy the needs and requests of all people, but we have a very able Social Service programme underway, and I feel as larger sums of money are available we will be able to do more. Nevertheless, for those who are aided, in poor relief, school lunch programmes and the like, I compliment the Social Services. I feel it is very unnecessary for us to get up in this Honourable House and criticism people whom we honestly know are doing the very best they can with what they have to work with. So I would like to offer my congratulations to that Department.

I note that money will be available under New Services for a rehabilitation facility for our juveniles. This is something that will be very beneficial. It has concerned me that our young children are being sent off to Jamaica. I appreciate that their behaviour caused them to be sent away, but nevertheless they are human beings, and if we are to rehabilitate them, we need to do it here in the Cayman Islands where they can be taught our culture and benefit the Caymanian way. This facility is a step in the right direction, and I look forward to this institution coming into operation.

Health in this country is also an area in which I could talk for hours on end. It is an important Department and it is doing a good job. It was the hope that we would by now have had plans for a new building, but economic constraints have made that impossible. Nevertheless, Mr. President, we are seeing our service improve daily, and we are grateful for the improvements which have been made in my district.

Agriculture.

The Agricultural Department is playing an important part, particularly here in Grand Cayman. We see good reports in the Caymanian Compass of progress being made by farmers here in Grand Cayman. Unfortunately, the arable land in Cayman Brac does not make it possible to farm with machinery and modern methods being used in Grand Cayman. I would like to ask the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council if he could arrange to send the agronomist Cayman Brac to advise on ways in which we could improve our farming there in view of the soil restraints that exist.

The Mosquito Research and Control Unit, through its control over the mosquito problem that existed, particularly in Grand Cayman, is one of the prime reasons for us being where we are today. I am alarmed that in the last six months I have seen a marked increase, in certain areas of Grand Cayman, in the mosquito population. They have also somewhat increased in Little Cayman although it does not appear to be the case Cayman Brac. However, I am concerned about Grand Cayman, and I hope that every possible step will be taken to further control this. If Grand Cayman ever has an increase in the mosquito population as once existed, tourism will be doomed. So it is necessary for the Unit, having played a very important part in our development, to keep moving.

I note with interest the formation of the Civil Aviation Authority. This is a step in the right direction. I compliment the head, the Director of Civil Aviation, and his staff for the able way in which they have handled their responsibilities and I am sure that this will prove to be equally successful and profitable as has the Port Authority.

The Fire Department.

Mr. President, the Fire Chief and his staff have worked under very adverse conditions with their inadequate facilities at the Owen Roberts International Airport. I am really happy to see that at last their new fire station and headquarters is under construction. They deserve the best, they play a very important part and it is a very dedicated service.

I am also very grateful that soon, within the next couple of months, the fire station at the Gerrard Smith International Airport in Cayman Brac will be under construction and that also will help improve the fire service there.

I note with interest in the Budget the provisions being made for the construction of a new general post office in Grand Cayman. This is very necessary. The Postal Department has worked under very adverse circumstances for many years in the facilities here in George Town, and I think they deserve better quarters. The people of Cayman need a better post office. If this is incorporated with the multi-story car park, as I understand it will be, it will offer additional parking and alleviate the serious parking problem that exists in downtown George Town. That I think, I am told, can amortize itself in a period of approximately five years. If that is the case, it will be an investment and not actually an expenditure for which Government will be looking for a refund. I feel it is a step in the right direction.

I think the museum needs to be improved here in Grand Cayman. The George Town post office, the building itself, is a museum piece and I cast my vote and say that it is an ideal site for the museum, once it is vacated by the Postal Department.

Speaking on parking, one thing that could improve downtown George Town parking would be the introduction of parking metres to limit parking time. Many people have told me that one of the reasons there is a problem with parking downtown is because most of the parking spaces are occupied from 8:00 to 5:00 o'clock by people who are employed. There are no parking spaces available for persons coming in and out of George Town for short periods of time.

Mr. President, I turn now to district administration, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Early 1987 found Cayman Brac and Little Cayman experiencing much unemployment. All persons residing there are very concerned with our poor economic condition. I am very pleased to report today that conditions have improved greatly. We now have almost full employment. I hasten to explain (as I reported in my debate on the 1987 Budget on Tuesday the 18th of November, 1986 in this Honourable House) that much of our workforce had left Cayman Brac and relocated in Grand Cayman to seek employment. A few of these have returned, and I hasten to say that although all persons in our workforce are employed it does not necessarily mean that we have a boom, because we in fact have a very limited workforce. I would like to emphasize that our workforce is very limited and it therefore does not necessarily generate a large cash flow.

The largest private sector project under construction in Cayman Brac is the expansion of the Tiara Beach Hotel. Work is scheduled, I understand, to continue beyond 1988. There are relatively large expansion plans for the site and it is this type of expansion that we need in the Brac - projects by which our people can be guaranteed employment for the years ahead, not just short term, because without the security of employment through long term development we will never get our people to return.

Cable and Wireless is just about completing the laying of the underground laying cable, and installation of the necessary equipment to make it possible for direct dialling in Cayman Brac. This we are very grateful for. Cable and Wireless also expanded their exchange at West End and Creek so that provided a small amount of construction labour.

We have also seen the construction of several houses during the year. The renovation of one house to a new freeport shop will improve our freeport sales in Cayman Brac to a first class level, and we are looking forward to the improvement in our freeport sales for the tourist industry.

The Buccaneers Inn Hotel has made some renovations and a reverse osmosis plant, to purify the water, has also recently installed. This now means that all three of the hotels in Cayman Brac are offering desalinated water to their guests.

Mr. President, I would like at this time to express gratitude from the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to all the Members of this Honourable House and to the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council, the Member responsible for Communications, Works and District Administration, for the funds which were made available to the Cayman Brac district administration, and to the District Commissioner and his staff for the able way in which they have administered these funds in order to provide employment over the years for our people.

On the major capital projects, which have taken place in Cayman Brac, I go first to roads. One mile of road in Little Cayman has been sand-sealed. The James Scott Road, which is the road from Gerrard Smith Airport going west, has been constructed and surfaced. On the south coast of Cayman Brac 1.35 miles have been widened, straightened where possible and sand-sealed. Work on the east to west Bluff Road from the Cross Island Road has continued during 1987. A road has been constructed from the south edge of the Bluff in the Stake Bay area to the north edge and this now allows people to get from one edge of the Bluff to the other. Road is also being continued approximately 250 feet from the north edge of the Bluff, in a westerly direction running parallel with the edge of the Bluff. This we hope will make the western end to the diversion road more readily accessible for residential development. The road is well underway, but I hasten to say that it is only a trail. The main idea, however, is to open up the area for future development.

We have had delays during the year in the construction of the Gerrard Smith Airport terminal building, but the site preparation and taxiway, has continued. Work is well underway and the site is now ready. It is my understanding that the contract for the construction of the Gerrard Smith International Airport terminal building will be signed on 25th of this month, and construction will start, hopefully, in early December. This will afford employment opportunities for Brackers and others in need of employment. We are very grateful that at last this project is to get underway. We understand the many surmountable problems that were faced in getting the financing, but now that it is in place, we look forward to the improvement of these facilities for locals and tourists as they come in and out of Cayman Brac.

Mr. President, a new dental clinic and public health offices are under construction at the Faith Hospital compound. At this time I have been asked by the people of Cayman Brac to express their gratitude to the Honourable Capt. Charles Kirkconnell for the donation of yet another piece of land for the siting of the clinic. At one time we thought it would have to be sited in the parking area of Faith Hospital which would have greatly impaired the use of the parking area and facilities there. However, he generously donated the property adjacent to the hospital on the west and the building is now being constructed on that site. So on behalf of the people, I would like to say thank you, Captain Charles.

I would also like to express the gratitude of my people for Government's expressed concern of the poor economic conditions in Cayman Brac. We are grateful that a committee was formed and that recommendations have been made. Executive Council approved certain incentives, which came into operation on the 1st of August of this year, to reduce import duty to five per cent on building materials and major appliances. This will be put into effect for a two year period. The reduction will be limited to foreign retirees, Caymanians living abroad returning to resettle in the Lesser Islands, and for all condominium developers. Mr. President, we already see beneficial effects derived from this. We are grateful that the Executive Council saw the wisdom in this request, and that they granted these incentives. We are a proud people in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and do not look for handouts. All we ask is that we be provided with tools from which we can work. If labour is created and people employed in these two smaller Islands, we can make ourselves self sufficient.

Mr. President, during the past few months we have been attempting to secure the use of a swimming pool and recreation area on Cayman Brac for use of the primary and high school students. In Cayman Brac there are no public swimming pools available. Prior to changes in the insurance law some hotels afforded the school principals the opportunity for the children to use their pools on certain occasions. Now that the Law has been changed, that privilege is no longer available and there are no swimming classes or competitions in Cayman Brac. I am constantly asked by the principals of all the primary schools, in particular, to see if anything can be done. I have discussed this with the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council and I am looking forward to his help in this matter.

I notice that $15,612 has been provided in the Budget for a swimming instructor for Grand Cayman, plus $14,474 for a sports' instructor. All I am asking, Mr. President, is for a $500 per month rental. I have asked the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council and the Honourable First Official Member to give this serious consideration, for it is greatly needed by the people of my district.

Mr. President, we have recently appointed a Director of Trade and Labour, a very capable person in my opinion. I am glad to see that the position has been upgraded to a director. I look forward to an improvement in trade relations throughout these three Islands. I think we have the proper man for a difficult task, and I wish him all the success in the future.

The Public Works Department, Mr. President, actually does so much that it would be impossible to speak on it all. Without that Department I do not really know how the Government would function. I would like to congratulate the Chief Engineer and his entire staff for all they have done during the year. The improvement in the accident black spot areas is a great improvement. It was done, I consider, at a reasonable cost, and it is certainly an investment if it will help save lives.

The Port Authority here in Grand Cayman is a very profitable organization, and we are grateful that due to its profitability it is able to fund the Port Authority in Cayman Brac which has had its growing pains. However we can look forward to the day when it will be self sufficient. We are most grateful that we have one Port Authority for the Cayman Islands, and that it is being taken care of.

The year 1988.

The 1988 Budget of $84.2 million, an increase of 13.5 per cent over the 1987 Budget, does cause me some concern, but I am sure that, in the capable hands in which the Budget finds itself, it has been well prepared, and I am sure we will be able to come to this House at the end of 1988 and say that we have a little surplus at the end. Capital expenditures of $16 million, of which $7.6 million will be financed by local funds, and $8.4 million from loan funds, is indeed a large sum for capital projects, but each and every one of them is very necessary. I support all of the capital projects. I also note that new services require approximately $2 million, but these new services, Mr. President, are also necessary for the proper functioning of the Cayman Islands.

Mr. President, I also note that $1.1 million is in the budget pending the 1988 salary review. I feel that the civil service is doing a good job and I would like to congratulate each and every one of them. It is not my job to criticize any of them - I am here to congratulate the job which is being done. I feel and hope that when the review is published all will be satisfied, and that they will be getting justly the amount they deserve.

Mr. President, there is much more that I could say concerning this Budget, but in not wishing to exercise the four hours that I have (in the interest of saving the costs of this country, and also the time of you and the other Honourable Members), I would like to say in closing that I am very thankful to Almighty God for the blessings which He has bestowed upon the Cayman Islands, and I pray that these blessings will continue.

With this, Mr. President, I support the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:
the Appropriation Bill.

Mr. President, I rise to make my contribution to

First of all, as is my custom, Sir, I want to publicly say a word of thanks to these people in the civil service who gave me some assistance in the past year. As was usual, the Clerk of this Assembly, her Deputy and staff have done a lot of work and research for me, sometimes going out of their way to facilitate my requests. I will always cherish the relationship built over the past three years between them and myself. I put on record, Sir, that there is no better staff in any Department than those in this House.

I would also mention the Principal Secretaries and today I must pay tribute to the Principal Secretary for Communication and Works and District Administration. I believe he may be retired before the next Budget is presented, and in any case I do not know how I might be blessed by the electoral gods next year. So I wish to say that during my term in this House he has been most helpful and considerate to any request I might have made. Many times I might have been left out in the cold if he was not as watchful as he has been. I believe that his stewardship is well accounted for. I say and put on record that I believe he is a good Caymanian and I pray that God's richest blessings may be with him and his family throughout the years to come.

I wish also to say publicly that my colleague and fellow West Bayer, the Honourable Financial Secretary, is a man whom I am learning more and more to rely on. His conduct and leadership qualities are impeccable. There is no doubt in my mind that he has become a statesman which this country will for many years rely on.

That, Mr. President, brings me right to the subject matter.

It would seem that the Honourable Financial Secretary's judgement over the last three years, when it comes to realistic budgetary proposals, has proven that he knows what he is doing. Except for those areas over which he personally has no control, his budgets, including this one, tell me and indeed the country that he is quick to realise that the kind of money needed to undertake long range projects in a country at our stage of development (the social projects, the civic centres, the rehabilitation centre, the training, the school projects, the medical care, the roads, the sewerage and water, the airport development and all the various infrastructural needs) comes not from the resources of this country alone, but also, Mr. President, from outside sources.

The Financial Secretary had to build upon the concept of borrowing from sources, over which we had little control, whose interests were probably whether or not there was security involved for economical investment. It is the concept of financial policy based upon stability; borrowings based upon the fact that it can be paid back, and paid back due to the vibrating economy and a well managed fiscal policy.

Taxation. Although I have not supported all the revenue measures that have come before the House over the last three years, I have supported some of the increases on business licences. I fully supported the increase on the banks, insurance and other companies in this country. I have not and will never support measures for motor vehicles until the system is revamped. Owners of Cadillacs, Mercedes Benz, large Broncos, Rolls Royce, and what have you, should be paying more than the person who owns a regular sized American or smaller sized Japanese car. However, taxation, while it came, was not really unbearable. So the Financial Secretary's policy of borrowing where it could be paid back and of not raising unburdensome taxes on the people of this country is sound and effective.

Mr. President, another route could have been taken. The Government could have thrown open this country to crooked business which would not help in the long run. Taxes could have been introduced to the point of causing large scale unrest and disrupting the stability which this country is known for. Or, they could have introduced business which would have had adverse effects on the country, as has happened in so many of our neighbours. But because of a well balanced financial policy, there was no need for this route to be taken. The fiscal policy has brought about steady increases each succeeding year.

Some mention was made about the Legal Assistance Treaty. I have said it before, and I will stand again and say it. I did not support certain aspects of the Treaty, and I stated that publicly. I still do not. I believe that we have yet time to see the effect. Mention keeps coming up in this House concerning the walkout. Mr. President, my walkout that afternoon before the vote was taken was not on the Treaty. My walkout was on the President's ruling. I have never shunned my responsibility in this House in my time here, and as long as I am here I never will. So let those Members, who keep referring to that, sleep on what I have said instead of trying to dirty my character in some shape or form. That cannot be easily done.

By the end of this year the number of banks operating here will have reached 515. From January to August 1987, 1,617 new companies were registered, bringing the total for 1987 to 18,408. At the end of 1984 there was something like 17,639. Even with the striking-off procedure this is a marked increase, and a substantial growth to be recorded for a country as small as we are.

And so, Mr. President, except for some problem areas which I will speak on, I say to the good ship Cayman: steady she goes. No man in his right mind can say that the economy of this country is in a shambles. To the contrary, every indicator proves otherwise. It is reckless to give the world, and those people who otherwise may not know, the impression that things are as bad as has been said in this House. This country has its problems like all other developing countries. In my three years I have pinpointed practically every major problem area that I have seen. For Members to get up here and say that people are walking barefoot or that they are starving in this country, is not good opposition tactics; that is a course of destruction which I will not condone.

I have to live in this country. I have to raise two children in this country, and beyond that I have put my responsibility to the entire country. Their claim, Mr. President, can and will be easily denounced because, as I have said, every indicator has taken a major move since 1984. There is, however, evidence that profits have grown, there is no doubt about it, but a corresponding spin-off effect has not taken place with regard to the smaller individuals or entities in other sectors of the economy. As to why this is so I do not know whether Government can be blamed for it, but I do know that in certain businesses Government cannot be blamed. In this instance, I believe that some of our own people are our worst enemies. By that I mean that I believe they are not being realistic, and in so doing are doing themselves harm and also creating an unstable position in that particular type of business.

I will go on to look at one area that I have been involved in myself - painting. I may value and quote $3,000 for a job while another person comes along and quotes $2,000. Who do you think the contractor or client is going to choose? The lower bidder, Mr. President, will take the job knowing full well that he is going to have to ask for more money before the job is completed. Along with that he might be using illegal labour. This scenario I have given is fact. This is just some of what is taking place, and we cannot very well blame Government for this type of operation. That is why I said that some of our people may be our own worst enemies.

Mr. President, I do not believe that some of our own people are looking out for their own people - if you know what I mean. They would rather take their business and give it to some foreign contractor just because he is foreign. That is the truth. They will see you starve first. Coupled with that, there are these "just come here" people who have gotten into small businesses which can be done by local people. They have no business getting into that type of operation and I will lay the blame for that at the door of our immigration policy.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Would you care to break there? Thank you. In that case we suspend until quarter past two.

AT 12:43 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:18 P.M.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

When we took the break, I was dealing with the point that there are people in our community who expect to have it all. Having said these things, I would point out that I have never discriminated against anyone. If someone comes to this country and is honest, I accept him. I believe in a policy that would bring into the mainstream of life in Cayman all the talent and energy to be found here, asking only that they share a commitment to these Islands, and an idea of justice resting upon our expanding economy. They can have a share if they come about it in an honest manner, but Caymanians must have preference.

There is another point I would make in connection with what I term the spin-off effect of the economy. Salaries and benefits or even incentives are very much tipped in favour of one end of the income scale in this country. For whatever reason, the claim of this country's high per capita income is made on false information. It is an assumption which cannot be backed by facts, and I believe that a circumstantial study would reveal that the major portion of salaries in this country (that is the casual labour sector - those at the lower level and the people on the street) are not in tune with our current economy. Salaries in these instances are very meagre indeed. The people at the top are receiving very large salaries and perks to go with it. So in my opinion this disparity needs to be looked at seriously so that information can be gained and steps taken to have it rectified. As long as we have salaries heavily loaded on one end and meagre on the other, there will not be an effective spin-off from the economy to the benefit of the majority of the people. I doubt whether this can be blamed on any financial policy of Government, neither is it any fault of its management of the economy.

There has been some criticism of the capital budget for 1988, including the criticism that the capital budget is political and is too much of a spending spree, and that the country is getting nothing for it. One Member charged that because of political promises roads which should not have been built were built, and as far as West Bay is concerned, I would challenge any Member of this House to tell me which roads have been built that should not have been built. To the contrary. So far we have not received any road work yet this year due to the fact that Government's road budget was expended in the Bedden Town constituency - the roads serving the eastern districts.

Mr. President, there was surprise expressed at the size of the Budget, and at the capital budget in particular. My observation is that this country cannot have an expanding economy such as ours at the moment with all our infrastructural requirements without having an increase in the capital budget, or for that matter, in the overall Budget. I would be most interested in the way it is spent, and that we get our fair share. As far as new services are concerned, if we need staff because of the expanding economy, we cannot refuse to fill the need or to fill the vacancies to carry out the responsibilities which a developing country needs, just to balance the Budget.

I cannot criticise the capital budget. Certainly I would have like to have seen those projects come about earlier in our time. During my three years in this House I have moved motions, I have asked questions and I have generally set about the task of trying to get these things done. Yes, I would have liked to have seen them come about earlier in this administration's time, but, as I said before, if a man constantly asks for bread and when is finally given it does not accept it, then he should starve.

For 1988 the capital budget is estimated to be over $15 million, but look at what it covers, Mr. President, we have eight large projects, and I will go on to point out the most important. We have water and sewerage projects, we have the Gerrard Smith Airport terminal, we have the fire station at Owen Roberts Airport, we have the Community College first phase and we have a juvenile rehabilitation centre. These are projects which this country is in dire need of. These are not projects that can be easily put off for another day. We have gone too far already and if we intend to stem the tide of problems which we have in this country we need to do it now, regardless of who wins the election.

I cannot understand this criticism, Mr. President, at this time, and the fashion in which it has been made. I consider the national interest above any political mileage that is hoped to be gained. If we look at the capital budgets during the previous administration we will find that in the years 1980 and 1984 the capital budgets doubled in those two election years. Why, and what did the country gain from it?

Mr. President, if you would bear with me for a minute you will see that in 1980 capital expenditure went from minor works, and if you look back in the records (and I do not care to take the time out to go through these estimates of capital expenditure) you will see that they are all minor works that could have been carried out, small works, adding up to $25,000, $6,000, $35,000. Even the garbage containers, a $10 vote, token votes.

Mr. President, these are things that could have been taken care of in an earlier year. If you look at 1984, another election year, you will find the same situation - minor works, small additions to buildings. Yards and stores, $30,000. These are things that certainly could have been taken care of in any administration which had the people's needs at heart, instead of winning the election.

In 1980 the budgeted capital expenditure was $6,967,240; double that of 1979. Actual expenditure was $411,244 less than that which they had budgeted for. Why produce an unrealistic capital budget? Who suffers but the people we are trying to please? In 1984, another election year, the same Government's budget for capital expenditure was $16,312,368. What did we gain from it? If we look at the actual expenditure for 1984, the year that the previous Government was most vulnerable and was defeated, you will see that they spent $18,839,543. What did we gain for it? That was bad enough, Mr. President, that they overspent their budgeted capital expenditure by over $2 million, but to make matters worse they ended up the year with a deficit totalling over $591,000. Surely on the basis of management, this Budget cannot be criticised.

Mr. President, it is also a fact that the previous Government's election year budgets were not bearing true as I have just pointed out to the public. In 1980 there were no new revenue measures. In 1981 after the election, the Government in October of that year and again in November (when they produced their budget) raised over $3 million in taxes. So, the facts bear me out. They produced an election year electioneering budget.

I have pointed out these facts, Mr. President, not to defend any one side, but to show how unfair criticisms have been made against the capital expenditure for 1988 - projects that are vital to all aspects of this country. In comparison to the election year budgets as presented by the previous administration, which I say were unrealistic and riddled with deceit, this Budget, with its capital expenditure, is therefore sound and meaningful, dealing with the problems which we need to tackle and eradicate.

The years succeeding 1984 were devoted to a rebuilding programme - foundation building. Under a general foundation building programme it was only natural - I expected, at least - that the country would achieve a steady rate of increase on all fronts. I also expected some sectors would experience more growth than others. The facts and figures I gave today are nothing but the truth. I have been, at times, Mr. President, one of the severest critics of this Government, and I will not agree with the position as put forth by some Members. I cannot. I have never lied to my people, to the people of this country, and I will not begin today to satisfy anybody's political aspiration. I have my soul to consider.

Mr. President, I am pleased to see that a priority list for training, detailing areas of our manpower needs in this country, has now been published. I have said before that our only natural resource is our people. Training must begin in a more realistic manner and to do this, especially with school leavers, there have to be good passes and there has to be commitment.

With regard to the granting of scholarships, I believe (and I hope that the Honourable Member will correct me in his answer and say that I am wrong) there is a catch-22. Students applying to colleges must have some proof that their education expenses will be paid. This proof is usually in the form of a letter, and their applications cannot be processed without this guarantee. At the same time students applying for Government scholarships must have an acceptance from a college, however, they cannot have an acceptance if they cannot show that they have the scholarship.

As I understand, the Education Council sometimes gives a provisional agreement for the scholarship provided that the student is accepted, but they are reluctant to write a letter or guarantee to that effect. I must say, Sir, if this is correct, and this the information that I have, then there needs to be a clear set policy on these matters. I believe that the Education Council should grant a scholarship if a student is applying to a recognised university or college, and where he or she can show that they meet all of the entrance requirements for that institution, and, of course, where the course of study is useful to this country.

Mr. President, we must do all in our power to see that our young people are trained to take up the positions in this country that are available today. I would hope, Sir, that in this celebration of 100 years of publicly funded education, greater emphasis will be put on getting more of our young people into the teaching profession. Teaching is a noble profession. When we consider that our children spend a large proportion of their time throughout a long period of years within the school community, we would like to know that we have the best possible trained teachers who will leave good impressions upon our children. Our children's safety, health, meals, cleanliness, general behavioural and emotional problems, play, as well as the many aspects of their instruction proper, have to be supervised by teachers. It is in this, in particular the transmission of knowledge, that teachers do what most parents cannot possibly do. So clearly, the highest professional standards are desirable and must be sought after and sustained with all the effort possible.

To improve education in this country, and, Mr. President, you can believe that we have only just begun, training and career patterns obviously need the commitment of the authorities, and salary scales must be upgraded. If we desire for our children, and in fact the future of us all, excellence in the formulation of knowledge and for its effective transmission to be justly accessible to all, we, as parents, and the authorities in this country must uphold and respect the teaching profession. We must encourage rather than put forward purely negative and destructive criticism.

Mr. President, some fuss was recently made concerning the pay structure in this Island against the United Kingdom's. I am quite satisfied that the pay scale in this country is quite competitive and maybe considerably higher than the United Kingdom's if you take into consideration the benefits - housing allowance and what have you. But until we have more Caymanians trained in teaching we will for some time have to import teachers.

I firmly believe that we must offer our own local teachers the same benefits which we offer teachers from abroad. Are we asking our own young people to go overseas for four years or more while leaving families behind? Are we asking them to go overseas to face the cold and all else in a community to which they are not accustomed? Are we asking them to do all of that and then to get a degree and come home to make a commitment to the country? And are we then asking them to earn that which is being earned by persons without degrees and with very little experience in other professions? We cannot take them for granted.

Today, then, I stress the need for a new outlook in education in this country. We expect to see better passes each year, but we continue to take the teaching profession for granted. If those persons, who are to see that our children are better equipped, are paid on a par with professions of lesser importance to this country, do any of us believe that they will have a desire to smile all the time or that they will have the patience needed to instruct in order for our children yield the most excellent and desirable results? Teachers are human too and we had better not forget that aspect of it.

So, Mr. President, I believe there must be a re-evaluation of the status of teachers in this country. For starters I would like to see better salaries. At the least they should be brought on par with professions of lesser importance to this country. I would also like to see better career prospects. These things must be offered. We, in these Islands, must remember, Mr. President, that in our now complicated society the role of the teacher has been extended because I know that apart from teaching, many children today look to them for advice in many areas of life which affect them socially.

We expect more passes, we expect excellence from our children. We, as parents, have to bear in mind that we have a great responsibility in being parents. We cannot allow our children to sit down and watch television when they should be studying, and expect them to pass subjects. We cannot expect to send our children to social functions and not expect them to study, and then expect them then to pass. There must be a re-evaluation and we need it on both sides of the fence.

Maybe, Mr. President, I have trespassed far enough on this subject this afternoon and so I will close this section by stressing the need, now, in this country, for a re-evaluation of all aspects of the teacher's role.

Mr. President, I attended the graduation ceremony earlier this month, and I would like to congratulate the Department of Education, and the Portfolio, for indeed an excellent year in education. There has been an improvement in education all around. That is not to say, however, that there are not problem areas and perhaps lot of room for improvement, because there is. When we consider how far this country has come today, this Member will certainly thank almighty God.

I believe it was just sometime after 1965 that a new policy on education was introduced which provided free education up to secondary level, and the system, then, was off on a good start. Up to that time students still paid school fees at the then High School. However, as far as I am concerned, the system fell short in the introduction of the secondary modern school. That system played havoc with the lives of people in my age bracket, and I have since condemned it. Students attending that school had to be moved out, before their time, to make room for other students. People like myself were disillusioned about the entire system and order of the day in education. Today, I do not get any slaps on the shoulder to say that I am a good boy, but I am glad, at this point, of the disposition almighty God gave me because I did not stand still and wallow in disillusionment, instead I aggressively carried on to try to better myself, as did many more from that school.

Although I have today criticised the Honourable Member responsible for education, I have criticised him many times. I have particularly not dwelt on the education policy of this country, but you can believe that I have had a lot of say (not in the running of it, do not get me wrong) in the social policy which he is also responsible for. But I believe today, Mr. President, in spite of the criticisms levelled at the Honourable Member, this country owes him a debt of gratitude for his interest in education. With great foresight, I would say, he introduced the comprehensive system. It had its pitfalls (it is only very young - some 17 years since its introduction.), but today every child in this country has a chance to get a decent education. Education is not yet at the stage I would wish to see it, as I have pointed out before, but it is a long distance from where it was.

This year has seen the largest increase in 'O' level passes - the largest increase in each individual student. Some students had nine 'O' levels, one had 10. There were 15 honour students, which means seven 'O' levels or more; and there were more Caymanian honour students than foreign, I am happy to say. So there has been all around improvement. It is not only the case of those with higher ability doing better and the lower being left out. We must look at the number of students who now are getting three, four and five 'O' levels, which enables them to go on to sixth form. And since September of this year, we have had the largest sixth form class ever in this country. So there is marked improvement.

Mr. President, it only leaves for me now to congratulate, again, all those concerned, not leaving out those dedicated teachers throughout this country. I would also congratulate all the students graduating this year, and all those who made the honour's grade. It is worthy to note that West Bay was well represented in the graduating class. All students are worthy of mention from my district and throughout the country, but I would mention Miss Pilar Bush - you will note the last name - who gave the Students' Address. You see, Mr. President, we have a good heritage in our last name too. Ebanks and Bush are very strong families in this country. These students, I believe, will go on to make this country proud.

The graduating class was something to be proud of. One incident, however, that smacked the whole service and that was the phrase used by the Headmaster, "the end of the days when it was good enough to answer a teacher in Caymanian patois". Unfortunate for that occasion, Sir. I do not know, but maybe it was a slip of the tongue. I can only hope so, because all of us are indeed proud - in fact this Member is - of anything termed "Caymanian". I would leave it at that, Mr. President.

I am happy to see a raise contemplated for the civil service. The success of this country is dependent upon, in a great part, a good, clean civil service. Much has been said in the past about productivity. What we have to remember as Legislators, indeed the country, is that productivity can, to a large extent, be procured by means of greater efficiency. I expect that some of us will point to the fact that people are lazy, many people do not carry out their jobs with enthusiasm. Many people at all levels and in various places do not work the number of hours for which they are paid. This is the sort of thing you hear, Mr. President. And though observations like these can be made, I am sure that at our level of sophistication, we can agree that efficiency is not merely a matter of working harder and putting in more hours per day, per week, per month of the year, but also a question of adapting techniques, methods and procedures which make for quicker accomplishment of the jobs which any civil service may undertake, or are paid to undertake.

There are those, and I have heard it in this House, who claim that from what they observe the private sector is always more efficient than the public sector. There are others who put forward this argument on the basis of orientation, ideological - and I hope you all are listening and getting me right - they mean that the running of all business must always be left to private enterprise. I am not going to indulge in any argument about this sector or that sector, it is a fact of life in Cayman and accepted on all sides that these two sectors exist. But, Mr. President, there are some in the private sector whom I would not, as is used in a good old Caymanian phrase, hit a hog in the backside with.

MR. PRESIDENT: I thought you made a very good reference to being proud of things Caymanian a few moments ago.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: That does not take away my pride, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am not suggesting it should, I was thinking you should emphasise it.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: We must not always try to tear down the civil service at every chance we can get. There are departments lacking, we know it, but for those who are trying to put across this argument that the private sector is always more efficient than the public sector is not true. You can go into businesses in the private sector and not even get a smile, and you have to wait until they have finished talking to their boyfriend or girlfriend, or whoever it is they are talking to. There needs to be another look at that also.

But to carry on, I am one who likes to be realistic, and to give credit where credit is due. I believe that the public sector in this country deserves credit in more ways than one. I have heard people say "You are giving them a raise again?". We keep complaining about our young people who might leave the civil service to go into the private sector, but how are we going to keep them if their salaries do not compare favourably with those in the private sector. You cannot expect them, as I said before, to go off and train and come back, shove them behind a desk and say "do this for the love of country". Love of country must play a great part, but you can believe that it cannot take care of bills, nor of the children, nor of the children's education. No, I support the public sector in this country 100 per cent with this raise, and I am only hoping that it will be done right because there are many at the lower levels who need to be brought up.

Mr. President, the Customs Department is one that I believe we should never, never stop giving credit to, or praise and benefits. That department, as I understand, brings in more revenue than any other department. Again, I believe there has been some meddling with their overtime, and I am wondering whether the new position is not allowing Government to pay what the airlines should be paying. I hope that the Honourable Financial Secretary, in his reply, will answer me on that subject, to clear the air.

There is one observation, Mr. President, concerning a new method of clearing passengers. This clearway system, where passengers choose to enter either a red channel when they have goods to declare or a green channel when they have no dutiable or prohibited items, cannot work in this country. The Customs Department has been vigilant, all of them, especially those involved in the combating of narcotics. To put this system in place in this country would be to open this country to a greater influx of drugs and other prohibited items. We cannot compare the Cayman Islands with Great Britain. Let that be understood. I will say no more on that President, except to say that I hope it is never introduced in this country.

Immigration is another department that is most vital to this country today. They put in many long, hard hours, and many of them are not, I would say, paid, for they cannot be paid, in my opinion, for the kind of hours that they put in. In their kind of job, payment can only come, to a great extent, in the satisfaction of it. But I believe that again that we must seek to keep them on par with the other sector, the private sector. If we want honest people in the service, one means of getting them is to pay them properly. When salaries are low there is more of a pull, as I would put it, to ideas that are not conducive to honesty. So coming back to the raise, these are the people, in the lower brackets, that I hope are going to get a fair share.

The Caymanian Protection Law is not working at its best. It needs to be revamped. I believe that we have honest people on the Board, but we cannot continue to expand the economy with all our people employed (all those who want to work) and not have people upgrade their businesses. In many instances, to upgrade business means to have new staff. There is a great problem with this. I know a mechanic who needs to expand his business. The business, within the community, is there. Now you can tell him to go and hire a Caymanian, but any good Caymanian mechanic is like the man I am talking about, he has his own business. They are not there. I will come to that reason why these sort of people are not here later on.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would you like to yield to the suspension for tea?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:11 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:30 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:
for West Bay.

Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member

MR. W. McKEEVA RUSH:

In dealing with Immigration and the Caymanian Protection Law, I believe, Sir, that there needs to be a new look at that Protection Law. There needs to be a change of position in the granting of status. I believe that we have come to a time and place that the granting of status must be cut out - done away with. It is sad that we have a Law on our books that can give an outside person the privileges which the Caymanian Protection Law gives, and that these persons can come into this country and carry on dishonestly and illegally, without being able, after we have granted them status, to be able to take it back and to order deportation.

It is sad, because today Cayman is an attractive country. We could easily have gone either way, I know, but I am dealing with the present. When we consider, Mr. President, and look at our courts' list, we find that there is much criminal activity on the part of certain people who have gained status in this country over the years. I believe the time has come, and I am giving notice in this House, that if the Law is not brought to this House by May there will be a motion on the floor to bring it back to revamp it. I believe in giving individuals security of tenure. We could never deny that, and being a person who does not discriminate, I believe that there must be some security of tenure. We cannot expect people to come into this country, to invest, to bring their money in and for us to use them, we cannot give that impression. So when they come here, we must offer some security of tenure. But to give them the privilege, or give an all across the board privilege as the Caymanian Protection Law offers is not conducive today to the welfare of this country.

Mr. President, we find drugs rampant. I do not want to delve too deeply into it at this point, because I intend to go into it at a later stage. But we find that some, not all, of the cause is brought about by plans spearheaded by certain individuals in this country who have gained status; and they are so smart that they can get some of our local people involved and put together and form a gang. And we hear of the big man, Mr. President, but oftentimes a lot of small people make up the big men. I say it is time to do something about it when we find these situations, and the Caymanian Protection Law must change to handle it. It is not good enough to change our Constitution, to talk about devoting aspects of the electoral process, that is not good enough because I believe that the vast majority are not concerned with the electoral process, they are concerned with the making of money, and by whatever means they can get it, they go about it. The Law must be changed to reflect what I am talking about.

Housing. The Housing Development Corporation, Mr. President.

I was opposed to the Housing Development Corporation. I was opposed to it when it was first proposed. I felt that there was going to be too much bureaucracy. That Corporation cost over $100,000 to set up alone, and that $100,000 could have built several low-income homes in this country. I believe that Government should have only gotten into guaranteeing loans from the banks when it came to the low income aspect of it. Some new policies have been set. I do not know how well they are working, but I do know that there are still numerous cases which we need to tackle in the housing area. Not only is there the rigmarole that one has to go through to get a loan, but there the other bureaucracy which our people have to face in trying to get a little home.

I have just assisted in the building of two homes. I do not wish it to come across that I am going to ask for special favours, nor do I wish it to come across that safety aspects have not been taken into consideration with what I am going to deal with; but when you come across a situation where a man builds a 14 foot x 20 foot house, he has to go through the whole rigmarole, which is set up, to get the home complete with electricity. This man has one bedroom, and the conditions state that he must put three electrical outlets into that one bedroom. In all, in that 14 x 20 house, there is something like, I believe, 15 light switches and outlets - points I believe they call them. Why? There is the safety aspect, I agree, but for so many points in a one little 14 x 20 house? In the case which I am talking about, it will have cost that person more to have his house wired than to pay for the labour to build it.

I know the country needs revenue. Let them charge the big buildings, Mr. President. If I am not mistaken, the big buildings in this country do not cost much more than the little house that I am speaking of with regards to the Government fee to get it all wired. Big four storey buildings - I trust that the Honourable Member would have a look at this situation - charge them, they can pay it.

Mr. President, we must never neglect that social aspect of this country - housing. The least that a man and his family should have in this affluent society of ours should be a roof over his head. He should not be made to stay in a little 4 x 4 building with his wife and two or three children. It is not conducive to our affluent society, and we cannot neglect it any longer. I trust that whichever administration comes in this would be a priority.

Mr. President, there is much talk concerning social security in this country. There is much opposition to it today. I know that, I work with my people, but, as with the Labour Law, the opposition will soon come to realise that there is the need. When we brought the motion to this House to establish the Labour Law, they never cut our throats and that was about all, Mr. President. They were saying that we were going communistic, that we were going socialistic and destroying the country. I never heard more in my life. Thank God the same opponents of the Law have now agreed to it. Sometimes I have to wonder, I hope I have not slipped, Mr. President, in giving them anything that they do not deserve because they are certainly happy that they have it.

But social security, Mr. President, is needed in this country today. When I first thought about any sort of retirement benefits, I first thought about the casual labour sector. I have since realised that that sector alone cannot carry its own burden. It needs help. Therefore the social security is the means by which to do it.

Mr. President, I have just applauded the civil service, but I understand that there is some opposition from that end as well. I would hope not. I would hope not, because those people more than anybody else know the position in this country. On the one hand, we have to do something about the position of the civil service pension. It is a fact, it has grown large. I am not ashamed of it. It will become larger. That is the point. You will see that the private sector is crying, 'let them take care of their position themselves'. The civil service is not going to be able to run the scheme. This is what you hear coming from so-called organisations in this country which claim they have this country's interests at heart. How dare they suggest that we do not have people, in the civil service of this country who are responsible and capable enough, to run a social security scheme. I must trust my money to them, but I must not trust my money with the Government.

Let me tell one and all, Governments come and go, but our civil service will last forever. I cannot trust my money as an individual to people on the outside who do not know what the next day is going to bring for them. There might be mergers, buy-outs and shut-downs. All these things we have to take into consideration when it comes to private enterprise managing anything like a social security scheme. I have no control over their board of directors. And there is much criminal activity in the world today when it comes to business in the private area. So where are the safeguards, Mr. President? But we have a safeguard in the people. The people, if a Government becomes complacent and tries to misuse the funds of any social security scheme, will be vigilant enough to remove them - that is politicians I am speaking of. As I said, I would trust my money to any civil service rather than to trust it to people I do not know.

Mr. President, do not ask about the need. The need is there. Are we saying that we must refuse to take care of all those people who work in stores, who work in the hotels, the condos, who have put in 25, 30 years, and who have left, some of them, with nothing? That is the attitude I am coming up against. It is those money changers in this country who refuse to share the wealth. They believe that they can work people for years and years with no security at the end of their useful life to them. That attitude cannot prevail in this country. They might kick me out come 1988, but you can believe they are going to have a thorn in their flesh between now and then. Because I am going to use every avenue open to me to see that a social security scheme will come about in the not too distant future. I am not going to wait much longer, Mr. President. We have people whom I know have worked 25 years in certain large institutions in this country, and they have had to go with nothing. Is that fair? Where is the fairness? They talk about social justice. They do not know what it means. And I pray that the civil service of this country will get behind the elected Government and help us institute social security in this country. As I said when I began on this issue, one sector cannot carry it, and to have that all around benefit we need it.

Mr. President, Social Services in this country has come a long way from where it was a few years ago. But we have yet to reach where we need to be. There are many areas that socially have a serious effect on this country. I touched on it in dealing with education. We as parents need to be more disciplined with our children. We cannot give them everything their eyes see and want. And to give them everything they want in place of spending some time with them is not helping. That has been the general trend in this country. I do not think I am overly criticising any one person. We are going to continue to have problems if we do not sit down and spend some time with our children.

Now, Mr. President, we have to take cognizance of the fact that in many families the mother, who is given the God-given role of motherhood, has had to go out and sometimes keep two jobs. This is most evident in the one-parent families in this country. By doing that she has left her family unattended. Gone are the days when you can depend strongly on other members of the family to help you with your burdens. But when we find some of the problems that I see, I do not know whether it is being recorded officially, but I know I see it. The problems of children staying away from school. That is one aspect of it. The problem of juvenile crime. It is alarming. We can build all the rehabilitation centres and caring centres that we want to, but as parents we have first charge over our children.

Mr. President, the increase in drugs has not relented. It has reached crisis proportions in this country. I am most concerned as a parent and as a legislator when I see what is happening. We can continue to blame this Government or the next Government, but we have a part to play in seeing that our children are taken care of by us, as parents.

We have seen, in this country, a large increase in the jails - young people in jail. We can seek to rehabilitate, but (and I am stressing this for certain reasons this afternoon, reasons I do not care to voice on the floor of this House) we had better not sit down and expect Government to be the cure-all. Government has its part to play, and proper policies must be set. I disagree with this policy where a urine test is taken and that is good enough. I disagree because I believe that section of the Law is being ill used and abused. Information comes that certain officers will make it a point of finding out who is on suspended sentence and in a short period of time you will find that person before the court again. They will go to a person's home when the person is in bed, and take them to do a urine test.

MR. PRESIDENT: If I may interrupt you for a moment, I think it is reasonable to raise the general doubts on this score, but if you have specific cases in mind, you should report them to the authorities.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, as I said to you some minutes back, that I was certain when I start on this subject I would be called to order, but I cannot be blamed for not moving substantive motions in this House.

MR. PRESIDENT: May I interrupt you again. I am not calling you to order. It was a friendly intervention, please.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I take it as that, Sir, but I have to carry on my debate in the same way that I was.

This is happening, and, Mr. President, you know, in your capacity as Governor, that I have made accusations on the floor of this House. I was challenged on what I had done about it. When in fact I had called to see a top official in this country, and I was put on to his deputy, and I refused, and you know and I know that that was refuted. Mr. President, I am not likely to go back to that individual to be called a liar.

MR. PRESIDENT: Now I really will have to ask you to stop there. Please go on to the next subject.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Under what Standing Order are you stopping me in this way, Mr. President?

MR. PRESIDENT: You are calling into question the conduct of an officer of the Crown.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I am calling ...

MR. PRESIDENT: ... into question the conduct of an officer of the Crown. You may do that on a substantive motion, but not in the conduct of this debate, please.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Well, Mr. President, you can believe I question his conduct.

MR. PRESIDENT: You clearly have, do not let us go back and forward, let us continue with the debate.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: What I am telling you, Mr. President, is that you have asked me to pinpoint it, and I am telling you as the Presiding Officer of this House and in your capacity as Governor that I do not have the intention of being insulted again and again by these individuals that I must report to. I will not ...

MR. PRESIDENT: Would the Honourable Member please, please carry out the wish of the Chair. Do not let us get into a heated debate with each other.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, I will abide by your ruling, Sir, but I feel that I am being curtailed.
There is no use moving substantive motions in this House.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, I have to interrupt you again. The point of moving a substantive motion in a matter like this is that it would give you the opportunity to say exactly what you wish to say in the proper place in that debate. Whether you win or lose a motion is not the point, the point is you have the opportunity to say what you wish.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, I thank you for your explanation, but I have moved motion after motion in this House, and I do not really need that to be told to me. After three years, that was the point in me moving so many motions, even if they did not pass.

I will abide by your ruling. But I am not yet done.

Mr. President, I believe that when it comes to justice in this country there are double standards. I question the case here a few days ago where drugs were found in an apartment and no one was found guilty.

MR. PRESIDENT: I have to interrupt you. You put a supplementary the other morning on this and you know that you are questioning the decision of a court of law - and that you really must not do in this House.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, where must I question it?

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, I beg your pardon, I did not hear that.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: If I cannot raise that subject in this House, Mr. President, where can I raise it?

MR. PRESIDENT: I think I will take legal advice on that, because clearly legal advice is needed, and I will reply to you in writing. But you cannot question a decision of a court of law in this House.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. President, on a point of order, could you state what Standing Order, for the benefit of this House, you are referring to?

MR. PRESIDENT: Attorney General?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. President, I was going to say, first of all, that there is a specific provision which prohibits questions being asked reflecting on the decisions of cases, but then the conduct of a judge is, or the decision of a judge, obviously gets wrapped up under section 35(7). I do not think I can take it further than that.

MR. PRESIDENT: Section 35(7) is the section to which I was referring.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Yes, Mr. President, this particular Standing Order deals with the conduct INAUDIBLE.

MR. PRESIDENT: It is correct.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: INAUDIBLE.

MR. PRESIDENT: Give me a moment, it appeared to me that you were questioning the decision of a court in that particular case. In other words, if I remember correctly, a conviction was not taken, you were questioning that, am I right? Well, I think that is the conduct of the court.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, that is why I thought that you were wrong the day that you ruled on that. I was not questioning the conduct of the judges, I questioned, and I am still questioning, the method used in the investigation.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well, in that case you must not refer to the decision of the court. And when you put your question the other morning, you originally put the question in and it referred to the docket or case numbers and the decision of the court. I think whether you thought, or whether the Government thought, the decision was satisfactory, or the result was satisfactory, I think I ruled out the second part of the question. When you put it, you put the first part. In your supplementary, you then attempted to put the second part, and that is why I ruled you out of order. Now I am trying to be consistent on that.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, I am not now questioning the sentences or the result of the case.

MR. PRESIDENT: May I interrupt you again. If I may take it that you are questioning the efficiency - no, I will take account of the time taken by interruptions in your four hours, do not worry - may I take it that you are questioning the efficiency of the police force in its pursuit of particular types of cases. Is this the point? Well I think you have made that point, I wanted it to be clear that that is the point you were pursuing, and not the questioning of the administration of justice in the courts. I think we are not in agreement.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Yes, Sir. But, Mr. President, I trust I can carry on with that part of the debate.

We have good examples set in this country. I am not questioning the judgement of the presiding officer of the court. I am questioning what happened when the case was investigated. That is where the fault lies, Mr. President, not on the honourable court. As far as I am concerned, there was some meddling with it that should not have taken place. That is why I made the accusation of double standards in this country that some people are more equal than others. It will destroy our country, regardless of the vibrant economy, regardless of the fiscal policies of Government. I stand against it, Mr. President, and I have been doing so ever since I became publicly minded of what the position is in this country. It has been carrying on.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think you have made your point very clearly.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Investigation into allegations of corruption of the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force. Accusation was made, I believe by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, that the motion was placed for an investigation into the junior officers of the Force. That is false, it is incorrect. He said they did not support the motion because an investigation of this nature would have only taken place on the junior officers of the Force, and that it would have left the morals of the Force low. It is a false accusation that I must refute.

The motion did not ask for any particular section of the Force to be investigated. The motion asked for an across-the-board investigation of the Force, and to get up and suggest in this House that I was placing a motion to only investigate the Caymanian officers is completely false. I must now refute it.

I believe, Mr. President, that when that accusation was made the Presiding Officer interrupted because the Member was beginning to question the conduct of certain officers. The Presiding Officer, yourself, said that it can only be done on a substantive motion. Mr. President, I quite well understand that. A substantive motion was placed for an investigation, but what did they do? They did not debate the motion. They did not stay here to vote aye or no. I now question their motives as to whether they are really concerned about human life or misconduct of any officer, be he Caymanian or foreign, or whether they are just raising political propaganda on the eve of an election year?

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think you have made your point, and I think we should now pass on. I refer you to Standing Order 35(2). I gave latitude to the speaker you have referred to, and I have given you latitude to reply. I think we should now pass on.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Which Standing Order are you calling now, Mr. President?

MR. PRESIDENT:

Standing Order 35(2). I know that sometimes you think I give too much latitude to one and not enough to another, but I think in this particular case, you have given your answer, and I think we should now move on.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

No, Mr. President. I agree to your ruling that I not carry on the debate, but I am going to refute what was said that my motion was an attempt to only investigate the junior Caymanian officers. I am going to refute that, and that is going to take me a little while, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

No, you have already refuted it very clearly. I am sorry, I think we should not pursue it any further, you have made your point very clear.

MR. LINEFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. President, on a point of order. I believe that the interpretation of Standing Order 35(2) considers a matter on which the House has come to a conclusion during the current session. The matter to which the Second Elected Member for West Bay is referring was just mentioned during the Budget debate, and the conclusion of the Budget debate has not yet taken place. Granted, Sir, the conclusion of that particular motion took place, but not the Budget debate, and he is just refuting certain statements made during the Budget debate. So I cannot see how that is out of order, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I read the Standing Order to mean that it refers in a present session of the House that any matter that has been the subject of a concluded debate should not be related again except on a substantive motion to rescind that decision. Now, in the Budget debate, we allow a very wide range of discussion. That motion, which was Number 16/B7, as we have just been reminded, was referred to by another speaker. And I have given the latitude for the Second Elected Member for West Bay to reply to the point made, and he has refuted it, but that was a motion which has been debated and concluded. That is how I read it.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, I am not now trying to debate the motion rejected in September of this year.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I realise you are not. I am trying to point out that you have made your point; you have refuted the point made against you which you chose to refute. If you continue, it will become repetitious. I am trying to point out that a certain amount of latitude is good, but we simply cannot go on and on and on repeating ourselves. Now I have also discounted the time for this interruption from your four hours.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, I cannot agree with your ruling, Sir. I think I am being curtailed, but I will bow to it.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, I could not catch the last phrase, could you repeat it?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I said I am not agreeing with your ruling, but I will honour the Chair's judgement.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am grateful.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: But I feel that I am being curtailed.

MR. PRESIDENT: You are entitled to feel that. Now would you like to go ahead? It is more or less time for our normal adjournment. Would you like to go on for a few minutes, or shall we adjourn? I am in your hands.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: No, Mr. President, that gives me a good opportunity.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I believe nothing now remains but to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

MR. PRESIDENT: The motion is that the House do stand adjourned until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

PRAYERS

CAPT. MARRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name. Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of the House are resumed. Questions.

The First Elected Member for Badden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO.111: Would the Honourable Member state the number of persons employed in the Computer Department of Government, supplying the nationality of each person?

ANSWER: There are a total of 34 positions in the establishment for Computer Services, plus one supernumerary post to cover a permanent and pensionable establishment officer on study leave. The breakdown by nationality of the 34 posts is as follows:

Caymanian	19
Canadian	11*
British	3
USA	1
Irish	1

* This includes 5 new staff recruited, but arriving between 15th November, 1987 and 3rd January, 1988.

 One Briton will be leaving 23rd November and replaced by a Canadian (thereby making the Canadian total 12).

MR. PRESIDENT:

There appear to be no supplementaries. We move to question number 112.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO.112: Would the Honourable Member name and explain the computer interlinking services with the United States and who is responsible for control codes?

ANSWER: There are no links into Government's computer system from any location overseas.

The only link to overseas includes the local connection to Cable & Wireless (West Indies) Limited's IDAS (International Database Access System) which permits users on Government's computer system to access database residents on computers overseas. This is strictly an outgoing service and does not permit any incoming access to Government's computer system.

Currently there are two database connections, LEXIS (Law Reference Database) for the Legal Department, and DSIN (Digital's Software Information Network) for Computer Services through the IDAS connection. In both cases, the codes are necessary to access those databases held by the respective departments.

MR. PRESIDENT: Are there any supplementaries? There are no supplementaries. Let us pass to the next question. The First Elected Member for Bedden Town, please.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, before I read this question out, I apologise for being sick yesterday.

MR. PRESIDENT: That is very courteous of you. We received your note, thank you.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: I wonder if it would be possible to get the questions that I was asking yesterday placed on the Order Paper for tomorrow.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sure the Business Committee will take that into account.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Thank you, Sir.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT.

NO. 113: Would the Honourable Member say if there is a policy of rewards by merit and ability, and, if so, give details of any promotions for merit and ability given since 1st January, 1985 to 30th June, 1987?

ANSWER: There is a policy of rewards by merit and ability. This is clearly defined in the Public Service Commission Regulation 19, which states: "In considering the claims of persons in the Public Service for promotion, ability, efficiency, experience, merit, qualification and seniority shall be taken into account."

In keeping with this policy, one hundred and fifty-one officers were promoted during the period 1st January, 1985 to 30th June, 1987.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I would just like to ask the Honourable Member if this number excludes those that would normally receive an increment.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Yes, Mr. President, we are talking about promotions. Increments are an annual affair.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS
BILLS

(CONTINUATION OF SECOND READING DEBATE)

MR. PRESIDENT: The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH: When we adjourned yesterday afternoon, Mr. President, I was dealing with the heading of Social Services, and the subject of drugs. I believe, Sir, that I have dealt successfully with the points raised in the debate concerning a motion I placed in September.

In both Members' debates which covered the aspect of drugs, it was sought to denounce my motion and lay the blame for the increase in crime to the departure of Commissioner Stowers. They tried to put forward the view that the Force was more efficient under him. I do not know why the two Members keep trying to give this man credit. His record will not substantiate. During his time here, more crooks came to this country than at any other time, and walked freely as if they owned the country. The Members must understand that the people of this country did not respect the man, they detested his leadership of the Force because it was believed he was politically directed. The record of convictions was poor indeed, and I repeat, if they had called the investigation I asked for in 1983, there might not have been the need for one today. The same situation obtains.

Mr. President, there is much to be desired in the whole situation, when it comes to the apprehension and conviction of drug offenders today. However, when you look at the position according to the records of a couple of years back, you have to wonder about the whole situation concerning drugs. The record bears me out. If you look at the number of cases dealt with, and those which were reported from 1980 to last year, you will see what I am talking about. In 1979 there were 120 cases. In 1980, there was somehow a decrease and you have to wonder about it, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: Could I ask you one question? Are you referring to prosecutions brought, or to cases successfully prosecuted? I think it is important to make it clear.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: The number of cases reported and dealt with.

MR. PRESIDENT: Reported and dealt with, thank you.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: In 1981 - 172; 1983 - 156; and in 1984, an election year again, it decreased. In 1985 - 178. In 1986 we had a very large number of 397. My belief here is that Government is not telling the people a lie - Government has faced up to the fact. What this says to me, Sir, is that it seems they were more concerned about the electoral feeling of the country at the time rather than of the true apprehension of crooks.

MR. PRESIDENT: A further point of information. Would you give the House the figure for 1984. You say it is a decrease, I think it is important that the House should be told the figure.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: In 1984 - 108.

MR. PRESIDENT: One hundred and eight, thank you.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: To election year, and the year before the election year, up; election year, down. That is the point I am making.

To go on with the record under the previous Commissioner, as far as prevention is concerned, that was bad too, because absolutely nothing was done by the Member then as far as rehabilitation is concerned.

One Member spoke about the removal of the mandatory sentences. This is something that I stood against from its inception, and I campaigned vigorously against it. I promised that I would see it removed - the discretion of the judge had to be put back into the Law. This is what those mandatory sentences did. They removed the discretion of the judge. I doubt that it was even lawful, or that it would have been justice, at least. At the time, what was happening was that the little barefoot boy was penalised and put in prison for a first-time offence. I believe they removed that to put it for a second time offence. All this was going on while the big crooks in the country went about their business. The big cocaine kings (cocaine which was introduced into this country as far as records go, from the years 1977 to 1984) were not apprehended. The Commissioner of Police at that time did nothing. I stood against him then, and I stand against him today, in the hope that he will never again influence any direction of the Force in this country. I hear he might be coming back - I pray not.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think you are straying outside the bounds of the debate. You are entitled to question and discuss the relative efficiency of the police from time to time, but I must ask you not to go too far into personalities.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: I cannot see how you call this 'personalities'. These are the facts ...

MR. PRESIDENT: Please, please do not argue with the Chair. You will put me in the position of ruling you out of order. I do not wish to do that. I think you are making your points very clearly. I am asking you not to make them too repetitious.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Well, with respect, Sir, I do not think I am being repetitious. But I believe I have made my point.

I am not dealing with personalities, I cannot agree with you on that. I am dealing with a record of two Members who brought up in this House the debate I am now referring to.

MR. PRESIDENT: You are now repeating yourself. You a moment ago said you had made your point, you agreed with me. Now please let us resume.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

No, Mr. President, I will have to agree with you because I respect you and I respect the Chair, but I do not think you are handling me right, you know because I am dealing with records. Two Members brought it up, and I think that should be borne in mind.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Please, please, please, Honourable Member, I do not want to have the last word, it is not necessary. The Chair must follow the rules of the House.

I am sorry, please resume. I did not mean you to sit down.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

All right, you have the last say.

Now, Mr. President, as I was pointing out yesterday, the position of first and second offenders today is not too good under the urine test. I stand against this method because I feel it is doing more harm than good. The urine test is doing the same thing that the mandatory sentences did. It is a fact, regardless of your ruling me out of order or not. It is being abused by certain officers. It is being abused. This is a fact. When the police catch someone (this is the position, please let me explain myself before I am ruled out of order), before they go to court that person is tested again. This cannot be right. All this is doing is building up resentment and packing Northward Prison with young people. We need to look at this again to see whether the abuse of drugs has decreased since the use of this section of the Misuse of Drugs Law. That is what we need to do. I believe you will find that it is not helping. It leaves too much room for abuse.

I believe that organisations like Cayman Against Substance Abuse can and will go a long way in helping to stem the problem of drug abuse in this country. It is these kinds of organisations, with dedicated parents working in them, that I believe will help put right the crisis we are facing. And so I would offer them every bit of encouragement because the task they undertake, as I said, is gigantic.

Believe it or not, I have some bouquets to throw too. Before I leave this area, I would offer my thanks to those Members of the Police Force who are really out there trying to honestly do something about crime in this country. We have some very good, dedicated policemen, no doubt about it, for whom I have a lot of respect. And we see a lot of young Caymanians, as new recruits, whom I can wish well. My advice to them is to be fair and honest. They should not think about the convictions that they can get, but they should be honest in the manner in which they convict. An honest policeman is worth his weight in gold to this country.

We talk much about drug abuse, and I believe one way of combating drugs is by clean, healthy sports. I see that we are going to get a sports instructor who will assist in maintaining and developing various sporting programmes throughout the Islands. This is more than needed. There needs to be coordination when it comes to sports in this country.

I see there will be some reorganisation in the football area. This is a right move. However, some revaluation needs to be done in this particular area of sports. The situation today is that we have all year round football. This is not good, because we do not have enough playing fields, and so the fields get overused, the men do not have time to get into any other kind of sport, and therefore their bodies are not getting the proper rest. Football in this country has always been an amateur sport, but I believe that today we can become professional. We can go to the Caribbean Championships, we can go to the World Championships and we can go to the Olympics. It is not outside our grasp. There is plenty of talent in this country, talent which we have to harness and manage properly. But all this needs the commitment of the entire country, not only of Government, but also private companies. Money is needed and I believe that enough of that is in this country to further the cause of better sports.

I want to go on record as thanking all those people who are involved in the different sports, who have given a commitment to our young people in helping to train them. We have come a long way, and therefore, as I said and will repeat, it needs the commitment of the entire country.

Before I close on the subject of Social Services, I would commend a move that was made to get the handicapped school, or a division of it, in the West Bay area, what is called the Sunrise Centre. I am not going to say too much on it, because this morning's paper carried two full pages on the school - but just to thank those who are involved and who have committed themselves to helping these sorts of children. What a pity that we never had something like this years ago.

As a Member here in this House, I have criticised Government on their social policy. I have criticised, in fact, all previous Governments. And they can be criticised, because no commitment was made to social development in the country. Today we are a little bit better off than we were in trying to institute programmes, at least. We have yet to see the outcome of those programmes, but I trust that every avenue will be explored to see that they work well.

I now move to tourism. It is obvious, quite obvious, that tourism is in good hands. Today I thank the Honourable Member and his entire staff for the good job they are doing. We are spending large sums on advertising. I do not know what the situation is, but I would trust that it would be now time for the hotels (which are not doing too much advertising, and depending on Government) to begin to shoulder a much larger part of the advertising in this country. They themselves can be the best advertisement. There is much more that can be said. However, I do need to leave something to say in the Throne Speech.

Mr. President, before I close, as is usual, I want to speak on matters happening and affecting my constituency. Each year I have sought to rename roads in our constituency, in honour of our stalwart citizens who have passed on. This road that I am about to name is not a major road, but it is a minor road leading off from the main road; that is Town Hall Road going into Farrington Square. Today I will make a move to have this road renamed Captain Charlie's Road, in honour of the late Captain Charles Farrington. This man, as I said, was one of our leading citizens, a master mariner, and I do not need to stand here and give any obituary on him today, because he is well known throughout this country. His family is well known. I am only asking that this be taken into consideration. I will make further moves to see that it is done.

I want to thank those dedicated, community-spirited men and women in our district who have made this year's Pirate's Week yet another success. They have worked hard, and, Mr. President, you heard a lot of reference made to what this district and West Bay was getting in comparison with other districts. What we get is a result of a lot of dedicated community-minded people. We have not sat flat and expected Government to do everything.

Mr. President, once again I remind Government that tourism could be better facilitated in this country if my advice were taken to build the landing jetty in West Bay and have some, or one of the cruise ships, come to the district. Anchorage is not a problem there, and with the six or five cruise ships that were in the harbour the other day, it is quite obvious that something has to be done. West Bay, being the district that it is, I contend has a lot of room for tourism development, and I believe it will be the saviour of this country in the future because it is yet untouched with development. Government must now consider that this landing jetty is feasible, and that it would, as I said, facilitate tourism.

In our district we had one football field completed. A new football and softball field were started - to do this we raised money ourselves and we have got a small donation from Government. I will see to getting another one in Finance Committee.

I want to put on record my thanks to certain young members of the community who helped raise some funds. We had an event (and it is worthy of mention) in the constituency, where one young man, Mr. Alfred Ebanks, a Customs Officer, swam from Rum Point to Morgans Harbour, the whole length of North Sound. This was something to experience and behold. I was right there, of course I was not in the water, but I was there with moral support and otherwise. We raised some money - people like Mr. Westmoreland and Mr. Noel Bodden gave very large donations, and I want to go on record as thanking them. This event, I should say, was organised with the youth club of the district.

The youth club was also instrumental, together with the Pirate's Week Committee, in getting the new playground for the primary school. Work has commenced; it is fenced, and the playground equipment is just about ready for installation. Again I would go on record as saying thanks to the youth club, its president, Mr. Mario Ebanks, and the Pirate's Week committee which contributed the playground equipment.

The fire station is just about finished, and should soon be getting its baptism. I do not know whether we will have two, but it is just about ready. And I want to go on record as thanking the department, because this is a much needed facility. Of course, we can never say enough good about the Fire Department in this country with its stalwart Chief and stalwart officers under him.

I would make mention of a question I raised in the House concerning a piece of property adjacent to the fire station in West Bay. I trust that before any deal is made on that piece of property Members from the district will be informed so that we can have an input on it.

I have brought to the House a motion which Government accepted, to rebuild the Government wharf in North Sound. I would trust that this will be done early in the year. It is a hazard to the public, and a hazard to tourism.

Mr. President, I dwelt a long time on Social Services, but I want to put forward an idea here this morning that hopefully Government will smile on, and the community at large will accept. I believe that it would be good. I plan to get all the churches in the district together to employ a youth and community worker amongst themselves, with special emphasis on counselling. I believe that it is much needed, and if we have someone there in the district who can move amongst the people and know what they do, it will help our increasing social problems. I trust that, as I said, Government will smile on it. When it comes to counselling, much needs to be done because I know in my capacity as a marriage officer that I have had to do (in my short time - what little I could do) a lot. I believe when it comes to counselling that only those educationally able can do a proper job; those well trained in all aspects.

Clearly, West Bay has been well represented by this Member, and I do not know who would change results for promises, but I can tell you that I am standing firm for a second term.

In closing, I can only say that we have a lot to thank almighty God for. We have had no hurricanes, no storms, no natural disasters of any kind. Everybody who wants to work in this country is working, and we have it better than most countries in the Caribbean area. I have done my part for this country, and whether I am here again to debate another budget will remain to be seen; but I trust whoever is here will do as good a job as I have done, for I believe that the Cayman Islands would be well served.

I would close, Mr. President, by repeating a poem put into song.

Lord while for all mankind we pray,
of every clime and coast;
oh hear us for our native land,
the land we love the most.

Lord of the nations thus to thee,
our country we commend;
be thou her refuge and her trust,
her everlasting friend."

I support the Appropriation Bill.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Elected Member for East End.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN:

Mr. President, the Budget Address which was presented to this country on Friday, 13th November, 1987 is a very comprehensive one. I am pleased to offer my contribution to the debate on it. It is my hope that I will be here to debate many such informative Budget Addresses in the future.

I take this opportunity to commend the Honourable Financial Secretary on another of his thorough presentations on the affairs of these Islands. This document is one which, in my opinion, will go down in the history of these Islands, and will be of great guidance to the generations to come.

At the commencement of this Address, the Honourable Financial Secretary, gave a clear picture of problems which are present in the world today, especially among stock markets. He has shown where the Dow Jones plunged to its lowest since the historic crash in the year 1929. What was more important is that he went on to show us world uncertainty, and how it could affect us in months to come.

This can easily be agreed with, as everyone knows our very close ties with the United States of America. We depend on the tourist dollar strenuously. And I say this because it is a known fact that our economy depends on that dollar to survive. We are also aware that the larger percentage of our imports are from the United States of America. I believe figures revealed some time ago that approximately 95 per cent of our imports are from the United States of America. Therefore, it has to be correct that whatever affects the U.S. dollar will eventually be spun off to us.

But with all of this, we, a very tiny country compared to the United States of America, can be most grateful to the good Lord for His blessings which have been bestowed upon us. Today we are in a position that we can brag of much construction, we can brag of the many tourists on our shores. We can brag of an abundance of business activity and most important, we can brag of a fairly healthy economy. We have much to be thankful for.

Mr. President, we, as Caymanians, can look back at our past with great pride. We have come a long way. Today, we are debating a Budget for 1988 which is estimated for CI$84.2 million, which shows us an increase of some 13 per cent over 1987. I am certain that I am correct in saying that I do not believe there is another country in the world with a population of 20,000 people who can boast of such a large budget.

At this point, I have to say that I am concerned, and I am also disappointed, to see that of an estimated capital expenditure of CI$16 million, there is very little for my district, the district of East End. I have to join with previous speakers when the question was asked, are we back in the days when Grand Cayman ended at Crewe Road?

Since the elections of 1984, I have tried repeatedly to obtain certain things for my district. I submitted to the present Government a list, on 1st December, 1984, of the various things I would have liked and what had been previously started, which of course needed completion. The people of my constituency would have very much appreciated even one major project per year, rather than almost nothing. But you know, to add to what I said a few days ago at Question Time, we are still grateful for the little that was done.

The list I am speaking of which was circulated to the various Elected Members consisted of several items, and I seek your indulgence to allow me to go through these one by one, because I think it is most important for the listening public.

Item 1 was a jetty and slipway for the Gun Bay area, with a swimming area dug around it. The district of East End is loved by many who travel there, especially the visitors to our Island. However, besides one small hotel and a dive lodge, there are only a few other rest areas. The area I have just spoken of could be utilised by the residents, and at the same time could have facilitated the tourists who travel out there. We constantly say that we are promoting the sand, the sea and the sunshine, but I wish that something would be considered for my area which could also assist in that.

My second item on the list was a community hall/hurricane shelter for the Gun Bay area. Before leaving the Portfolio in 1984, an amount of C$30,000 had been placed in the estimates for a deposit on a certain piece of property in the Gun Bay area, which this facility could have been constructed on. Until now, nothing has been done. Certain Members in this Assembly may look at this as something that is not important, but to me, knowing my people and my district, I see it as very important. The district of East End is a district somewhat like the Rodden Town area. We have Rodden Town and we have Breakers. I am looking to the future. Should there be a hurricane, how in the world could I be expected to transport my people, who live in Gun Bay, to East End. God knows, I hope I will never have to, but just in case we should have such a hurricane, I would very much feel at rest knowing that a small facility was in Gun Bay, should the road be cut off by sea. This is not impossible, Mr. President. I believe that there are things like this that the Government should have taken into consideration. The district of East End happens to be farthest from the capital. What would happen in case of a hurricane? We must look to the future and not bury our heads in the sand.

Item 3. I did ask for some work on the East End to Gun Bay road. I would elaborate but a little on this to say that the previous Government over the years had tried, at each budget, to allocate a certain amount of funds to construct a certain amount of hot mix road in the various districts. Again, three years have passed, and this is another item that has been ignored.

Item 4 was the continuation of interior farm roads in East End and Gun Bay. This brings me to remind the House that this is exactly what I was questioning the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council on in my question, number 79, a few days ago. It was I who started farm roads in East End several years ago, and I know exactly what was planned at the time. It was hoped to continue to promote agriculture, and by so doing to open up other properties for farming, especially two large pastures which are used for the grazing of cattle. Also, in so doing, we would be encouraging other crop farmers. This is what I was talking about when I brought my question number 79 to the House. But what was I told? I was told that no farmers from that area made representation to the Government. I represent the district of East End, and it happens that, in that district together with the district of North Side, we make up most of the farming community. So when I present Government with a matter, it is not on behalf of John McLean. If it is to do with farming, it is on behalf of the farmers of my district.

Item 5. I did ask that the playing field in East End be completed and fenced. Again I have to say that not enough has been done to assist the youth in my district. Several months ago I brought a question to the floor of this House, and I questioned the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council on the matter of fencing for the playing field in East End. Mr. President, I have to say that I was shocked at the answer which I was given. I was told how some football group are supposedly sometime in the future going to build a new playing field. And let me say now that I support that idea, but what the Honourable Member has failed to do is to fill the gap between the time that that field will be constructed. This is what I was saying. The field was started and it should have been completed; and I believe that the Honourable Member should have further contacted me to ask my opinion before concluding that the field should not be fenced. I think I am right in saying this because it has been two and a half years now and the field still has not been fenced. I think this is bad and I hope and trust that most urgent attention will be given to it, regardless of whether a new field is going to be built or not.

Another item which was included in my list was a jetty and slipway behind the old playing field, which is directly across from the field I was just speaking of. I am glad that I can thank the Government for including in the 1988 Budget a sum of $20,000 to have this job done. I am very grateful for this, Sir, because I see it as a need, and I hope and trust that it will serve my people.

Item 7 was the clearing and marking of channels. Again, this was a project which I understood when I was in the Portfolio, and I am pleased to say that at present the Port Authority is trying to have it completed. The people of my district are grateful for this, and I speak on their behalf.

Item 8 was the property by the Town Hall to be filled. For this I am not laying the blame on the Honourable Third Elected Member, because I was present when he instructed that this work be done. That has been about two years, now, Sir, but it has not been done. I do not know where the breakdown in communication is, but I certainly would appreciate if the wheels could be turned a little faster.

Item 9, cattle dips. A few days ago, I asked a question here which read as follows:

"Would the Honourable Member say what plans there are, if any, to establish proper cattle dips in East End ...

Mr. President, my reason for this question is that this is long overdue. When I was in the Portfolio - and I will keep referring to this as long as I am speaking on agriculture, because most of what has been done for the last three years was started by me - I had plans drawn for cattle dips, not only in East End, but also in the Savannah area. If I recall correctly there was a figure in the region of CI$20,000 in the budget at that time. What was I told here a few days ago? I was told that the terrain in my district is too hard to construct a dip. This was the reason given for a piece of foolishness, I call it, and a waste and Government funds for the purchase. I consider that an excuse to dip, not for a dip. But this is the result of certain people not knowing, and believing themselves to be too big to listen to somebody who knows. I do not have to ring any backing bell. My history goes back. I farm every day of my life, so I know what I am talking about.

Mr. President, now that I have an opportunity which I did not have in Question Time, let me deal with this piece of junk that was brought and put in my district and referred to as a cattle dip.

When my opinion was asked on that, I immediately said that it could not work, and that is the reason why it has been sitting out there for the last three months. The Honourable Member here a few days ago tried to make it sound like my people were not grateful. That is not the case. I wish at some convenient time I could take and show you what we are talking about. It is impossible for this to work. It is a piece of equipment which is powered by a gasoline motor, and when started can probably be heard from here to East End. This is the equipment which is used on farms such as a dairy farm, where there is nothing but tame animals, animals that one tends to each day of one's life. How can you take that and put it out there and expect a farmer, who probably sees his cows once or twice a month, to go there to use it. It is utterly impossible. And to add to that, Sir, the equipment is too small. I attended the first demonstration, and in order to put certain animals in and close the door closed properly, one almost had to push the animal in, so how can a large animal fit in such a facility?

We cannot any longer continue to be hard headed and to try to do certain things to upset other Members. We must first consider that we are not only upsetting the Member, but upsetting his whole constituency. I am going to say about this cattle dip what the Second Elected Member for George Town said yesterday about his community park and civic centre. We are going to get it. We are going to get it, because, with the help of the good Lord, things will change.

MR. PRESIDENT: Is that a convenient moment for you to break?

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Yes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes, then.

AT 11:13 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:34 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Elected Member for East End.

MR. JOHN B. McLEAN: Thank you, Mr. President.

When we suspended I was barely touching on the item of a cattle dip for East End. I would like to go on to say that I am sure that if cost was the factor for the terrain not to have been developed into a dip, I am certain that the generousities of the Honourable Third Elected Member would have been passed on to the farming community in my district. What I am saying is that I believe that the Honourable Member would have loaned to us the services of his quarry to have this done. So there is no excuse why the dip should not have been constructed. Also, Sir, I believe that if the second site, which I spoke of a few days ago, had been explored it would have been found that the cost of the construction for the dip would have been on a par with that of buying that piece of junk.

My next item is to do with feeder roads from John McLean Drive to the original public road. When that road was constructed it was to try to facilitate the poor people who had been punished for many years, whenever they were constructing a home and had heavy loads to carry up the hill to their homes. It was hoped that, to follow up to that road, we would have placed feeder roads at various points, so that in case, again of a hurricane, we needed to get up there in a hurry, we would have different points of entry and exit. Again, I am laying no blame on the Honourable Third Member, because, again, he has visited with me the various spots which I was suggesting, and I know that I had his support on the matter.

Item 11 was an ambulance to be used for the eastern districts. This is, I am sure, quite fresh in your minds because you will recall when I wrote a letter not too long ago, which I circulated to each Elected Member and yourself, concerning the importance of an ambulance, not only for East End, but for East End, Hodden Town and North Side. For a while, I must say that the only response I had was the letter which I gladly received from yourself. A few days ago, to my surprise, I received a letter from the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council. When I saw the letter with the caption "Ambulance for the eastern districts" I felt very good, because I thought that the contents of the letter would include in some hidden vote in the 1988 Budget a figure to purchase an ambulance for my district. Again, I am very much upset with the result of my efforts in trying to get for my district something as important as an ambulance, and for the measly excuse which is given. It is most ridiculous if we are going to weigh human lives against the cost of staffing an ambulance. I am not going to read all of this letter, Sir, but for the listening public I care to read a section which says:

"Funding for vehicle and staffing have to be weighed against the demands for health services."

This is not good enough. If we have one case in my district or even if we have two cases a month, I believe it is important enough that we have the facility there to take my people to the hospital. We have only one hospital, and I think it is important enough that the Government reconsiders and has that ambulance placed out at Frank Sound. We deal with less important things in this Honourable House. Why cannot we deal with this one? And to go on to say, about the replacement of the ambulance at the hospital, let me say now that I did not in any way want to disturb the three ambulances which are there. I believe that we could cut something short of $50,000 and purchase a new ambulance for this cause. My people deserve it. When it comes to the first of the year, my people pay their taxes like anybody else in this country. Likewise the people of North Side and Bodden Town.

Mr. President, what I have to say on this, I shall. And anyone who comes behind me wishing to ridicule what I have said, I can only say that I have broad shoulders. It does not matter to me one way or the other. I know my people support me.

To move on, let me say that I agree with projects such as the water and sewerage, the Cayman Brac airport and the fire station for Grand Cayman. I know these are highly necessary. But at the same time, let me say that I believe that we should not in any way neglect other areas which also need attention. It was the Second Elected Member for George Town and myself who brought a motion here not too long ago trying to see if we could get Government to take the necessary action for some help to be offered to the Lesser Islands. At that time we had to take our licks from the Government and our motion was defeated. But I am proud to see that with even this the wheels have started and it will be of great assistance to the Lesser Islands. I believe that with a good air link to Cayman Brac we are going to see wonders in a short time.

The fire station in George Town. This Department has operated well over the last years. Anything that Government gives in that area, or constructs for the use of that Department, is money well spent. We have an honourable Caymanian in charge of that Department of whom we can be justly proud and we can say likewise of his staff. He runs a good show, and I wish we had many other departments that would follow suit.

An area of great concern to me is the Caymanian Protection Board. Sometimes, Sir, from the various complaints I received, I wonder if it is not time to change the name, because I see no protection any more for Caymanians. The work permit situation in this country today is completely out of hand, and I think that the necessary action must come now, before it is too late. I know the directives to the Protection Board are made by Governor in Council, because I have been part of Governor in Council. I believe that the Government should take the necessary steps to have this mess cleaned up so that our people will suffer no further.

The small businesses in this country are suffering, as was said here by a previous speaker. Both he and I have received numerous complaints on this matter. Can we sit back and allow only the larger businesses to survive? No, we must have a change. We must have a change in habit now. We must look out for our people. If there is some ambitious enough to get themselves a small business, we should lay no obstacles in their way - things which I consider could be easily handled once tackled properly.

I believe two specific areas which are probably suffering worse than anything else is the farming and construction sectors. I have had many farmers come to me, and let me say at this point there are some of us in Cayman who do farming. But labour for farming is hard to get. For many years, we have had to depend on outside labour. I believe that each Honourable Member of Executive Council by this time knows that. Why then should there have been a directive given to the Caymanian Protection Board to exasperate the problems the farmers have been experiencing over the last few years. It is likewise in the construction sector. I have had small contractors come to me complaining that they cannot find work locally. I know the proper avenues and I directed them to the Labour Board. In turn what happened? They returned to me with a letter stating that there was nobody available that they could recommend. The letter is turned in with an application. What happens? The permit is refused.

Mr. President, this is not good enough. There are certain people whom we need, regardless if we need to screen them - and we screen them to find out if they are desirables. But in cases as I mentioned, these are people whom we consider to be good people, because the persons endeavouring to get them permits are all reputable and they would not stoop to bring in persons who were not. I would appreciate very much if Government would take the necessary steps to have this rectified at once.

We hear constantly of allegations against the poor Jamaican labour force. Let me say that it is a good thing that we have some Jamaicans who work for us, especially in the farming area. There are no two ways about it, I have seen it myself where we question certain our own people in doing the job because they are presently so occupied with themselves that it is impossible for them to work for others. Let me say, however, that we do have some who are willing to work, but it is impossible to find all the necessary labour and we must depend on people like the Jamaicans. It seems to be a trend now that if they are not Irish, we should not have them. I believe, Sir, that we should keep the devil we know. I am aware, like any country, that when we import Jamaican labour, we will find those who are far from being desirables for this country. I think it is at that point, Sir, that we should get rid of that type of person. But, please, I do not think it is fair to smear the character of every Jamaican who comes to this country to work. We have Jamaicans who are very decent, and they are here just for survival, the way that we tried to survive years ago, by going to their shores for our livelihood.

I will say, however, that I believe that if the trend continues, and we make the mistake of replacing such labour force with the Irish, we are going to have our hands full. I believe it is going to be the greatest mistake made in the history of this country, and it will probably be the greatest mistake for the English too, because I understand the English and Irish can never make it, so I suppose we will always have nothing but wars on our hands.

Mr. President, to move on to the salary increase, I was most happy to see that (on page 60 of the Budget) included in the 1988 Budget is a token figure of C$1.1 million - a salary increase for the civil servants. In my humble opinion, this is long overdue. I believe that Government should have paid attention to this years ago and not to have left it so close to the election. I agree wholeheartedly with the words of the Honourable Financial Secretary, and I quote:

"It is important to keep Civil Service salaries at appropriate levels, in order to recognise it for the efficient services it provides ...".

This is quite true. We have deserving civil servants who work hard for the survival of the Government and the country as a whole. I believe that whatever we give in this area will be well deserved.

Mr. President, again I have to move back to an area that is near and dear to my heart, and I am speaking here again on agriculture. Let me make it abundantly clear that I support the idea of a Farmers' Market and abattoir. Again, this was first started during my time. When I left the Portfolio there were plans which I suppose are still there, that had been drawn for such facilities. What I completely disagree with is the area where we have constructed the Farmers' Market, and also I disagree with the costly facility which has been built. We could have done with a building that would have cost us half the amount. And it would have done the same job that we are hoping to do with the present one.

As I pointed out a while ago, it is a known fact that farming in this Island is done mostly in the areas of Savannah, North Side and East End. I am speaking of both crops and animals. The Honourable First Elected Member is reminding me, also in West Bay. But what I said was mostly in the eastern districts. I know what farming is done in West Bay, because in my time as a Member of Executive Council I did not sit in the Government Administration Building all the time. I visited every farm in this country that I heard about. Ask Mr. Bothwell whether I went.

Mr. President, what I am saying is, why should a farmer from East End or North Side have to travel all the way to George Town to sell his crops or his animals at the Farmers' Market. The location is far from being suitable. The original plans were on a piece of property which Government owns, if I recall, twenty plus acres of land in the Lower Valley area, where this facility should have been built. It would have been a mid-way mark for farmers from East End, North Side, and if they were coming from West Bay it would be the same.

I can neither agree with the excuse I heard for changing the plans to the present site. It is my understanding that somebody decided there was not enough water to facilitate the abattoir. How ridiculous, when the piece of property I am speaking of is only a stone's throw away from the water reservoir in Lower Valley. But I guess, Sir, I understand exactly what has taken place here. I guess this area was chosen for several reasons. But I hope and trust that nobody's name will appear on the wall. I do not know if an adviser was brought in on this matter, but I still stand to be corrected. I believe the advice was surely wrong. I guess that was like the dog eradication programme which I started. I took local knowledge and constructed traps to catch dogs that were strayed. But yet we heard that we had to bring in an adviser to tell us how to eradicate dogs. It is my understanding that when he was told and shown the traps, he commended me for it, but it was not passed on to me.

If agriculture is to survive in these Islands, greater attention must be given at once. We can boast of that monumental Farmers' Market, but without a farmer producing his crops and animals, it cannot become operational.

Another area in the Budget which I care to speak on is page 19. It is to do with school leavers who are presently on Government scholarships. Also some mention was made in the Budget of eleven university graduates who joined as teachers, etcetera. It is very good to see this, it is good that we can brag about it. But my question is, what incentives are there to encourage the Caymanian individuals to remain with the Civil Service? I have said this before, and I will say it again. I believe that the same incentives which are offered to the expatriate officers should be offered to local officers. I consider it unfair that expatriate officers are given housing allowances, medical and in some cases car allowances, and young Caymanians entering the Service are given absolutely nothing. What is the difference? I know I will be told that you have to make the job description in such a way that it is attractive to the best type of expatriate labour. I do not buy that. I believe, Sir, that we would be able to recruit expatriate officers regardless of what is put. And I would further say that I believe we would find that our own Caymanian officer would perform better and we would find a more localised Civil Service if the incentives were passed on.

I know I am getting old now, but I can recall my feelings when I was much younger, and I believe that all young Caymanians felt as I did at that time. Each Caymanian who has any ambition at all wants to know that somewhere in the future he will start a family and get a home and car. And for this, Sir, he must pay a mortgage. Why could we not assist this officer in such a way as we would assist an expatriate officer? We have some Caymanians who are presently having to rent homes. It is not a matter of fact that each one has a home in which he can stay. My humble submission is, Sir, that we take a good look at this. I know the Honourable Member in charge is a competent Member and one who believes in Caymanians, and so I leave it with him to have this looked into, because I for one would like to see our Civil Service become more localised.

Mr. President, let me make it abundantly clear, because I know sometimes the slip of a pen can write exactly what you do not want it to write. I am in no way advocating that Government should stop the incentives presently given to the expatriates. I am just saying that we should make it equal. What is good for the goose should be good for the gander.

I wish also to congratulate the graduating class of 1987. Much has been said on this already, so I will not go into this in depth. But I must comment on a remark which was made at the graduation ceremony, and I am glad that we have now had some public reaction in the newspaper on this. I felt that many who were present there felt the way that I did. I was very disturbed. And I was hoping that the Honourable First Elected Member who has the responsibility for that Portfolio would have, in his contribution that night, made things right rather than to have had the public come forward to do so.

I now turn to the Merchant Shipping (Applicable Conventions) Law. Just to make a small point on this, I would say that I am surprised to see that two maritime surveyors will be seconded from the United Kingdom Department of Transport. I believe that here in these little but beautiful Islands we could recruit two dozen such officers, rather than having to rely on the United Kingdom. It is my hope, however, that, if this is done, we will make sure to have two Caymanians recruited who will understudy and replace them, say in a year or two; that is not to create another post in the budget of the year to come.

Mr. President, in conclusion, I would like again to say that I hope when we go into Finance Committee to further study the Budget for 1988, that the Government will give some consideration to my request which was made back in 1984, and that they will try to assist me, even if it is only with one item - the ambulance for the eastern districts. This item really upsets me because, as I have pointed out on the floor of this House before in speaking on a motion, no one can really plan their sickness. Therefore the most we can do is to endeavour to put the facilities in place should such an occurrence occur.

I also would like to say how proud I and the people of my district are on the opening of the Sunrise Cottage. This facility is one greatly appreciated and this was shown by the hospitality which has been shown by the people of East End. I would further like to thank the newly formed Rotary Club of Grand Cayman Central, of which I am a member, for undertaking an early project to add to the facility out there. I believe, Sir, that whatever is done for the elderly, again, is money well spent.

Finally, Sir, let me say that I am pleased that I could support the revenue measures which are before the House. As has been mentioned these items are all luxury items, and it should not in any way create a problem to anyone. Liquor is something which we do not have to drink, although I know there are many out there who may share a different view. I am hopeful that as we go into Committee we will put our heads together and work together in there, and that we will try to see eye to eye and will look at each portion of these Islands taking into consideration that there is a need in each district.

Mr. President, I would like to take the opportunity to wish to you and your good wife all that is good for the season which is fast coming upon us, the Christmas season.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. President, I would like to thank our Honourable Financial Secretary for his comprehensive and constructive Budget Address. Our small country has once again been able to carry forward a surplus from the year 1987 and has presented a balanced Budget for the year 1988. There are very few countries today in such a favourable financial position. I am happy to note that inflation is under control, and that prices rose by less than five per cent in the last year. Hopefully this trend will continue. This is proof that the policies of Government have been good and responsible for the strong financial position we are in today.

We are well aware of the present worldwide economic crisis which was precipitated by the horrendous crash on the U.S. and other major stock markets. Even the best economists in the world are undecided what effect this will have in the foreseeable future. Our economy is directly linked to the United States, and to a lesser extent the British economy. Any recession experienced by them will ultimately affect us one way or the other. We are extremely fortunate in these troubled times to have a buoyant economy. But it will only be through prudent financial management that we will be able to sustain this period of growth and expansion in our economy. We cannot afford to be careless or reckless in our spending.

There is a great deal of construction taking place at this time, commercial as well as domestic, and our tourist industry has never been in better shape. Our financial sector continues to develop and increase. In the banking and trust sector we expect to have, by the end of the year, approximately 515 banks with current licences operating here. Most of the world's major banks are represented here, which proves that the major financial institutions of the world have faith in our stability and our policies. We are now considered to be the leading offshore financial centre in the world. This is certainly a big step forward, as we have changed from the Island that time once forgot to one of the most sophisticated and sought after financial centres in the world. This is an achievement which we can all be justly proud of.

The banking sector contributed substantially to our economy, and employs nearly 10 per cent of our working population. The banks are continuing to train Caymanians locally, and they are also sent overseas to specialise. More Caymanians are now holding higher executive and administrative positions in every financial institution, and this bodes well for the future of our Islands.

Insurance. Applications from large insurance companies seeking to establish captives in Cayman continue to increase, and our stable political climate will undoubtedly attract more. The revenue derived from this sector is approaching $2 million a year. It will be interesting to see if the recent stock market reverses have any impact in this area.

Companies Registration. Government policy of striking-off companies that are delinquent in paying their annual fees has had a positive and pleasing effect. I am sure that this will go a long way in reducing the problems which were caused by many of them, and it has already improved our international image. Government has seen an increase of 12.7 per cent in the number of new companies registered here, and they are also of a better quality and financially more sound. The revenue received from this sector is substantial, and is expected to exceed the sum of $6.5 million budgeted for 1987.

Currency. The Currency Board had an operating surplus of CI$1,489,591, which was transferred to Government's general revenue. This transfer was possible because it was in excess of the 15 per cent of demand liability, that is currency in circulation, required under the Law. The introduction of the new $50 note should also assist banks and other businesses in expediting transactions with the public. We are not keeping the Currency Board dry as the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said. The Board has its statutory reserves. All we have done is to transfer the 1986 surplus to the Government's general reserve in accordance with section 7(1)(b) of the Cayman Islands Currency Law (Revised). I would like to say well done to the Chairman and his Board for the efficient manner in which they are conducting the affairs of the Currency Board.

I would also like at this time to offer my congratulations to the first five students who graduated from our local Law School, and trust that many more local attorneys will be called to the Bar in the next few years. It is encouraging to know that in each year a number of young Caymanians are attaining international qualifications in law, accounting and banking, and this local participation in the financial sector can only bode well for our future economic progress.

Tourism. Tourism continues to be one of the mainstays of the economy. Two new major hotels have opened, and there are several other applications which have been approved by the Central Planning Authority. More airlines are flying here from more destinations than ever before, and it is pleasing to note that Cayman Airways is maintaining more than an adequate share of the market. I would add this is due in part to the fact that most travelling Caymanians fly Cayman Airways whenever possible. The confidence Caymanians show in their national carrier is most encouraging, and it is very important to the success of our airline. Our tourists demand high standards, and we must continue to strive to provide quality accommodation and service to maintain our edge in this very competitive field.

Ships Registration. The Government has at last been able to get the green light from Her Majesty's Government to proceed with establishing a convention Ships' Registry in the Cayman Islands. We have already passed legislation that enables the Governor to refuse to register ships which are not up to international standards, and to remove those from our Registry which do not comply with the international requirements. The Merchant Shipping (Applicable Conventions) Law, 1987 is being amended at this meeting in order to meet certain additional requirements, and I am sure that all Members will support the amendments when they are brought to the House. We hope that in the not too distant future, a convention Ships' Registry in the Cayman Islands will become a reality.

Drugs. Drug abuse is the Cayman Islands number one problem, and will destroy our Islands if we do not earnestly try to eradicate it. I am pleased that the Health Department is spearheading a programme designed to prevent the misuse of drugs and to improve rehabilitation services for drug abusers and their families. I believe our Drug Counsellor is doing a very good job, and when we have a permanent psychiatrist, the programme will be strengthened. Drug abuse is the main cause of the overcrowding of our prisons, and if we are successful (and I expect we will be) in our misuse of drugs programme, the prison population will fall dramatically. However, a lot of work has to be done, and we will need Island-wide cooperation. It is most encouraging that while some people have the attitude that Government should tackle every problem, the service clubs and other organisations are concerned with the drug problem and are willing to do their part to help with the problem of substance abuse. I also believe that with a united effort we can go a long way in stamping out this monster in our society.

Mr. President, I now turn to the subjects of my Portfolio, and I will be very brief.

Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. The economy of the Lesser Islands is showing signs of continued improvement, with the situation of full employment being enjoyed once again. Currently all persons in the Islands who seek employment in the skilled, semi-skilled and even in unskilled categories can find employment, particularly in the construction industry. The only exception is a few school leavers who are seeking clerical jobs and are unable to find this type of work. However, there are jobs in the hotel and tourist related industry which these persons could perhaps get. Government remains the largest employer of labour with 122 permanent employees in the District Administration and other sections of the Public Services and there are, in addition, 60 hourly paid employees in Public Works. Tiara Beach Hotel has 104 persons employed, 53 are working in the hotel and 51 are construction workers. The Brac Reef has 32 persons working in the hotel, and Buccaneer's Inn, 17. Cable and Wireless has 18 employees at the moment.

During the first ten and a half months of 1987, 106 planning applications amounting to $4,086,250 were approved by the Development Control Board. Since 1st August when Government reduced the import duty on certain categories of building material and basic household appliances to five per cent, there have been five enquiries. It is expected that firm application from these five will be forthcoming.

The Public Works Department at Cayman Brac is working on roads in Little Cayman, and they are continuing construction on the road on the Bluff from Stake Bay in a westerly direction. It is hoped that early in the new year there will be a link with a private road at The Rock.

Construction on the new air terminal building is due to commence in approximately two weeks time, that is about 1st December. Work is continuing on the apron, taxiway and car park, and it is hoped that this terminal building will be operational by the end of 1988.

With the continued expansion of Tiara Beach Hotel, the start of the new air terminal building, the construction of roads on both Islands and other private projects which are in the pipeline, I believe that the year 1988 will provide plenty of jobs and opportunities for the residents of the Sister Islands.

Public Works. The functions of this Department are numerous and varied, as it has to work with every Portfolio to carry out their projects. Government's building programme this year was carried out mainly by the private sector, and nearly all projects will be completed by the end of the year.

Road works in the districts was limited, because most of the members of Finance Committee agreed that this year priority should be given to removing the accident black spots on the road between George Town and Bodden Town. The road was realigned and improved at Spotts and Lower Valley, and was completed in July at a cost of $380,000, which was below the estimated cost by $188,000. The savings of $188,000 was divided between the Master Ground Transportation Study and the districts in Grand Cayman. A sum of $65,000 was taken to meet the additional cost of the study, and the remainder of $123,000 was distributed proportionally to the various districts.

I will now state exactly what was allocated to each district out of the $123,000. The district of West Bay was allocated $81,608. George Town was allocated $81,608. Bodden Town, $39,142. North Side, $39,142. East End, $39,142. So what I am trying to say is that priority was given to the road between Bodden Town and George Town in Grand Cayman, and this was to the benefit of the persons living in the eastern districts. The balance of what was left was apportioned between each district, and each district was treated, not equally, but proportionately. They proportionately got the sum of the remaining $123,000. So no charges of neglect should be levelled at Government this year, because our funds were limited.

The Member for East End did give me a list of the projects he mentioned, and I have done my utmost to comply with his wishes and regret that some of the projects mentioned have not been done. I personally visited his district with the Chief Engineer of Public Works, and we made a list of the various projects that the Member pointed out to us that needed attention, and some of these projects have not been attended to. The community hall and hurricane centre for Gun Bay was not possible; we did not have the funds. But what we did was to complete the civic centre which had been started. The road he mentioned from East End to Gun Bay was not paved with hot mix, but the money was spent on the road from Breakers to Frank Sound last year, 1986. There again, funds for that year were also limited. Road work carried on to many access roads at East End and Gun Bay, and we constructed Little Bluff Road as a feeder road for the farmers in the eastern districts. The feeder road that the Member was speaking about, I regret has not been attended to.

The sum of $1 million for capital road projects and $282,500 for maintenance of roads in Grand Cayman has been included in the 1988 estimates. However, the Chief Engineer of Public Works has not been able to finalise his 1988 road programme because he is not certain of the amount of money to be set aside to carry out the recommendations of the Master Ground Transportation Study. The draft report of this study will be submitted to Government early next month. It is hoped that by late January, Government will have had time to study the recommendations of the Report and submit them to all members of Finance Committee for consideration and input. I will also be calling on the Chief Engineer of Public Works to attend Finance Committee when the Public Works' expenditure is brought in question, and Members will have the opportunity of telling him at that time which roads they would like given priority.

The Postal Department. The need for a new General Post Office has been known for years, and that need has increased year by year. The rapid development of our Islands has proven the present General Post Office inadequate to handle the increased postal traffic. In spite of the inadequacies, the staff have maintained a high standard of efficiency, and they are worthy of praise. The revenue earned from the sale of stamps is significant, and a new spacious post office building will raise the morale of our postal workers, and should improve performance generally. Revenue derived from stamps was, at one time, Government's second largest source of income, and it is still a very significant part of our total revenue. To say that the property on which the General Post Office is to be built is too expensive for such a building is rather short sighted. A general post office in any city is in the centre and it is felt that regardless of the cost of the land on which the proposed post office is to be built, the site selected is the most centralised location in George Town for this facility.

The Port Authority. The Port Authority has had a good year, in spite of having to spend a substantial sum on repairing the finger pier. The earnings for 1987 will be a record, and the outlook for 1988 is bright. There are plans to demolish the old building which was used by the Department of Tourism, and to rearrange the taxi dispatch area. The plans also call for improvement to be made to the tourist landing facility. The construction of a two storey building consisting of approximately 6,500 square feet of space has been approved by the Port Authority Board. This building is to be erected on the site of an existing car park, and when completed will provide new offices for the Authority's staff as well as for Customs and Immigration. Upon completion of the new structure, the existing Port Authority's building will be demolished to make room for a car park. A separate transit shed will also be built to accommodate inbound goods entering through the seaport.

The Second Elected Member for West Bay brought a motion to the House requesting Government to repair the jetty at Batabano. The Government accepted the motion, and my Portfolio made a request to the Budget Officer for a sum of $25,000 to be included in the 1988 estimates to carry out the necessary repairs to the Batabano jetty. So I think he will be pleased to know that.

Mention has been made of this Government not giving any increase to the Civil Service. That is not correct. This year we gave the Civil Service an increase in salary of five per cent. The review has taken place although we do not know what the reward is, but the Honourable Financial Secretary has indicated that he has made a provision of $1.1 million in the estimates. However, we did give the Civil Service an increase of five per cent and to my recollection that amounted to about $1.26 million last year. So this Government certainly cannot be accused of neglecting to pay the civil servants.

The 1988 Budget is realistic and affordable. It reflects the Government's sound fiscal policy of living within its means and borrowing only what it can afford to repay. It is a Budget that can be justified in any country. The country's financial position is sound, and I pray that the financial affairs of our country will remain strong. Our economy is a fragile one and dependent upon financial trends in other countries, especially the United States. The Government must remain cautious and vigilant in order to maintain the financial independence of our Islands.

I am truly thankful that God has blessed our small country and made us prosperous. We must ever be mindful that we are only stewards of that which God has allowed us to have. I hope our people will recognise this and give Him thanks for all His many blessings.

Mr. President, I support the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings are suspended until 2:15 p.m.

AT 12:44 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:19 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Debate is continued on the Second Reading of the Appropriation (1988) Bill. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, I see that the Second Elected Member for West Bay is using the Honourable Financial Secretary's lectern from which to debate his Budget Address. I take it that the lectern is specially used by the long and the short, and so since I am neither one of those, I will be content to look at my notes from the desk.

I would also like to join all my other colleagues here in congratulating the Honourable First Official Member, the Financial Secretary, for a well prepared and well presented Budget Address, or what would be termed in the bigger countries as the State of the Nation Address.

Although there was input by Heads of Departments, and the Address was termed 'a Government presentation' when this suited individuals, the exercise itself involved much of the Honourable Financial Secretary's time, concentrating, researching and deciding how to balance the Budget; and how to present an accurate up to date account of not only the local economic and financial affairs of these islands, but also what is happening on the international scene.

Preparing the annual Budget, and the Address allied to it, is not a simple exercise by any stretch of the imagination. That is why I personally take great pleasure today in offering my own congratulations. We are grateful to the Honourable Financial Secretary for explaining in some detail the recent stock market near crash, which could have triggered a major economic depression similar to the one that hit the United States, and indeed the world, in 1929, and which depression lasted about ten years. Fortunately, from 1929 we have not experienced another depression of that nature - no major world depression. It appears somehow that capitalists and the wealthy might have had second thoughts on how to treat their riches in such a difficult period as a recession. Perhaps they might, instead of hoarding money unproductively, enter what is commonly known as business competitive system in which there are risks as well as benefits.

Since the depression of 1929 there have been only recessions, and recession is a mild form of depression. In the American recession of mid 1974 did not trickle down to these parts and affect us until around January of 1975. It is usually normal for a recession to move from one country to another. The six months of advance warning was very useful to us for it gave an opportunity to adopt defensive measures against the recession. In this 1975 recession we, in Government, adopted the theory of applying large expenditures on public works. Government at that time used its reserves, reserves that had been specifically created for the purpose of cushioning a recession or some other form of economic disaster; and together with loans we financed a building and road construction programme. The buildings included the Police Headquarters and the Government Administration Building. Roads included the paving of roads with hot mix from West Bay through George Town to Badden Town. Another big project undertaken at the time was the George Town port. That, at the time, was deemed to be Government's largest project, costing upwards of $4 million. And there were other smaller projects as well, but I am only really mentioning the big ones. This programme of work eased the situation by keeping the economy active until the boom cycle returned.

While it may be true that in some situations recovery from a recession can be left to self controlling conditions (because recessions do come in cycles, except, of course, in the case of a stock market disaster as we recently nearly had), experience is that in cases of small countries like the Cayman Islands we could not just sit by and wait on the natural forces of recovery to rectify the situation; for this would result in much harm - much harm to us socially and economically. And so the Government, in its wisdom, undertook that crash programme and used reserves and raised loans for the purpose. All the private sector had closed down. Nobody wanted to touch anything. All projects were deferred. Government was the only workforce in the country. Praise be we had the money to do it.

We had embarked earlier, with the permission of the British Government, to create that reserve, because the British Government, when we mentioned it at first, said that we could not create a reserve and have Britain continue to provide development aid. That is not a principle with the British Government at all, and so we had to go forward on bended knee and said to them, 'Well you know Cayman's situation does require that we provide a bit of money in case of difficult economic situations'. And after some time the British Government agreed with us and gave permission for us, at any single time, to create a reserve which was equivalent to three months' revenue collection. In January 1975 we had that three months revenue collection in reserve, something like $2 million. That was a government of wisdom and planning; not a government of promises.

What seems difficult for some people to understand or to grasp, or to appreciate, is the statement made by the Honourable Financial Secretary at page 4 of his Budget Address. Here he said:

"... I am pleased to say that the economy of the Cayman Islands has never, in real terms, been more active than it now is."

The Opposition would want to make you and the public believe that we wrote that in the Budget Address. The Honourable Financial Secretary prepares the Budget Address himself; it is cleared with Government, but he is the specialist in Government to understand finance and the economy, and he puts the Address together on behalf of Government. The Members know (they have been in Executive Council) that they have never written a paragraph of the Budget Address, and yet they would want to make the public believe that the Budget Address is the work of this Elected Government.

I was in Council with them too. I delivered 14 budget addresses in this Honourable House, and I know how they were all prepared. I know all that happened to them before they were delivered here. So they are not talking to Members who are green in this job. Fourteen budget addresses; they are on record here. I wish they would read the last one, too.

The state of the economy today reflects stewardship, not policies. The Honourable Financial Secretary who, as I said before, is qualified to speak on this subject, told you what the position was in this document that he provided.

I heard, too, the Opposition say that the wealth of the country is not trickling down to middle management. That is rubbish. On page 4 of the Honourable Financial Secretary's Address, paragraph 3, he said:

"The revised estimate for the Gross Domestic Product of the Cayman Islands in 1983 is approximately $170 million."

It is over $200 million now. I would imagine. The country is earning a lot of money. I should not doubt that there are millionaires being created here over the wealth that is coming into this country. But a lot of it is trickling down. Do you see any beggars out there on the streets? The tourists come here and they are pleasantly surprised to see such a clean atmosphere in this country. Nobody is molesting them on the docks or on the street. It reflects exactly what Cayman is. That is what they should be telling the public. Everybody is getting a piece of the pie. Some may get smaller pieces than others, but that is democracy. That is not Communism, but Democracy. People must earn for themselves, and the state will give them the opportunity to do that. While we may have what we always refer to as 'small people', you cannot walk the street and see very poor people out there. They might come around the corner when they see their favourite politician, and say "Any little thing today?" This is just a habit more than anything else. Those chaps sitting out there could look for jobs. There are plenty out there. Just like their politicians.

I agree entirely with the statement made by the Honourable Financial Secretary that in real terms the economy of these Islands has never been more active. That is what we came into Government to do, because in 1984 it was dead. One walked the streets and saw people holding up the corners saying "Have you got a job?" There was a lot of unemployment. We came in determined to show the previous Government how a Government should be run.

This is politics, and I am going to have my share of it, they had theirs, now my turn is here.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I would like to say that, while not interrupting you, I think you are entirely right, and I am, so far, very impressed how, on either side of the House, nothing more than political motives have been implied; in other words, improper motives have not been implied. I think political motives are entirely acceptable as a statement or a mode of argument.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Yes, Sir. Thank you for that, but I am dealing with subjects too, you know. I know when I am out on a limb, and I am not going to allow you to chop the limb off with me either.

One of the proven activities in a boom situation here in the Cayman Islands is movement in the speculative real estate field. At page 42 of the Budget Address, the Honourable Financial Secretary has recorded that in 1987, transfers will produce $8 million in stamp duty, as against $5.9 million in 1986, an increase of 36 per cent.

In company registration, we can look at page 11 of the Budget Address and we will see that the increase in company's fees over eight months this year is 12.7 per cent over the same period last year.

In tourism, if we go to page 16 of the Budget Address (I am going to quote pages and figures, that is what they did) we will see that the projection for this year is 26.3 per cent growth over 1986. Look at the labour market. Employers are now storming the Caymanian Protection Board for work permits. If the economy had not been active there would be no need for that - there would be no jobs, people would be content. Of course, we in Government have tried to come to grips with this situation, knowing that in time of boom, as is the case of the present time, a tight squeeze in any area of activity, especially labour, can have damaging effects on our ability to produce and to perform. We are quite aware of that. But there is the other side of the coin as well, where an influx of a large labour force here can cause resentment and concern among Caymanians themselves. And so it is not a simple situation that you go to the Caymanian Protection Board you knock the members over their heads and say "You are not doing right at all, you have to give us some more labour.". It is not as easy as all that. Administration of this country is a very technical thing. While taking action in one area you have to look at the expanse of the entire system and see what is going to happen down at the end of the line. You cannot deal with one thing in isolation, because there is a chain reaction which can affect many things.

I am concerned that with the private sector as busy as it is making money, amassing wealth and doing their thing the right way, that critics should try to deceive the public about the buoyancy of the economy as it is at present. I would prefer the public to come and complain to us, to the Government, about the economic situation of this country, if they do not like what they saw out there. But for Opposition to come here and talk about the critical state of the economy - it is quite amazing to me, to say the least. One Member said that he was walking the streets of George Town and saw people looking in the skies. They were thanking God that only one year was left before their liberation. That is a joke. All of us have followers. One go out and walk through the town and into the districts seeing a lot of people who support you; also a lot who do not too, but they are not too many these days. They have been converted, most of them. But one can walk out in the streets and see people who will say, "You know, our memory is not short.", and you will see them becoming as nervous as a cats on a tin roof. So there are two sides to it.

At the end of this Budget Address we would have heard varying descriptions of the performance of this Government. Some will be negative, some will be positive. Of course, friends of the Opposition will receive bouquets, while the Elected Members of Executive Council will be chastised and ridiculed behind the curtain of bad performance and bad management. It is amazing that those Members would take credit for everything completed over the last three years which they believe was good for the country; everything - they did it, they started it, and they would go on and on and on. We are not going to jump in the gutter to chase them and their jealous pursuit. As I said, they are a promising group, like the building of castles in the air. We are a Government who plan and implement, and so we do not have to go chasing around.

I would like to say one thing which I am sure the public will understand. It is this glowing Budget that we are now debating which puts the Cayman Islands in a most enviable position internationally; a position of being the world's leader in the offshore financial industry; a country that will balance its Budget in 1988 - and with surpluses and reserves. A full employment situation and a strong commitment to social improvements must speak well of the present Government, a Government that is dedicated to the well being of the people of this country. We could be nothing else. These are your Elected Members of Government.

Mr. President, we have heard quite a lot, during this meeting, about the need for more consultation, more communication and more information. Even the press are now chewing on this from a recent editorial I saw. I happen to know where that editorial came from. But this outcry from the Opposition is to me like young children crying over the milk they spilt. We are an open Government, and will assist anyone with information if it is available and if it is sought from the right source. We hide nothing from the public which can be made available to the public, and we would like that message to get outside of the walls of this Honourable House. We are an open Government, but one must understand that there are matters in Government, at times, which are confidential and cannot be released until they are downgraded.

What this Government had hoped to establish within this Honourable House was consultation and communication with all the other Members. We thought that this consultation and communication could have well been done in the Committee Room of this House where Members could attend to the business of this Honourable House. This is a responsibility for which each of the twelve of us were elected; not just to come and sit down here at general meetings. It is this responsibility, to attend to all the business of the House, that we have given to the public and it includes matters that are not debated here, but which go into the committee where they are dealt with in the Committee Room and are brought back here.

I am sure that the minutes of those committee meetings can reveal to you what the position was there. Many times there are no quorums and the poor Clerk and her staff have to phone around in the mornings to contact Members (even though they were served with notice one or two weeks before the meeting) to see whether a quorum could be mustered. Sometimes we managed to raise quorums, but often we were unable to put the question if a Member was out of the room and we would have to wait until he returned. The goings over the last three years were rough. Do not let anyone fool you about that. And they are talking now about communication and information, when in that Committee Room all the information that they wanted, and all the communication and everything else, could have been provided in there; because many times we share matters that are still confidential, but we place confidence in the Members to maintain confidentiality until such time that it can become public. And so in the Committee Room there is all that opportunity to get whatever information is needed.

To oppose and to criticise are two entirely different things. We have heard a lot of criticism in here - all levelled at this Government. As far as I know, the role of the Opposition is one of the bright principles of democracy. The Opposition is the people's watchdog. In our case, thank God the people had a Government better to them than the Opposition, otherwise thieves would have taken everything for the watchdogs were not there.

No mention was made in the Budget Address about the Planning Department, and I am not blaming anyone for this, but indeed the Planning Department is a very important part of the system. I think that it is appropriate that something be said about them. The Planning Department has always been a small department, riddled with problems too. If we look at the progress and development of the country today we cannot but say that planning in the Cayman Islands is very important. It is said that an organisation or institution is as good as its head. In July this year we were fortunate to recruit a Director of Planning, through the United Kingdom although he is an American. He has already come to grips, in my view, with some of the problem areas of the Department, and I do hope, because of the situation in that Department in the past, that Government will give him and the Department the support they need; support to rectify some of the ills to strengthen the Department so that he can serve the public adequately. I have requested the new Director of Planning to concentrate on two projects within the Planning Department: the Development Plan Review and the Building Code, so that we can perhaps get them here in this Legislative Assembly at the next meeting in February 1988.

The Development Plan Review was due in 1982, five years after the Development Plan came into effect in 1977, and as required by the Development and Planning Law. The Review was not done then, and so we scheduled it to start last year, after dealing with many pressing projects in the Portfolio. These other pressing projects are projects like the marine parks. I am sure the Opposition will want to take credit for the marine parks. They toyed with the concept in the early 1980's, but like many other things, it ended up in the archives with no guiding principles - only a castle in the air. In fact two Members of the previous Government wrestled each other to determine whose subject it was. I believe that is when they decided to retire it in the archives, for that is where we found it.

Another pressing subject we had to deal with was the Turtle Farm issue with C.I.T.E.S. which failed. The Turtle Farm, up to 1978, was deemed to have been given commercial status, because the animals in that Farm were classified as threatened species. So the Farm had permission to sell wherever they could - to the United States, Britain, Japan and all over the world. Something radical happened between 1978 and 1979 which caused the conservationists and environmentalists (I think they are the same thing) to take that thing by the neck. They went to C.I.T.E.S. and said that the status of the turtles should be upgraded from a threatened species to an endangered species. That happened, and so we were cut off from the outside market, unless we could have gotten it to Britain because, being a Colony of Britain, Britain was bound to deal in turtle products. We tried to open the market in Britain, but of course the British like the soup, but apparently not too much else. In America they used all of the turtle - steak, oil, jewellery, you name it, every part of the turtle except one was used there.

We had to move on with the Farm to do other things with it so as to improve its economy and to reduce our dependence on subsidy, from this Government, to maintain it. We did a report here which was very enlightening. (INAUDIBLE) The pigs (LAUGHTER) - my friend wants me to mention the pigs again!

We had in the Portfolio other responsibilities outside of the Portfolio. For thirteen of those early months I held the position of Chairman of Cayman Airways. It was thirteen months of trying times to sort of salvage what was left of the airline and to put it on a better financial basis. But I will leave that for the Honourable Member who represents the subject to deal with it, because I am sure that he is going to do well when he is ready to speak.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Might I interrupt you and suggest we take our break now?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Yes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:11 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:34 P.M.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, when the break came I was dealing with the Planning Department. I spoke about the Development Plan Review which was scheduled after I was able to get under control some of the major projects in the Portfolio. After scheduling the Development Plan Review last year we met with a number of problems, including the departure of our Director of Planning at the time. We went on to employ an overseas adviser to assist with the Review of the Plan, and this was following the same pattern of the previous Government - when the Development Plan was being constructed in 1977, they too employed someone from overseas to assist with that exercise. So I thought that we would do the same. Unfortunately the results were not to our liking, and so the subject was further delayed and I have now passed it on to the new Director of Planning.

The Building Code, which started in 1985, also had its delays. Presently we are faced with a printing problem, otherwise the Code could have been before this meeting of the Legislative Assembly. However, we are hoping that both the Code and the Plan Review will be completed and submitted to the Legislative Assembly at its next meeting in February.

The Director of Planning, in his preliminary views about the Development Plan Review, observed that it should set forth policies that would strike a fair and equitable balance between future development needs and environmental protection; and that it should also recommend various amendments to the Development and Planning Law and Regulations, so that planning legislation is clear, consistent, reasonably flexible, and easily enforceable. At the present time that is not so - there are a lot of problems in implementing planning regulations and rules. The new Director of Planning is scheduling an exercise following completion of the Plan Review, to review the Law and the Regulations.

From the attitude of the new Director towards this subject of the Development Plan Review I am given the impression that he is perhaps on the right course. For in a country as small as ours where there will be a need always for development to provide new job opportunities for the growing population who could otherwise become frustrated, Government is bound to take a balanced view between development and the need for conservation in certain respects. It cannot be one sided, regardless of what the wish of conservationists and environmentalists may be. The Development Plan is certainly going to reflect those views. It will be entirely up to this Honourable House, when it gets here, to decide on policies. We will make our recommendations.

The Department of Planning will expand its office to include a section for the Building Code operation. That is going to be a very important and integral part of Planning, because the Code is going to be responsible for buildings, their structures and all the other implications, including aesthetics.

The Planning Department had also embarked on a training programme. At the present time there are two officers overseas pursuing their Bachelor's Degree in Planning - a three year course. One of the officers has been out now for two years, the other for just six months. One of them is hoping to move on to his Master's Degree so that when he gets back here he will have adequate qualifications for the job in that Department. When I say the job, I mean moving up to the director level.

So the Department of Planning is making every endeavour to put itself in the picture of what is required there. I would plead once again for the Government to assist that Department in getting itself straightened out so that it can serve the public adequately.

Before I move away from Planning - I see the Opposition have absented themselves, nevertheless I will place this on record. Much was said about the condominium tax. Now the condominium tax was a tax which was introduced in April 1981 under the Development and Planning Law. It was a tax against condominium development, so that a certain fee for each unit built in a condominium complex would be paid. Then the Law provided for various ways in which the fee would be paid, and alternatives to fees. That is not the most important thing. The important thing is that this Government has been accused of abolishing a tax which would put revenue into the Government coffers. Well, the truth about it is that when the Amendment Law was being introduced in 1981 (and the records of this House can bear me out) I made a statement during the winding up of the Budget Address in February 1981. It was February, because 1980 was an election year, and as usual, the Budget is brought forward to the following year in February.

Although the Law had its First Reading, the public came to me, as Financial Secretary, and expressed concern over this tax and the Law, and wondered what else the Government would attempt to introduce in the form of tax. Well, as financial and economic adviser to this Honourable House, and to Government, I had no alternative other than to report the matter to this Assembly, because I was responsible to them for this. The Government, on the other hand, was determined, whether or not, to introduce this legislation. I warned that this tax would have its ill effects. Well I by no means, at the time, tried to wage war against my own Government, but if you look at the records, it almost seems so.

Anyhow, coming back to Government in 1985 after an absence of a few years, we had the private sector coming to us again, and saying why do you not look at that condominium tax, because condominium development is not going to move here as long as that law is on the statute book. And so we had a good look at it and found that up to 1985 there was something like $600,000 in taxes due Government by the condominium developers. I started to ask the question why this amount was not collected. They said, "Well, it is a planning matter, why do you not deal with it?". We certainly went after it and we collected $10,000. That $10,000 came from one Caymanian who was involved, and nobody else paid the tax. So I passed the matter over to the Financial Secretary, because revenue and collection are his subjects. I checked just a little while ago, and not a penny other than that $10,000 has been collected.

Now, we decided here in the meeting of February 1985 that we would repeal that piece of legislation - repeal the tax - and we did so. That is what we are being accused of, that we have thrown away Government's revenue. Well, throwing away good money is quite a bad thing, but throwing away what we did not collect is quite another thing too. But let us look at what the Law produced - the very thing I warned the House would happen.

Between 1982 and 1984, 47 units were built on the Island. After the tax was abolished, we had, in 1985, 32 units built. We had in 1986 34 units built, and in the seven months of this year we have 41 units built. In just seven months of this year we have almost as many units as there were in the three years 1982 to 1984. That shows that the public was right. It is not always the quantum of money that a developer is asked to pay, but it is the manner and method in which that tax is placed on them. From all over the world (I remember the time that Bermuda introduced the Payroll Tax, many years ago) people came streaming down here, nervous and frightened. Bermuda lost a good bit of business then which came here. When any of the offshore financial centres fiddle around with their systems, people come here. It is a natural haven for them. That is what we are trying to guard and protect here: that natural haven that feeds us and brings all that we need here.

I hope that the question of condominium tax has been settled, and that we do not hear anymore of the nonsense being said about it as we heard since it was abolished.

Now, for fear that I miss one of my main issues in this debate I would like to comment on the headline of the Compass newspaper yesterday which said: "Secrecy Laws Violated" - charged by a Member of the Legislative Assembly. That Member when he first spoke of confidentiality here being violated, said that he wanted the Honourable Second Official Member, the Attorney General, and Government to take an oath that evidence had not been supplied to United States' Authorities as if the Treaty was in force. I have made an oath in Executive Council. That oath was made to Her Majesty the Queen under provisions of the Constitution. What I am trying to determine in my mind is who is that Member to want the Honourable Attorney General and the Government (and I imagine he meant the Elected Government) to make an oath. To whom? We have already made an oath to Her Majesty the Queen. That oath relates to the duties we must perform in Executive Council. The question of confidentiality is also a part of it. Yes, we deal with matters in Executive Council, and those Members talking about Executive Council should know what happens in Executive Council, they have been there for a long time. They were supposed to be there as life members, but unfortunately it did not happen.

Mr. President, the ability of this Government is well known; not only nationally, but internationally as well and more so since we rescued the Government from the past regime. We have been able to reestablish harmony and good relations with foreign governments which, in earlier years, harassed this country, especially in confidential matters. The First Elected Member of Bodden Town made the statement that large worldwide accounting firms were seeded with police informants. That is a very serious accusation against the financial community of these Islands. Commercial banks, he said, flaunted the laws. Imagine that. "They flaunt the laws and make a joke of our secrecy laws, jeopardizing the rights of clients and leaving United States citizens in jeopardy." I could not believe my ears that a man who had spent eight years in Executive Council and who had upheld the policies of Government regarding the financial operation of these Islands could have made such a statement as this. I know he probably has personal reasons for it, no doubt, but it is a very damaging statement indeed.

Mr. President, I was Financial Secretary of this Government for seventeen years. The building of the financial industry started at the beginning of my administration, and especially from 1966 when certain laws were introduced to promote the financial industry. The industry as a subject fell under my Portfolio, the Portfolio of Finance and Development. It is still the subject of that Portfolio. During those years I took a pride in building an industry of very, very high standards. And a confidentiality system second to none.

When I retired from the Civil Service in March 1982 I was satisfied that our financial industry in these Islands was one of the most disciplined anywhere. I felt, too, that it was as professional and efficient in every respect as that which existed in any other financial centre around the world. That is how I felt about it. And I was not far wrong, because I kept a close tab on what happened in that industry - bankers, accountants, trust operations, legal, everything. I kept my eyes on the lawyers too, Mr. President. And so today I will say that I doubt whether there is anyone in these Islands who knows more about that industry up to that time. And from what I can understand, that the level of efficiency, prestige and everything else, has continued and has risen since that time. Go to any of the banks and talk about confidentiality and see what will happen to you. And for this statement to have been made is really beyond me.

For someone who for personal reasons will stand in this Honourable House under the Immunities, Powers and Privileges Law of this Legislative Assembly, and make those derogatory and irresponsible statements against an industry that provides the largest chunk of income to this country is truly, as I said, strange to me.

The Elected Government is being accused of pursuing political victimisation against Elected Members of this House. I have never practised victimisation in my private or public life, and I will not at this time do otherwise, especially sitting in this seat of this Government. The two things are linked together, the statements he made about the banks, the accounting firms, and so on, and wanting this Government to take an oath, and the accusation which is being levied against the Elected Government. I cannot but ask at this time, that as Her Majesty's representative in these Islands, as the Governor of these Islands, and Chairman of Executive Council that you, Sir, make a statement on this accusation; because I have no doubt whatsoever that with the election campaign warming up and taking shape for the election of November 1988, this false accusation may start making its rounds in the wrong places. I think it calls for a statement from you, Sir.

Mr. President, I will now move on to my favourite subject, agriculture.

If I had nothing in my Portfolio to think about but agriculture I would be able to visit the farms every week of the year. I was told this morning by the past Member that he visits farms often - all the time. I visit the farms too, but I also visit a lot of other things because we have quite a number of on-going projects in the Portfolio. And if the Member would accept my invitation when I invite him to come and look at some of the projects, then he would be better informed as to what is going on and that we are not just dealing with agriculture alone.

It is undoubtedly true that agriculture is becoming a much talked about subject these days. In the past years it was a subject of little importance, the least of the apostles. At the start of this Government we decided that agriculture needed a boost to test whether it could become a viable industry in these Islands, and so an Agricultural Development Committee was appointed by Executive Council with a membership which included prominent farmers of the Island. Following that, the Committee thought that we would solicit the advice of Israeli specialist farmers, because they are looked upon to be as good as any, for what they have done in their own country. Then we went on to recruit a qualified agronomist, a farming specialist. In the meantime we moved on to develop a Farmers' Market and abattoir, the things that we hear so much about today. These two subjects were scheduled to be built in the period 1975 to 1978. Unfortunately because of delays in implementing those projects on the works' programme, we did not get to the Farmers' Market and abattoir, but over the other eight years they remained on the schedule. Nobody looked at it. I heard that plans were left in the office in 1984 for the market. I do not know whether the abattoir was mentioned too, but I can assure you that when I went to that office, I asked my staff to pull everything from the lockers and off the shelf because I wanted to deal with them. When we went to the Agricultural Development Committee I specifically asked if there were any plans on agricultural development, and I was told there were not. Yet, the Member for East End is quick to claim credit for the market which he says is too expensive. I am coming to that later on.

We started out from scratch on agricultural development, and I cannot see how anyone can come at this stage to claim any credit for anything that is being done. If they want to get credit for anything, do the job, do not talk about it and make promises.

If I had been in that Portfolio for four years and did nothing other than visit farms, then no doubt I would have been trying to get a bit of credibility at this stage when I am vying to go back into that Portfolio. Credibility at other people's expense.

In order to put farming directly in command of the farmers, we went another mile to create a farmers' cooperative in these Islands, a cooperative which would embody all the leading farmers and anyone else interested in farming in this cooperative because we intended to lease the market and the abattoir to the cooperative. The lease is now being prepared by the Legal Department and then to put the onus and the responsibility squarely in the hands of farmers, while of course Government will assist in whatever way it can. Just now we are trying to recruit a manager for that cooperative because the farmers themselves are busy people and they do not have the marketing experience and expertise, and so we must find someone with that ability to organise and to run the market and abattoir.

The cooperative will also take responsibility for farming supplies like cattle feed and fertilizer, and things like that. It is probably only insecticide that will remain with the Agricultural Department.

As I said, we heard a lot about the market. We heard about the cost and value, and that it was so much out of proportion to other buildings. It was outrightly criticised that the siting of the market was not in the right place. If this Government is in charge of that Department (and we are working closely with the farmers), who then are other people to come and tell us that it is not sited properly when the farmers, themselves, agreed that that is where the market should be sited? The farmers are not going to ask the people to come to them, they must go to the people, and so they must establish themselves in a convenient place for the public. And the farmers agreed with that.

They were in Government a long time. If they had wanted to build a farmers' market and site it in East End or wherever else they wanted it, that would be entirely up to them. We have sited it where the farmers wanted it. And now they talk about the cost of the market, and I am going to give you a breakdown of the cost.

The building which is a purpose built building of a very high standard - that is, it is not an ordinary building - has to house quite an amount of valuable and specialised equipment. The building itself contains an 18,000 to 20,000 gallon cistern, and it includes air conditioning. That building cost $14,214. The site preparation, for clearing and filling, cost $37,130. The equipment, with freezers and other things, cost $40,420. Professional fees cost $4,760. The external work, which includes parking, sidewalk, septic tank, grease trap, top soil, drain work, the lot, cost $31,830. So the total cost of the project is $228,354 and we are told that that is too expensive. Well, I wonder that if they had so much admiration for the farmers and wished to see farming take off in the right direction and at the right pace - and if they think that $228,000 to provide all these things (which I thought was reasonable) is too expensive for the farmers, then I think we will just let the farmers know that: if that is what they are saying that they should not have it and do not deserve it. There are two sides to the story. One side is all right until the other side is hurt.

Mr. President, while dealing with the East End situation, the Member was talking about not getting anything in East End. He was there between 1980 and 1984, and I tell you that 1980 to 1983, apart from this period of prosperity in the Cayman Islands, was the most prosperous period in the history of these Islands. When I exited from Government in March of 1982 I left $21 million in the kitty

(just to give you an idea of what Government's wealth was at the time) and they are talking about not having anything in East End, not having anything in Bodden Town. They say we gave North Side a little thing, West Bay a little, and so on, and that nothing went to Bodden Town and East End.

In 1985 we went to East End to look at the civic centre. The foundation was being poured then, and we did not touch anything at all. We found a 1985 budget which we did not touch at all, that is why we called it the Opposition's Budget, the budget of the previous Government. We did not touch a thing on it at all. The civic centre was completed, everything was completed in there. Come 1986 it was a different proposition. We had a number of priorities. This Government does not deal on the basis of personal issues, or anything of the sort. We look at priorities throughout the Island, from West Bay to East End to North Side, all around. All the proposals go to Government. They are all put into the lot, and there priorities are dealt with. They go to Finance Committee and all the Members have an opportunity to declare their interests and to make their needs known.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town spoke about going in Finance Committee last year requesting certain works to be done on the George Town to Bodden Town road and this was done. I mean- those are the things that they do. That Committee Room is there for Members to make their needs known and they should not come and talk about it here. This is not the right place to do it. Everything comes back to the House in a report.

Regardless of what they want to say about this Government, we treat everybody equally. We look sympathetically at all their needs and all their requests. We are not there as a selfish group to only do the things that we think should be done. We are the people's representatives and we deal with issues in that respect.

I do hope that the figures I have given for the farmers' market will now settle that issue. If any further details are required, I am sure that the Public Works Department can provide them, and if anything further than that is needed, my office is open to anyone who cares to visit and ask for information. So I could not understand when they talked about lack of information. They go only where they want to go for information, and then they come here and lambast us. They never step into our offices to ask for information.

I know it is getting time to adjourn.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Do you have some idea of how many more minutes, or hours, you might be going?

Do you have some idea of how many more minutes, or

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON:

I am simply bearing in mind that tomorrow is Private Members' Motion day, and perhaps if you wish to continue for another fifteen or twenty minutes, the House may wish to see you through.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Oh, no, I am not seeking to persuade you to have less than your ration, please do not think that.

PRAYERS

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Prince of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in us, Government that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be exercised among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake. Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us; And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of the House are resumed. Questions.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM, AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 108: Would the Honourable Member state whether there is a company selling trays, pens, uniforms, etcetera, to Cayman Airways Limited, and, if so, give details of the company and information as to who owns the company?

ANSWER: Cayman Airways Limited purchases trays, pens and uniforms from separate companies and not from any one organisation. Trays are purchased from BOSTEK Corporation of Amsterdam, by ordering through that Company's branch office in Miami; pens are purchased from Albert's Advertising in Miami; and uniforms are purchased from Fashion World Incorporated in New York. Details as to the ownership of these companies are not known.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Supplementary?

In that case, next question please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM, AVIATION AND TRADE

NO. 109: Would the Honourable Member state whether Cayman Airways entered into a contract with another company to study and report on how Cayman Airways Limited could improve morale, and, if so, give details of the contract, the company and its shareholders.

ANSWER: Cayman Airways Limited has not entered into any such contract, and, therefore, the details requested are non-existent.

SUPPLEMENTARY:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Has any study of this subject at all been done, whether it was done under contract or not?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: No, Mr. President, not to my knowledge.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there are no further supplementaries, Question Number 110, please. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE SECOND ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR TOURISM, AVIATION AND TRADE.

- ND.110: Would the Honourable Member:
- (a) supply details of all costs of the lease of the Boeing 737 by Cayman Airways Limited for the year 1986 to 1987; how many hours per month did it operate on the scheduled and charter routes, and how many hours, in total, has it flown during its lease;
 - (b) say whether the lease of the Boeing 737 proved profitable; and
 - (c) say how much gross revenue was earned by the Boeing 737 during its lease period?

(STATEMENT)

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, in reply to this question, I should remind the House that at the February meeting this year, I undertook to supply Members with a report as to the operating results of the 737 and this information, as provided to me by the management of Cayman Airways, was distributed some time ago to all Members of the House. I have the information here, and the answer is as follows:

- ANSWER:
- (a) The total cost of the lease of the Boeing 737 was US$2,607,027.00. It flew an average of 198 hours per month with a total of 2381 hours.
 - (b) Yes, there was a profit of US$258,112,007.
 - (c) Gross revenue earned by the Boeing 737 during its lease period was US$2,865,146.00.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, I have the paper that was circulated to Members in August. The reason for bringing this is that that was just an estimate and averages. I will not pose any supplementaries at this point, but will keep it for debate on the Motion that follows.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Thank you. If there are no supplementaries, we move to Item 3, Other Business. Private Members' Motions - Motion No. 20/87. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town to move.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 20/87
CAYMAN AIRWAYS LIMITED

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, I move the following Motion:

WHEREAS the financial statements and annual report of Cayman Airways Limited for the year ended 30th June, 1987 were laid on the table of this Honourable House at the sitting of the support meeting on Monday 16th November, 1987;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Legislative Assembly is of the opinion that the accounts of Cayman Airways Limited are not satisfactory in that they do not provide a true picture of its financial and operational position.

I will reserve my details until it is seconded, Sir.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I beg to second the Motion which has just been read out.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Private Member's Motion No. 100/7 has been duly moved and seconded. Would the mover wish to speak to it?

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, this Motion has been brought by my colleague and myself in an attempt to dispel the rumors that a scandal clouds the operation of Cayman Airways, and to fully air the operational and financial position of the Company so that the shareholders - the Cayman public - will know what has been going on.

Before entering my debate, let me qualify some of the things that I will say by explaining to this House that this is no way in any reflection on the auditors of the Company. I have always held the auditors, Mr. Richard Harris and his firm, Price Waterhouse, in the highest esteem. They have done a lot of work for me personally, and it was I who selected them to do the work for Cayman Airways. I feel that their integrity is the highest that you will find and I do respect their figures.

I wish, however, to prove to this House that the public is lacking a lot of the information which they should have as regard to its operation. The entire country is aware of the hue and cry that has caused in this country by the present Government Members and their colleagues when they were in opposition, and when Cayman Airways could do nothing that was right.

Cayman Airways Limited is the country's largest investment. It is one of the largest endeavours that this country has ever undertaken. It is the biggest contributor to the economy of this country that we have. It is a big dollar earner. It employs a lot of Caymanian citizens in very high positions with an attendant high salary scale. So I do not want anyone to believe that all the ridicule and nonsense that has been attached to Cayman Airways in the past was not worthwhile. I, for one, am very proud that the national airline was established and that it is owned by our people. I am not attempting in any way to degrade the airline, either as an asset or in any way to lower the morale of the employees of the airline, because in my opinion they are all very dedicated to the service of Cayman Airways. However, we must look at this objectively.

Cayman Airways Limited has undoubtedly been the country's most controversial subject over the past ten years. There has been no item, which Government has had anything to do with, that has brought so much controversy as Cayman Airways. I am ashamed that this happened, but it happened because of the prodding of certain people who are now in this present Government, and who in every way to degrade the effectiveness of Cayman Airways. Mr. President, I can speak here without any fear of contradiction that there never have been as many lies told in the history of the entire world as was told during the period that Cayman Airways was being guided by the Unity Team administration.

A press was provided by some of the well-known politicians to their cohorts who mounted a campaign that it was a wonder Cayman Airways was not literally pulled out of the skies. This was recalled for a reason, since the last election when Cayman Airways came under new direction and new management, they have had a real honeymoon. None of us, who are now in Opposition, have ever written any large amount of questions or motions, or anything else which would attempt to degrade the operations of Cayman Airways.

It is my opinion that what then happened recently with regard to the Chairman of the Board taking an affront to something that was said by one of the Elected Executive Council Members, Cayman Airways was thrown full blast into the political arena again. We got a resignation and I am sure that most of us with good sense knew what to expect and what would happen with regard to that resignation. It was a political play, pure and simple. I wonder whether we are going to get a resignation when I get through with my debate. I am sure that what the Honourable Second Elected Member might have missed, I will not miss today. And I will prove without the need of doubt that Cayman Airways is in a much, much worse position now than it was at the end of the time in 1984. And I will prove that from the figures by comparing 1984 with 1987 completely.

Cayman Airways was founded many years ago. I cannot take credit for the original founding, and so before I get started on that subject later on in the debate I want to make it completely clear that Cayman Airways was founded - I do not even remember the exact year - quite some time before I had anything to do with it.

Cayman Airways was the product, I think, of a company which originally started to operate a DC-8 operation between Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac. We then got into bed more fully with the Costa Rican airline, Lacsca, and we formed a company which wet-leased the aircraft from Lacsca. The aircraft was in full operational control of Lacsca. It was merely a paper entity with regard to Cayman Airways. Cayman Airways was 60 per cent owned by the Cayman Islands Government, and 40 per cent by Lacsca. That paper entity wet-leased aircraft from Lacsca. We had, I would say, nothing to do with the operational part of it - as far as what was done by the airline. We were completely controlled by Lacsca. The crew were nearly all Lacsca crew, with the exception, I think, of two people who were Cayman nationals. I refer, I think, to Captain Wilbur Thompson and Captain Harrison Bottevell. I think they were the two crew members who were lucky enough to get employment with Cayman Airways at that time. I intend to prove, further in my debate, exactly what happened with regard to the Cayman Islands Government with regard to Cayman Airways' personnel.

We supposedly owned 50 per cent of this paper company; that is strictly what we owned. All kinds of stories have been told of how good Lacsca was to us, and how LACSca was the curative power for all ills that ever afflicted the Cayman Islands. I will give credit to Lacsca for opening up the airline route between Grand Cayman and Miami and also to Kingston, but we must never lose sight of the fact that Lacsca got well paid for everything it did for the Cayman Islands. It was not in any way the profitable deal that some of the present Elected Members of Executive Council would try to have us believe.

We, as shareholders of the 50 per cent, only rubber stamped whatever Lacsca wanted to do. We had no control. I would just like to point out that the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council was, at that time, the Chairman of Cayman Airways. I heard him debate yesterday, and he was quick to point out in rebuttal to my colleague from East End, that he had to spend so much time on the chairmanship of Cayman Airways that he had had but very little time to deal with agriculture. So before he may jump up and say that I am not giving him the due respect accorded to his high office, I want to make it very plain from the start that at this point he was the Chairman of the then existing Cayman Airways.

Mr. President, for many years this society, including many of the Members of your present Elected Government, was afflicted with the most serious disease ever to have afflicted this country. We had to send off our consultants and experts to try to figure out what it was. Finally it was determined that that disease was named Lacsca-itis. I intend this as a pun. But all it was virtually the truth. There was so much said in favour of Lacsca that at that time I wondered if we were an appendage of Lacsca and Costa Rica, or whether we were merely the Cayman Islands. So I will not dwell on this disease much longer at this point, but will follow into the rest of my debate.

Leading up to the elections in 1984, all those who now say that the country could not survive without Cayman Airways predicted that it would ruin the country. They preached every imaginable wrong against the airline. I am wrong, Mr. President, (and you should have been here during that time if you think I am wrong) but derogatives said about Cayman Airways. Now these same people are disking Cayman Airways into their arms, pulling it to their breasts, slipping it on the back, and saying, 'You know, you are the best thing we ever had.' At times when they slip it on the back now they are not sticking the dagger under the ribs the way they were before.

I have, however, always stood on a steadfast in my belief that Cayman Airways was needed by this country; that it was the best investment that we had; that it helped the prestige of this country; and it aided the labour problem. It helped our young people, who aspired to do, and hoped to become worthwhile citizens, to become of themselves worthwhile citizens. I defended Cayman Airways every opportunity which I got. I know that again the Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council, particularly, will be quick to get to his feet when I have gotten through with my discourse and say to the House and to the people of this country that I made the statement that I would keep Cayman Airways flying if it cost the last penny in the national Treasury to do so. Mr. President, I made that statement on several occasions. I stood by it and I will not withdraw that statement today because I fully believe that the benefits to be derived by Cayman Airways cannot be equalled by any other airline that may fly into this territory.

We went through a period when we were completely at the whims of foreign carriers. British West Indies Airways pulled out and there may have been other airlines pulling out. We have recently seen what happens when airlines are controlled by foreign entities. Northwest Airlines used to have two flights a day from Miami. Today they only have one, because for economic reasons they do not seem fit to stop one of those flights. Now if we did not have Cayman Airways would any of the people in this House and country think that we would have had the prosperity which we have in Cayman today? Whether or not I may argue about the type of tourism, tourism is the mainstay of the economy. People are coming into the country, and if we did not have the national carrier to bring them in we would not have a buoyant tourism industry. Therefore, Cayman Airways has to continue in operation and I hope the time will come, and I believe it will come, when we find Cayman Airways to be a revenue earner for the country and that we will be able to do away with the subsidy which we are now giving the airline. No subsidy which I personally do not believe in, and a subsidy which I refused during the time that I was Chairman of the airline.

Mr. President, many contracts have been void, and some of these from the inner Elected Government circle of the present time concerning the break that was made between Lacsca and the Cayman Islands Government. Let me point out that one of the things that contributed to that break could have been the stubbornness of the Unity Team administration because we were not content, as representatives of a sovereign country, to stand up and let Lacsca ride us to the ground. For the time Lacsca had people who would stand up and deal with them and trade blow for blow. I do not want that to be misinterpreted, and I will speak on that later on, but people did stand up and stand up for the integrity of our people and for the integrity of the country.

Finally, after much consultation and I will debate this further when I go back to deal with the Bermuda II Agreement, the break came about because Lacsca, in their final offer to us, said that they would schedule us for two trips a week to Miami, one trip a week to Kingston, with no cargo operations and no additional routes. Under the Bermuda II Agreement Cayman Airways can be a national carrier and at that time was entitled to the establishment of regular routes into the United States. Now this is what we were told by Lacsca. Can any of you ladies imagine what would have happened to the Cayman Islands from 1977 until now if our national carrier had been limited to two trips a week from Miami and one to Kingston, without any additional routes and no cargo flights?

Mr. President, under the Bermuda II Agreement, which was negotiated between the United Kingdom on our behalf and the United States Government, it was determined by the American authorities that the Cayman Islands did not have effective control of the then known entity of Cayman Airways. To get that effective control we approached Lacsca to buy 30 per cent (they had 40 per cent of the shares) - and we would buy 30 per cent of them, leaving them with 10 per cent, which would have made the then known entity of Cayman Airways Limited owners of 20 per cent of the shares. We finally concluded that, but every move we made with Lacsca, at that time, was pre-empted because Lacsca had prior knowledge and experience in every area to which we were proposing to move. Finally we bought the entire amount at a very high price per share in order to get the total shares of the then known entity of Cayman Airways. At that point we formed a holding company known as Cayman Air Holdings. Mr. President, Lacsca's final message gave us the ultimatum that within 30 days we should accept their terms or they would quit flying into Grand Cayman.

Now this can all be substantiated from records that I hope are still in the Government Administration Building. We said that we would not stand for this. On the streets it was said that I was at the time, meetings with myself and Mr. Escalante (I believe that was his name) of Lacsca that I threw an ashtray in his face at the Government Administration Building. Mr. President, you just need to show how far and ridiculous were the lies that were spread at that time. The Managing Director of Lacsca and myself did not get along, but we never had any disruptive argument. We never had any fights, we just dealt with the problem as he saw it, for his company and as I saw it for the Cayman Islands.

When we were given total ultimatum, the Oarty Team administration began to act at once to establish a viable carrier for the country. I made a commitment, and said so publicly, that there would be no disruption in service. And there was no disruption in service even though it is not easy to put an operational airline together in thirty days, particularly when you have had no previous experience at all with it. But I assembled a working group who were very dedicated and patriotic and we were able to accomplish the goal that we set out for - and there was no disruption. The plane came in I think about a half hour later than the normal schedule operated by Lacsca.

To give credit at that point, I must give credit to Captain Wilbur Thompson who was our senior pilot for a long time in Cayman Airways, because without his dedicated help we could not have put Cayman Airways together as an entity that would work. We negotiated a lease with Air Florida, originally for six months, on a DC-9, which carried I believe 84 passengers. That lease had to be extended, I believe, for a further three months. I will never forget that on signing that lease I told the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council who was at the time in the Miami offices, when everything had been worked out as closely as we could, I told the group, of which he was a part, of the approximate loss that we would experience in the next six months if we were to go into the deal with Air Florida. I said that I was prepared to go forward if the rest of the Members and staff were prepared to hold me out that due to the approximate loss that we would experience it should not be thought that we were going to make money.

At the end of the lease term, if I remember correctly, I had under-estimated the amount between $50,000 to $70,000, one or the other. So I am bringing this point out to show that from the inception we all realized that we were in a ticklish position with regard to making Cayman Airways a profitable deal.

Later on, the Government approached a BAC 1-11, with the assistance of financing. I am not quite clear on the first financing, but I think that the financing I am referring to was granted to Cayman Airways by the Royal Bank of Canada. If it was not the first aircraft, it was the second one that they financed, and I thank them for their help. At that point we needed help and we bought first a BAC 1-11 aircraft. I will not go into the details of the BAC 1-11 operation, because a report that had ever had anything to do with this aircraft will probably bear me out completely when I say that the BAC 1-11's are a very good aircraft. It is very well maintained, not costly to operate. We experienced many, many difficulties with it. I may add at this point that from the beginning I was the one who stood up and said the BAC 1-11 is not the aircraft for us to buy and that it is not the best operational aircraft because of the problems we would encounter in the procurement of parts; the parts being very, very expensive.

Anyway, we bought the first BAC 1-11. We later bought another one, and we began, I would say, a full scale operation of the airline. During this time also, we leased a Boeing 707 and opened up routes to Belize, San Pedro Sula, Tegucigalpa and Houston. Now Houston has proven to be a viable destination over the years. The other routes which I just mentioned were on a lease arrangement with the Belize airline which at that point had the routes, under their respective agreements, for that area of the world. We leased a DC-6 and gave the country a very dependent cargo service. At one point, with the buoyancy of the economy of the Cayman Islands, that cargo plane was operating five days a week between Miami and Grand Cayman. I think it went into Cayman Brac one day a week - I think this was what was happening. But I would like to point out that that aircraft was under a lease purchase agreement with Cayman Airways and it was being flown by crew of Cayman Airways.

After several years of operation and many, many heartaches with regard to the BAC 1-11, we finally sold them. We then purchased the two B-727's that we have at the present time. Now this was not done until, Mr. President. The two major American aircraft manufacturers, Boeing and Douglas, sent many teams down here at their expense - not at our expense but at their expense - to work out the merits and the demerits of the operation of these aircraft if they were going to be used on the routes of Cayman Airways. I have still in my possession copies of many of those reports. Those studies helped tremendously in the decision that we made.

So the purchase of the 727 aircraft was not something that was done without a lot of prior study, nor without knowing that it would be the best thing for the country to have. It took much research to finally come to the decision that was made. We looked at many aircraft, some as far away as Singapore, some right in our own hemisphere, but finally what we settled on was the 727's that were being lease purchased by Air Florida. These had originally been aircraft that Braniff had placed deposits on. Braniff at that point failed and Air Florida took over the agreements and fell on their face. Therefore we were able to pick up those two aircraft at an original cost of $20.5 million plus interest set at eight per cent a year over a period of 14 years.

That is the history of the two 727's which are now being used by Cayman Airways. If I remember, when we purchased those two aircraft each had approximately 2,500 hours on them, so they were relatively new aircraft. At the present time, if those two aircraft were put on the market for sale, they would bring much in excess of $30 million. So it has been a very, very good investment for the country. We have accumulated losses, but we have built equity.

Cayman Airways opened up the Turks and Caicos operation after much negotiation and being recognized as a d.k. carrier we were able to take over direct flights from Miami to the Turks and Caicos Islands. Now, Mr. President, it took some losses and some time before that operation began to pay. It was just beginning to get to a load factor which would make it profitable when the elections came about in 1984. For what reason it was cancelled I do not know, but immediately after the elections, the Turks and Caicos route was given up and Pan American Airlines immediately jumped in. They are running the route today, and running it well as a profitable route. So we had lost some money in building up that route, but the losses were being covered at the time of the 1984 election.

One point I would like to stress is that during our administration ...

HON. BENSON D. FRANKS:

Mr. President, on a point of order, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Would you state your point of order?

HON. BENSON D. FRANKS:

Standing Under Order, Sir, the relevancy of what is being said in relation to the motion before the House.

MR. PRESIDENT:

If you would be seated I will sit on the point of order.

I have deliberately allowed considerable latitude. This is a Private Member's Motion. It seems to me that the ground is being set for the purpose of the motion, but I shall continue to watch. I would ask the Member to observe reasonable latitude.

Thank you.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

I appreciate that, Mr. President. I am trying to lay the reason for Cayman Airways financial position being what it is today, and I do not think I can properly lay the groundwork unless I give this background. I am not surprised at all that the Honourable Member would make a move such as this.

MR. PRESIDENT:

No, I am sorry. I point to the point of order, I do not think it is necessary for you to add to it. Please proceed.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, Cayman Airways did not have trained personnel. We had to embark on training programmes that encompassed every portion of the airline. However, the point I am specifically stressing is that much of the training that was done was done to benefit local staff. We hired people and we trained them. We gave the fulfillment of dreams to a lot of our young people who wished to learn as pilots. We assisted them with training, we made jobs available for them when they got back and today many of those are a credit to this community and a credit to any airline if they were to fly them.

We started charters to Toronto, Miami, the Bahamas, New York, Chicago and Detroit. The Cayman Express charters were started during our administration. This is the point I am gradually working to, Mr. President, because as I dissect this balance sheet I want to prove the great difference in prices that were charged at that time compared to what the Company is earning at this time, and prove my point that the financial position of Cayman Airways is not as bright as people are led to believe.

At the elections in 1984, all the infrastructure to make Cayman Airways a viable proposition was in place. All the necessary programmes to make it viable were in place. All the training programmes that were necessary were in place and we were beginning to get to a break-even point on operations. We had put in a lot of cost saving devices. We had put in a lot of controls that were saving money for the airline. The Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council, I am sure, can agree with me on this point, if he agrees with nothing else, that the airline problem from the beginning was an accounting problem more than anything else. The reports had to spend a great deal of money in an attempt to come to grips with the accounting side of the business. The Honourable Member fully knows that he and I have spent many nights, into the early morning hours, trying to determine what had happened to the money and where it had to go, and so forth and so on. I point out, Mr. President, that during this period the problems in the accounting department for which I fully took the blame, were monstrous, because the accountants that we were able to bring in at that time were worse than those that we hired locally, and they were bad enough.

In the year 1983, Cayman Airways had to spend about US$400,000 over and above the usual accounting cost to bring in trained accounting staff from the United States. This was done under a programme in conjunction with Price Waterhouse, who were, and still are, the auditors of the Company.

I point out that what is being done at Cayman Airways today is being done from the foundation that they were upon in 1984. I will point out further that their stewardship from 1984 has not been as good as they would lead many people to believe. We were on the road to having a successfully efficient and maybe profitable airline in 1984. Since 1984 the Company has been fix to lease a 737 aircraft. This was mainly done in an attempt to prove that the decisions of the previous administration in buying a 727 was wrong. And I am submitting that this attempt to prove the previous administration wrong cost the Company money rather than earning it money as we heard in a question tabled in this House this morning. Mr. President, at that time to lease the 737, which carries but very little cargo and fewer passengers than the 727, we were paying about $60,000 a month more than what we were paying for the two 727's. If everything had been kept accurately on the accounts with regard to that 737, there is no way that with the amount of hours that it operated and the amount of passengers it carried that it could have made the money. And I am prepared, as I go into my submission, to point out the areas, that were not mentioned, as having incurred any costs.

At the bottom of the report which was submitted to the Members of the Assembly on 20th August of this year, and which was referred to in the questions this morning, was a footnote. That footnote says: "This analysis is based, to some extent, on estimates and averages." It is not the correct report that you would expect to receive from the accounting department on the operation of the aircraft. I submit that it is incorrect and not fully representative of the operation of the aircraft during this period. On the expense side, no amounts are shown in regard to the passengers that the airline carried. This is pro-rated back with the insurance company at a per person cost on each person that you carry. There is nothing in that report for administrative costs. How are you going to operate a 737, or even a Shorts, without having administrative personnel in place? There is no money in that report for these things. There is nothing for the cost of negotiating the lease and getting it in place. That is an integral part of the expenses that were incurred. There is nothing at all in it for legal costs and nothing for telephone and communications. How are you going to operate an airline without incurring communication expenses? There is nothing at all for advertising or public relations. And the note at the bottom reads as I previously read to this House.

This is strictly, in my opinion, a waste of what one would hope it could do, and circulated to the operational staff of the airline. It shows a projected profit of $289,119. I believe that this was just a haphazard estimate rather than being the correct figure.

Cayman Airways had a very efficient and cost effective aircraft that was operating the inter-island run. That has been changed. That aircraft was sold, with the spare parts, for a very low price during the financial year of 1986-87. It was replaced with a plane that we have been told holes tremendously to facilitate larger loads of passengers to the Sister Islands. This again is a bit misleading because that aircraft, although it may be listed to carry thirty passengers, can only carry thirty passengers if the fuel is restricted. I understand, from very informative sources, that that aircraft is restricted to twenty passengers between Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac. The Trilander had a restriction of twenty persons that it could transport from Little Cayman to Cayman Brac. The Shorts is unable to take flight. The cargo carrying capacity of the Shorts 3-30 is not the amount we have been told in this House. It carries much less cargo, and therefore it is not able to take the load of passengers, with their baggage, that the Trilander could carry.

The point I am making is that we have not really improved the efficiency of the routes to the Sister Islands to that great extent. I am happy they have another plane. I am happy that it is more convenient for them. I am happy that it has a toilet. I go along with anything that can help the Sister Islands or this country, but what I am pointing out is that that aircraft has cost a lot of money. It has not given the efficiency that it should have given. It is broken down more often than it flies because we have difficulty in obtaining the spare parts, as would be the case if we were still operating the BAC 1-11.

When we brought the 727's on line, I requested with the pilots not ask for an increase to operate the larger aircraft. They agreed with me, and I understand that the pilots only get a five per cent rate for a longer period of three years.

At this point I would like to just inject a query into my submission, and that is that I see some folders which advertise Cayman Air Tours. I would just like to place a query to find out if Cayman Air Tours is a company owned by Cayman Airways and used as a marketing tool, or is Cayman Air Tours a company owned by someone other than Cayman Airways?

MR. PRESIDENT: I am not quite sure if you are placing that as a rhetorical question. I think one must leave it to the Member of the Government responsible to speak to you in the interval if he wishes.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Yes, Sir. Thank you. Now, Mr. President, it is a bit unfortunate in one respect that the financial year of Cayman Airways runs from 1st July of one year to 30th June of the next year. The reason I am saying that is because in making my submission on this, it would have been much better if we were to deal with financial years that embraced the last elected Government of this country versus the elected Government at the present time. So in the submissions that I will make we have to realize that the financial year stretches across two administrations in the country.

In 1984 the airline was under the administration of the Unity Team Government, represented by myself, for four and a half months, and for the other seven and a half months it operated under policies and cost effective programmes which were set up during my administration and carried on by the new administration which, at that time, was chaired by the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

It is my humble submission that, at that point, the only thing of which they could really boast during that seven and a half month period in 1985 was that they fired the directors and appointed their own friends - or they should do in a democratic society. They fired some of the high ranking staff because they thought those staff were loyal to myself. Therefore the accounts of Cayman Airways that I have to deal with in the 1984-85 period does stretch across two administrations.

The financial report for 1984-85 shows that a Rolls Royce engine and Hawker-Siddley spare parts, valued at $289,000, was carried as an asset in the balance sheet. And carried as an asset in the balance sheet was the apartment building, for $142,381 in Prospect. The Tridenter and spares were carried for a little over $200,000, but it was sold in the 1987 period for $175,000; so I am submitting the amount here at $175,000. These combined figures amount to $506,381 of assets which were sold in the 1986-1987 period and used as operating revenue. If nothing of assets are gone (and the money has been used up) and are reflected in this balance sheet to show us that the airline only made a loss of something like $900,000. I am submitting that if we add this to it, it will enlarge tremendously the losses.

In the year 1984-85, the passenger revenue earned by Cayman Airways was $23,042,404. This is a very relevant figure. In the same period the cargo revenue was $1,989,561. In the same period the charter operation had a revenue of $4,351,229, and according to information available to me the charters they were run in the period up to June, under the present administration, would probably amount to a little over 300 hours, with the remainder of 500 and something hours being run in the period before the change in administration.

Other revenue was listed at $572,804. Operating expenses for this period are: flying operations - $11,540,977; maintenance cost - $3,318,597; passenger service costs - $2,055,698; airports and traffic - providing - $3,606,659; general and administration - $2,096,002. In the year 1984-85 there was an operating profit of $461,310. In that year the airline showed a net loss of $1,402,444. Now included in the above amount was a figure of $269,849 for interest on the Government loan, which had been extended to the airline. I will point out that at this time in the operation of Cayman Airways this no longer has to be paid. In 1984 the airline sold the assets that it sold in 1986-1987, had it not paid the interest on the Government loan which has now been transferred to shares in the company on which no interest is paid, and had it had a Government subsidy of $1,250,000 as it had in the year 1982-1983, then the net profit the airline would have shown in 1984 would have been $617,408 rather than a net loss of $1,402,444.

MR. PRESIDENT: I was going to ask you if that is a convenient moment to break - I think it may be.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Yes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: We suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

AT 11:15 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:38 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are resumed. Order: Member's Motion

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, I would like to make it abundantly clear that the exercise I have embarked on here is no way meant to detract from anything that Cayman Airways is doing for the country. I have the greatest of respect for all the employees of Cayman Airways, and I will even extend that to the Chairman, thinking that he is doing his very best.

I would like to bring out one more point before I go further into my submission, and that is that some years back the airline had the services of a Member of this House as Chief Accountant. I am not trying to detract in any way from the things I have said with regard to this gentleman. He was able to assist the airline at that time in one particular point and that was to save about $200,000 in revenue which we might have lost because the other accountants kept invoices in their desk drawers for two years, and this was much over the period when funds could have been collected from the clearing house. So I am not trying to detract one bit from his ability and contribution to the airline. And I hope that he can be as lenient with me with respect to what I may have said in this area.

Mr. President, if, in 1984, Cayman Airways had sold the assets that it sold in the period 1985-1987, and if we had not paid the interest on the Government loan, which has now been transferred to shares in the company on which no interest is payable, and if we had had a Government subsidy of $1,250,000, then the net profit in 1984 would have been $617,404. I am prepared to fully put forward my argument that, if the airline continues to get the Government subsidy that it is getting, with good management it should be in a break even position in a very short time.

In 1984, fuel prices were approximately US$1.20 per gallon, compared at the present time to an average of about 40¢.00 cents a gallon, which is a saving of about 35 cents a gallon on fuel. In a further comparison on the 1986-87 financial year of the company to the financial year 1984-85, we will find that the airline has many more routes than it is operating. It has increased ticket fares - the ticket fares are much more expensive now than they were in 1984; the company is operating over twice as many charter hours as it was in 1984; it has no interest to pay on the Government loans, and therefore it should be making money.

In 1987 passenger revenue earned by Cayman Airways was $22,872,096, or $170,308 less than was earned in the financial year 1984-85. I have to ask at this point why, when the ticket fares have gone up, are we operating more routes? Why? Is the load factor decreasing that amount? In 1987 cargo revenue was $1,688,136, or $301,425 less than 1984-85.

The charter market in 1987 was $4,578,407, or $2,227,178 more than it was in the year 1984-85. This figure is an integral part of my argument, and I will comment on it later. Under "Other revenue" on the balance sheet for 1987 it was listed as being $516,442, or $57,472 less than it was for the period 1984-85.

Flying operations in 1987 cost the airline $9,465,677, or $2,074,400 less than it did in 1985. The main reason for this was the decrease in fuel prices that I previously mentioned. We have had a fuel decrease over the years of approximately 30 per cent, and if we figure that 30 per cent on the flying hours of Cayman Airways, we would see where the savings came in. The 1987 aircraft takes about 1,465 gallons of fuel to operate per hour, so that if we take a saving of 30 cents a gallon on that we will see that the savings are approximately $450 a hour. So this is where the airline has benefited tremendously.

Maintenance in 1987 was $3,296,080, or $22,814 less than in 1984.

Passenger service in 1987 was $9,421,765, or $866,067 more than it was in 1984-85.

These are some of the areas of which I am being critical in saying that the airline is not under the type of management that some people will be led to believe.

Aircraft and traffic operating in 1987 cost $5,647,354, or $2,040,695 more than it did in 1984-85. This is a very significant amount when we consider that the income earned by the airline on passenger service in 1987 was less than it was in the corresponding period of 1984-1985. Now this is where we come to good management. If the airline had the good management, which that would have us believe, this figure would not have increased as drastically.

General administrative cost in 1987 was $3,477,822, or $349,820 more than it was in the corresponding period of 1984-1985.

Now these figures are very significant when you begin to get to the bottom line of the operation.

Operating profit. Having utilized the assets which were sold, in having to pay no interest to Government, and by having the Government subsidy, we came out with an operating profit of $859,957.

The total net loss, after various losses and everything else was taken into account, was $835,826, or $66,608 better off than the corresponding period of 1984-1985. Now we must remember that we are dealing with two financial years in between. The Company has sold a lot of assets, it has increased its routes and the charter market, and yet they have not been able to come to grips with the bottom line dollar with regard to the profits. I would point out that we hear a lot about the efficiency of Cayman Airways at the present time with regard to management, and we hear of so much improvement and of so much dedication by a few people - but let us compare the operation objectively.

Passenger revenue. With some destinations and with more flights being flown, increased revenue from ticket sales has decreased. It was not increased, it has decreased. This means that we have a significantly lower load factor than we had in 1984-1985.

Cargo revenue in 1987 is less than it was in the year 1984-1985.

Charter income has increased about one third over the period from 1984 to 1985. But again, Mr. President, taking into consideration the amount of charters that the airline ran in the year 1986-1987 (and we work the hours out by the figures given to us by the Honourable Second Elected Member on notice as a question I placed in the House a few days ago), we find that in 1987 the airline operated approximately 1,900 hours of charter flights. Now if we compare this to 1984 when the amount of charter flights were approximately 850 hours, and look at the amount of income that was earned on the charter flights in 1984 compared to the amount earned in 1987, we see a big disparity. The 1987 figures will reveal that former flyers are only getting $3,000 to $3,200 per hour for the charter flights. This will compare to $4,200 to $4,500 an hour they were getting in 1984-85. And if you take the decrease in fuel as a significant point here, and you take $450 an hour from $4,500, you would still be at $4,000 an hour. The main point I am making is that you cannot separate the 727 and pay all the attendant expenses which should be paid in that operation, when you are only earning an income of $3,000 to $3,200 an hour. We are flying the plane, keeping it in the air, giving experience to the pilots, bringing people to the Island (which I do not object to), but we are not breaking even in any sense of the word. You cannot cover direct operational costs at that price.

Flight operation cost has been reduced, as I pointed out previously, by the decrease in the fuel price from an average of $1.20 to an average of 85 cents.

Maintenance costs in 1987 is about 1.07 per cent less than it was in the corresponding period 1984-1985.

Passenger service is much more now than it was in 1984. Traffic servicing is more, general and administrative costs are more. Altogether those three things have increased by about 37 per cent over what it cost the airline to operate in 1984-1985.

So do not tell this House, nor the people of this country, that the present administration of Cayman Airways, under the direction of the Chairman, has come to grips with the problem because the problem of the present time lies in his administrative costs, his passenger service costs, and his traffic servicing costs. These have increased 37 per cent in the last two years.

To recap further, a net loss is shown of $835,826. If we add to this the approximate $500,000 of sold assets, the interest of $29,898 per year chargeable in 1984, which is no longer being paid, and a dividend of $1,250,000, paid by the Cayman Islands Government to ensure the operation of Cayman Airways, we find that the true loss of the airline for the period 1984-1987 is $2,855,724 instead of the total loss of $835,826 that is projected in the balance sheet of the Cayman.

Now, if anyone of this kind should doubt my calculations, income and traffic operations in 1987 is $1,687,373 more income than that of the corresponding period of 1984-1985. Expenses were $3,864,654, a difference of $1,878,361, or a shortfall of that amount. The subsidy from the Cayman Islands Government was $1,250,000. The sale of assets is $500,000. The interest would be $29,898, and if we take those two figures, after adding the depreciation difference of about $100,000, we will find that the two figures match up within a few hundred dollars of each other.

So I have propounded the problems in the financial picture of Cayman Airways and I would further like to expound on other points, Mr. President. I understand lately that the airline has operated nine charters. The plane left Grand Cayman, it went to New York on a deadhead - it carried no passengers. That is a three and a half hour flight plus ground time. It loaded passengers on a charter basis in New York and flew four hours and forty-five minutes to Grenada. It was about overstretched its flight ability on fuel. It could not carry the baggage so it had to be shipped the next day on ALM. ALM was diverted from its Apsara route to come over to Grenada to off-load the baggage. The aeroplane then flew back to Grand Cayman, empty, three hours, empty. So it flew six and a half hours empty to carry out a four hour and forty-five minute trip.

I understand that, from ten charters, Cayman Airways got approximately $30,000 per charter. Now if we figure that, Mr. President, we are looking at a cost of about $2,700 per flying hour. I will defy any accountant or anyone in association with the airline to prove to me that you can separate a 727-200 at $2,700 an hour and cover your direct expenses - because you cannot. This is why the airline is losing money.

I notice that at the present time we have a third aeroplane for Cayman Airways - a 727-100. I am very proud to say that Cayman Airways has reached the point where it can have another 727 airplane. At least they have proven us right with regard to the type of aircraft the Company should operate. However, the point I am getting at is that we now have this plane under lease. It is sitting at the airport, and I understand the legal technicalities have not been worked out with regard to it being able to fly under the FAA regulations, and on the size class of landing. A complete crew has been brought in to operate this aircraft. I understand that one of the captains came all the way from Australia. I understand that we have brought in fifteen to twenty stewardesses from Ireland to operate this airplane. We have rented condominiums to put up all this crew, we have bought cars to transport them, and they have their own private cars while they are here. This is costing the airline money. Why should we not train some of our local people to take these jobs? Do you know that people come to Cayman to see the Caymanian smile, to rub shoulder to shoulder with us and to see what makes us tick. They do not wish to travel the airline just to see faces from other foreign countries. They are looking for the local people who should be employed on the local airline.

In my opinion, with the figures that I have presented to this House, the airline is probably 200 per cent worse off now than it was in the financial year 1984-1985. And I think it will continue to get worse unless we take into consideration all the space available at Owen Roberts Airport and the airline's administration building. I understand that Cayman Airways recently leased space in a building which was built in close proximity to the airport, and which is owned by one of the present elected Government's big supporters. They have leased a large space from him to train staff. Well, I guess it will be used to try to retrain the Irish staff which they have brought in.

Mr. President- I submit that the airline was in good hands in the years 1976 to 1984, and that the groundwork to make Cayman Airways a successful, viable operation, was in place. I further submit that none of the present Government geniuses can prove me wrong in the submissions that I have made. The airline's financial and operational position has declined seriously, and a committee should be formed by this House to look into all the activities of Cayman Airways. If this occurs, Mr. President, that we will have a new Chairman, so be it.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak?
The Elected Member for North End.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

Mr. President, I wish to oppose private member's Motion No.20/87, Cayman Airways Limited.

My reason for opposition to this Motion is simple. The resolve section states:

"Be it therefore resolved that the Legislative Assembly is of the opinion that the accounts of Cayman Airways Limited are not satisfactory in that they do not provide a true picture of its financial and operational position."

Mr. President, I do not accept that statement as a fact. In my opinion we can all argue as to or what can be done to improve the revenue position of Cayman Airways and what can be done to reduce or increase expenses, but we cannot argue that the accounts, as tabled in this Assembly, do not reflect the true position of the airline.

It might even be possible to argue that, according to the accounts as tabled, the overall financial position of Cayman Airways might in fact be worse than it was in 1984, but it cannot be argued that the accounts as tabled do not reflect the true position of the airline.

And, Mr. President, I have listened intently to the mover of the Motion and was glad for the history lesson on Cayman Airways. It filled in a few blanks about the airline. However, in his presentation he still did not present any substantial facts that could lead me to believe, as he contends in the wording of this Motion, that these accounts do not reflect the accurate position of Cayman Airways. In fact, in the final analysis, what he has said is that the accounts do not fairly represent the true position of the airline, but from those facts and figures he concludes that the airline is worse off financially than it was under his administration. That is his opinion, and I would not argue with it. I believe that that conclusion might be a logical one from the figures, but if he is going to draw that conclusion from the resolve section of his Motion must read differently. It must say that the accounts as presented represent an accurate position of the airline as it was for the accounting period 1985-1987.

I am not an expert in similar management, but I do have some expertise in management, and the principles of management are the same whether you are selling fish or flying an aeroplane - the basic principles are the same. It is my opinion that it cannot be successfully argued that the policies and practices of management, as put in place by the Honourable Second Elected Member who has responsibility for Cayman Airways Limited, have stemmed and plugged the source of money from the Treasury to the airline.

Now, Mr. President, it is common knowledge that I do not support the $1.2 million subsidy to the airline, but it is also common knowledge that I support the policy decision Government has taken in that the airline will be given and has been given, over the past two years, a quantified subsidy with which to last live. The management of the airline can no longer continue to run on bills. It is threatened that the airline will be seized in Miami because they have not paid their fuel bills. If then comes Finance Committee and five, six, seven, eight, ten, fifteen million dollars or whatever it takes, is automatically coughed up. And the person of full faith and credit, "We bought you some more shares.", That has stopped. And Mr. Speaker, I contend, is a sound and sensible managerial policy.

My reason for not supporting the subsidy is because I believe that Government should put its foot down and tell Cayman Airways that it is not getting any subsidy, that it will have to cut some more fat - some of that extra staff which it has but does not need - and live with it. That is why I do not support the subsidy. But Mr. President, it cannot be argued that the accounts as tabled in this Assembly during this meeting do not reflect the accurate position of Cayman Airways.

Now we can all interfere. We have time in various ways. That is a privilege which we all have in a democratic country. I would support the mover in saying that Government's investment in Cayman Airways Limited has been the biggest it has ever made. I might differ with him as to whether it is or not the most sound investment, but it certainly is the largest single investment Government has ever made.

In listening to the Member's presentation in moving the motion, and with respect to the new routes which Cayman Airways Limited has opened up, there is one thing that bothers me. It seems that all the new routes - which Cayman Airways flew to were all countries that were poorer than us. I understand that most of those routes turned out to be a loss (and I guess one could expect that if you go to countries poorer than yourself), but I do not know what the reasons were for making these decisions at those times.

The Member made much of the fact that the Shorts aircraft and the BAC 1-11 are British aircraft and that parts are hard to get. I disagree with that. The Trilander, I believe, is built by a British company, Hawker Siddeley Aircraft Company, as well, so I suspect that any problems in the procurement of a British company would apply to that one too. Maybe it did not, I cannot argue the point, Sir.

The Member also alludes to a promise that he made to some senior pilots in Cayman Airways. He made a correct statement at the beginning that the Government of this country paid LACSA for all it and for this country. I agree with that, but my information, and I speak subject to correction, as a part of the promise made to these senior foreign pilots was Caymanian status. And that, indeed, has become a big problem for a lot of our young Caymanian pilots who aspire to be, one day, senior captains in our airline. Like LACSA, this country has paid these pilots for every hour they worked for Cayman Airways. If Caymanian status was part of the agreement, it is my contention that it should be rescinded, because we are doing more than what we should not be doing and that is blocking the upward mobility of our own nation's people who aspire to Caymanian status.

I recognise the Member's difficulty with regard to the 1984-1985 accounts. He is right in saying that it does cross political administrations, but I wonder, Sir, why he did not use the 1983-1984 or the 1986-1987 accounts which did not cross any political administrations.

The other disappointment I have is that the management of the airline, to whom the people of this country are paying handsome wages, is not sitting in the gallery listening to this debate, or at the very least showing loyalty and support for the present administration which, as is my conviction, Sir, rescued them from the brink of destruction.

Mr. President - I can I support Private Member's Motion No.20/87. As I said, I believe the accounts as tabled in this House do represent the true picture of the financial operations of Cayman Airways.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Nelson Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, I rise to oppose Private Member's Motion No.20/87, which claims that the Legislative Assembly is of the opinion that the accounts of Cayman Airways Limited for the financial year ending 31st July 1987 are not satisfactory in that they do not provide a true picture of the company's financial and operational positions.

First, let me make it abundantly clear that I am not and cannot be against any Member raising any matter they choose to raise in this House. That is their privilege, and I do not fault anyone for exercising their rights. In this particular case, dealing with Cayman Airways' accounts, I am not saying that mistakes and genuine errors cannot be made, for no one is infallible. Even though I am not an accountant, nor do I profess to be one, to the best of my knowledge and belief the accounts as presented are true and correct. Absolutely no attempt is made, nor need it to be made, to hide anything from Members of this House or the public. Furthermore, I fully trust and have complete confidence in the professionalism and integrity of the persons responsible for auditing, accepting and bringing the airline's accounts to me as the Member responsible for the subject, and responsible for tabling the accounts. I certainly would not knowingly be part or parcel to anything that was not correct and proper.

What I do resent, Mr. President, is what I consider the scheming and undermining manner in which this matter is brought, which to my view is to gain political mileage, if possible. Some people see only what they want to see, and understand what they want to understand in order to support their own opinions. It is my view and my opinion that the motion before this House today is ill conceived. Clarification was made by the mover of this motion in his presentation, but I have the responsibility to say so here that Price Waterhouse, the company's external auditors, is a most responsible, reputable and professional accounting firm that has been, as has been pointed out, and has been auditing the company's accounts for the past seven years. This is the first time that this unusual course has been taken in this House in dealing with the tabling of the national airline's financial statements.

I must admit that this motion came somewhat as a surprise, and was somewhat unpredictable with respect to what grounds could be made sensibly and justifiably be made. The auditors have supplied a clean-qualified letter, and this letter reads as follows:

"We have audited the financial statements on pages 2 to 4 in accordance with international auditing standards. In our opinion the financial statements give a true and fair view of the financial position of Cayman Airways Limited at 30th June, 1984, and the results of its operations for the year then ended in accordance with international accounting standards."

The financial statements, Mr. President, were accepted by the Board of Directors and signed by the Chairman and Managing Director, and tabled by me on Monday, 16th November. I must say that while the motion reads that "...it is the opinion...", I view this as a most serious charge and I wonder if such a statement, opinion or view, or whatever you wish to call it, would dare be repeated outside the four walls of this House. I think, Sir, that Elected Members have rights and privileges, and we should use them cautiously.

The Member in his presentation went to great length to outline the history of the airline. I noticed that he gave credit to several of the people who worked with him in those dark days of getting conventional airline well underway, and that he called for my support in confirming that his calculations on what would be lost on the Air Florida deal was within $50,000 or $75,000 of the amount that was anticipated. I believe that that is fairly correct, Sir. I will say one thing - I am here today as an Elected Member of the people and of this Government because I am a truthful person, and I am not here to tell lies for anybody. I am not here in any attempt to shroud Cayman Airways' operation in any secrecy. The accounts, since 1984, have been prepared and tabled on a timely basis. Nobody is denying anything. I am here to tell the truth, and I will do that until I leave the seat that I fill in this Assembly.

However, Mr. President, I know a little about the history of the airline too. I was with it from the beginning, and it is true that Cayman Airways Limited was organised and operating into the United States carrying the banner of the Cayman Islands under its own right for ten years before the Unity Team appeared on the horizon. Cayman Airways was started in August 1968 with a 50-50 per cent ownership, as was pointed out by the Member, and it was taken over by Government on 1st December, 1977, which is nine and a half years after it was started in August of 1968. So I was there from the beginning. I was originally hired by Laccsa Airlines, but I have no axe to grind. I think that the time and days in which the leasing arrangements were made with us were good arrangements. But we grew and the time came for us to have our own airline. I supported that position from the beginning. I support that position today. I challenge the mover of this motion, or any other Member of this House, to check the Hansard over the past seven years to prove that I have done anything other than support Cayman Airways from every possible position and at every possible opportunity. I do not need to be convinced by any of the Unity Team members of the importance of owning and operating our own airline. I worked both sides of the fence, and I know and understand the way to be done. I am not an airline expert, but I happen to have been there from the beginning, and I would like to read from the Hansard of this House, for 12th December, 1985, how the story of Cayman Airways, to a certain extent, has been documented. And I repeat:

"Mr. President, I saw a man take over national airline, to Cayman Airways, and as the Member whose House Portfolio this subject falls, I must have my say the same as all others."

Mr. President, this is dealing with the same set of accounts referred to by the Member. However, I have another set of accounts which I will come to because he is dealing with a set of accounts which took the airline through June 1985 and which covered six months of his administration and six of the new Government's administration - if you want to call it that. When the new Government was elected in 1984 we had the auditors prepare financial statements of Cayman Airways dated 30th November, 1984, and I will deal with them.

But let me continue:

"Mr. President, a few days ago I saw audited financial statements for the year ended 30th June, 1985 for Cayman Airways and Cayman Air Holdings were tabled in this Honourable House. These statements indicate that the company made an operating profit of $461,000 (United States dollars) for the year ended 30th June. However, after financing costs are covered loss for the year of approximately $1.3 million (United States dollars) was experienced. This resulted in an overall accumulated deficit at 30th June, 1985 of $17.6 million. Adding the accumulated deficit of $993,219 in the accounts of Cayman Air Holdings brings the accumulated deficit to $18.6 million.

Cayman Airways had a working capital deficiency of $9.1 million and a shareholders' deficiency of $5.5 million at the close of this period. The results for 1985 show an improvement in operating results of approximately $770,000 (United States dollars), in other words from a loss of $313,000 for the last accounting period for 30th June, 1984 to a profit of $141,000 for 30th June, 1985. This is after taking into account the cost of major damage repairs to three 727 engines which amounted to $870,000 (United States dollars) and which is included in maintenance expense for the year ended 30th June this year.

Mr. President, in November, 1984 a new Board consisting of successful businessmen from our community was appointed with the Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council as Chairman. A new policy of decisions making on economic rather than political grounds was instituted. In fairness to the new Board I would like to outline some of their achievements during the past year. Shortly after the new Board assumed office a salary review was undertaken together with a regrading of all personnel. Mr. President, in November last year (referring to November, 1984) we found the staff of Cayman Airways, even those who supported the Unity Team, demoralized and of very low morale. They explained that part of this reason was because for two years they had been promised increments which never materialised. Also, there were non-Caymanians in top management positions earning high salaries when some competent Caymanians were being overlooked or ignored. So, a regrading of all personnel and a salary review took place. Management was restructured based on recommendations in the Sinclair report and more responsibility was placed on the senior managers of the company. An executive committee of the Board of Directors comprised of the Chairman, Managing Director and five members of the Board selected from the private sector were chosen to liaise with management on important issues arising from the operations of the company. This arrangement enabled and left the Board free to deal with important policy decisions in keeping with the interests of the shareholders."

MR. PRESIDENT: May I interrupt you one moment. Apparently there is a technical difficulty with the recording, and they are asking for a break of five minutes. Have I got that correctly?

I think in that case perhaps we should suspend for lunch. Would that suit you?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Yes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are suspended then, until, shall we say, ten past two?

AT 12:34 THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:10 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council, continuing.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, when we had the lunch break I was saying that the new arrangement of an Executive Committee enabled and left the Board free to deal with important policy decisions in keeping with the interests of the shareholders. I was in fact reading from Hansard a contribution to the Budget address in 1985. Continuing on with the situation we found in November of 1984 and some events which had been made:

"New and badly needed uniforms for cabin flight crew and ground personnel were provided and these three items have resulted in considerable staff morale and efficiency.

The two 727 aircraft have recently undergone extensive overhauls and refurbishing. They have been repainted and all evidence of corrosion attended to. This is the first time that this has been done since the aircraft was acquired some three years ago.

There have also been maintenance checks which were due and had to be carried out. A manual of personnel policies setting out clearly the terms and conditions of service for all staff is now being prepared and will shortly be receiving the Board's approval. Policies have been established in relation to all three, and our discounted travel, including that for company employees, have been curtailed.

The audited accounts as we know for the year ending 30th June, 1985 have been accepted and presented in this House as I have mentioned. When the new Board assumed office there were accounts payable in excess of US$8 million. For the first time an annual budget for the company's operations has been prepared and approved. All this has been put in place.

The charges to Fancott Airlines for services provided by Cayman Airways were reviewed and revised which produced increased revenue for Cayman Airways.

However, in spite of good cost control and prudent management the company continues to incur heavy financial losses to the tune of approximately $1.5 million annually. I might point out that the $1.5 million which I have just quoted is United States dollars. It is with this in mind that the Board of Cayman Airways is requesting that Government provide an annual subsidy which is the bare minimum needed for the airline to be able to begin to conduct its affairs in a more businesslike and dependable fashion.

I should like, however, to make it clear that the amount of subsidy being requested is absolutely a bare minimum because depending on various factors affecting the future operations of the airline, the amount needed could be greater as time goes on and circumstances change, such as increased competition, a change in travel trends and increased operational costs, and perhaps unexpected maintenance costs. All this can bring a change financially to the airline.

No one in this country, Mr. President, need take this matter lightly. The financial structure of Cayman Airways, the deep and heavy commitment Government is obligated to honour as its sole shareholder, and the resultant heavy financial burden placed on the entire population of this country is certainly nothing to boast about. (I flow.)

Mr. President, I also want to bring to the attention of this House that the scheduled operation to Turks Island from the beginning, until it had to be terminated in June of this year, lost a (substantial amount of money it.)

Let us look, Mr. President, factually and realistically at Cayman Airways. I know that sometimes the public must grow weary of hearing the news of Cayman Airways. I have sat here for five years and I have heard different versions too. However, just briefly let us look for a few moments at Cayman Airways.

Cayman Airways was started in August, 1968, and Government invested at that time as the shareholder of 51 per cent $30,600. That was in 1968. In the December, 1977 the Unity Team Government took over Cayman Airways at which time that airline had an accumulated deficit of only $332,431 in its nine years of being in business, 1968 to 1977.

No feasibility study was carried out by the Government at that time and some Members stood in this House and told the House and the public of this country, that the new Cayman Airways could be profitable; that it would put money in the Treasury and that its loans would be repaid from income which the airline would earn. The Hansard of this House of April, 1976 substantiates this. It must be noted that Government up to 30th November, 1977 had invested only $220,500 and had actually been repaid a dividend of $67,500 from the operations of Cayman Airways. That was the commitment from this Government to the airline up until that date.

However, during the past eight years Government has had to be called upon for financial assistance. In the last three years (1982, 1983 and 1984) it has revealed in hard cash from this country's coffers over US$20 million. In addition the airline needs an annual subsidy of at least $1.5 million to assist with its operations, and still has outstanding debt of $5.5 million. Further to this, this Government has financial obligations as sole shareholders and guarantor for Cayman Airways' 727 leased aircraft at the rate of $2.5 million annually for the next ten years until 1996, in the event that Cayman Airways cannot meet its lease payments. As has been pointed out by one Member, the company only owns the Trilander and has one seat belt on the 727s. In fact I understand that if there is a change of course or an option exercised by Cayman Airways that a change is brought about in the leasing arrangements that the $2.5 million is a new account which was received from the sale of the two BAC 111s, that this amount (has to be taken into consideration and) could be forfeited. (One way or the other.) (This is a separate-paper.)

Mr. President, I need no convincing of the convenience of owning and operating our own national airline. It does give us more control over the orderly development of our tourism industry and we know that it is important. It provides a needed service to Cayman Sea and little Cayman. It provides employment for approximately 170 Caymanians. (That was the number at that time). There is no denying that great pride is taken in boasting of our own airline when being compared with many larger and stronger countries around which people make similar claims. However, as has been said, Cayman Airways has cost this country a tremendous amount of money and will continue to do so until the time comes when the airline costs at least possibly reach a break even position.

The question must be answered by Government and this country if our financial resources can continue to support the high cost of operating our own airline. It is a fact that what we would like to save and what we can afford are two different things."

Mr. President, those were my comments in 1985 with regard to Cayman Airways.

Now I turn to comments which were made by the mover of this motion that Cayman Airways has been the most controversial subject over the past ten years. This is true, Mr. President, but this is one Member who has always stood in favour of support of Cayman Airways. He is said that persons in this Government tried to degrade the airline and that so many lies have been told. That is his opinion and claim, but as far as I am concerned, it is totally unsubstantiated.

Mr. President, the British Government bought out Lacs's share in Cayman Airways and took over the airline on 1st December, 1977. I am not disputing that this had to come. As I said earlier the market was expanding and we needed to find jobs for more Caymanian pilots. We were growing up and needed to do our own thing. It is my own view, however, that the take-over could have been handled in a more orderly fashion, and perhaps would have cost the country less in the long run. It is true that the Civil Aeronautics Board (and under Bermuda III) has a requirement that British carriers operating into the United States need to have substantial ownership and effective control of British nationals. However, at that time, no definition was given of what the Civil Aeronautics Board meant by "substantial ownership".

The break with Lacs came after a series of meetings and a confrontation with Government and Lacs which was held by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town. And, yes, it is true that within weeks the Government had to scramble to get a replacement aircraft to keep the service going. We suddenly found the support and expertise of a parent company which we had depended on for ten years and we had to paddle our own canoe, or to put it rightly, we had to fly our own airplane. As the mover said, the accounting problems were varied and complex and serious. And as he said, he and I went over the accounting problem many times together.

But, Mr. President, within a short time, we had been converted into a fully fledged airline. We depended on Lacs to do our airline billings, therefore our accounting system and procedures fell behind, simply because we did not have the expertise here locally - neither the experience nor even the staff to cope with the demands which had suddenly been thrust upon the company. And Mr. President, 1977 to 1978 were certainly not the days of computers for Cayman. It was a struggle to survive, it was management by crisis; and as the mover rightly said, adjustments finally had to be brought in at great expense in order to bring the accounts up to date and to increase the accounting staff from four persons to ten.

Mr. President, it is also true that Lacs was paid for its services. It had to be paid. It was a business. But now do not think that when we turned to Air Florida that we got services from them for a price. You heard them say that if you think education is costly, try ignorance. If you think Lacs was expensive, then try Air Florida-itis. That was even more expensive. They were the only game in town, and with all due respect to them, at that time they were just getting organised themselves. And with respect, they had a bus operation. They did not have an interline ticket or even knew what it meant. They were not a part of the airline clearing house. They had practically nothing but a few Dollars, however, it is true that the service was kept going. What is also true is that the cost of the airline kept mounting. The company eventually raised loans backed by Government guarantees or letters of credit. It got one BAC 1-11 from British Aerospace, got BAC 1-11 on lease, the second BAC 1-11 was bought from Lacs Airlines. But the aircraft, the BAC 1-11, though its performance was good, did not have the range to suit the Cayman Airways route system at that time, because we were operating to Houston and had to make fuel stops at Florida, which was convenient. It did not provide the available cabin load that Cayman Airways needed at the time.

Also, another development that came about was that the Federal Aviation Agency had proposals to prevent those aircraft, because of the noise factor, from operating into several airports into the United States, especially Miami, and for all of these reasons coupled together, Cayman Airways started looking around for replacement aircraft. Studies were made of Cayman Airways' routes, and as far as I can remember, Sir, one study strongly supported the 727 aircraft. But it was not too long after that that another study appeared which said the 727 was better, even though at that time, in 1982, Cayman Airways did not really have the utilisation to justify an aircraft of that size and it cost the Company extra money to support that expensive aircraft on the route system it had. Four years later the utilisation in our Cayman Airways' routes are expanded and will expand more in the future, and so today, Mr. President, I can say that Cayman Airways at the present time could not have a more suitable aircraft than the 727-200. It cost us money to keep it until we could fully utilise it, and in my opinion it was a good arrangement, it was a good decision, and it was worthwhile.

Mention was made about the plan to change the 727 for a 737 aircraft. Mr. President, this was never the intention of the Company, not to the best of my knowledge. Some time ago, when we leased a 737 for a short period, the lease that was discussed this morning at Question Time, I made the comment that it would give the company first-hand knowledge of what that aircraft could do performance-wise, what it would cost, and it would have full details, because many times these aircraft salesman will tell you anything. I merely made the comment that it would be a good opportunity for Cayman Airways to have first hand knowledge of this.

Mr. President, mention was made that if the 727's were sold today they would bring approximately $30 million. That is purely hypothetical of course, (and I will not take the time of the House to read the leasing arrangements on the 727), because if this Government could get $60 million for the two 737's it could not sell them because they are leased. Those aircraft were never purchased, they are not owned by Government.

Mr. President, the Turks Island service was mentioned. They said they did not understand why it was discontinued. I will not repeat myself on that, because I think that was brought out in my reading of the Hansard. However, I remember the days when that 727 was despatched from Grand Cayman to Kingman to Turks Island and carried about two to five passengers from Kingman to Turks Island. So there were heavy losses and low load factors. This is why the Board of Directors, in June of 1985 discontinued services to Turks Island.

I feel that any Member can stand up and justify losses of Cayman Airways when those losses are incurred in providing service to these Islands, but I cannot support or justify losses incurred from serving other countries which I consider to be competitors.

It was also said, Mr. President, that the infrastructure was in place to make Cayman Airways a very viable operation in 1984 if it had been properly managed. Improvements were beginning and others is denying this, but I say today, as I said in the beginning, that it is a fact that Cayman Airways up to the present time has always lacked the basic economic factors needed to make it viable. But let me also hasten to add that if the airline ever stood a chance in its turbulent history to succeed, it is now and in the future.

Mr. President, the Member last morning also pointed out that the 737 made a loss and that these were only estimates. The problem is that he did not continue to read the rest of the footnote which said that this was a fair representation of the operating of the income and expense of that charter operation for December through April.

Mention was also made that the Trilander aircraft was very efficient and cost effective and that it was sold at a loss. It was sold at a modest profit, Mr. President. It is an English aircraft. Parts are hard to come by and it was becoming very, very expensive to maintain. This is one of the main reasons it was sold.

The Member last week asked my opinion, too, at Question Time, whether I thought it strange that the Shorts should have been bought without being inspected by a crew member. The Trilander was taken possession of at One Locks Airport after being flown in from Fiji. No Cayman Airways' Captain saw that aeroplane until January 1979, when it was received at the airport in Florida. So not involving crew members in the buying of small aeroplanes for Cayman Airways is nothing unusual.

I maintain that while there are restrictions on the Shorts, I do not have to make any apology. Of course, I want to make it clear that I am the Member responsible for the subject of Cayman Airways, but management takes certain decisions. Nevertheless, I think the decision to purchase the Shorts aircraft is the inter-Island service, under the terms and conditions by which it was purchased, was a good idea. It has improved the services substantially, and when refueling facilities at Cayman Brac are available, it will improve its operation.

The problems experienced in the different types of aircraft for the inter-Island service is nothing new. This has existed since 1st April, 1955. One aircraft that could service Cayman Brac is not suitable for Little Cayman, and this has always been the problem that has plagued the inter-Island service. So let nobody get the impression that there are experts out there who can produce an aircraft that means everything to everybody. This type does not exist.

Mr. President, a comparison was made regarding the accounts for 1985 and 1987. The Member built a case claiming that if in 1985 there had been a subsidy and had there been no interest payments on Government loans it would have been 'profitable' or a 'break-even' (I do not remember which term he used), but this is correct. If in 1985 there had been a subsidy provided by Government, and there were no interest payments on loans, according to the figures I have seen, there could have been a break-even situation.

Before I get that far, Mr. President, when the new Government took office in November of 1984 it was of interest to us to try to find out the situation in Cayman Airways as it existed at that time. The auditors prepared a set of financial statements up to 30th November 1984, which took the period of five months, that is 1st July, 1984 to 30th November, 1984. At that time, the Company for those five months would have had an operating loss of nearly $1 million. The Government wrote a press release which was signed by the four Members of Executive Councils which read:

"One of the first order of business of the newly elected Government was to make available to Cayman Airways a loan of amount of $1,036,675 to meet its lease payments due on 1st December, amounting to $636,675, and a partial payment of $400,000. Cayman Airways, with an overdraft of over US$1 million at 31st October was in no position to meet these payments. Finance Committee approved the funds to meet these two payments. It will take time to prepare an accurate statement of Cayman Airways' financial position, as the draft audit report for the year ended 30th June, 1984 has just been submitted for examination by the Board of Directors. However, based on the draft audit report, and a report submitted by the Managing Director dated 27th November, 1984 we find the current financial position of the airline to be as follows:

According to the uncertified balance sheet as at 30th June 1984 the accounts reveal an accumulated deficit of $16,237,553. The accounts for the current year also show a further accumulated deficit for the period July to October 1984 of $1,271,576, or a total deficit to 31st October of US$17,509,129. The uncertified balance sheet as at 30th June, 1984 also reveals a cash balance of US$1,036,675. At 31st October, 1984 the account was in an overdraft of approximately US$2 million. Outstanding bills and owing as at 31st October amounted to $0.7 million. However, amounts due to Government for landing fees and interest and principal repayments on Government loans were not included. The total amount owing by the airline appears to be nearer $6 million, or more.

From this preliminary review it can be seen that the airline is in urgent need of sound fiscal policies and efficient management. In spite of the many difficulties being faced by the national airline it is the intention of the new Government to use its best efforts to ensure its continued operation, and we wish to assure the general public of our determination to continue to provide a dependable air service."

Mr. President, the member who spoke about the decrease in passenger revenue to charter revenue is comparing the operating revenues of the company in 1984-1985 with 1986-1987. Part of the reason for the difference is that for the year 1986-87 Cayman Airways increased substantially its charter activities, and passengers were diverted from scheduled services to charter services. Nevertheless, it meant that the company was still receiving the revenue.

Mr. President, the Member went into great detail to compare 1985 with 1987. He spoke about the sale of assets of the 740, the Felix Royce, the apartment building and the Trilander spares, and said that if they had had the income from these sales of assets (which is really not accounted for in the P and L in our case) and had they had assistance with a subsidy they would have been able to show a much better position. He also said that he had refused a subsidy from Government. It might not have been called 'subsidy' but in 1982, 1983 and 1984, as I said previously, Government injected $20 million in cash into the airline. These were accounted for through loans, advances and shares. So the $1 million subsidy that Cayman Airways is presently receiving from Government, is no comparison whatsoever with the subsidy which the airline got, that is if one divides $20 million between three years. That is a substantial subsidy, Mr. President. Had that been treated as a subsidy, the situation would have been different, yes.

Mr. President, the Member said that the Company is not under the type of management which we are trying to make the people believe. I deny this. I feel that there have been substantial improvements in the management of the Company. The annual report which was tabled on 15th November clearly states that the company has been able to keep its lease payments up to date. Its position of the airline today is not 200 per cent worse off than it was in 1984. I would say it is 400 per cent better off today than it was in 1984. I know that much of this might be politics, but I sincerely trust, Mr. President, that Cayman Airways will continue to grow and expand, and that it will grow from strength to strength, because we have a tremendous investment in this airline. We have a future to build and Cayman Airways figures very prosperously in that future.

Reference was made to the Chairman's resignation and that it was a political ploy. I think this is very unfair. I do not have to defend the Chairman. I only believe that he is there doing a good job. I do not think that he has any political ambitions, at least not to my knowledge. He I do not see any reason why he should have to resort to any trickery or tactics to get attention.

Mr. President, mention was also made if I do not know how it got into this motion, but nevertheless about the third aircraft, the 727-100, which is sitting at the airport. All the legal technicalities, as far as I can understand, have been worked out. That aircraft is here for a very short period of time to fill the summer programme. It was asked why we did not train local people to do this, and why did we bring in crew and stewardesses from Ireland. It is true the aircraft is leased from a company in Ireland. We do not have sufficient crew to crew that aircraft, and there was an arrangement made where the crew would be interchanged, so additional crew had to be brought in. We could not train local people to fill that for a three month period. What would we do with them after that? So this is a need that has to be met on a short term basis, because it is my view that in the not too distant future Cayman Airways will probably have to look for a third aircraft, and I believe it will be a 727-300. With an expanded route structure the airline has to grow and we have to look in that direction. However, for short term periods we cannot train crew and bring them in. For what are we to do with them after that?

Mr. President- there is one point which I should make before I sit down. I do not want to be accused of mislabelling anybody, but when I presented the accounts I dealt with the financial year ended 30th June, 1987. The subsidy that was granted to Cayman Airways was clearly set out there. It was not hidden, nor was any attempt made to hide it. As was pointed out in the annual reports, if there had not been a subsidy, the operating loss would have been in the eight- instead of $891,000. Nobody has said differently. This is provided in the accounts, and it is clear to see. So with the help of the subsidy we have been able to show an operating profit that is shown on the P and L.

Mr. President, I would just like to say, finally, that in my view the resolve section of this motion should have read that the now Elected Members for Bodden Town were of the opinion that the accounts are not satisfactory and do not provide a true picture of Cayman Airways' financial and operational position, because I do not believe that it is the Legislative Assembly's opinion that it expressed in this motion. I do not honestly believe that anyone in their right mind would support this motion.

Mr. President- I oppose Yvonne Bodden's Motion No.20/B7. Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council is right, at least as far as I am concerned, with regard to the resolve section of the motion.

This subject has been raised and I should say over the last couple of years. That this country needs air transport, which is well substantiated, is well substantiated. The provision for a national carrier has been dictated by hard necessities, and my support for our air carrier over the years has been along those lines.

As I see it, in just in the area of our national economy, the existence of the national airline and its active participation in local tourist routes and otherwise, are essential if the possible disadvantages, from a situation which allows other carriers to operate here, are to be avoided. For example, the tourist industry in these Islands would be totally dependent on foreign operators who would or could, in order to suit their own particular requirements, fail to give the type of service which would be beneficial to us, and might even, in certain circumstances divert their main activities to other competitive tourist areas. That is just one area of our national economy that we could compare to the need of reliable air transport. I need no convincing of its importance.

Mr. President, I would like to say now place on record my thanks to the staff who have laboured over the years to help make our airline the type it is today. We have some very dedicated pilots and other staff members who work relentlessly to serve the national airline and thus serve the interests of Cayman.

The Member in moving the motion gave quite a history on the airline, but he did not give me any reason to reject the auditor's report on the financial position. The debate moved along the lines of putting a trial the administration of the airline since 1984.

When we came to office, this Government was much constrained from doing many things for this country because of the financial needs of the airline. We had to pay our due loan payments of over $600,000; fuel bills, long outstanding, of over $800,000; an overdraft of $2 million; some total outstanding bills of $6 million, and a deficit of $17 million.

As a new Member, I was very concerned, and worried. I am of the opinion, and the records bear me out, that had the change not come about in 1984 the airline would have either collapsed or the country would have been taxed out of existence or would have suffered for need of important infrastructure expenditure in order to keep the national airline going. I believe today that Cayman Airways is in a much better financial position than before the change came about in 1984.

At the least, no longer is it the position where Members can expect requests for millions of dollars every year without knowing where it is going. You heard that, in 1981, 1982 and 1983, there was a cash drain from the Treasury of this country of $20 million. Today we have given this account which I have supported from its inception and advocated ever since I came on the political scene. The airline, Mr. President, seems to be weathering the storm - coming on a bad winter, yes - but staying afloat. In this world we have to be thankful for that. A couple of years ago, before the 1984 election, Members of the House and the public in general did not know what it meant to have accounts for two years at a time, and even when the accounts do come they were unaudited.

Today I would record my support for the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council, Norman Godden. I think this country should be glad that we have a man of his calibre responsible for the airline and responsible for putting it in a position that we know what is happening. I think the Honourable Member and his Portfolio, the Chairman and the entire Board deserve the support of this House. I am not a professional accountant, so I hold the Board members and management responsible to appoint a qualified accounting firm, as they have done.

To pass this motion without a comparison from another qualified firm, which could offer this House a professional opinion on the financial statements, would be to imply that Price Waterhouse is a liar and that it does not know what it is doing. I am not in a position to do that. I do not whether any Member in this House, with the exception of the Second Elected Member for George Town in his professional capacity, could do that. I am not prepared to do so. Price Waterhouse said, and I quote from the financial statement:

"We have audited the financial statements on pages 2 to 9 in accordance with international auditing standards. In our opinion the financial statements give a true and fair view of the financial position of Cayman Airways Limited at 30th June, 1987, and the results of its operation for the year then ended, in accordance with international accounting standards.

Price Waterhouse".

Mr. President, the Member has now brought one scrap of paper from another firm, and I would reiterate that statement, to disprove or otherwise prove wrong this statement. We have to rely on what we have. I trust the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council. I trust the Chairman and his Board. I trust Price Waterhouse. I am voting with the Government to bring out the resolution.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I think we might take Mr. Johnson's motion there, as it is nearly 3:15. Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:15 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:24 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Debate is resumed on Motion: Member's Motion No.20/87. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. VAGSEL G. JOHNSON:

Mr. President, had I not been included in this debate, I perhaps would have just sat quietly. However, I felt that because I was a founder director of Cayman Airways when it was instituted in 1968, and later became Chairman in 1971 until 1977, and then in November 1984 to 5th December 1985, I feel that it is no more than right for me to give my little bit of what I know about Cayman Airways.

And so, Mr. President, I like to thank the Hon. Free debate on the subject is important as Cayman Airways is dead for evermore. However, as other speakers have pointed out, I am of the same view that the motion commits this Honourable House to be of an opinion about a subject laid on the table of this Honourable House; and furthermore was followed by a statement by the Honourable Member responsible for the subject, the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

As was pointed out by other speakers, you can not really bring a business matter to this House to be presented here, especially for public viewing, because anything that is laid upon the table of this Honourable House becomes a public document. How can we really lay a report on the public table of inaccuracies. We would not only be deceiving ourselves, but we would be deceiving the public and the integrity of this Honourable House. And so I have exception to the wording that the Legislative Assembly is of this opinion.

Mr. President, as far as I am aware, when an auditor or an audit firm examines the accounts, especially of a public corporation or an important institution in the society, and where that accounting firm has international reputation, international reputations are something that must be protected at all costs. I appreciate the statement made by the First Elected Member of Executive Council when he was presenting the motion, that he had the greatest confidence in the integrity of the firm referred to here. I think all of us have regard for that firm. It was one of the early accounting firms to come here, and we know quite a lot about them since that time.

However, I think this is a sort of double barreled affair. On the one hand the Member is saying that he respects the integrity of the accounting firm, and on the other hand he is saying that the management and those responsible for Cayman Airways are dodging behind the curtain of uncertainties about the position of Cayman Airways.

I have dealt with accounting firms in the private sector and Government, and auditors must bring to the attention of management any aspect of their work which appears to move on the borderline of malpractice or of good practice or principles. When an auditor signs a certificate that he has examined the accounts of a firm, and he presents that, I do not think that there is any scope for it to be questioned, because questioning must be done before these accounts are audited and signed. So I am a bit concerned that I do not understand the form of presentation if the Member has concerns about the financial affairs of Cayman Airways - that is his prerogative, and one cannot blame a Member here for putting forward his views about a subject.

Anyhow, getting back to Cayman Airways. From the beginning there was a marrying arrangement between Cayman Airways and Lacsas. Mr. President, it was seen in those early days that air services in the Cayman Islands would sooner or later be very pertinent to the development of the country. And so Lacsas with an interest (because they are business people there is no use in kidding ourselves by saying that Lacsas charged a lot and that its charge was this and the other) and as business people were out to make business and to make money. I would like to go in to say that I have dealt with the Lacsas directors and their Board for quite a number of years, and I cannot but say today that I have found Lacsas's directors nothing other than gentlemen. I know especially one of their directors, by the name of Otto Escalante. I would like to say that a finer gentleman than that you would not find anywhere in this hemisphere.

Mr. President, Lacsas has been nothing but a friend to Cayman, forgetting about the charge they made, because anyone would make a charge for their services. But what I would like to say, and the public can bear this out, is that there are a lot of services which Lacsas rendered to this country that were not charged for. Lacsas would come here and pick up the sick even if they were not on their routine flight through here. Once they were advised in sufficient time they would sleep as if it was an urgent case. They would pick up the sick and take them to Miami.

Mr. President, Lacsas stood by and assisted in other respects. I remember back in 1971 when British West Indian Airways pulled out of Cayman. It is a good thing that we had Lacsas here serving us, because the only way out was for Lacsas to come on the scene and take on the service. I remember Mr. Parnham, during the 1975 recession Cayman Airways was in its last struggle for survival. The recession had worn down the Company's financial position to zero, and its accounts were in a deficit. We asked the Board its intention and whether it was prepared to take over Cayman Airways, and it said "no". Lacsas took the lead. It decided to buy time back from British Airways, for one full year Lacsas did that to re-strengthen the financial position of Cayman Airways to the stage where that it could survive again.

Mr. President, I remember on many occasions when lease charges were due to Lacsas. The first one was the first leg of the international journey to Jamaica when that service was established in the 1970s. There was a losing proposition because British West Indian Airways was operating the route at the time. However, we thought it was wise to maintain that service so that it would one day become useful, and since it was the first leg of the international journey we thought that it should be maintained. And alas when British West Indian Airways pulled out of Cayman, and Cayman Airways became the sole operator, within a short time we were able to recover our financial position from that route.

On other occasions when lease charges fell due, Lacsas did not come around and indicate any concern and told us that if we did not have the money now we could pay later. Sometimes one or two months would be due. I remember on one occasion three months went by without us paying them, but they did not come and knock at our door and ask us for the money. Unfortunately, it was not until we were Air Florida took over, because they were very keen on obtaining payment for the lease of their aircraft. And I remember quite well - they would send a man down here from the office three days before the lease was due. He would go around knocking at the offices of different Members saying, "I am here". If on the due date of that lease the cheque was not handed to him he would have taken the aircraft back to the United States. For the money had to be paid. There is no guess work about that, I know. That was the difference between Laccsa and Air Florida.

Mr. President, when I became Chairman of Cayman Airways in 1971 I ensured every year that the audited accounts of Cayman Airways and the Chairman's covering report were laid on the table of this Legislative Assembly. That continued throughout the period that I was Chairman, 1971 to 1977 and again in 1985. The records can be searched. We kept the Legislative Assembly current on all the happenings of Cayman Airways because we knew that that was a responsibility with which we had to comply.

From the day that Cayman Airways was established until today there has only one year in which the airline ever made any profit and declared dividends to its shareholders. That was in 1974 soon after the inauguration of the Cayman to Miami service. The Jamaica service was then in operation. Our share amounted to over $68,000. We could have declared dividends the following year - but it happened to have been a recession year and we were advised by all the shareholders that we should not declare dividends but strengthen ourselves for the on-coming recession. It is a good thing we did that, it was good advice. And so we can record that there was one year that Cayman Airways made a profit. No doubt sometime in the future it will do so again.

Mr. President, unfortunately, in 1977 the new Government decided that they wanted to take over Cayman Airways completely for themselves. Whenever we embark on projects of this nature it is always good to make changes slowly. Something as complicated as an airline operation is not just taken over and put into operation for it to operate smoothly. There are a lot of implications, and Laccsa which had experience in this respect (Pan American was once owner of Laccsa - later on Laccsa bought out Pan American and it became an independent entity) agreed with us that Cayman Airways should eventually be fully owned by the Cayman Islands. They were prepared to go along and to schedule this takeover. However, the Government of the day thought differently. It wanted it to be done in a snap second and so would accept nothing else. The terms of the takeover were decided on and so Cayman Airways became the property of the Cayman Islands Government, as the single shareholder during 1977. I should say that it was only after Government took over the airline that Members here knew what it was to be an airline. It was tough going all the way, until even now.

However, Mr. President, the Honorable Member responsible for the subject has gone through quite a bit already, and so I am not going to go over what he has said.

I would like to comment a bit more on the Turks Island withdrawal, because that is important.

We did not come into Government with the intention of undoing the things which we found. We believed in supporting the policies of Government when it was economically and financially feasible. The Turks Island operation went well in early 1985 simply because Cayman Airways operated a scheduled service to Turks Island in addition to a charter service to Providenciales where Club Med operated. Now for some unknown reason the Turks Island Government allowed Club Med to cancel their charter service with Cayman Airways, and to enter into negotiations with another airline to do the job. So it left Cayman Airways with the two scheduled services per week to Turks Island.

We watched this very carefully. We called in the Turks Islands officials and asked them why they had done this, and whether they valued the services of Cayman Airways into Turks Island. We asked how they expected Cayman Airways to survive if it was not making sufficient revenue on the route. They said it was something out of their control and they could not help it. The feedback that I got was that in the Turks Island they were saying (the Government and everybody) that Cayman Airways was making so much money from the operation that they did not care what happened. Other airlines wanted to operate there as well and so they were not very interested in Cayman Airways continuing.

The Board of Directors was very concerned about this very carefully. We called in officials from Turks Island to discuss this. We eventually had to serve an ultimatum because Cayman Airways was losing, on a weekly basis, over $10,000. Now $60,000 a month, over a year, is a lot of money. What officials did we have there to continue that operation? We showed the officials the figures and told them what would happen if they were not prepared to do something about it. They did absolutely nothing. They went back to Turks Island and quietly transacted with another airline to take over the service. Then they said they had someone else to do the service. So we quietly pulled out, pulling one scheduled flight first and the following month pulling the other.

So, Mr. President, as we were pulling out of pulling these flights out of Turks Island. We tried with them we had sympathy with them; we were willing to go along and try to assist in every way we could, but their attitude was not right and the Board could not sit there and suffer a loss of over $700,000 per annum.

I will not make any comments with regard to what I found in November 1984 when I went back as Chairman, because I would take quite a long time to relate everything. The Member responsible for the subject has declared that,

Again, I must say that I am a bit surprised about the views expressed on the audited accounts of Cayman Airways. I want to make sure that the debate here will indicate the feeling of the Legislative Assembly and not indicate in the end that it is really not the opinion of the Legislative Assembly, as the motion states. Mr. President, I cannot support the Motion, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

If no other Member wishes to speak, I will invite the mover to exercise his right of reply.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, I do not wish anyone to believe that my colleague from Bodden Town and myself were of the opinion that this motion would succeed. We were well aware of the treatment it would get, but we felt that the public should know the facts, and we have brought those facts into the open. Let public opinion be the forum to judge these facts, and not the Members of the Legislative Assembly who have spoken and those who did not speak on this issue.

I challenge anyone to prove me wrong in the submission that I made to this House with regard to the operation of Cayman Airways. This motion was not brought to disparage Price Waterhouse, the auditors of the airline. I thought I had made this very clear in my opening remarks. I have the greatest faith in their ability. What I am trying to point out to the Members of this House and to the public is that if Cayman Airways Limited had not had the funds from the subsidy, the funds from the sale of assets, and the funds from interest which is generated from Government loans, because the loans have been put into the form of shares in the company, the loss on the operations of Cayman Airways would have been substantial. There is no way in the Government of the day, or the Member responsible, coming to this House and telling us that conditions at Cayman Airways have improved tremendously, when the facts and the figures do not bear that out. If it had improved tremendously then there would have been no need for them to get the subsidy and the other help that has been given to it.

The other point to prove is that the financial picture of the airline is much worse now than it was before. There has been no improvement in the financial figures.

I would like comment on a few things said by some of the Members who spoke on this motion.

The Member for North Side said that he supported the Government's policy decision. We all know that. He was not telling us anything that we are not aware of. He said that at least there are no requests now for millions of dollars for Cayman Airways from the Government of this country. I am not aware of those either, Mr. President, unless those requests came in the past to allow the financing of aircraft for Cayman Airways. So why would he try to mislead the House?

He made a remark about the countries which Cayman Airways Limited operated into, being poorer or richer. That may be so, Mr. President, but the operations to the Central American countries which I mentioned in my speech were mostly charters that were paid for, before the charters were ever run. So whether the countries were poor or rich made no difference. The point is that Cayman Airways set a charter price for that operation and we collected most of it in advance. To my knowledge it was only a $10,000 loss on one cheque that was never cleared.

The route to the Turks and Caicos Islands was an attempt to extend the scheduled routes of Cayman Airways, because before this change in the Bermuda II agreement, the routes that Cayman Airways could operate were very limited. We looked at it from an economic point of view that it would cost some money to establish the route. We knew we would lose at the beginning, but the Government decided that in the end, if every other thing was equal, the route should make money. Some of the services that we could have gotten to that point because we were ready at a time when the restrictions came about in 1984.

I think the same Honourable Member made some mention of my commitment to Captains Robert Hamarty and Joe Marston - the senior captains of Cayman Airways who have been with the airline for a number of years now, but who formerly, I think, worked for Air Jamaica. Mr. President, I wish to go on record to state that I hold these two gentlemen in the highest esteem. They have been captains of a very long standing good reputation with Cayman Airways. They came to us at a time when we needed them. They have not just been flight captains, they have done a lot of other work. A lot of manual work, training and so forth, have been carried out by these two gentlemen. In my opinion they have earned the right, which I gave them, to be placed on the permanent seniority list. And I am proud also to know that the present Honourable Member of Executive Council responsible for the airline has seen fit to stand by that decision. I could not promise them Caymanian status, but I would have helped them in any way I could to get Caymanian status if it meant them remaining with the airline, because I thought they were doing a creditable job. I will not back down from that decision and I will say it publicly here and I will say it anywhere else.

He also went on to say that the present administration has rescued Cayman Airways Limited from the brink of destruction. This is an untrue and irresponsible statement. I did not expect was better. I am used to hearing such statements. The Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council said that he resented the scheming and underhand manner to get political mileage. Mr. President, can anyone explain to me what is so scheming and underhanded about placing a motion of this sort in the House to be debated before and by the Members so that the people of the island can hear what is going on - I cannot understand it. Sir, as a politician and myself from Bodden Town do not need any more political mileage. Our record of service to our people speaks for itself. We do not have to come here and speak in the House in the hope of getting political mileage out of it. This is wrong. I am not attaching any things to him.

He said that what we said about the airline this morning is a serious charge which we would not express outside this House. I invite him to my next political meeting in Bodden Town and I will ask him to sit at the table with me, and I will tell him and the crowd exactly what I have said in this House today on this motion. So he does not have to worry about me expressing my feelings outside this House on this point or on anything else. We are not making a charge. We are laying the facts - the facts in these balance sheets.

He said that decisions are not based on economic rather than political grounds. Again, I do not really know what he means by this, but when you run an airline that is the national carrier, you are going to have to make decisions based on both grounds, and you cannot get away from it.

He said that the staff after the elections in 1984 were discouraged and that their morale was at a low point. Well, maybe he knows more than anyone else, but I can tell him one thing. If morale was better at this point, I think it is now rather than after the elections in 1984.

He said that the reports of Cayman Airways are now timely. This Honourable Member, above all others in this House, Mr. President, knows full well the difficulty encountered over the years with the accounts of Cayman Airways. I was not put there as an auditor or an accountant, neither was he, but he had tremendous difficulty in coming to grips with the financial situation of Cayman Airways. I could not present any reports to this House until they were prepared by the accountants and auditors. And the auditors, from the inception of the company, were Price Waterhouse and Company. So why try to belittle and besmirch me, by making such accusations as these?

I think if my notes are correct the second Elected Member for West Bay made some remark about putting the accounts since 1984, on trial. This is not what we are trying to do. We are trying to solve the problem with a problem that faces every Member of this House. He made reference to local outstanding bills of about $6 million at the end of the 1984 election. That, say he says, that might have been what the accounts payable were, but what about the receivables?

I believe the Member made some ridiculous statement about the administration in 1984, and that had it stayed in power somebody would have been taxed to keep Cayman Airways Limited running. The record of taxation in this country in the years 1976 to 1984 speaks for itself, with regard to what one does in taxes. It is the first time in the history of the country that taxes were ever taken off board.

He also made the statement that before 1984 no one knew what was happening with the accounts, for it would take two years to bring them to this House, and when they were brought they were unaudited. Well, it is an untruth. When they were brought to this House they were audited, and they were audited by Price Waterhouse. I am not saying, Mr. President, in any way that Price Waterhouse is wrong. What I am saying is that the financial position of Cayman Airways has not improved since 1984 and that we can no longer keep quiet about it.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, Standing Order 21.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Is this a point of order?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Standing Order 21(a).

MR. PRESIDENT:

I cannot hear you, what number?

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Standing Order 21(a). The Member speaking has made a remark in connection with what I said concerning accounts not coming to the House in two years. My precise words, Mr. President, were that "the accounts for the year did not show what it meant to have accounts for two years at a time, and over these two years they were unaudited". I did not say they had come to the House unaudited.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Well, where did they come from then?

I do not see that as being a point of order, Mr. President, so I will continue with my speech.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Well, I think it is a point of explanation, but it is not at all clear to me what the point was.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN:

Mr. President, I will go through the figures again.

In the year 1984-1985, passenger revenue earned was $23,042,404. Cargo revenue was $1,989,561. Charter revenue was $9,851,229. Other revenue was $573,934. The flight operations - I can list them, but the main point is that if, in 1984, the airline had sold the assets that it sold in 1986-1987, and if they had not paid the interest on the Government loan which has now been transferred to charges in the company, and if it had received a subsidy of US$1,250,000, a profit of $617,404 would have been realised.

Passenger revenue in 1987-1988 decreased. Cargo revenue decreased. The only increase in revenue was on the charter operations and I made a long deliberation on that in the House this morning to explain that I am certain it is not worthwhile running charters at the price per hour that Cayman Airways is apparently getting. This is the only increase in revenue that the airline had. The only decrease in operating costs has been in flying operations, about 42 million which can easily be accounted for when you figure the number of hours that have been run and the savings of about 35 to 40 cents a gallon on fuel.

Passenger service, aircraft servicing and general administration has all increased tremendously. The airline did show an operating profit in 1986-1987 of $859,754., but the net loss after capital leases in 1987 shows as $835,826 which means that it is only $566,608 better off than in the 1984-1985 year if you look at with regard to the operating profit.

To recap and show you, Mr. President, a net loss is shown of $835,826. If we add to this the $500,000 of sold assets, interest of $269,848 (which is no longer paid), the subsidy of $1,280,000, we will find that the loss experienced by Cayman Airways, with regard to the revenue taken in and the cost of operations, is $2,855,674 rather than the loss which is listed of $835,826. I am talking about the operational cost and the income of Cayman Airways. If my calculations are doubted, anyone can use the formula which I have used and they can prepare the two balance sheets. I am certain that they will find that the submissions I have made on behalf of Cayman Airways today is correct. The airline is 100 per cent worse off now, financially, than it was in the financial year 1984-85.

Thank you, Mr. President.

I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion 20/87.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 20/87 REPEATED BY MAJORITY

MR. PRESIDENT:

Honourable Member: On this point there are eight minutes left this afternoon. I would suggest that it does not make a great deal of sense to resume the debate on the Appropriation Bill unless the Honourable Fourth Elected Member - he indicated, I think previously that he would need longer than eight or eight minutes. I therefore think it would make sense to adjourn. I sense a general agreement.

I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

MR. PRESIDENT:

PRAYERS

MR. D. FZARD MILLYRE:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.
Our Father, who art in Heaven, hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation: but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever, Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of the House are resumed.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY THE PRESIDENT

MR. PRESIDENT:

Perhaps I might mention before we commence Question Time that the Chief Justice will be leaving the Islands on Monday 30th November in the morning. As is normal, the Members of Executive Council will be seeing him and Lady Sumner off at the airport. So a little later on when we have the exact timing I shall be asking if the Assembly would not mind meeting a little later than usual on the Monday morning.

Questions. The First Elected Member for Sadder Town, please.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

WHO WERE MEMBERS FOR SODDER TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO. 114:

Would the Honourable Member say whether Government is considering giving the Public Service Commission power to study working rules and conditions and whether Government is considering changing the functions of the Public Service Commission in any way?

ANSWER:

The answer to both questions is no.

The functions of the Public Service Commission as prescribed in the Public Service Commission Law and in the Public Service Commission Regulations which were revised in October, 1955, are to advise the Governor on matters relating to the appointment, transfer, promotion, training, dismissal, retirement and disciplinary control of public officers.

No change in the functions of the Commission is being considered.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Has it not been seen as necessary to broaden the rules with regard to the training of the personnel in Government service?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I am not 100 per cent certain of what is being asked of me. The candidate for training is recommended by the Head of Department to the Public Service Commission which considers that recommendation and takes its advice known to the Governor.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: There evidently is an area in the service where further training is required, and that is in the middle management area where the service appears to be very weak. Is anything being done to try to train Government staff to come up and take their positions in middle management?

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Yes, Mr. President, I believe that many things are being done in that respect. We should recall that there are 32 departments with over 1000 employees, and a good many of them are middle management. There are quite a number of them who are on overseas training at the moment. Some are at university and some are on attachments, with a view to qualifying them to take their responsible places in the respective departments.

MR. PRESIDENT: If there are no further supplementaries, next question please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO. 115: Would the Honourable Member state how many civil servants presently employed by the Cayman Islands' Government' lived or received training in South Africa?

ANSWER: As far as can be determined, no civil servant presently employed by this Government received training in South Africa. However, the newly appointed Training Officer is on record as having worked in South Africa from 1976 to 1979.

MR. PRESIDENT: Could we move to Question Number 116, please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FIRST OFFICIAL MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

NO. 116: Would the Honourable Member say what is being done to improve conditions for Caymanians in the Civil Service?

ANSWER: The conditions of service of public officers are reviewed frequently in order to maintain an efficient service and provide for localisation.

Two separate exercises were undertaken this year to identify and correct any existing anomalies.

The first exercise was a revision of the General Orders which govern the conditions of service of all public officers. This revision was carried out in close consultation with the Management Council of the Cayman Islands Civil Service Association.

The second was the quadrennial review of salaries' structure, grading and conditions of service of public officers.

Government is also committed to a policy of providing opportunities for Caymanians to improve their skills and knowledge and to prepare themselves for advancement in the Public Service. Many Caymanians have taken advantage of these opportunities and at present two officers are undergoing training at the Cayman Islands Law School and 17 officers are on training courses overseas.

Caymanian officers also receive on-the-job training and opportunities to understudy experienced officers.

Caymanian graduates joining the administrative service are given wide exposure to different departments, portfolios and sections of Government. This is to ensure that they will be thoroughly versed in the operating procedures of Government and adequately prepared for assuming senior management positions.

MR. PRESIDENT: No supplementaries? We will move on to item 3 of our order paper today, Government Business. Bills, First Reading.

SECOND READING

(CONTINUATION OF DEBATE)

MR. PRESIDENT: Continuation of the debate on the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987. The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council.

MR. VASEEL B. JOHNSON: Mr. President, Honourable Members, when the adjournment came on Wednesday evening I was talking about agriculture, and the department, in particular, the farmers' cooperative, which was established in May of this year to further promote farming in the Cayman Islands.

I said that the cooperative would take responsibility for farmers' supplies such as feed and fertilizer which Government now stocks and provides. This is being done particularly because farmers have complained in the past about the services offered by Government. So we thought that if the cooperative was to be meaningful in its representation of farmers' interests in the Island, then they should also be responsible for supplying the things that farmers use mostly, such as feed and fertilizer.

Mr. President, if the cooperative fails in its effort to assist in the promotion of agriculture and to give farmers the exposure in their efforts as we would like to see then I think that Government's efforts would have been in vain. At that time it would be justified for Government to look at agriculture again and decide whether it should continue spending the level of funds now devoted to that department, or whether these funds should be used in some other service. But all things being equal, and with the support which I hope Government will give to the cooperative and their efforts, and to the farmers themselves, I am sure that their efforts will be successful. That is what we aim to do, to make it a successful venture.

In a recent United Nations report on the Cayman Islands, the subject of agriculture was mentioned. The United Nations paid particular compliments to the Cayman Islands for entering upon the promotion of agriculture. They went to the extent of encouraging the local Government to encourage and support this effort. They noted in the report that it should always be the aim of countries, and especially Third World countries, to reduce their dependence on foreign goods, especially agricultural produce. That is exactly what this Government embarked on doing in 1985 when Executive Council was asked to ratify a proposal from the Statfalls to establish a Farmers' Development Committee.

That proposal to Executive Council was not merely to see farming make some progress here, but the principle behind it was that the Government should put some effort into farming, so as to increase the productivity of agriculture in these islands, to avoid being totally dependent upon imported food. That was exactly what the United Nations reiterated in their report.

Mr. President, much has been said in this debate about the market, and it would appear to me that the Opposition had in mind to support agriculture, and at the same time was envious of the effort which this Government was putting into it. They even talked about prices for the market. Well, I do not go around asking for anything or for my name to be put on anything, but I know that the Member for East End who mentioned this built a little road in East End, and before it was finished he stuck his name on it.

The first Elected Member for the Lesser Islands asked if it would be possible to send our agronomist to Cayman Brac to look at the situation there to see whether any encouragement could be given to the promotion of agriculture. I would like to assure him that that will be done. In fact I had already discussed with him, a little while ago, that as soon as he settled here he should pay a visit to the Lesser Islands to see what was happening there. I know that agriculture there is quite difficult, especially when there is drought, but, nevertheless, now that we are opening up deep wells in Cayman Brac there may be an opportunity to also consider an irrigation system for the farmers.

Mr. President, I took note of comments made about the increase in mosquitoes this year. Of course I want to say that I, too, was concerned about the increase in mosquitoes and I began questioning the Mosquito Research and Control Unit about this to see what their views were. Most of the complaint came from areas like West End and North Side. That is largely because the programs of dykes has not yet been completed in those areas, so penetration of the dense mangrove forest is not like that on the western side of the Island. Nevertheless, I asked the Unit to advise the public right away of what was happening with the mosquito problem. A press release was issued by the Government Information Service. I heard comments here about the press release, as though it said nothing to the public. However, the mosquito problem here is something that all of us know about. Another, one of the things about the mosquitoes is that they are no respecters of persons.

Mr. President, regardless of what may be attempted to be said about the Mosquito Research and Control Unit's efforts to keep the island rid of mosquitoes, there will always be that problem. A problem like that which we encountered this year, unless of course, Government is willing and prepared to put adequate financial resources at the disposal of the Department, to improve their programs in research and control. My past experience is that year after year Mosquito Research and Control would ask for funds to do specialized improvements in the research programs, the control programs. This would always be treated in the category of ordinary expenditure, with cuts here and there. So the Unit was always limited with its financial resources. I dare say, Mr. President, that listening to some of the comments about the Unit and what was being asked for, almost suggested to me that those Members remembered little or did not remember anything about the problem of mosquitoes which this country faced years ago. When we complain about a service and what we are getting, we must also remember that we get what we pay for.

This year, the Mosquito Research and Control Unit had a number of problems. They had a new breed of mosquito which had to be investigated, and which required special attention. Most of all, they were faced, at times of the year, with really high tides. This was coupled with exceptionally heavy rains. Our average rainfall in this Island is something like 50 inches per annum. This year the rainfall to date far exceeds the average. Last year was a fairly good year as far as the mosquitoes were concerned, because the rainfall amounted to only about 40 inches. It was the lowest rainfall, I believe, recorded in the history of the Islands, as far back as records were kept.

Mr. President, research in the department covers a number of areas. Mosquitoes become immune to treatment after a certain time and so new insecticides and treatment have to replace the old ones and so the Unit has to spend time to deal with this. Then there is the dangerous disease carrying mosquito which must at all times be taken into consideration in the research programs. They have to be investigated on a continuing basis. We cannot let up on this, because it could be dangerous.

When we think about the very high proportion of land here in the Cayman Islands covered by mangrove swamp, it gives one some idea of the difficulty which the department has in monitoring mosquitoes in all areas of Grand Cayman. There is also a problem in Little Cayman, because, as Members are aware, there are large swamp areas there. However, the problem is not as great as it is here because the population is so small in Little Cayman.

Mr. President, I am sure that every one of us here realize the importance of that department. I think that we should at least once in every year dedicate a bit of time to think about the mosquito problem, and to cast our memory back years ago when the Island was riddled with mosquitoes. Without control, as we see it today, tourism and other facets of the country could never have thrived the way they have.

I will now go on to the Water Authority. I will not make very many comments about the Authority other than to say that I believe (and not because I am Chairman of the Authority) that the Authority is doing an exceptionally good job. It is headed by a Director who has a tremendous amount of interest in the work of that Authority. I just cannot understand a person who would want to say anything derogatory about the Authority or its head. I am sure that the country will be proud of the present projects that the Authority is undertaking - the West Bay Road sewerage scheme and the piped water system for George Town.

I would like to advise this Honourable House that before the end of this year parts of the sewerage works nearest to George Town will be commissioned and put into operation. In other words, sewage will be flowing through the lines to the processing site.

Mr. President, the Second Elected Member for George

Town expressed the wish that water would be distributed to the outskirts of George Town into the areas of Red Bay and Spotts - and other areas up along that road. Well, we heard so much complaining coming from the Opposition about the little money we were asking to extend the network of pipes in George Town to cover very important residential areas, and I am happy to say that that will be done. Water will go into Trade Road and into Tropical Gardens. It will go to the end of Walkers Road through Church Road and it will join on Fourth Church Street to make the circle. That is the present scheme for the first phase of the George Town water system.

The present view of Government is that if we start moving outside this scheduled area one will never tell where the lines will end up. It could even end up in Brackens. So we are adopting a policy that if the residents of any particular area would like water they will be asked to contribute to the capital costs of running the water there. I am happy to say that the people of Red Bay have now given Government the assurance that they will pay the capital costs of running water from the entrance into Tropical Gardens on to Red Bay Estate. The cost is tentatively estimated at some $150,000, and they are prepared to pay that. The matter has now gone to the Water Authority for consideration, and will eventually be ratified by Government. So any other areas which feel strongly about the need for water can perhaps follow that practice.

Mr. President, on now to Lands and Survey. That department was mentioned in the Budget Address and I would only like to make a few brief comments to say that the department is doing an excellent job. It is keeping abreast of the real estate and land speculation deals, and making a lot of revenue for Government. Earlier I mentioned that the estimate for Stamp Duty this year is some $8 million. That is a lot of money from Stamp Duty. Our Land Registry enjoys, in the Caribbean, a very excellent reputation. In fact it is used as the model for all other registries being created. It is almost the training centre for the rest of the Caribbean. Any Islands wanting to move on to land registration, with the system that we operate here, send staff to our Registry for training.

Going on to the Housing Development Corporation and the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board which were also mentioned in the Budget Address. The annual audited accounts for those two public corporations should shortly be laid on the table of this Honourable House, and at that time I hope, as in other reports, to give a general overview of the operations over the past financial year.

In the meantime, we are still endeavouring to satisfy applicants who apply for loans from those corporations. We are fortunate, occasionally, to make good loans. Other times we make loans and although complying strictly with the operating guidelines, where all the conditions must be complied with, we still find problems. Some of these loans eventually end up to be nothing but promises. Anyway, these corporations are catering to people who are going out, perhaps for the first time, to create small industries or build houses. We expect that sort of problem, they cannot all be good loans. We are trying our best.

As I mentioned somewhere in an earlier address, or at Question Time, the Housing Development Corporation's reserves funds are now nearing exhaustion, and so we must start shortly to try to negotiate with local commercial banks the possibility of raising new debenture loans, perhaps on slightly different terms and conditions from the original debenture issue.

Talking on now to my own Portfolio, I must say that the pressures of work has not eased any from the time I went there. It was all a rush - sometimes like a madhouse. But the staff are coping quite well with everything, in spite of the fact that they have to be off here, there and other places. My Principal Secretary, Mr. Keatney Speaks, was recently appointed Supervisor of Elections for the upcoming election in November 1988, a position he also held in the last election in 1984, and on Sunday last he left the Island for a three week visit to the Turks and Caicos Islands at the invitation of the Government there, and of course, by approval of the British Government and ourselves. He has gone to assist the Supervisor of Elections and the Government, and all others concerned, including the politicians, on the procedures in their forthcoming election. I think their Election Law is perhaps a copy of ours - a law which my Principal Secretary is now well acquainted with. So it would be natural for them to ask for his assistance.

Mr. President, in passing, I would like to mention (because I am a Government member on the Board of Directors of Caribbean Utilities Company Limited) that in their 1986-1987 report they mention (and this has been confirmed by Government) that they paid into Government a sum of $1,500,000, representing import duty on imported material and also representing licence fees. This is a source of new revenue which was a part of the new franchise granted to them last year. It is quite a bit of revenue and I thought that it was worthwhile mentioning it. I do so again because I am the Government representative on their Board of Directors.

Mr. President, among the many things we are doing in the Portfolio (and I am not going to mention everything, because a lot have been discussed as separate subjects already) I thought that I would mention to this Honourable House the concern over the growing number of tour and dive boats in the Islands, and the fact that the dive sites are being contacted by different groups. So it has become apparent that some form of control is necessary. You can understand the problem, Mr. President, because if we allow the number of tour and dive boats to increase without some form of control, in time to come there will be no sites for them to anchor and they will be in one another's way. The problem goes a little beyond that because quite a lot of foreign boats are moving in here as well.

A study team has been appointed by Government, comprising government and private sector members. That committee is to eventually, and as early as possible, recommend to Government forms of control by statutory means. We hope that after public acceptance of the decided measures they will come into effect at the earliest possible date. We hope that this will be in early 1988.

One of the prominent tourist attractions of these Islands is the beautiful reefs deemed to be one of the leading diving destinations anywhere. If we want to keep those reefs beautiful and attractive, we need to institute the sort of controls that will do this. We want to know, too, that Caymanians get their full share of what is out there, and not to allow that trade to be taken completely by outside people.

There were a number of things said about the Portfolio by the Member for East End, but I will not go over these again, because I think I have said enough.

Mr. President, we have now come to the last Budget Address of this current session, four of them in all. Two in 1975, one in 1986 and one now. The first one, in February 1983, I called our predecessors' budget, because it was only through the election of November 1984 that its presentation was delayed to the following meeting in February 1985. In the meantime, because of so many other urgent and pressing needs for our time, we did not have, even had we wished, sufficient time to go into the details of the budget. In any case, Mr. President, we were not going in there like a bull in a china shop to upset policies of the past Government, or to change things around.

In January of 1987 we went to East End and saw a huge civic centre, costing a lot of money, being built there. The foundation was just being poured. We did not do anything about it, other than to complete it. So that will give you an idea of what our attitude was. We were prepared to do what we thought was best for the country.

The next Budget was called the people's budget, simply because it was a serious budget. We needed money for the administration and decided, as a first and last effort, to put a tax package to the Assembly. Of course, the Opposition thought that they had us where the wool was short. They thought that they could use that to dismiss this Government. But nothing was so far from reality, for they were meddling with the people's budget. We were elected by the people to represent their interests in this Honourable House, and that we did at that time, and that we have done ever since. We have never put forward a budget to suit our own personal liking, or that of our friends or our relatives. It was always based on priorities and priorities as agreed by this Honourable House.

Mr. President, putting politics aside, we cannot but admit that much has been achieved in these Islands over the past two decades. I am not singling out any special administration. Much has been achieved in that all Caymanians should be justly proud of what they have today. However, the effort does not stop here because there is much yet to be achieved. So we should not engage ourselves in criticising or attempting to destroy the work of others, rather we should try to improve on what we have and continue to build.

Our fortunate position, our fortune, which we deem to have, all happened, Mr. President, because of well thought out policies of Governments; our endeavour to recruit the right technical skills and to employ good and strong management; the efforts of this Honourable Legislative Assembly, the Government and the Civil Service - and the result has been tremendous. We have an efficient Service, and a good infrastructure which cushions all development of the Islands today. What we have not got we are now building. These, with our natural attractions and strong financial position reflected in this Budget, a Budget which also carries reserves, have put the Cayman Islands, for its size and its population, unparalleled anywhere in the world.

Our enviable position at the present time should not be allowed to breed complacency, not in Government, the Legislative Assembly nor the private sector; instead, our position should endeavour to create in us an unrelenting pressure to continue to excel in all we do. While endeavouring to guard and defend for dear life the things that have taken so much of our efforts to build - something that we saw in the early stages when we embarked on building an economy for the people of these Islands so that they would not have to run the world to look for a livelihood. I remember the days when the economy was largely the earnings of seamen - men going to sea. I would see young couples getting married one day with the husband leaving the next. Sometimes it was a year or maybe two before he returned to his young wife. These are the things that inspired all of us to start building something to provide an income at home. Look at what we have today - Caymanians who have lived abroad for so long are coming back. They are leaving their jobs in many cases to come back home to be a part of the system. This is exactly what we saw in the early days, if indeed we were successful in doing what we set out to do. Every year a number of Caymanians are returning, and that is good.

Mr. President, before I sit down, let us say that we welcomed you here not long ago in the middle of the year. We welcomed you as the Governor of these Islands and as President of this Legislative Assembly. You have come to us, Sir, with a wealth of experience from the large world outside our shores and you have come into a blooming and booming Caymanian economy. The job you have undertaken here carries with it many responsibilities. So far, Mr. President, I cannot but say that you have excelled in patience, in dedication and in the ability to remain calm under strained circumstances. These qualities are virtues which form and mold men into great leaders. I would hope that at the end of your tour of duty in these Islands, you will leave without regret, taking with you your own self-earned trophy for leadership.

Mr. President, may I extend to you, Mrs. Scott and your dear family greetings of the coming festive season.

I support the Appropriation Bill, now in its Second Reading. Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Thank you for your very kind words. Perhaps we should now suspend for fifteen minutes.

AT 11:11 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:28 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

for West Bay.

Proceedings are resumed. The Third Elected Member

MRS. BAUNNE L. CARENE:

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, I would like at this time to continue the debate on the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987 as moved by the Budget Address which was presented by the Honourable First Official Member, the Financial Secretary on 13th November.

I would like to quote a Psalmic prayer as recorded in the Psalms as a preface to my contribution here today:

"Let the words of my mouth and the meditation of my heart be acceptable in thy sight, O Lord."

Mr. President, I wish to thank you for the opportunity of contributing to the debate on the Budget Address recently delivered by the Honourable First Official Member, the Financial Secretary. Without meaning to sound repetitious I wish at this time to congratulate the Honourable Member, his able Deputy and members of his staff, all Government Members, Principal Secretaries, Heads of Departments, and members of the Civil Service, for putting together such an upright, positive and sensible Budget Address, which I am sure only reflects the true picture of our country's present and projected financial position.

I must admit, Mr. President, that I expected an encouraging Budget Address after the end of this present Government's first three years in office, but to be honest, the financial picture far exceeds what I had expected. Congratulations are definitely in order. I am grateful to be a part of a Government which leads our country on such a satisfactory course. May I add, to God be the glory.

The Honourable Financial Secretary, at the beginning of his Address did at some length focus our attention on the uncertainty which surrounds as indicated by slow economic and troubled financial markets worldwide. In spite of all this, the Honourable Member could go on in the same breath to say that:

"The economy of the Cayman Islands has never, in real terms, been more active than it is now. There is no doubt that the great architect who created this world watches over us."

Now true, Mr. President. Now true.

I trust that each and every citizen of this country realises this, for in the final analysis, our way of saying thanks and showing our appreciation will be to use our resources of intellect, strength and wisdom to utilise these material blessings in ways which will be pleasing to Him and will bring glory to His name.

With a population of just over 24,000 people, we have a workforce of over 10,000 with our own Caymanian people representing some 74 per cent of this total workforce. Although domestic workers are not included in this figure, all things considered, this is a healthy employment situation. Although the Honourable Financial Secretary did not spare his edgewise and expletives in presenting certain statistics, I am sure he is simply reflecting the true picture when he reminds us that as we move in and around Grand Cayman we see such construction in progress, many tourists on our shores, such business activity, and a generally healthy economy responding to the demands both of residents and the international businessmen and tourist visitor.

It is unfortunate that certain members of this House seem to have had a rather mixed up three dimensional Picasso picture instead of a clearly defined Rembrandt when going through this Budget Address. I can attribute this undue criticism to perhaps one of three possibilities: (1) they need to see a doctor to have their heads examined; (2) they are totally confused with the figures and statistics as presented; or (3) they are attempting to mislead the public at large. I hope that the first possibility is not the case. I doubt that the second possibility is the problem. So I have decided that the third possibility applies. In my opinion, these Members are trying to mislead the public.

However, each of us should always remember that the average Guyanese is blessed with common sense, and that what has been reflected in the Budget Address, for the most part, is simply a reflection of what is clearly visible from day to day in our country, even by the average man on the street. Any attempt at this time to mislead the people of our country, Mr. President, is not only wasteful, it is futile.

Having witnessed an unhealthy political climate in this beloved country of ours in some recent years, I believe with all my heart that the majority of our people are grateful, and indeed relieved, to realize that the present Government consists of persons whose integrity, wisdom and dedication permit each citizen of this country to have a good feeling of security and peacefulness. I get the feeling of an almost serene calm when thinking of the changes which have taken place under Government's policies and priorities since the 1984 election.

To reflect for a short while on this country's political climate prior to the 1984 elections - which, if I may interject here, I am doing simply in an attempt to further clear the air regarding certain remarks and accusations made in this Honourable House over the last few days - I would take or touch briefly to the 1976 elections, in which I was a candidate, and on which subject I think I am capable of speaking.

The campaign during those elections revealed to me for the first time that within our country there were people seeking public office who had the capacity not just simply to try to manipulate the voting populace, but who would dare to go on public platforms and knowingly present facts and figures farthest from the truth. Mr. President, the one thing that bothered me most in listening to certain political platforms at that time was the fact that should such individuals be voted into office, it would be so difficult to trust them.

There were many things which happened during that election campaign which caused great concern. There were allegations of corruption which included, amongst other things ...

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry. I will have to interrupt you for a moment. I think that you are straying a bit beyond the bounds of the Budget. We have all heard a good deal of history in the last few days, and you are entirely entitled to cover the same ground, but I think we must try to control ourselves a bit.

MRS. LAVONNE L. CORRETT: I thank you, Mr. President. But if I may bring this to your attention, this is the last Budget Address in which I will be privileged to be involved before the 1988 elections. I have not here and I have heard a number of things - believe me, I do not want to fire anyone with what I have to say, but I do not wish the public of the Guyana Islands to forget what we just came out of.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think that is entirely fair - that is entirely proper. I think you have understood what I said about the bounds of the discussion. Thank you.

MRS. LAVONNE L. CORRETT: Thank you very much. I shall endeavour to stay within the limits to which I am permitted.

Mr. President, what I am saying here - although these were allegations (and I emphasise, allegations) - is that there is a lot of gossip, much of which is not true, but it was a very unhealthy political climate at that time.

During that election campaign there were allegations of big gifts, trucks and cars being given. There were serious telephone and letter threats. There were even allegations of secret meetings with persons from overseas who participated in witchcraft and obeah. Certain things took place at that time which perhaps would be better not repeated at this time because it would touch some people personally, and I would restrain myself in bringing these to the House.

The campaign was one thing. The results were not only surprising, they were shocking. The morning following that election in 1976 was as though a dark cloud hung over the country. Perhaps it was a premonition of things to come, because for the next four years this country saw some drastic changes, and not all, as should I say few, were for the better. In my opinion, we made loads of money and we spent loads of it; and blinded by this were many of our people who could not see beyond the money that was being made and the prosperity that was apparently existing in the country at the time. But there were others who feared the policies and practices of the Government of the day.

Some 1980, I, for one, decided that I did not want to stand as a candidate at that time, but I worked as hard as I possibly could to get in our district the gentleman who is now the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council and his team, elected. Although disappointed at the outcome, we were nevertheless deeply grateful that this gentleman was successful, albeit by the skin of his teeth. The citizens of West Bay were, however, grateful for this lone voice crying in the wilderness, and despite his not being elected to Executive Council, we were at least comforted by the fact that he was there to observe something of what was taking place in the Government.

Mr. President, I am still on the Budget Address. I want to clear the air regarding certain remarks which were made in this House.

I have no doubt that certain Members of that Government could, if they had been given the opportunity to do so, have done a better job in the running of this country than was done in 1980-1981, but we had a situation where one individual almost always called the shots. The Leader of Government was, it is allowed, not ever to be questioned in his decisions. Mr. President, in my opinion we were as close to dictatorship as I would ever want this country to come. In a country which hitherto had enjoyed democratic freedoms, not least of which was the freedom of speech, we found ourselves facing a situation whereby if one dared to express an opinion regarding Government or question an action taken by Government, especially if it took place in a certain portfolio, it was not unusual to find oneself without a job on returning to work the following morning.

In a country where we prided ourselves on honesty, there were continual allegations being made of corruption in high places. In a country where we prided ourselves on fairness, there were allegations of certain wealthy foreigners coming to this country who were allowed to obtain Caymanian status without complying with all the necessary requirements, while other applicants who were eligible for such status simply had their Caymanian Protection Board approvals filed away.

In a country where we pride ourselves in Cayman being first and foremost for Caymanians, there were allegations of key positions being offered to certain foreigners who had no greater experience in such professions than did certain Caymanians already within companies. But, Mr. President, with a work permit hanging over one's head, manipulation and dictatorial practices were less difficult to carry out. In a country where we prided ourselves on treating our neighbour as ourselves, we heard of nepotism running rampant, appointments with very responsible positions being given to persons not capable of filling them properly.

In a country which prides itself on keeping law and order, there were allegations regarding the close bonds of friendship which existed between alleged drug dealers and certain individuals in high places. Mr. President, in a country which prided itself on frugality and prudent spending, there were allegations of certain individuals in New York and elsewhere receiving exorbitant salaries and allowances, some allowances of which even included reimbursement for luxuries.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think I must interrupt you. I appreciate that you are responding to statements made by a Member who spoke earlier about dictatorship and oppression, and I think it is perfectly reasonable that you should so reply, but I think perhaps you have said enough on that subject.

MS. DAPHNE L. ORRENT: Thank you, Mr. President, enough said. In fact, I had just gotten to the end of it.

Thank God that such a dark period is in the past. However, we must never forget such a period. Should we dare to forget, history could repeat itself. Vigilance, fortitude and faith are necessary ingredients in preserving this beloved country and its glorious heritage for our children and grandchildren and those who may follow. I am not digging up dead bodies or skeletons, Mr. President, in fact it would be good if I could let bygones be bygones. But let us reflect, an ugly past must never be forgotten because it must never be repeated.

Mr. President, with a sense of gratitude and relief, I take you to the 1984 elections. The Caymanian people had determined within themselves that enough was enough. In fact, as my 86 year old grandfather tells me, too much of anything is good for nothing. And believe me when I tell you that as the sun arose that lovely morning on our shores in November 1984 we were still tallying votes in West Bay. Mr. President, I need you to bear with me now while I tell you the good side of the story. I still have to write a book on this subject, because I think it is only the birth of my children that gave me a greater sense of joy and satisfaction than the election in 1984. For rare reasons then one.

As I mentioned, when the sun rose that morning, we were still tallying votes in West Bay. This time we ensured that every 'X' was crossed and every '1' dotted on those ballot sheets. There had been far too many questions in prior elections. We knew our team had won, but we were pleased just to sit a little longer and savour the feeling of victory, so we did not rush those last few votes. However, that feeling was just a drop in the bucket compared to what was to be, for lingering just outside that town hall (and I am talking about West Bay, I did not have anything to do with the other districts), as peaceful and as quiet as could be after an all night vigil, was a group of people whose ears had been tuned to Radio Cayman all night. Thus they, too, were sharing the feelings which we were enjoying inside that town hall. As daylight broke, I dared to open the louvers and look outside. And I proudly gave a sign of victory. The cry that rose to the heavens that morning would have been sufficient for anyone to have rejoiced, even though that campaign was tough. But, Mr. President, we had teamwork.

Carrying on - and I thank you for your patience - our very faithful and efficient election officers joined us for breakfast. But few of us were hungry, some for one reason, of course, Mr. President, and some candidates for another. Shortly after we were through, the first of many snorts of victory permeated that compound, and as we looked out the windows, the first impression I got was that that solid mass of people made up of ages from one to 80 was moving toward us like a wave in the ocean. I recall saying to myself that those wonderful people, after having elated us, were going to squeeze us to death. Anyway, because everyone was trying to get to us at the same time, after having saved one older member from being squeezed to death, I then had to convince our supporters not to raise me in the air, because I was not wearing the same attire as my two colleagues. But I promise you next election, I am going to be appropriately dressed.

Someone was asked where the Spex Lion and its supporters were. So someone shouted, 'They just joined in with us'. So there we were. We went to our campaign headquarters and celebrated there for a while. From there we went to Mr. Benson's home and we had a dinner of dinners. I saw newspapers dancing with 60 year olds and it was a holiday that was not supposed to be a holiday. It was a real celebration.

Just we forget that too, and more importantly, lest you think that I have totally forgotten the Budget Address, I shall carry on with some of the resultant positive effects of that election.

Trust and freedom, West Bay was once again ably represented, and especially we were pleased to have Mr. Benson Chack's elected to a seat in Executive Council. That representation stood good not only for West Bay, but for the entire Cayman Islands. The people of West Bay have not yet lost sight of the fact that this gentleman is one of the greatest statesmen these Islands have yet produced. He is dearly loved and highly respected in that District, and as far as this Member is concerned, he could stand for President of the United States or Prime Minister of Great Britain any day. But I am glad he is here.

Random re, Mr. President, if I am being slightly less modest than usual in the following remark, but I have to confess that I am so proud and thankful that both the Honourable First Official Member and the Honourable First Elected Member of Council are from West Bay, and let me again add that the people of West Bay are no less proud. Believe me when I say I am truly proud of every Member of Executive Council, both Official and Elected, and I want to take this opportunity to thank them for the course in which they are steering this Government. I thank you.

Believe it or not, I am leading up to the meat of the matter of my Budget contribution, and having said that, would like to move on to the financial sector, which, as all Members know, is one of the main pillars of our economy.

Following the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, I am pleased to see that despite strong competition from other countries, 1986 has proven to be another good year for the banking and trust industry, and that this trend has continued into 1987. It is noted that several of the 400 licences, at the end of 1981, were cancelled. However, it is heartening that no such cancellations were indicated as having been made due to any dissatisfaction with banking standards in the Cayman Islands.

Further, Mr. President, I am pleased that nevertheless there has been a healthy growth during the current year, having reached the milestone of 500 banks with current licences, with an anticipated increase to 615 banks by the year's end.

In spite of the Treaty, those 20 of the world's 25 largest banks which were with us last year are still with us. In addition, I note that we have attracted a number of the next 25 largest banks, bringing total of 42 of the world's largest banks, a record surpassed perhaps only by London and New York. It must be admitted by friend and foe alike that this Government must be doing something right. I note the Financial Secretary's comments that the key factors for this healthy growth are the high reputation the Islands have achieved, the stable atmosphere created by this Government, and the visible and vocal efforts of this Government to ensure that only the most reputable of business comes to our Islands.

Since teamwork is a key element in appealing to the worldwide banking fraternity, I wish too to congratulate those business sectors, which include resident banks, accountants, lawyers and the Bank Inspector's team for their valuable contribution in attracting licensed banks here from 46 countries of the world. This growth in the number of banks licensed is also evident in the volume of business carried on in the books of the banks which, at the end of 1986, showed an increase of 15.7 per cent over the 1985 figures for a total of some $302.05 billion. As the Financial Secretary mentioned, whichever yardstick is used to measure such status, Forbes magazine considers that the Cayman Islands are likely to be the world's largest offshore financial centre. While enjoying such status, I am sure we shall ensure that the same high standards shall continue in the banking industry.

It bothers me that any Member could stand in this House and criticise - and more so, jeopardise - an industry which is so important and which carries on business in such a highly reputable manner. In a world of less settled conditions existing in other financial centres, which no doubt has attracted more business to our Islands, we cannot afford to become lethargical or complacent, especially when considering that in monetary terms this sector contributed some $54.5 million to our economy in 1986 - much of this expenditure having been paid in salaries and wages to our local workforce of almost 1000 employees in the banking and trust sectors. 50 per cent of whom are Caymanian. I am pleased to see that a number of them are holding key positions.

I trust, Mr. President, that every opportunity of promoting qualified Caymanians will continually be evident. Although we cannot lose sight of the fact that only the best can be placed in key positions in the financial community, I trust that an opportunity, as I mentioned, will be overlooked as placing qualified Caymanians in these key positions.

Turning to insurance, I am so pleased that the word of caution expressed by the Honourable Financial Secretary last year in respect of recent legislation in the United States has had no adverse effect on our insurance industry, and that a good number of licences are still being received. With the formation of the Life Underwriters' Association of Cayman and its adherence to high standards in the industry, I have no doubt that we should be able to attract our fair share of business in this area, both from the United States and from the rest of the world.

I wish also to take this time to congratulate those Caymanians who have recently qualified themselves in order to hold important positions in the insurance industry, and I wish them all successful careers.

I wish to congratulate the Cayman Islands Currency Board on the lovely $50 note now in circulation, and I am sure it will be much more readily received than was the $40 note, although I am glad to see that this has now become a collector's item. I note also with pleasure the healthy operating surplus which was transferred to Government's general reserve.

On the Company's registration section, Mr. President, the computerised system must be a welcome addition, and I am pleased that this is already now in use, especially in keeping abreast with those companies which need to be struck off, because as all of us here are aware that was quite a headache.

Back to the effects of the Treaty. I note that there has been no overall adverse effect on company registration and revenue derived therefrom, and that those companies now being registered in the Islands are of a better quality and of more sound financial standing than those we attracted in the past. At the same time we enjoyed a healthy increase over a comparable period in 1987 with revenues collected being some 10,047 of the $6.5 million budgeted. We are now attracting only reputable companies to our shores; companies and individuals who have no problem in drawing funds on United States' banks. Those persons and companies who wish to do business in a questionable fashion have to look elsewhere to conduct their business.

I was pleased to note the list recently published by the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board detailing the areas of greatest manpower needs for the Islands. As medical and educational fields are being given priority in respect to scholarships granted, it is hoped that we might find more of our young people attracted to both these important fields. I feel that the Board has very wisely selected the most important areas of training for our country. Included are elementary and secondary education, computer sciences, accounting, nursing and construction engineering.

Mr. President, the legal profession has recently been enriched by the successful completion of five of our local young people who have been called to the Bar. While I take note that three of the five are female attorneys at law, two of whom graduated with distinction, I offer my sincere congratulations to all of them. I am sure that they will join with other members of the legal profession in continuing to provide the type of services so vital to a sound financial centre.

I am pleased to note the new criteria for admission to the Law School, and also to note that this does not preclude students who graduated in 1987, from being admitted if they so choose.

Standing alongside our legal firms are the accounting firms which have, as mentioned by the Honourable Financial Secretary, continued to add to our credibility as an international financial centre. I am pleased to offer my congratulations, again, to the number of young Caymanians who are now professionally qualified and working in the accounting firms. Any criticism or allegations of unscrupulous business practices on the part of the accounting firms in this country, in my opinion, is utterly ridiculous and unfounded.

Tourism, as all of us are aware, is one of the major pillars of our economy, and it is gratifying to note that significant growth has been experienced in this sector during 1987. I congratulate the Department of Tourism, Cayman Airways and those in the private sector, who, through effective marketing strategies, promotions and advertising campaigns, have contributed to this growth. I also wish to congratulate our local Caymanians, those who work in the taxi service, hotels and condominiums, restaurants, dive operations, freeport facilities, or within any other areas catering to the tourist industry; not least of which the men and women on the street who have shown their friendliness, honesty and dedication to the visitor to these Islands.

Mr. President, while we can never be complacent, I believe that all our Caymanian people fully recognise the vital importance of tourism to our country, and will seek always to maintain those unique qualities found only in the Cayman Islands and her people. Well, friendliness here is just our way of life so spread a smile today, as is so aptly put across in Radio Cayman by Mr. Alison Roberts, from time to time.

Having mentioned Radio Cayman, I note with relief that following a Private Member's Motion brought to this House, and passed, there are now no advertisements for liquor or cigarettes on the air. That airtime is now used in promoting our use of drugs and in other more worthwhile advertisement time. The dedicated Director of Broadcasting and his staff are to be congratulated for doing a fine job.

I want to turn now to Health, Education and Social Services.

Mr. President, I wish to congratulate the new students who graduated from our Cayman Islands High School this year and to those who achieved exceptionally high passes. I do not forget those who perhaps did not achieve high passes, but they did their best. I congratulate every child who did his or her best to achieve. I also wish to take this time to offer my congratulations to the students who graduated from Triple C and Wesleyan Christian Academy. As many of us are aware, Triple C is a private Christian high school, but it has contributed to this country in no small way by some of the fine young men and women who are taking their place in our society today, many of whom have gone abroad to further their education in reputable educational facilities overseas. Joining them in the last two years is Wesleyan Christian Academy in West Bay, which started, not too many years ago with secondary education, moving on into the high school system, and of their graduates so far, two have been accepted in reputable educational facilities overseas. I wish to offer my congratulations to these students as well.

I wish to thank, not only the high schools, but the primary schools who contribute so much to a child's education in this country, even the pre-schools, where a child gets his first taste of education. There are very very dedicated persons in these fields Mr. President. One has to be dedicated because teaching is like nursing or working as a doctor. If you do not really love the job, and enjoy it, you should not be in it, because it takes a special something to work in either of these fields. So I sincerely wish to congratulate those teachers and all concerned for the fine job that has been done in the area of education, especially over this last year. I feel that the Member, the Department of Education and the Portfolio is doing its best to see that education in this country is not taken for granted.

We do have a situation where there is a lot of employment in our country, and there is a tendency amongst some of our young people to take education for granted - simply because they feel that by going out there they will find work. But for some reason, I get the feeling that that trend is now less strong than it was, and that young people are beginning to recognise that to achieve and to find the top positions in our country today requires a education and commitment to gaining an education of top quality. I believe that such an education to the High School level is available here, and, as well as going on to the Community College, I believe there is such that young people can go on to in furthering their education. I think the Community College is here in the right place at the right time, and that this country is ripe for such a facility. It caters to the individual who perhaps, for one reason or another, did not make those grades in High School which he or she should have, and even if one is a bit on in years, such past the teenage years, the opportunity is there to excel.

Coming up on the eve of another graduation ceremony, Mr. President, is the International College of the Cayman Islands. This is a very small college, and it has been here for some years. But I must confess that I have been impressed with a number of the students who have graduated from that institution. I would wish to congratulate the faculty and staff of that school for continuing to offer this educational opportunity to students who perhaps otherwise would not be able to go overseas and gain what they can gain from OCEL.

Having said that, there are a few areas - I will be extremely careful of what I am going to say here. We have sometimes overlooked certain educational facilities here, not least of which is the Lighthouse School and, more recently, the Sunrise Centre. Mr. President, I was grateful, and in fact, overjoyed, in looking at the newspaper this week to see that a number of the students from the Lighthouse School are now finding themselves in employment within our island, some in the tourism industry and some in other areas.

To bring you into the picture a little in what exactly was happening, I remember some years ago that the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council had this dream, or this vision. I should say, of seeing the handicapped people in our country with more readily accepted, and that they should be equipped to find their place within our society. Some years ago the handicapped of our country were the individuals who were left at home. Many of them hardly learned to speak well. They were not brought into society as being a part of it, but sort of pushed to the side. Many of them had parents and families who took extra good care of them, but there were many things lacking.

This dream of the Honourable First Elected Member who, together with certain other individuals, started the Lighthouse School in Bodden Bay. Something I think that will always stand to his credit as being one of the finest steps he has taken as an Elected Member in this country. Mr. President, we now have students who have finished in the Lighthouse School and, as I said, I was overjoyed to see the number of them who have now found their place in the working community in Cayman. I think that the Portfolio, the staff of both the school and the Sunrise Centre are to be congratulated. Those students are not only involved now in working, but we will find them at many of the social functions in the Islands, whether at the Marginal Theatre or other functions, and these students are made to feel that they are an integral part of our community. I want to wholeheartedly congratulate those persons involved in the day to day and overall equipping of these young people to fill their place within our society.

Having said that, I wish to bring to the attention of this House a few things that have bothered me from time to time within the school systems of our Islands. Mr. President, the Bible tells us that we should not spare the rod and spoil the child. It also says that we should train a child in the way to go. I would like to emphasise that word 'child'. In our school system, and I have given this particular subject not only thought, but prayer, and have discussed it with a number of individuals whom I thought could give me a fairly overall picture of what they felt would be correct in our society. But it is my firm opinion that a student who has reached his teenage years is not not a child.

A 15 year old is a young man or woman. The idea that a teenager of 16 years can be placed in a room and strapped with a belt bothers me. Not that they should not be disciplined, Mr. President, but the fact is that such mode of discipline is perhaps ineffective. Discipline is not what is done to a child, but what is done for the child. If a 15 or 16 year old young man or woman has, for whatever reason, committed an infraction in the school, been disobedient or rude, ill-mannered or missed school, there have to be ways of disciplining without strapping. I think that it is futile and do not think that it helps a child at that age.

When a young child is spanked, hurt or belted - and I am not talking now about child abuse, I am talking about severe enough punishment that he will not forget it. I can see that going on into perhaps even the Middle School. But when a child reaches High School age, it is difficult for me to comprehend that strapping is the type of discipline that that child should undergo.

Mr. President, it has bothered me for some time, but last year there (and I hope I can phrase this so that I do not ... because I am sure there is more than one individual) it was brought to my attention that there was an infraction against a young 16 year old man in the school. It was not anything serious, mind you, but when I see, serious I hear talking that would prove detrimental or that would be a threat to any particular individual in the school, but nevertheless it was an infraction. He had been disciplined once, twice, and then he was to be disciplined a third time. He not a hefty young man, rather slim, easy. But the young man continually denied that he should have been strapped the third time. He left the school and he went home. The mother called and discussed this with the teacher who said the young man would not return to school unless he was willing to take the strapping. The child said that he did not deserve the strapping, and so he did not go back. Well, the child was not permitted to graduate, because, of course, he did not go back for the strapping.

In addition to that, Mr. President, I mentioned a Judication and a commitment by teachers. I do not wish to bring out isolated cases, but in the school system, every single child is important. Everyone. The particular case I am using is only an example. I am not singling out one case above others, because it has happened time and again. But in this particular case, can you imagine a senior member of staff (recognising that he has the odds against the child) placing a hand on the shoulder of that child saying, 'You missed school again yesterday. I am going to see to it that you do not wear that cap and gown.' The child is disturbed and tells a friend. The second time it happens, the child is in the company of his friend. Because the child has missed another day, that same member of staff says, 'I am going to see to it that you do not wear that cap and gown because you are missing too many days.' Mr. President, this is not the type of dedication that I see in a teacher. He are to do everything possible to see that a child, especially one with the odds against him, gets the benefit of everything which that individual teacher can give him. Mr. President, the child was not permitted to graduate.

Mr. President, there is also a policy, a system in the school, whereby if a child commits an offence and is brought to the courts, he is, in addition, also punished by the school by not being permitted to graduate. Mind you, there are certain cases which are not necessarily overlooked, but which not considered to be serious enough, such as, say, riding a bicycle without a light. Unless that particular offence has been committed against someone, and injures him or threatens life, or is of a very serious nature, I feel that the system in that school that recognising the individual's right to get an education and to graduate so well. What I am saying is that after 15 years or 16 years, 14 years in some cases, a young person goes through a school system and in some cases commits an offence which sometimes is through no fault of his own or her own, and I think that school has to isolate that case and take it on the particular offence.

Mr. President, another system or policy of the school is that a child is not informed until a few weeks before examination time that he or she will not be participating in the graduation ceremonies. The parent is sent a letter, but the child is not made aware of this because it is felt that if he or she knew that they may not be permitted to be involved in the graduation ceremony, then he or she might not commit or dedicate themselves to their studies as they ought. That is a point to be borne in mind. But in addition to that, what happens to a child who goes through his or her school year thinking that he or she is going to participate in the graduation ceremony, and two weeks prior to those crucial final examinations, the parent receives a letter to say that they are not going to participate? To have this hanging over their head two weeks before those crucial final examinations, is that not sufficient reason for a child to be hindered in what otherwise might be a healthy examination result?

Mr. President, I believe that system must be looked into. Two hundred to three hundred children graduating is fine, but every single individual should be given equal opportunity. If there is not a pattern - and I repeat this - if there is not a pattern of rude behaviour in the child, then a child should not be precluded from being a part of a graduation ceremony. If a child continues to show that he or she is ignoring the school, its policies, its rules, or its regulations, then I can see where that child ought to be made aware so that he may recognise what is happening and know what is going on, and that he or she will be precluded from an examination. But when a child who has given no problem in school, no problem at home, or no problem in his or her community, commits an infraction for which he has to appear before the court, that school should look at that child in the light of his overall behaviour and his behavioural patterns year after year and his records from previous schools, and in that light consider whether that child should or should not graduate.

Mr. President, I'm not finished, but if you would give me just a few minutes, I will close off this particular aspect of my debate.

Take a child, Mr. President, who for three years, attends school every single day - not three months, not a year, but three years - and for whatever reason that child has to leave school during the day (one half day in three years), he is precluded from enjoying a perfect attendance record. Mind you, that is even after the school determines that the young man was not guilty in the first place. It does not matter whose child he or she is - whether he belongs to a prominent member of the community or whether he or she belongs to somebody else - the child must be looked upon as a single individual, and his overall pattern of behaviour taken into account. For someone in that school who sees 200, 300, or 400 children graduate, it may not be anything serious. But for that one child who has only one opportunity to graduate from a high school, it poses a serious question mark in the mind of that individual. I mean, we are living in the Cayman Islands, and this has hitherto not been the case. I think that the policies of that school - and I am speaking of the Cayman Islands High School - must be looked into. It puzzles me for we have some dedicated people in that school whom I highly respect - the headmaster, and many of those teachers - but it puzzles me that there are teachers who come and go in that school who never even seem to get close to their students. I know of some who have been at that school for years, and every student who mentions certain individuals names, mention them with a respect and a closeness and a fondness for the teacher. You will hear anyone mentioning about Mr. Eastman - he is the greatest.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, you must not mention individual names.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRERTI: I am sorry. You will hear that mention certain names and I am talking about a number of individuals. These students are close to their teachers. But there are others who do not even go up to and around the students during a lunch break to get close to the children. This is a part of being a teacher.

Mr. President, I am thinking now of a certain child who is not getting along so well with a teacher - I am singling this out just as an example. I do not want to sound petty, but the child is not getting on well with the teacher. For some reason, they just do not tick. So the child wanders and asks the parent what she can do, because she cannot seem to get this teacher to like her. So they go on vacation and she decides to buy the teacher a gift. So she takes two gifts. She gives one to one teacher and one to the other. The one teacher opens it, Mr. President, and is ever so excited that that child remembered her on vacation and brought her a gift. The other teacher put it on her desk. It was there the next morning, and the next and the next, unopened. For three weeks that little gift remained in that desk, unopened, for whatever reason. Things like this bother a child. As a teacher it is second only to being a parent, and you have to be dedicated. In this country, the children of the Cayman Islands are used to a certain level of friendship and a keen, close relationship between teacher and student.

MR. PRESIDENT: Might we break there?

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRERTI: That will be fine, thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT: We will suspend until 2:15 p.m.

AT 2:15 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:15 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are resumed. The Third Elected Member for West Bay, please.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRERTI: Thank you, Mr. President.

Continuing with my debate, Sir, regarding certain policies within the school system, I would like to reiterate that it is not the preclusion from graduating from the school that I was basically speaking of, but rather it is the participation in the graduation ceremony, which, although not the most important factor to be considered, within every teenager's life it is an important occasion. This was the reason why I felt that what was mentioned earlier in my debate was of grave concern to me, because it involved the individual.

Mr. President, continuing with that particular subject, I am at times dismayed that the profession of teaching does not seem to attract as many Caymanians as I would hope to see. I have sometimes wondered about this, and in checking through salary scales one will find that teachers seem to be as well paid as other members of the Civil Service falling within that level of their profession. I would suggest that a second look needs to be given to the benefits that are paid to teachers, both local and expatriate.

Years ago when we had requisites (and certainly we were less affluent, less prosperous and so on), Government had to almost go out of the way to attract the type of teacher we wanted here. I think in many instances, what we see today is a continuation of those benefits which are meant to attract the expatriate teacher coming here. I do not for taking away from those benefits. I do not. The only thing I wish to point out is that whether it is an expatriate or a local living in this country today he is either paying rent or a mortgage, and the same cost of living expense applies to a local as much as it does an expatriate.

Being a non-Caymanian does not mean that you are spending more money to live here today than it does a local Caymanian. I feel that a serious look must be placed on the benefits paid to expatriates. When a local Caymanian teacher sees the difference between what an expatriate and himself can place in a bank account at the end of the month, does this in itself not prove to be a bit discouraging? This may be one of the factors why the particular field does not prove to be as attractive as it should.

I realize, Mr. President, that in looking at a particular sector of the Civil Service consideration would have to be given to all other areas of the Service as well. So to single out teachers from other areas of the Service may present a problem. However, I feel that somehow we can find a middle ground to solve what I consider a problem and something which discourages the local graduate from pursuing this particular profession.

In addition to that, I feel that continuity is very important in a school system. If locals can be encouraged and can see the benefits that would be derived by taking up a teaching profession, I feel that that continuity, of locals being within the system, will prove an additional benefit in that children are better overall while in school.

Mr. President, as I mentioned earlier, Caymanians are a unique people. It is not any and everyone who comes here who automatically fits in with the way we are. But I think over a period of time there should be seen to be that gradual fitting in to the Caymanian society; and not in trying to win over the Caymanian to the expatriate's way of life, but such the other way around that the expatriate fits in with the Caymanian's way of life. I think if we can do more of this within the school system, the rapport between student and teacher is going to improve. I certainly cannot see it having any adverse effect upon that particular association.

I want to emphasize that I have known of parents who have been told that their children, at a certain school, could not undertake the 'O' level examinations. The parents insisted that from what they knew of their child, the child should be allowed to take the examinations. Now at that same bit of coaxing and explaining for those who were in charge at the school to agree for this child to take the examinations. I know in one particular case where a child passed, I think, four 'O' levels even though the parents were advised that the child was not capable of passing 'O' level examinations and should therefore be slated for the CSE examinations.

Mr. President, no matter who a teacher is and no matter what the system may consist of, one must consider the parents. They should know the parents, their level of intelligence and what they can contribute or explain to a teacher about their child. Any parents with two pennies worth of sense would not want to know that their child took an examination and failed it when he could have taken another examination and perhaps have passed it. Stripping all these things together, not least of which is the level of intelligence of the parents who know what their child is capable of doing, I think this ought to be taken into consideration when children are slated for examinations. I am of the opinion that there are students at the High School who should be doing 'O' level examinations and they are not being permitted to do so.

I need to correct myself. I think, in saying rapport between student and teacher. (INAUDIBLE). Yes, thank you.

Mr. President, each child is an individual who will contribute to these Islands' future. Each child must be considered as an individual. I am pleased about the percentage of passes, as explained in the Headmaster's report recently, and I earlier on offered my congratulations. However, we need also to look overall - not at the percentages of passes of those students who took the 'O' level examinations, but the percentage in comparison to the total number of children in the school. And I am convinced that this is not going to be any outstanding percentage if it is taken in that context. I am convinced, as I mentioned, that a more careful look must be given to students who are permitted to take their 'O' level examinations. It cannot just be said out by saying that based on such and such one must take CSE examinations. I realize this plays an important part, but on the other hand when decisions as this are made I believe that often they are not gone into as thoroughly as they should.

Now, Mr. President, I will only touch upon this because it sort of relates to me in one way or another, but mention was made of the remarks of the Headmaster and the Cayman parents. I was at the graduation ceremony, Sir, and it is my distinct opinion that the Principal just probably had no intention of belittling our local dialect or accent or whatever. I think it was just an unfortunate situation. However, on the other hand, let me make it abundantly clear that I believe that the Caymanian's way of speaking, whether it is a bit of a sing-song, or whatever, should certainly not be discouraged in any way. In fact, Mr. President, I think it was here in this House, sometime in the 1970's, that there was a stage character who tried to reintroduce that particular way of speaking. We call it Cayman talk. But a Member of this House actually said that he felt it was going to have a detrimental effect on the English language within the High School. I say now what I said when that it is in our bones and blood and every other part of us, and no one can come and say at this late stage in the game that we have to change it. That is why back in the 1970's, Mr. President, the stage role of 'Aunt Susie' came into prominence. It was accepted by the children and older people, and Caymanians have to stick to their identity. In fact I am a little surprised at times when I go on Cayman Airways and hear a totally foreign accent on our local airline. I think I would like to say at this time that the stewardesses and others on that plane do not need to forget that there are quite a number of Caymanians on there as well.

MR. PRESIDENT: I really do not think you should start to talk about other people's languages.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRITT: Thank you, Sir. Only to say that it is a sweet way of talking. There is nothing wrong with it, so I hope that the impression I got was the correct impression as far as the Headmaster's address that evening is concerned.

As I mentioned, I have the highest regard for the educational system. I think a great job has been done. I hear that the remarks I made and the points I tried to get across are taken on the vein in which I tried to deliver them. I feel that great emphasis is placed on education in this country, but I do not want it ever to be forgotten that each child is an individual unto himself, and each child must be looked upon in that light. I do not think it should be necessary for a parent to have to go up to the school and insist that a child be allowed to enter the Sixth Form if a child has the requisite number of 'O' levels. It does not matter how many seats are there, even if they have to build a second storey in which to place the children. We can vote money for other things; I think we can do that. And it is a good thing when you find you are running out of space in the 'A' level section, or the Sixth Form, for students. I do not think the idea that there are insufficient seats should ever be mentioned. I would hope that in this isolated incident, that that does not ever happen again.

In speaking on that subject, we were privileged some years ago to have a certain individual in the High School who brought to the forefront the performing arts, drama, choir, and you name it. There was very little activity in those areas and that particular gentleman worked very hard to see drama come of age in the High School. He later left the school and got into the performing arts locally, and it is a well known fact that through his efforts, dedication and determination, the Marquill Theatre is where it is today.

We continue to give our grateful thanks to the lady who so generously donated funds for that centre. That is in place and we cannot thank her enough. I am pleased that this Government and her Majesty the Queen saw fit to bestow upon her, only recently, the title of CBE, and I am grateful for that. But from this forum, I would like to say that, in addition to that lady's generosity, it was through the dedication of the artistic director that we are where we are today in the performing arts in the Cayman Islands. Not only was that gentleman interested in seeing it here, but many times he insisted that it was the local people who should be participating in whatever was performed at that theatre.

Of late, I have read in the paper of certain decisions which were taken, and I would hope that the Caymanian public does not ever forget that prior to the completion of the Marquill Centre, the dedication and work of this gentleman was very well known, and we heard nothing of a dismissal. The theatre is now in place and working well; props are there, lights are up and everything is functioning. And now the individual is seen to not be needed. I had some questions to ask about it and I was told he is not good on accounts. Mr. President, I never ever heard that the man was trained to be an accountant, but as an artistic director he is probably one of the best anywhere. He is tough and hard and straightforward, but any good producer has to be somebody who can get out of his seat everything that they have within themselves. Cecil B. DeMille, in Hollywood, is supposed to be one of the hardest directors ever. I think it was he who produced 'Gone with the Wind', and that is still going strong. So what I am saying is that I dislike the idea of people being used until it is found that the hard work is done, and somebody else comes in to reap the benefits. At that High School, and outside the High School, this gentleman put his best into the performing arts in this country, and the people of the Cayman Islands should not ever forget it.

Mr. President, I will go on to say that there are few people who come to this country who get involved in every way, shape and form to come to the public's attention so as to gain Caymanian status. There are those who will do just about anything to undermine a certain individual or individuals so that they can come to the forefront for the Caymanian people to welcome them as being one of us. But in my estimation, this gentleman should be recognised for his contribution to this country.

MR. PRESIDENT: I do think we are getting a little way away from the Budget, although I am sure the Financial Secretary will be pleased to have been quite closely, I think almost closely, compared with Cecil B. DeMille.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRITT: Thank you, Mr. President.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: I am sorry, Mr. President, she was not comparing me to Cecil B. DeMille. But I was amused by the movie she quoted, 'Gone with the Wind'.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I was only trying to show that the substance was something to do with the Budget, which is quite a production, that was my point.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

Thank you.

Now, Mr. President, on a number of occasions I have heard reference made in this House or the Caymanian Protection Board. Each Member speaks his or her opinion or mind. I venture to say that the Caymanian Protection Board is a body that has, perhaps, one of the most difficult jobs and roles to play in this country. It is caught between a rock and a hard place, or as the old people would say, between the devil and the deep blue sea. On the one hand there are those who are saying that they cannot get enough work permits and that development is being stifled, and they have a lot to say because of them not being granted permits for expatriates. I can understand their concern. On the other hand there are those who are saying why on earth are all these work permits being granted, that Caymanians are being kept out of work, that business is going into the hands of one or two people, who are non-Caymanian, and that they are reaping the benefits.

The Caymanian Protection Board has been issued with certain directions, guidelines and policies. To isolate a case or two as to what a developer, or any other businessman in this country wants, has to be dealt with in the light of the overall picture and its effects on this country as a whole. Mr. President, I cannot stand here to criticise the Caymanian Protection Board. I believe the Board tries to do a fair job. I believe it tries to be fair to each individual. But we, as a people of just over 20,000, have to recognise that there are limits to the number of permits that the Board can grant.

I for one have no particular preference of nationality which I would like to see in here, however, we cannot afford to allow any one nationality to come to this country and swamp numbers which will not prove to be in the best interest of Caymanians. I believe that the Board recognises this, and whether or not it is a West Indian, or Irishman or an American, there are only as many we can absorb in this country.

We are facing right now a situation where one can hardly find an apartment to rent. The place is going to become swamped with foreign nationals. We have to develop this country at a pace and level which we can reasonably handle. The Protection Board cannot bow to every whim and fancy of a developer or any other Caymanian who feels that because they ask for the permits, they must be granted. It is a difficult situation, but one which the Caymanian people are going to have to work with. And although at times there may be decisions taken by the Board which one or two people may question, I believe that overall the Board is doing a good job and I congratulate it.

Since I am on the subject of voicing the few areas of concern - I am not sure I would say discontent, but certainly they are of concern to me - one of the things that bothers me is that on the Cayman Islands today there is virtually little prime property left in this country owned by Caymanians. Everything is sold freehold. I believe, and I do not know what effect this is going to have on us, but like I said, I need to speak my mind. Caymanians are going to find that almost every inch of prime property in this country will be owned by foreigners. I believe that serious consideration should be given to make changes so that property is held leasehold, for 70, 80, 90 years. But at the end of that period it reverts to this country.

In other countries in the world, especially those with limited land mass as we have here, there are certain restrictions and these ought to be in place so that the Caymanians do not going to find themselves, in 50 or 75 years from now, owning only that which is in the dead centre of the country. All along the sea coast you will find that much of the property is now owned by foreigners. There is very little which is owned by Caymanians any more. I can understand that they are looking at the money that can be derived from the sale of the property, as you cannot tell a man that he must not sell his land because it is on the seafront and because all the seafront property is being sold. I feel that legislation should be in place so that at least it can be held leasehold rather than freehold, and in that way it would revert to us at some later date.

Having said that, this is one of the main reasons why in this House of Assembly, during this meeting, I opposed a certain motion because I see no property on the waterfront for the storage of the petroleum facilities. I see only one alternative, and that is the development of the North Sound - to dredge it and make an island there for the storage. Before any such decision of that kind is made, however, the people of my constituency have to have an input. This is one of the reasons for my concern about property in this country and my reasoning behind not agreeing to certain portions of the motion which was recently moved. Caymanians have very little left to call their own as far as prime property in this country today is concerned. I hope that the Government bench might somehow see my reasoning behind this.

We have today banks, trust companies and tourists which are the pillars of our economy. But what you have probably already learned is that the mainstay of our country years ago were the seaman; the man who risked his life and left his family and went first to fish for turtle and then who went on large ocean vessels around all parts of the world in storms, hurricanes and everything else, to bring money to this country. Many times, I feel that they are not given the recognition they ought to be given when we debate budget addresses and so on. I do not want it ever to be forgotten that they have played an important part in this country.

Going to Public Works and the Master Ground Transportation Plan. If there are to be any major roadways in this country, I hope that this Government will see fit to remember and recognize our pioneer by naming a road Seaman's Highway or Seaman's Boulevard, or something which will assure our children growing up to be provided from where we came.

Going on to ground transportation. Mr. President, we have a serious situation with traffic. I am glad to see that there is a car park being planned, but I am sure that Members recognize that a car park will have no real effect on the traffic flow in and around the main highways of this country because we would still have to get into George Turn to get to the car park. Although the amount of money to put it in place will be tremendous, it is my sincere wish that Government will see fit to have in place something which will help alleviate traffic congestion, especially on the East Bay Road. I think that they are looking at this particular situation seriously, and one so being urgent.

Having said that, it is a pity that a plan, or even a similar plan, was not in place 10 or 15 years ago, or that gradually we would have worked towards completing it and today would not have found ourselves concerned with traffic congestion. With that in mind, I also hope it will be seen that another very important area of concern is the Government Hospital. It is continually being proved that the services need to be expanded with building additions here and there, and I hope that a plan will be in place for a new hospital facility as soon as possible.

I was somewhat disappointed not to see even a token vote for at least I did not see one for a plan of any kind for a hospital facility. I would rather that we do not find ourselves in ten years from today, in a situation as we are experiencing with the transportation system. This has now become a matter of urgency and money has to be found to alleviate the problem. Putting a plan in place for the new hospital at this time would seem to me to be sensible and timely, because it has to come. We cannot continually add here and renovate there and build on. The health services of this country are now moving at a pace that we will need a new hospital facility before long.

Mr. President, going on to the Customs area. I was pleased to see that some extra precautionary measures are envisaged with respect to clearing passengers at the airport. I have noticed, on several occasions, in going through the Miami airport that sniffer dogs are walking around sniffing baggage. I believe this saves a lot of time with passengers going through Customs because it is not necessary for luggage to be searched too often. I guess it depends, however, where one is travelling from and so forth. But, the number of times which I have come into the airport here in the Cayman Islands, it concerns me that luggage is often not searched as thoroughly as I would like to see. Mr. President, sometimes the least suspected can be the culprit. With the drug problem which we have, and in not being able to get to the source, it is very important that every measure be taken to thoroughly search luggage. We could have sniffer dogs so that at least we would have that added measure being taken to curtail the flow of traffic in and out of the Islands.

Mr. President, prosperity sometimes brings problems. We have cruise ship passengers coming in to the Island - some with baggage; some with other things. The crew members visit this Island, substance every week, and they come ashore with their bags. With so many passengers as we have, should there not be something in place whereby passengers might have their luggage checked? In this way they would at least be aware that they may be searched at random. If they may be involved in any scheme at least there would be something in the back of their minds telling them that they may be the ones to be searched next time. I believe that this ought to be in place because it has been rumored that drugs come in here through passenger ships.

Mr. President, I once again want to say that I congratulate the Criminal Investigation Department, and the Police Department as a whole, for their vigilance. They have got a job on their hands. I am most pleased about the promotions which have taken place. It is good to see that a local Caymanian is now head of the Criminal Investigation Department. I think he is going to do a good job as he has in the past. It is good to see that there is regular, intensive, enforced and specialist training overseas for selected officers, and to see that a strengthening of the Force, by increasing the number of officers, is in the planning. It is, however, not good to see that there is an increase in crime. But, on the other hand, I welcome the information about detection also being up.

As is well known, I believe that much of the problems in the Traffic Department stem from drinking and driving. Although certain motions have come to this House, I, at this time, would like to mention that there are still a few more motions which I hope to bring to this House concerning the problem of alcohol consumption in this country. I think there have to be stricter laws about the age limit, and I believe that we at least can go back to what we had. We had a 21 years of age limit, and it was reduced to 18 - a teenager still. We also had a law that prevented the sale of alcohol on Sundays. That was tapered with which we did not need. Alcohol is a hard drug, and this country is going to have to face up to the fact that it is one of our most serious problems at this stage. You only need walk out this door to look it straight in the face. It is a known fact that addiction to alcohol stems mainly from those persons who have started drinking at an early age. I hope that we can help to alleviate this problem by placing stricter laws in this country.

Mr. President, I trust the Members of this House for allowing me this time to speak. There is quite a lot that could be said - my notations are quite lengthy. However, I would not want to sit this evening without saying how pleased I am with respect to the amount of money that has been budgeted for the youth rehabilitation centre for these Islands. I am pleased that we did not decide to get a bus by four erected just anywhere along the road to which to push our children, and that instead we are planning a facility where these children will have a home and staff to look after them properly, and that when they leave that home, as one common television advertisement says, they will not only be able to survive, but to succeed. I am so pleased to see that amount of money budgeted. Our children who are in approved schools overseas in Jamaica will no longer need to go there, but will be under our own supervision and care on this Island.

I am so pleased to see the improvements at the hospital. The Honourable Member of the Portfolio and the staff at that hospital are to be congratulated. I do not know of those who have many complaints about the service at the hospital - I do not. I think the morale of the staff is such now that they do not mind working too hard and putting in long hours. At this time I want to go on record as saying that I believe right now we have a good staff. There are a few whom can be singled out who sometimes look as though they have lead on their feet and can hardly move, but they are very few and far apart. But for the most part the hospital is functioning well, especially now that we have the counselling section for drug addicts and alcoholics and others who may need counselling.

Things have come a long way, Mr. President. There is no way that anyone can stand in this House and say that we have not gotten some things done. The areas that have been looked after are important, and are an integral part of our community from which to function well. We cannot do everything at one time, but this Government has done well. I want to go on record as saying that I do not think that such more could have been done with the resources which we had at hand. Although there are many areas of need, we tried to concentrate on those which were more urgent. I believe the Honourable Member of this Portfolio has looked after this quite well.

Mr. President, I think it is just about time to break, I will wind up.

MR. PRESIDENT:

We have four or five minutes to go. Do you want to go on after the break? I did not quite follow you.

MRS. BARRNE L. ORRUTTI:

Now within four or five minutes.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I misunderstood you, thank you.

MRS. BARRNE L. ORRUTTI:

Thank you, Sir.

Mr. President, in closing this debate, I suppose I have left out some important things which I otherwise would liked to have spoken on. However, I am sure that somebody else will cover it well.

I have, however, been made to wonder, after having read and studied the Budget Address before us, how it has been possible for the criticisms that were levied to be have been made. I did not expect that any bouquets would have been thrown, but I think that the criticisms which were leveled were almost a vicious attack, not only on the Government but on the country as a whole - especially so these Members know better and that they know the fragile, ticklish pillars of our economy. If they understood the Budget before us there had to be some gap between their brains and mouths because it just did not come over well.

Mr. President, it is often said that for one to save face, it is better to keep the lower half shut. I believe this would have been well in order for the criticisms which were levied here. It would do well for those who have so vehemently tried to discredit this Government to have remembered that.

Mr. President, I congratulate you for the manner in which you have handled this Assembly, and the way in which you try need to be as fair with one Member as you would with another. I certainly do not now, nor at any time, hope to present you with a problem. I wish you well, and I thank you for your patience with me. I might be a little drawn out at times, but I hope I have gotten my points across. It is only in the interest of the people of this country that I have made some of the suggestions or recommendations, or perhaps voiced some of the complaints. I think that Honourable Members recognise they have my support, but I would hope that these particular areas might be looked after, that they might be discussed, and that we will see a good year ahead for the Cayman Islands, based not only on this budget but on the partners of this Government continuing to do everything possible to show the world, the people of this country, and even the Opposition, that the Cayman Islands are blessed with a good Government.

I thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Thank you. Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

HOUSE RESOLVED AT 3:32 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Council.

The Honourable Third Official Member of Executive

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON:

Yes, President, I would like to make my contribution to the Second Reading debate of the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987, and to add my own feelings of congratulations to my colleague, the Honourable First Official Member for the content and style of the Budget Address which was presented to this Honourable House two weeks ago.

I too, Sir, would like to use the opportunity to speak on a few topics in response to points and concerns that were raised during the course of previous Members' contributions.

The Budget Address, consisting of 61 letter sized pages, was divided into six general sections with eleven sub-sections and covered 25 departments, or topics, or statutory boards and corporations ranging along each of the seven Portfolios of Government.

I am very conscious indeed of my areas of responsibility, and far be it from me to attempt to delve into areas that I have no responsibility for. Perhaps I should say now, too, Sir, just for the record, that I have no political ambitions, because if I did have political ambitions I would have to take a cut in salary if I wanted to do so. And I do not want to take any cut in salary, Sir, I can assure you.

I think, too, Sir, it is important for the listening public to recognise that, despite some of the arguments and points of view expressed in these chambers, at the end of the day there is a tremendous amount of national pride among the Members of this Honourable House in that we are all striving for the same objective - that is, for a better community for all to share. So despite the apparent grumbling and arguments, we are all here for the same basic objective.

It is also said, Sir, and this is a get phrase of mine that I use whenever I get the opportunity, that we cannot all be heroes, because if we were all heroes, there would be no one to stand on the sidewalk and clap. I believe, Sir, that in this context the twelve Elected Members of this House are the heroes and the three Official Members are those of us standing on the sidewalk, clapping.

The 1988 Budget proposals as contained in the draft statement of revenue and expenditure are, in my view, well presented. It is an achievable Budget, it is a rational Budget, and it is one that is not outside the parameters of the country's long term goals and aspirations for growth and development. The level of growth of the Budget this year alone has been many folds the level of growth experienced in the early days when Guyana was trying to acquire a reputation as a tourist destination and a tax haven.

I joined the Civil Service nineteen and a half years ago, and I recall one of the earliest Development Plans written for the country had as its stated objective the maintenance of a balanced economy consisting of not more than 40 per cent non-Guyanians. Put another way, Sir, from that time, in the early 1970s, it was felt that Guyanians should try to remain in the majority to steer the good ship Guyana in the direction that the majority so chose.

Now the statistics we have heard quoted in this debate, and from the word of caution contained in the Budget Address relating to the potential overheating of the economy, one could almost successfully argue that in certain areas the economy is already overheating. If we analyse the current ratio of non-Guyanians to Guyanians in our working society, we will find that we are already approaching that boiling point where more than 40 per cent of our workforce are non-Guyanians. As we have heard, too, from the presentation of the Five Year Economic Development Plan, of which this Budget forms a part, that we can expect, based on current rates of growth, that the non-Guyanians working population will equate to that of the Guyanians working population by as early as 1992, that is in five years time, at current rates.

What I would like to do, Mr. President, is to touch on three areas that I am paid to be responsible for. One area was not even mentioned in the Budget Speech, but came in for a good bit of contribution - that is the area of the Guyanians Protection Board and the immigration policies. The second area is the Royal Guyana Islands Police. The third area is the Government Information Services.

Starting firstly with the immigration policies and the Guyanians Protection Board, it is said that there is not much to be seen in a little time, but what you hear makes up for it. I believe that the amount of people and money associated with current immigration policies and the Guyanians Protection Board can be likened unto that expression.

The Guyanians Protection Board is now celebrating its sixteenth birthday, and when it was conceived there were clearly defined aims and objectives for the organisation. I would just like to quote from the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons of the birth certificate of this piece of legislation, so that persons who were not here sixteen years ago can refresh their memories as to what the birth certificate stated. The Memorandum of Objects and Reasons reads as follows:

'By reason of the tax advantages afforded to many people by taking up residence in the Cayman Islands, and the unprecedented prosperity of the tourist industry, there has arisen a grave risk that the social character of the Islands, as well as the way of life of the population, may be adversely affected by the influx of private and business settlers, and other consequential factors.

It is sought to enact legislation calculated to control this situation by affording means of protecting the traditional way of life of the Islanders by cushioning the impact of the establishment of international business interests and of settlement here by people who formerly had no interest in the public and private affairs of these Islands.

It is also sought to take advantage of the opportunity to consolidate and bring up to date the Law affecting immigration and deportation."

That was the principal objective of the Caymanian Protection Law at the time of its birth.

As we know, Sir, the Caymanian Protection Board consists of a Chairman, a Deputy Chairman and nine other members, all of whom serve at the pleasure of the Governor in Council. All members are Caymanians. Their task is to carry out the provisions of the Law, its regulations, and the directives issued thereunder. The Law and the regulations are public documents, and so are now directives. There are currently five sets of directives issued, and they are numbered one through five. They are all available as supplements to the Gazette and they may be purchased here at the Legislative Assembly, as you may purchase any other piece of legislation.

For anyone who may need to have reference to these pieces of information, I would encourage them to obtain their own personal copies for their own handy reference. Because, Sir, if one takes the time to look carefully at the directives issued to the Caymanian Protection Board, one will find that the Board is trying to carry out a very rigidly laid down set of guidelines. For example (and I will just quote one example, Sir), directive number eight contains under directive number one states that the grounds for refusing renewal or grants of licences include:

- a) that the number of accompanying dependents including illegitimate children are more than permitted;
- b) that there is refusal or inability on the part of the applicant to support dependents properly;
- c) that there are reasonable grounds for suspecting that the applicant uses or is involved in illegal drugs;
- d) that the applicant has a background of subversive political activity, racialism, or any other illegal activity;
- e) that the applicant has been involved in financial problems, including bankruptcy or liquidation of companies or entities where creditors have not been paid the whole of their debts;
- f) that the applicant has been convicted of a crime, including minor offences;
- g) the protection or re-designation of the licence holder by his employer without the prior approval of the Board;
- h) that the applicant is in the Islands as a visitor.

These are just some of the grounds for refusing the renewal or grant of what we commonly refer to as 'work permits'.

Because of the rapid growth and pressure on development over the years, it is perhaps true to say that small businesses have suffered the most because small businesses have the least experience of all businesses. And I believe that the Protection Board, being comprised of men and women of some degree of compassion, are not unkindful of this fact, and would indeed ever be conscious of the need to pay special attention to the needs of the small businessman.

At the end of September I was privileged to have been invited by the Chamber of Commerce to address them at their monthly luncheon meeting. I took the opportunity, while speaking to them, to make reference to a quotation about communication. What I said was that when communication in both directions is open, honest and accurate, those in authority are able to correct where improvement is needed, and to check numbers before they accept parole. The Caymanian Protection Board has been attempting to be honest and accurate with its communications, but they have been handicapped by rumors; they have been handicapped by behind allegations levelled at them by persons who are disgruntled and displeased for a variety of reasons, primarily disgruntled and displeased because they were unable to whitewash the Caymanian Protection Board into accepting their applications.

It has been said that this Government, through the Caymanian Protection Board and its immigration policy, are discriminating against certain nationalities. It has also been said that we are exchanging Jamaicans for Irish people.

Well, Sir, I would elaborate a little bit on this Irish problem.

Those of us who read the local press recently will have noted that there are a number of persons recruited by the Cayman Islands Hotel Association shortly to be arriving to take up employment at a number of local hotel and tourist establishments. It has to be clearly understood, Sir, that it is not the Cayman Islands Government that either initiated or executed the decision to recruit from Ireland or indeed to employ Irish people. My understanding is that in consultation with Government, the Cayman Islands Hotel Association were exploring ways and means of overcoming a labour problem and looked to the Irish Federation as one possible alternative of alleviating their problem, by bringing in qualified hotel workers on a seasonal basis to fill a need, at the end of which the workers would return to their country.

I am not denying that the Government gave approval in principle to the scheme before it was implemented, but it is not true to make anybody believe that the idea was conceived by Government to bring in people from Ireland. It was a decision made by private enterprise, and it is a matter being carried out by private enterprise. This Government does not dictate more than deciding that the world is divided into five geographical areas. This Government does not dictate which geographical area you must recruit from in particular. What we have dictated is that there is one particular geographical area of the five that are currently over-supplied to this country, and if we do not do something about the imbalance, either we, or successive generations of Caymanians, will have to regret it. Having divided the world up into five geographical areas, Sir, there is no need to think that the Government is going to take countries out of that region and dictate from which private sector it must or must not recruit.

It has also been said that there is a tremendous shortage of labour in the farming and construction sectors. I am uncertain where that labour might be coming from. Perhaps the absence of information to the contrary was sufficient to start yet another rumour. Now, Mr. President, I quoted the little saying about open communication in both directions needing to be honest and accurate. It was only yesterday morning that I received from the Immigration Department the painful occupation licence statistics as at 30th September this year, and I am now using the opportunity to say a word about my understanding of the implications of these statistics.

Let us also say now, Sir, that a press release will be issued tonight on this subject, and should be available for public consumption in the media on Monday. But the statistics reveal that as at 30th September this year there were a total of 4,552 persons holding painful occupation licences. The last total, as at 30th June, three months earlier, was 4,186. The increase for the quarter is therefore 366 permit holders, an increase of 8.7 per cent.

Not taking the 8.7 per cent increase for one quarter and annualising it, assuming that all other quarters are going to represent the same average rate of growth, that percentage increase for one quarter represents an annualised increase of almost 35 per cent. It averages out that, for every working day of the year, six new work permits are being approved - an average of a half a dozen new permits every day. This is in addition to renewals, Sir. If we are growing, with permits, at the rate of 30 per cent to 35 per cent a year, we will be doubling our outside working population every three years. So we can readily understand the concern of the projection which tells us that, in the next five years or so, Caymanians are going to be outnumbered by Jamaicans. We have heard about discrimination against Jamaicans. During the last three months, 28 per cent of the permits granted were granted to Jamaicans - 105 additional permits were granted to Jamaicans in just the past three months. As at 30th September there were 1906 persons of Jamaican origin holding Painful Occupation Licences - an increase ...

MR. A. McKEENA WOOD:

Could the Honourable Member give that number again, please?

HON. J. LEMUEL WURLESTON:

Certainly, Sir, as at 30th September there were 1906 persons of Jamaican origin holding Painful Occupation Licences, compared to 1801 as at 30th June - an increase of 5.8 per cent.

Now what I need to explain, Sir, is that this quarter I am dealing with is the second quarter, in that in the middle of it, on 17th August this year, the Government issued a new set of directives which changes the rules considerably. So it is perhaps not fair to dwell too heavily on the third quarter's statistics. But I think it is significant enough to deal with the bottom line, without singling out the individual nationalities. It is sufficient to deal with the rate of growth and to demonstrate firstly that the economy is not being stagnated by the refusal of permits, and that indeed we are growing at a rate that will double our non-Caymanian population every three years.

Going back, Sir, to the claim that the agricultural sector and the construction industry are the hardest hit - that is what we were told. In the agricultural sector we have experienced a 47 per cent increase in the number of work permits just granted in the last quarter alone. There are now 147 persons engaged on permits in the agricultural sector. The construction industry, Sir, is benefiting from a growth, an increase in the number of permits being granted, by an annual rate of 30 per cent. In the last quarter alone the construction industry increased, in the number of permits granted, by 10 per cent - from 605 at the end of June to 710 work permits in the industry at the end of September.

As I said at the beginning, Sir, I do not blame the Members for having responded to the rumour that these sectors were suffering, because until we get facts, figures and statistics to prove the contrary, sometimes the best thing to hold onto in the interim is a good juicy piece of gossip.

I am satisfied, Sir, that the Caymanian Protection Board is fulfilling its role quite effectively. In fact it runs in for a number of bouquets from a number of areas in the community that we would like to keep anonymous. But we believe Sir, by and large, although it is an unpopular job, it is being well done by a dedicated group of Caymanians.

We heard about the need for an alternative means of offering security of tenure in lieu of Caymanian status. That is fine in theory, Sir, but when you get down to the practicalities of it, if you offer security of tenure you have to offer it in some form. We cannot any longer continue to believe that we can have our cake and eat it. When we open our doors to foreigners as we need to do, we must understand that the consequence of our needs have to be watched with their needs as well - their need to plan their own futures.

The whole question of Caymanian status is a very touchy one, Sir, and I do not want to get into it because as a highly politician, I will do my best as the Civil Service Head of the Portfolio, to carry out the wishes of the majority of the elected Government. That is not to say that I do not have my personal views, and there are times when I show my personal views known. I believe I expressed too many of my personal views when I spoke to the Chamber of Commerce. Nevertheless, I have no apologies for that, and any time I am not allowed to express a personal view I think an amendment to the Constitution will be needed.

Turning next to the Police, I am going to deal rather generally with this topic because every time Parliament meets these days there is something on the agenda about the police. On this occasion we heard parliamentary questions about the method used in investigating certain drug cases. We heard about allegations of accounting files being seeded by police informants, and so on and so forth. I am not a believer in opening up old wounds, and in September we put to rest, I thought, some of the allegations that had been laid at the feet of the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force. At that time I thought we had managed to come to some understanding that the police in a community can only be as effective as the community will allow them to be. At that time I thought I had also made it abundantly clear that the Commissioner of Police and his senior officers are notaverse to receiving members of the public, and indeed Members of the Legislative Assembly for that matter, who have valuable information or who have concerns they would just like to discuss with them.

I think that the Police Force can stand proud on its own record. Although 45 per cent of its young officers have less than five years experience in police work, they have benefited from a comprehensive in-service training programme which has put them in good stead to carry out their duties and responsibilities without any fear of partiality or favouritism, notwithstanding that some of the officers whom they are policing are, very naturally, going to be closely connected to them as relatives. It is not a very easy thing, Sir, to be a good police officer in a small town, when every Tom, Dick and Harry is a first cousin or a great aunt. It is not easy, Sir,

What I would like to do on this occasion, to make myself a little plainer, Sir, is to say that I am contemplating setting up a meeting at which members of the Legislative Assembly will be invited to attend, to sit down informally and to talk with senior police officials to discuss policing generally. Drugs in particular is something of tremendous concern to us at this time. We can talk about crime, drugs and so forth to see if we can break down what appears to be a potential barrier of communication which currently exists. The hesitation of certain Members of the Legislative Assembly to speak with and talk to senior police officers is a matter that I think has to be attended to. We have to carry out our duties and responsibilities diligently and completely, and if we are not prepared to speak our minds, and to speak it to the proper people, then we are not doing what we are supposed to be doing.

The police have a very wide range of responsibilities, and they carry out their duties with a tremendous amount of dedication. They are not paid any overtime. Many of them cannot get time off in lieu of the extra hours because of shortage of manpower. Many of them perform their duties after, at great personal risk. And indeed, last night, one such officer returned from medical treatment abroad for injuries he sustained in a drug incident.

I will therefore accept, on behalf of the Police Force, the compliments that have been extended to it by persons who have spoken before me, and say that no one is going to be allowed to tear down the morale and the good conduct and discipline that has been built up. The police will cross as regards.

Turning on to the Government Information Service, another subject for which I am responsible. In today's press there is a response by the Senior Information Officer to an editorial written in the local paper on Friday 20th November last. This editorial talked about too much red tape, Portfolios wanting to get releases before agreeing to them, and about such procedures as opening the door to censorship, or at least the appearance of censorship, and restriction of the freedom of speech. It goes on to talk about events that may have been long overtaken and concerns may have well taken good hold. This was one of the justifications for putting together the editorial. I believe that certainly I can speak for myself and my own Portfolio, that I have had the opportunity of having a very good relationship with the local press. I have responded to their enquiries, I have answered their telephone calls, I have returned telephone calls when I have gotten messages, and so on. So I have no axe to grind with anybody. I was looking up a little quotation that I thought might be relevant to the occasion, and I found a quotation written by Charles Scott, published in the Manchester Guardian on 3th May, 1926. With your permission, Mr. President, I would like to share it with the House:

"The newspaper is of necessity a creature of a monopoly, and its first duty is to shun the temptations of monopoly. Its primary office is the gathering of news. At the peril of its soul, it must see that the supply is not stinted, neither in what it gives nor in what it does not give, and in the mode of presentation must the unclouded face of truth suffer wrong. Comment is free but facts are sacred."

You see, Sir, we live in a small community, and there is another saying that there are two things to aim at in life. First, to get what you want. The second is to enjoy it. But only the wisest of mankind achieves the second. We have a golden opportunity in this Christian community to exhibit good courage, not be afraid, neither need we be dismayed because the good book tells us that the Lord, thy God is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

I feel, Sir, that I have made my little contribution to the Second Reading Debate on the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987. I will end by saying that I hope that the offer that I indicated, that I am contemplating setting up a meeting for Members of this Honourable House to meet with senior police officials, will be accepted in the same spirit with which I offer it, because our confidence is dependent upon it.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. SPEAKER:

The Honourable Senior Official Member of Executive Council.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I too would like to rise in support of the Budget Address presented to this House by the Honourable Financial Secretary. Mr. President, I do not think I need say much more in support than that. He is big chap and I am sure he can look after himself.

What I would like to do, in speaking to the Budget Debate, is just review one or two matters which fall particularly within my area, as the Member responsible for Legal Administration. Then, when I have reviewed those matters, to move on and answer some points that have been made during the debate; points which I consider important and which call for an answer.

But before I get to that, I would like to review the legal profession in this Island, and just say a few words to it. The Honourable Financial Secretary, in his Address, very properly, if I may say so, noted that the legal profession continues to provide the services so essential in a sound financial centre's operation. Mr. President, that is something that I feel is important for me to succeed. I think it goes without saying that when investors and members of the financial community come from overseas, one of the things of value they find in this Island is a sound legal profession, a profession that is properly trained, a profession which is experienced and a profession that can deal with all of their problems - and when I say their problems, I mean the problems of that financial community which come here.

The Financial Secretary, when he addressed that issue, referred to the Law School, and the fact that five new lay-justice members have joined that profession from the Law School. That is a source of great pleasure to me, I would like to say it was a source of great pride, but I have had very little to do with that. The Law School was established before my time in the time of my predecessor, and so perhaps though personal pride is not something I can claim, pleasure it certainly is. It is also a great pleasure that two of those qualifying attorneys at law had been articled in the Attorney General's chambers and will, I hope, continue at least for some time, in Government service.

During the debate certain remarks were briefly addressed about proposals to increase the qualifications for entrance to the Law School. These remarks were made by the First Elected Member for Radden Town. I had hoped that during Question Time I would have put his mind at rest in answering a question which he raised on this issue. Obviously I had not. I am pleased to note that some other Members of the House appear to have been more reassured. Mr. President, I consider this an important issue, and I am going to leave the House's indulgence while I just go back and touch upon it very briefly.

First of all, Mr. President, the First Elected Member for Radden Town seemed, in his address, to be imputing responsibility for this to the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council responsible for Health, Education and Social Services. I am sorry he did that, it may have been a misapprehension or his part. But the Law School falls under my portfolio, for want of a better word, and there has recently been published a new chart showing the responsibilities of the various departments in Government. Anyone either in Government, in this House or in the public, looking at that chart, will realise that the Law School is firmly my responsibility.

It follows, Mr. President, that any proposals that come forward for the alteration of the entrance requirements are also my responsibility. I do not claim responsibility for thinking of them, or indeed for initiating them, but I do regard it as my responsibility to advocate them, stand by them, and I hope, see them through.

As I told the First Elected Member for Bodden Town in answering his questions, these proposals originated in the Legal Advisory Council, which represents both the Judiciary in the form of the Chief Justice and also the profession in the form of the President of the Law Society. Both those people were present when this decision was taken. It was also taken with input from the Director of Legal Studies at the Law School.

Mr. President, I cannot stress too much to this House and to the listening public that it is not the intention of these changes to exclude Caymanians from the Law School. The only purpose of the Law School is to provide a good, proper, sound and broad legal education for young Caymanians who want to be attorneys at law in their Island. And, Mr. President, to suggest that anything would be done to exclude them from the Law School is indeed a concern. It goes further than that, because to suggest that Caymanians are going to be excluded by this uplift in the entry requirements is to disparage those young Caymanians hoping to come to the Bar in the Cayman Islands, and hoping to qualify at the Law School. It implies that they are not going to make that grade. Mr. President, I have every hope and every opinion that they will, or at least those of them who are suited for a profession in law will make the grade.

Having said that, I would also like to reiterate to the House, and through the House to the listening public, a point which I had hoped I had made during answers to supplementary questions. It is that, in my view, it is wrong to encourage people who will not make the grade at the end of the day, and who will not pass the final examinations, to embark upon a career which they may not be suited for, either because their personal academic talents lie elsewhere, or because their natural personality is not suited to the five years of study and hard work that is required to achieve a qualification at the Law School. Nothing can be more cruel to a young person embarking on their career in life than to encourage them to take false steps down a long road which they may not finish and which they may have to leave disheartened and disappointed some way down that road. It is to avoid that happening that the proposal has been brought forward that two 'A' levels should be part of the requirements for entry to the Law School.

Now, Mr. President, I know, and I am sure Members of the House know that there are going to be people who, although they do not get those two 'A' levels, are nevertheless at some stage going to be suited to a career at the Law. Mr. President there is a safety net for those people. That is that mature students (those persons who are over 21) in their year of entry will still be able to qualify for the Law School, even after these new changes, under the old qualifications. And, what is more, a new way of entering will be introduced that again will allow mature students, people over 21 (even if they do not have the formal academic qualification of five 'C' levels), to achieve entry to the Law School by writing two essays and passing an interview to ascertain whether they are, to put it frankly, the right sort of material. That is intended to embody what I have always understood to be one of the original concepts of the Law School, which is that it would permit people who had gone out into the community, perhaps embarked upon other careers, who had matured, who had grown up and achieved during that maturing process the ability to stand the long hours of study and dedication that the Law degree and the Law qualification requires. It would allow those people to come back later in their life, if they can prove themselves, by writing an essay and by passing an interview, and that those people should then be able to embark upon that five years of study leading to the qualification of Attorney at Law in the Cayman Islands. So, Mr. President, in some ways the new qualifications under the scope of Caymanians who can come to the Law School; widens the scope among mature students.

There is one point that I want to clarify, because I was unable when being asked questions by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town to give him a clear answer on this, but I can give it now. The proposal is that even after the new qualifications have come in, somebody who, when they leave the High School or Triple C or wherever they have been educated, does not at that stage have the necessary academic requirements, such a person, will, by writing until they are 21, by going out, working and proving themselves in the community, then be eligible to come back and apply to the Law School either on the basis that they had the old qualifications, the five 'C' levels, or on the basis that they can get by the new essay comprehension test and interview. So nobody is going to be excluded; more people might be allowed to come in. But what might be done is that those young people who do not, when the new provisions come in, have the basic academic requirements will not be encouraged to take a false step down a purposeless path until they have achieved such maturity that they are personally sure that they can take that step, and also that they have sufficient maturity to take that step without wasting their time and everybody else's.

So, Mr. President, I hope that those words will make clear to everybody that these proposed changes in the Law School are not intended to exclude young Caymanians from what I can only describe as their Law School.

Mr. President, I note that it is now 4:30 p.m. I do have more to say, but if it is convenient, I would break there.

CEREMONIAL SPENDING

SENTENCES TO SIR JOHN AND LADY SUMMERFIELD

MR. PRESIDENT:

Before we adjourn I would like to take the opportunity to say a few words on the imminent departure of the Chief Justice, Sir John Summerfield and Lady Summerfield.

They will leave Guyana on Monday morning next, and Honourable Members of this Assembly and their spouses are invited to join the Members of Executive Council and the Members of the Court of Appeal and the Judiciary to say their farewells to Sir John and Lady Summerfield at 10:25 a.m. at the U.T.F. lounge.

Sir John came to Guyana just ten years ago bringing a wealth of judicial and legal experience in a succession of high offices under the Crown in other Territories. His term as our Chief Justice has been a substantial expansion in the volume of work and the complexity of cases in the Grand Court. His wisdom, his courtesy, his total dedication to his judicial duty and his unswerving and over-heralded application of the rule of law are his lasting monument in Guyana. As an expression of especial gratitude to him, the Government has recently granted to him Cavendish status. I am sure that I speak for us all and for the community at large in wishing Sir John and Lady Summerfield a long and happy retirement.

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. DENSON O. BANKS:

Mr. President, on behalf of the Elected Members of Executive Council, and indeed of the House, I would like to say on the eve of the departure of Sir John and Lady Summerfield that we wish for them a long, happy and healthy retirement. We will miss Sir John at the festive openings of Parliament each year, and on other state occasions. We have indeed been blessed to have had the services of so able a Chief Justice over the last ten years, and we thank him for all that he has done.

We particularly are appreciative, Mr. President, of his keen understanding of the workings of the offshore financial centre, and his keen understanding in this area has been extremely helpful and beneficial. He has assisted in no small way in restoring the quality and image which that centre bears today, and for this we, in this House, and indeed throughout the community owe him a debt of gratitude. I would like to again say that we wish him and his good wife every good speed, and a long and happy and healthy retirement. And we hope that they will be able to come back and visit us sometime.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. E. MCKEENA BUSH:

Mr. President, I will not be at the airport to see two Honourable gentlemen off, but I would wish him well. I am sure, as has been said, he made many good decisions - I am sure he made some terrible mistakes. But I do wish both him and his wife well.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, before I give the adjournment, perhaps it is also appropriate for me, on this public occasion, to speak on behalf of the civil service and perhaps also the Official Members, my colleagues here.

Sir John and I arrived one month apart in 1977, I think, and we have come to know each other under many different occasions. I have always had a great respect for him, and I believe he has done a job in this country that is going to be difficult to do in the next ten years. He has, I believe, Mr. President, held this country together judicially, not only on the local scene, but also the confidence that the offshore international market and financial business has in this country's judicial system. And I believe we owe him and Lady Summerfield a great debt. I hope that he and Lady Summerfield will not be away from us too long, and that they will visit on every opportunity they may have. God bless them.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

With those words, Mr. President, I give the adjournment of this Honourable House until 11:00 o'clock Monday morning, 30th November, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT:

I should add he has sent a note that he is not well and unable to attend. I think, therefore, there is no need to move that Standing Orders be suspended.

We then go to Item 3, Government Business, Bills. The resumption of the Second Reading of the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987. The Honourable Attorney General.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Thank you, Mr. President.

Mr. President, when I was speaking on Friday evening, I had taken as my starting point that passage in the Financial Secretary's Budget Address where he dealt with the role of the lawyers in the private sector, and particularly their role in relation to the reputation of the Islands as a sound financial centre.

I would like now to note another important function of the legal profession in these Islands; that it that it is a free and independent legal profession, and that that freedom and independence is an essential part of the rule of law in these Islands. There are two other essential parts of the rule of law in these Islands. First of all, the Judiciary - and we have had the sorrow this morning to say good-bye to Sir John Summerfield who has served as Chief Justice so well for the last ten years, and has so powerfully exemplified the independence of the Judiciary. But there is another element, and that is the independence of the Police Force, and their ability, freely, to investigate allegations of crimes and offences made to them.

Mr. President, I hope this introduction does not seem off the point. The point of it is that in the contribution to the Budget Debate made by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, a severe attack was made upon that basic principle of the independence of the Police Force, and, through that, upon the rule of law in these Islands. I cannot stand here and let that go unanswered. I am only sorry that he is not here today to hear me answer it. I hope that he will have the opportunity to tune in tonight on the radio and listen to me answer it.

What he said was that (and I am reading from the newspaper report, but I hope that I have it accurately) is that a team of detectives from Scotland Yard had been brought to Cayman to smear the reputation of politicians. He went on to say that a political vendetta to ruin his name and ruin him politically had begun by the Elected Members of Executive Council. He also went on to say that thousands of dollars a day were being spent to smear the reputation of politicians.

Mr. President, nothing could be further from the truth. Nothing gives me greater sorrow than the fact that he should have used this Assembly to raise this allegation, and put me in a position where I feel obliged to reply to it.

It is true that there is presently in the Islands a small team of officers from Scotland Yard. They number not six, as the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town had mentioned in his debate, but three. I would have hoped in any event that the fact that this team came from Scotland Yard, the highest, the best known Police Force in the United Kingdom, would have provided some guarantee that they were not here merely as a political tool, and not here merely to smear somebody's reputation. I would have hoped that it was self evident that that Police Force would not have lent its hard worked officers to come over here on such a fool's errand.

Mr. President, they are here for two reasons. They are here because a complaint was made to the Commercial Crimes Branch of the Police Force here, and they are here because certain matters were referred to the police by the court. Both the complaint and the court referral concern companies. They concern companies in which the First Elected Member for Bodden Town has, or has at some time, had an interest or indeed a controlling role. The complaint, which was made in a signed statement by a Canadian investor is that he invested in the region of a quarter of a million dollars in a company with which the First Elected Member for Bodden Town was associated. That company traded and made a profit, that he the investor never got paid any dividends, never saw a return on his money, and indeed never got it back.

Mr. President, it is not for me now to express any view as to whether any truth lies in that or not. But the point of fact was a signed complaint was made, it was made by somebody who comes from an area of the world from which much investment pours into these Islands, and it is a complaint which an independent police force has no choice but to take absolutely seriously and investigate. It is also a complaint which, when it was looked at, turned out to involve a large and complicated investigation. For that reason, as I understand it, outside assistance was sought.

The second matter I mentioned, a referral by the court, concerns the liquidation of another company with which, at one time at least, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town was associated. The liquidator, as is his duty, presented a report to the court, and the court, on reading that report, ordered that the papers in the matter be referred to the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force for them to investigate the affairs of the company. The court did this because the liquidator's report, on the face of it, disclosed a number of serious irregularities. Again, it is not for me to say here whether there was any truth in that - whether they were real irregularities or apparent ones. The point again is that a referral was made to the police, and they had no alternative but to investigate. That investigation, again, was a complex and difficult one and again outside help was sought, and it was sought from a source which I would hope all Members would recognise is impeccable and above being influenced politically by any political factor in these Islands.

Now, Mr. President, it has been alleged that this investigation is a campaign to smear politicians, and that it has been started by the Elected Members of the Executive Council. Again, nothing could be further from the truth. I can give this House my word that they had no knowledge of it, and were not consulted on it; and the Elected Members would not be consulted on matters of day-to-day police operational investigations precisely because of that element of the rule of law that I mentioned in the beginning of my speech, namely the independence of the police. If it could ever be seen that the police could be used as a tool by Elected Members to start an investigation, or to stop an investigation once started, then that rule of law would be threatened in its most fundamental element. So, Mr. President, the Elected Members of Executive Council were not consulted, they were not asked, and they certainly did not initiate this investigation.

Now I would like to give a further assurance to the House and that is that when this investigation has been completed, the investigating officers will make a report to me, the Attorney General. They will do this in the normal course of their duties. That is done in every case. It will then be for me to decide whether that report discloses evidence of criminal offences committed either by the companies or by anybody associated with them. I assure the House and the public in the Cayman Islands that, when the time comes to take that decision, it will be taken by me and not by Executive Council, and not in consultation with Executive Council. I hope that that is listened to, and I hope that it sets this unfortunate allegation at rest.

I said at the beginning that I was sorry that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town raised this in the House. He has been to see me personally twice and made the same allegations to me that the matter was politically motivated, and I personally assured him that it was not. I used words to him very similar to those that I am using to the House today. I told him why the investigation was started, and I gave him exactly the same amount of detail as to why it was started as I have told the House today. And I told him that if he wanted more detail he could go and ask the investigating officers. So far they have not been able to interview him.

Mr. President, I now move from that, but I have again, and again I am sorry to have to do this, I move to other allegations made in his debate on the Budget Address by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town. I am sorry that everything that I have said in my contribution to this Budget debate should concern points that he has raised. I do hope that he will appreciate that there is nothing personal in this, and that I am dealing with these points because they are important, and because they fall directly within my sphere of responsibility.

The second point that I want to raise is the allegation that the secrecy laws of the Cayman Islands have been violated in a systematic way. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town (and again I rely upon a press report, but it is accurate according to my memory) accused Government of complying with the United States authorities as if the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty existed. He alleged that large worldwide accounting firms were seeded with police informants. He went on to challenge me personally, which is why I am addressing this matter, and which is why I am going to address it in the detail in which I do address it. He went on to challenge me personally, the Attorney General, to take an oath that evidence has not been supplied to the United States authorities as if the Treaty was in force. I am not going to take any oaths, but I am going to give an assurance to this House that that allegation is incorrect, I am going to give an assurance to this House that evidence is not being supplied to the United States authorities as if the Treaty was in force, and now I am going to trespass upon the House's patience to go on and explain what the situation is, explain what may have given rise to that suggestion by the Member, and explain why it was so wrong for him to make it.

Mr. President, in October 1982 the then Government entered into an executive agreement - constituted by a letter written by the Acting Governor, Mr. Dennis Foster as he then was, the Chief Secretary, but acting on the advice of Council - with the United States Government for the provision of information in cases where the Department of Justice in the United States could show that a criminal offence (that was a criminal offence in the United States) had been committed, and that that was also a criminal offence in the Cayman Islands. I should say in passing that I do not in any way deprecate such an agreement. I think it is fundamental to the proper and decent operation of the Cayman Islands as an offshore financial centre in that it should not be used to shelter true criminals operating from other jurisdictions. So this agreement that was entered into in 1982 is something which now has my support, and had I then been in Government, I would have supported it.

The agreement was constituted by a letter dated 5th October. I am going to summarise some of it, but briefly it was in these terms: that all requests for information from the United States, and all requests for evidence which would normally fall within the Cayman Islands' Confidential Relationships Preservation Law would be made in the first place by the Department of Justice through their Senior Attorney in the Office of International Affairs; and that that request would be made to the Commissioner of Police here in the Cayman Islands. Upon receipt of such a request, and now I am reading:

"if a prima facie case appears evident, the Commissioner of Police will forthwith forward the documentation to a committee consisting of the Attorney General or his representative, the Financial Secretary or his representative, a senior member of the Police Force, and an Elected Member of the Cayman Islands Executive Council. That committee would, after speedy examination, forward its recommendations to the Governor in Council for consideration at the next weekly meeting of the Council. Upon confirmation of the recommendation, the Governor in Council would authorise, under the provisions of section 3(2)(b)(iii) and (iv) the seeking and obtaining by the Financial Secretary, the Inspector of Banks or the appropriate Police Officer, of such otherwise confidential information conditioned upon such information as is obtained being referred back to the Governor in Council.". The Governor in Council would, after perusing the information referred back, authorise it to be forwarded through the Commissioner of Police, directly to the Senior Attorney of the Office of International Affairs of the United States of America.

Now, Mr. President, that operational agreement was entered into, as I say, in 1982. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town would have been aware of it. He would have been aware of it not just because he sat on Executive Council - he would have been aware of it because he helped negotiate it. The circumstances of its negotiation are set out in some public documents that were filed in 1983 by the then Government in a court case in the United States. It was a court case in which the United States Government was seeking by subpoena to get documents from a bank in these Islands. The then Member of Executive Council for Health, Education and Social Services swore a long affidavit explaining the background to this agreement. Again, and I hope I am not trespassing upon the patience of Members, I would like to read a few select passages from that affidavit that he swore, on oath, in those proceedings. Members might see that I am holding a huge bound bundle of documents in my hand. That huge bundle of documents is the court record, or at least part of it, from those proceedings. The then (this is in 1983) Elected Member of Executive Council for Health, Education and Social Services swore as follows:

"I was the Chairman of the Cayman delegation for a meeting with the representatives of the United States of America held on 27th September, 1982, in Miami, Florida. The Cayman delegation at the meeting was composed of myself, Michael J. Bradley, the Attorney General of the Cayman Islands, the Financial Secretary of the Cayman Islands ..." - and then he names the present Elected Member for Bodden Town who was then described as an Elected Member of the Cayman Executive Council - that is the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, whom he names - "... and the Cayman Commissioner of Police."

He goes on to depose:

"It was my understanding that the meeting between delegations was held in order..."

...and I would like to stress this next paragraph:

"... to arrive at a binding agreement as to what procedures would be used to allow the United States to obtain evidence for criminal prosecution for acts illegal both in the United States and the Cayman Islands, when such evidence would otherwise be protected from disclosure by the Cayman Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law of 1976, as amended in 1979. It is my understanding that an agreement was reached at the meeting for such a procedure as was subsequently reduced to writing in the Cayman-United States Agreement."

And he then exhibits that Agreement to his affidavit, and it is the letter I read out a short while ago. The then Member goes on to swear:

"The sort of arrangement that the Cayman delegation could discuss ..." (in other words he is now talking about what his instructions were when he attended at this meeting) "... would be a formal, binding agreement as to procedure, and in particular as to (a) the channelling of all United States requests for information located in Cayman through one agency, and (b) a uniform form for the presentation of such requests."

He goes on again:

"It was the clear understanding, at least of the Cayman members of the delegation, that the agreed procedures were to have been the primary and first means by which the United States would attempt to obtain evidence or information."

He goes on:

"It may well not have been agreed that the procedures should be the exclusive method of obtaining information, but it was to have been the primary one, i.e. the first one resorted to. Only if the United States tried diligently and in good faith to obtain information under the Agreement and failed would it resort to other methods. In order to make the Agreement work it was up to the United States to show a prima facie case. This was a fundamental requirement of cooperation. If they did not they would not have used their best endeavours to make the system work."

Now, Mr. President, Members of the Assembly will note that that Agreement was limited to offences that were offences both in Cayman and in the United States of America. But also, though it was binding, it did not bind the Americans not to use other procedures, such as subpoenas.

I had mentioned that the present First Elected

Member for Bodden Town was a member of the delegation that attended in the United States. He also swore an affidavit, a public document, in those proceedings. What he said, and I am going to read that affidavit, is this - and this is an affidavit that was sworn by him in March 1984:

"I have been absent from the Islands for several weeks, and therefore have not had an opportunity to review certain affidavits elsewhere discussed, save for the final form of the affidavit of Truman Bodden, dated 23rd March, 1984."

(That is the affidavit, parts of which I have just read out). The present First Elected Member for Bodden Town goes on, on his oath:

"I expressly concur with the statements made by Truman Bodden in his affidavit and state that my fellow Elected Members' ..." (and I take that to mean his fellow Elected Members of Executive Council) "... views reflect my own understanding and recollection to the best of my knowledge and belief. On two separate occasions in face-to-face meetings between Michael Carpenter..." (who was then the United States' Consul General in Jamaica) "... and me ..." (that is the present First Elected Member for Bodden Town) "... in early 1982 in Cayman I reviewed with Carpenter Cayman's proposals for processing all United States requests for information in law enforcement matters. It was disclosed by Carpenter that the Governor had discussed with him, prior to our meeting, the proposal. On each occasion, Carpenter expressed complete agreement with Cayman's proposal, and termed this proposal an excellent solution. The terms of this proposal were identical to those brought by the Cayman delegation, of which this Member was a member, to the meeting held on 27th September 1982 in Miami."

As I say, that was sworn to on 24th March, 1984.

Now I had explained that those affidavits were sworn as part of the court proceedings in the United States, and they were sworn for the overt intention of persuading the court in the United States that there was a procedure in the Cayman Islands whereby, in appropriate cases, the United States Government could come to the Cayman Islands Government and obtain otherwise confidential information. I should reiterate that in my respectful submission to this House, where one is talking about 'true crime', not tax matters, but true crime, there is nothing wrong with that. I offer no criticism of anything so far that I have read out from those affidavits, indeed I endorse it and was pleased to see that the then Government was making steps to assist in the case of true crime.

The case was something of a cause celebre, and the then Government very properly put out a press statement about it in November of 1983. I just want to read one passage from that press statement because I hope it reflects the attitude of the then government. It certainly reflects an attitude I could wholeheartedly endorse, and which I am sure I can say the present Government wholeheartedly endorses. It is this:

"The attitude of the Cayman Islands Government as regards the preservation of bank secrecy principles and other confidential information, remains unchanged."

I may say it remains unchanged to this day.

"It has always been made quite clear that whilst it will enforce in the highest degree secrecy requirements contained in our laws, it ..." (that is the Government) "... will not tolerate use of the Cayman Islands as a venue where the proceeds of criminal activities in other jurisdictions can be safely stored. Accordingly, it has cooperated and will continue to cooperate with the law enforcement agencies and governments of other countries when it can be satisfactorily shown that criminality is involved."

Hear, hear, I say. But that statement is made in 1983.

Now, Mr. President, against the background of that agreement, entered into in 1982, and that public endorsement of that agreement set out in that press statement in 1983, I want to turn again to the charges levied against this Government by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town. He accuses this Government of supplying information to the United States authorities as if the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty had been ratified, and Members and the public will be aware that it has not been ratified by the United States' Senate.

Mr. President, no information has been supplied under the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, but that binding agreement entered into in 1982 has continued into operation and, until the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty has been ratified, there has been no way in which Cayman can properly withdraw from that binding agreement. I do not just want to say that. I want to give the House some figures as to the extent of this cooperation, because I do not want my words to be spoken in a vacuum to become just airy words about what we are or are not doing. I would like to give some hard

The agreement referred to was negotiated in October 1982. In 1982 the Americans made five requests for assistance underneath it. Of those, three were granted. Two were not dealt with in 1982, they were carried forward to the next year. In the next year, 1983, ten further requests for assistance were made, seven were granted (when I say they were granted, that means the Governor in Council issued an authorisation permitting the Cayman Islands Police Force to research and obtain information that would otherwise be confidential, but which related to the serious and genuine criminal offences disclosed in the request from the United States). Seven, as I say, were granted in 1983, and one was refused, and very properly refused, because it had not been passed through the proper channels.

In 1984, ten requests were received. Eleven were granted (and that includes, of course, some of these brought forward from the previous year). Two were refused and two were carried forward. Of the eleven that were granted in 1984 - I am sorry to politicise this, but I feel I ought to because charges have been levied against this present Government - ten were granted before the Elections and one was granted after the Elections.

In 1985, fifteen requests were received from the United States Government, thirteen were granted (and that includes two that were carried forward from the previous year), three were refused (one because it was not through the proper channels, others because they did not disclose sufficient information to show a case of criminality in the United States) and one was carried forward to the next year.

In 1986, nine requests for assistance were received. Five were granted, one was refused, four were carried forward to the next year - and because we are talking about the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, three of those that were granted were granted after the Treaty was signed. And Members will recall that it was signed on 3rd July, 1986, so that was three granted in the second half of 1986.

In 1987, this year, to date, seven requests have been received, seven have been granted, and four have been refused. It is eleven, because four had been carried forward from the previous year. Of those that were refused, three were refused because of insufficient information supplied from the United States. One was refused - this is significant, at least in my submission to the House it is significant - because it was a request for information relating to an offence which, although it was an offence in the United States, was not an offence in the Cayman Islands. In refusing it, the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force wrote to the United States authorities explaining why it had been refused, and I just want to read to the House the relevant parts of the letter. The letter begins:

"I refer to your request for assistance from the appropriate authorities in the Cayman Islands, dated 31st March ...".

It names the people, and I am obviously not going to go into that sort of confidential detail. The letter goes on:

"The substantive offence alleged in your request was a violation of the United States' Foreign Corrupt Practices Act of 1987."

Then it goes on in some detail to explain why that is not an offence here. The letter continues:

"As you will be aware, the provisions of the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law, under which the Executive Council of the Cayman Islands has previously issued authorisations to assist prosecuting authorities in the United States, stipulate that the offence committed or alleged to have been committed outside the Islands must be an offence which, if committed in the Islands, would be an offence against the laws of the Islands (see section 3(2)(b)(iii) of that Law).

In these circumstances the Executive Council of the Cayman Islands does not feel able to assist in this matter at this time. However, they have asked me to point out to you that under the recently negotiated Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, foreign corrupt practices are expressly included under the definition of 'criminal offence'. It follows, therefore, that a request of this sort might be entertained if made under that Treaty, and you may wish to consider resubmitting this request when the United States has ratified the Treaty."

Now, as I said earlier, that is one of the four requests that have been refused so far this year. In the light of that letter, may I remind Members and the public of the charge that was made by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town. It was that this Government had been supplying evidence to the United States as if the Treaty was in force. I hope that that letter firmly lays that unfortunate charge at rest.

Before I leave this subject, and indeed before I finish my contribution to this debate, there is one other related matter that I want to deal with. The same First Elected Member for Bodden Town also alleged that this Government was letting down investors from the United States who had come here and invested money, trusting in the shield of the Confidential Relationships Laws. And he used words to the effect that they had been tricked and betrayed. I want just to remind, or perhaps inform the House, if the House is not already aware of it, of two important steps that have been taken by this Government to protect, actively, North American investors who have been harassed by matters in that country relating to what we might regard as tax offences; in other words offences that would neither fall under the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty nor under that earlier cooperation, the spirit of which was so well summed up in that press release that I read from of 1983.

The two acts of this Government are well documented in the Cayman Islands Law Reports. I am holding up a volume of that so that Members can see it. It is something of which we are very proud. It is a formal, bound volume of law reports for the Cayman Islands. It represents a new departure in these Islands where important judgements of the courts are reported and published - not just for posterity, but also so that the lawyers, the accountants, the bankers, the professionals in the Islands, have a ready reference book to which they can turn when they are construing the Statute Law of the Islands.

I am digressing, and I know I am digressing, but provision is made for these in the Budget, so if I might just digress a moment so that Members can see what some of their money is buying. It is a handsome volume. It is also an important contribution to the infrastructure of the Islands and to the reputation worldwide of the Cayman Islands as a financial centre, because it means advisers anywhere can open this book and see what the law of the Islands is and be reassured particularly as to the stance that we take on confidential relations. There are two cases published in this book which have particular bearing upon the Member's allegation that this Government has betrayed North American investors by exposing them to investigation from the United States.

The first case is called in the matter of ABC Limited. It is given the name "ABC" to hide the true nature of the company that was the applicant, because to reveal confidential information would be to defeat the whole purpose of the exercise. It was a decision of Sir John Summerfield decided on 24th July 1984. I notice immediately that the date precedes the Elections, but I am going to read it anyway because it is important, and it is important that investors and the public be reminded of this case. It then leads on to the next, and in some ways, more important decision.

The decision of Sir John in this case was that what are called "enforced consents" are not lawful in the Cayman Islands and do not work here. I just have to explain what an enforced consent is. It is a technique by which the prosecutors in the United States get a court to compel somebody who is under investigation, (usually for tax matters) to sign a document which says, "I consent to any information held by any banks in (let us say) the Cayman Islands which relates to any companies over which I have signatory authority and to reveal that information to the prosecutors or to the Inland Revenue Service. Then the prosecutors come along with that piece of paper signed by the investor, present it to the bank, tell them he has consented, and demand that the information be given.

It is obvious that if that was allowed to continue, it would be very damaging for the structure of the confidential relationships in these Islands. So a private company, in 1984, brought an action for a declaration to the court to declare that that method of going about things was unlawful and that such consents were not good consents for the purposes of the Confidential Relationships Law. And Sir John Summerfield very sensibly, you may think, rightly held that such consents are not consents at all and that it is nonsense to call such a paper signed under a court order backed up with criminal contempt sanctions, a consent. He rightly held that a bank or financial institution, when presented with such a piece of paper, was not entitled to divulge the information relating to the client.

Now as I say, that case was decided on the application of a private firm. It laid down a very important principle. Principles of law, of course, are no good unless they are enforced, and in 1985 the chance came to enforce that principle. The United States prosecutors, in a tax matter, got an order from one of their courts that an investor in the Cayman Islands should sign one of these pieces of paper - an enforced consent. The investor in fact had not signed, but nevertheless there was a very real risk that under the threat of criminal sanctions he would feel obliged to sign it.

In civil cases the Attorney General acts after consulting Executive Council because he is spending Government's money. In civil matters he acts as the legal advisor and the legal arm of Government. The Attorney General, as the legal arm of Government, commenced proceedings against the bank concerned (the bank that held the documents here) for an injunction commanding them, under penalty of criminal sanctions for contempt of court here, not to release the information if presented with one of these enforced consents - one of these lying little pieces of paper - from the United States of America. And that proceeding was heard in chambers, but the Chief Justice subsequently gave his judgement in open court because it was again a landmark decision.

He granted the injunction ordering the bank not to release the information. This is significant and made new law, and I may say this order was made in November 1985 and the proceedings were commenced during 1985. The Chief Justice also ordered that the bank hand over its documents, at least pending the outcome of the case, to the Financial Secretary for safe keeping and they have been locked away in the vaults ever since.

Members will readily appreciate that that is an important protection for the bank, because the American courts may not recognise the order of our courts. They may commence contempt proceedings against the bank in America notwithstanding the order of our court, but if the bank truly cannot comply with it, it is going to be protected from those proceedings.

So that landmark decision, in November 1985, was a classic case where Government actively intervened, spent some money (because we hired a senior lawyer from the United Kingdom to represent Government, we wanted nothing to go wrong) to protect the interests of one of those friends of the Cayman Islands - 'one of those'. And I borrow the First Elected Member for Bodden Town's terms - one of those investors who had come here relying upon our Law and our courts to protect him. So relying upon that case, I again refute and publicly refute his assertion that this Government has let down or betrayed the interests of such investors.

Before sitting down, and I will do so very shortly, I should like again to say that I am sorry that this contribution to the debate has first of all appeared to be pitched so much at the First Elected Member for Bodden Town. It is only because he made these important assertions that it was so vital for the interests of the Islands at large that they be rebutted and rebutted firmly. And so I am sorry to him that I have had to call him so often during the debate. And I am also sorry, to some extent, that I have had to politicise this by referring to this Government and the last Government. It is not something I would normally like to do. But, again, these were charges levelled against the present administration, and again, if they were not refuted, the public at large and investors in the Island would go around thinking that this administration had abandoned confidentiality and had abandoned the rule of law. I regret that I could not sit quietly in this House and let that go by without answering it.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENCY:

The Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, I rise to make my contribution to the Second Reading of the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987.

Like other Members before me, I wish to offer my sincere congratulations to the Honourable Financial Secretary, the First Official Member of Government, for his usual frank, fair and forthright Budget Address in which he has honestly given an overview of the state of our country's economy for the current year, and charted the course for 1988, pointing to the pitfalls and placing the facts before this honourable House and the people of these Islands.

A balanced Budget of $84.1 million for a country our size, in this day and age, is a success story by any man's measure. Having a cash surplus of $3.2 million in 1986 and a projected cash surplus of $3.7 million to the end of 1987 makes a total of $6.9 million. After putting away $2 million in general reserves, a balance of $4.9 million is left with which to start the year 1988. This, surely, is not only the biggest, but it has to be the best our country has ever had in its entire history, from a financial point of view, that is.

Nevertheless, Mr. President, we must recognise and accept that a price is paid for progress and we, as representatives of the people, must ensure that the price is not too great. In so doing we must find a way to preserve and protect the quality of life for our people in these Islands. We cannot stop or discourage development, but we must gauge it. We must encourage a rate of growth that will maximise benefits for our people on a long term basis. And in the final analysis, we must pause and answer the question for whom are we developing this country of ours? The answer, Mr. President, may not be popular, but it is certainly important and vital if we are to continue on a sound and steady course and provide the kind of future our children and their children expect and which we would like them to enjoy.

When we speak of what we have done and what they or others have done, none of us must forget from whence we came and what we have today. Nor must we ever forget that we are only holding these Islands in trust for future generations who will one day rise up and call us blessed, or either curse us for mishandling this trust.

During the delivery of the Financial Secretary's Budget Address, he spoke of the troubled economy of the world. I was once again vividly reminded of just how fortunate we, in these Cayman Islands, are. At the same time it was once again forcibly brought home to me just how vulnerable we are, as the two main industries of tourism and finance on which we depend are subject to and so strongly affected by outside forces over which we have practically no control. These are two of the most productive industries in the world which a country such as ours with no natural resource needs to nurture and care. They are fragile and must never be taken for granted, for we would certainly kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Banking and tourism complement each other. They go hand in hand and one would not be the tremendous success without the other, at least not in our particular case. It is a fact that many of our visitors combine business with pleasure and so, as it were, we are lucky to have and enjoy the best of both worlds. Therefore, unnecessary and irresponsible remarks made at this level in Government should be avoided because they cannot be recalled and certainly will not contribute to nor enhance the continuation of the relationship which has brought us success thus far - a relationship which accounts for the high lifestyle we all enjoy and of which we are often prone to boast.

What we do have control over and what we must constantly strive to improve is the quality of service we provide in the banking and tourism sectors. What we do have control over is the political stability which we have and which is so vital and necessary in order for these industries to continue to thrive and develop.

The day the people of these Islands allow over-ambitious, power-thirsty and self-appointed leaders to have their own selfish ambitions fulfilled will indeed be a sad day in our history for all of us. Then and only then, the depth to which we sink will be as comparatively low as the heights to which we have soared. The future of these Islands can so easily be placed in serious jeopardy that the majority of our innocent people would hardly realise how or when it all happened. When things are so good it is so easy to forget what brought us success and prosperity.

So I sincerely trust, Mr. President, that the public will not allow themselves to be misled or become confused by the rhetoric that is so often on display, but that they will cautiously and carefully weigh to whom they entrust the future of this land we all call home. But I do believe that the good commonsense which our people possess and have always exercised, will prevail. I am certain that the majority of good thinking Caymanians and residents understand very well that the role of the opposition is to criticise. That is their job. Of course, many people oppose simply for opposition's sake. But it is my view that claims and criticisms must be supported by fact, not by distortions of truth and ridiculous allegations.

I am very much aware that some opposition Members, (and without fear or favour I would like to clarify the point that when I refer to the Unity Team Members or to the opposition, I am not including the Member for East End, because I have found him to be a good representative for his district, and that he votes his conscience) would have a tough time debating this Budget. I believed that they would find it difficult to explain to themselves and their prophets of doom, why this country today is enjoying and experiencing such a vibrant and healthy economy. Understandably it is difficult to argue against success, but they say this is not success and that it is not like the boom years of 1976 to 1984 when they did it all. Of course, anything good that happens during the new Government's administration of 1984 to 1988 must still be attributable to them. Anything bad must rest on the shoulders of the present Government. But I have to ask how can this be? And here I am reminded of the Caymanian who spent the majority of his life in the United States. One day he returned home and was boasting to another fellow Caymanian that he was a civil engineer and had worked on the Empire State Building. To pull his leg, his Caymanian friend said, "But I recently read where the Empire State Building is crumbling from the foundation of the tenth floor." "Ah", he said, "but I only worked on the Empire State Building from the eleventh floor up."

Mr. President, it is my humble opinion and belief that had the downturn in the economy (which started during their administration early in 1984, and which carried over into 1985) and this unfavourable situation continued today, they would be standing up and shouting "I told you so, I told you not to elect that new Executive Council." But today the economy is strong and sound, and while there are some clouds on the horizon as far as world economy is concerned, investor confidence, which breathes the breath of economic life for these Islands, has never been stronger. A confidence that has been built because of trust in Government and the continuing faith in the future stability of Cayman. And God help us the day that this is ever destroyed.

One only has to look around at the large number of Caymanian owned businesses which have been established (and I am not talking about fronting either); one only has to check the high volume of sales in the shops and supermarkets; one only has to drive around the Islands and see the large number of family homes, apartment complexes, condominiums - even a new hotel is being built with others in the pipeline; and one only has to review the number of real estate transactions. I ask, Mr. President, how much to we really need to convince some people?

Mr. President, I do not wish to belabour the point but I knew full well that when the opposition Members spoke about plaques at the airport terminal, second baptisms and toilets, they had nothing to say and were only groping for something to criticise. I highly respect the dignity of this House. I respect the Chair and all Honourable Members because to my mind to do otherwise would be a serious reflection on our country and our people.

Many incorrect and uncomplimentary remarks have been made about various subjects of my Portfolio to which I must respond. Some Members of the opposition claimed that Caymanians are not sharing in the prosperity of the country; that Caymanians are not being trained; that the new hotels are being operated mainly with imported staff; that tourism policies are wrong; that Cayman Airways Ltd's accounts are wrong; and they even had the nerve to lay claims of victimisation amongst other far fetched and unsubstantiated claims. Yet in the same breath they attempt to take credit for the two new hotels. This was during their administration. They are responsible for the two new hotels, but yet they want to pass the buck for the needs and demands that development brings with it and which Government must address and meet. I am sure, Sir, that they do not want to take blame for the increasing traffic problem on the West Bay Road. I am sure that they do not want the blame for the labour that must be imported. They even criticise Government's efforts to find money for necessary capital projects such as sewerage and water, the fire stations and the other necessary airport developments.

Mr. President, the Hyatt Regency and the Treasure Island Resort have brought 525 new hotel rooms onto the market within the past year. Let me first say that these two fine, deluxe and first class hotel properties are an asset to our country. They have added a dimension and class to our tourism facilities which have enabled the Cayman Islands to attract new vacation and convention type business. The fact remains, however, that within the hotel industry there is a ratio of at least one to one. In other words, it is calculated that one employee is needed for each hotel room. Therefore, it is fair to say that approximately 525 hotel workers are needed to provide the quality service which we expect these hotels to provide. We already have an over-employment market in an industry where there is a 70 per cent to 30 per cent ratio - that is 70 per cent Caymanian staff and 30 per cent foreign staff. Where, may I ask, is the extra necessary manpower to come from if not from the outside?

The point I am making, Mr. President, is that when we improve and encourage new buildings to be built, we must also bear in mind that these buildings must be serviced and staffed, and a portion of that staff will have to come from outside these Islands if no one is available to fill the positions locally. This is a fact that cannot be ignored and this is where the Caymanian Protection Board comes in.

Mr. President, I know that this is a delicate subject, and I know that there are always two sides to the coin. The labour needs in households as well as in businesses are many and varied, but like everybody else I realise that. But let me say here that any Caymanian who wants to work today can find a job. This is indisputable and is common knowledge to all. But what we all may not know or what may have been overlooked is that many Caymanians are holding prominent jobs today and continue to be trained to hold top jobs in many companies of the private sector. And this is simply because the Caymanian Protection Board policies have made it clear that Caymanians must be given priority.

What also may not be known, Mr. President, is that there were employers in our country who were providing working conditions for imported staff which bordered on slave labour, and to provide the necessary housing further expanded our depressed areas. Is this the kind of country we want to build? Are these the Cayman Islands that we want to leave for our children? These are some of the reasons for certain Caymanian Protection Board policies that might have been understood. It is my own personal view that we must continue to be selective with regard to whom we admit to reside and work in our country and this selection must be based on justified need. A proper geographical balance must be maintained and this should be decided upon the circumstance of each case, based on the category to be filled and the means of the employer concerned.

Be that as it may, Mr. President, once workers are brought into our country, they must be treated fairly and equally, and not be taken advantage of simply because they are employed in these Islands. Now I know that this does not ring true across the board. This is not true about all employers, but there are and have been cases of labour exploitation - those who have enriched themselves through the use of cheap labour and at the expense of others; or those who did not want Caymanians even if they were available, simply because they could not threaten to cancel their work permits and force them to work unusually long hours. It is time that these realities are bluntly faced, and that these things are said without fear or favour.

Mr. President, the Budget Address tells us that we have a total workforce of over 10,000, with Caymanians representing 74 per cent. Naturally, and this must be accepted and known to all, a small country like ours produces professionals at a rather slow rate, but we are certainly getting there, maybe slowly, but surely because today we find outstanding Caymanians filling cross sections of important positions in our busy community. Bankers, doctors, lawyers, accountants, insurance managers, condominium managers and other Caymanians are currently in training to become hotel managers too.

The hospitality industry employs 2,295 workers, 20 per cent of our working population, 70 per cent of whom are Caymanians. In this industry, 454 persons are employed in managerial or supervisory positions, and of that number, 269 or 59 per cent, are Caymanian. I only comment to make the point that Caymanians are benefiting from the development and growth in this country, so do not tell me otherwise.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Could I perhaps interrupt you, or how do you feel?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

I would just like to say that it is not true that Caymanians are only filling menial jobs in the hospitality industry. My facts and figures do not support this argument and I refute it totally.

I can take a break now, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings are suspended until 2:15 p.m.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:15 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of the House are resumed. The Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. President, when we took the break, I was getting to the subject of tourism.

When I came to the Portfolio of Tourism, Aviation and Trade three years ago, I found certain sound policies and programmes which we have continued, built upon and improved. Others were changed and some have been replaced, and time has proven those decisions to be right. This is no different from when the self-styled Unity Team came to power in 1976. I am sure that they found in place a good foundation on which to build, and this is how all countries and governments have developed. Not one government can lay claim to doing all the good, with another doing all the bad.

The substantial increases in tourism and its tremendous success is attributable to a combined team effort between Government and the private sector. Our national airline, the Cayman Islands Hotel and Condominium Association, the Cayman Brac Tourism and Hotel Association and the Water Sports' operators have all put their dollar in a plan to promote these Islands. Added to that, our tour operators, ground transportation companies and, of course, the two new hotels, have also played an important role and made a contribution. This is a result of close cooperation and team work, which has worked well for us and which I continue to encourage. And I would certainly like to see this continue because there are real benefits to be gained.

Today our country, the Cayman Islands, has an exceptionally high profile, good image and reputation in the market place of which Government, our people and all tourism related businesses can be justly proud. It is rated as the 'number two' dive destination in the Caribbean. It is listed in highly reputable magazines as the new hot destination in the Caribbean. And it is my view that if we keep our country free from political strife; if we continue to provide good services for a fair price; and if we preserve the Caymanian qualities of honesty, integrity and friendliness which attracted visitors to our shores in the first place; then we will continue to be an attractive vacation destination. This might be easier said than done. Some unpopular but necessary decisions might have to be taken, but it is my view that if we want a secure future in this business, steps as these will have to be taken because competition for the tourist dollar is strong and getting stronger each day. One travel writer recently said that we must not let success spoil our country. To this cause we will have to control that monster called greed. It is no simple task, for in any society there are always those who want to become instant millionaires.

Mr. President, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town (I too am sorry he is not here today because I, like many others, like to look a man in the eyes when I say my piece) in his debate tossed around tourism statistics, claiming that the type of tourist visiting Cayman are of poor means, that they are not spending, and that the Department of Tourism is only concentrating on bringing in large numbers. He went on to accuse the Portfolio of indiscriminate spending.

Firstly, let me say that Government's funds are used to promote our country as a vacation destination. It is, however, the responsibility of each individual property owner to advertise and promote his or her own hotel or other tourist related business. Government has consistently targeted the middle to upper income bracket of tourist through the high quality magazines and newspapers in which our advertisements are placed. This is a policy I found in place. It has worked well for the Cayman Islands. It has consistently been applied and will continue to be applied. To say that all we are getting now is a larger number of tourists of lesser means is pure political propaganda. Common sense tells you that our tourism product is now, and has always, been geared to cater to a well balanced mix of tourists. This is dictated by the wide selection and variety of hotel and condominium facilities our Islands have to offer. Some people can afford $250 a day for a room, perhaps others only $25. But if our balance is maintained, then I insist that we are on the right course. Our visitors have a choice. The property selected is obviously based on price and the quality of service provided. Government's only insistence is that the service match the price. In fact, Mr. President, with the Hyatt Regency and Treasure Island hotels coming on stream, we have this year, more than ever before, been able to attract a far higher quality of visitor, be it for business or vacation. This year, tourism is expected to contribute some $105 million to our economy, which is 41.5 per cent higher than the contribution of $74 million made in 1984, using the same formula.

In 1984 the Department of Tourism's budget was $3,434,437. For that year, there were 148,485 air arrivals, which means if we deal with air arrivals in isolation, each one cost $23.13. This year, 1987, with estimated air arrivals of 210,000 and a tourism budget of $5,699,783, means that each tourist costs $27.14, or 17 per cent higher than in 1984. But let us face it, whose costs have not increased since 1984, be it householder or businessman? Part of this increased cost, Mr. President, is also due to the fact that we are now advertising the Cayman Islands and Cayman Airways on television in the United States for the first time - that is in the years 1986 and this year, 1987. This has proven to be most effective and productive and we intend to continue this subject, of course, to availability of funds because, let there be no doubt about it, there are many other Caribbean countries with bigger budgets and this country must strive to preserve its enviable position in Caribbean tourism, and simply because 20 per cent of our working population is directly dependent upon this industry for a living.

There are a few other statistics which might be of interest. Hotel room occupancy averaged 66 per cent up to August this year, and one hotel in Cayman Brac averaged 80 per cent. The length of stay for hotels was five days - an increase. Condominiums had an occupancy of 59 per cent, and the average length of stay was 7.5 days. Mention was also made with regard to mass as opposed to class; in other words that we were attracting too many charter tourists, and that they should all travel Cayman Airways. Tourists arriving by charter flights for July 1986 through June 1987 totalled 22,273. Eighty per cent of these travelled by Cayman Airways. Additionally, Government has set a policy whereby an average of 15 to 18 per cent of available rooms will be allowed for charter business. This is very rigidly controlled through the Air Transport Licensing Authority, of which I am Chairman.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town talked about mass tourism, which we really do not have. That point cannot be proven or substantiated by him. But yet in the same breath, he complains of low hotel occupancy. If our hotel rooms increase, how can occupancy be increased without tourist arrival increases? In my mind he is blatantly opposing merely for opposition's sake, and this does not hold one ounce of water.

Mr. President, I now come to Cayman Airways, what I call the perennial political football. I honestly believe that if Cayman Airways was to one day be privatised, I would dare to say that the proceedings of this honourable House would become rather dull and with all due respect, I am sure that some Members would find little to talk about.

The accounts of Cayman Airways for the financial year ended June 1987 were tabled during this meeting. I am not attempting to reopen the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 20/87 which followed, but the company's accounts are a true and accurate financial position of the airline. Unrealistic comparisons of one year with the other cannot change that fact. And incidentally, it might be of interest to note that in November 1984 when the accounts payable were $8 million, accounts receivable stood at $3 million. I have no more to say on that particular subject, Sir. I mean, that particular area because I am still on the subject of Cayman Airways.

Mr. President, it is an established fact that the airline business is one that has always been and one that will continue to be plagued by increasingly high operating costs and fluctuating passenger revenues. But let me say here quite clearly that if our national airline has ever had a fighting chance in its turbulent 20 year history to survive, it is now, under the able guidance of its dedicated, hard-working Chairman and Board of Directors. I must also add here that management and some, not all, of Cayman Airways' loyal staff, have responded well to the challenge of increased competition. The airline so far has managed to maintain a fair market share and survive with the strong support, financial and otherwise, from our Government and my Portfolio.

It is an indisputable fact that, by comparison, the losses in Cayman Airways have been brought down to a manageable and reasonable figure. And I maintain that if a $1 million per year subsidy is all that our Government is being called upon to pay (and if it can be kept at that level), then (and these things cost good money to provide) the high quality, safe, dependable service that Cayman Airways gives our country; the jobs that it provides for Caymanians; the value and importance of its inter-Island service; the support which it provides for the orderly development and promotion of tourism by way of opening up new direct services and new access points from United States' cities to the Cayman Islands; then I maintain that, by any man's standards, even the most severe critics of Cayman Airways must accept that this is a good investment in the future of our country. They must agree that this is a worthy, essential service, of which our people can be proud. The cost to the country is now only a small fraction of what some other Caribbean countries are having to pay to maintain their own national airlines.

It has been said publicly this year, last year and the year before, in every forum and in Throne and Budget Speeches, that Cayman Airways would have to brace itself for the inevitable competition that it would eventually have to face from major United States' carriers. With the increase of 525 new hotel rooms and the growth in the market that this would produce, United States' carriers would naturally become more interested in routes to the Cayman Islands, because prior to that we were considered to be too small a destination. So even though United States' carriers held the rights under Bermuda II to serve the Cayman Islands from any point in the United States since 1977, they were partly kept out by their own decisions on economic grounds.

Of course, I am well aware of the moratorium which was placed on the Miami-Cayman route for two years; because shortly after we were elected in 1984 the moratorium was about to expire and this Government renegotiated an extension for an additional two years, which would have otherwise come to an end in April of 1987. It could not be expected that we should continue to receive extensions of this moratorium on the Miami route indefinitely, and it was highly unlikely that with the new hotel rooms coming on line in 1987 that any further extensions - which incidentally would have been the third extension - should be considered.

Mr. President, with the help of Mr. John Weekling of the Department of Transport in London we started negotiations with the United States Department of Transportation in Washington. And I would like publicly to record my thanks to Mr. Weekling for his assistance. He understood our problem and went to the United States and fought a battle to see that Cayman Airways or that a British carrier, designated by the British, got their rights. I, and this country, are indebted to him. The outcome of these talks resulted that in exchange of an early termination of the moratorium by four months, Cayman Airways would be granted route rights to three unnamed points in the United States, in addition to Miami and Houston which we held previously. Any of the two points selected by Cayman Airways can be changed to any others of its choice merely by giving the United States' Authorities 90 days notice. This gives Cayman Airways almost unlimited access to the United States.

Mr. President, the United States' Government did not have to sit around a table and negotiate with Cayman on this matter. They could have let the moratorium run its course and come to an end on 1st April, 1987. The American carriers that were designated could have then started service and we would have ended up, still, with only Miami and Houston. So regardless of what is said, I think that that was a tremendous deal for Cayman Airways and this country. Additionally, as part of that package, Cayman Airways obtained standing charter rights from any United States' point to any British point in the Caribbean without having to request permission from the United States' Authorities.

Mr. President, as is well known by all concerned, air service agreements between countries are based on reciprocity and fair and equal opportunity for the carriers of both countries. This is an exchange of rights which must be recognised and respected. I see this new arrangement as a golden opportunity for Cayman Airways to eventually come into its own. It reduces Cayman Airways' dependence on interline traffic fed by United States' carriers to Miami and Houston for the first time in its history. It gives the airline a chance to develop and expand and to become a competitor to be reckoned with, and it opens up tourism through new direct services from key United States' cities to the Cayman Islands. This has been a most significant development for Cayman Airways and the Cayman Islands, and I refuse to allow political rhetoric and campaign chants to downplay its importance.

Any airline's worth is measured by the routes to which it holds rights, regardless of what kind of equipment it has to operate. And I dare say that if a monetary value were to be placed on these new routes which Cayman Airways obtained this year and put on the asset side of its balance sheet, it would be the most valuable and impressive balance sheet ever produced by the airline. The opposition claim, however, that it is as simple as sending Eastern Airlines to Cayman Brac instead of allowing them into Owen Roberts.

Mr. President, believe me, it would serve no useful purpose if Cayman were to jeopardise a good and long standing relationship, especially with a country like the United States which supplies 83 per cent of our tourists. If we were to attempt to resort to trickery, do not think for one minute that the United States' Authorities would not see through this. And if it could be proven that we ever denied fair and equal opportunity to United States' carriers which have been designated to serve the Cayman Islands, then I believe that Cayman Airways' rights to serve key United States' cities, and the air service agreement in existence between the United Kingdom and the United States, would be jeopardized.

What if the United States were to one day say that Eastern Airlines will fly into Cayman Brac and that Cayman Airways will no longer fly into Miami, but instead into Fort Lauderdale? Can you imagine what an upheaval and inconvenience this would cause to the travelling public? These arrangements are based on rights and must be recognised and respected. It is not something of a politician's dream or something that can be invented by a self-proclaimed expert.

The story of Cayman Airways has been told and retold a thousand times. I can only hope and trust that the airline and its operations will be left alone for a while now, at least so that its Board of Directors and management can concentrate on expansion and the development of a route system that will open up new avenues never before available to the airline and our country; a growth pattern that can, with the right help, make Cayman Airways the strong, high quality carrier we all want it to be so that when all is said and done, when the clouds disappear, the storm passes, and the sun shines the airline can look to a brighter tomorrow.

It is a fact that in 1977 Government, as the sole shareholder, assumed financial responsibility for the national airline, and as a result the public lays claim to 'a right to know' - as it is then our airline. However, we must realise that with that right comes a responsibility and so I trust that the travelling public, especially the local market, will continue to give Cayman Airways the strong support it has always given, and which the airline will continue to stand in need of if it is to survive.

Mr. President, I now turn to Civil Aviation. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town claimed that the creation, or establishment, of a Civil Aviation Authority was also a Unity Team idea and project. I do not know about that, Sir. What I found was that a Civil Aviation Authority, to handle the airport affairs, was a condition laid down by Caribbean Development Bank when they approved the loan for the terminal for Government. In any event, let me say that the Authority is in place and is functioning well so far. I believe that we have a capable Director of Civil Aviation who makes and spends wisely a dollar for the Authority. I believe that he, together with the newly organised Civil Aviation Authority Board, will direct the operations of our airports in the best possible manner. However, I should point out, and it must be borne in mind, that the cost of operating the Cayman Brac terminal will eventually have to be taken into consideration, but I am convinced that, where a profit can be made, every effort will be made to do so.

There is also the claim that the fire station at Owen Roberts Airport should have been ready long ago, and that we are dragging our feet in this respect because the Unity Team left behind the building plans. My understanding is that their Government threw this fire station out of the Airport Development Plan and said absolutely no more about it. So who was going to start it? It was put in the 1986 Budget at the request of the Chief Fire Officer, and after seeing the deplorable conditions under which he and his men were working, I could not help but agree with him that something had to be done, and done urgently. Incidentally, Mr. President, this fire station is to be completed in 1988, and it really does not matter to me whose name is put on the plaque. That does not bother me in the least. I feel, however, that whatever is done for this country, the deciding factor must be whether it is good or bad. I believe that this is a good project, and I support it. The firemen are worthy of it and I look forward to its completion.

The fire station for West Bay, a high density area, is also a much needed facility for the safety of our tourists and locals alike. The past Government certainly cannot lay claim to this.

Mr. President, our Department of Labour continues to do a good job, and it is not costing the country much. The recent appointment of a Director of Trade and Labour will further strengthen this Department and prepare it to administer the Labour law when it is passed. And I am not anticipating that either, Sir for I hope the Bill will be passed. It should also make this Department more efficient, that is the Director. The additional costs are reasonable for the services which are being provided. The new Director will also concentrate more on the subject of trade and diversification of the economy to the extent possible. This possibility has been talked about by all Governments. And while diversification of the economy is certainly desirable, its limitations, due to over-employment and high labour costs, must be recognised. Because these are realities.

Mr. President, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town referred to victimisation. He said that the poor people of Cayman Brac are suffering in silence because they are afraid of being victimised. And the other Bodden Town Member, too, referred to political victimisation. It must have really taken them much nerve to utter that word. At best it could only be taken as a poor joke.

The people in Cayman Brac are today receiving the best air service that they have ever received in their history; that is, five jet flights a week and two, three or four flights a day by the lovely Shorts aircraft. They have a service for 1,200 or 1,400 people. The Cayman Brac people are wise though, they know who will stand up for them and be counted. They know who will protect their interests. I have been associated with the Cayman Brac people and their needs for an air service since June of 1955. They remember well, when the mosquitoes were out by the thousands at the airport and when there were no night lights, who went out and lit kerosene flare pots to let aircraft in and out with sick patients aboard when there was no hospital in the Brac; and they remember who performed those duties to get their seamen in and out to their jobs. The Cayman Brac people have a long memory, and one thing I like about the Brackers is that you do not have to worry where you stand with them because they will tell you from the beginning. So they are not being misled, and I am sure that they know who will stand up for them.

Coming back to victimisation, Mr. President. To prevent them from bringing up this subject, one only has to remember the innocent Caymanians who lost their jobs with Cayman Airways just before the 1984 elections. Furthermore, Mr. President, let me say this. Had this Government practised victimisation policies, many of the Cayman Airways staff, who are Unity Team supporters and sympathisers and who are today taking information out of the company, would have been fired long ago. But we said in the beginning that from 1984 the decisions made concerning Cayman Airways must be made on economic rather than political grounds, and I maintain that. If an employee is a good employee who performs his duty, then his political views must be his business. However, it is not their business to take information out of the company and on to the streets. If they were loyal employees they would not do so, and if we were a Government that practised victimisation, they would have been fired.

Mr. President, in the three years of this Government, it is true that we have had to make some unpopular decisions. But this does not mean for one minute that they were wrong decisions. Take for example the Marine Parks. I knew people whom I took as friends, but today they would knock me down in the streets of George Town and not speak to me because I stood for those Marine Parks. There are, however, always two sides to the coin, Sir. There are those who come back and say they are glad that Mr. Johnson brought that to the House, and that they are glad that I supported it and that this Government made it a reality. The conchs and lobsters are now coming back and we are seeing fish again. So we will see them jumping on the bandwagon saying that the Marine Parks was their idea and that today they think it is a good thing.

The Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty was another matter that this Government had to take. But let me say, however, that the cleaning up of the image of these Islands, internationally, accounts in great deal and measure to our success today. Tax increases were controversial perhaps, but were necessary and important to the future of our country to meet our people's needs.

Turning now, Mr. President, to the future. Using the Financial Secretary's own words, there is no doubt that the great architect who created this world watches over us. To my mind, truer words have never been spoken, and with God's help and proper planning on our part, we can keep the good ship Cayman off the reefs and on an even keel. Without being emotional we, as representatives, owe this much to those who have passed through this honourable House before us, to those who will come after us and to all who reside in these peaceful and beautiful Cayman Islands.

Thank you, Mr. President, and I support the Appropriation Bill.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON D. FRANKS:

Mr. President, I too wish to associate myself with the congratulations that have been given to the Honourable Financial Secretary on his well thought out and well delivered Budget Address.

I support the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987, Mr. President. This Bill, if passed into Law, will provide the funds to service the 1988 Budget. I can support this Bill with confidence, because it is a good Budget, it is a sensible Budget, and it is a sustainable Budget - and all without additional taxation.

The 1988 Budget estimates recurrent revenue of $70,998,278 - an increase of 5.31 per cent over the 1987 revised figures. Of course, as the Honourable Financial Secretary said, it is approximately 9 per cent over the 1987 approved figures. But this is a nice easy increase. No overheating, just a nice comfortable, easy increase. Revenue to be raised from loans is $8,363,902, and when taken together with $4,950,049 brought forward as surplus from 1987, we have a total receipt of $84,312,229 for the year. It is proposed that this amount of $84.3 million will be used as follows: recurrent expenditure, $62,354,482; statutory expenses including repayment of loans, pensions and the like, $3,843,593; capital development, $15,956,783; and new services including both personnel and equipment, $2,010,949. Together, the expenses mentioned above will total $84,165,807, and it is estimated that $146,422 will be carried forward as a surplus to 1989.

I wish to point out at this time that it is from the amount of $15,956,783, the capital development provisions, that new roads, new buildings, boat ramps and all such development, are built. So it is to that amount that Members must refer when they are talking about how much their respective districts are getting, and not the $84.3 million which they keep referring to.

The recurrent expenditure of some $64.3 million, when new services are combined, go to pay for services which are common to all of the districts in the Island. For example, it is from this sum that the cost of running the two schools in the Bodden Town district, the cost of operating the clinic in the Bodden Town district, and the police station in the Bodden Town district, is paid. And so is the case with East End. The cost of running the school, the clinic, the Sunrise Cottage, the police station and the rest in East End are taken from that amount. Additionally, it is from that vote that the cost of bussing children from East End and Bodden Town, West Bay and, in fact, all of the districts to the High School and Middle School in George Town, is paid. And it is also from that vote that the cost of operating those two schools is paid.

Further, Mr. President, all districts benefit from other common services such as the hospital, the central police service, the road system, the courts and, in fact, all of the common services of Government. So when the Members from East End and Bodden Town talk about what they have or what they get from the total Budget, they get a lot more than they have admitted. And we must make it plain that the figures they were talking about was only development money.

The Members from East End and Bodden Town - the remnants of the Unity Team Government - have given all sorts of figures regarding the financial position of the country at the end of 1984. They have given all sorts of figures for the reserves and the public debt, and I want to give the true figures for those two items as well as for the cost of servicing the public debt, then and now. And some other relevant figures as well, Mr. President.

At the end of December 1984, the general reserve account was $7,783,008.59, not some $11 million, as they claim. I believe they reversed figures. The loans at that same date, that is 31st December, 1984, were $11,607,784.59. But even those figures do not give the true picture of the country's financial position as at 31st December, 1984 (that is at the end of the Unity Team's stewardship) because in addition to the general reserve being only $7,783,008.59, instead of the $11 million they claim it to be, there was an overdraft at the bank amounting to $3,591,096.91. And of the general reserve of $7.78 million, $4,583,333.33 was hypothecated to the bank to secure the Tower loan. So if we add the overdraft of $3,591,096.91 to the hypothecated sum of $4,583,333.33, we will get a total of $8,174,430.24 - or a total deficit of $391,421.65.

Put another way, Mr. President, if we had taken all of the money from the reserve account over, or in excess of, the amount which had to be left there to secure the Tower loan, we would have been able to withdraw $3,199,675.26 to apply or to pay towards an overdraft of $3,591,096.91. When those figures are computed, it can readily be seen that even if that payment had been made, the overdraft would still have been $391,421.65 - the same as the figure that I have stated the total deficit above to be.

Unless the figures that I have taken from the budgets are erroneous, that is the financial position - the liquidity position of Government at 31st December, 1984. Except to say that, in addition to that, the revenue and deficit account was also in debit to the tune of $590,747.58. And, at the same time, Mr. President, Cayman Airways was overdrawn at the bank to the tune of over $2 million. So it takes a lot of gall to come here and talk about a healthy financial position of this country at the end of 1984. Only the Unity Team Members of this House would have that gall.

With your permission I would like to take a few moments to show the financial position of the country three years later; that is today, or at least what it will be at as at 31st December this year.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would that be a convenient point at which to break?

HON. BENSON O. FRANKS: Yes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: We will suspend for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:13 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:32 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings of the House are resumed. The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON O. FRANKS: Mr. President, I was saying that I wished to take a few moments to show the financial position of the country three years later, or what it will be as at the end of December this year.

We have general reserves of $10,314,467.35, of which only $2,619,047.63 is hypothecated for the Tower loan - leaving a free general reserve of $7,695,419.72. We estimate a current account surplus of $4,950,049, making a total free reserve and surplus accounts of $12,645,468.72.

Mr. President, let me hasten to add that that is what the liquidity position will be at 31st December this year. We have, of course, already carried forward in our Budget a $4.9 million surplus that is factored into next year's spending. Surely that does not look like a Government that is incompetent or irresponsible, as the remnants of the Unity Team would have this House believe. No, that is far from the case.

Let us go to the loans or the public debt situation which those same Unity Team Members have been making so much fuss about, saying that we are over our heads. Let us look at the position going back to 1984.

In 1984 it took $1,348,247, or 2.51 per cent, of the current revenue to service the public debt. In 1985 it took $2,921,292, or 5.186 per cent, of recurrent revenue to service the public debt. And here I would like to pause and emphasise that it took $2,921,292, or 5.186 per cent, of the recurrent revenue to service the public debt in 1985, because that is loans left by the Unity Team Government. This Government borrowed no money in 1985 other than about $100,000 that was left from the airport loan as retention money which had to be taken to pay the contractor so no loan repayments were imposed on the revenues of the country by this Government up to 1985.

In 1986 it took $2,686,033, or 4.33 per cent, of the recurrent revenue to service the loan. In 1987 it took only $1,904,116, or 2.82 per cent. That is because during 1986 some of the loans were paid off. And now in 1988, it will take, again, $2,797,026, or 3.94 per cent, of recurrent revenue to service the public debt. That figure is lower than the figure in 1985.

So it is a healthy position, Mr. President. Any country which can keep the amount for servicing the public borrowings at 3.94 per cent of recurrent revenue is in a comfortable, sound position. And let us see exactly what it represents.

The cost of servicing the public debt in 1988 will not even be equal to the increase anticipated in revenue from the sale of revenue stamps, which amounts to $2,321,000, plus the interest which will be received on bank balances of $0.5 million. Together they total $2,821,000, and a debt repayment obligation, as I said, is $2,797,026. For emphasis, again, let me point out that we are talking about the increase in revenue on these two items, not the total revenue which is more like $8.471 million.

So, Mr. President, the repayment obligation is a pittance compared to total revenue. I hope that the two Members for Bodden Town now understand the true position of the country at the end of 1984 - a disaster. That is the disaster the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town was speaking about. That is the condition in which his Government left the country - that was the disaster. And, as I said, at the end of 1987 we are now in a solid position and looking better for 1988. Even Cayman Airways Limited had credit balances at the bank for the 1986 and 1987 financial years.

The electorate of this country, Mr. President, is solid and sensible. They knew what they were doing in 1984. Can Members imagine the blow to us poor people that would have been imposed by the Unity Team's taxation, had they returned to power in 1984, in an endeavour to recoup from the disaster they were in - and on top of that, to fill the shopping list that the Elected Member for East End claimed he had in the 1984 budget? Again, I repeat, the people of this country knew what they were doing in 1984. They still know what they are doing and what they are going to do in 1988. Do not let those two Members for Bodden Town think any differently. People who operate small businesses in this country, the small men, know now, if they did not know before, that the small tax increases which we had to make in 1986 were necessary. They were necessary to bring us out of the position that the Unity Team had left us in. They were a pittance compared to what the Unity Team would have done if they were left in power. Further, Mr. President, they know that their money is well spent.

We have been accused of undertaking projects in 1988 that we should have started in 1985, immediately after taking office. How in the world can a Government start projects from positions such as the one at the beginning of 1985 as I have shown? That is the same reason why the Elected Member for East End did not get his cattle dip and other items which he had in the 1984 estimates. The money was not there.

Mr. President, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town had the audacity to say that the people of this country expected the sewerage work scheme to have started in early 1985. This is a project that will cost nearly $10 million, and they never left one cent in the Treasury with which to start it. We started as soon as we could, and I am sure much sooner than they would have been able to do, because they would have had to reorganise Cayman Airways four times, just for the sake of doing it.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said that it was morally wrong for this Government to use the profits from the Currency Board. The Currency Law stipulates what revenue, or amount of money, is necessary for the Currency Board to hold in reserve. The Honourable Financial Secretary at page 10 of his Budget Speech was able to announce that for the second year in succession it was unnecessary to transfer anything from the operating surplus to the general reserve, as the general reserve was in excess of the 15 per cent of demand liabilities required under the Law. And in fact, if my figures are right, it was at 20.5 per cent. So no one need worry about the value of the Cayman Islands dollar. It is as solid as gold.

The same Member, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said that he was alarmed by the heavy reserve investments of the Currency Board being in United States dollars. He thought the reserves should be invested in other currencies. Mr. President, if that advice was followed the country would be in a disaster. Our currency is pegged to the United States' dollar. Therefore, all our reserves should be held in United States' dollars. We then have no exchange risk. The country took the decision long ago to peg our currency to the United States' dollar, and we will have to stick with it now regardless of what happens to the United States' dollar. I believe that the United States' dollar is still a good currency, but as I said, Mr. President, we have to, in any event, keep the reserves in United States' currency because we would otherwise be taking an exchange risk. If we were to take the advice of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and if the markets were to move against a foreign currency of which we were in, the reserves of the Board would be wiped out. So we must keep the reserves in United States' dollars, and as long as we do that we have no fear of our reserves being wiped out.

Mr. President, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, again, challenged us to show him anything that had happened since 1984 as a result of the actions of this elected Government. There is an old saying, actions speak louder than words. I intend to answer him, but I am sure that his colleague, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, answered him far more eloquently by his actions in his speech that followed than I ever can.

The truth is that we restored confidence in the Government of this country. Investors were and are impressed by the honesty and integrity of this Government. It is true that the old Paradise Manor, now the Treasure Island Resort, was there during their time and that some interest had been shown in it before 1984. But the truth is that either the investors or the bankers lacked confidence and that is why things started to move after the elections in 1984. The same is true about the Hyatt Regency. It was there dying on the vine, and once this Government took over in November 1984 the funding became available. That is the case with many more developments in the country. Mr. President, one thing they cannot agree with is success, and we have that to show. We are not promising it, it is here.

The actions of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, to which I referred, were of course his incredible tirades about the banks breaking the country's confidentiality laws and, in particular, his charges of personal political victimisation by the Elected Executive Council. These are serious charges and could only be made by someone who, in my opinion, lacks an interest in the well being of this territory or its people as a whole. He once said that when there is nothing in Cayman for him there will be nothing for anyone else. I do not know if that stage has been reached.

The same Member charged that the negotiating, signing and subsequent ratification of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty by this country and the United Kingdom has destroyed our confidentiality. Nothing could be further from the truth. If our business climate has been destroyed, how can the Honourable Financial Secretary report substantial increases in the numbers of banks, companies and insurance companies registered during the last year? And I want to emphatically deny that the Government is complying with the Treaty as if it were in full force. The Treaty is a mutual one and will not be implemented until the United States ratifies it. No one has any authority to give information under that Treaty. I believe that the attempt made, by the Member, to smear the Government, including our Attorney General, with that remark is cheap and irresponsible.

Mr. President, I would have been more worried by the accusations of the Member if he had not attempted to get down to specifics, that is, his complaint that the banks were settling withdrawals, by American entities, in drafts on United States' banks instead of paying locally in United States' currency. The Member should know by now that things have changed. The country has cleaned up its act. Large amounts of cash are no longer accepted by the banks, therefore it is no longer available to pay withdrawals.

That custom of banks accepting large amounts of cash (cash from unknown entities) prevailed before 1984 when that type of money came into the country by the plane load, and very few questions were asked. Anyone who has clean, legitimate money in Cayman will not object to receiving repayment of that money in the form of a draft on an American bank when they are returning it to the United States or anywhere else they may be taking it. They have nothing to fear. The only people who have anything to fear are those with illegal funds. And, as I said, that is another thing we did to bring the economy back. We finished the job of cleaning up the image and workings of the tax haven business.

I have been told that those people, who have been vacationing here for years, who tear off their baggage tags before they get home so that their neighbours do not see they have been to Cayman, are now displaying those tags with pride. Some of them have even bought condominiums here because Cayman is no longer looked upon as a place for crooks and drug barons to visit or keep their dirty money.

Mr. President, with regard to the charge that the Elected Executive Council is persecuting the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, the Member knew about the investigation before we did, and so we do not need to do anything so politically drastic to him. We can do that without the help of Scotland Yard. The electorate of Cayman will take care of him in the coming elections; as they did in 1984, and all we need to do is the same thing that we did then, which is tell the people the truth and expose the facts. The public will do the rest.

For a little while, I want to deal with the areas which fall directly under my Portfolio.

The First Elected Member For Bodden Town said it was ridiculous that it takes three days to get a blood test taken at the hospital. The Member was not talking about a normal blood test because the results of these are usually available the same day. The Member was referring to a special procedure, involving the culture of bacteria, which takes three days. And for his information, and for that of the House, I would point out that results of this special procedure takes three days in any other country - be it the United States, Canada or Europe.

The Member also said that it takes three weeks advance booking to have an ordinary x-ray taken. This is not so. If there is a special procedure, such as a barium meal x-ray, it is usually done every two weeks when the radiologist visits. It could be taken and sent off for reading, but it is better done on site when the radiologist is here. It is common knowledge that we do not have a radiologist at the hospital, and that it takes a radiologist to read that type of x-ray properly. This is the reason for the delay. To correct this unsatisfactory situation, it is important to note that provision is made under new services, in our 1988 estimates, for the employment of a full-time radiologist. And what do we find the Elected Members for Bodden Town saying? They say that all the new posts should be cut out of the Budget. This would include the radiologist. Does this sound like anyone interested in improving, for our people, the services at the hospital? No, Mr. President. They come here only to criticise. And yet they make the people believe that they would like conditions improved for them.

Any service, Mr. President, is capable of being improved, but our hospital does not render a bad service for a facility of its size. Now that the recommendations from the Ground Transportation Study are forthcoming, I trust that we will soon be able to determine whether our new hospital should be on the present site or whether it should be relocated. Mr. President, we should have had the Study by now, but it was considered that, before we had the hospital study undertaken, it would be best to see whether there would be any significant changes to our road system. Otherwise we could have ended up with a recommendation siting it in the wrong place. The country, Mr. President, can rest assured that this will be this Government's next major undertaking.

Both Members for Bodden Town said that this Government had erred, and that it set a bad example when it lessened the penalties under the Misuse of Drugs Law. We removed the mandatory prison sentence and put the discretion back in the courts where it should be. That is all we did. We did this because we often read, in the press, that judges did not want to send particular offenders to prison, but that they had no alternative because their hands were tied by the Law. We have now placed the discretion back in the hands of the judges so that they can use their knowledge and training to do justice. Each case has its own particular set of circumstances, and it is my opinion that any judge must be free to take special circumstances into consideration. I want to make it quite clear, however, that we did not reduce in any way the maximum penalties which could be applied under the Law. They remain and are still in effect. Mr. President, the two Elected Members for Bodden Town and the Unity Team Members appear to be joyed in having our prison filled with young, first time offenders, and they never miss an opportunity of telling us how sorry they are to see that we changed that law.

Mr. President, I know that we have a long way to go in providing all of the services necessary to meet, head on, the scourge of alcohol and drug abuse in our society. But we have come a long way. On page 31 of the Budget Address, the reference under "Prisons" states, to the effect, that all the available resources are being committed to meeting the immediate demands rather than to the planning and implementation of strategies to address, effectively, issues related to the rehabilitation of offenders. Mr. President, I took this to mean manpower resources within the Prison Service, and not generally, as the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town implied. But here again, the provisions under new services seek to address the severe shortage of staff at the prison by providing nine new posts for the Prison Service. Here again, the Members who opposed the new services would deny the Prison Service the officers it needs to provide an adequate service. And yet they come here crying about the lack of services when they are not prepared to back what they say in the estimates.

I would like to point out that in addition to the Prison Service, the Social Services Department is working generally with inmates at the prison and their families at home, while the newly appointed Drugs' Counsellor is working with those inmates who happen to be there because of drug and alcohol abuse. It should also be noted that the courts can now make use of suspended sentences and community service orders which it could not use before. Release of prisoners on licence is another tool which is now being used to good effect. And of course, we should not overlook the excellent work being done at the prison by the Prison Ministry.

Speaking generally on drug and alcohol abuse, we should not forget that simultaneously with the work being done with the misusers, we have, in many instances, on-going programmes in cooperation with service clubs, schools and youth groups which, hopefully, will prevent the misuse of drugs before it starts. Mr. President, I am of the opinion that it is much wiser, and more easily done, to prevent the abuse taking place than in trying to cure people once they are hooked. We have the Quest programme going. We have drug education in the school as part of Social Education studies. We now have the Drugs Counsellor on the staff. We anticipate a full-time psychiatrist in January, and all this is in addition to the programmes that are now being put in place. So, quite a lot is being done and, in any event, it is in my opinion a lot more than when we came to office.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town asked how many people were employed in the Education Department and, of that amount, how many are Caymanian. My best information is that in the entire Education Department, both in administration and in the schools, 263 people are employed and that 91 are Caymanian. In the administration section, 20 are employed, of whom 13 are Caymanians. In all schools, 243 are employed, of whom 78 are Caymanian. I too wish that there were more Caymanians in the teaching profession, and I can assure this House that everything possible is being done to encourage that.

The fact that we have a large expatriate teaching staff is no recent phenomena. This existed from the earliest days of education in Cayman. It has become more pronounced in the last decade or so, because the number of teachers has increased so much in that period. I believe that, with the passage of time, more Caymanians will go into the teaching profession. In fact, we are told in the Budget speech that six newly qualified teachers joined the Department during the last academic year, and that of the 50 students abroad, 19 are in teacher training.

In addition to this there are three student aides in post who will hopefully go on for further training this year. The student aides programme, in spite of what the First Elected Member for Bodden Town said, is a rational programme. Young people who express an interest in teaching are taken on as aides for a year or two to give them an opportunity to get a hands-on, first-hand experience of what the job will be like. It is a time for them to decide whether teaching is really what they want to do for the rest of their lives. Simultaneously it gives the Department an opportunity to evaluate the proposed teacher and to determine whether the Department is satisfied that they will make a satisfactory teacher. To the best of my knowledge, no aide who has been considered suitable for further training, or who has the necessary qualifications, has been refused or denied a scholarship. The odd ones who failed to acquire the required qualifications, or who the Department thought were not ideally suited as teachers, have been denied. But it is better to decide that before the person takes their training and for it is discovered later. To do otherwise could only bring disappointment to the student, the Department and to the country generally.

In addition to all of this, 32 teachers, studying at the University of Miami to upgrade their qualifications and skills, will complete their degree course in the spring of 1988. So, Mr. President, it is futile for people to come here and tell the country nothing is being done to improve the situation.

With regard to scholarships, I would like to make it abundantly clear that I, at no time, said that free scholarships have not been given during the past year. What I said was that all scholarships, now, have an element of loan to them. That means that some portion of the financing of the course of education is by way of loan and is not an outright gift. At no time did I say that free money was not given. This could mean that a student may get as much as nine-tenths of the cost of his course financed by way of scholarship, and the remaining one-tenth by way of a loan. This was seen by the Education Council as a means of causing each person to appreciate the scholarship more, and to defuse the attitude which was beginning to take root in the country; that is that Government must provide everything free and that they may come home and say they do not now want to work for Government. We believe that in doing this the responsibility is put upon the students' shoulders.

But I want to make it clear that the student receives the same amount of funds as he would if the scholarship was totally free. He has the money to finance his education from an outright grant or a loan, or a combination of the two. So the question of anyone not being able to go off to university on this account does not arise. And for the information of the Member for Bodden Town who talked about the bond, he should know that the bond is signed whether the financing is by way of grant or loan. The bond is to come back and serve in the country, and the person is bonded for the amount of the scholarship.

So the question of loan does not change the matter or the method of bonding. And I wish, Mr. President, to comment on the example given by the Second Elected Member of Bodden Town which he cited as being unreasonable. Far from being unreasonable, it is most reasonable. The scholarship criteria at the moment requires that an applicant, among other things, must have four "O" level passes, or an equivalent if he comes from the American system of education. The young man, in question, does not have the required four "O" levels, but he has obtained acceptance at an American university. So the Education Council, acknowledging that there are late bloomers, said to the young man (as we have done for others similarly placed) that if he or his family could finance the first year of his course of study at the university, and if he obtained such stated satisfactory grades, we would consider, and in all probability, grant him a scholarship for the balance of his course. So far from being unreasonable, this gives the young man an opportunity he otherwise would not have had. He is being given a second chance at the scholarship. The alternative to that is that he can go to the Community College and get the required "O" levels for the scholarship and then reapply.

Mr. President, I also wish to state emphatically that no person, having the qualifications for a scholarship, who has applied for one is walking the streets of Cayman under the influence of drugs or otherwise. Any person who has applied to Government for financing and who has met the criteria as laid down has received his or her scholarship. It might be that there are people in that condition out there, but such persons would be those who had been disillusioned under the policies of the last Government, such as being trained as seamen for jobs that did not exist, or by being misled into believing that they could qualify as chefs after six week courses.

This is perhaps a good time to respond to the point made by the Second Elected Member for West Bay about the catch-22 situation with a student having to gain acceptance to a university before he gets the scholarship, and by having to produce proof of financing before being accepted. But the position is as follows. The Scholarship Regulations state, among other things, that an applicant must have been accepted by an institution approved by the Education Council, or that the applicant must have received conditional acceptance to such an institution.

Most applications are put forward by March of each year from students sitting their examinations in June of that year. In the case of students not sitting overseas examinations, for example students from Triple C School, it would be from students who are graduating in June of that year. These applicants will usually have applied to universities explaining that the final examination results will not be known until late August, and they usually get a conditional acceptance or an acceptance conditioned by the fact that a place is available to them providing that they achieve satisfactory passes and grades.

The Education Council, likewise, will process the application and advise the applicant that the scholarship has been granted providing that the minimum number of passes and grades are achieved. So usually no problem is experienced in that.

Some difficulty can be experienced, I understand, in the case of more mature students who, having been out of school for a year or more, attempt at the last minute to make arrangements to go overseas. However, the Education Department does give applicants a letter when requested confirming that the applicant will in all likelihood receive a scholarship if all the criteria are met. So I cannot see how, and I am advised, that no problems arise when applications are made in good time. I too, Mr. President, have had similar representations made to me as has been made to the Second Elected Member for West Bay. But my enquiries indicate that while there might be something wrong in the timing and the processing of the applications, that it is not in fact due to any of the requirements of the Council at the moment. Nevertheless, the Education Council is presently reviewing the scholarship criteria, and I give the Honourable House my assurance that this matter will be looked at again when that is being done.

The Education Council, the Education Department and myself are concerned that all Caymanians who qualify get an opportunity to go abroad to obtain a university education. And, as I said earlier, we have done everything in our power to see that people who are qualified get that opportunity.

Mr. President, in the case of the Community College, Members will have noted the half million dollars requested in the Budget estimates for the building of the first phase of that college. The Community College has never been so much in demand as it is now. Unless we get the additional space, we are going to be cramped in the style and in the manner we would like to expand the college. Also, the areas being used for hotel, cookery classes, and the arts and crafts in the old Public Works Department compound are not able to be expanded because of the planned use of that area for the new post office, and of course the facilities, as they are now, are inadequate. When we get the new facility we will be able to cope and cover these areas very adequately.

It should be of interest to know, for example, that students in the hotel trade are at the moment sitting the examinations of the American Hotel and Motel Association - a qualification that is recognised in the trade, and it can only help those Caymanians who aspire to top positions in that industry. It is regretted that the cookery class at the moment is suspended, but to be honest, what happened in that case is that the lecturer (that is the teacher there) was found to be - I think the First Elected Member for Bodden Town called them peach puffs. We had to terminate his employment. We could not allow that kind of teacher to operate in the school. And he was inherited, Mr. President, from the last administration.

MR. PRESIDENT: We are quite close to 4:30 p.m. If you would like a few more minutes, we are amenable.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of the House are resumed.

We have three questions on the Order Paper from the First Elected Member for Bodden Town. Has he deputed any Member to ask them in his absence through illness? It appears not.

In that case we will go to Item 3, Government Business. The resumption of the Second Reading of the Appropriation (1988) Bill. The Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. BENSON D. FRANKS:

Mr. President, when the adjournment was taken last night, I was dealing with Education. I would like to pick up from there and deal with the charge made by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town that I had signed an agreement, when I held this Portfolio the first time, which would have caused our children to have been taught all about communism and black power, and that my successor in office had cancelled it and saved the country.

Mr. President, the facts surrounding that issue are that sometime in the early 1970's the Caricom countries made an agreement to establish the Caribbean Examinations Council for the purpose of introducing examinations to replace the 'O' level examinations.

As a contributing country to the University of the West Indies we were invited to join the Council without any strings attached. No timetable was set as to when, if ever, we would have to introduce the examinations in the schools. At that time we could not receive any confirmation from the United Kingdom Examination Boards that they would continue to set the 'O' levels for us if we became the only territory in the Caribbean to use the 'O' level examinations.

We consulted the Education Advisor in the British Overseas Development Headquarters in Barbados. He concurred with our view that since there was no timetable by which we had to introduce the examinations, and since we could not receive any guarantees from the Boards in the United Kingdom about continuance of the 'O' levels should we be the only country in the region wishing to sit them, we had nothing to lose and everything to gain by becoming a member and by watching developments from the inside. We therefore became a member of the Examinations Council with the necessary proviso, of course, to withdraw from the Council after giving the required notice.

Up until 1976 no syllabus had been produced for the examinations, and in fact the Headmaster of our own Cayman Islands High School at the time, Mr. Stokes, was very closely connected and very much associated with the preparation of the West Indian history syllabus.

Shortly after my successor, Mr. Truman Boddin, took office, he received a letter from the Examinations Council stamped by the Caricom Headquarters in Guyana, since they were photocopying the materials. Mr. Boddin got the shakes and declared that any institution sending mail from Guyana had to be communist and black power orientated. He did not know that the headquarters of the Caribbean Examinations Council was in Barbados and not Guyana.

Mr. President, in passing I would just like to point out that when the West Indian history examination of the Caribbean Examination Council was introduced, students sat the 'O' level from the Cambridge and Oxford Boards at the same time. The syllabus must have basically been the same since they used the same books and sat alternative or the same examinations. I did not see the syllabus then, and I have not seen it now. But I do know that students who sat the Caribbean Examination Council on West Indian history sat the 'O' level West Indian history exams at the same time. What is even more telling is that the format of the examinations of the Caribbean Examinations Council were and are the same as that being followed in the new examination of the General Certificate of Secondary Education now being introduced in the United Kingdom and consequently in the Cayman Islands. So that examination could not have been that bad.

I do not have any fear of the charge, Mr. President, that is old hat by now. It did not work in the past, and it will not work in the future to discredit me.

Mr. President, if there is a capitalist in the Cayman Islands, it is I. That is well known, and it is also well known that I do not seek power, be it black or white. That is more than can be said for the First Elected Member for Boddin Town.

The First Elected Member for Boddin Town said that he is of the opinion that we should be planning a second Middle School and a new High School in the Boddin Town area. I wonder where that gentleman has been all of these years? Those schools are included in our Five Year Economic Development Plan, so he is not telling anybody any news.

Both the Second Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for West Bay lamented the fact that regulations at the High School prevented some children from taking part in the graduation exercises. I wish to point out early, lest it be misunderstood, that what they and I are talking about is the children not being able to take part in the graduation exercises, and not that they were not allowed to take their final examinations or to have the opportunity of receiving their certificates and diplomas.

I wish to make it clear that the graduation criteria are not some subjective set of rules to be interpreted by the school at graduation time - as the impression might have been given. The Pastoral Committee of the school set the criteria and it was then approved by the Chief Education Officer and myself. It was discussed with the PTA of the school and parents and children were and are advised at the beginning of their fourth year in High School. So it is not something that is sprung upon them suddenly. The criteria should be known to parents and students alike during the last two years of the child's high school education. I am assured that children are constantly reminded of the criteria in assemblies throughout the period, so it should be known to both parents and students well in advance of graduation.

It is regrettable, that in an isolated instance some parent or child may fail to have the criteria brought to their attention. It follows that since the criteria are made known in advance, when the child enters his fourth year of high school, it is hardly a case of his being punished twice if he happens to be excluded on the basis of a Court conviction, because he knows in advance what the penalty will be if he is involved in the Courts.

It is also interesting to note that when the criteria were first made known at a graduation ceremony they received favourable comments in the local press. Additionally, it is the opinion of the staff that the criteria have done much to improve the discipline at the school and to improve attendance and study habits. In my opinion, anything which improves attendance, study habits and discipline at the school cannot be all bad.

Having said that, I realise that there was a hiccup or two during the last year, and the Department, the school and the Portfolio will be reviewing the criteria and application shortly, because we do not want anyone to suffer as a result of any action that might be taken with a view to improving the quality of education and the quality of students coming out of the High School.

The Second Elected Member for George Town also offered the opinion that the High School is operating like a Grammar School, and not catering to the bottom 80 per cent of the school. This is not the case. The school is always seeking ways and means of improving the teaching and examination possibilities for the lower ability groups of the school. The new Certificate of Education examination to be sat for the first time this year is designed to cater for just that group of students. It should also be noted that additional craft and home economic classrooms are being built at the school this year and all this help towards a more full and rounded education for the lower academic group, as much, of course, as it helps those who are more academically inclined.

It is regrettable that Social Services, because of the difficulty in obtaining labour during the early part of the year, was unable to do as much work on repairs to indigent housing as had been hoped. However, as I told the House in September, an arrangement has now been worked out where the Environmental Health Department is providing the labour and Social Services the funds, and much more was being achieved in the latter part of the year. It is hoped that this can continue.

The main capital item under Social Services to be undertaken during 1988 is the building of the rehabilitation facility for juveniles. Once this facility is operational it will close several gaps in our service for juveniles that have existed for years. More glaringly and more readily understood by everyone, it will ensure that children will no longer be sent to Jamaica to Approved Schools. I would hasten to add that this has not come about as a result of the Motion, brought in September, by the Second Elected Member for George Town, and which, as he suggested in his contribution, was so. The Member was told in September that this was included in the Five Year Development Plan, and that even then the money was in the draft Estimates for next year. Anyway, as I told the Member in September, we appreciate his support of this service and I hope that it will continue until the facility is totally completed and staffed.

Mr. President, the Elected Member for East End tried to make a case that his district has been badly treated by this Government. The facts, however, do not support that statement. The Member admitted that the channels have recently been cleared and lighted, or are being done even now. The Civic Centre was built by this Government. It was only a foundation when we assumed office. Roads have been built and repaired. Most of the money spent on road reconstruction in the last couple of years has been spent on improving the road between George Town and Bodden Town, and Bodden Town, North Side and East End; and he must learn that all of that service his district. In addition he got a hard court at the school as well as other work done on the school.

I would like to give the facts surrounding the playing field in East End, and why it was not fenced. It is simply because the field is unsuitable for the purpose for which it is being used. To the best of my knowledge the Member has been kept up to date on the decisions that have been made in respect of that field. He might not have agreed with those decisions but, as I said, to the best of my knowledge he was told of them. The fact is that the present playing field in East End is too small for a football field. Government considered buying an adjoining property which had a house on it. We would have done this but that land still rendered the field too small. In addition to this it is a salt area. Salt settles on the surface and therefore grass cannot properly grow upon it.

The members of the community in East End, that is members of a very active football club in the district, put forward a proposal whereby they would assist with the making of a new and better field on the land adjoining the Civic Centre. The Portfolio decided to back that project as it appeared to be the best solution to the problem. So the district of East End will, in the end, have a good playing field.

Regarding the purchase of an ambulance for the Eastern districts to be stationed at the Frank Sound Fire Station, the recruitment of at least six staff trained in emergency care would be required for the operations. It would be nice if we could do that, but priorities have to be set.

I have found no record of anyone losing a life because of an ambulance taking too long to get from George Town to the Eastern districts. I doubt that in any developed society an ambulance could answer a call more quickly as one can from the George Town Hospital to East End - or any of the other districts at that end of the Island.

The truth of the matter is that the ambulances in use at the George Town Hospital are in an advanced state of deterioration, and one has to be replaced very early in the new year. This cannot be avoided if we are going to continue a reasonable service throughout the Island. As I have said, we have to get our priorities right.

The Member for East End also made a statement which I am somewhat unable to comprehend. He suggested that the Civil Service salary increase should have been given years ago, and not left for an election year.

I do not know what he is talking about. The last increase or revision, as far as I know, took place in 1984 - an election year. It was agreed that all future revisions would take place every four years which would be election years. So this Government did not bring this about. I can only wonder if the Unity Team thought that they would be in office forever.

What we did in this year's Budget was to include a cost of living increase for Civil Servants which was not due according to the formula worked out with them. That formula being that apart from the review, every four years they would get an increase if and when the Consumer Price Index (CPI) rose by four per cent in any one year.

Mr. President, that had not happened but we were aware that the accumulative increase in the CPI was becoming quite large, and, in order to soften the impact of the increase which we would have to give when the revision was done for 1988, we gave a five per cent increase effective 1987. So I do not know how anyone can suggest that we have been playing politics with Civil Servants' salaries.

That Member, like his leader from Bodden Town, was also upset at the fact that the two surveyors being recruited to work in the new Ships' Registry were coming from the United Kingdom. Of course, they applauded the fact that Government was in fact seeking to upgrade the register which they said they had been pushing since 1972. It is no wonder they did not succeed if they were not prepared to put the right people in the right places.

If the United Kingdom is going to allow the Cayman Islands to set up a Ships' Registry with all of the applicable conventions, then they will have to be assured that the proper surveys and inspections are being carried out by properly qualified people. What I would hope is that a suitable Caymanian will be attracted to work in that department and, when the time comes that he has gained the qualifications and experience, that he can take over from the surveyors now being put in place.

There is no time now to send anybody away for training. The matter is urgent and, as I said, there is no short cut in getting a proper Registry. We have to have the qualified and experienced people in place. People who satisfy the requirements of the United Kingdom. After all, that is their responsibility. They are only extending a privilege to enable us to do a proper Registry.

Mr. President, I could go on indefinitely answering the little petty and sometimes silly criticisms that have been levelled at Government but I feel that I would be imposing upon the time of the House to do so.

I would just like in closing to say that the new image which the First Elected Member for Bodden Town is trying to adopt is very interesting indeed. He now seems to be adopting the philosophy that development in Cayman should be controlled and directed at such a rate to that where Caymanians will benefit from that development.

If anyone in the past had suggested that they would have been communist, anti-development and barnacles to progress I would not believe my ears, but I do not believe that that image will go much further than the seat he was sitting in. We all know that he and his Unity Team require confusion in which to do their work. That is when they are best.

Anyway, I hope that Members and the listening public have been careful to hear him say that he now embraces the philosophy that we should pace our development, wherever possible, at a rate that Caymanians will benefit.

I would like to invite the Honourable Member to consider whether the time has not arrived when perhaps Caymanians should be selling long term leaseholds on property rather than freehold. Maybe then future generations of Caymanians will be able to buy land on which to live or it might even be left to them by their families.

Mr. President, the Member even suggested that in employment Caymanians should be given the first break; that charity begins at home. I wonder whether the Member would care to tell us how many Caymanians he employs in his real estate and other businesses? I am sure that that record of employing Caymanians is not so good. Not even in the construction field as far as he is concerned.

I hope too, that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town will reflect on how many Caymanian jobs he is jeopardising when he comes into this House and makes his wild and unsubstantiated charges about our tax haven business and wild and unfounded statements about political vendettas being carried out against him by the Elected Members of Executive Council.

As I said yesterday, we do not need Scotland Yard to deal with him politically. We can do that quite well with the help of the Caymanian electorate. I believe that when he gets up in here and makes those wild statements, he is giving us a lot of help because the average Caymanian understands the importance of the financial industry, both to them and to this country.

Mr. President, I would also like to acknowledge the Honourable Financial Secretary's announcement that it is the intention to establish an Economic Development Unit in the Portfolio of Finance and Development. I believe that that statement should be welcomed by everyone. Such a Unit will have a most useful role to play in the future development of this country.

Before I sit down I would like to say that in checking my figures it appears that when I gave the general reserve figure that will be effective at the end of December this year, I gave $10.314 million. It should have been $8.314 million. I did say that was without interest, but I must have added a handsome bit of interest to it, Mr. President. So I would like to correct that, and of course that corrects the figures down the road.

But that does not alter substantially the fact that the economy of the country will be in good shape come 31st December this year, and that it looks good for 1988. However, as the Honourable Financial Secretary cautioned, we have to be conscious that the world economy, particularly in the stock market, is in an uncertain state of affairs. We hear all sorts of pronouncements. All I can say is that it is difficult to see how (I think one trillion dollars was lost on the stock market) one trillion dollars' wealth can be taken out of any economy where someone will not suffer. So I think it behoves us to move confidently but cautiously in 1988 until things become much more clear as to what the true position will be further down the road toward the end of 1988.

Mr. President, I support the Appropriation (1988) Bill, 1987. I thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT: I invite the Honourable First Official Member to reply to the debate.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, obviously this Government is not a superstitious one, because I thought that in putting forward a Budget on the 13th day of November, being Friday, was kind of bold, but here I am today, the thirteenth day of business, trying my best to wind it up.

During the course of these thirteen days, I heard Members say this may be my last Budget Address. It is also possible this may be mine. But I will wind it up for you.

It pleases me immensely when I listen, as I have done since Wednesday the 18th November, to Members' appreciation of the job being done by the Civil Service. Many members of the Civil Service have made many sacrifices. The mention of departments is also encouraging and, I am sure, appreciated by all Civil Servants.

Mr. President, we have some wonderful people in this Civil Service of ours. I often thank God for my having made the decision in 1971 to return home from New York. It was not an easy decision to make because in 1971 I was earning US$12,600, and I returned home to work for $5,000 Jamaican dollars.

My sister was so upset with me taking that cut in salary that one day she said to me, "Tom, I have always looked up to you and respected your decisions, but tell me, is this the kind of decision that you learned at university?" All I could say in reply was, "There is more to life than money." I believe from that moment, and it lasted for a few years, she doubted a bit, my ability to make sensible decisions. But bless her, she is as dear to me now as she was then, in character and as a sister who cares.

But back to the Civil Service. I have a little tribute, and I mean it as a tribute. It is in the form of a rhyme and I would like to share it with you and Honourable Members. And this is how it goes:

"Perhaps it sometimes slipped a bit - well, so have you!
Perhaps some things they ought to quit - well, so should you!
Perhaps they might have faltered - Why?
Why all men do, and so have I.
You must admit unless you lie that you have too.
Perhaps we should stop and think when painting someone black as ink as some folks do.
Perhaps if we would recollect perfection we would not expect;
But just people half way correct like me and you."

But, Mr. President, I also believe in perseverance, and here is how an unknown author describes it:

"There is only one method of meeting life's test
Just keep on striving and hope for the best.
Don't give up the ship and quit in dismay
'Cause hammers are thrown when you would like a bouquet.

This world would be tiresome, we'd all get the blues
If all the folks in it just held the same views.
So finish your work, show the test of your skill,
Some folks won't like it, but other folks will."

Mr. President, we are within a few weeks of celebrating God's gift, that is, He sent His son Jesus, so that we may have an opportunity to gain His forgiveness and to repent of our sins. I am not giving a sermon, Mr. President.

I remember myself as a boy at the tender age of five or six taking part in the Christmas programme at the family church, and from that age to age 17 I constantly appeared in Christmas and Easter plays. At age 17 I left this blessed Island of ours to earn a living as a seaman. It is not often you hear Tom Jefferson talking about himself, but there is a reason for it and you will understand as I go on.

By that introduction I draw an illustration of a little boy playing the role of Joseph with his coat of many colours and also that little boy playing the part of many biblical, well known spiritual leaders. My father and mother, with the help of Almighty God, molded that little boy into the man Tom Jefferson today believes he is. And I say this with the deepest humility. During those early years, I was taught right from wrong, and to seek God's guidance in life.

I believe in God and I believe in respect for others, particularly senior citizens, or in a Caymanian respectful expression, "old people". I also believe in justice and that no man, including Tom Jefferson, is above the Law. If I am alleged to have done something wrong, I expect the police to carry out an investigation and either prove the case or have it dismissed by the Court. But that little boy I referred to earlier is now in his forties, and he has not practised victimization in his life. I am not about to start at this age or in years to come if the Good Lord allows.

I thought I should say these few words on the subject of political victimization because in recent times funny expressions have been directed at Tom Jefferson. I wish to remind all the people of this country that my life has not been one of misleading people or of taking advantage of anyone. But I believe I can be described as a human being who believes in justice for all.

A Member also made the point that the banks are making a joke of our secrecy laws, and that the accounting firms are riddled, I believe he said, with police informants. Now, I respect the Member, but surely he does not believe that I can respect those words? While I may be able to appreciate his anger, I think we have to be very careful with statements of this kind, because somebody might just believe them. With all respect to the Member, I do not believe that I have heard, in my short term in this House, a more damaging statement than, in his words, "the banks are making a joke of our secrecy laws and the accounting firms are riddled with police informants".

If we know this to be true let us get the investigation going right now and leave no stones unturned, for we are talking about the main pillar of our economy which employs 1,200 to 1,400 Caymanians. For God's sake let us not stand around, if there is some truth in the Member's words, and allow the confidence of the Islands to fall apart. If any Member has information of this damaging kind, I would have expected that he would have asked for an adjournment of this House so that we can call for a police investigation forthwith.

I am a little gullible, but those words are too much for me to swallow. I believe, with respect to the Member, that it is rubbish. What does the Member mean? Is he talking about the Narcotics Agreement? I do not believe he means that, because there is a Law, passed by this Honourable House, which allows information to be given when a person is alleged to be connected with narcotics, and that Agreement is now about three and a half years old.

In the last twelve months, November 1986 to November 1987, we have only received six requests for assistance under the Narcotics' Agreement; one less than received in the month of September 1984.

The Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty has not been ratified and some say there are no benefits from it as yet. But if we want to forget everything else one matter stands out as clear as the beautiful days in Cayman. It is this, did you notice the people who work in the offshore financial centre? Do they not look relaxed to you? I believe your response would be that they do. Well, let me tell you what it is. They are not now on pins and needles when they travel to Miami or Houston, or any other city they may enter the United States of America through. And I hope that Almighty God will continue to guide our thinking in future negotiations as he did in this case.

The economic policy of this Government was criticised by some Members. In all simplicity, what is economic policy? The simple answer is, it is a method of bringing together external and local factors to achieve the greatest good for the people of the Cayman Islands. Do we not have a good standard of living? Are we fully employed? Are Caymanians generally getting preference in employment? I say the answer to all these questions is yes. We only have to listen to the feedback from the public on employment to realise that there are more jobs in the labour market than the Caymanian labour force can supply.

There are hiccups in this area, but with diligence and determination of the private and public sectors, they can be overcome. It is an historical proven fact that investment in human resources is an integral part of any future economic growth, for it is with improved skills that countries move forward.

If the economic policy of the Cayman Islands is wrong, maybe I should ask some questions to let us all think. The first one I would ask is which country in this world has its economic policy right? Which country in this world has a higher standard of living? Which country has a more harmonious and cordial social community?

Mr. President, when we make these statements, that is, that the economic policy of the Cayman Islands is wrong, we, in my view, have not, and I stress, not examined the economy of the Cayman Islands closely. When you are on the outside of Government looking in, running a country seems so simple. Then if you are fortunate enough to get on the inside, and you get all the facts about running the Government, you realise the complexities of balancing budgets, maintaining social harmony, ensuring justice for all and looking after the less fortunate - to name just a few objectives of Government. I believe that the man and woman who thinks he or she has all the answers and never seems to be at a loss for what he or she believes are solutions, should be invited by me to join the Civil Service and make their contribution to the Cayman Islands Government and its people.

Mr. President, let no one misunderstand me, I am not attacking anyone. I am making a general statement, because sometimes the marl road has some distressing gossip on it.

I am going to pass on from this subject by asking another question, and it is like the lyrics, "there are more questions than answers" but can anyone tell me and produce the facts to support his or her argument, which country in the world, and I include the United States of America and the United Kingdom, has a better financial record of running their country than the Cayman Islands? I want them to show it to me and prove it to me. I believe they will be looking for a long time.

This question is not meant to be pompous, because I have a distaste for persons behaving in a pompous manner. Life is so beautiful when we are all humble and kind.

One Member said the Stamp Duty Law should be tightened.

and I agree with his comment. The legislation is fourteen years old and will require much study. I have not forgotten that next year is an election year but we will begin to study it next year, and hopefully bring amendments of it to this honourable House in early 1989.

A Member asked why did we have to remint our coins. Reminting becomes necessary when the old stock of coins are almost finished. And, while replenishing the stock, we took the opportunity of updating the effigy of Her Majesty the Queen on those coins. The last time we requested the Royal Mint to produce more coins for us was in 1982 when we estimated a quantity that would last for five years. The coins in circulation have grown significantly as well as tourists taking many of them for souvenirs. The collectors circulating set utilizes circulating coins, that is to say 25, 10, 5 and 1 cent. I am sure Honourable Members have seen this circulating set package. These are extremely attractive to tourists, and sell for a modest $5.00. Since we began marketing it in 1986 the Currency Board has utilized 5,000 pieces of each of the circulating coins, that is the 25, 10, 5 and 1 cent. Income from sales so far is a modest $14,000.

Mr. President, it is not correct to say that Government is bleeding the Currency Board dry. The Currency Board is required, under the Currency Law (Revised) to transfer each year profits after the general reserve is topped up, to 15 per cent of the demand liabilities, that is, the currency in circulation. For the last two years, the general reserves did not need any topping up, as the reserve at the end of December 1986 was 20.5 per cent of demand liability, although the Law calls for 15 per cent. So there was no need to put any more money into general reserves, it was already above the 15 per cent, and therefore the entire profit was transferred to General Revenue.

One Member, while making his point on the inadequacy and unrealisticness of the Budget said that the salaries and wages are $30 million. Another Member said it was $36 million. Therefore the allocation for salary review was grossly insufficient. Well, according to my calculations, neither one of those figures are correct. Personal emoluments as seen on page 22, or in some later productions of the Budget it may be page 23 or 20, which has on it the summary of sub-head expenditure for personal emoluments as $36 million. But personal emoluments include more than salaries and wages. For example, it includes $2.5 million for housing allowances; $1.1 million for salary review - he has already included it in his figure; $100,000 to pay for special prosecutors, etc. My calculation of basic salaries and wages is $31.9 million.

I regard my role in this House as being bound by collective responsibility, but at the same time I feel I should utilise what little knowledge I have on financial matters, and help to guide all Members of this House if they wish to accept my advice. I believe the Member was correct when he said the provision of $1.1 million was insufficient, and if we recall what I said in the Budget Address, and I will quote it:

"Included in the 1988 Budget is a token allocation for a salary increase of $1.1 million pending the report of the 1988 quadrennial salary review."

Nobody said it was adequate and that is the point I am trying to make.

The Member also said that the Budget was unrealistic because no provisions are made in the 1988 Budget for hospital, school and office furniture. But one of the things that he did not do is to read page 2 of the Budget. It reads as follows:

"The objective of the Financial Stores Regulations introduced in 1987 is to implement measures which will reflect improvement in Government's financial management. To this end, the budget system has been upgraded by the addition of: ..."

and it lists named controlling officers, a description of the ambit of each department, and the removal of recurrent votes in Head 40 of the annual Estimates. The latter are now grouped as special expenditure under sub-head 27 in the recurrent section of the annual estimates. Had he read that he would not have made the point that he did. So the Budget is not so unrealistic after all, it is included under the 35 departments which have requested it.

This Member also continued with his point by saying the Government could not have balanced the Budget without the $880,000 from the sale of water and the $1.2 million from sewerage. Later he said, I believe, that the expenditure of portfolios has risen dramatically, and pointed to the Portfolio for Development and Natural Resources, which he said increased (and he was right) over the approved 1987 figure by over $600,000.

Mr. President, $455,000 of that figure is for the purchase of water from the company owned by CUC. When we take the $880,000 for the sale of water into account, we have a gross profit on water distribution by the Water Authority of $424,615. The Water Authority will get its sewerage, I am sure, free of cost, so that the $1.2 million mentioned earlier will also be gross profit. I am stressing the word "gross", not "net".

I believe this Budget is becoming, if it is not already, more realistic as I proceed to deal with the points made in the contribution to the Budget Debate.

Another Member said the surplus is balanced by borrowings, or is produced by the borrowings. Borrowings in the Budget are similar to a lady who goes to the bank and borrows $14,000 to buy a $14,000 car. She purchases the car, but she does not have any surplus cash left. If anything, she probably needs to spend another $800 which she had not borrowed, to cover insurance and registration of the vehicle. The same principle is true for the 1988 Budget.

We will get our Post Office and multi-storey car park, our Gerrard Smith Airport Terminal building, the Fire Station to go along with that, and we will also get the Fire Station in George Town. We will not have any cash left from the borrowings to balance any 1988 Budget. You know, the old timers of Cayman had a saying that I believe explains the borrowings and that is, "in one hand and out the other" - nothing left in your pocket to call a surplus.

It would, in my view, be unrealistic to suggest that we can fund these projects from local revenue. There are too many projects to fund from revenue and they are too costly and may I add, we cannot wait. The infrastructure is crying out to be improved or put in place, but, I do not want to take this point any further. I will leave it by saying last November I heard the same sentiments. The 1987 Budget was unrealistic and we would not achieve the surplus of $108,237.

Mr. President, and Honourable Members, the revised budgetary position for 1987 which is before us indicates that the surplus is estimated to be $4,950,049. So we have not achieved the $108,000, but we have achieved a great deal more than that. Good luck to us.

MR. PRESIDENT: We will suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

AT 11:14 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:36 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable First Official Member.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Thank you, Mr. President. You know, some Members cannot leave well enough alone. One Member, I understand, said that when he left the Financial Secretary's Chair, he left $21 million of general reserves in the kitty. That, I believe, is true. But what is also true, and I hope he made this point as well that when he left Government he left behind a $14 million commitment against that $21 million to assist Cayman Airways. When I came along to assume the duties of Financial Secretary on 1st April, 1982, which also happens to be All Fools' Day, the realistic position was that I only had $7 million of general reserves to deal with unforeseen Government expenditure.

I am going to just state a few facts, because I feel in some way that my stewardship has been touched on. We used $1 million of that $7 million which I talked about earlier, of general reserves to rip and resurface Gerrard Smith Airport runway; $1.8 million to pay off Cayman Airways' debts in December 1984; and $7.13 million to balance budgets over the last five years. And at the end of 1986 we still had $8,314,467. We brought into the 1988 Budget $1,250,604 to balance the 1987 Budget. At the end of 1987 we estimate that the surplus, which includes the $1,250,604, will be $4,950,049. So, total general reserves and surplus should be $12,013,912. This figure does not include interest on these fixed deposits, so it is likely to increase, maybe by $500,000 or $600,000.

Mr. President, I do not propose to extend this debate by arguing over what the position was in 1984. I can simply leave that for the able Elected Members of this honourable House to come to some agreement on.

Public debt. Mr. President, I cannot separate public debt from general reserves, because the Tower Building loan, in my view, holds them together. If you are going to reduce general reserves by the balance of the Tower Building loan, which is estimated to be $2.6 million at the end of 1987, it is proper, in my view, to also reduce the public debt by $2.6 million and treat the Tower Building loan as a special loan in the liability side of the Balance Sheet, and the deposit to be treated separately in the asset side.

I have reported in a Budget Address that general reserves at 1st January, 1987 was $8,314,467, which includes, and I said so, the deposits on which the Tower loan is hypothecated. Public debt was reported in the Budget Address as $14.1 million at the end of 1986, and $17.1 million at the end of 1987. I did not mention the self-financing loans of $3.3 million at the end of 1986, and I say so now to clarify the position for those who may think that the self-financing loans are part of the $14.1 million or the $17.1 million.

Mr. President, public debt, in my view, is not only borrowings from banks, it is also Pensions, Gratuities and other things that this Government is committed to and is liable for. My 5.4 per cent includes all public debt. I will not say anything further on that.

The 1988 Budget Session, if I can use that terminology, although controversial, brought a lot of Members' thoughts and feelings to the forefront. I pray to the great God above that some of those words spoken will not be repeated. We, the people of the Cayman Islands, have achieved more in the last twenty years than perhaps any other 22,000 people in any part of the world. In my view, we have achieved it by ensuring that political stability is maintained.

Candidates for election should keep this firmly in their minds when campaigning in the coming year. This is not a lecture, but a request from me to all who may choose to run in the 1988 elections. Everyone who qualifies must be given an opportunity to run if he or she so chooses. That is the spirit of democracy, or at least my definition of it. And democracy, for it to work to the advantage of our people, must bring with it responsibility by potential leaders of this country to guard our system well and to know clearly the pitfalls that can destroy what we have worked so hard to achieve.

In closing, may I wish you, Sir, Mrs. Scott and all Honourable Members and their families, a joyous and festive season.

May I also take the time to say thanks to my staff, whose support is always forthcoming, and whose loyalty is so appreciated. God bless them, and my wonderful wife who puts up with these impossible working hours of mine. She supports me in anything I have ever pursued, since I have known her.

Mr. President, I cannot claim this last bit that I am about to say, but as some of the Members said, I started out sounding like a preacher and they begged me to say this at the end, so that I end up, perhaps, sounding like a preacher. Their words to me were this: "As at the wedding in Canaan of Galilee, they have left the best wine for the last."

I am not sure about this, Sir, this is what they asked me to say. But many thanks to Members for all their kindness to me, and to the staff of the Legislature - they sincerely deserve your appreciation.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT: Thank you. I shall now put the question on the Second Reading of the Appropriation (1988) Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED

MR. PRESIDENT: Under Standing Order 63(3) the Bill is now referred to Finance Committee.
Now I invite the First Official Member to move the adjournment.

PRAYERS

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of the House are resumed.

The Honourable the Second Official Member.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE HOUSE ON LABOUR LEGISLATION

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I beg to lay on the Table of the House a copy of the Report of the Select Committee of the whole House on Labour Legislation.

MR. PRESIDENT:

So ordered.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I would like to exercise my right to make a very brief explanation of the Report. I will keep it very brief because I note that on the Order Paper for today the Labour Bill is set down for First and Second Reading. I do not want to anticipate the debate on that.

The Select Committee of the whole House on Labour Legislation was established by Private Member's Motion No. 2/85, which was passed on 5th March, 1985. That resolved that a Committee of the whole House be appointed to study the labour position and make recommendations for suitable labour legislation to be introduced to this Legislative Assembly at the earliest opportunity.

The Committee sat from then onwards holding a total of 37 meetings. Originally it was under the chairmanship of the former Attorney General, the Honourable Michael Bradley, Q.C., and then I took over at the beginning of the 1987 Session. I do not think I need to go through the minutes which are appended to the Report.

In those minutes the attendance of Members is set out - but I would like to recognise the hard work that those Members who did attend put in. I say hard work, because the preparation of this Bill was an exercise in broad public consultation, and there is recorded in the Report the representations that were received from various bodies at various times on the different stages of this legislation as it proceeded towards its final form.

Just very briefly, at the beginning, before it did anything, the Committee received representations from five bodies, including the Young Caymanian Businessmen's Association, the Contractors' Association, the Chamber of Commerce, the Hotel Association and the Restaurant Association. The Committee then prepared and published, in July, 1986, a first draft discussion Bill, and they invited representations from interested bodies on that Bill. Representations in writing were received from a broad cross section of interested persons and bodies.

I am not going to go through all of those who made representations in writing at this stage, but the Committee, after having received those representations in writing, invited any persons who had made such representations and who wished to attend the Committee to address it in person, to do so. Before that invitation went out, the Committee painstakingly went through every single written representation it received, reviewed and voted on every single point that was put forward, and embodied the results of that process in a second draft Bill. That second draft discussion Bill was then sent out to everybody who had made representations. Those people were then invited, if they wanted, to come along and address the Committee. The following people did come and address the Committee on the second draft Bill:

The Chamber of Commerce;
The Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce;
The Young Caymanian Businessmen's Association;
The Hotel Association;
The Restaurant Association; and
The Bank of Nova Scotia.

The Committee is very grateful to everybody who, at any stage, participated in this consultation process, whether by writing in or by coming along and talking to the Committee. That gratitude is recorded in the Report.

As a result of that process of consultation, the final form of the Bill, as recommended by the Committee was arrived at and that was gazetted as Supplement No. 1 to the Extraordinary Gazette of 26th October, 1987.

I am not going to go through the various changes that occurred between the first discussion Bill that was published last year and the Bill which has now been published. They are, however, set out in the Report, and they have also been canvassed in the Press. I would like therefore to go straightaway to the recommendation of the Committee which is contained in paragraph 10 of the Report.

The Committee recommended that the Bill, as published in October, is suitable labour legislation and that it be introduced to the Legislative Assembly forthwith. That recommendation has been acted upon and that Bill, as I have said, is on the Order Paper today.

There is one subsidiary recommendation which the Committee made which I would just like to draw Members' attention to and that is contained in paragraph 8 of the Report. The Committee recommended that the Law should come into force on a day to be appointed. However, they recommended that that day be the 1st of January, 1988 and further recommended that the penal provisions not be enforced for a period of six months thereafter. The Bill is down as a Government Bill, it will be presented by the Honourable Member responsible for Tourism, Aviation and Trade, and I understand he will canvas that point further when he presents the Bill, so I will not go into it.

One loose end that was left after the Committee's considerations and which is dealt with in paragraph 7 of the Report, is the Workmen's Compensation Law. The Committee looked at that but considered it was too large and broad a subject to be incorporated in the present Labour Bill, but the Committee was of the view that it should be reviewed as a separate exercise.

The Committee has already represented that exercise, and proposes to report further, making concise recommendations for amendments to that Law at the next meeting of this Honourable House. So, that part of the exercise is separate and not yet completed.

However, that, in my submission, does not detract from the comprehensive nature of the Bill which is now before the House.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Report of the Finance Committee on the draft Estimates of Revenue and Expenditure for 1988. The Honourable the First Official Member.

REPORT OF THE STANDING FINANCE COMMITTEE ON THE DRAFT ESTIMATES OF REVENUE AND EXPENDITURE FOR 1988

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Report of the Standing Finance Committee's meetings for Wednesday, 2 December and that of today.

MR. PRESIDENT: So ordered.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I will proceed to explain some of the details of the meetings.

We began with the consideration of the amounts set out in the Appropriation Bill for:

Head 01: His Excellency the Governor	-	$ 220,836;
Head 35: Public service Commission	-	$ 204,610,
Head 02: Administration - Internal and External Affairs	-	$ 383,649;
Head 03: Broadcasting	-	$ 484,146;
Head 04: Immigration	-	$1,031,864; and
Head 07: Police Department	-	$4,527,107.

All these sums were agreed.

The Chairman undertook to look into the efficiency of the Lima II following a request by the Member for North Side.

Head 08: Prison Department	-	$2,008,059,
----------------------------	---	--------------

This sum was agreed.

There was a Motion moved by the Member for North Side in respect of Head 5: Legislative Assembly. This Motion, Motion No. 1, proposed that salaries for Members of the Legislative Assembly be increased as follows:

Elected Members from C4 to SS1; and Elected Councillors to SS15.

That Motion was amended by a Motion from the Second Elected Member for George Town; that the Elected Members' salary be increased to SS2 and Executive Councillors to SS12. Discussion ensued, and the Chairman brought the Committee's attention to Standing Order 65(1) which reads:

"... the Finance Committee shall not proceed upon any amendment which in the opinion of the Chairman increases the sum allotted to any head of expenditure ..."

and also section 37(2)(a) of the Constitution. It was therefore agreed that consideration of Head 5 be deferred.

The sums for the following Heads were all agreed:

Head 06: Personnel and Office Services	-	$3,036,595;
Head 10: Finance and Development Administration	-	$8,610,423;
Head 11: Customs Department	-	$1,157,511;
Head 31: Treasury	-	$ 348,616;

Head 32: Registry of Companies	-	$ 288,817;
Head 33: Banking Inspectorate	-	$ 191,500;
Head 34: Insurance Department	-	$ 156,726;
Head 12: Judicial Department	-	$ 887,503;
Head 13: Legal Department	-	$ 728,439;
Head 14: Administration of Health, Education and Social Services	-	$ 988,414; and
Head 15: Education Department	-	$8,191,101.

It was then agreed that all these stand part of the Schedule.

The Committee suspended its work at 12:30 P.M. for lunch, and resumed at 1:20 P.M. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town was absent at that particular time.

Head 16: Personal Health Services Department	-	$6,948,039;
Head 17: Social Services Department:	-	$1,594,503;
Head 18: Development and Natural Resources Administration	-	$1,368,813;

were also agreed.

Pursuant to a request from the Member for North Side, the Chairman undertook to determine the possibility of placing navigational matters under the Port Authority.

Head 19: Department of Agriculture	-	$ 812,151;
Head 20: Lands and Survey Department	-	$ 712,158;
Head 21: Mosquito Research and Control	-	$1,568,401;

were agreed and that they would stand part of the Schedule.

The Honourable Fourth Elected Member of Executive Council undertook to look at the possibility of replacing the two propeller planes at MRCU for a helicopter, and the type of helicopter is a 206 jet ranger, pursuant to a request by the Member for North Side.

Head 22: Planning Department	-	$ 486,986;
Head 23: Administration of Tourism, Aviation and Trade	-	$ 257,040;
Head 25: Department of Tourism	-	$6,249,927;
Head 26: Fire Service Department	-	$1,792,597;
Head 9: District Administration	-	$2,392,606;
Head 27: Administration Communication, Works and District Administration	-	$ 114,796;
Head 28: Postal Department	-	$ 686,931; and
Head 29: Public Works Department	-	$3,157,218.

It was agreed that all of those do stand part of the Schedule to the Appropriation Bill.

Following a recommendation by the Honourable Third Elected Member of Executive Council, the Committee agreed to invite the Chief Engineer of the Public Works Department to address it on the Roads Programme for 1988, that is the Construction of Roads.

We moved on to consider;

Head 30: Audit Department	-	$ 234,312.
---------------------------	---	-------------

The Committee again considered Motion No. 1 on Head 5: Legislative Assembly which was previously deferred. It was agreed by both the Member for North Side and the Second Elected Member for George Town to amend Motion No. 1 as follows:

"...that the salary for Elected Members be increased to SS2, that the total salary for Executive Councillors be equivalent to SS12 and that the increase be subject to Standing Order 65(1).

That was agreed.

Moving on to Motion No. 2. Captain Mabry S. Kirkconnell, the First Elected Member for the Sister Islands, moved that Members of the Legislative Assembly travelling on official Commonwealth Parliamentary Association's business, shall travel on Club fare if such travel time exceeds three hours. That Motion was passed unanimously, that Head 5 be increased as proposed subject to Standing Order 65(1) and that the proposed increased sum for Head 5 stand part of the Schedule - Both motions were agreed.

The Committee considered New Services Head by Head, and agreed the sums under:

Head 2: Internal and External Affairs	-	$ 685
Head 4: Immigration	-	$ 10
Head 5: Legislative Department	-	$ 4,144
Head 5: Personnel and Office Services	-	$ 25,000
Head 7: Police Department	-	$ 59,556;
Head 8: Prison Services	-	$ 154,575;
Head 9: District Administration.	-

The Third Elected Member of Executive Council noted that the sum of $80,000 under sub-head 40-008 had unfortunately been duplicated.

At 2:35 P.M. - I am being very specific, but I want to make it clear - the Committee suspended, and the Committee resumed its work at 3:00 P.M.. When it resumed, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town was then with us.

At 3:00 P.M. the Chief Engineer and the Roads Engineer of Public Works Department were in attendance. The Committee proceeded to consider Head 41, Capital sub-head 006 - Construction of Roads. The Chief Engineer addressed the Committee on the Construction of Roads Programme for 1988, and prior to leaving he accordingly requested Honourable Members to advise him of the priority order for the Programme.

At 3:30 P.M. the Chief Engineer and his able assistant left the meeting.

The Committee agreed that the sum of $300,010 was too significant an amount of the total $1 million for the entire Grand Cayman Road Programmes and that the sum of $200,000 under sub-head (b) New Construction for Roads, should be deleted, allocating the $100,000 for the completion of the Seven Mile Beach sidewalks to be extended to Government House. It was also agreed that with Government having had sufficient time to study the Master Ground Transportation Project Report, and having decided which recommendation would be implemented in 1988, that Government would request the necessary costings from the Public Works Department, and ultimately seek the approval of Finance Committee.

To make it more specific, the $300,010 was categorised as a national item which embodied all necessary work as seen by Public Works Department in dealing with the Master Ground Transportation Study recommendations. The Committee thought that there were many roads and sidewalks along Seven Mile Beach which needed attention in 1988, and therefore did the allocation as I have read out. The Committee deleted $200,000 for the Master Ground Transportation Study and left $50,000 for the Master Ground Transportation Study to deal with the aerial photography that is needed for design work.

Next came Motion No. 3. The Second Elected Member for West Bay moved that the sum of $100,000 be divided equally amongst the five districts of Grand Cayman. We had the Ayes and we had the Noes and we were unable to determine who was the winner, so a Division was requested. The Division took place, and the Motion was defeated by majority.

We then moved on to Motion No. 4. I might add, it was a lot of work to allocate this $100,000.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay moved that the sum of $100,000 be divided as follows: $50,000 for West Bay, $25,000 for North Side and another $25,000 for East End, making a total of $100,000. Here again, the decision was uncertain and a Division had to be called. That Motion was also defeated.

Then came along Motion No. 5, moved by the Member for North Side that the sum of $100,000 be divided equally amongst the districts of East End, North Side and Bodden Town. I am not sure how to deal with that extra one cent, because when you divide $100,000 by three, there is one cent that has to be given to some district! That Motion was passed by majority.

Having finished with the Construction of Roads allocation and the witnesses, that is, the Chief Engineer and his able assistants taking their leave, and Motions, having been completed, the Committee moved back to consider the remaining Heads under New Services. Although the minutes call the individual Member's name, I prefer, in reporting, to say the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town stated that his vote for all the Heads under New Services would be "No".

Head 9, District Administration: Having found a duplication of $80,000, New Services Head 9 was reduced by $80,000. That caused the total to be reduced from $122,500 to $42,500.

Moving on to:

Head 10: Finance and Development	-	$ 144,082;
Head 11: Customs	-	$ 77,000;
Head 12: Judicial Department	-	$ 43,822;
Head 14: Portfolio of Health, Education and Social Services	-	$ 46,190;
Head 15: Education Department	-	$ 92,496.

The sums for those departments named were agreed.

Then came Motion No. 6. The Member for East End moved that a $10 token vote be provided from the sum under Head 16 for New Services for the introduction of an Ambulance Service for the eastern districts to be placed at Frank Sound Fire Station. The Motion was passed unanimously and it was agreed that Head 16, as amended, be passed.

The sums for:

Head 16: Personal Health Services	-	$ 203,002;
Head 17: Department of Social Services	-	$ 161,839; and
Head 18: Development and Natural Resources Administration	-	$ 67,932;

were all agreed.

Then we came on to Motion No. 7 from the Member for East End who moved that a $10 token vote from the funds provided under sub-head 41-009, Farm Development, be allocated for a cattle dip in East End. That Motion was passed.

Head 19: Department of Agriculture, as amended,	-	$ 11,538;
Head 20: Lands and Survey Department	-	$ 44,098;
Head 21: Mosquito Research and Control	-	$ 155,048;
Head 22: Planning Department	-	$ 85,740; and
Head 25: Department of Tourism	-	$ 220,477;

were all agreed.

Then came Motion No. 8. The Second Elected Member of Executive Council moved that a post of Higher Executive Officer be established for an administrative assistant for the Chief Fire Officer. That Motion was passed. The Committee agreed that this post be provided administratively by the Chief Fire Officer by eliminating one or two recurrent posts.

It was agreed that Head 26: Fire Service, as amended, be passed, and that the sum of $112,284 for Head 26 be agreed.

Head 27: Administration, Communication, Works and District Administration	-	$ 5,000;
Head 28: Postal Department	-	$ 7,356;
Head 29: Public Works Department	-	$ 104,231;

were also agreed.

The Chairman agreed to look into the provision of wooden chairs for the East End Civic Centre and Town Halls in West Bay, North Side and George Town. The sum of $3,000 was provided in the New Services.

The Members requested that consideration be given to providing wooden chairs rather than metal chairs which sometimes, from lack of use and from lack of oil, seized up and became non-functional in the early days.

Head 31: Treasury Department

- $ 40,224 agreed.

Then came Motion No. 9. The Member for North Side moved that a token vote of $10 from the sum of $7,356 provided for sub-head 001 which is Basic Salary, be provided to establish the post of Principal Surveyor at SS1 for a Caymanian to be recruited in 1988 to work along with the Marine Surveyors who are being recruited from the United Kingdom for the Registry of Shipping. That Motion was passed.

Head 32, as amended, was passed, and the sum of $7,356 for Head 32 was then agreed.

Head 33: Banking Inspectorate

- $ 6,768;

Head 34: Insurance Department

- $ 6,500; and

Head 35: Public Service Commission

- $ 1,500.

All these were agreed.

The Question was put that the New Service's sum, as provided in the Schedule, be reduced by $80,000 and that the decreased sum of $1,930,949 and not $2,010,949 for New Services stand part of the Schedule for the Appropriation Bill. This too was agreed.

The minutes of the meeting for this morning is quite short, and with the agreement of the Members of the House, the presentation of the Report will be finished in about five minutes or less, unless you wish to suspend for lunch.

MR. PRESIDENT:

It is very selfish of me, but I have a speaking engagement, and I am already late for it. But I am quite happy - it is with the Society of Professional Accountants of whom one Member is here present. He may be relieved if I do not turn up.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. Chairman, so as to finish, because I have to leave and I would like to be here, I wonder if the Honourable Second Official Member could take the Chair.

MR. PRESIDENT:

No, I am sorry, we will continue.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, Finance Committee was resumed this morning and the Committee met to recommit Motion No. 1 of the Finance Committee's first meeting held on 2nd December, 1987, dealing with Head 5, Legislative Department.

MR. PRESIDENT:

If I may interrupt you. I am puzzled because the Minutes of the Committee, as I have them, go on for another three and a half or four pages before coming to the record of the minutes today. This was why I wondered how you were going to finish in a matter of three or four minutes. I am sorry, maybe I have an incorrect set of papers.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

I think I have, Mr. President, not you! In that case, it might be better if we break for lunch.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings are suspended, then, until 2:15 P.M.

AT 12:55 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:20 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable the First Official Member.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, before we took the break for lunch I thought I had finished the meeting of Wednesday. It so happened that my copy of the minutes was short of a few pages. Now that I have the correct one, I will continue.

Development; dealing with Vehicles, Furniture and

The Committee's proceedings then moved on to Head 40 Equipment which is funded by local revenue. A sum of $869,056 was approved.

amendments to:

The Committee, in considering the following made

Sub-head 41-012 pursuant to the passing of Motion No. 12 recorded hereunder, which provided for sub-head 41-023 to be increased by $70,000 for the West Bay Civic project. It was agreed that 41-012 be reduced by a similar amount. That sub-head 41-012 being reduced was agreed, and that the reduced sum of $618,000 instead of $688,000 for sub-head 41-012 should stand part of Head 41 and that was also agreed.

Member for North Side moved that $10,000 of the $96,000 provided for sub-head 41-013 be allocated to complete the launching ramp and dock at Old Man Bay and that Motion was passed.

Then that the sum of $25,000, being part of the $80,000 allocated under New Services Head 9 be added to sub-head 41-013 for the West Bay North Sound Government wharf or jetty. That sub-head 41-013, as amended and increased by $25,000, was agreed. Then following, it was agreed that the increased sum of $121,125 for sub-head 41-013 do stand part of Head 41.

The Committee then amended sub-head 41-014, that the sum of $49,000 being a part of the $80,000 duplicated under New Services Head 9 be added to sub-head 41-014 for the Faith Hospital in Cayman Brac. The increase of $49,000 was agreed and it was further agreed that the increased sum of $183,880, and not $134,880 should be the sum under sub-head 41-014, and should stand part of Head 41.

Motion No. 11, dealing with Head 41 sub-head 022, moved by the Second Elected Member for George Town that the explanatory note should include a token vote of $10 under sub-head 41-022, which is School Buildings, for the construction of a pedestrian overpass at the Cayman Islands High School. That Motion was passed.

The Committee proceeded to agree to the amendment to sub-head 41-022; that the sum of $500,000 for sub-head 41-022 stand part of the overall Head 41 of the Schedule.

Motion No. 12, dealing with sub-head 41-023. The Second Elected Member for West Bay moved that the sum of $70,000 be allocated for the West Bay civic project. That Motion was passed by a majority, and it was agreed that Head 41-012 be increased by $70,000.

Motion No. 13. The First Elected Member for the Sister Islands moved that a sum be provided for the Cayman Brac Primary School Swimming Project. That Motion was passed. The Committee moved on to allocate a sum of $6,000, being a part of the $80,000 duplicated under New Services Head 9, be allocated for the swimming pool project in Cayman Brac. Then 41-023 was increased by $6,000 and that was agreed. Sub-head 41-023 as twice increased for the sum of $76,000 which was passed. The increased sum of $324,500, and not $248,500 for sub-head 41-023 to stand part of Head 41, was agreed.

Then Head 41 was amended and increased by $80,000, and that the increased sum of $6,803,825 and not $6,723,825 for Head 41 to stand part of the Schedule to the Appropriation Bill was then agreed.

Dealing with Head 42, Loans - General; that the sum of $8,017,694 stand part of the Schedule was agreed, and also for Head 43 which is the European Development Fund, the borrowings from that organization which is $346,208 was also agreed.

The Committee then proceeded in accordance with Standing Order 64(4) and (5) and the Questions put that clauses 1 and 2 stand part of the Bill which was agreed. The Question that the Schedule as amended and standing in the sum of $80,322,214 to stand part of the Bill was also agreed, with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town voting against.

The title of the Appropriation Bill was also agreed.

The Committee then moved on to Motion No. 14 dealing with the Sewerage System Loan; that the Standing Finance Committee of the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly give its approval and authorisation for obtaining from Barclays Bank PLC, Grand Cayman, a loan in respect of the Sewerage System in a sum not to exceed in total at any one time, the amount of CI$3,300,000. That Motion was passed, with the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town voting against.

Motion No. 15 was also moved by the Chairman, that the Standing Finance Committee of the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly give its approval and authorisation for obtaining from Morgan Grenfell (Cayman) Ltd, Grand Cayman, a loan in respect of the Post Office and multi-storey car park, in a sum not to exceed in total at any one time, the amount of CI$6,500,000. That Motion was passed and the Committee's proceedings were then adjourned at 5:11 P.M.

This morning, the Committee reconvened to recommit Motion No. 1 of the Finance Committee's first meeting held on 2 December 1987, dealing with Head 5, Legislative Department, and I now move on to that.

Head 5, Legislative Department. Discussion ensued with regard to Motion No. 1 as set out on page 5 of the Committee's minutes of the meeting held on the 2 December 1987. That Motion, for clarity, is:

"It was agreed by both the Member for North Side and the Second Elected Member for George Town, to amend Motion No. 1 as follows, and that the salary for Elected Members be increased to SS2, that the total salary for Executive Councillors be equivalent to SS12 and that the increase be subject to Standing Order 65(1):".

That is what was being reconsidered.

The Member for North Side moved that Motion No. 1 be withdrawn. The Second Elected Member for George Town, having moved an amendment to the Motion, concurred. Motion No. 1 was therefore unanimously withdrawn.

A second Motion was moved by the Member for East End, that Head 10 be recommitted to amend the explanatory note to include a sum of CI$219,596 to cover salary increases for Elected Members of the Legislative Assembly to SS2 and Executive Councillors to the equivalent of SS12. That Motion was unanimously agreed to.

The Committee's work adjourned at 11:55 A.M. this morning.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT: Thank you. I would only make one small comment. I think that in the final version of that Motion, it should refer to Elected Executive Councillors.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, agreed.

MR. PRESIDENT: Thank you.
In that case, the Appropriation Bill (1988) is set down for Third Reading.

We can proceed to the next item on our Order Paper, which would be Questions. But before we ask for the suspension of Standing Orders, did the First Elected Member for Bodden Town depute any other Member to ask his three questions? No? In that case we may proceed.

THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (APPLICABLE CONVENTIONS) (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

CLERK: The Merchant Shipping (Applicable Conventions) (Amendment) Bill, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Honourable First Official Member of Executive Council.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I hope the Members and the listening public are not getting too tired of hearing me today.

Mr. President, I move the Second Reading of a Bill entitled a Bill for a Law to amend the Merchant Shipping (Applicable Conventions) Law, 1987.

Mr. President, Honourable Members will recall that in moving the substantial legislation in September last called the Merchant Shipping (Applicable Conventions) Law, 1987, we agreed that all amendments should be taken at one Sitting, not committing ourselves at that time to November, and that all Honourable Members did withhold any amendments to the Bill which was then before the House for consideration.

Since that time we have requested all Honourable Members, if they had any amendments, to let either myself or the Honourable Second Official Member know of them so that they could be incorporated into the amending Bill presently before the House.

I can recall that one Member in particular forwarded some amendments. I am unaware of any other Member - but I am not going to commit myself to it, I am not going to say that no other one did, I am just saying what I am aware of.

The clauses in this amending Bill seem to indicate that there is a substantial amount of work being done in this Bill in its effort to amend the Bill passed in September. But on close examination, you will find that there are many clauses of this Bill which only seek to substitute the word "ship" for "steamer". It is in clause 2, 3, 5, 6, 9, 15 and 16, and I could go on and on and on. So that is really minor amendments to the Bill to bring it into modern day language in the marine shipping world.

Members also had the opportunity and agreed to the adjournment of this Honourable House on Friday 20th November, adjourning at lunch time so that all Members could have an opportunity to be briefed by our helpful and learned U.K. Counsellor dealing with this Merchant Shipping Bill. I am sure that all of us in this Honourable House are pleased to have the legislation on the books, and pleased to have the amendments before the House at this present time.

The major amendments, I believe, deals with the repeal of section 26 and also the amending of section 59, 71 and also 72 of the Law, which really gives powers to the inspector appointed in pursuance of section 71.

It is a technical piece of legislation and all Members have been briefed on the subject. I do not propose that I am able to brief them today in the way they were on Friday 20 November, but all the amendments are a direct result of the Bill which was sent to the Department of Transport in the United Kingdom for their legal people to vet, and amendments before us, most of them not all, have been put forward in order for them to be in a position to agree to the amended Law and to extend to us the international conventions such as SOLAS, Load Line, and MARPOLE dealing with pollution.

There were two major issues that Cayman were obligated to at the negotiating table. One is the effort we making in trying to complete this amending Bill to put the legislation on the books. The second is that we were required to recruit two experienced surveyors. That second part is presently in hand.

For the information of the Members, two surveyors have been selected by an interviewing panel recommended to the Public Service Commission. The Governor agreed with the advice of the Public Service Commission, and those two gentlemen are now being offered a contract to work in the Cayman Islands in the Registry of Shipping offices. So I believe, we are well on the way to completing our obligation as agreed around the negotiating table.

I would ask that Honourable Members support this amending Bill and let us get on with having the conventions extended to us so that our Shipping Register would be something that all of us can be proud of.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that a Bill entitled the Merchant Shipping (Applicable Conventions) (Amendment) Bill, 1987 be given a Second Reading.

The Motion is open for debate.

If no Member wishes to speak, I shall put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. BILL GIVEN A SECOND READING

MR. PRESIDENT: That Bill accordingly stands put down for Third Reading.

THE CUSTOMS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987

CLERK: THE CUSTOMS (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Honourable First Official Member.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I move the Second Reading of a Bill for a Law to amend the Customs Law (Second Revision).

In the Budget Address I spoke, I think in sufficient detail, on this Bill, to allow Members to have an understanding of why we were doing it. But that was quite some time ago, so I would just like to do a summary of what I said at that time.

We have been asked on a few occasions to change the duty in respect of alcohol and spirits in particular, which are set down in the Customs Law (Second Revision) as duty per gallon. We know that the majority of bottles coming into this Island, and with the metric system being in place around the world for many years, it is now beginning to affect us in that the bottles are now coming in litre size. That is basically the reason why we tried to help the importers, as well as making the conversion of Customs Duties a little bit simpler for the Department.

But, going on a little further to item 9:01 dealing with aerated waters including flavoured aerated waters - there is no change in that, 25 per cent remains. All we have done is added to it "non-alcoholic beers and wines" so that it is clear to the importer as well as the Customs Officer that non-alcoholic beers and wines fall under the 25 per cent duty and not some other duty that I may talk about a little later.

We know that any analysis done of the present duty in respect of dollars per gallon - if we convert that to litres - beers are being imported at 60 cents per litre. As we were spending a lot of time working on this exercise, we thought that Government should get a little bit of something out of it, in particular the fact that they had not been increased for quite a number of years and we moved the duty to 66 cents per litre - a 6 cents increase. So when you hear them talking around Cayman when you go into - I will not call any names - the bar rooms that the duty has caused the operation to charge $3.00 for a beer, that is absolutely ridiculous, it is nonsense.

Moving on to 9:03, dealing with spirits. Spirits presently being imported fall under just one category called "spirits". We have sought to break them apart because of an attempt to give equitable treatment to people who are importing different kinds of spirits, with different alcoholic contents.

Spirits at the moment are coming in at $5.00 a litre. Now in item 9:03 which is in the proposed Bill, spirits, unsweetened, containing not less than 50 per cent by volume of alcohol, we have increased it by 28 cents a litre. I do not think we could do it any more cheaply.

Going on to 9:04, spirits, unsweetened, containing not less than 50 per cent - I am sorry, I think there is a typographical error here - I apologise for being so busy that I did not check it before I began to read it - but I have the original data in front of me, and 9:04 is spirits, unsweetened, containing 50 per cent or more by volume of alcohol: $7.50 per litre.

Now, Mr. President, if you have a litre of alcohol of 150 per cent proof, you can take that 150 proof and probably make three bottles of the 50 proof, which is being imported for $5.28 per bottle, so that a person who is doing this business is actually getting two more bottles for $2.50. If anybody squeals, it is not my problem, and it is not my fault - he or she may have been hoping to make a profit from Government. I am sorry it could not have been avoided. I had to increase it a little bit.

Item 9:05, spirits, sweetened and flavoured, including liquors, $6.00 per litre.

Item 9:06, table wines, red, white or rose, $1.20 per litre.

Item 9:07, dessert wines, including Port, Sherry, Vermouth, and any other fortified or flavoured wines under 30 per cent: $1.80 per litre.

9:08, sparkling wines - Here is one that really stood out in my mind when we began to look at it. Wine was being imported at $1.00 a litre. Wine, in our interpretation, also included champagne. Now I know there is one called Dom Perignon, or something like that, you import that and pay $30.00 or $40.00, and the importer pays $1.00 for importing it. The little chap who comes along and buys a bottle of wine for $12.00, also has to pay $1.00 on his $12.00 bottle of wine. That is not fair, so that is the reason why I said, champagne $2.50 per litre, and other sparkling wines $1.50 per litre.

Now we get to the giveaway, 9:09, purified, desalinated and natural waters, other than aerated waters, all free - thank God we got it done - all free.

I am going to leave it here, because the "marl roads" sometimes cause me to get excited, and it is not fair to the public to hear me being excited. But I say that anybody who complains about $7.50 per litre, I am sorry, I just had to do it.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that a Bill entitled the Customs (Amendment) Bill, 1987 be given a Second Reading, and the motion is accordingly open for debate.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I know I am not supposed to speak twice unless other Members have spoken, but I just want to mention, which I failed to do, that the error in the printing of 9:04, we hope that your permission would be given to correct it during the Committee stage.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think we will treat that as a printer's typographical error in the way we do in the Committee stage, if that is all right.

No Member appears willing to speak on this highly exciting Bill - in which case I shall put the question.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. BILL GIVEN A SECOND READING

MR. PRESIDENT: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading. Bills. Second Reading.

SECOND READING

THE LABOUR BILL, 1987

CLERK: THE LABOUR BILL, 1987.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Honourable the Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, I beg to move the Second Reading of a Bill for a Law to govern terms and conditions of employment; to provide for the health, safety and welfare of employees; and for related matters.

Before proceeding, I would like to draw Members' attention to three printing errors in words which could make a difference to the meaning of the particular sections that they relate to. I realise that typographical or printing errors will be handled in the usual manner at Committee stage, but I would like to call Members' attention to the fact that in section 2, where the definition of "employee" is given, on the fourth line after the word "implied;" that word should be "and" instead of "have".

In section 17(4) in the third line, the word should be "therefor" and not "therefore", so the "e" should be disregarded. In section 28(3)(b) the second line after the word "the", that word should be "employee" and not "employer".

MR. PRESIDENT: Thank you. May I at that point interrupt the Honourable Member as I should have earlier said I have to inform the House that in the terms of Standing Order 44(3) the Governor has signified his recommendation on the Bill.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Thank you very much, Mr. President. Furthermore, before proceeding, I would like to say that earlier in the week I did circulate a notice of my intention to move certain amendments at the Committee stage of this Bill. There has also been proposed amendments circulated by the Second Elected Member for George Town, which will be dealt with at the same time.

As regards those amendments, which I will be putting forward, I would like to review that in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, it is my intention to move that the words "Trade and" from the second line of the eighth paragraph be deleted and that in clause 2 the words "Trade and" from the definition of "Director" will be deleted. My reason for that is that it seems more appropriate and for ease of reference for the purposes of this particular Bill for the Director to be referred to as the Director of Labour.

In clause 11(1)(b) it is also my intention to move at Committee stage that the words "subject in either case to a maximum of thirty days" be deleted. This section deals with notice to be given by an employee to an employer. It seems that this would serve no useful purpose and could create extreme difficulty for some employers if employees were only obliged to give a maximum of thirty days. There seemed to be no reason why a maximum should be placed on that, because in some instances if an employer had to replace the services of a qualified accountant or somebody at a higher level, it might take more than thirty days. We feel that this is something that should be worked out, and that no maximum should be placed on it.

In clause 28(2)(d) by adding after the word "work" the following: "other than the deduction for any shortfall in a cash float provided to the employee". This deals with deductions which can be made from an employee's salary by an employer and it is felt that an employee who is responsible for a cash float related to the operation of a business and connected with his particular job, that they should be responsible for any shortfall whenever that employee's employment is being terminated.

MR. PRESIDENT: I wonder, for the convenience of the House, could you give us the text of that amendment again, please?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: It is in clause 28(2)(d). By adding after the word "work" the following: "other than a deduction for any shortfall in a cash float provided to the employee."

I also should have mentioned earlier in dealing with the deletion of the words "Trade and" that these two words would also be deleted in clause 65(1) which is really a consequential change.

In the year 1842, 145 years ago, a piece of legislation known as the Masters and Servants Law was passed in Jamaica. This Law also applied to the Cayman Islands being then a dependency of or administered by Jamaica at that time.

The Masters and Servants Law set out; (1) the rights of masters and servants; (2) made special provisions for agricultural contracts and labour; (3) dealt with the jurisdiction of Justices of the Peace; and (4) the falsification of certificates covering the character of servants and the enforcement of Court Orders. Other labour legislation followed much later.

In 1944, a Law known as the Truck Law was passed which made basic provisions for workers to be paid wages in money and in kind, based on the agreement reached between the employer and employee.

In 1946, another Law known as the Minimum Wage Law came into force, which gave the Administrator of the day the power to fix a minimum wage where he is satisfied that the wages paid to employees in any particular occupation are unreasonably low. This Law dealt with:

- (1) the appointment of an Advisory Board;
- (2) the burden of proof on an employer;
- (3) record keeping by an employer, and the penalty for failing to do so; and
- (4) the appointment of officers with power to enter premises and inspect such records.

So after all, Mr. President, certain provisions of this Labour Bill are not so strange, novel nor horrifying, as was claimed by a few organizations because these have been around since 1946. It will also be of interest to note that an order was in fact made under this Minimum Wage Law in 1967, where a labourer could not be paid less than six shillings an hour.

Other labour related laws on our books are the Trade Union Law passed in 1942, and the Workman's Compensation Law passed in 1964. In reading these Laws which have been lying dormant or in limbo, one of them for more than a century, one cannot help but conclude that for a developing country that enjoys the growth, prosperity and progress of these Islands, that there was a genuine need to review, revise and replace what labour legislation we have on our books with something more comprehensive and more representative of the times in which we live; some form of legislation that is better equipped to meet the immediate and future needs of a modern and materialistic society.

It cannot be conscientiously denied that the working class as well as employers in our country, deserve some legal framework better than what we presently have in place. The very language used in the antiquated labour legislation we have, the terminology and the conditions they were designed to deal with, tell of a bygone era in these Islands and today make some of the very expressions unpalatable. I refer here to the Masters and Servants Law, Sir.

Let me say here that with due respect to these Laws, which have no doubt served the country well in the days for which they were intended to serve, we have embodied in the new proposed legislation certain sections of the old laws which were found to be useful, thus the reason provision is being made for three of these laws to be repealed, which is covered in the last section of this Bill. Those three laws are: the Masters and Servants Law, the Minimum Wage Law and the Truck Law.

As was pointed out by the Second Official Member when he tabled the Committee's Report, it is intended for the Workman's Compensation and the Trade Union Law to be reviewed and revised early next year. But the fact remains that the need to bring labour legislation up to date can no longer be ignored or brushed aside. It has to be brought more in line with what has taken place in other areas of legislation that is periodically being studied and updated in this country. It has to be put in place to deal with the needs of a developing country.

It is my considered opinion that for Government to continue to ignore this need would be presumptuous, to say the least. Therefore, as a result of Private Member's Motion No. 2/85 brought by the Second Elected Member for West Bay and seconded by the Elected Member for North Side, a Select Committee of the whole House was established on 5th March, 1985, to study and make recommendations for suitable labour legislation to be introduced to this Legislative Assembly at the earliest opportunity. Government supported and accepted this motion because it considered that the time had come for comprehensive labour legislation to be put in place in these Cayman Islands. The rate of growth and development we are experiencing today, which supports a labour force of over 10,000 persons, dictates that some action must be taken to at least set minimum employment standards, which is what this legislation is intended to do.

I know, of course, that there have been strong objections to labour legislation from certain sectors of our business community. But like it or not society often creates the conditions it condemns. It is my considered opinion that to further continue to ignore and neglect this area of labour relations will only encourage the development of a far greater evil in our society - an evil force that none of us want or need - I refer here specifically to Labour Unions.

The Select Committee on Labour held its first meeting on 24 April 1985, and its final meeting on 21 October 1987, when the Committee's Report to this House was considered. During those two and a half years, a total of 37 meetings were held and let me say here that there were five meetings at which no business could be transacted due to the lack of a quorum. Each Member of this Honourable House was given every opportunity and encouragement during the past two and a half years, to make their input into this important piece of legislation, but unfortunately several Members elected not to attend the Committee meetings. There was an obvious lack of interest which was appalling. Nevertheless, if during the debate of this Bill proposals or recommendations that would improve the proposed Law are made, these can be dealt with at the Committee stage.

A total of 42 letters and professionally prepared documents were received from a cross section of our community, such as the:

Young Caymanian Businessmen's Association;
Cayman Contractors' Association;
Cayman Islands Chamber of Commerce;
Cayman Islands Hotel and Condominium Association;
Cayman Islands Watersports Operators;
Cayman Islands Restaurant Association;
Heavy Equipment Operators' Association;
Six Banks and Trust Companies; and Several other outstanding citizens of our community who had an interest and concern.

Each and every organization and person who made written representations were offered an opportunity to meet with the Committee to discuss their views. Six organizations accepted, and four of the six actually met on two occasions with the Committee.

The Committee also took the opportunity, in 1986, to seek advice and assistance from the Labour Adviser, Mr. Adrian Smith, of United Kingdom's Foreign and Commonwealth Office who was visiting the Islands at the time. Additionally, the public was kept fully informed of the Committee's progress through various press releases. Discussion drafts of the proposed Labour Law were given wide circulation. I can truthfully tell this Honourable House, that the Committee gave careful consideration and deep thought to the detail of every representation received or discussion held.

Here, I would like to take the opportunity to publicly thank all organizations and persons for the time they took from their busy schedules to meet with the Committee, and the invaluable assistance which they gave. I must also record my thanks to the former Attorney General of these Islands, the Honourable Michael Bradley, who chaired the Committee during 1985, and 1986. But having said that, there can be no doubt that without the dedication and able assistance of the Second Official Member, the Honourable Attorney General, who chaired the Committee this year, the Committee would not have completed its deliberations on time to enable the presentation of this Bill at this meeting. He really laboured with that Committee to get this Labour Bill to this stage.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would that perhaps be a convenient to take the afternoon break?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Yes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:15 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:32 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, just as is the case with any other legislation, this Law cannot be expected to cover every eventuality. Working within its provisions on a daily basis is bound to produce the need for amendments in due course. But it is the Committee's view that this Bill will provide fair, reasonable and acceptable labour legislation for our country. The objects of this Bill are:

- (1) to establish a code governing terms and conditions of employment. An employee should clearly understand from the very beginning the terms of his employment, and this will certainly eliminate or at least reduce chances of any misunderstandings developing later on.
- (2) to put in place the procedure for dealing with unfair dismissals. An effective means needs to be found to resolve small and perhaps petty grievances, especially at the lower end of the scale for those workers who cannot afford to seek satisfaction from, nor even afford to wait for, any claim they may make to be settled through the lengthy and sometimes expensive process of the Court's system. So this legislation is intended to provide an inexpensive and expeditious means of settling small claims through the involvement of the Director of Labour.
- (3) the Bill seeks to make provisions for the Health, Safety and Welfare of employees within a workplace.

The Bill is divided into eight parts.

Part 1: deals with the definition of terms, statement of working conditions and other preliminary matters;
Part 2: deals with leave;
Part 3: remuneration and hours of work;
Part 4: deals with severance pay;
Part 5: with unfair dismissal;
Part 6: with health, safety and welfare at work;
Part 7: with administration of the Law; and Part 8: covers general penalties and miscellaneous.

Section 1, Mr. President, deals with the commencement date of the Law, which reads:

"This Law may be cited as the Labour Law and shall come into operation on a day to be appointed by the Governor by notice published in the Gazette."

As was pointed out by the Honourable Second Official Member when he tabled the Committee's Report, it is anticipated or expected that this effective date would be 1 January 1988, and after consultation with him, it is intended that the penal provisions would not be enforced until at least six months after the effective date of the Law. This would be a period of grace, if you can call it that, or a settling in period whereby the Director of Labour would have some time to work closely with employers so that a clear understanding of the Law and its implications are arrived at.

Section 2 deals with the interpretation of the terms used in the Law.

In section 3 of Part 1 it will be noted that the provisions of this Law will not apply to the public service, to charitable organizations, or to churches. These are all exempt. While the Law will not apply to the public service, provision is made so that Government's conditions of service as it relates to leave entitlements, work week and so on cannot be less favourable than what is required by this Law. This is also true for all businesses.

It must be borne in mind at all times that this Law merely sets a minimum standard for an employer' and employee's working relationship which must at least be met by both parties. I should also point out here for the sake of clarity that those establishments which now provide and have always provided better benefits, better conditions of employment than the minimum standards prescribed in this Law cannot now turn around and use this Law to provide less favourable conditions to their staff.

In any case, at least in my opinion, were this to be attempted, it could in fact be considered a breach of the contract under which staff were originally hired. It is clearly stated in the Bill that nothing in the Law shall be construed as prohibiting an employer from establishing conditions of service more advantageous to any employee than those minimum employment standards established in this Law.

In section 4 the Governor in Council may exempt any employer or employee, if satisfied, that such exemptions are necessary. It is the view that this will provide some flexibility and enable Government to meet unforeseen situations which may arise from time to time. It can be a useful provision, and while strong concerns have been voiced about this section, I do not really believe that there has ever been any abuse of similar powers given to Executive Council under other laws.

As I mentioned earlier, the Second Elected Member for George Town has circulated various amendments that he will be proposing at Committee stage. He has one dealing with section 4, which I am sure he will put forward when this Bill reaches Committee stage, and we will deal with his proposed amendment at that time.

In section 7 it shall be a requirement for every employer to provide a written statement of working conditions within ten days to all employees except in the case of a casual worker or domestic. The Committee considered that this requirement was unnecessary for the casual worker or domestic because it was felt that the nature of household work is commonly accepted and covered in general terms which are all readily understood. The casual worker, on the other hand, is someone who is employed on an irregular or intermittent basis and there would obviously be no need to formalise the terms of employment for such short periods.

A statement of working conditions should serve the interests of both employer and employee, and avoid or reduce, future misunderstandings. The statement shall cover the job title; general responsibilities and duties; regular hours of work; rate of pay or the way it is calculated, whether hourly or commission rates; pay periods, whether it is daily, weekly or monthly; term of employment; probationary period, if any; holiday and sick leave entitlement; length of notice which the employee must give or must receive whenever employment is terminated by one party or the other. With the coming into effect of this Law, employers will be given 30 days to provide their employees with the written statement of terms and conditions of employment unless a contract setting out the same particulars has already been provided.

In section 8, employees may, by mutual agreement, be employed for an initial probationary period of six months, and by mutual agreement, this may be extended for a further six months maximum. This extension must be provided in writing and signed by both parties. At any time during probation, an employee's employment may be terminated, but the employer must give the employee the reason for so doing. However, once employment has been confirmed and the person taken on on a permanent basis, then the employee is entitled to all earned benefits as provided for by the Law as from the first date of employment. This relates to vacation and other leave entitlements.

I am now dealing with sections 9 and 10. Under clause 9, if the contract of employment is for a fixed term, then the terms and provisions of that contract strictly apply. Under clause 10, except when an employee is dismissed for good cause, as will be explained later, an employer must give an employee advance notice, in writing, of his intention to terminate his employment. Those who are still on probation must be given at least 24 hours. Other employees must receive notice that is equal to the time period between pay days. For example, if they are daily paid, 24 hours; weekly paid, one week's notice; fortnightly, two week's notice; or if paid monthly, they must have 30 days. However, an employer's notice need not exceed 30 days unless this is so specified by the contract.

In dealing with termination of employment by notice, provision is made to protect both the employer and the employee. Whenever an employer has issued a termination of employment notice, he then has the option to terminate the employee's employment prior to the effective notice date, providing the employee is paid the same amount that he would normally have received had he worked until the effective date of his termination. In other words, pay in lieu of notice is allowed. On the other hand, if the employer decides not to exercise this option, the employee is required to remain on the job until the effective termination date is reached. But if the employee walks off the job voluntarily before the notice date of termination is up, then the employer is under no obligation to pay the employee's regular wage for the period of time in question.

Section 11 provides for the employee to likewise give advance notice to his employer of his intention to quit his job. during the probation period, he must give at least 24 hours notice. In other cases, notice must be equal to the time period between pay days or as provided for by contract.

Mr. President, as I pointed out, it is my intention to move a Committee stage amendment to section 11(1)(b) by placing a "full stop" after the word "period" and deleting the words "subject in either case to a maximum of thirty days." As I explained in the first part of my presentation, it does not seem to serve any useful purpose to place a maximum of thirty days on the notice that an employee must give an employer, because this could present extreme difficulty and create hardships for positions at higher levels that have to be filled.

Any employee who fails to give sufficient advance notice may be dismissed prior to the date that he intended to quit voluntarily, and he may forfeit all accrued vacation leave. Once an employee has served his probationary period, and the employer decides to terminate employment at that time, the employee may make a request within fourteen days to the employer, and the employer must furnish, within a fourteen day time period, a statement as to the reason for dismissal, and send a copy to the Director of Labour if requested by the dismissed employee to do so.

In other cases, where employment has been terminated, the employee concerned may request this from his former employer at any time within one year. The former employer must comply within fourteen days of the receipt of such a request, and provide a certificate detailing the dates of engagement and termination and the type of work in which the person was engaged. The employer is charged with responsibility for the accuracy of the information provided. The employer commits an offence if he fails to furnish the information so requested. The employer is prohibited from later on introducing any facts which could have been in the statement, had he issued one, later on introduced as evidence in any proceedings if he fails to supply the certificate. However, once the employer issues a statement or notice in the first instance, then he is discharged of his responsibility in this regard.

PART 11

Mr. President, I now turn to Part 11, dealing with leave entitlement, that is; vacation leave, sick leave and maternity leave. These all apply to full time or part-time permanent staff, but not to casual employees, nor employees who are still on probation, unless the employee, having served his probationary period satisfactorily, has been taken on as permanent staff, then benefits are retroactive, as I stated earlier. Under this section an employee is entitled to two weeks earned vacation with pay per year. He is entitled to public holiday leave, sick leave and normal days off are not to be included. The dates for taking vacations are fixed by agreement between employer and employee. Earned vacation is not cumulative and shall be taken annually unless the employer and employee agree otherwise. The employer cannot force an employee to forego taking his earned vacation leave even though he offers him additional pay for the period. A person whose employment has been terminated is entitled to receive pro rated vacation pay in money, unless it has been forfeited due to the situation where the employee decided to leave his job and did not provide his employer with the required advance notice.

In section 15, part-time employees are entitled to pro rated vacation leave for actual hours worked in relation to the standard work week. Whenever the employee works on a public holiday, he shall be paid double time for the number of hours worked, but by mutual agreement between the employer and employee, an employee may be given time off in lieu of pay for working on public holidays. However, if an employee does not work on a public holiday, he shall be paid the basic wage he normally would have received for work performed on that day. Additionally, managerial and professional staff may agree, through contractual arrangements, that they will not be paid double for working on a public holiday. This is an arrangement which can be left to the employer and employee and the terms of contract.

An employee is entitled to ten days sick leave, with pay, per year, proof of which must be provided in the form of a doctor's certificate on the third day if so requested by the employer. However, if the employer has reason to believe that the employee is using sickness as an excuse to be absent from work, then the employer may request the employee to furnish a doctor's certificate no matter how short a period the employee claims to be sick. Furthermore, the employee has a responsibility under subsection (5) of 17 to notify his employer as soon as possible when he is unable to report for duty due to illness. If an employee's illness reaches the stage where the employer finds it necessary to terminate employment, then the fairness of this action will be determined by the provisions of the Law in Part 5 which deals with unfair dismissal, which the Director of Labour must follow if the employee complains that he has been unfairly dismissed.

A total of 12 weeks maternity leave is allowed, three weeks of which will be on pay. At any time during the twelve weeks, an employer may request the employee to furnish a doctor's certificate, verifying that leave is being taken on account of maternity. The employee may arrange to take this leave in the proportion she so desires before and after childbirth.

The leave entitlements set out in Part 11 of the Law and the means by which they can be arranged, encourages a close working relationship between employers and employees, and takes the needs of both sides into consideration from a timing and convenience point of view, so that no hardships are suffered.

I now turn to Part 111 dealing with remuneration and work hours.

Section 20 makes provision for a National Minimum Basic Wage, if considered necessary to be set by an Executive Council Order. In sections 20, 21 and 22, for this to be accomplished, the Governor in Council would first have to appoint an Advisory Committee of at least eight members comprised of an equal number of employers and employees, and any other representative of interests considered necessary. The function of this Committee would be to investigate and recommend to the Member with Portfolio responsibility for Labour as to the minimum rate of wages which would be payable.

In any event, where a National Minimum Basic Wage is to be set, this would not apply to school children who sometimes work at supermarkets after school hours or during holidays for small pay which could be below the minimum, but they have other benefits which they receive from the customary tips system. It shall of course be an offence to pay less than an established minimum wage except as provided for in the case of school children. This is in the event that a minimum wage is set. Where an employer has been found guilty of paying less than the minimum wage, he can be ordered by the Court, in addition to any fine, to pay to the employee back-pay representing the pay differential for the past two years, plus interest at 10 per cent per annum.

An employer under section 23 shall permit each employee at least one day off per week. Section 24 sets 45 hours as the standard work week. It states, and uses the words "shall not exceed" which indicates the maximum, but does not deal with a minimum. However, this may be revised by an Executive Council's Order for specific businesses if ever considered necessary to do so.

Time worked in excess of 45 hours will normally attract overtime pay at one and a half times the basic hourly rate. This does not, of course, preclude or should be taken as discouraging any arrangement whereby overtime is paid after a stated work period. Here again, let me reemphasise, the Law only sets minimum standards, and does not prohibit more generous terms. Agreement may be reached for an employer to give time off in lieu of pay, and professional and managerial staff may agree in their contract of employment that overtime is not payable to them.

Of course, it is otherwise an offence not to pay overtime and the Court, in addition to any fine imposed, may order that the overtime payments due be paid to the employee concerned.

In sections 26 and 27, an employee may be paid money or in kind. However, at least 50 per cent must be in money, and any payment in kind such as food, accommodation or any other allowances must be fairly evaluated. Payment must be made in cash, but can also be made by cheque or direct deposit with the employee's consent, which consent can only be withdrawn with a valid reason by the employee giving one month's notice to his employer. No deduction may be made from an employee's salary for the cost of anything which this Law or Regulations require the employer to do. No deduction can be made from an employee's salary for obtaining employment, or any fine imposed by the employer. No deduction can be made for bad or negligent work, and here in subsection (d) of section 28 was where I mentioned earlier my proposal to bring a Committee stage amendment so that deductions can be made from an employee's salary where a sum of money for the purpose of carrying on business for the employer is involved. So that subsection (d) would read: "for bad or negligent work other than when an employee is given control of a sum of money for the purpose of carrying on business for the employer.". No deduction may also be made for any damage to material or property unless caused by wilful misconduct of the employee.

However, deductions can be made for any amount imposed by Law, any advance that the employer has made on an employee's salary as agreed between them, the cost of material, tools and equipment which the employer is not obliged to provide but has supplied at the employee's request. Deductions can also be made for any payment into any welfare, insurance or similar fund which the employee has authorised, and also any amount which an employee has authorised in writing, except that any deduction shall not exceed one third of the employee's earnings for that period. But this provision shall not apply to interest on and repayments of loans or advances as per any agreement reached with the employee at the time that the advance or loan was made. In other words, deductions can be made from an employee's salary under certain conditions, but an employer is not authorised to take it all because a man has to live too.

Under section 29, wages must be paid on a regular basis, and at least once a month, and must be made on ordinary working days and hours. Failure to do so is an offence.

An employee may take action in the Courts to recover any sums due to him plus 10 per cent which may have been unlawfully deducted by his employer. Provision is made for employers who have ten or more persons employed to keep accurate work records of each employee, showing the time worked, leave taken and wages paid. In this regard, small businesses, that is, businesses with fewer than ten employees, are therefore exempt from keeping these work records. An employee can demand to inspect his employment record. These records are to be kept for at least two years.

Under section 32, an employee may request from his employer, within one week of payment, a statement of his wages setting out how the payment was made as well as showing how any deductions were arrived at.

Section 33 deals with gratuities. If an establishment collects gratuities, the employer and employees are generally free to agree how the amounts collected will be distributed. If there should be a dispute or difficulty with any employer or any area of employment, the Director can intervene, and if he arrives at a solution, he can, with the agreement of the employer or group of employees concerned, register a scheme affecting them which they must then follow in distributing gratuities. Additionally, Government may at any time make regulations prescribing schemes for any given employer, or class of employees. In which case they will be obliged to abide by that scheme. For example, this could happen where the Director is unable to resolve a problem and therefore was unable to register a scheme. Any gratuities collected must be distributed within three weeks after the month ends, and a record kept of how the amount was distributed. These records can be inspected by the Director on demand and any employer who fails to keep proper records or refuses to allow the Director to inspect them is guilty of an offence.

PART IV

I now turn to Part IV dealing with severance pay.

Severance pay applies to full-time or part-time staff that have completed one year or more of employment. Casual workers are not entitled to severance pay. An employee is entitled to one week's pay in money for each completed year up to a maximum of 12 weeks, when his employment has been terminated by his employer, except that an employee is not entitled to severance pay if dismissed, as claimed by his employer, for any of the following reasons:

- Misconduct - in those cases where an employee has conducted himself so poorly that the employment relationship cannot reasonably be expected to continue, and this includes absenteeism;
- Where he has committed a criminal offence,
- Without the employer's consent;
- Where he has behaved immorally;
- Or where he is under the influence of a controlled drug other than one which is prescribed, or alcohol, while on duty;
- Or continues further misconduct within 12 months after having been given a written warning.

In other words the employee must continue to be of good conduct at least for a year. If after a written warning regarding unsatisfactory performance of duties the employee still does not improve performance within one month, the employee may be terminated without any further notice and without receiving any severance pay. An employee who leaves his job of his own choice and decision is not entitled to severance pay, and if he does not give sufficient advance notice to his employer of his intention to quit, neither is he entitled to vacation pay. However, if an employee has been made redundant for whatever reason, he is entitled to receive severance pay calculated at the rate provided for in this Law.

All this must be complied with by employees, yet there are those organizations which claim and still maintain that this Bill has a severe anti-employer bias. I do not accept this claim.

In the case of bankruptcy or winding up of an employer, severance pay shall take and have priority over other debts. In the case of part-time employees, severance pay shall be paid proportionately to the standard work week.

In section 38(1) any employee whose employment has been terminated and who is legally entitled to severance pay shall receive their severance pay at the time they are being terminated. In other words, it cannot be promised that they will get it later on. If the termination is claimed by the employer to be only temporary, and the employee will be recalled within six months, then no severance pay will be paid. However, if the date of recall is more than six months, then severance pay shall be paid to the employee on the date that the employee is laid off. In a situation where the employee has not been given a recall date, and six months have passed and the employee still has not been re-employed, then at that time, severance pay plus interest at 10 per cent on the amount due must be paid to the employee as from the date of termination. If at some later date after severance pay has been paid, the employee is once again hired by the same employer, this shall be considered as a new term of employment, and severance pay will be calculated as from the new date.

In section 39, whenever a business changes ownership and a person remains in the employ of the new owner of that ongoing business, then the employee will retain full benefits and rights to severance pay as from his original date of employment. However, the employee is not entitled to receive any severance pay at the time that the business changes hands. Should an employee who has been kept on for a period of time under the new ownership eventually be made redundant, then the new owner is responsible for payment of severance pay covering the combined period of employment with the former as well as the present owner. In a situation whereby an employee has been temporarily laid off and the business changes hands during that time without the employee being recalled within six months, then both the former and new owners are jointly responsible for payment of the severance pay, plus interest.

Too many times, this happens, and workers are left going from one person to the other, being sent from here to there, the new owners washing their hands and telling him he did not start off working with him and that he is not responsible. So this section is intended to prevent the occurrence and reoccurrence of those difficult situations that sometimes develop.

Under section 41, every employer must maintain an accurate record of an employee's dates of employment and termination which must be made available to an employee upon request for which failure to comply with this is an offence. Where in the past employees' employment records were not kept, the employer and employee shall agree on the hiring date and failing an agreement being reached, then either the employee or the employer may seek assistance from the Director of Labour in establishing a service commencement date. The Director has power to determine disputes concerning severance pay. Provision is made that in the event there are the same or similar disputes raised around the same time, then the Director may consolidate the proceedings if he so wishes. Similarly, a group of employees with the same problem may make a joint complaint to the Director.

PART V

I now turn to Part V which deals with unfair dismissal.

This part is naturally closely related to Part 11 which deals with severance pay entitlement and applies only to those employees who have completed their probationary period, or those though not employed on probation, who have completed at least six months of continuous employment. Employees who do not fall in either of these categories have no grounds on which to claim unfair dismissal.

In any case, no employee can claim to be unfairly dismissed if one's employment is terminated at the end of a fixed term, as originally agreed by the employer and employee; or whenever the employee is dismissed due to serious misconduct following receipt of a written warning as provided for under section 46(3), or failure to perform duties satisfactorily after a written warning is received under section 47(2). They cannot claim to be unfairly dismissed in the case of serious misconduct as defined in section 46(1). An employee can be dismissed immediately and will lose all severance pay benefits if the employer claims that his misconduct is serious enough. In these circumstances, if it is determined by the Director of Labour that the employer's action was reasonable, then such dismissal is not considered to be unfair.

Sections 46 and 47 set out misconduct for which an employee can be immediately dismissed. But these are not limited to the situation wherein an employee has conducted himself so poorly that the relationship could not possibly be expected to continue; committing a criminal offence, behaving immorally or being under the influence of alcohol or other drugs not prescribed by a medical practitioner while the employee is on duty and of course, being habitually absent from work. If the employer considers that the misconduct is not serious enough to warrant immediate dismissal and decides to give the employee a chance, then he issues a written warning and places the employee on good behavior probation for at least a year. Furthermore, if an employee is not performing his duties in a satisfactory manner, his employer can give him thirty days to improve. If he does not comply, the employee can then be terminated. In none of these instances can an employee claim to be unfairly dismissed. However, the employer must consider the circumstances carefully, and act reasonably.

It will be noted, Mr. President, that the word "reasonable" is used often in this section, and naturally the smooth operation of this Part will lean very heavily on the level of reasonableness applied both by employer and employee. Here the involvement of the Director of Labour comes into play in deciding whether a course of conduct was reasonable so that the settlement of disputes is done according to objective interests, and is not left to the employer and employee to resolve in an ad hoc fashion. Therefore, as provided for, if a dispute arises as to whether or not an employee has been unfairly dismissed, the employee may file a complaint with the Director within 90 days of the dismissal date. Should the complaint involve a group of employees with similar complaints, then they may file jointly and should a number of similar cases arise at the same time, the Director may consolidate the proceedings.

Upon examining a complaint, the Director, if he concludes that the dismissal was unfair, may order the employer to pay a sum of money to the employee as compensation, which sum shall not exceed one week's salary for each completed year of service up to a total of twelve weeks. However, before reaching any decision, the Director must take into consideration:

- (a) the length of service of the employee;
- (b) the likelihood of the person finding another similar job;
- (c) the salary the dismissed person was earning;
- (d) the financial circumstances of the person;
- (e) the degree of unfairness of the dismissal; plus any other matters as may be prescribed by regulation.

Should any Court action be brought regarding the dismissal, the Court, in making an award of damages, must deduct any amount that was awarded by the Director.

MR. PRESIDENT:

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings of this House are resumed.

Perhaps the First Official Member would care to move the suspension of Standing Orders so that we may take questions. I believe that is necessary.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8)

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, in accordance with Standing Order

83, I move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) to allow the questions set down on the Order Paper to be taken this morning.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The question is that Standing Order 83 be suspended to permit that questions listed in Item 2 of this morning's Order Paper to be taken.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8) SUSPENDED

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

MR. PRESIDENT:

Member for Bodden Town.

We move then to Questions. The First Elected

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NO.120: Would the Honourable Member state what payments have been made to date on the Sewerage project and what is the basis for retention of payments, if any?

ANSWER: The West Bay sewerage project is made up of the following three contracts:

1. Preliminary filling of the Sewage Treatment Works' site, carried out by Hawk Enterprises, which was completed in November 1986 for a value of CI$605,720.86. The contractor has received full payment for these works.
2. Supply of plant and materials was let to Ramsen Engineering. This contract was let for a value of CI$958,000 and was completed in January 1987. The contractor has been paid in full, but an eighteen month bond to the value of five per cent of the $47,900 contract price is held by the Government to cover any remedial works which may be necessary.
3. Civil engineering contract was let to Hadsphaltic International Limited. To date, CI$4,097,030.68 of work has been carried out and of this amount the contractor has been paid CI$3,752,087.42. The difference, CI$344,943.26, is held by Government as a seven per cent retention.

The contract allows the Government to retain 10 per cent of the value of the work done until such time as this value reaches 50 per cent of the contract value. After that time, the contractor is entitled to receive five per cent of this retention held, provided that the engineer is satisfied that progress is satisfactory and that there is no specific cause for greater retention.

The value of work carried out by the contractor has exceeded 50 per cent of the contract value, but the retention has only been reduced to seven per cent because the engineer is not satisfied entirely with progress.

After reducing the retention to less than 10 per cent, the engineer is entitled to increase it back up to 10 per cent if he considers progress is not satisfactory or there is specific cause to do so.

The contract allows for a maximum upper limit of retention of 10 per cent.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Honourable Member say what areas of the work have not been completed to the satisfaction of the engineer?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, it is the laying of the pipes in certain areas where the contractor complained of excess work and blamed this on the condition of the area in which they work. There has been some discussion between the contractors and the Water Authority over this because of the excess claim being made by the contractor.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, can the Honourable Member say if this is the reason why they seem to have been digging up pipes in the area of Whitehall? That is the first road going towards West Bay after you pass the Merrens Supermarket - one of those roads into Whitehall.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, that is all a part of the piped area for the sewage. It starts from Watlers Road area right on down to the Public Beach.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: What I am asking, Mr. President, is that these seem to have been the first pipes laid, and it is my understanding that they have had to dig them up because there was something wrong. Can the Honourable Member say if this is correct?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Yes, Mr. President. Wherever there is any digging up of pipes and relaying, that signifies that the work was not satisfactory and it had to be done over.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Can the Honourable Member say, Mr. President, if we will have to pay extra money for this mistake of the contractor's?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, we are denying the claim.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Can I ask, Mr. President if Government has actually been billed for this additional work?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, this will eventually be subject to arbitration if the contractors so wish to pursue that course, but as far as this Government is concerned we have denied their claim and that is it.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: A further supplementary. What is the percentage of the contract work that has been done?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, I am not sure of the exact percentage, but it is over 50 per cent.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: What is the percentage of the contract price that has been paid to date?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, the contract price that has been paid is $3,752,087.42. That is in number (3) of the answer to the question.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, I know what the answer was, and I know what my question was but that was not the answer to my question. My question was, what percentage of the contract price has been paid to date?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, I have not got the contract with me, neither have I got the details of the sums of the contract. If the Member wishes, I can send that to him.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: What is the total price payable to Hadsphaltic International under this contract?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, I can only say that we have paid Hadsphaltic up to this stage the sum that is named in the answer to the question. I have not got the details of the contract.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Mr. President, certainly the Honourable Member must know what the contracted price is for a contract of this size. Could he advise the House what is the contract price?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: The contract price, Mr. President, is approximately C$8 million or US$10 million.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, may I ask if that amount of C$8 million is the cost of the labour or if that includes the machinery as well?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Well, Mr. President, a contract price includes labour, materials and all the other things that go to complete the project.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, may I ask the Honourable Member if the engineers identified any other area with a major problem, besides this road that I mentioned at Whitehall?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Not to my knowledge, Mr. President. Other than the enormous problem they had when they started to dig up along the West Bay Road and the large volume of water they encountered in the trenches.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think we might move to the next question, we seem to have excavated that one quite well. Question No. 121, please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NO. 121: Would the Honourable Member state who is responsible for payments for road repairs resulting from work on the Sewerage project?

ANSWER: The West Bay Beach Sewerage contract with Hadsphaltic International requires that they reinstate those parts of the roads which have been affected by their pipe laying operation. It is reasonable to expect that in pricing the contract, Hadsphaltic allowed for this cost in their rates. It is therefore reasonable to expect that in paying for the contract, the employer is meeting the cost of road reinstatement. However, if the contractor, through his own fault, damages more road than is necessary, then any repair costs will be his responsibility and will be to his account.

SUPPLEMENTARIES:

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Could you state whether any parts of the road have been repaired as a result of damage done by Hadsphaltic?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Not final repairs Mr. President, because as the pipes are laid they cover the trenches, and then it has to be treated and repaired in accordance with Public Works Department's specifications. That will be done before the project is finally completed.

MR. JAMES M. BODDEN: Before the work is finally completed, will the road be repaired in a manner similar to what existed before, or is it going to be like what has been done in the past few months, where it is just simply patched, and the road is in much worse shape now than it ever was? Is that what we can expect in the future, or will we have a road that will be laid out and done up to the specifications of the Public Works Department?

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. President, that is what I meant by saying that it will be done up to Public Works' specification. It has to be done back to the standard where it was before the digging of the trenches started.

MR. PRESIDENT: Next question, No. 122, please.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NO.122: Would the Honourable Member state how many Caymanians are employed on the Sewerage project; how many expatriates are employed and where do they come from?

ANSWER: Hadsphaltic International employs 120 personnel on the Sewerage project, made up of the following nationals:

Caymanians	59
British	27
United States	1
Jamaicans	29
Hondurans	2
Nicaraguans	2

MR. PRESIDENT: There appear to be no supplementaries. We move on to item 3 on the Order Paper, Government Business, Bills, Second Reading. Continuation of the moving of the Second Reading of the Labour Bill, 1987. The Honourable the Second Elected Member of Executive Council.

SECOND READING

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. President, when the House adjourned on Friday last I had completed my presentation on Part 5, dealing with unfair dismissal.

I now move on to Part 6 of the Bill, which covers the health, safety and welfare of employees at work.

This part applies to all workplaces as defined, and the definition of a workplace as defined means, any premises in which an employee is employed to work and without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing, includes any shop, office, licensed premises or factory. The Governor in Council may extend it to any operations to which it appears reasonable. It should also be noted that provisions made in this Part are in addition to, and not in substitution for, provisions of any other Law.

In section 51, all workplaces operated after the Law comes into effect and any new businesses which commence after that date must, within one month, file with the Director of Labour a notice providing the name, address, brief description of the business, kinds of machines, if any, total number of employees, and, if shift work is involved, the total employees on duty at any one time. Additionally, the Director must be informed, within one month, of any material change to this information. Employers are responsible for assuring the health, safety and welfare of their employees while on duty as far as is reasonable and practicable.

In the area of health safeguards, an employer must ensure that the workplace is kept clean; that it is not overcrowded; that it is maintained at a reasonable temperature; of course dependent on the type of work involved, the workplace must have adequate ventilation and lighting; floor drains as necessary; and suitable and sufficient sanitary conveniences.

In the area of safety, an employer must ensure that adequate fire prevention measures are taken; that there is adequate means of exit; safety steps taken in respect of any machinery operated and buildings must be of sound construction and must be properly maintained.

For the purpose of contributing to the welfare of employees, a workplace must have an adequate supply of wholesome drinking water, and dependent on circumstances, such reasonable facilities that would allow the employee to sit, if necessary, during the course of their work. What immediately comes to mind in this regard is in the case of cashiers, for example, in certain businesses.

Thirdly, first aid equipment and other facilities such as canteens, mess rooms and rest rooms as are reasonable under the circumstances must be available.

I do not want to bring specific cases to this House, Mr. President, but in this regard I know of some properties that have large numbers of employees. I have visited those properties from time to time and seen the employees sitting in the alleyways or the passageways eating their lunch. I do not believe that this is an unreasonable requirement.

Section 56 provides for special protective measures such as appropriate dining areas, eye protection, protective clothing and equipment to be provided for work around different types of machinery, and for working with certain substances.

The operators of workplaces must notify the Director immediately of any serious industrial accident which occurs within the work place or to any person in his employment.

Employees must make use of the appliances and conveniences provided in the workplace for his health, safety and welfare in accordance with this Law to the extent that their employment necessitates such use. But, an employee shall not wilfully nor intentionally interfere or misuse these facilities, nor wilfully endanger himself or others.

Section 59 deals with remedial notices.

If the Director of Labour is of the opinion that steps are required to be taken in order for an operator to comply with the requirements of this part of the Law, he may issue to the operator a remedial notice calling his or her attention to the following:

- (a) to the requirements which must be met;
- (b) the steps to be taken to meet those requirements; and
- (c) the time by which the requirements must be complied with.

Any person served with such a notice may appeal to the Appeals Tribunal, and this shall operate as a stay of the requirements set out in the remedial notice until the appeal has been dealt with.

If the notice from the Director of Labour is upheld by the Tribunal, then the Tribunal will fix a time by which the Director's notice must be complied with. Where the Director, after consultation with the Environmental Health Officer, is of the opinion that there exists a situation dangerous to employees' health or safety, he may so state in the remedial notice, in which case an appeal would not automatically operate as a stay. But a person proposing to appeal against this type of notice may immediately apply to the Grand Court for a stay of effect of the notice pending the outcome of the appeal. The Grand Court may then grant such a stay subject to the conditions it considers just, including directing that the necessary work be carried out, or that any appeal be lodged within a specific time limit.

A remedial notice may require that any activity, operation or process in a workplace be stopped immediately or within a specific time. A remedial notice may require that the premises be vacated immediately or otherwise; that the premises or plant be altered; or that temporary corrective measures pending completion of permanent measures, be taken. But, the Director shall not serve a remedial notice requiring the closure of any workplace without the written consent of the Member responsible for Labour.

Where an act or default is due to some other person other than the employer or operator, then that person is also guilty of an offence and liable to the same penalty as if he were the employer or operator. This provision is seen as being necessary to prevent what is commonly called "passing the buck", having someone to say that the owner or the operator is away from the premises and he cannot do anything about the situation. The Committee saw this as very important and necessary, although I know that it has been objected to from some sectors of our business community.

The Director is charged with the responsibility to investigate and make routine checks of employers' compliance with these requirements for workplaces. If, as a result of any accident in a workplace, a report is made by an authority holding a formal investigation or a coroner's inquest, which claims that any provisions of this Part, or any regulations were not met at or before the time of the accident, proceedings may be instituted against the person liable at any time within six months of the report or conclusion of the inquest.

Section 63 gives the Grand Court power to modify agreements and apportion expenses where an agreement between the owner and operator prevents one or the other from making alterations in the premises which are necessary to conform with the requirement of this Law or regulations. It should be noted here that in this section either party, either the owner or the operator, may apply to the Court to have such an order issued.

Section 64 gives the Governor in Council power to make regulations prescribing the standards to be achieved and methods to attain them; special conditions to be applied to particular substances or materials; safety measures to be taken in respect of machinery; any process, activity or operation; and for prohibited substances.

I now turn to Part 7, dealing with Administration.

This part deals firstly with the establishment of the Labour Office, the appointment of a Director and inspectors, the Director's responsibilities and powers, and it lays down the procedure to be followed in exercise thereof.

In section 67 the Director, as well as any inspectors, will have power to: enter any work place during normal working hours without previous notice; power to conduct any examination, test or inquiry to ensure that this Law is being complied with; to question any employer or employee concerning the application of this Law; to examine and copy any records required to be maintained by this Law; and lastly, power to institute legal proceedings for offences committed under this Law.

In regards to the power to examine and copy any records, I should point out here that this power extends solely to those records which are required under this Law. It does not empower any Director of Labour or inspector to examine any company's accounts or any other matters of a confidential nature, but records that are required to be kept by this Law can be inspected by those persons.

When the Director (and here I am dealing with sections 68 and 69) receives a complaint in writing which is the formal method for initiating proceedings before the Director concerning unfair dismissal or severance pay. Whenever such a complaint is received and, as I have pointed out, it must be in writing, you do not call up on the telephone and list a long string of complaints and expect action. If you have a complaint, put it clearly in writing and then there is no room for misunderstanding. Once that complaint is received by the Director of Labour, a time frame is then set for processing such a complaint.

The Director must notify the employer within seven days, supplying all details and requesting a written reply to the complaint which has been lodged with him. Twenty-one days from the date the complaint is received, the Director will then set a date for a hearing. This must be done within a one to three month period of time. Both employer and employee must immediately be notified and invited to attend the hearing.

Within 28 days of the hearing, the Director must then provide a reasoned decision, in writing, to the employer and employee concerned. It should be pointed out here that the Director's decision is final and binding on both parties and refusal to comply with his decision is an offence. However, in the event that either an employer or employee is dissatisfied with the Director's decision, provisions are made for appeals to be filed with an Appeals Tribunal and thence to the Grand Court, if necessary.

Any person dissatisfied with the Director's decision in cases where the award is over $500, or in the case of an employee, where the employee was awarded less than $500 but claims that it should have been more; or any person dissatisfied with the service of a remedial notice, can, within 14 days, appeal to the Chairman of the Appeals Tribunal, in writing, with a copy to the Director of Labour and the other parties concerned. Such notice of appeal to the Appeals Tribunal will act as a stay upon any award that is made by the Director.

Now we have the procedure that the Appeals Tribunal must follow. In sections 70 and 71, on receipt of the appeal, the Chairman of the Appeals Tribunal must set a date for a hearing within a one to three month period from the date the appeal is received and immediately notifying the appellant and all other parties who are entitled to receive notices. The Appeals Tribunal within 28 days after the hearing is concluded must then notify its decision with written reasons therefor to all persons who were present at the hearing. I should also point out here, Mr. President, that the Tribunal's decision is final and binding on all parties, except that an appeal may be made to the Grand Court on a point of law only. Any appeal to the Grand Court shall not act as a stay of any award granted by the Director or the Tribunal unless this is so ordered by the Court.

For me as a layman, this section dealing with points of law and items of that nature is a bit technical, but upon enquiry, my understanding is that appeals on a point of law will include those cases where a person believes that natural justice has been denied him or her or that they have been dealt with unreasonably. It must also be pointed out here that apart from the statutory right of appeal on a point of law only, the decisions of the Director of Labour or the decisions of the Appeals Tribunal are not subject to judicial review because logically, this would defeat the whole purpose of putting in place the machinery for inexpensive and expeditious settlement of claims and the determination of complaints. As a layman I can see the logic in this, although some people felt it was horrendous and horrifying. It is reasonable, Mr. President, that is my view.

I now turn to the last part, Part 8, which deals with General Penalties and Miscellaneous. Section 73 provides that no person shall be discriminated against because of race, colour, creed, sex, age or political beliefs - a very important section. However, this part must not be interpreted to mean that personnel action genuinely relating to a person's ability to perform his duties cannot be taken. In other words, if you have a case, prove it. But, do not try to hide behind this or use this as an excuse for a person's inability to perform his duties in a satisfactory manner. There is of course, a fine of $1,000 or twelve months imprisonment or both if a person is convicted of practising discrimination.

In section 74, a general penalty of $500 or six months, or both, is also provided where specific penalties for any convictions are not stated.

In section 75, any person who makes a false entry in any records kept in accordance with this Law, or makes any false declaration, or knowingly makes use of such false information is guilty of an offence and can be fined up to $2,000 or twelve months imprisonment, or both. Also, any person who obstructs the Director of Labour or inspector, in the carrying out of their duties in accordance with this Law, or who refuses to answer or answers falsely, fails to produce documents, prevents or attempts to prevent any person from appearing before the Director or inspector in connection with the requirements of this Law shall be guilty of an offence, and upon conviction fined a maximum of $1,000 or six months or both for the first offence, and, in the case of a second offence which is committed within two years from the last conviction for a previous offence, then they can be fined a maximum of $2,000 or twelve months imprisonment, or both.

Special provisions have been made for the entries made in the records by an employer or operator to be admissible as evidence in any proceedings.

Section 77 sets out the procedure to be followed in the service and sending of notices or documents which can be done by post or by hand delivery.

Section 78 gives what I consider the general regulation making powers to the Governor in Council, for prescribing forms or other documents required under this Law and for varying any time periods established or required by this Law.

Section 79 deals with the repeal of three Laws which I mentioned earlier in my presentation, the repeal of the Masters and Servants Law; the Minimum Wage Law; and the Truck Law.

Mr. President, this brings me to the end of my dealing with the various sections of the Bill. I would like to repeat and reemphasize that this Bill, when it becomes Law, sets a minimum standard for terms and conditions of employment. Nothing in it precludes or prevents an employer from providing more favourable conditions or more generous terms.

As I said earlier in my presentation, no legislation, no matter how carefully drafted, can deal with every detail or cover every eventuality. Much is left to management and the conditions of the contract reached between employer and employee. And, Mr. President, much naturally depends on interpretation, application, and, of course, enforcement.

I see the Labour Law operating as a two way street. It places certain reasonable obligations on employers, but it also makes it clear that workers must also meet their responsibilities or suffer the consequences. In other words, a reasonable employer would have no difficulties with a well behaved responsible employee. For all those who fall outside those categories, there is or will be the Law.

It is true that employers will be required to do a little bit more record keeping, but actually what the Law calls for in many instances are only normal and good business practices. The employer must provide some normal and ordinary employee benefits but most of these are already in practice and are generally accepted. To be quite frank, in the past three years in dealing with labour complaints that have come to my attention, I have far too often seen the words drafted by legal minds in response to labour complaints, and I quote: "Whilst under no legal obligation to do so, we will consider ..." doing so and so. To my mind, this is not good enough. Government must ensure that at least minimum employment standards are maintained, that no attempt is made to remove benefits or reduce responsibilities, that what has been agreed or is ordinarily in practice cannot be treated in an arbitrary or ad hoc fashion, but that these things are actually substantiated by law - something with teeth, and something that bites.

I see this Labour legislation as providing some order and protection to both employer and employee alike. I hate to be repetitious, but once again in my view employers will have a good guide to rely on for their responsibilities to employees, and an employee will have a clear indication of their rights, benefits and, of course, their obligations to their employers. There are too many grey areas out there that need to be identified as black or white.

Mr. President, as the Elected Member of Government responsible for Labour, it has been my responsibility to present this Bill. But I must make the point before taking my seat that this Bill is the product of the Select Committee of the whole House which was appointed to deal with this important matter for this country. I want it to be clearly understood that I do not of course say this apologetically, but I say so to remind all Honourable Members that this is their handy work too, and therefore their strong and sincere support is expected and will be appreciated. I would humbly ask all Members to view this Bill in that light.

The Bill is fair, it is reasonable, it is equitable, and it gives me much pleasure to recommend to this Honourable House what I call the Labour Bill, the formal and correct title being, A Bill for a Law to Govern Terms and Conditions of Employment; to Provide for the Health, Safety and Welfare of Employees; and for Related Matters.

I recommend the Bill to the Members of this Honourable House. Thank you.

QUESTION PROPOSED:-

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that a Bill entitled the Labour Bill, 1987 be given a Second Reading. The motion is open for debate.

Member appears to wish to speak. In that case I shall put the question.

The motion is that a Bill entitled the Labour Bill, 1987, be given its Second Reading ...

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I was standing up. I was going to suggest that since it is so close to the adjournment, it is only about five or seven minutes ...

MR. PRESIDENT: No, I am sorry, I think we had fifteen minutes when I asked did any Member wish to speak. I am quite happy if you wish to speak. You did not catch my eye then, but please go ahead if you wish to.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: I will speak then.
Mr. President, the Bill before the House seems to me to be somewhat like the address on the Budget. Members became speechless because they felt so guilty of what they had done and are doing to the economy of this country. I will give you an unconditional guarantee that when I am finished speaking tomorrow on this Bill every Member will rise to speak with the usual reluctance on their faces but with alacrity in their hearts.

The Bill before the House is sadistic, and when I say sadistic, I do not mean in the sexual sense but sadistic in that it derives pleasure from inflicting cruelty upon the employer. If this Bill would do anything for the employee or the worker I would gladly support it. But this Bill has in it the slave mentality that has pervaded it from beginning to end.

MR. PRESIDENT: Could I interrupt you? Could you just repeat that word - did I hear "slave mentality"?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Yes, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: In that case you are verging on being offensive to the House as a whole. I would ask you to be careful.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: I said the Bill, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: The Bill, as you know, has been endorsed by a Committee of the whole House. I repeat, you are on the verge of being offensive to the House.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Well perhaps you are right, Sir, but I think ...

MR. PRESIDENT: Please do not tell me perhaps I am right, the Chair is ruling.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Well, it is my opinion, Sir, that this Bill is offensive to the entire population of these Islands. Offensive in every respect and offensive to me if not to other Members. Whether they produced, endorsed or manufactured it, it is still an ugly Bill. I may say that many times during my debate and I will be on the verge of being out of order but will stay close enough to finish what I have to say. I cannot be antagonised into having to be thrown out, I am going to have my say.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would you be seated for a moment, I want a word of explanation.

There is no question of the Chair seeking to antagonise you. The Chair has a duty under Standing Orders. I intend to carry that out. If you verge on repetition - you have used the word "offensive" now six or seven times - I shall rule you out for being repetitious. Please proceed.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I have many adjectives that I shall use.

The Bill is one-sided and it is all in favour of the worker with no returns for the employer. The reason why the Bill is like this is because the Members did not seek or I should say, did not seek to find a Bill that was suitable for these Islands. This is brought out clearly in the Report which has been tabled in this House and I would like to quote from that Report. It reads:

"We decided to start from the Antigua Labour Code for this purpose, in view of the fact that the original Chairman was familiar with the legislation, having worked several months on it."

Perhaps I had better read the full paragraph, in case I am accused of only reading the part that suits me.

"We, the Committee, in our undertaking to study terms and conditions of employment in the Cayman Islands with particular reference to the construction and tourist related industries, and to make recommendations for suitable labour legislation to be introduced in this Honourable Legislative Assembly thought it prudent to begin with other jurisdictions as a guideline in laying the groundwork for the proposed legislation. We decided to start from the Antigua Labour Code for this purpose, in view of the fact that the original Chairman was familiar with the legislation, having worked several months on it. We were aware that the Code was developed for a different jurisdiction, but hope that in building upon it, we have omitted material such as matters relating to trade unions that do not apply to Cayman, while adapting it to make it specifically relevant to the Cayman situation."

The important point here is the decision of the Committee to use the Antigua Labour Code simply because the original Chairman was familiar with the legislation.

So, the Antigua Labour Code was not selected because it was suitable to Cayman; it was not selected because the conditions were similar in both countries; it was selected simply because the Attorney General at that time had worked under, or had knowledge of, the Antigua Labour Code. This is what the Committee's Report says. On page 4, in the second paragraph, it states that the reason why this was selected was because the Attorney General, to use the exact words, "was familiar with the legislation, having worked several months on it".

There could be no similarity. Antigua is a country with a population of 80,000, not 20,000. At the time of the original Labour Law, Antigua was a country with an economy altogether different from ours. At that time - I am talking about the time when the first Labour Law was put in - their only industry was agriculture, primarily cotton and sugar cane, and it was to regulate these industries that they passed the original Labour Law. Everybody knows the history of the Caribbean. The history of sugar cane and cotton was a history that brought with it the slave mentality. The original workers in the sugar canes and cotton fields were slaves. We cannot deny it.

It is only in modern times that Antigua has a tourist industry. The original Labour Law was not intended to regulate a tourist industry which did not exist at the time. It is true that while they have been getting probably as many tourists as we have in numbers, they do not have the amount of tourists in proportion to their population that we have. It is my contention that the Antigua Labour Code was a bad model to use. Whether the Bill was endorsed by the Members of this House or not, you cannot have a good Bill if you start off with the wrong model. So from day one they were in trouble on this Bill.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Is that a convenient moment to break?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Well, it certainly is not for me, Sir, but I will ...

MR. PRESIDENT: are on.

No, go ahead by all means and finish the piece you

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

I would like to continue.

This Bill will do nothing to enhance the relationship between employer and employee. The relationship which now exists is probably the best employer/employee relationship in the Caribbean, and this Bill will not improve upon our position, it will probably make it worse.

This Bill will widen the rift between employer and employee at a time when we cannot afford it. If the Bill did anything to encourage workers to stay on the job or workers to appreciate what their employers do I could support it, but it does nothing of the kind.

me.

I think perhaps we might break for lunch. Do excuse

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, my concern about this Bill is that it will hurt the employee. In order to qualify this statement, one must look at the effects the Bill will have on the employer and subsequently on his business and finally the results to the employee.

By its onerous administrative burdens that will be placed on the employer, such as record-keeping and so on, the employer must have his costs go up. Anytime the employer has an increase in costs, the worker is bound to suffer because money which is spent on the business cannot be given as fringe benefits to the employee. I will of course, be dealing with this in greater detail as I come to the relevant sections of the Bill.

I believe this Bill will take this country back fifty years. The only good to come of this is that it will provide plenty of employment for lawyers and accountants. These will be the chief beneficiaries of this Law. For the worker, it will create frustration and it will create frustration for the employer as well.

The Member introducing the Bill mentioned that he wanted a Law that bites, and a Law with teeth. He has created a bull dog of the fiercest nature. The Bill is an administrative nightmare. All the small businesses will now need a personnel manager, they will need people to do the book-keeping and the record keeping. I will deal with these as I come to the relevant sections of the Bill.

The Member mentioned the long gestation period of the Bill. It took something like two and a half years to produce it. He mentioned that some 37 Committee meetings were held and that there were five meetings called when there was no quorum. I must reply to this, because I know many Members will get up and say that certain Members did not attend these meetings and that was why there was no quorum, and furthermore, that the Members could have no input in the Bill. Since he has mentioned it, I think I have a right to reply.

As for the matter of having a quorum, I think it is the responsibility of the Government in power to provide its own quorum. I was a Member of Government for eight years, and I cannot recall a single meeting that was cancelled for lack of a quorum because whatever the subject was, the Member responsible made certain that he invited his supporters to be present in order that there would be a quorum.

Furthermore, I attended only one or two meetings. The reason for this was that I found out at my first meeting that the Chairman of the Committee and the Members were bent on presenting to this House the Bill that we have. I found out, and I will just mention one instance on that first day, that they would not accept any recommendations from the minority. I found out that all of the problems they had when they presented the draft Bill may have been avoided if they would have listened to reasoning in the initial stages of the Bill in the Committee meetings. They came prepared to put forward this Bill and they have put it forward.

There were a few modifications to the Antigua Labour Code, modifications which came about simply because of pressure from the business sections. Yet many of the principles which were objected to still remain in the Bill, and certainly all of the difficult ones are still in the Bill.

I remember raising the point that if we make it a criminal offence for an employer to pay less than the basic wage which is fixed without any proviso, it would be impossible for any bargaining. I remember citing the example that a person could not paint his brother's house for less money than the fixed wage if a wage is fixed under the Law for painters because it would be a criminal offence for his brother to pay him less, even if the person would accept. What this Bill is doing is to do away with free trade as we know it, to do away with the free enterprise systems, and to take the bargaining power out of certain situations.

I am wondering why we cannot learn from the mistakes of other countries, especially other Caribbean countries, rather than attempting to copy their laws? Why are we so bent on following them? The Member has not adduced a single bit of evidence to show that Antigua, whose Law we used as a model, is any better off labour wise than the Cayman Islands. I suspect that even if a minute investigation was carried out, we would not find any evidence that would justify our copying this Law.

The Member introducing the Bill made it clear that he expects the strong, sincere support of the House on this Bill, and he says that their sincere support is expected and will be appreciated. Here I must touch on the root cause of all the troubles we have had with this Bill and with other similar matters.

We have seen the Government, time after time, get into problems because they too readily accept motions which are brought by their staunch supporters. Not only the motion to have this Bill, but the motion to have the Social Security Scheme, the motion to increase the salaries of Legislative Assembly Members out of all proportion, the motion to have the Five Year Economic Plan - and I could go on and on and on. But as one Member said in the House about three years ago, it appears that the tail is wagging the dog.

This Bill will introduce a regimented system into our labour force, a system to which we have not been accustomed and must cause, as a result, frustrations for employer and employee. I would like to give just one example.

When the businessman writes out in detail what a clerk is supposed to do on Monday morning, such as stacking the shelves, or pricing the goods, and then finds out at 10:00 o'clock that his cashier is sick, he may have the worker tell him that it is not his job, it is not in his written instructions, he is a pricer of goods, and therefore cannot carry out the businessman's bidding.

This is what we are introducing. We are bringing a type of socialist legislation which dictates terms of employment, removes the bargaining power which has been the corner stone of our free enterprise system. In addition to this, although I do not want to anticipate the Bill but it is directly related to this - we will soon be introducing income tax to support the social security system for the workers. This is the Bill that the Member calls, in his own words, fair, reasonable and equitable. I am wondering, fair to whom, reasonable to whom, and equitable to whom?

This Bill does not fulfill the terms of the motion from which it sprang. A Private Member's Motion had been introduced in the House in March of 1985, asking that we introduce legislation that would deal with the construction and tourist related industries (that is reading from the preamble) and other related industries. If the Bill had set out to comply with the terms of the Motion, it might be said that we were dealing with the problem because, I dare say, this Motion came to the House in good faith, simply because the Member had received so many complaints from the tourist industry, complaints about gratuities, conditions of work, complaints from the construction industry, and perhaps a few other areas. But we have gone out to do all things to all the people at one time.

There is no doubt that Members may have laboured hard in the production of this Bill but if you do not start with the right model, it does not matter how hard you labour there is such a thing as wasted labour. Of course, 37 meetings over a three year period cannot really be called hard labour. If I remember correctly, the last Government had that many meetings in six months, dealing with Cayman Airways and the purchase of jets and so on. So they really have not laboured that hard. They have drawn it out over a long period and perhaps given the public time to digest this meal which must be totally unpalatable.

In the examination of the Bill by the Committee, they did invite witnesses to come in. But I am wondering what was the good of inviting them, because they only listened to them on minor areas, as will be reflected in the Bill. I see from reading these Reports that they even passed a resolution one time allowing 45 minutes for certain persons to discuss the Bill with them. The Bill which is before us is not much different from its original draft. It does not differ in the areas that are onerous to the employer, and is not substantially different from the Bill which served as a model.

In dealing with this Bill, the Chamber of Commerce had initially made a suggestion that they and the public be given a six month period to review the draft Bill. We find out that although the Bill which is before us took more than two years to complete its gestation, the Committee thought that the six months requested by the Chamber of Commerce was too long a period. This is on page 2 of the minutes of the third meeting - that the Chairman's request for a six month period to review the draft discussion Bill, once it was available, was too long a period, and that it was the intention of the Select Committee that after a discussion draft has been prepared, it would be published in the Gazette with adequate time for a review. I am mentioning this just to show that despite what we heard in the introduction of this Bill before the weekend, those people who objected strenuously were put into a closed circle in order to make their objections.

I know I may appear to be deliberating a little on the minutes, but these are the foundations to the Bill, and some of the points which I raise are so relevant to the Bill that we cannot understand the Bill without this but I will not be much longer on this.

MR. PRESIDENT:

long as you stick to the general merits and principles of the Bill.

If I may interrupt you, that is perfectly in order so

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

We had an opportunity in this Bill to receive advice from Mr. Adrian Smith, who was the Labour Advisor of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London. If one looks throughout this Bill, one will find certain passages in the minutes which have made me believe that the Committee rejected the important points raised by Mr. Smith. For example, on page 2 of the minutes of the sixteenth meeting, I read:

"Although Mr. Smith stated that it was unusual or difficult to exclude the Civil Service, it was expressed that the various requirements and entitlements of the Civil Service Regulations had been taken into consideration, and it was the general consensus that the Civil Service remain independent from the private sector."

Here we find that the Civil Service has been excluded. My question is, if this is such a good Bill, why does it not apply to the largest single group of workers?

There were other areas that the discussion with Mr. Smith seemed to produce a different result from what he had in mind. If we look at the section on gratuities, page 3, it says, "Mr. Smith was of the opinion that gratuities were best left to individual arrangements as this too, was a cause for greater bureaucracy." I am wondering if gratuities are left to individuals, because I think in the Bill, the Director can work out certain arrangements. On the same page, "Mr. Smith noted that the United Kingdom has abolished minimum wages as such legislation and regulations served to do away with low paid jobs." Yet we find that this Bill legislates for certain minimum wages, or makes provision for the Governor in Council, to set certain minimum wages because it is important. I would like to quote the full paragraph. Mr. Smith noted that:

"The United Kingdom has abolished minimum wages as such legislation and regulations served to do away with low paid jobs. In view of particular problems within the Cayman Islands, it is necessary to have a minimum wage. Wages in the Islands are high in relation to the high cost of living. It was recommended that legislation provide a minimum wage for adults and not part time workers or school children. It is difficult to set rates for school children who go out to work and who are untrained as this leads to an inflationary spiral which forces up other wages. It was further recommended not to provide rates for various occupations and/or industries, as this can lead to serious disputes."

But the Bill has been left wide open with the Governor in Council being given the authority to set certain wages, so that despite what is in the minutes, and despite what is in the Law, the avenue will be open for the Governor in Council to set certain minimum wages. What is really a beauty is that the Labour Officer, Mr. Smith said, "it was recommended to keep legislation simple throughout". I could go on and on but there is so much to be dealt with in the Bill which the Member went through in great detail, I cannot spend too much time.

I would just like to call Members' attention to show that the Chamber of Commerce did not agree with the powers given to the Labour Officer, and to show that the Committee, while they were polite to the Chamber, totally disregarded the important points which they raised. This is on page 6 of the minutes of the meeting for 3rd June, 1987. It says:

"The Committee notes that it has already agreed that whether there exists employment documentation describing the job, an employee should nevertheless be given a separate statement."

I am sorry, I am reading the wrong page, by turning it over. On page 6 regarding the powers of the Labour Officer:

"The Committee considered the expressed concern relating to settlement of small disputes between employers and employees where the dollar figure involved did not justify the expense of hiring legal counsel. The Chamber is of the opinion that years of judicial precedent and covenant have been wiped out and replaced with the whim of a civil servant, and further, that the Caymanian Protection Board has been ignored in the present draft Bill."

So what the Chamber is dealing with is the part stressed by the Honourable Member in introducing the Bill, that the Director can do certain things under the Law and there is no appeal except through a tribunal in certain instances and to the Court in a matter of law.

It was not only the Chamber that was ignored. The banks were also ignored on matters of great concern which they raised although, in fairness to the Committee, it did make small amendments. For example, on page 8, with vacation leave, "The Committee noted that representation of the clause suggested entitlement to vacation leave is cumulative. The Committee noted that it had already adequately dealt with this section, and considered the amendments made thereto satisfactory". Throughout the Report you will find this, that the Committee said they had already dealt with it adequately.

In clause 49, the same thing. The Committee noted that it had considered adequately these subsections, and considered no amendment necessary, despite the recommendations. Section 31(4) with deductions, the Committee noted that it had already adequately considered and amended the clause satisfactorily. So the point I am making, and I do not want to be repetitious, nor do I want to go into trivia, but the Banks, the Chamber of Commerce and minority Members were all treated the same - totally ignored. Good ideas were rejected.

On page 2 of the minutes of the 35th meeting, we find in dealing with clause 21(9) - Minimum Wage Advisory Committee, the question that was put and agreed to was that the Committee rejected the Chamber's proposed amendment to substitute the words "to the Assembly" for the words "to the Member". Totally rejected! This is a point I will be hammering in dealing with many aspects of the Bill which the Director has been given authority, where I feel it should have been done only through Law by the Legislative Assembly. There are areas in the Bill where Executive Council has been given certain authority which I feel should only have been given to the Legislative Assembly. Here, coming from a body that represents the business community, we find that the Committee rejects the Chamber's proposed amendment on a very important matter.

Now I do not need a lecture on Select Committees, I know the power of a Select Committee. Here we were dealing in uncharted waters, in areas that we know nothing about. We had so many opportunities to receive advice and we neglected to take advantage of this. This is perhaps the last one dealing in this vein, on page 5 of the minutes of the meeting of 19th August, dealing with the Director of Trade and Labour.

"The Committee considered a letter received from the Director of Trade and Labour, and agrees in principle to his recommendation in relation to clause 33(1), but does not deem it necessary for specific provisions to be incorporated in the legislation."

So even here the person who is to be all things under this Law is ignored, because when they say they agree but do not deem it necessary, it simply means that it will be left to chance.

Other senior members of Government were treated the same. The Principal Secretary for Personnel made certain good recommendations. On page 6 of these minutes, that is the minutes for the meeting of 19th August, the Committee considered the comments made by the Principal Secretary of Personnel which is a post or a body which has dealt with all the labour matters in the Civil Service for all the years in the past.

MR. PRESIDENT:
locate it?

Sorry, could I have that reference again, I cannot

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Yes, it is page 6 of the minutes of the meeting of 19th August, 1987. It is about the middle of the page, paragraph 10.

"The Committee considered the comments made by the Principal Secretary of Personnel. Question was put and agreed upon that no changes be made to the Bill arising out of the comments made by the Principal Secretary for Personnel."

So, here again, he was totally rejected.

What is also more amazing, is that in section 12 on the same page verbal representation had been made by Mr. Thomas Russell who was a former Governor of the islands, and who is now in charge of Cayman's affairs in London. He was rejected in the same manner. The statement reads:

"The Committee notes that in light of the Caymanian Protection Law and present practices within the Island, it is not necessary to include such provisions in the legislation."

He had made certain recommendations with regard to the provision for businesses to provide accommodation and repatriation for foreigners.

MR. PRESIDENT: May I interrupt you one moment. At the risk of entering into a debate with you, I think I should point out to the House that you were not present at that meeting, as you yourself have said - you did not attend certain meetings. These are only minutes, they are not a full record of discussion. It seems to me, therefore, that if somebody rises on a point of explanation I shall be inclined to allow the opportunity to make the point of explanation. Otherwise I am afraid that this discussion is not a genuinely balanced discussion.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: I am very happy for the interruption, because I have so much to deal with in the Bill that I shall be ...

MR. PRESIDENT: I should tell you that any interruption I make comes off your four hours, do not worry.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: That is all right, Sir. The Bill before the House is a bad Bill. This is made clear because it is my understanding that when the Bill goes into effect, no penalties will be imposed for about six months. This shows that the Member is cognizant of the fact that the small businesses in Cayman cannot comply with this Law. Does he believe that they can comply with it six months from today, or six months from 1st January any better than they can comply with it now?

This Bill contains such strange wording, for example, the definition of "employee" is a person who, amongst other things, stands ready to enter into or work under a contract. For the life of me I cannot fathom precisely what they mean by "stands ready". The employer has the same definition; he also "stands ready". I do not know if they are getting ready to do battle with each other, or what, but I will just throw that out.

The matter of casual employees, definition has been given to them which, up until this time, was totally unknown. A casual employee had been, in my opinion, a person who worked at certain jobs, usually hired on a daily basis. Now a casual employee means a person who is employed upon an irregular or intermittent basis. So this definition has changed the meaning from the nature of the work done by the person to the regularity of his work. There are bound to be problems with that.

This Bill discriminates against certain groups of workers, and is biased in the favour of some. Under section 3 it says the Law shall not apply to the public service. Is there any wonder that we have what we have before us, when a Law which is to deal specifically with labour excludes the biggest group of labourers in the country? I am not ascribing any motives ...

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. President, on a Point of Explanation, Sir. The Member is inadvertently misleading the House in saying that the Public Service is excluded from the Law. He does not read the proviso which governs conditions of the civil service in that it says the Civil Service Regulations must at all times provide conditions which are better than the minimums that are provided in this Law.

MR. PRESIDENT: I think - this is a point of elucidation - if you had put it. Does the Member realise that he is not quoting the piece of the Bill in full and therefore misleading the House?" then you could put it as a point of explanation to which he may or may not reply. Sorry, but this is the way round it should be done. You may then, if you wish, elucidate or decline to. It is up to you. That is the method and the point of that particular Standing Order. I am sorry to interrupt you.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, the Member was so confused with his interruption, or his interference, that it is not necessary to reply. However, if he wants me to read section 3 I will read it:

"This Law shall not apply to:

- (a) the public service provided that the regulations and General Orders from time to time applying to the public service shall not prescribe or permit conditions of service which are less favourable to the employee than those required by this Law;"

So it says specifically that the Law shall not apply, and the Law does not apply. Because when this Law goes into effect, the Government will not have to do the many onerous things which a small businessman will have to do - that is clear.

MR. PRESIDENT: If I may ... one of the Honourable Members is trying to catch my eye. If I may try to explain procedurally, the Honourable Member who is speaking is entitled to state his interpretation at a later stage, a following Member may dispute that, but a point of explanation is not a point of dispute.

I am sorry, I seem to be holding the floor far too much. Maybe it is time to take the afternoon break. Suspended for fifteen minutes.

AT 3:10 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3:30 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT: Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, section 3 of the Bill says that, "the Law, when it comes into effect, shall not apply to charitable organisations or churches". I wonder if it means what it says, or if we will get one of those erudite explanations to say that it does not mean what it says? When it says the Law shall not apply to the public service, or the church, or charitable organisations, I think it means exactly what it says. That is the way laws are written.

The Member who butted in a while ago really missed the point I was making. I do not think this great concern is with the fringe benefits such as vacation leave and so on, which now exists in many businesses, probably in more generous terms than this Bill prescribes. What the business people are concerned with is the amount of administrative work that this Law will bring upon their businesses.

It is my contention that these sections of the Law will not be applied to the Government. When it says that the Law shall not apply to the public service, it simply means that. The proviso which follows in no way affects anything that already exists because the fringe benefits provided by Government are already much more generous, or in probably 90 per cent of cases, much more generous than anything existing in this Bill. So, when section 3 says the Law shall not apply, it means that it shall not apply.

The adding of this proviso does not change one thing. It does not compel the Government to comply with all the bureaucracy of the Law. Anybody who tries to argue away the words written in the Law will have undertaken a task that he will never complete. If it is intended that the Law apply to the public service, then section 3 will have to be amended to read the Law shall apply. So when it says it shall not apply, it means it shall not apply, although there is a proviso which states that the General Orders cannot be less favourable than the provisions of the Law.

The Law does discriminate. There is another reason why it would not have been good to have the Law applying to the public service and that is, that we might be faced with an angry civil service if this Law applied. The Law shall not apply, and it means shall not apply to the public service, despite the proviso, it shall not apply to charitable organisations, and it shall not apply to churches.

Moving on to section 4:

"The Governor may, by Order, exempt from the provisions of this Law, or any of them, any employee or employer in any occupation in respect of which it appears to him that the nature of that occupation makes such exemption necessary."

Here again this is discretionary. It can, in the future, discriminate and it can be used as a political tool. The Governor in Council should not have the power to exempt certain businesses from this Law. If there are to be exemptions, they should be contained in the Law. As I mentioned earlier, there are exemptions for the public service, for charitable organisations and for churches. If the Committee felt that other businesses should have been exempted, they should have been spelt out in the Law.

But what is more alarming than the exemptions created by section 4(1) is the provision of section 4(2), which gives the Governor, or the Executive Council, the power to vary the Law. Section 4(2) reads:

"In any case to which subsection (1) applies the Governor may prescribe different conditions as regards the conditions of service of any category of employees employed therein or vary any rights and obligations laid down in this Law in relation to them."

Have you ever heard of such nonsense? Giving Executive Council the power to vary the Law. If there is a need for a variation in the Law, a Bill should be brought to the House to vary the Law. This is totally wrong and puts too much discretion in the hands of Executive Council.

Section 5 says:

"Nothing in this Law shall be construed as prohibiting an employer from establishing conditions of service more advantageous to any employee than those minimum employment standards established by this Law."

That is a provision I can find no fault with but it will not work in practice. It is only a hope a dream of the Committee. Once we start to regulate labour and the labourer is accepting or is exacting his pound of flesh, you will get retaliation from the employer also toeing the line. You will find that employers who had been more generous in the past will now seek to be less generous and simply comply with the Law. Regardless of how generous the employer may have been in a specific area of fringe benefits, he is now compelled by law to meet the statutory requirements set out for the other areas. I think we are going to regret this Law, and the worker will be much worse off.

Section 5 says that the worker can receive more benefits from the employer but it does not give any protection at all to the employer. This is very important. If a person is expected to pay good wages, if he is expected (and I believe every man is worthy of his hire) to provide certain benefits in order to do this, he must receive an honest days work from the employee. So section 5, while it makes provision for the employee to receive more than the minimum standards established by the Law, does not provide a reciprocal right to the employer.

Section 7 reads:

"Every employer who enters into a contract of employment with an employee other than a casual employee or a person employed as a household domestic shall, within ten working days of entering into such contract, furnish the employee with a written statement of his conditions of employment in accordance with subsection (2)."

This section will put an unnecessary burden on those small businesses, those small people who have little businesses. I do not see the necessity for it. These businesses shall, within ten days of employing a person, furnish that employee with a written statement. The written statement is so detailed that it will cause hardship to the employer, especially in cases where there is a high turnover of workers.

There are businesses where the employees do not stay long on the jobs and for those businesses that do not already have a personnel officer to deal with these matters, they will now have to employ one. In fact, it appears to me that anyone who runs a business, if they employ any amount of workers to speak of, will need help to take care of all this additional book work. They will need computers to keep track of all the record keeping which follows in other sections. So the cost of doing business will rise considerably if this Law goes into effect.

Though we may delay the penalties under the Law for six months, it will not lessen the load of the work. This section requires that within ten working days of entering into a contract of employment the employer must give the worker a written statement which shows the job title, it must have in it a brief statement of the general responsibilities and duties of the employee, and of any special requirements or conditions the job.

For employers who have never had this burden before, this can be an onerous job. We have many small business that employ ten, fifteen people that are a one man operation. Some of the construction companies are like this, where they employ ten, twelve, fifteen people, depending on the job. It is going to be very difficult because they must have this statement which must also set out the regular hours of work, together with any particular terms or conditions relating to the hours of work.

MR. PRESIDENT:

May I interrupt the Honourable Member for a moment. You are making your point perfectly clearly on a matter of principle, and of the merit. The principle is that you maintain that this particular requirement will be onerous on the employer, you have made that perfectly clear. But I think that when you start going into each particular bit of it you are looking forward to what you should be raising at the Committee stage. I am inviting you, in other words, to put your force into the general principles and merits of the Bill.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, I am endeavouring to do that. The only trouble is that the Honourable Member who introduced the Bill seemed to have gone into all these minute details, particularly in the sections where he thought the Bill was good.

However, this section requires, in addition to the two items mentioned by me, eight other specific matters which I will not enumerate, but which I can assure the employer are even more onerous to set out in writing and more difficult to describe than the two mentioned above. I am wondering, Sir, if I cannot go into these details, how will the public know what they are up against? But that is all right, they will find out soon enough.

If these requirements, which are set out in section 7 only applied, or if these were the only descriptions that had to be supplied, the small businessman might survive. Not only is he asked to supply this information within ten days to all new people who come to work for him but he is compelled by Law to supply this information to all those who presently work with him. That information shall be given within thirty days. That means that if the person has on his payroll 500 people or 300 people, he has to write this statement out within thirty days.

Of course, again, they have added a proviso which is pure nonsense. It says he will not have to do it, if he has previously given to an employee a copy of his contract of service which sets out the particulars referred to in subsection (2). That is a physical impossibility. There can be no existing contract which complies in every respect with what is required under this Bill which is now coming into force. So it means that if the existing contracts in the Banks or the Trust Companies or any other kind of company, differs in any detail from the requirements of this Law, the employer is bound to submit a new statement which sets out the requirements of this Law. As the statement sets out ten specific requirements, it follows that if a business had already given a contract to a worker which covered nine of these requirements and did not cover the tenth one, the business would still have to write out the statement. Even if the statement of employment, that is the contract which is in existence, covered 15 or 20 different matters but left out one of these, it would still be necessary to supply a new statement in order to comply with the Law.

It says that every employer shall, within thirty days after the effective date of the Law, furnish each employee with a written statement which shall set forth like particulars to those required under subsection (2). But, the proviso says that if the employer has previously given to an employee a copy of his contract of service which sets out the particulars referred to in subsection (2), the provisions will not apply. I am saying it is physically impossible for these contracts in existence to cover every point that the Committee thought about when they were setting up this Law which, in my opinion, punishes the employer. No contract can agree in every detail with section 7(2). And so the end result will be that 90 per cent or more of all the established workers who now hold written contracts will have to be issued with new statements embodying the requirements of this Law.

For businesses like supermarkets, where we find the clerks tend to have a high turnover, there is going to be a constant repetition of issuing these statements, and it is going to put an additional burden on the employer. I can see no benefit accruing to the worker because the time and money that will be spent to produce these statements could have been used to increase the pay to the worker, to provide some other benefit or to enlarge the business which, in the end, would be more profitable to both employer and employee.

As if it were not enough to compel the businessman to supply all these minute details, if there is any change, the employer will have to furnish forthwith - not within thirty days but forthwith on that particular hour - the employee with an amended statement which embodies the change. So, it comes to this: that if, say in a supermarket or an employer had received a statement that described the general responsibilities and duties of the employee, and it was found that this person would adapt better to some other job, there would have to be an amendment in order to comply with the Law. For example, if the person had been hired to stack the shelves and it was found necessary to ask that person to run the cash register or to price the goods, it would be necessary, if there was any change in the responsibilities and duties of the employee according to this Law, to issue this new amended statement.

Now when they say "forthwith" they mean that word in the literal sense. They mean instantly, they mean right away because subsection (5) of section 7 goes on to say:

"An employer who fails to furnish a statement pursuant to the preceding provisions of this section within seven days of being requested in writing by the employee to whom it relates to do so is guilty of an offence."

We can therefore see how ridiculous it is. When the new person comes to work from now on, the employer, regardless of his duties or whatever the pressures of his business are, somebody has to give a statement in ten days. For those who are already in employment, if they have no written contract or no contract at all, although they may have worked for twenty years, they are now to get this statement in thirty days. If the worker calls for it he must have it forthwith, and if he does not have it forthwith, he must have it within seven days, or the employer is guilty of an offence.

Now, I tried to find out how much punishment they were putting on the employer with this tight time-frame that they have put him into. I found out that for old workers, where the description of the job would be easiest, because you know what the person can do, you know what the requirements of the job are, the employer is given thirty days. For new people coming in, the employer is given, not ten days, but ten working days. If we look at the definition of "working days" in the Law - I do not know if "working days" is defined - it does not seem to be - but working days, somewhere in the Law, I believe, would exclude Saturday and Sunday and public holidays. So ten working days, in certain instances, could be as much as a total of nineteen days, because of time off for public holidays, Sundays and so on, if it happened to fall around Easter or maybe Christmas. But when the worker requests this information it must be handed to him in seven days - not working days - this is section 7(5).

"An employer who fails to furnish a statement pursuant to the preceding provisions of this section within seven days of being requested in writing by the employee to whom it relates to do so is guilty of an offence."

Now what will happen if this Law applies, as one Member seems to think, to the Government, if every worker demands this statement in seven days, or if big employers like Cable & Wireless find their workers demanding to have it forthwith, if they cannot supply it, they will be guilty of an offence under the Law. So unless the aim of the Law is to punish the businessman, these time-frames are too small. To make believe that the existing businesses will not be caught up in this is not, to use the word used by the Member, reasonable, but unreasonable. For example, a worker as a commissioned agent would probably, even if he has a written contract, not be in any manner remotely close or similar to this.

The whole truth of the matter is that this Bill needs to go back to the drawing board. We need to get a model which is more suitable for us because it is impossible for the businesses to comply.

The objections raised by the business people, because they are the ones that will pay, and eventually the consumer will pay, are objections against the difficult provisions, the unreasonable provisions, which they are asked to keep.

Now I am wondering how many store rooms these people are going to need to keep all the files that have to be kept in order to store all of this information. I am wondering if each small business is going to be required to get a computer to store this information, because as we go along we will see that certain other records have to be kept for two years, even after the person is dead and gone. Two years after he has left the job.

Under section 10:

"Subject to sections 9, 45, 46 and 47 an employer must give advance notice in writing to the affected employee of an intention to terminate that person's employment ...".

This is where the termination date is not fixed in the contract. I am wondering how many of these business people are going to have to employ lawyers to interpret this Law and to tell them precisely what they have to do because any time they do anything that is contrary to the Law, they are subject to the penalties under it.

It is my belief that the public is really not up in arms about this Law, because they have no idea of its requirements.

It seems to me that under this Law, once you employ a person you will be bound by that person for a long time to come. Even when the person's contract has terminated, the employer has to fulfil certain obligations of the Law, such as in 12(2):

"In all cases of termination of a contract of employment the employer shall, upon a request made by the employee concerned at any time within one year of the expiry of the period specified in the notice, furnish within fourteen days of such request a certificate specifying the dates of his engagement and termination and the type of work on which he was employed."

Which means that the person's record, even after he is gone from the job, never to be hired again, must be maintained in the filing cabinet or on the computer in the hope that the employee will come back one day and request a written statement for his termination or whatever the case may be.

The point I am making is that this Bill has gone to great lengths to require a lot of record keeping. It will be impossible to keep these records without a specific person to do so, if it is a business where the turnover is high. But it is not enough for the employer to have to keep these records long after the person has gone. It is not enough that he will have to supply this certificate. But the serious part is that, in section 12(3):

"An employer who furnishes a statement or certificate pursuant to subsection (1) or (2) respectively shall be conclusively bound by the contents thereof in any proceeding under this Law concerning the fairness of the dismissal or the employer's liability for severance pay."

This section usurps the authority of the Courts. It takes away the discretion of the Courts. Whatever is put in that statement conclusively binds the employer, which means that at a later date, if the matter ended up before a Court of Law, the employer would have no defence and could give no explanation acceptable to the Courts of any matter contained in the certificate. It has always been my understanding that a person who goes to Court has the right to give evidence, has a right to have a lawyer to present his case, and has a right to make explanations to the Court. But here, there is no provision for the employer to make an explanation to influence the Court in any way. He would be conclusively bound by the contents in any proceeding under this Law.

These are very serious principles that are being eroded. One wonders how the worker can be helped by punishing the employer, and taking away his right to a reasonable explanation. Not only is he bound by this statement if the matter reaches the Court but he is also bound to give the statement because if he does not he would be guilty of an offence. If he does give the statement, section 12, subsection (4):

"An employer who fails to furnish either a statement or a certificate pursuant to subsection (1) or (2) respectively, shall be prohibited from introducing evidence as to any facts which might have been recited in the said statement or certificate in any proceedings under this Law concerning the fairness of the dismissal or the employer's liability for severance pay."

This has to be a serious section. When the employer, in his defence, is prohibited from introducing evidence as to any facts which might have been contained in the said statement - if he forgot to put in a fact that might help his case, this Law prohibits him from introducing this new evidence. Here again it usurps the authority of the Court, because I would think the Judge should decide at the trial whether he would allow the employer's evidence to be admissible. But no, it is precluded under this punishment law.

Business people are human beings. While there are some who are unkind to their employees, most of them want to do what is right. Here we have a Bill which, if it goes into Law, will certainly put a chasm between the worker and the employer. This Bill, if it goes into effect, which I know it will, is going to create labour problems the like of which we have never had before.

The amazing part of the Bill is that somehow or other the Members seem to have worked into it a few little provisions that can be good for the employee, and I find no fault with some of it. The matters which the Bill have taken care of that I consider good for the workers, already exist. Provisions for overtime pay and so on already exist.

I find fault with section 20, which gives the Governor in Council the right to prescribe a national minimum basic wage. That should be prescribed by the Legislative Assembly. That is the way it has always been. We have had a Minimum Wage Law, and if I remember correctly, that Law fixed certain minimum wages and perhaps it is time that that should have been revised - the wages could have been increased. What I find fault with is giving the power to Executive Council to set the national minimum basic wage. I think that should be fixed by law by the Legislative Assembly.

PRAYERS

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived: We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal Family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Members of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that they may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of their high office.

All this we ask for Thy great Name's sake, Amen.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread: And forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us: And lead us not into temptation; but deliver us from evil: For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us: the Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us: the Lord lift up His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

(Meeting held 7th December, 1987)

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, I beg to lay on the table of this Honourable House the report of the Select Committee on low cost housing.

I think the report speaks for itself, Mr. President, so I do not propose to say many words about it.

MR. PRESIDENT:

So ordered.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

MR. PRESIDENT:

Questions. Three questions are down for the First Elected Member for Bodden Town who is not here. Has he deputed any Member to ask the questions in his place?

In that case we go to Item 4, Government Business, and continue the Second Reading of the Labour Bill. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

SECOND READING

THE LABOUR BILL, 1987

(Continuation of debate thereon)

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, at the close of business yesterday I had been discussing the matter of a National Minimum Basic Wage. I had said that this minimum wage should not be fixed by Executive Council but should be fixed by Law, as had been done under the Minimum Wage Law which we will repeal with the passage of this Bill.

I am further alarmed that when an Order is made under this section, that it can only be made, varied, amended or revoked after consideration of recommendations made to the Member by a Minimum Wage Advisory Committee established under section 21. Although I do not like the idea of Executive Council fixing the minimum wage, I feel that if they are the ones to fix it, they should have a free hand. They will not have this, because under section 20(2):

"An Order under subsection (1) may only be made, varied, amended or revoked after consideration of recommendations made to the Member by a Minimum Wage Advisory Committee ...".

So Executive Council is not free to fix the minimum wage unless they receive recommendations from the Committee.

The Committee itself, under section 21, will be established by Executive Council. So we have a family affair going on where the Executive Council sets up the Committee, the Committee makes the decisions, the Committee makes a recommendation to Executive Council who then makes the Order. A system like this is open to political abuse, and it is disgusting to say the very least. These sections, 20 and 21, should be deleted from the Law and replaced with sections setting the minimum wage, and not leaving it in the fashion in which it is set out in this Bill.

Another alarming principle that is endangered by this Bill is the section 21(8), where:

"The Committee shall have power to take evidence from witnesses, to require the production of relevant documents, and to take evidence on oath."

My concern here is that our confidentiality Laws may be eroded by section 21(8). I know it is true that under our Standing Orders, and in keeping with the Constitution, Select Committees and Standing Committees of this House are allowed to require witnesses and are required to produce documents. That is the way, I think, it has always been.

We are extending this power not to a Select Committee of the Legislative Assembly, and not to a Standing Committee, but to a committee which is appointed by Executive Council. I think we are taking it too far. In my opinion this is ultra vires the Standing Orders and the intentions of the Constitution. No committee appointed by Executive Council should have the power in this sensitive area to call for the production of documents of this nature. Now, I know I will hear that the only documents they will need will be documents relating to wages and attendance at work, and all those matters but I want to ask the House, how can we separate these documents in small businesses from the rest of the business, when most of these small businesses will have their payroll and wages and all that in probably just one account?

We are opening up our confidentiality Laws to abuse. In large businesses with proper accounting systems they will undoubtedly have separate accounts for wages and perhaps these accounts can be given to the Committee without any risk of confidential matters in the business being revealed to the committee.

In small businesses which are typical of these Islands, I maintain that it will not be possible for the Committee to receive the relevant documents which they can require under this section without interfering with the confidentiality of the business.

As we go into this Bill, we find that section by section the Bill establishes certain principles which are foreign to us. Although my debate may seem to be dealing with minute details more suitable for committee work, it is a fact that nearly every section changes important principles and systems of business which had been the established norm. Such a section is section 22:

"Where a minimum basic wage has been fixed under section 20 it shall be an offence for an employer to employ or to pay any employee at a basic wage less than the minimum wage prescribed by the Order."

While I know certain regulations or sections of the existing Minimum Wage Law may have said the same thing, I want Members to realise that the Bill before the House takes this entire matter of labour far away from the Minimum Wage Law and into the whole area of industry. Under the Law the Executive Council can prescribe those minimum wages more or less for any business they feel like doing. It boils down to this that, when an employer commits an offence, if he pays less than the minimum wage for anything prescribed by the Order, that we have taken away the right to bargain. By this I mean that if a person got his own brother to paint his house or to fix his motor car, if those jobs had been prescribed by Council as minimum wage it would be a criminal offence for one brother to pay the other one less than the minimum wage, regardless of the good relationship between the brothers. Exemption is made for payment to juveniles, but does not seem to make any exemption for payment to relatives.

I am worried about the overall effect that this erosion of a free enterprise system, the right to bargain, will have. We are destroying and shaking certain principles which, so far, have been the reasons for the good life we enjoy here.

I started my debate by talking about this Bill being specifically put forward to punish the employer. I would ask Members to turn with me to section 22(3) and they may begin to understand what I am talking about. If an employer is convicted of an offence under subsection (1), it goes on to say: "... then, if notice of an intention so to do had been served upon him with the summons or warrant, evidence may be given before sentence of any failure on the part of the employer to pay wages at the minimum rate to the employee concerned during the two years immediately preceding the date on which the information was laid and, on proof or admission of the failure, the Court upon sentencing the employer may order him to pay to the employee in addition to any fine or other penalty such sum as in the opinion of the Court represents the difference between the amount which should have been paid during those years and that which was actually paid, plus interest at the rate of ten per cent per annum from the date any wage was due until it is paid."

Here we are actually punishing the employer, not only for the offence with which he is charged and the offence which is before the Court and the offence for which he is convicted but the Court can go back, if evidence is produced, and punish the employer for any acts done two years prior to the offence for which the person is in Court. This could never be the justice system that the Court convicts a person and then goes back to deal with other acts of the convicted person, committed up to two years prior to the conviction. It seems odd, unless the desire is really to punish the employer.

Then it appears to me that if the employer had committed an offence two years prior, that offence should be brought to the Court and the Court should deal with it. They should not wait until they get a conviction and simply say, now that they have a conviction they will deal with the person's other errors or indiscretions, whatever they may have been.

The Bill sets out certain standards for rest periods. But, as usual, does not stop there, because it goes on in section 24(2) that, "The Governor may by Order revise this standard for any industry or enterprise specified in the Order."

Here again we are passing the Law which sets out the rest periods and giving the Executive Council the power to change the Law, because that is what would actually happen. Members will recall that I raised the same point earlier on in the Bill where, under section 4(2), Executive Council is given the right to vary any rights and obligations laid down in the Law. It is most unusual for Executive Council to vary to the Law, to change the Law. What we have had mostly in the past is that Executive Council is allowed to make regulations under the Law but throughout this Bill it seems that the Executive Council can change and vary the Law and can vary the provisions and the standards set out in the Law.

I dealt earlier on with a section that I felt would be very onerous, section 7, which requires a tremendous amount of paperwork. I would also like to touch on section 31, which adds to that burden for the small business. Now section 31 only applies to employers with ten or more persons. But still a business with ten or more persons could be a small business.

Here we are setting out and making compulsory certain amounts of book work which may be difficult for the small business to comply with. I am thinking about a one man ownership where probably his wife, children and a few other people are on the payroll. You may find that there are many of them around, although I do not want to identify any specific business, where the employees number ten or more but still, it is a very small operation. It is an operation that probably has never been properly funded; they may never have had sufficient capital; they just started out with the earnings of the man who put it into the little business and who, through hard work and probably with the help of a few dedicated employees, brought the business up to where it now employs ten or more people. But this business may not have a good cash flow that would allow the person to put in a computer or to hire a separate individual as a bookkeeper or a personnel manager to deal with all of these requirements.

We know, it is no secret, that the local businessman, if he is having a cash flow problem, has difficulty getting funds from the banks here. We know it is very difficult. The hardship which this Law will put on this person will make it very difficult for these small employers with ten and fifteen workers to continue.

The work records have to be kept for two years and this is bound to put hardships on the small businesses. You go to some of these little businesses and they have a very small office, one little cubbyhole and there is not space in it for the filing cabinets that would be required to keep these records for two years after the person has left. This is no idle talk, we are putting a burden on the small business.

Some of these small businesses have no office at all. The person may sit down in his gas station or his little supermarket, his little construction shed or whatever it is, and do his book work. He does not have the facilities, he does not have a secretary to do his filing, he does not have the space to carry data files for people that left two years ago.

This is what we are doing with this Law, because we have taken a model that did not suit this country, and brought it here. I dealt with the reasons why we did that, but now I am dealing with the results and the work that will flow from this. It is not a matter now whether he keeps these records, he is compelled to keep them by section 31.

Under section 31(1), "Every employer who employs ten or more persons shall keep an accurate work account in respect of each employee, which shall record his time worked (by pay periods), his leave taken (by type), and the basic and other wages paid to him for each pay period." And under subsection (2), "In the case of an employee paid on a piece-work basis the work account shall show the work done instead of the time worked."

Under subsection (3), "An employer to whom subsection (1) applies shall preserve each work account with respect to each entry therein for at least two years."

Why should this burden be put on the business person particularly in businesses where the turnover is high? The person may have fifteen people on the payroll and may find that during a two year period a half or more of these workers may have been replaced in each year. This is common in certain businesses. Yet the person is required to keep these records in the hope that the employee will bring a suit against him sometime during the next two years.

Subsection (4), "Upon demand by any employee, an employer required to maintain a work account under subsection (1) in respect of that employee shall make it available to him for inspection." If the employer fails to do so, he is guilty of an offence.

If the Director of Labour or the employee wants to know, either for statistical purposes or for litigation or for any other reason, about the work accounts of the employer, why not collect this information on the day the person leaves, and do not subject the business to keep these date files in his locker for two years.

I am taking a lot of time with this because this is a principle which is introduced into this Bill, a principle we knew nothing about heretofore.

Under section 32 there is an additional requirement for the employer to provide a statement in writing showing how "the said payment was made up". It is not clear to me what they mean by that. Whether they mean if he must show that the person worked "X" amount of days at "X" amount of dollars, or whether he was paid in dollar bills which have the signature of the First Official Member, or the old ones that had the signature of the Fourth Elected Member of Council. It is not clear what is intended here. Under subsection (2) he must furnish a statement including showing the deductions.

Now, section 33 deals with gratuities. I mentioned in my opening that I think one of the reasons why the Member brought his motion which resulted in this Bill, was that he had received complaints about the gratuities. I too, over the years, received several complaints. Some workers feel that they are treated all right with regard to their gratuities, but there were some workers who said that they believed their employers were not treating them right, and they were not receiving the gratuities which they felt should have come to them. This is a matter which the present Government should have addressed. But instead of dealing with specific matters which they may have been able to cure, they have gone out in this Bill to do all things for all people. The end result has been that the looseness of this section dealing with gratuities will not cure the ills that exist.

Under section 33(1) the employer may register with Government a scheme dealing with the distribution of gratuities, and if the employer fails to do this the Governor may prescribe a formula to be used by all employers, or all employers of a certain class, for determining the distribution of gratuities among employees. Here again, I feel that the formula should have been set out in the Law, not left to Executive Council. Executive Council should not be left to prescribe the formula for employers of a certain class or for all employers. Then, what is even worse, where Executive Council fails to make the regulations, we find that the Director may, by agreement with that employer or class of employers, register a formula to be used by that employer or class of employers for determining the distribution of gratuities, among employees.

Another serious defect in this Bill is the section dealing with severance pay. This has been made retrospective and could well result in the bankruptcy of many small businesses, even big businesses. I will explain what I am talking about.

Severance pay is retrospective, which means that if he is leaving, he can claim his severance pay today or when the Law goes into effect for all the years that he has served. Even a big business like, and I hope he does not mind, but like the Kirkconnell Brothers' business at Kirkconnell Home Centre, if every employee of that Company decided to take his severance pay tomorrow, I am certain the Company would be bankrupt. They can claim it, and you may get this sometimes. This section makes it retrospective that every current employee, if he feels like leaving, can demand the severance pay. I will read the section in its entirety because I know we are going to hear that this Law does not mean what it says.

I was rudely interrupted yesterday, telling me that the Law applies to the civil service when the Law says it does not apply. I do not want anybody saying that this could not be retrospective.

"Every employee whose term of continuous employment with an employer and any predecessor-employer has in aggregate exceeded one year is entitled to receive upon termination of his employment by his employer for any reason, other than a dismissal which is within paragraphs (a), (b), or (c) of section 45, severance pay, being payment in money calculated in accordance with the provisions of this Part."

So it is quite clear that it is retrospective. Not only may the employer be called upon to pay severance pay for the workers which he has employed, but if they are workers which had been employed by a predecessor-employer, he is liable to pay that as well. In other words, if you buy out a business it would appear to me that you are liable for severance pay not only for the services which you have received, but also for the services rendered to your predecessor. So it follows that if this severance pay was demanded in bulk, the retrospective effect could bankrupt many small businesses and perhaps even big ones too.

These are serious implications for businesses, particularly small businesses, family operations or one man businesses. These are very serious implications. When I say one man businesses, I am not talking about one worker but one owner.

Subsection (2) is also very disturbing. "In the case of the bankruptcy or winding up of an employer any liability for severance pay shall be paid in priority to all other debts, and shall be paid in full unless the property available is insufficient to meet them."

In other words, no matter who the preferred creditors of the business were, they have now been replaced by this Bill and put further down the line.

Section 37(1) sets out that, "Severance pay shall consist of one week's wages, at the employee's latest basic wage, for each completed twelve month period of his employment with his employer and any predecessor-employer, subject to a maximum of 12 weeks' pay."

But still, with limiting the severance pay, the worker could be called upon to pay for work done for a predecessor up to a maximum of 12 weeks. If this had to be paid out of a small business to a large number of workers at one time, the result could be bankruptcy.

This section is retrospective, and does not apply to anybody who comes to work after the Bill goes into effect. In order to get 12 weeks' pay, the person would have worked for 12 years. So how can you tell me that the Bill is not retrospective? This is a serious defect in the Bill.

I still maintain that this Bill has an anti-employer bias. I perhaps expressed that sentiment in other terms before but it is so obvious that I think it needs to be said, even if I come near to repeating myself.

There is, here, a very complicated formula and I am stressing this because an injustice is being done to the employer in this Bill. There is no way that a small businessman can comply with this Bill. I have heard that they will be given six months' grace when no penalties will be imposed. But, even if they were given six years, they will never be able to comply with this Law. So, the principle I am dealing with is that we are forcing upon the business community an outrageous Bill which will harm not only the employer, but the employee. If the employer goes to jail because he is unable to comply with this Law, his employees will suffer.

If we look at section 38(2)(b) and read the formula there for severance pay where there is no recall, one will easily see what I called in the beginning an administrative nightmare. Let me read section 38(2)(a) and (b).

"If the termination be stated as temporary, no severance pay need be paid to the employee at the time of such temporary termination save in the following circumstance:

- (a) where the date of recall, if one is given at the time of termination, be six months or more in the future, severance pay shall be payable on the date of termination;
- (b) if no date of recall is given at the time of termination severance pay shall be payable six months from the termination if the employee shall not then have been recalled; in which case, interest at ten per cent per annum on the amount of severance pay due shall be payable for the interval between the original termination date and the date of actual payment."

MR. PRESIDENT:

If I may interrupt you, perhaps we should take our morning

AT 11:14 THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:38 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Bodden Town.

Proceedings are resumed. The Second Elected Member for

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:

Mr. President, in concluding the last lap of my debate, I would like to make it abundantly clear that I am not against any benefits provided for the worker.

My contention with this Bill is against the punishment meted out to the employer. We cannot help the worker by damaging the employer.

The Bill before us in many instances that I have mentioned and a few more which I will touch upon, contains provisions that it is not practicable to carry out. I have heard Members say, off the record, that to understand this Bill one should have been in the Committee's meetings. But I have bad news for them on this Bill, because whatever is written within the Law will be the Law. The Courts who will administer this Law or the Director of Labour two years from now would not have been a member of the Committee. Even if the present Director attended some of the meetings, there will be future Directors who will not have the benefit of any sweet talk that was made to the Members in Committee. What we will be dealing with will be the cold hard facts of the Law, the precise terminology, the precise words. If Members are dissatisfied with the provisions of any section, the time to correct it will be when we go to committee stage. We cannot say this was not what we meant. If Members feel that the Law should apply to the public service, the Members must change the wording of the Law so that it will read that it shall apply, rather than the present wording, which says it shall not apply, with a few exceptions.

As dismal as my debate may have been, the worst parts of this Bill are yet to come. It would appear that the Director has been given unusual, abnormal powers under this Law. In some instances, he will be the complainant, the prosecutor, the judge and the hangman, since he is charged with the enforcement of the Law. I will be dealing with that in greater detail as I come to the relevant sections.

The Director can order the payment by the employer of a sum of money by way of compensation for unfair dismissal. This seems to me that we have gone back into the distant past and made the Director the judge and ruler of every employer. I think this is far too much discretion to put in the hands of one person. A person over whom there is no control. His word will be the law of the land.

Although section 6 of the Law follows what I have been saying, I would like to skip over that and continue with section 7 which deals with the administration, the responsibilities and powers of the Director because I may not have time to deal in detail with all the remainder of the Bill. And, as I can see from the tone of the House I do not have a chance of getting an extension of my time.

A great concern of mine is the high cost of administration of this Law not only to the employer, but to the Government itself. There shall be established under section 65, a Labour Office comprising the Director of Trade and Labour (I think there is going to be an amendment to remove the word "Trade", but a rose by any name will smell the same) and such number of inspectors as may be necessary for the due administration of this Law. Government has decided that the Law will be enforced and they are gearing up by making provisions for the appointment of inspectors.

Under section 66, the Director is charged with securing the proper observance of the provisions of this Law. The Director has been made the enforcement officer for this Law. In other words, his position under section 66 is equivalent to that of the Commissioner of Police.

We heard the Second Official Member say here a few days ago that we should have independence in Government; that the police, the executive, the judicial systems, should all be separate. But this Law will make the Director not only the Commissioner of Police, but a judge in certain matters, because he will take decisions, he can impose fines, he can order that payments be made with regards to severance pay. When I say impose fines, I know the technical difference with the Court, and when I say impose fines, I mean he tells somebody to pay money which is equivalent to a fine and they have to pay it. He has the authority, under this Law, to order a person to pay monies. He has the position where he can compel the employer to pay out monies which is very similar in a Court of Law.

The Bill is not keeping the judicial and the executive apart. They are making this man, who under this Bill, becomes second only to God, because he can do certain things which the Governor of these Islands cannot do - I will be dealing with that - like closing down a business. I do not think that our Governor has the authority to shut down Caribbean Utilities, or any other business except if there was a riot or something. This man can walk in and shut down a business and I will be dealing with that.

We have made him the second highest person in the Island. We have God, then the Director, then the Governor because his powers supersede, in many respects, those of the Governor. Not only have we given those powers to the Director, who will normally be a senior civil servant, but we have given the same powers, or some of the powers, to the inspectors who will probably be new recruits in the service.

If the Honourable Second Official Member wants to reply I would ask him to refer to section 67(1) of the Bill which says, "The Director and any inspector shall for the performance of their functions under this Law have power:

- (a) to enter any workplace without previous notice at any time during the working hours of that particular workplace;"

When the original Bill was drafted I think this section was even wider. They were giving to the Director the powers to enter any place at any time. But because of certain objections, that section was modified. The Director can now enter any workplace without previous notice at any time during the working hours of that particular workplace. My concern with this section is that "workplace" is not only the simple definition given in the interpretation section of this Bill:

"'Workplace' means any premises in which any employee is employed to work and, without prejudice to the generality of the foregoing, includes any shop, office, licensed premises or factory."

But there is a section in the Bill which allows the Executive Council, I believe it is, to declare other places as workplaces which means that a person's private home could be declared as a workplace for the purposes of this Law, if it suited the whims and fancies of certain people.

Under section 67(1)(b), not only the Director, but any inspector is allowed:

- "(b) to carry out any examination, test, or inquiry which he may consider necessary to satisfy himself that the provisions of this Law are being observed;"

This section is so wide in its application that if it were not for a previous section which I mentioned, we would see confidentiality gone to the winds again. When it says "carry out any examination" that can well include the examination of the person's business accounts. This is the difficulty, Sir. Members probably discussed this in the Committee, but what they discussed in the Committee has nothing to do with what the Law says. They may have thought in the Committee that under this Law, you could not get into the accounts of the business other than wages or work records but the Bill says something altogether different but the Bill says that the Director and his inspectors can carry out any examination, which means their confidentiality is again threatened, regardless of what the Honourable Second Official Member may tell them, or any other person in the Committee may have thought. Under this section it is wide open to abuse.

The Director or his inspectors are allowed to question alone, or in the presence of witnesses, any employer or employee on matters concerning the application of this Law. This is one of those grey areas where we do not know what the Committee meant. When they say 'question alone' do they mean that the Director will decide that the person must be questioned alone without consultation with a lawyer or without any witnesses present? Is this what is meant by "question alone"?

Under subsection (d) the Director or his inspectors are allowed:

- "(d) to require the production of any records or documents required to be maintained by the provisions of this Law and to copy or make abstracts of any such records or documents."

I think this is going a bit far into the privacy and the confidentiality which we boast about. This is wide open and can be used as a fishing expedition, it can be used like a witch's hunt like the one now being conducted to get information other than the information for which the search is purported to be meant. And, the Director, after he has investigated the case, can institute criminal proceedings and may appear before the Summary Court to conduct the prosecution.

It is apparent that the Director can investigate a case like the police, he can institute criminal proceedings like the Attorney General, he can conduct the prosecution like the Crown Counsel, and we have seen, in other sections that he can demand that the employer pay out certain amounts of cash. So, at one time or another, during the administration of this Bill when it comes into Law, the Director will find himself in a role playing these important functions which the Second Official Member mentioned a few days ago should be kept separate and distinct.

These are the areas that concern me, where there has been a complete breakdown of all the systems which we have cherished. In certain hearings under section 68(4):

"The Governor may make regulations prescribing the procedure to be followed at any hearing to be held in accordance with subsection (2)..."

Another bad section, because these hearings will, in effect, be like a Court of Law because the employer is being tried, he may be convicted, and if so, will be punished. The Governor, that is, the Executive Council, is going to prescribe the procedure to be followed. In other words, this is just the same as making the Court's rules, which has never been done in the past by the Executive. The Court's rules have been made by a Rules Committee of the Court, with, probably, the Chief Justice as the Chairman.

Here, in this sensitive matter, we have the Executive Council given the power to make the rules for these hearings which will actually take the place of a Court hearing. Where is the independence with the Honourable Second Official Member spoke about a few days ago?

When there is a hearing under this section, we are told, in 68(7):

"The decision of the Director upon a complaint shall, subject to section 71, be final and binding between the parties."

So what does that mean? It means that this man has been given autocratic power; the powers of a dictator that cannot be questioned, because the matter is final and binding between the parties. Except for section 71, where an award exceeds $500 or there is the service of a remedial notice he may appeal to the Appeals Tribunal, provided an award of less than $500 is involved.

I know about the section that goes on to say that he can appeal on a point of law, I have not missed that. What I am saying is that normally this Law shuts out the normal appeals. The appeal can only be had if you are able to hire a very clever lawyer and if you have a lot of money to pay for it because it will cost money.

I am wondering if this House is really going ahead with this Bill today and if they are going to allow the inherent rights and privileges, the rights of appeal which had been enjoyed to be taken away, subject only to the few exceptions mentioned in section 71 and the other little section that allows the appeal on a point of law.

This Bill could have terrible implications. It could set a policy which, if followed, could completely destroy the justice system which we boast about. I would like to deal with that figure that has been put in - $500 - because it appears to me that if the employer is requested to pay $500 he must pay. There appears to be no appeal. If the worker is not satisfied with $500 he can appeal. The one-sidedness of this Law is what is bugging me.

Regardless of what Members were told in the Committee, they have produced a one-sided Bill, and naturally whatever is in this Bill, if passed, will be the law of the land. Because that part of the Bill - and I am not repeating myself, but just for clarity - is so important that I would like to read, with your permission, Sir. It is the entire section 71.

using up.

I am sure that is all right, but it is your four hours that you are

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN:
the justice system. Section 71:

Yes, Sir, but I think this is one of the most serious erosions of

71. "(1) Any person aggrieved by:

- (a) any decision of the Director upon a complaint where the award exceeds five hundred dollars; or
- (b) the service of a remedial notice;

may, within fourteen days of notification of the decision or service of the notice, appeal to the Appeals Tribunal provided that an employee may appeal an award of less than five hundred dollars where he claims that the award should have exceeded five hundred dollars.

- (2) An appeal under subsection (1) shall be brought by giving notice in writing to the chairman of the Appeals Tribunal.
- (3) The giving of a notice of appeal pursuant to subsection (2) shall operate as a stay upon any award made by the Director.
- (4) The notice of appeal under subsection (2) shall also be served upon the Director, and in the case of an appeal from a decision of the Director upon a complaint, upon all persons who were invited to appear before the Director under section 68(3).
- (5) Upon receipt of a notice the Chairman of the Tribunal shall fix a date for the hearing of the appeal, being not less than one month nor more than three months from the date of his receipt of the notice of appeal, and shall give notice of that date forthwith to the appellant and to all parties who were entitled to receive the notice of appeal pursuant to subsection (4).
- (6) All persons entitled to receive the notice of appeal pursuant to subsection (4) shall be entitled to appear at and be heard upon the hearing of the appeal, or upon any adjourned hearing.
- (7) The Governor may prescribe the procedure to be followed at the hearing of an appeal under this section, but in default of such prescription the procedure shall be at the discretion of the Chairman of the Tribunal.
- (8) Within twenty-eight days from the conclusion of the hearing of the appeal the Tribunal shall reach a decision upon the appeal and shall deliver a notification of that decision, together with written reasons therefor, to every party who appeared at the hearing of the appeal.
- (9) The decision of the Tribunal upon an appeal shall, subject to section 72, be final and binding upon all parties."

I have simply read that to show the limited nature of the appeals that will be allowed.

the Tribunal can only be made:

Section 72, the appeals from

- (1) "upon a point law" and (2) it makes it clear that there is to be nothing else, because subsection (2) says:

"Subject to subsection (1) no decision of the Director or the Appeal Tribunal shall be open to challenge or review in any Court of Law upon any grounds whatsoever."

So we are taking away the right of appeal.

I heard one Member saying, off the record, that this point of law can be extended to the causes of natural justice and other matters. I do not think we can extend the Law beyond what we put in it. The appeal will be on a point of law.

The frightening part of it is that in subsection (2), no decision of the Director or the Appeal Tribunal shall be open to challenge or review in any Court of Law upon any grounds whatsoever. I could understand this if these appeals were on administrative matters, for example, like the granting a work permit to somebody or not granting it but these are criminal matters, because this Law ...

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: On a point of order, the Member is misleading himself, he is misleading the House. This does not refer to criminal matters.

If the Member read the Law and had he been in the Committee meetings he would have had an opportunity to see that appeals in criminal matters are not touched or limited at all by these sections. These sections simply refer to decisions of the Director on a complaint. In other words, severance pay, unfair dismissal, and remedial notices. Those are not criminal matters.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, the Member is totally wrong. Because if the Director ordered the employer to pay monies under this Law, if he did not pay, he would be guilty of a criminal offence. So how can he argue like that? There are other people here.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: On a point of order. I regret the offence of not paying involves a prosecution before the Court and that can be appealed.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I think the Honourable Second Official Member is really dealing in semantics because I gave one example. But there are hundreds of other things that could have happened that would constitute criminal offences.

MR. PRESIDENT: Excuse me, I think we must stick to the Bill in question. There may well be other criminal offences under other Bills. That may well be true, but we are talking about this Bill.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Yes, Mr. President, I think the Member should keep quiet and if he wants to reply he can do so. He did a pretty good job in dealing with the First Elected Member for Bodden Town on a political scale.

MR. PRESIDENT: Would you be seated please. The Chair will rule whether or not a matter is in order or whether it is said in accordance with Standing Orders. It is not for any Member of this House to tell the Chair what is or is not correct in Standing Orders. Please let us observe that.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, it is my contention that this Bill seriously erodes British jurisprudence. So I could understand these severe limitations if we were not dealing with the property of the employer, if we were not interfering, as it were, in the running of an on-going business. If I had been one of the architects of this Bill I certainly would be as sensitive as the Second Official Member appears to be, because this Bill, in my opinion, is a disgrace to the business community and an insult to them.

I spoke in the beginning about a certain section of the Law that allowed Executive Council to vary the Law. Here again, at the close of the Bill, section 78(1) the Governor is given the authority under section (1)(b) to vary any time periods established or required by this Law.

As I said on the other section, Executive Council could be given the authority to make regulations under the Law, but should not be given the authority to vary the provisions of the Law. I am surprised that the Second Official Member allowed this to happen.

MR. PRESIDENT: I am sorry, I have to interrupt because I do not understand you. I thought this section says that the Governor, that is the Governor in Council, may make regulations etcetera, for (a) and (b). You are saying that that is what you would like, I think that is what this prescribes.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Mr. President, I read it that the Governor may make regulations for varying any time periods established or required by this Law.

MR. PRESIDENT: That is right, and Governor means the Governor in Council. It says that.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: Yes, yes I know that, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT: Well I thought that is what you were asking for.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: They are given, under 78(1)(b) the authority to vary any time periods established by this Law. I think that is wrong.

MR. PRESIDENT: I beg your pardon. You now say that it is wrong if the Governor in Council has the authority to make regulations for varying time periods because that is what this appears to provide.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: No, Sir, I am not saying that it is wrong for them to make regulations generally, I am saying it is wrong for them to make regulations that would vary any time periods established by the Law.

MR. PRESIDENT: Thank you. Forgive my interruption, I now understand.

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: What is even worse in this section is that, in 78(2), "Any regulations made under this Law may create offences, the maximum penalty for which shall not exceed that set by section 74." so that Executive Council is further given the power to create offences which were not set out in the Law. They can create new offences under the regulation process. That is contained in section 78(2) which says, "Any regulations made under this Law may create offences ...". I take this to mean may create new offences. I can understand what the Member meant when he said he wanted an animal with teeth that bites, or a Bill with teeth that bites.

I would like to deal with Part 6 of the Bill, as I have not touched this section yet.

In section 50(2), "The Governor may by regulations extend the application of the provisions of this Part to such installations or operations as may not be within the definition of "workplace", but to which it appears reasonable to extend it." Earlier I mentioned that "workplace" was defined in the interpretation section. My concern is that that definition can be extended by the Governor in Council and the application is too wide because there is nothing to prevent the Executive Council or the Governor in Council to declare the private dwelling home of a person as a workplace for the purposes of this Law.

Then we note the wide powers given to the Director and his inspectors that they can enter these places without any prior warning. I feel that if this is extended to a person's dwelling home, and an inspector, under the Labour Law, can enter without notice we have taken it a bit far but so has everything else in the Bill.

Section 51 requires more paperwork, because under 51(1):

"Every person who operates a workplace on the date on which this Law comes into force, shall, within one month thereafter, file with the Director a written notice stating the particulars prescribed in subsection (3), and every person who commences to operate a workplace subsequent to the date on which this Law comes into force shall, within one month of such commencement, file a similar notice."

This is not a simple notice to tell the Director where your place of business is located. It has to be detailed, giving the name of the operator of the workplace; the address and location of the workplace; a brief description of the work carried on in the workplace; whether machines are used, and, if so, their nature; the total number of persons employed in the workplace; and where persons are employed in shifts, the maximum number employed at any one time.

Here again, I must ask the question, how can we help the employee by requesting that his employer either become a full time administrator for the purposes of this Law or hire somebody to do it? It is physically impossible to comply with all the requirements here.

Under section 53(c) the employer is required to maintain a reasonable temperature therein appropriate to the type of work being performed. I do not know if this is intended to make air conditioning compulsory in all work places because I am at a loss when I read something in the Bill that I am told does not mean what it says; that I should have been at the Committee's meetings and then I would know what is in the Bill. But I can only read what I see in the Bill.

We see that under section 55 the operator of every workplace shall ensure, amongst other things, that such other facilities, such as canteens, mess rooms and rest rooms, as are reasonable under the circumstances, are provided and maintained. This has to be a nonsense section. Who is going to determine what is reasonable? Is it the Executive Committee, is it the Tribunal, is it the Labour Officer, would it be the inspectors, would it be the employee or would it be the employer? Who is to decide if there should be a canteen at the place of business? Who is to decide if the place will have mess rooms? Will it be an arbitrary decision or was there something decided upon in these Committee meetings which we hear about that is hidden from the Law?

I have exhausted the time allotted to me for this debate. I would like to close by saying that if this Bill goes into effect I feel sorry for both the employer and the employee. The benefits mentioned in the Bill for the employee are benefits which already exist in many of the businesses. The Bill will not benefit the employee, in that, he will be no better off than he was the day before the Bill went into effect. The Bill will certainly hurt the employer and a man's business cannot be hurt without hurting the people who work in that business.

I have heard that a certain contractor has estimated that this Bill will cost him about 27.5 per cent onto his cost of doing business now. From my research on it, I would say that he has made a very mild estimate. I believe the cost to the small man for doing business under this Law will increase by about 33.3 per cent. That increase in the cost of doing business will be passed on to the consumer and this increased cost will reduce future benefits which could accrue to the employee. So with the passage of this Bill which was adopted as a model, has been found to be totally unsuitable. We have before us nothing but an administrative nightmare.

Everybody had high hopes that this Bill would have done some good for the worker, but it appears to me that all it does is to work against the employer without any corresponding benefits to the employee.

That will be a convenient time to suspend proceedings I think.

AT 12:40 P.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 2:19 P.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:
Labour Bill. Would any Member wish to speak?

Proceedings are resumed. Continuation of the debate on the
The Elected Member for North Side.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:
Mr. President, I would like to congratulate the Mover of this Bill, the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council. He, like many of us, I am sure, is glad to see the light at the end of the tunnel. He and some of us spent many hours in deliberations of this Bill. He has faced the problems, as he explained in his introductory remarks, of having to try to solve or arbitrate labour problems in this country without any legislation on which to base his actions. His presentation was very comprehensive and detailed. I think the country was well served by his lengthy presentation, and I have been told by some members of the public that they were extremely grateful for his detailed submission because they now understand a lot more and have had a lot of their fears put to rest after his opening remarks on the Bill.

Now, unfortunately I cannot put the remarks made by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town in that category. I disagree wholeheartedly with his philosophy, his approach to the debate of the Bill and certainly with his claim that the Bill is offensive to the Members of Parliament and to the public at large. I did find his remarks very displeasing, irritating, annoying, unpleasant, impertinent, rude and at some times, abusive.

When I seconded the motion in March 1985, which was accepted by Government at that time, as they saw the need for the legislation and which has brought about the Bill from the Select Committee created by that Private Member's Motion in 1985, I said then, and I maintain that stance today. Good management which has good labour relations leaves no place for labour unions and labour legislation. But, unfortunately, we are not living in a perfect world.

I will document this afternoon, some clear instances of where management or employers, as they are referred to in the Bill under discussion, have failed miserably to provide basic necessities and conditions for their employees.

I would be happy if we did not have to put this Bill on our statute books but it is necessary because management or employers in this country have failed in the provision of these basic necessities. The time has come when Government must take action to protect and to ensure that employees have basic rights and this Bill does both. It protects the employee but it allows the employer to retain his authority in the business.

I have often admired the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town's ability to compress the most words into the smallest idea of any man I have ever known. You know, I believe he could now claim a place in the Guinness Book of Records, because by my calculations, and I might be off a little bit because of the pauses, but he has packed 475,200 words into the last four hours of debate in this country without, and I repeat, without an idea this time. In all of that debate he did not offer one single alternative to what is before this House today. It seemed like his greatest concern was that this Bill is based on the Antigua Labour Code. To illustrate his point, or to justify his claim he referred to the minutes of the Committee's second meeting. I would remind Honourable Members that he referred to the second meeting, because he was absent from the first meeting at which time the Committee decided the areas that the Bill or the legislation that was being proposed would address.

He read out a paragraph from the minutes and the last sentence in that paragraph which he read says three words: "the Committee concurred". That Member is recorded in those minutes as having been present at that meeting. There is no record of a 'No vote' by that Member for using the Antigua Labour Code as a guide. That Member has tried in the past to cleverly disguise the decisions as reported from committee meetings and purport to have done something other than support the Bill.

He drew an illustration at some point in his debate about the motion on salaries, and if we record from the Finance Committee's Report that was tabled here a few days ago, that Member, anytime he wanted a 'no vote' recorded, made certain it was recorded in the minutes that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town voted 'no'. If he was not supportive of the idea to use the Antigua Labour Code as a guideline, he could have recorded in those minutes of the second meeting held on Thursday 2nd May 1985 that he specifically objected to it. The report of that meeting says, the Committee, of which he is recorded as being present, concurred with the use of that Code. Of course, it was immediately after that meeting that we heard all the rumbles on the street that we were adopting the Labour Code, I am not suggesting that any particular Member took it out, but it leaves one to wonder how it got out there. The Chamber of Commerce got hold of copies and accused Government of bringing in this law, that law and the other law. But it is time that the people of this country understand what goes on in these Select Committee meetings. Any Member present at a Committee meeting who votes no on an issue can have that vote so recorded.

What really got me upset was when the Member proceeded to impute, deduct, extract, draw conclusions, to bleed, to draw forth from the minutes of meetings that he had not attended, what went on in that Committee meeting. He went on in great detail that we had not accepted the Chamber of Commerce's comments and those of the Labour Advisor's. He was not present at those meetings, therefore he has no basis on which to make such deductions. The minutes of a Select Committee only records the decisions taken in that Select Committee. These minutes are not verbatim reports of what went on in those Committee meetings.

He wandered into other areas, about the tail wagging the dog, and dealing with motions of which I was either the mover or the seconder. During this same period of time I think he dealt with the Economic Development Plan, the Social Security Plan, and the Salary Review. I would remind the public again that the vote on the present salary review by legislators for themselves was a unanimous vote. It was a unanimous vote, nobody dissented. In fact, during the deliberations, nobody objected. I think it is time that a stop is put to this practice, because myself and that Member have clashed before on Committee Reports concerning the rule about the time limit on speeches. I have had to read all of the minutes of that meeting to set the record straight in the past, because that was his motion.

Having listened for four hours to his debate, I am glad that the Member stayed away from the Committee meetings because we would have still been in there.

I interrupted the Member yesterday on a point of explanation and drew to the House's attention that the clause that he was saying excluded the civil service that he was not reading the full clause. The Member read it once after that but after that he continued to stop at the introduction: "This Law shall not apply to the public service ...", and did not go on. But I would just like to emphasize - and let it be known - that I support this Bill. I make no apologies to anyone for what is in this Bill. I have worked hard, I have listened to complaints, I have listened to suggestions. We have tried, and I believe that we have produced a balanced piece of legislation. That is my opinion and I support that.

I am not worried about what the Law is going to say, I know what the Law says and I intend for the Law to say what it says. The Law says the Law shall not apply to:

"the public service provided that the regulations and General Orders from time to time applying to the public service shall not prescribe or permit conditions of service which are less favourable to the employee than those required by this Law."

I am no lawyer and I would not like to be one with the reputation that lawyers have, but it is my interpretation that that proviso makes the public service subject to the conditions of this Law. The Government must provide, through the Public Service Law, through the Public Service Commission Regulations and through the Government Public Service General Orders, conditions of employment which are above and beyond the provisions of this Law. It is my submission that that can in no way be interpreted to exclude the public service. I would further submit that to do so is an attempt to mislead the people. While I respect other people's opinions, they must be purported as opinions because what I just gave is my opinion. It might not be a fact but it is my opinion. It might not be right but it is still my opinion. When people purport their opinions to be statements of fact that can be questioned by no one.

The Member went to great lengths to say that representation, had been ignored. It may be that the Member did not get far enough into the report, to see, or he did not read the Compass. But in the report there is a comprehensive list of things that were changed in this Bill as a direct result of representations made to the Committee. No-one, I can emphatically state and this is not an opinion this is a fact, that no-one was ignored who made representation to that Committee. Of course, the minutes that the Member referred to says in some instances, that the Committee had dealt with the point, but that was simply because some other person had duplicated that particular representation, the Committee had deliberated that particular point and came to a conclusion, based on representations made. The representation that was then being considered was not substantially different from what had been received from someone else or some other organisation. So, there is no point in rehashing. That is what happens when you try to draw forth these conclusions in reading minutes of decisions taken rather than performing the function for which one is elected, and that is, to attend those meetings and have your input recorded in the minutes.

I can sympathize with the Member when he said the salary was exorbitant. The Member from Cayman Brac made an attempt to tie it to attendance, I have no problem with that. I can see where some Members may feel it was not justified, because they do not earn it, they do not come, they do not attend, if you do not attend, you cannot partake. You are elected to come here and partake in the discussions of these Committees and to contribute in however small a fashion to the debate and to the decisions. We are always given the excuse that the minority cannot get anything done. They were not in a minority in that Committee, you know, they had three Members, if they had come to the Committee. The two people in minority up in there were the two people who brought the motion. But we went there and we fought for what we believed. If we did not win, and we felt strongly enough about the point, we recorded our 'no votes'.

In one instance, the Mover of the motion sought leave to file a Minority Report but in the end the Committee saw his way, his particular point was absorbed in the Bill that is before us and it was not necessary to file a Minority Report. We have to stop coming to this Assembly and giving excuses about being a minority and having the minority rights diminished when we are not exercising the rights that are provided for the minority in this Assembly. If we have exercised those provisions and it is in some way deprecated, then we can make that claim. But unless we come here, partake of the decision, file a Minority Report if we disagree, or at least record a negative vote on a clause, we have no grounds on which to complain.

As I said, in four hours, not one constructive alternative to what we have before us was offered. But that has been the problem for a long time. Labour legislation has been talked about and shuffled about on political platforms in this country to get elected for a long, long time. In eight glory years of the Unity Team, with two Attorney Generals, one appointed and their private one who was elected along with him because he has all the legal brains in Cayman, they could not put together labour legislation and bring it to this Assembly. And then they come here today preaching dissent, stirring up the people saying the Law is against the employer and provides no benefits for the employees. Those two people are in one boat, the employers and employees. It behooves me how we can take from the employer and not give it to the employee. Who are we going to give it to? The fact of the matter, in my opinion, as I see it, this Bill that is before us is a balanced piece of legislation. It provides the necessities and protections for the employee. It provides for the rights and authority of the employer. That is how I see it and that is how I feel it should be. I make no apologies to anyone for that stance. That is my opinion, that is my position.

The history of labour legislation is somewhat interesting in this country. When we moved the motion in 1985, it was bandied about by certain Members on the floor of this Assembly that they supported labour legislation but they were not supporting the motion because the legislation was already drafted, and was left in a drawer up in the Administration Building. Are you telling me that they did not have the fortitude, the guts as this Government has had, to bring it and have it discussed publicly?

The employer or the employee for that matter, in this country today, who has not had an input into this present Bill that is before us - it is nobody's fault but his own. He was given adequate opportunity to make representations either to his Elected Member, to make representation in writing to the Committee, to make representations through his organisation, like the Chamber of Commerce the shadow government, but you see, the sun is overhead here a lot now and that shadow is kind of small.

With the indulgence of the House and with your permission, I would just like to refer to a report by Norman E. Simple, I.L.O. Regional Advisor to the Cayman Islands Government on 23rd - 27th May, 1983, page 3:

"On the initiative of the Honourable Member for Tourism, Aviation and Trade, a Bill was drafted in 1978 for 'a Law to revise and amend, restate and consolidate the Law relating to Masters and Servants and other matters incidental thereto, and to make some provision for the mitigation of unemployment'. The Bill was divided into seven parts as follows:

Introductory: Part 1; Part 2 - the Employment Commissioner; Part 3 - Mandatory Conditions; ..."

Notice the terminology, Sir - "mandatory conditions".

"... Part 4 - Terms deemed to be incorporated; Part 5, Unemployment Insurance; Part 6 - Accident Compensation; Part 7 - General.

This Law, upon enactment, was intended to repeal the Masters and Servants Law, the Minimum Wage Law, the Truck Law, the Seamen's Wages (Recovery of) Law and the Workmen's Compensation Law. However, the Bill was never brought before the House and, if my recommendations ..."

That is the recommendations of the Advisor, Mr. Simple,

".. are accepted, it is hardly likely to come before the House in its present form. From my discussions with the various interest groups, it is clear that the Bill does not offer a sufficiently wide coverage for the areas of protection which the workers need. Besides touching on the very sensitive area of unemployment insurance, which most employers fear and would wish to have no part of, the general view however, is that certain clear legal guidelines are needed to enable both workers and employers to become aware of their rights and obligations in their respective spheres of activity, and to reduce, if not to eliminate, the arbitrariness which characterises a job market in which too many jobs continue to chase after too few people."

So, as far back as 1978, somebody saw the need for a Labour Law, and at that time thought it should include unemployment insurance. The last part of that paragraph those conditions continue to exist today, that is, "the arbitrariness which characterises a job market in which too many jobs continue to chase after too few people." That is the purpose of this Bill, to remove that arbitrariness. Some people get up and tell you it is going to cost so many people so much money. But I will get to that 27 per cent, because I can give my opinion on why I think it is 27 per cent too. One opinion was given, I am going to give my opinion too.

The Member also said that the most important reason why the Second Elected Member for West Bay moved the Motion that I seconded was the problem of gratuities. I signed as seconder of this Motion which brought this Bill about, and this is what the Motion said:

"WHEREAS there appears to be growing dissatisfaction on the part of the local labour force as to terms and conditions of employment, particularly those employed with the construction and tourist related industries;

BE IT RESOLVED that this Honourable House appoint a Committee of the whole House to study the foregoing matter and make recommendations for suitable labour legislation to be introduced in this Legislative Assembly at the earliest opportunity."

and I have not left out any sentences. That is what the motion said. The word "gratuities" is not there. Yet that Member, in his debate, admitted that he had received complaints, while he was in Government, about the problems of gratuity but he did nothing about it. Why? Could it be that the whole style and philosophy of the last four hours is based on petty jealousy? This Government has the fortitude to see a problem that needs correction, and to try to do something about it.

In my opinion, the only way to deal with gratuities in a fair and equitable way is the way we have treated it in this Bill. Government did not introduce gratuities in this country. There is no legislative basis at this time on which gratuities are collected.

It is my opinion that to go and legislate at this time would make the matter worse. I think, as the Bill suggests, if an employer is charging a gratuity and people are voluntarily paying it, it must go to the people that those who voluntarily paid it intended it to go, that is, the workers.

The problem with gratuity in this country is that for too long, too many people have used the monies collected in gratuities to pay their labour force and that must stop. The only way to address it, to put an end to the charges, whether they are right or whether they are wrong, that management, owners, or other people, are abusing the gratuity collected and using it for purposes for which it was not intended, is to put in this Law that if an organisation collects that gratuity, the formula for which it is paid must be registered with the Department of Labour. There is nothing dictatorial in that. The decision is made by the employer as to what form he is going to pay the gratuity. But he has to file it with the Labour Department, so that when an employee feels he has not obtained his rights under that formula, there is a basis on which to determine whether that is true or not.

Under the present ad hoc system, that is entirely impossible. Now the extra proviso has to be there because there are going to be some unscrupulous employers who would not voluntarily provide that formula and in that case, the Director or somebody else, must have the power to prescribe a formula for those people.

It is my opinion that that is a reasonable requirement of the Law. The Honourable Second Elected Member, in moving this Bill, said it is a reasonable Law and I concur with that.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town also went to town on the provisions of the Law for severance pay. In his opinion, it was going to bankrupt every organisation in this country.

If somebody works for an organisation, as in one instance that I know of, where a gentleman worked for a company for 35 years - and we are not talking about somebody who was tardy when coming to work, or somebody who sat down on the job, we are talking about somebody who for all intents and purposes ran a department of that company single-handedly for 35 years, coming to work every day. It is not likely he got very much vacation during that 35 years. At the end, when he was ready to retire, they gave him a Timex watch and told him that if he ever wanted a job in the future, they had one for him.

I have not found any bank in town that will cash that "we have a job for you in the future." This is a man who gave of his best to a company. These are the kind in some unfortunate set of circumstances because as I said in my opening remarks, with good management there would be no need for labour legislation. It is those isolated instances and those unconscious companies who do those kind of things that has forced us to put labour legislation on our books. The Member has a way of emphasizing the section that he disagrees with, and makes you believe that the employee would be entitled, under the Law, to one week's severance pay per year of employment. The way he presented it would make you believe that that employee who worked for 35 years would be entitled to 35 weeks' pay. That is not the case in the Law, Sir. In section 37(1), there is a maximum placed on severance pay, and I will quote the section, Sir, 37(1):

"Severance pay shall consist of one week's wages, at the employee's latest basic wage, for each completed twelve month period of his employment with his employer and any predecessor-employer, subject to a maximum of 12 weeks' pay."

It is my submission that any person who has laboured in a company to increase the value of the company so that the owner of the company can get more when he sells it, should have the ability under the Law to preserve his severance pay. He helped to build the company and there must be provision in the Law where the owner cannot sell that loyalty, etcetera, down the drain. I support that.

He went into all kinds of detail about small business people having to build new store rooms and buying all of Hampstead's filing cabinets. Any business with fewer than ten employees are not required to keep most of the records in this country. Even those that are, if they are not keeping those records now, I would submit that they are not practising sound business practices. We should do everything to stop erosion of our confidentiality laws, or to stop people getting into business and doing the wrong things. We should encourage people to grow in business, but to grow in quality as well as in quantity.

The statement of working conditions as prescribed in this Law, again, is just basic good business and management practices. To submit to this Honourable House that if you hire somebody and tell him he has to stack shelves and you cannot make him operate the cash register, it is sad, because if that Member is telling me that if he was writing one of these job descriptions as a manager, he would tie himself down to that finite detail, then anybody, any manager who allows himself to be put in that position, should not be able to tell the person to work the cash register.

The Member in his, I think he called it his 'last lap' - tried to regroup any ground he might have lost with the "little man" as they call him, the working man in this country, by making a very condescending statement. It was obvious that his heart was not in it, it was not delivered with his usual vociferous gusto, he wanted to make it clear that he was not against benefits for workers but his contention was that we were punishing the employer. It is a reality that in many instances when you are going to give employees benefits, the only person to take them from is the employer. You cannot take them from another employee, you cannot take them from somebody down the street. It is the employer that has to provide them.

Now, I think the Member called the whole of Part 6, which deals with health, safety and welfare at work "nonsense". If we, as Elected Members, privileged to serve the people of this country are going to bring labour legislation which does not provide for health, safety and welfare at work, we are doing a disservice to the people we represent. To impute that the average working man in this country is not entitled by the sweat of his brow to good health and safety practices at work is a dereliction of duty on our part.

I fail to see how this Bill is going to hurt all of these people in business, and is going to hurt the employee too. It does require, as I said, some record keeping. It does require that certain basic rights and privileges be extended to employees, and that certain conditions for the health, safety and welfare of the individual at work is protected. That is exactly what makes this Bill a reasonable Bill, because it does those things. If it did not do those things, then, it would be hurting the employee. As champions of the working man and the little man in this country the one we hear so much about how this Government has been trying to put into oblivion, according to certain Members in this Assembly, how can we, with a clear conscience, purport to be protectors of the common working man in this country and yet say that a Bill that provides for his health and safety at work is nonsense?

The people of this country are fairly astute, and they know what is nonsense, what is reality, what is political rhetoric, what is political opportunity and what is hard work by Members of this Assembly in an attempt to put order in place of arbitrariness in the labour relations in this country.

We had an example, and I believe the Member said it was a contractor, I do not know whether he was in the construction business, the food business or the banking business, or what he was contracting. If the few necessary provisions for good employee/employer relationship that this Law suggests should be in place is going to cost any businessman in this country 27 per cent more, he must be treating his employees in a very deplorable way.

Maybe that is one of the companies that workers have come to me and complained that they do not have covered drinking water, the container for the drinking water is left out there for birds to fly over, leaves to blow into, etcetera, etcetera, if they want water to drink they have to go to that. I can see somebody that is operating in those dark ages of slavery that we heard about here some hours ago, maybe that is one of those people. But if one of those people is operating a business and doing that kind of thing to the workers of this country, I make no apologies that it is going to cost him 27 per cent more. The Member was right when he said the employer must pass it on, because if he is treating his employees that way, you can believe he is also treating the people who are paying him badly somewhere along the line too. That has to stop.

The working man in this country must have some legal protection for rights for health and safety on the job. And they come here and tell us it is nonsense.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town emphasized that he had been interrupted and he was told the Law said one thing and he did not know what the Law should say because he had not been to the Committee meetings. I want to make it emphatically clear that I know what the Law says, I know how the decisions were arrived at to put in what is in the Law because I attended most of the meetings and I contributed. It is up to other Members' opinions whether it was worthy or not, but at least I opened my mouth. I support and I know what is in the Law. I am not telling you now that this is a perfect piece of legislation. but if consultation, deliberations, input from the people who are going to be affected by the Law, or an opportunity to have input can contribute or can produce a perfect piece of legislation, this is as near to perfect as you are going to get.

Now, I would add that I expect in the administration of this Law, in the maturing of this Law, some amendments may be necessary which may develop out of the process of arbitration. But it is essential to make a start and unless a start is made, that maturing process cannot occur. For a man to grow up he has to be born. This, Sir, is the birth of labour legislation in this country. I support it, and I am prepared to defend it politically in the byways, pathways and highways of this country, in spite of all of the dissent and the misinformation about this Law that has been propagated in this country over the past two years, and is continuing to be.

I had a senseless argument with a Unity Team supporter yesterday because he was referring to the first draft Bill, and quoting clauses from that. He could not read it, Sir, somebody had to read it and tell him what was in it. So I can understand why he has not read this last one. That is what is happening. People are being told of things that are nowhere near what is in the Law. They are abusing the loyalty of people who cannot read for themselves and interpret for themselves to propagate and divide the country against this Law.

I believe that during the next couple of hours of debate in this House, the people are going to hear the other side of the story. I am prepared to stand by the provisions of this Law. I believe, and I trust the Honourable Member, in his term of office that is left, to set up adequate administration to deal with it. I believe the labour force in this country is going to be infinitely better off. I believe the employers in this country are going to be infinitely better off and I make no apologies to those who this Law might upset, because they need to be upset.

I support a Bill for a Law to govern terms and conditions of employment; to provide for the health, safety and welfare of employees and related matters.

Thank you, Mr. President.

Thank you. Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Speak? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

I think we have all had time to settle. Does any Member wish to and conditions of employment; to provide for the health, safety and welfare of employees; and for related matters.

I would like first of all to offer my sincere congratulations, first to the Mover and Seconder of the Bill, to every Member of this Assembly who has worked so hard to bring this to fruition, but certainly, not forgetting the hard work and many hours which have gone into the drafting of this Bill, both by the former Attorney General and the present Attorney General and their staff. The Legal Draftsman has had a lot of work to do in the last few years, and the labour legislation was not least amongst them. I would like to offer my sincere congratulations to them for a job well done in putting this together.

Delay, they say, is dangerous. I believe that to delay the coming into effect of labour legislation in this country today, after having gone to the lengths we have to bring it to this House, would not be in the best interests of this country.

In 1984, when we campaigned for a seat in the Legislative Assembly, a part of our platform was that we would seek to introduce labour legislation, should we be elected to office. We are simply fulfilling a campaign promises, not simply to keep a promise, but as with every other item of our platform agenda, we found that this was an urgent matter which needed to be looked after straightaway. Thus when the motion was brought to this House seconded and accepted, it was with pleasure that I welcomed our seeking to have this legislation put in place.

I was somewhat surprised, and that is putting it mildly, that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town has seen fit to find so much fault with the Bill. Unfortunately I have not yet been able to read the Hansards to look over that portion which I missed in his debate. However, from what I was able to listen to, I was puzzled that this Member could stand in the House and not give any more credit nor credence to this labour legislation, as I shall refer to it, than what he was able to do.

There were many Committees meetings that had to be attended over the last three years. There was a lot of work that needed to have been done and of course, the Select Committees were called upon to be here to get the work done. Labour legislation happened to be one, I guess if not the most lengthy and greatest work load that we have had during the past three years. This came about, not necessarily because we intended to drag it out, but because the Committee felt that it should be aired as much as possible and that it should be given to every segment of our society who wished to look it over and scrutinize it.

They were invited to make their comments and suggestions. This was done not just on one occasion, but members of the different bodies and associations in this country were able to, on more than one occasion, meet with the Committee and express their views. The Committee listened. We looked carefully at every point that was made. There were some things that we felt, although somewhat critical, were only fair and in the best interests of the country. The changes we felt were necessary were made. The representatives from each of these bodies and associations were brought back to the House. Discussions once again ensued. They expressed their views and concerns once again. This was a repeated process in the drafting of this legislation. Every segment of our society, as far as I am concerned, is represented in this legislation here today.

So it cannot be said that what we have before us is simply a draft which the Elected Members of Government put together on their own as they saw fit and with the intention of ramming it down the throats of our people, regardless of who likes it or who does not. That impression must never be the one that is gained by the public regarding this labour legislation. It is a Bill in which input has been made by every segment of our society. This was intentional. I think it was a democratic process. This is one of the reasons why I feel that this legislation is workable, and, perhaps like the criticisms of the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty of just over a year go, a lot of what is being levied at the Government at this time is going to have to be swallowed by those who choose to do so.

Every Member of the Government made his or her input into this labour legislation. We sat, not for an hour or two, but for days on end to get this work done. Notice of every meeting was sent to every Member. What puzzles me at this point in time is the reason why the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and his colleague were not present they were not here to make their input into this Bill. I am not able to give the reasons for that, but certainly, having listened to the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town who has spoken, I have to ask myself whether this was intentional, whether this was to be an opportunity to use this particular piece of legislation as a political weapon against the Government, or what was the reasons behind their absence from 37 meetings of the Committee?

Every Member made an input, as I said earlier, into this legislation. Therefore, I have no doubt that both those Members, if they had lent their support in attending these meetings, perhaps could have helped in bringing it here sooner, in offering suggestions, or even in criticizing it. We would have been able to know it early enough to have done something about it at that time. But to come to the House now to criticize the legislation I think is unfair and I think it borders on being somewhat irresponsible in one's duty to this House, and in particular to one's duty to his constituents.

Although elected to represent every member of my constituency, I see myself more particularly being here especially to represent the women and the children. I happen over the years, to have had first hand knowledge of some of the problems which women in this country have faced. We have women in single parent homes who need to work, many of them do two jobs, and they work hard. The typical Caymanian woman works hard. That is something which she is used to. For years she has had to be both mother and father in the home. So hard work is not something that is foreign to the typical Caymanian woman. However, the labourer is worthy of his hire.

This Bill, perhaps more than for any other reason that I can think of, has come about because of the standards of working conditions and other areas of discontent which the Caymanian woman has had to undergo in her place of employment in this country.

As all of us are aware, the tourist industry is one of the main pillars of our economy and it is within this particular industry that we have had more complaints and more disgruntled workers than in any other area of the working population in our country.

Members, I am sure, are aware that in the condominium and hotel complexes, particularly on the Seven Mile Beach, and now they are just about all over the Island, in every district in one form or another, the Caymanian woman is working and one of the incentives and one of the benefits to which the Caymanian woman looks forward at the end of the work week or the month is that she shares favourably in gratuities which are collected.

For years and years we have had some unfair treatment in this area. There were a number who dealt fairly and squarely and above board with their workers but there were others who did not. We had a situation where managers, for example, of a restaurant, deducted ten per cent of gratuities collected to pay for dishes or any kitchen items which might have been destroyed by members of staff.

If a member of staff breaks an item, a dish, quite by accident and unintentionally, this is a part of one's job. It does not happen every minute of every day. Is it fair for the individual, unless that person proves to be careless, to have ten per cent of gratuities deducted? But even if the system used was to deduct the gratuity from one particular employee who, perhaps, might have been careless in the way she washed the dishes or handled items in the kitchen, is it fair to deduct ten per cent off the top of the total gratuities collected, when perhaps that month you may have lost one tumbler and one plate? That is very unfair.

We had a situation for years when I heard of hotel managers sharing in the gratuities collected, not just sharing but fifty per cent off the top, and the rest was shared among staff.

We also had a situation where sometimes it was over two months before the gratuities collected for a given month had been distributed. We had situations where gratuities were collected and used to pay salaries. These are cases which have been brought to our attention time and time again, but Government was not equipped with any legislation to correct the problem. Members of the Government at times would speak with management, or bring the complaint to their attention but there was nothing on our law books by which we could get our teeth into this problem and try to get it solved. This labour legislation is intended to correct such a problem.

In the hotel and condominium industry many of the Caymanian woman today have brought these complaints to me and to other Members of this Assembly. Some of them will tell you that after they have shopped in the supermarkets for the week's food, they have practically nothing left, sometimes nothing.

As I mentioned to you earlier, I have some first hand knowledge of what happens in these condominium complexes and hotels. How on earth is it possible for any woman to clean fourteen or sixteen bathrooms and bedrooms in a first class facility in the run of a day unless either she is hurting herself, wearing herself thin physically, or the property is maintained in a less than favourable condition? One or the other has to be the case.

To get down on your knees and clean a bathroom takes time, sheets have to be changed and I am going into detail because I have an idea of what is happening, furniture has to be wiped and polished, floors either have to be vacuumed or mopped once or twice, and then shined and sliding glass doors have to be cleaned. If there is a patio, this also must be cleaned. The screens, whether or not there is a northwester, a southwester or whatever it is, those screens have to be maintained in immaculate condition, and it takes time.

Sometimes they will pay you so much an hour so you rush through fourteen or sixteen apartments because, as a mother, you are anxious to get home. So, the property suffers in that it is not maintained adequately. If you are paid by the apartment, then of course you want to ensure that you get as many apartments as possible because at the end of the week the pay check is much too small if this is not the manner in which you have calculated your pay and how much you can derive from working during the week.

I can tell you of a situation where a prestigious property on the beach, and there is more than one that this has happened to, every year for three years the rates on the hotel accommodations were raised substantially, but the rate of the maids' wages remained the same as the first year that the place was opened.

The first year that the raise in rates was in effect, the manager recommended that a raise in pay be given to the housekeeping staff, it was not done. The second year, with the second raise in rates, the recommendation was made again. The third time around the recommendation was made. The manager was told that in order to raise the wages of the staff, the manager should try to see if some effort could be made in cutting down the money paid for water and electricity during the month.

Needless to say, the manager insisted that rates on everything goes up and at that particular property, the staff are still being paid the same as they were paid three years ago. That is a property that stands amongst the best on Seven Mile Beach. The staff must enjoy the fruits of their labour and there is no way you can charge $300 and $400 a day for a condominium complex and find guests repeatedly returning unless staff are doing an excellent job. If they are, they ought to be paid for it.

This labour legislation, hopefully, is going to get its teeth into a number of situations that exist. Perhaps it will be left to the Director of Labour to work out some solutions in certain areas where it might not be stipulated particularly in this legislation.

A case in point - you have a situation where the Caymanian woman is employed at a certain property. There is a high season between December and April, and then there is a somewhat slackened period of the amount of visitors that are here on the Island, and, of course, this results in a lower occupancy rate. Most women are aware of this. But the situation here is, you keep a number of staff on for a month and those that are off have an opportunity of seeking work some place else for that month to keep food on their table and to keep their home going.

In certain of these properties, they insist that if they do not have work for you for a full day, for example, if they only need you for two hours, they pay you for two hours and you go back home. There is no way that you can go out and seek employment for that day.

I had a lady only recently telling me that some weeks she brings home $50 odd dollars. But, if she refuses to go in to work for the one, two or three hours that she is needed at the complex, she will lose her job. So when the busy season comes on, she will not have a job at that particular complex.

I consider this unfair and unreasonable. Any employee who leaves home and goes to a job, especially when that is a dependable employee who has given you the best of her service in the busy period of the year, should be paid for that day. It is unlikely that she is going to find work to do for the other portion of the day remaining.

The properties are not going to lose out because they pay maids not one penny more in the high season, but their rents are up about $100 a day more. Which means that the property does not lose. Whether those rates are $200 or $300, that maid is paid exactly the same rate, and it is unfair that when they are getting $100 a day more in the high season, when the low season comes the Caymanian woman goes home with $50. Fifty something dollars buys you one bag of groceries, and that is it.

This Law and the teeth which can be put into it through the Director of Labour must see that the Caymanian woman enjoys the fruits of her labour.

It is surprising the number of Caymanian women who have to work two jobs, and it is unfair, because many of them have children in the home. You cannot expect to improve on your social service problems if the mother is out in the day and at night as well. It cannot be.

The people who are running these complexes are people of no small means. The benefits must apply across the board to the Caymanian people. This Law is intended to correct a lot of these problems that exist at the present time.

As I mentioned to you, we have cases where certain condominiums do not even have a restroom facility for staff to use. I asked, "Well what do you do?" They say they are told that when they clean the apartments they must use those in the apartment they are cleaning. This is not good enough, they have to eat their lunch in the laundry facility where there is all sorts of soiled linen and towels and that is where they must sit to eat. This Law is intended to rectify mess and problems such as this.

As I mentioned, I represent the women in Cayman when I stand here and I do not take that particular responsibility lightly. Women who are getting on in age still have to go to work, because they have nothing coming to them. That is the reason, although I do not want to go into that - but I will be so happy to see that social security legislation brought to this House. One of the reasons is because they are not making sufficient to be able to put anything away. I am not talking about people who squander their money, or people who waste their money, I am talking about people who know how to save and who try to save. But by the time they have put away something which they may have collected in the high season through added gratuities, by the time the low season comes, that money is gone, and therefore they are able to save very little.

There is a lot in this labour legislation which I consider of great importance, but I can assure you that if the rights of the Caymanian woman in this country can be looked after, in particular within the tourist related industry, it has my full support. You have situations where not even a seat is provided for staff to sit. I have at times asked the reason for this, and the feeble excuse is, you put a seat there, they will be sitting all day. They could drop down too by having to stand up all day on their feet. What I am saying is that these are simple, basic requirements, and every single penny that some employers can stick in their pockets they will do so to the detriment of some of their most faithful employees.

I consider such practices unfair and unreasonable and for this reason I support this particular legislation.

There are other Members who are going to be speaking regarding this particular Bill and I am sure they are going to have a lot to add. They perhaps, will cover many other points which I have not touched, but I would like before closing my remarks to say that this Bill is not only intended to assist the employee but if one reads through this Bill carefully, the employer is well looked after in this particular legislation. No longer can you walk up to a boss and say "I am a Caymanian, I have got to stay. You are going, so I can do what I please". That cannot take place under this legislation. No longer can you walk off a job and then come back to your employer and expect you are going to get severance pay, vacation pay, or whatever you might want. There are many areas of this particular legislation where the employer is adequately covered. But in particular, the employee that has been suffering at the hands of thoughtless employers are going to be looked after with this legislation.

We were elected to this House to look after the interests of every single citizen. The individuals covered in this are from the highest paid to the lowest. We were elected to ensure that in the four years we were here this country would be far better than when we first stepped into this House and this particular piece of legislation is a part of that particular role which we needed to play.

Mention was made, during my presence here, that there were a number of things that this Government has done during its tenure here so far. I was absolutely astounded that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town went on to mention that we had voted ourselves an exorbitant amount for salaries, or something to that effect.

I am not meaning to divulge what might have gone on in a committee meeting but permit me to say, that one of the most vociferous proponents of that additional salary increase was the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town. He sat at that table and he made his contribution and I am telling you what is nothing but the truth, there was no one there who thought that that increase was more proper and in order than he did.

Perhaps the Member may have had second thoughts after sitting in his seat and getting up to debate this particular legislation, his conscience may have pricked him and he may have realized that he did not deserve a raise in salary. But he must not stand in this House and tell me or the other Members who worked so hard that we do not deserve a raise in pay.

The financial situation of this country, that very favourable, healthy Budget Address which was presented in this House within the last several weeks did not come about through chance. It came about because there was a Government in place that knew what its responsibilities were and carried out those responsibilities for the good of this country. Every single individual in this country is benefiting from that mode of governing the people. Are you telling me, now, that those persons who were placed here to govern must be less in order?

What I have to say is this. Somebody saw me today and said that they heard one of the Unity Team Members say that they do not know why the Government had a raise in pay, because all they saw was the road dug up going down from West Bay to George Town.

Believe me, if every Government that sits in this House could carry a record as we have over the last three years, a raise in pay would be the least of what it should get in return. But I venture to say that in my constituency, I am not worried about any opposition to a raise in pay, because if ever you found a majority of people in any constituency who rested their heads on their pillows at night knowing their country was in good hands, anyone can take a walk in West Bay and for every 100 people you might find two or three who would tell you they are dissatisfied. And if we covered their head with a crown of gold they would still say the same.

We had Committee meetings continually, we worked on the labour legislation, we had input from the public from hither and yon. There were certain segments of society who decided and insisted that this was not workable, that is left to be seen. But believe me, the man on the street who is suffering from certain working standards, practices and conditions welcomes this legislation as much as I do.

As far as I am concerned, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town sat wherever he may have been and he did not come to that committee room to say "queh heh". Now, I do not even know if the girl transcribing the notes will know how to spell that, but he means he openeth not his mouth.

Mr. President, I do not ..

MR. PRESIDENT:

I am very grateful, because I did not know what that was either!

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT:

I do not see how he could spend four hours in this house trying to destroy this bill when even fifteen minutes a day for 37 meetings might have added some credence to it to make it a little more perfect as far as he was concerned.

I support the Bill, and I offer it my wholehearted support. I look forward to seeing many of our Caymanian people, men, women, boys and girls, who are going to be satisfied with what we have. The school child is looked after in this, and there are many, many areas, Mr. President, which have been improved and if this were all this government did in its four years here, it would have been a record worth remembering.

Mr. President, I thank you for the opportunity of speaking on this bill, and once again I want to congratulate the Attorney General, the Legal Draftsman, and their staff, for getting this put together so well for us in order for us to be able to present this to the House at this time.

Thank you, Sir.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any member wish to speak? Somebody can go in as night watchman.... We do have seven or eight minutes left.

Standing Orders do indicate that I should invite the Mover if he wishes to reply but I am aware that other Members do wish to speak.

In that case, I shall invite the Honourable First Official Member to move the adjournment early, since I feel that that is what the House wishes.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON:

Mr. President, as there are no more "queh hehs", I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10:00 o'clock tomorrow morning.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED.

MR. PRESIDENT: Supplementaries? Apparently not. Shall we move to the third question of the day, No. 125, please - unless you have supplementaries.

THE FIRST ELECTED MEMBER FOR BODDEN TOWN TO ASK THE HONOURABLE FOURTH ELECTED MEMBER OF EXECUTIVE COUNCIL RESPONSIBLE FOR DEVELOPMENT AND NATURAL RESOURCES

NO. 125: Would the Honourable Member state who will pay to repair roads affected by the laying of the water system line?

ANSWER: The George Town water supply contract with Petroservicios International requires that they reinstate those parts of the roads which have been affected by their pipe laying operation. It is reasonable to expect that in pricing the contract, Petroservicios allowed for this cost in their rates. It is therefore reasonable to expect that in paying for the contract, the employer is meeting the cost of road reinstatement. However, if the contractor, through his own fault, damages more road than is necessary, then any repair costs will be his responsibility and will be to his account.

This Mr. President is the same arrangement as with the Sewerage Project.

MR. PRESIDENT:

We proceed to Item 4 on our Order Paper today, Statements by a Members of the Government, the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

SOCIAL SECURITY SCHEME

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

Mr. President, the following statement is made in conformity with the terms of Private Member's Motion No. 14/85 dealing with the Social Security Scheme. Further to information already given in respect of the proposed Social Security Scheme, the following information is given:

Government's Actuarial Advisor, Mr. F. Gordon Smith has now completed changes to the discussion booklet and the drafting instructions to the Legal Draftsman in light of representation made in the course of various meetings held.

Discussion of the Scheme as it will apply to civil servants are continuing with the Management Council of the Civil Service Association. It had been hoped to have finalised discussion with them before now, but this has not been forthcoming, partly because of the extra demands placed on the Financial Secretary and myself as a result of the Budget Session of the Legislative Assembly.

Mr. Smith leaves the Island on 15th December and it is hoped to at least conclude discussions with the Civil Service Association before his departure. Timing of further action will be dependent on how quickly those discussions are concluded.

MR. PRESIDENT:

We move now to Item 5 on the Order Paper, Government Business, Bills. The continuation of the debate on the Second Reading of the Labour Bill, 1987.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

SECOND READING

THE LABOUR BILL, 1987

(Continuation of debate thereon)

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Honourable Second Official Member.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Mr. President, I rise to speak to this Bill because I was the Chairman of the Select Committee that was responsible for giving the drafting instructions, during part at least, of the life of that Select Committee. I was also, quite frankly, responsible for doing most of the drafting work on it so I rise to speak to two aspects and two aspects only.

The first is to defend the workings of the Select Committee against certain charges that have been levelled against the way they conducted their business, and I hope to do that quite shortly. Secondly, I would like to offer one or two technical explanations as to the way the Law works or will work, and particularly yesterday I interrupted the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town while he was addressing the question of appeals. That is one of the technical aspects I will come to during the course of my address.

First of all, perhaps I might address the starting point of the debate of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town where he complains that the Bill is based on the Antigua Labour Code. He is right, and the Report records that the Committee, at the beginning of its deliberations, did have reference to the Antigua Labour Code. I would like to stress the wording in the Report, that the Committee looked at the Antigua Labour Code as a guideline in laying the groundwork for the proposed legislation. They decided to look at the Code because the original Chairman, Mr. Bradley, was familiar with it, in fact I believe he played a large part in drafting it, but it is those words "a guideline in laying the groundwork", that I would like to stress both to Members and to the public.

The way the Committee worked was to go through the Code, identify parts in it that it felt might be useful in the Cayman Islands, reject parts it felt were not useful, to embody those useful parts in the first draft discussion Bill that was published back in July of last year and then invite representations from the public on that draft Bill. This was intended to be an exercise in consultative drafting, in public consultation, and by beginning from an Antigua Code we hoped to provide a model on which the comments of the public, and the comments of the interested commercial and business interests could be hung, to which they could be addressed, and in the light of which comments, adaptations and amendments could be made.

The Antigua Labour Code is a formidable and complex piece of legislation. It has something like 254 sections. It addresses a wide number of issues which are inappropriate to the Cayman Islands, particularly collective bargaining, Trade Unions, and all of those were dropped by the Committee when it began. The Bill we have now has 79 sections as against those 254. So just on that simple numerical analysis, one can see we came a long way from the Antigua Labour Code. But it is not just that, there were substantive provisions in the Code which, after consideration and after receiving representations, the Committee deleted from the first discussion Bill. Most important and salient among those was the power of the Director of Labour to order reinstatement of somebody who had been unfairly dismissed. That power is in the Antigua Labour Code, it is in the United Kingdom Labour Law, and indeed forms a substantial part of the law in the United Kingdom relating to it. The Committee looked at that, it took an independent view and decided that it was inappropriate. You will not now find that power in this Bill. The Committee took that decision, partly in response to representations from the private sector.

The Member for Bodden Town at one stage described the Committee as making modifications due to pressure from the business sector. I would like to politely, if I may, take objection to the suggestion lying behind that and come back and reiterate that this was a consultative exercise, and that the Committee was not yielding to pressure, it was listening to views, it was weighing views, and if views were put forward that the Committee, after debating and voting, felt that it could accept, then those views found their way into the Law. That is not yielding to pressure, that is putting the consultative process of democracy into real and genuine operation.

I would like to move, after those first opening comments on the Antigua Labour Code, to another suggestion that had been put forward by the Elected Member for Bodden Town. This was a suggestion that I note was picked up in today's newspaper report. It was that the Committee had totally ignored and rejected representations made to it, totally ignored and rejected good ideas and the Member listed various examples of this.

At the risk of being tedious, I would like to address those, because the Committee, in considering representations, went through a lengthy and painstaking process, as I have already said, during which some points that were put forward were not accepted by the Committee. The Committee obviously was not going to accept everything that everybody put forward, or the Bill that we would have now would be the most amazing hotch potch of suggestions and ill-connected bits and pieces. What the Committee was concerned to do was to take the best, as it felt it, from the suggestions that were put forward.

Now, one of the first people to address the Committee was the Foreign and Commonwealth Office Labour Advisor, Mr. Adrian Smith. Although I was not chairing the Committee at that stage, I was present at that meeting and I was present at that meeting because, for my sins, I had been responsible for drafting the first discussion draft of the Bill, and so I was invited there to hear what Mr. Smith had to say. Some of Mr. Smith's comments were rejected. The Committee rejected his suggestions for collective bargaining. The Committee rejected his suggestions for the collective resolution of industrial disputes. The Committee rejected what he had to say about Trade Unions. The Committee felt that they had no part in this legislation. Just because the United Kingdom Labour Advisor came along and said that they had that sort of thing in the United Kingdom Law, I can assure the House the Committee was not going to say, "Yes, Sir" and put it in our legislation.

Mr. Smith had six main points that he raised, and I think that one can take it that in raising these six main points, he had no problem, and no dissent with the rest of the Bill. The points that he raised were:

- the exclusion of essential services;
- the exclusion of the public services;
- the exclusion of procedures for collective bargaining;
- the exclusion of procedures for industrial disputes;
- minimum wages; and
- the role of the Director of Labour.

Just very briefly, the points about essential services fall away once the Public Service is excluded from the Law - I will come back and address, very briefly, the question of that exclusion, because I know it is one that is dear to the Member's heart.

The Public Service, Mr. Smith noted, was excluded, and thought that this might give rise to some difficulties. The reasons for that are that in this jurisdiction, unlike the United Kingdom from where Mr. Smith was coming, there is an elaborate set of laws which govern certain aspects of the Civil Service, the most important of which is the Public Service Commission Law and the Regulations thereunder which lay down very elaborate procedures for discipline in the Civil Service, and that would have conflicted with the simpler, more straightforward provisions in the Labour Law for dismissal. So those two were incompatible and it was felt preferable to retain the existing framework in that regard for the Civil Service. The Civil Service enjoy other legislation, one of which is the Pensions Law. So there were areas in which it was felt better not to drag the Civil Service into this Law but at the same time the Committee felt and embodied it in the final Bill, that the benefits in the Civil Service should not be less than in the private sector.

Now the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, of course is right that the Bill does not impose upon Government and the Civil Service the duty to keep the fairly minimal records that are imposed upon employers. But in fact the record keeping which Government does naturally and ordinarily in the ordinary course of its business is far more complex than those fairly minimal requirements. When we come to section 7, which I will do soon, the differences between the printed Government contracts and the fairly brief standard terms which have to be handed out under section 7, are enormous.

Just staying with Mr. Smith for a minute. As I said, the Committee rejected his suggestions as to collective bargaining and Trade Unions. I am sure the Member would not have wanted us to have adopted them. As to minimum wages, Mr. Smith pointed out they did not have that in the United Kingdom any longer, that may, in part, be because of the Supplementary Benefits legislation in the United Kingdom by which Government pays supplementary benefits to the poorly paid. We have no such system here, and to introduce it would be a matter of great dispute. So it was felt that the situation here being different, minimum wages could be retained.

Mr. Smith had a subsidiary recommendation on that, and that was that there should not be a power to recommend minimum wages for separate trades or separate businesses. That power was in the first draft discussion Bill, it is not in the present one. The Committee responded to what Mr. Smith said on that.

On the role of the Director of Labour, Mr. Smith recommended that we keep the legislation simple. I should like to take this opportunity to say to the House that from my experience as a lawyer and of the law in other jurisdictions, this legislation, with its 79 sections, is an amazing piece of simplicity. If anybody troubles to go away and look up the law governing terms and conditions of employment in the United Kingdom, or in the United States of America, they will find that the body of printed law, both in legislation and in regulations, is vast, and the body of lawyers who grow up around it is vast.

In framing this Law, and this is something I will come back to when I look at the provisions relating to health and safety at work, we really have steered by the minimum and kept it as simple as possible but put it as nearly as possible into English which everyone can understand and have kept the bureaucracy at a minimum. Now on occasions this has involved giving to the Director of Labour a number of wide ranging powers.

The choice, if you have made the decision to have labour legislation, and I am not going to address that choice because it is a political question and I will leave the Elected Members to argue it, but on the technical ground, if you have made the choice to have labour legislation, you can either set up a huge bureaucracy with tribunals and officers who go away and do that and tribunals that hear things, tribunals that appeal things and fix things. Or you can try and be simple, try and have one man with some inspectors to help him, you give him broad powers and keep him in check by subjecting him to, first of all, an appeal to a tribunal of three, and also by subjecting him to the supervision of the Courts by allowing appeals on points of law.

So, if the complaint is that too much power has been put to the Director of Labour the only answer to that is that that is the way out of an elaborate, over-codified system, and that one balances it by putting in certain checks and appeals.

I have already paused too long on Mr. Smith and I am going to go on from him, noting only that the Committee sat with him for an hour and a half and discussed freely around the table his suggestions. Far from rejecting his suggestions or knocking them out the door, the Committee gave careful consideration to his six main points and accepted those that it was able to.

It was suggested by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town that the Committee has rejected certain other people's input. He picked up on a bank, I am not going to name the bank, but its name appears on page 7 of the minutes for the meeting of the 3rd June, I will come to the other meeting in a moment.

The Bank put forward some 18 points, the Committee went through them all. The Member picked out one and said that the Committee considered this raised point by the bank, and it was a point relating to clause 49 (point number 16 on page 8). The Member looks puzzled, but he can check his notes. He said the Bank went to the trouble of putting forward this amendment and the Committee considered that no amendments were necessary. Then, according to my note, the Member went on to say that the Committee had totally ignored the Bank's suggestions and good ideas were rejected. I have written that down in capitals, and I think that reflects that at that stage he had raised his voice in horror at what the Committee had done at that stage.

In fact, what the Committee rejected there was a very small suggestion by the Bank that the right to dismiss persons for misconduct should be broadened so that misconduct in somebody's private life would entitle them to be dismissed from their employment. The Committee felt that the invasion of the rights of the individual should not be carried that far and in doing so, considered that no amendment was necessary.

Now, that very same Bank which is named on page 7 of those minutes came back to the Committee after the second Bill was circulated. Its representatives came back and met with the Committee. The occasion when they came back, can be found on page 7 of the minutes of 12th August this year which I gave earlier. The Bank's two representatives came back and although it had not given written intention of wanting to come back to the Committee, the Committee agreed to meet with them.

The Bank expressed its compliments to the Committee, which they felt had done a good job in putting the legislation together - no horror there from the bank that its good ideas had been rejected out of hand. The Bank, when it met with the Committee on the new Bill, the Bill which is now before the House, had only one view to express. It drew attention to overtime pay, said that its standard work week was 37 hours, and asked whether this would be prejudiced or affected by the standard work week in the Law - really asking, "Would the bank have to raise its standard work week and change its conditions of employment and would it be banned from paying overtime pay to its employees after 37 hours?"

The Chairman, which was myself, pointed out to the Bank that the Law sets minimums and that employers were quite free to be more generous in the conditions they offered. The attention of the Bank was drawn to clause 5 of the present Bill, which says that. The Bank not only bothered to come along to the Committee to express those compliments but they also wrote to the Committee. The letter was circulated to all Members, those who attended the Committee's meeting and those that did not. It was dated 14th August and they referred to our letter sending them the draft of the discussion Bill.

"Overall", the Bank says, "we were most pleased with the revised draft and trust we have been of assistance to you. We thank you for the opportunity to have had some input in this important piece of legislation." - the same Bank that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town drew attention to and suggested the Committee had rejected their good ideas out of hand.

There were many other examples of that - I am not going through them all. The Member suggested that the Committee should have listened to the Principal Secretary for Personnel, and was horrified that the Committee, after looking at the Principal Secretary for Personnel's memorandum, agreed that no changes be made to the Bill arising out of the comments made by the Principal Secretary of Personnel. The Member was aggrieved that the Committee had not attached weight to this most important Government Officer who had experience in this field. Of course, the memorandum from the Principal Secretary for Personnel was circulated to all Members. The point is that he made no recommendations for amendments to the Bill.

The only other part of the Committee's deliberations that the Member criticised that I would just like to defend is his suggestion that they totally ignored the Chamber of Commerce. I want to deal with this for two reasons. First of all, because the Chamber of Commerce is an important body representative of many sectors of private enterprises here, I would not like it to be thought that the Committee had totally ignored them.

Secondly, the particular aspect that the Member drew attention to, where he suggested that the Committee had totally ignored the Chamber of Commerce is an important aspect where in fact the Committee had adopted a scheme put forward by the Chamber and is part of the framework of the Bill that derives from the Chamber rather than from the Antigua Labour Code. So I would like to spend a little time and highlight it.

It was on page 7 of those same minutes of the meeting of 3rd June. The Chamber of Commerce, when addressing the powers of the Director of Labour, the Clerk to the Committee, recorded the Chamber's representations like this, beginning at the bottom of page 6:

"The Committee considered the expressed concern relating to the settlement of small disputes between employers and employees where the dollar figure involved did not justify the expense of hiring legal counsel. The Chamber is of the opinion that years of judicial precedent and convention had been wiped out and replaced with the whim of a civil servant, and further that the Caymanian Protection Board has been ignored in the present draft Bill. The Committee, responding to that, noted that in relation to clause 52(8)..."

as it then was, in that draft,

"... there is a twelve week maximum on remedies for unfair dismissal..."

and I would like to just stress this bit,

"... and that the Bill does not prohibit a person taking the route of civil action before the Courts as opposed to the Director of Labour. The Committee further notes that in small cases, the decision of the Director of Labour shall be final."

Now, read in abstract that might, I can understand, look like the Committee was throwing out the Chamber's representations. I hate to mention a point that other Members have made more often and which I am only going to make this once, that if one had been at the Committee and had read the papers of the Committee, that misinterpretation would not have arisen. The point is that the suggestion that small disputes be dealt with by the Director of Labour came from the Chamber of Commerce - and I would like to read their original representation made right at the beginning of the history of this Bill, when the Chamber of Commerce, in June 1985, put in some long and helpful suggestions to the Committee.

I have to say that I would not like Members to think the Committee had accepted all of them, but I am just going to pick out one and deal with it, because it is so fundamental to the latest scheme of the Bill. I am now going to quote from their recommendations:

"The Chamber of Commerce recommends that any disputes in relation to employment contracts, where the amount of the dispute does not exceed, say $5,000, be taken out of the ambit of the current Court's system and be referable exclusively to the Government Labour Tribunal, which should act in the capacity of an arbitrator. It is felt that most labour disputes will fall in the area of termination of employment, and since the period of applicable notice may be one month or less, it is unlikely that in the majority of cases the employee will be able to support the costs and time involved in litigation. Accordingly the Government Labour Tribunal should be given statutory powers to settle disputes of this nature. The procedure would be informal, the Tribunal would have power to compel attendance of witnesses, to take evidence on oath, and its decisions would be final and binding on the parties as to financial matters, and given the effects of a judgement order. Every employee will then be clearly aware of the terms and conditions of his employment, and an inexpensive grievance procedure will be established to enable an employee or employer to obtain redress in the event of a breach of an agreement."

Now the Committee, while liking the idea of setting up a system for the resolution of small disputes that avoided going to the Courts, did not feel able to accept one important aspect of the Chamber's suggestion, which was that the whole thing be taken completely outside the ambit of the Court's system. The scheme of the present Law, and I cannot stress this too much, is that it provides an alternative, and that an employee who claims to have been unfairly dismissed has two options open to him. He can ignore the framework of the Law and he can go to the Courts - this may be expensive, but in the case of people at managerial level, bank managers and so on, who earn large sums of money and may have long notice periods in their contracts, it may be worth their while to go to the Courts. The Committee has not sought to restrict, or take away that right.

The Committee has put forward, in the draft Bill, an alternative system, whereby in small cases, the little man can go to the Director of Labour and get a quick resolution of his disputes, hopefully without involving lawyers and without involving a formal procedure.

Now, I say in small matters, because there is an important limitation on the powers of the Director of Labour and that is, that both in the cases of severance pay and unfair dismissal, he has a maximum of twelve weeks' wages. I may just say there that the idea of making the maximum in severance pay and in unfair dismissal was a direct recommendation of Mr. Smith, the FCO Labour Adviser. As I said, there is a maximum of twelve weeks. In many cases, that maximum of twelve weeks is not going to be that far removed from the Chamber of Commerce's original suggestion of a $5,000 limit for the Labour Tribunal.

Now, when the Chamber came back at that meeting of 3rd June, and made their complaint about replacing years of precedent with the whim of a civil servant, I think that they, at that time, were under the misapprehension that recourse to the Courts was going to be prohibited, and that the complaint to the Director of Labour was going to be the only way ahead. If that misapprehension had been correct, I could have sympathised greatly with their complaint. But it was, I must stress, a misapprehension. The Courts are left there, and what is more, the introduction of a right of appeal from a decision of the Director of Labour on a point of law, a modification which came in after the first discussion draft, was introduced by the Committee in response to precisely this sort of recommendation from the private sector. That ability for the Courts to entertain appeals on points of law imports all the carefully built up judicial precedent into the administration of this Law.

At this stage, I am just going to leap ahead and deal with the appellant system as set up by the Bill because it is fundamental to the way the Bill works. The Member has addressed serious criticisms to it, and I think it is fundamental to the public's understanding of the safeguards that the Bill has that I address that as a technical point.

The Director of Labour is given power to do two things of a quasi judicial nature. He can adjudicate on questions of severance pay and unfair dismissal and he can enforce the health and safety provisions by issuing remedial notices. In those two quasi judicial functions, his decision is subject to an appeal. The appeal is dealt with under section 71. The Member read it out, I am not going to read it all out, but let me just read the first subsection 71(1):

- "(1) Any person aggrieved by:
- (a) any decision of the Director upon a complaint where the award exceeds five hundred dollars; or
 - (b) the service of a remedial notice;
- may ... appeal to the Appeals Tribunal ...".

If one looks at the definition of "complaint", one sees that under the Law it is a technical term for the way that the Director of Labour decides upon either disputes about severance pay, or disputes about unfair dismissal and that is all it is under the Law. If one looks at "remedial notices" one sees that that is the notice that the Director of Labour issues to enforce the health and safety provisions.

So those are the two ways, and really the only two ways that the Director of Labour can actually compel things to be done or can adjudicate upon issues. In those ways the decision of the Director of Labour is subject to an appeal. The appeal goes to an Appeals Tribunal which is appointed by the Governor in Council and which consists of three persons. The procedure for that appeal is then set out in the rest of the section.

So everything that the Director of Labour can do is subject to appeal to the Appeals Tribunal, then the decision of the Appeals Tribunal is subject to an appeal to the Courts on a point of law. Now, the thinking behind restricting the appeal to the Court on points of law is that all the facts in the dispute, the arguments as to who did this and who did that, as to when a man was dismissed or what was the cause of his dismissal, or whether he had turned up at work at 7:00 o'clock or 8:00 o'clock on the day that he was dismissed, all those sort of facts are ideally suited to be settled by the Director of Labour who can sit down and have a hearing, take evidence on oath if necessary, and come to an adjudication of where the facts lie.

The Appeals Tribunal can also look into those facts and if it wants can reopen the issue and again decide what the facts are. But the Grand Court, with its volume of business, with the cost of a Grand Court Judge and with the cost of supplying the infrastructure of a Grand Court should not have, in my submission, after that appeals process has been gone through, to decide those disputes as to facts, particularly where the amounts involved cannot exceed twelve weeks' wages. So it was felt that the Grand Court should be reserved for what is its proper function, which is deciding issues of law.

So if, in deciding on severance pay or deciding on unfair dismissal, the Director gets his law wrong, and if after an appeal the Appeals Tribunal has still got the law wrong, all that carefully built up judicial precedent the Chamber was concerned to preserve, then that can go to the Grand Court and the Judge can put them right.

In adopting this system of appeal, the Committee and I, as the draftsman, have followed the de facto procedure that the Grand Court has evolved in cases of other administrative appeals, most notably under the Planning Law, which, where an appeal goes from the Planning Appeals Tribunal to the Grand Court on a point of law, the Grand Court will rule on the point of law, but will not hear evidence as to the facts. Then it would remit the matter, in other words send it back to the Central Planning Authority, or the Appeals Tribunal with a direction as to how the law should be applied, but leaving them to decide what the facts are.

If the direction is that they have exercised their discretion wrongly, will give guidance as to the exercise of the discretion, but will not tell them what to do. So that form of precedent in operating those other administrative laws is one which we have borrowed and applied in this Law.

That is the system of appeal that we have put in place. That does not exclude, and I want to be very clear about this, appeals in cases of offences.

Now after the Director of Labour has ruled on severance pay or unfair dismissal or after he has served a remedial notice - and I will come to those in a minute, because they are an important area that I again need to address - it is an offence under the Law not to comply with his Order or comply with the remedial notice. But that offence is an offence which has to be quite separately prosecuted before the Summary Court. If there was any doubt in that, or if the Member has not followed the way the Law works on this - and I can understand readily that in drafting the Law we have tried to compress it so that it does not go on too long - it is set out in section 74:

"Every person who commits an offence against this Law or any regulations made hereunder for which no other penalty is provided is liable on summary conviction for a first offence to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars or to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months ...", and it goes on for second or subsequent offences.

The point of reading that is that that expression "summary conviction" means, without a shadow of argument or doubt, that offences under the Law have to be prosecuted before the Summary Court in the normal way, and an offence prosecuted before the Summary Court, if there is a conviction, the provisions then of the Summary Procedure Law and the Grand Court Law as to appeals automatically apply and an appeal lies in the normal way from the conviction to the Grand Court and then to the Court of Appeal. So, in the case of criminal offences, the normal right of appeal has not been touched, has not been tinkered with, has not been tampered with and certainly has not been taken away.

I said I would mention remedial notices, because they are another important aspect of this Law that might be misunderstood, and which I would, I hope, like to clarify and cast in a more favourable light than they have been put so far.

Remedial notices are the way by which the health and safety provisions are enforced. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town observed, in his address, or if he did not observe, he questioned how these were going to be enforced, who is going to decide what is reasonable, who is going to decide whether there should be a canteen or a mess room, is it to be the employee, the employer, the Director of Labour or what? Well, the mechanism for doing it is that if the Director of Labour feels that steps need to be taken to ensure compliance with the provisions of the part of the Law relating to health and safety at work, he can serve a notice on the employer directing him to take those steps. That notice is called a remedial notice.

I appreciate straightaway that this gives the Director a broad power. It means that if he feels that a workplace is not being kept in a clean state, or adequate seating should be provided, or if canteens should be provided, in the first instance it is up to him to do something about it by serving a remedial notice. So, it is him who decides in the first instance what is reasonable and what should be done.

If I could just digress for a moment, I appreciate that that is putting a wide discretion in the hands of the Director. The alternative is to take the route of regulating everything specifically by laws and regulations, and if any Member of the House would care to look at the United Kingdom 1974 Health and Safety at Work Act, and at the regulations adopted and made thereunder, I think they would be appalled at the amount of law that can be generated if a legislative body really sets its mind to govern this aspect of the working environment and conditions.

The Committee chose another route, which was, in the first instance, to leave it up to the good sense of a civil servant, admittedly, and then subject him to a right of appeal to an Appeals Tribunal consisting of three people to be appointed, and, one hopes, to be appointed from among those whose experience in every day business and in the ordinary walks of commerce and industrial life will be able to bring that experience to bear in deciding what is reasonable, then to subject them to an appeal if they go wrong in law it was felt that that system, in a small island and a small environment like this, was going to provide the flexibility to cope with problems without having to write out thousands of pages of regulations.

In a small environment, should the Director start to go wrong, not only is he subject to these various appeals, but it is rapidly going to come to the notice of members of the public through their Elected Members, who are in close contact with their constituents, and if it is apparent that the Law is going wrong in this direction, it can come back to this House, either by a Motion or by amendment. That, I think, with respect to this House and with respect to the Cayman Islands, is one of the great advantages of a small environment, that the response time to maladministration can be so much quicker than in a large island like the United Kingdom, with its 52 million people, where if something goes wrong with an individual in his factory of 10,000 employees, it is a long route indeed to bring that to the notice of the legislators.

So the Committee took a risk and has adopted this simple system, following the wise and wide suggestion of Mr. Smith, the FCO Labour Advisor, that we keep it simple and as much as possible avoid bureaucracy - a simple system of giving the decision to the Director of Labour in the first case and then subjecting him to appeal.

In borrowing this system, again as the draftsman, I looked at other laws on the statute books. One that I found helpful in finding the system of remedial notices was the Public Health Law. I think it will be readily apparent to Members that health and safety at work and public health are not that too different sets of subjects. Both are concerned with the well being of, first of all, the individual, and secondly, of the community. It seemed not unreasonable to follow a similar approach.

The Public Health Law, 1981, provides a system for dealing with statutory nuisances, and statutory nuisances are listed in section 7 of that Law. They run from (a) to (w). There are all sorts of things, it is a statutory nuisance to create a noise or vibration which is a nuisance; it is a statutory nuisance to let the weeds grow too long on your land so as they become a nuisance or a prejudice to health; it is a statutory nuisance to keep any animals in such a manner as to be offensive or prejudicial to health; it is a statutory nuisance to let coconut shells fill up with water so that mosquitoes can breed in them. These are all listed in the Public Health Law, 1981.

Now the means of getting rid of a statutory nuisance is that the Chief Environmental Health Officer serves a notice on the person responsible, and if that notice is not complied with - well, let me read the section 8(4), then there will be no misunderstanding.

"Where a notice has been served on a person under this section ..."

(the notice is served by the Chief Environmental Health Officer, a civil servant)

"... and either:

(a) the nuisance arose from a willful act or default of the said person; or

(b) such person makes default in complying with any of the requisitions of the notice within the time and date specified;

he shall be guilty of offence under this Law and shall, on conviction be liable to a fine not exceeding five hundred dollars for each offence and to a further fine not exceeding fifty dollars for each day during which the offence is continued ...".

Now, the Chief Environmental Health Officer can serve a notice and there is no appeal from him serving that notice. You either comply with it or you commit an offence. Of course, there is an appeal from the Court provisions when you are found guilty of an offence, but there is no appeal from the Civil Servant's decision.

In that case, I do not criticise it, because you are dealing with environmental health aspects, even though some of them are as small as long grass or water in coconut shells. In the Labour Law one is dealing with the health, the safety and welfare at work of individuals and of employees and we followed that same system except that we have put in the additional safeguard that before non-compliance with the order of the Civil Servant becomes an offence, there is an appeal to a Tribunal and there is a further appeal on a point of law.

So, as I say, we borrowed the 1981 Public Health Law and we put in some additional safeguards. I can understand that the Member may say that we are giving great powers to a civil servant, and that that is dangerous or horrific, or goes against the traditions in the Islands but I can say that it does not go against the traditions in the Island, because of the 1981 Law and I can say that if it is dangerous or horrific, the Committee, in recommending this Bill, has attempted to build in the safeguards of appeals before one gets so far as somebody actually being found guilty of committing an offence, then you can appeal from the offence.

There are numerous other aspects where, going through the Law in his careful and detailed presentation, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town criticised its workings. I do not want to respond to all of them at least because it is going to be tedious. The answer to some of them is self-evident. There is one I would just like to pick up, and I hope that maybe I can wrap up this presentation in five minutes so that we can conveniently then take the break.

The Member devoted a lot of attention to section 7 which is the written statement that has to be provided by an employer to an employee. He complained, and I hope I am representing him correctly, that this would be an almost insupportable burden upon the small businessman, that it would generate lots of paperwork so that everyone would have to employ personnel officers, have filing cabinets and storage ... and he went on with his usual powerful rhetoric to challenge this section.

If one looks at it, the requirements that are set out in section 7, subsections (a) to (j) are really only the things that any sensible employer would put in any sensible contract of employment for his own benefit, not least for his own benefit, and also so that he, and his employee, if they fell out, knew exactly where they stood. Should anybody ever get to the court, or to the Director of Labour, then it is invaluable to have such a document to avoid disputes.

Before coming to the Assembly this morning I sat down and tried to knock out the sort of letter or document that might be necessary to embody these terms. I know I am a lawyer and it can be objected that it is easier for me to do this, but really, it took no more than five minutes, holding on a foolscap sheet, and it takes a third of it. What I have got is this - this does not have to be the legal form, but this covers everything that the section says. It reads something like this:

"You,.....(name).....will be employed by(name of the employer)..... as an assistant at the supermarket at.....(the address)....."

Your general responsibilities and duties (and I take that phrase from the Law) are to assist with the operation of the retail part of the store, including stacking and pricing goods on the shelves, keeping the shelves and passages clean and free from obstructions at all times, assisting at the checkout counter as necessary, together with such other related duties as may be assigned to you by the Duty Manager from time to time.

Your hours of work are 8:30 A.M. to 5:00 P.M., Monday to Friday. You will be paid "x" dollars per week, on Friday, that amount being calculated at the rate of x dollars per hour. For the first six months of your employment you will be on probation. You will receive twenty days paid leave per annum, but no part of this may be taken until you have satisfactorily completed your probation period. Your sick leave entitlement will be that set out in the Labour Law, namely ten days' paid leave at the basic rate per annum. Your employment may be terminated by one month's notice on either side."

You do not need to be a lawyer to write that out, you do not need to go to great lengths. Indeed, at the risk of belabouring the point, the reason the things that have to be addressed are set out in the Labour Law is so that the layman coming to it can find out, at a glance, what should go into a contract of employment, what points need to be addressed, so that the right of the parties are laid out. He can run down the list in the Law as a checklist and he can see whether he has got them in the letter governing employment or not.

So it is not, in my submission to the House and the public at large can judge this for themselves, a massive imposition upon the small businessman. Rather, it is an aid or a guideline that enables the small businessman who may not have had training in personnel management, to come along and see how he should be conducting his relations and how he can embody them in a simple, easy and cheap document, at not much trouble to himself.

I beg your pardon, Mr. President, I am performing the difficult exercise of noting points that need answering, and then deciding those which I can perhaps not answer and get away with not answering. In doing so, I am going through my notes. I see that there are three or four more points that I am going to have to come to, so this may be a convenient moment to break.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

AT 11:15 A.M. THE HOUSE SUSPENDED

HOUSE RESUMED AT 11:37 A.M.

MR. PRESIDENT:

to continue, I am asked to advise the House that if necessary we may consider sitting late tomorrow in order to be sure that we may finish the business for the week. I would simply like Members to note the possibility that we may sit late tomorrow.
Thank you.

Before I ask the Honourable Second Official Member
The Honourable Second Official Member.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

objections which had been raised to specific sections of the Law. I have got a few more points of that nature that I want to make, and I hope to take them quite quickly. They are all points that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town made in his critical address when he analyzed the provisions of the Law.

As I say, taking them quickly, as against section 10, which is the notice provisions, the Member objected there that one would need a lawyer to avoid the penalties when it comes to giving written notice, I might just point out to him that that is a section of the Law which has no penalties in it.

He went on in section 12, and I think this is an important criticism that I need to meet to say that the provisions of section 12(3) usurp the authority of the Court to decide what is and is not evidence. Now section 12, Members will recall, requires an employer to give certain statements or certificates to employees. Section 12(1) requires if he dismisses an employee, to give him a statement, in writing, as to why he has done it, and section 12(2) requires him at any time within a year after the expiry of employment, to give the employee a certificate saying when he was hired, when he was terminated and the sort of work he was engaged on.

Now it is section 12(3) that the Member objected to, because that section says that statement or certificate given under those preceding subsections, "...shall be conclusively bound (that is the person giving it) by the contents thereof in any proceedings under this Law ...".

Now, the sort of proceedings that can be conducted under the Law in relation to dismissal or severance pay are proceedings before the Director of Labour. They are not proceedings before the Court. The Court, as I have said, constitutes a separate, and alternative means of proceeding but they are proceedings before the Director of Labour. This restriction on evidence is only restricted to proceedings under this Law and therefore is only restricted to proceedings before the Director of Labour. So this does nothing to alter the rules of evidence in Courts, or to trespass upon the domain of the Courts.

Now, the reasons why, in proceedings before the Director of Labour, the section says that the statement or the certificate should be final is part of that more general reason that lies behind the administrative provisions of the Law to give certainty and simplicity to the determination of disputes. The idea behind section 12(1), which is the statement of the reasons for dismissal, is that if an employer dismisses an employee because he has committed some form of misconduct, he is going to know what that cause is at the time of the dismissal, there is no hardship in asking him to set it out in writing then and there, and there is no hardship in having him bound by it later.

If he is not bound by it, later he can come along bringing all sorts of fol de rol, he can make up whatever reasons he likes. It was felt that it was better that he be tied down to the reasons that he gave at the time.

Similarly, under section 12(2) the requirement for stating terms of engagement and the type of employment upon which an employee was engaged, really there is nothing difficult in that, and there should be no difficulty in an employer coming up with those dates and that brief description of the type of employment, and given that there is no difficulty in coming up with it, again, to give certainty and simplicity. There is, in my submission to the House, nothing wrong whatsoever in requiring the employer to be bound by what he set his hand to. I may also point out that even in Courts of Law, should you set your hand to a document in writing you are at a later date going to have extreme difficulty standing up and saying that that is not your document, or that is not what you meant. So this section, I admit, goes a little further than the basic rules of evidence but if Members think about it, it does not go very much further.

The Member went on, and I am just picking out highlights from his speech and not taking up all his points, to criticise the provisions as to minimum pay and the establishment of a minimum wage. As the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council pointed out in his opening speech, these follow quite closely the existing provisions of the Cayman law governing the ability to set a national minimum basic wage save that under the existing Law the minimum wage is set by the Governor by Order, and under the Bill as put forward, it is the Governor in Council. So the Committee has moved that far, at least, towards some form of consultative direction.

The theory behind having the Governor in Council advised by a Committee is, I would hope, obvious that it allows input from all sectors of the community into the establishment of a national basic wage. The Member complained particularly that the powers of that committee would erode the Confidential Relationships Law, and that is a charge which was picked up in a newspaper report this morning. The newspaper reported the Member as saying it was outside the Constitution and could leave the confidentiality laws open to abuse. So, as it has been given such currency, I feel obliged to explain why that assertion is wrong.

Section 21(8) allows the Committee to take evidence from witnesses to require the production of relevant documents, and to take evidence on oath. Of course, the documents will be relevant to fixing the national minimum basic wage. The Confidential Relationships Law protects confidential information belonging or confidential to another person in the hands of the professional person who holds it. To give an example, a banker holds details about his client's financial transactions. The Confidential Relationships Law protects the information about the client's transactions in the banker's hands.

What the banker may pay his staff is not protected by the Confidential Relationships Law, because it has not come to the banker in the way of his business. So first of all, if the Committee properly restricts itself to relevant information which is going to be what employers pay their staff, there is no question of it impeding on information which is confidential within the Law.

Now, the Member, I think, suggested, and indeed if he thinks about it might suggest, oh, well, in giving that information, in looking at the documents, other information which really is confidential within the Law may come across or the Committee may abuse its powers and seek confidential information within the Law, information which belongs to some other person, and seek to get that out before the Committee. Well, there is a very simple answer to that, and that is the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law. That says that when any person is compelled to give evidence before any Court or Tribunal enquiring into any matter, if a person is required to give confidential material within the meaning of the Law, then that person has to apply to the Court, first of all, under section 3A of the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law for directions. If he does not apply to the Court first of all he commits a crime.

So, should some hapless employer be subjected to a demand from the Committee and really, I would submit to the House that this is exceedingly unlikely, but should it happen that the Committee demands information that is confidential within the Confidential Relationships (Preservation) Law, then the person from whom the information is demanded has his duty clearly set out in the existing legislation. What he does is he goes to the Court and says; "What should I do, should I comply or should I not comply?". The Court then gives him directions and he follows what the Court says. So there is that safeguard in the existing Law that would prevent any abuse by the Consultative Committee should it, in the frankly unlikely event, seek to abuse its power.

The Member went on, in the context of minimum basic wages to assert that the setting up of a national minimum wage would take away the right to bargain. He came out with a particular example, that if he hires his brother to paint his house that he will be bound by the national minimum basic wage. In fact he would not be nor would he be obliged to pay the brother the minimum basic wage just for painting his house. There are several reasons for this, the most obvious is that if he just got his brother in to do this one-off job, the brother is a casual labourer under the definition of the Law.

But, more importantly than that, the national minimum basic wage, applies to wages paid under contracts of employment. The whole framework of the Law is that it is set up to apply to employees and employers. If one goes to the definition section, one finds that a contract of employment, which is what an employee is employed under, defines an employee and therefore is what defines the sort of people to whom you have to pay the national minimum basic wage. "Contract of employment" means an agreement - and I am abbreviating it a little - whereby it is agreed between an employee and an employer that the employee will be employed under a contract of service.

Now that expression, "contract of service" is, I am afraid, a technical, legal expression which has been expounded upon and explained by generations of legal precedent and legal decisions. Basically it means a contract in which the normal appurtenances of the employer/employee relationship are present. It implies an element of regularity turning up, doing what your employer tells you to do, doing it on a regular basis, being governed by things like notice and so on and being subject to the directions of your employer. If you hire somebody on a one-off basis to paint your house or to come for one occasion and renovate your garden, perhaps lay turf or something like that, you are not employing them under a contract of service - they are not your employees.

But, the person who paints your house, if he is not your brother, may well be employed by a professional painter or decorator and will enjoy a contract of service between him and the person who employs him. That person who employs him may send him to paint lots of different houses in the course of the working year but the person whose house is being painted does not employ him under a contract of service. The person whose house is being painted is not obliged to pay him the national minimum basic wage. It is up to his employer, the man who regularly employs him, to make sure he gets the national minimum basic wage.

So there is a very important distinction there which I would like to stress, and it does leave out from the ambit of the Law these casual relationships where somebody on a once-off basis comes along and performs a service. If I might just use again a legal term of ours, the opposite of a contract of service is a "contract for services". That is when you hire somebody to come along and perform some services on the once-off basis.

I am leapfrogging through the Law and it may sound a little disjointed.

The question of gratuities was touched upon. The Honourable Member, in introducing the Bill, explained that the provisions as to gratuities set an escalating system of control. In the first instance, it is hoped that the employer and employee can work out gratuities between them. That was, again, what the FCO Labour Advisor suggested, that gratuities be left to agreement. Should they break down, the Director of Labour can intervene and should the Director of Labour's informal intervention not lead to an agreement which can be registered as a last resort, regulations can be made. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town felt that the formula should have been embodied in the Law.

I think the thinking behind not carving the formula in stone in the Law was that gratuities are a difficult and complex area. The appropriate provisions or formula, may vary from one type of business to another, or indeed from one business within a class of businesses, from one business to another and that this particularly was an area in which a great deal of flexibility should be preserved.

Were the Law to spell out a formula, that would rob the provisions of the flexibility that is necessary to make them work. It was also felt, and I hope I can say this quite frankly, that the Director of Labour, as the system goes into operation and as he sees more and more what happens in the field as he intervenes in disputes, maybe arrives at, arbitrates in disputes, sets of formulae which can be registered. The Director of Labour is going to be in a position from that experience to advise Government what sort of formula might be embodied in regulations, and that the Law was not the place to preempt that evolutionary process, but that rather it should be left to work itself out and that, as I say, as a last resort regulations could be resorted to.

Again, leaping on in respect to severance pay, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town painted a dire picture of the employer who might be faced with all his employees wanting to leave at once and demanding severance pay. He referred to at least one large business and as it were, invited a Member of the House to comment on that point.

The fundamental point that the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town may have been missing is that severance pay is payable upon termination of employment by the employer. So, should a hapless employer be in the position where all his employees get up and leave him voluntarily, perhaps giving notice, he does not have to pay them severance pay, the Law does not require him to. He may have his own provisions whereby he gives them pensions or gives them pay upon leaving which is entirely voluntary, but severance pay provisions in this Law could not be triggered in those circumstances. That dire picture of the employer being thrust into bankruptcy by all his employees getting up and leaving him is not going to happen because of the severance pay provisions.

I pause only because I am going on through the Member's speech to see what I have already dealt with. I think that the two major areas of the alleged defects and the health and safety provisions, that there is no way of enforcing them, and the appeal provisions I have dealt with. Now, and I am not going to come back to that, there is one final comment I would just like to take up and touch upon, again because it is something that was picked up in the press this morning.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town described the Director as being given abnormal powers under the Law, that in some instances he is going to be prosecutor, in some instances judge, and in some instances hangman. Looking at the press report, I see that the role of Commissioner of Police was also thrown in.

It is true that the Director is given broad powers, but each of those areas are quite distinct. The Director of Labour is only a judge in those cases relating to unfair dismissal, severance pay, and remedial notices, where there are financial limits set up on what he can award and where he is subject to an elaborate system of appeal. I cannot find where he is "hangman". He is prosecutor because he is charged with the enforcement of this Law, and he is empowered to prosecute cases before the Courts. The Member suggested that this might represent an abrogation of the fundamental principles of the division of responsibility in Government, and to go against principles that I had adumbrated and put forward in an earlier speech during this meeting.

In fact, it is of course the right of every citizen to bring a prosecution before the Courts. The Law recognises this, but it also recognises that in the case of certain classes of public servants who are charged with the administration of laws with penal provisions, that those classes of public servants should be given express power to appear before the Courts and prosecute offences under the laws for which they have responsibility. There are several examples in our law.

The Customs Law gives power to Customs Officers to prosecute customs offences. The Immigration Law gives powers to Immigration Officers. I think the Public Health Law gives power to the Chief Environmental Health Officer, though I would want to check that before finally swearing to that, but we have these examples. This does not impinge in any way upon the final and ultimate responsibility of the Attorney General for prosecutions. The Attorney General, of course, does not concern himself in every small prosecution which is brought before the Courts. Every speeding offence does not cross my desk for me to give my fiat for it to proceed. Every drunk driving charge, every customs matter, every immigration offence does not come to me for me to read the file and decide upon it.

The Constitutional safeguard and where the Attorney General's residual power arises, is that if, either a member of the public or one of these civil servants who are charged with the right and the power to prosecute, abuses it by bringing prosecutions where it is unmeritorious, where it is vindictive, where there is no evidence, the Attorney General can then intervene by means of a system set out in the Criminal Procedure Code whereby he can take over the case and end it. He ends it by entering a document which has an unnecessary Latin name called a "nolle prosequi", and literally translated it means, I do not want to prosecute. It is a residual power that lets the Attorney General, in cases of abuse, come in and end a prosecution.

So, the right given to the Director of Labour to enforce this Law, to prosecute for this Law and to conduct prosecutions under this Law is in keeping with the system which we have in other similar laws in the Islands already. It does not in any way conflict with those greater and deeper principles of the divisions of responsibility that underlie our Constitution.

I have reiterated myself on this point and I have only done it because I think it is so important that that, at least, is made clear.

With that closing remark, I am not going to go on through the rest of the sections of the Law, and am going to leave any other Member who wishes to address its more general merits to take the floor.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands.

CAPT. MABRY S. KIRKCONNELL:

Mr. President, the Bill before this House, in my opinion, is a very important Bill. I think the title of it says exactly that. It is a Bill for a Law to govern terms and conditions of employment; to provide for the health, safety and welfare of employees; and for related matters.

For many years we have needed a Bill similar to this for the benefit of employer and employees. At this time I would like to congratulate the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council under whom the responsibility for labour falls, for the very able way in which he presented this Bill. I know it has been greatly appreciated by the radio audience in particular, who have not had the opportunity, or who have not taken the time to fully acquaint themselves with all the terms and all the clauses that are in the Bill. I think it was very important that he went clause by clause, omitting none, and brought what is termed by some, good and bad, to the public.

I would also at this time like to thank the previous Chairman of this Committee and the present Chairman, for all the hard work they have put in, and to the members of the private sector who made representations and showed their interest in the community by having the input they did into this Bill now before the House.

I am one of the Members of this Honourable House who can stand here and truthfully say that I attended every Select Committee that I possibly could. It is not my policy to absent myself just for the sake of being absent, that I can come into this Honourable House and criticise the work of the Committee. Having said that, it would be rather simple of me to come here and try to criticise the clauses of this Bill, having had the opportunity in Select Committee to understand the reasons that each and every one is in there.

I support the Bill. I do have a concern which is for the people of my district. As all Honourable Members of this House and the listening public are aware, Cayman Brac is far behind Grand Cayman in its state of economic development. I think we are possibly where Grand Cayman was in the early sixties. Legislation such as this could cause some hardships to both employer and employee in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

In the meeting of 19th August, 1987, I asked that this be recorded, and I ask your indulgence that I may read this short portion which says:

"Matters raised by Members of the Committee:

The Chairman invited Members of the Select Committee to raise any matter. The only Member to make comment was the First Elected Member for the Lesser Islands. He referred to the economic situation of the Lesser Islands, stating that there is virtually a twenty year gap between Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and Grand Cayman's development, and in view of such, certain parts of the legislation could prove to be destructive rather than constructive. He stated that at the appropriate time he would wish to discuss the Bill in its final draft with his constituents, and that more than likely he would propose amendments in the House at the Committee stage."

I still have that concern today, and I would ask in the implementation of this Law, as I anticipate that the Bill will certainly be passed, that considerations to the Sister Islands be given, as the Director of Labour and the Inspectors will be resident in Grand Cayman. It will be more difficult for the employer and the employee to really have the benefit of the Labour Office in Cayman Brac, in particular, and I would ask again, that when this is implemented, that provisions be made that it would not necessitate paying air fares and other expenses to be incurred by people in the Lesser Islands to journey to Grand Cayman to have their complaint heard.

I am very grateful that a six month period and the enforcement of any fines will be implemented. I think this will give each and every person an opportunity to understand the Law and its working more thoroughly. I feel certain that after it has been enacted, those that are now very sceptical of the Law and oppose it will then represent it. It is clear to see the importance that we as legislators put in this matter, that 37 meetings of the Select Committee were called to perform our duties as legislators in trying to get the best Labour Bill we could for the people of the Cayman Islands.

I would also hasten to say to the listening public the impression is being given that this is a monument being carved in stone that cannot be amended. It will be a Law, and this Legislature has the power to amend any law. If it is found that there are sections that are not workable, if it is brought to the attention of the proper authorities, certainly amendments will be brought to this Honourable House in future meetings.

In closing I would again like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council, and our very able Honourable Second Official Member for the very able job they have done in explaining this to us and in bringing this Bill to this House.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Does any other Member wish to speak?
In that case I call upon the Honourable Second

Elected Member to reply to the debate.

(INTERRUPTION) (Mr. McKeeva Bush)

give way, he may.

If the Honourable Second Elected Member wishes to

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Yes, Mr. President, I will give way.

MR. PRESIDENT:

The Second Elected Member for West Bay.

MR. W. MCKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, truthfully, Sir, I would not want to miss my chance to say my piece on this Bill, no, Sir. I have taken too many blows not to give some back.

However, I am a happy man today. Happy because we seek to embed in our statute books a piece of social legislation which has been properly drafted and meticulously put together. A piece of legislation which I believe, if administered in a proper and unbiased way, will lead to the strengthening of our social, political and economic stability for which this country is renowned.

The Holy Bible commands us that "Thou shall not muzzle the ox that treadeth out the corn" and also that "the labourer is worthy of his reward". This is what this Labour Bill is all about. Thank God the time has come where the working man in this country has some form of protection, some form of effective redress. For one pleasing thing, no more will there be the thought in this country, that management had the right to accuse employees, dismiss them without proper investigation, and then take refuge in the stance that management had the privilege to dismiss its employees as it pleased. And as surely as the Bible commands us not to muzzle the ox treading the corn, I also believe neither should the ox be allowed to eat all of the corn.

Accordingly, you will find in the Bill that the legislation will be fair and just to all concerned. It protects the worker and it protects the employer. It is not one-sided as the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, in his propagandistic tirade tried to make the public believe, but it puts the employee in a position that he must now begin to have a more responsible attitude to his employment. I believe if management is effective as competent management should be and does not behave in an ignorant manner, then this legislation can go a long way in helping to eradicate the growing problem of poor work attitudes and growing indiscipline that is evident in the workplace. If a desirable level of productivity is to be achieved, or in some instances maintained, it would suit all concerned to make the best of what is proposed in this labour legislation.

than being of a communistic mentality. For the communists have a belief that if you say something long enough, even though you know it to be less than the truth, someone will eventually believe you.

To bring the Bill to this stage was no easy task. Over the three year period we have had 37 meetings. We have had representations from a wide cross section of people representing the various industries and employers themselves; and from the Chamber of Commerce to the Business and Professional Women's Organization.

What was so evident throughout all of the 37 meetings in these three years was the absence of any representation on the part of the employee. And so, we, who claim to be the protector and defender of the working man in this country, those of us who attended the Committee meetings, had to be the spokesmen for the unrepresented working man in those Committee meetings.

We have come a long way with this Bill. Members of this House have been attacked. There have been obscene telephone calls and threats, that did not deter the Committee. It did not deter my conviction of the need and today I give thanks to the Member concerned; I give thanks to the Honourable Attorney General and his staff for having come this far.

Of the recommendations that came to us, we had to reject some of them because they were not fair to everybody concerned. For instance, the Hotel Association wanted the Committee to put into the Law for sick leave to be six working days. That would have been a retrograde step. So the Committee refused to support them in their request, because the normal amount of sick leave today is ten working days. The Law does not now provide and the Law, as long as I am here, will never provide for any benefit to be worse or less than what is normal today in this country.

Another area where the employee is no worse off because of the Law, is the section dealing with vacation leave which says in clause 14(2) of the Bill that "earned vacation leave shall be above and beyond and shall not include any public holiday leave". This means that the vacation to which any employee is entitled under this part shall be extended by one day for each public holiday that occurs during that vacation. As I say, this is now normal, however, I have known of cases which were questioned by certain employers, so this is one of the reasons it was provided in the Law, and more so, why the Law had to be brought to this Honourable House.

One group suggested that all employers should give a work account instead of the employers with ten or more employees as is provided under clause 31 of the Bill. I am not too sure that that particular idea should not have been taken up. However, the Committee chose otherwise. One thing I do know is that no man in his right mind can say that any person in this country having ten or more employees is doing small business. And for the sake of good business sense, that person should want to have some sort of record as to his employees. Cayman is still a developing country, and developing at a fast pace which means there are many complications in the different industries, humans being what we are.

I am a small employer but I find it most necessary to give my employees, sometimes three, sometimes there are more, not up to ten, some simple record of what I expect them to do in their employment to me.

I do not intend to carry on for long. I believe that the Mover has done a good job and that the Honourable Attorney General has done an extremely good job also in clearing up some of what might have been taken in the wrong way. However, I have a few more areas to touch on.

One group, the Contractors Association, had suggested that because in the United Kingdom 13 weeks are allowed to give an employee a written statement of employment, we should do the same. The Committee felt that any employer worth his salt, and I make the point again because I have been questioned on it although I would not belabour it, that any employer worth his salt should give a statement of working conditions in two weeks, as is provided in this Law. What the United Kingdom has in so much as labour legislation is concerned, is not suitable to what is necessary in this country. The United Kingdom has many Labour Unions to back the working man. We have to put in our Law the protection for the working man because we do not believe in nor do we want unions.

The only Member so far opposing the Bill, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, claimed on the one hand that we were being cruel to the employer, punishing the employer. He said the Bill is one-sided, all in favour of the worker, with no returns for the employer. Further on he went on to say that the worker is much worse off. I tell you, I am not going to take up on his debate, because from that statement, and his non-attendance at the putting together of this Law, the Member was well confused. So most of what he said I will write off as being a state of confusion.

One point he raised, and one that has been raised often in this House was that the tail was wagging the dog. What he meant by that was that sometimes the dog needed a scratch, he was itching, and the tail had to do the job. The three areas he used as an example, the Social Security Scheme, this Labour Bill and the Economic Plan - I make no apologies that I was part of it, I was in fact the mover of two needed pieces of legislation in this country. If this country is going to survive, labour legislation is necessary, and the Social Security Scheme is necessary and must be brought to this House as soon as possible.

How can any man who claims to be the protector of the small man not want for the people that he claims to represent to have security at work and security in his old age? When I moved the motion to bring about this Bill, I said that the labour in this country and a proposed Social Security Scheme went hand in hand, one could not work without the other. But I will leave him in his state of confusion on the need for the two.

Business people are human beings. But what about the employee? Is he a horse to be ridden all of his life? No, it cannot continue. The Honourable Member talked at great length concerning the provision for severance pay in clause 39.

I remember well the debate in the Committee which the Member did not attend. There are many cases that can be used as an example which deals with section 39. We have had cases where certain businesses have been sold and their long standing employees, when the new manager or the new owner came in, they refused to give them, although they were long standing employees, any sort of vacation pay or any sort of benefits. They say they are new management, therefore the employees have to start over anew. This is what the Member says should be the position. I am amazed at him. This section of the Bill will help to put to rest those injustices.

I do not believe the opposition to this Bill is sound. I do not believe the opposition to this Bill holds any water. They are seeing this Bill as an oasis in the political desert where they now find themselves, they cannot use this to quench their thirst.

Good opposition, in their own words should be, when opposing you should always give alternatives to the points that have been raised by the Government of the day. If you cannot present alternatives, it is much better if an Opposition at that point remain silent. In their own words, many times the Opposition will use many strategies and many points to try to enhance its own image rather than the good of the country. That is what has happened.

One group that came to the Committee suggested that we should do away with the system of gratuities. The Committee refused to accept that recommendation, and rightly so. That did not come from the Hotel Association, but it came from a Member, and I know from minutes of the Hotel Association's meeting that that particular point was raised and that that should be a recommendation. The Government could not do away with gratuities because the Government did not institute gratuities. The Hotel Association, years ago in their refusal to pay and pay properly came up with a system of gratuities. What was happening and is still happening is that the gratuities that should have gone to the employee went into somebody else's pocket. I do not know whether the word "stealing" is unparliamentary or not, but if that is not stealing, then maybe you could give me another word.

MR. PRESIDENT:
House, it is not unparliamentary.

As long as you are not accusing Members of the

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: trust me on that.

No Member of the House is being accused, you can representative of the people, I have had too many representation made to me to sit down and not try to put this thing right. So the Committee, in it's wisdom, is trying to do something about that stealing. What I would urge is that the first one who is caught should be made to pay back for all the others that got away.

I do not need to stand here and give examples, because I have given them over and over and over again. But to drive it home, how can a property with, let us say, 30 or 15 rooms, being rented for one season, and pay $1,200 to an employee in gratuities, and the next season come around, and a different manager is there and that same property with the same amount of rooms and the same amount of staff pays two hundred and odd dollars? How can it be so? Highway robbery! No Government in the past sought to do anything about it. This Government, with Members who, not only say that they protect the people, but they prove it, are doing something about it, and we are doing it lawfully.

which to break?

Excuse me, would that be a convenient point at

MR. PRESIDENT:
Second Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Proceedings of the House are resumed. The

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH:

Mr. President, when we took the suspension I was dealing with the gratuity system in this country. One more problem area with gratuities and cause for concern to the Committee was that it was a fact that in the high tourist season management of certain properties would withhold paying the total amount of gratuities collected under the premise that the extra amount would be distributed to them in the slow season. This payment would be without interest added to it. Who would be getting the interest in that time? And who can handle my money better than me? That matter will be straightened out under this Bill when this Bill comes into effect.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town who spoke in opposition to the Bill said that we took no recommendations from employers, that is not true. The Chamber of Commerce, one of the hottest opposers of the Law, made a recommendation and suggested that we - let me read from their report to us. In their recommendation it said:

"What is recommended by the Chamber of Commerce is a system that will enable every employee to know with certainty precisely what his basic terms and conditions of employment are, and as agreed by him with the employer."

So they were recommending the work accounts and the terms and conditions of employment, which this Bill has contained. The Chamber of Commerce also suggested a labour tribunal. The Bill contains that, so as far as I am concerned, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town was in a state of confusion, because he did not do his duty and attend the Committee meetings. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town did at the Select Committee's meeting on labour what he did at the Finance Committee's meeting. He came in long enough to vote for the increase in salary and left.

We must realise that proper labour legislation is essential simply from the point of view that labour is at least an equal partner with capital in our economic system. Over the years it has been treated as such because it is apparently not recognised as an equal partner by those who represent capital. Labourers cannot demand such recognition because they are not an organised force which would be capable of acting for themselves. So this Government, and any Government concerned with seeing justice done among the people within its jurisdiction has little choice but to see to it that its people are protected so that they can get the maximum possible benefit. To not assume this role in this day and age and with the economic system like ours is to avoid the responsibility of Government.

One other problem we came up with was the payment of salaries in this country. Payment of salaries from certain companies was made late Friday evening, too late to catch the banks. What happens to an employee is that only if some merchants will cash their cheques were they able to get their money for the weekend. They cannot carry on this now, and if they do, under a section of the Law, the worker can demand his pay in cash. The sad thing about that whole fiasco, it was very evident when certain companies got into trouble financially that practice would be carried on. But they cannot now carry it on.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said that he could not attend the Committee's meeting because the minority was ignored, that is not true. He said, "minority Members' good recommendations were rejected". These were his exact words in fact but that is not true. We persisted in certain areas and you can believe that there was some hot debate in that Committee Room. But in the final analysis, many times the minority, and when I say the minority maybe I am placing myself in that position, but many times we made recommendations and the Government of the day said it was their finding that they could not comply with what we were asking for.

One instance, and I only make reference to it to point out the fact that we in the Committee had some power once we stayed together, was the reintroduction of the discrimination clause. Government was adamant that it was not needed. But after we discussed it, not at one meeting but at several meetings, Government finally agreed with us that the discrimination clause should be contained in the Law. So I consider that was an area that if the Member was present at the Committee's meeting he would have had a say and felt some satisfaction in winning across his point. Maybe he had a different idea, maybe that particular issue, the discrimination clause, he would have preferred that it be left out. He certainly, in his debate, did not come across as being supportive of the working man.

This Law is not made for the lazy, it is not going to protect those who will not work and have no commitment to their employment or their choice of career. This Law is for the working man, it protects the working man and it protects the employer.

I spoke a while ago about production, I made some reference to the productive effort. It concerns me and we may well be asked what lies ahead of us in Cayman in terms of future growth and development. I believe that we as a people must commit ourselves to higher levels of productivity. Though they are a small minority, there are still too many Caymanians who do not really appreciate that the building of a country is primarily the task of its own people. A writer once wrote, "the free man is he who frees himself, the slave looks to others to free him and still remains a slave.". A country like Cayman cannot afford the parasite, the lazy and inefficient who have that hope that someone will kill and feed him. No Sir, we cannot afford that.

Many times we look with envy and admiration at a country like the United States. We may not aspire to reach the moon or control other nations, but that country teaches us one lesson, and that is that hard work, sacrifice and the imagination of its people are a prerequisite of economic development. I trust that soon those who think otherwise will learn the same thing in this country.

The Bill is a two way street, as I have been trying to get across. I feel that every manager, every employee or every employer must have a commitment to provide a reasonable and equitable reward for the work of those whom he employs. I feel that for good management/employee relations to continue and develop that every manager must be accessible to his employees, to hear their views, to try to understand their numerous problems, and try to assist them in whatever way possible to overcome their problems. This is good management practice, and this is what this country needs. As I said, it would enhance the relationship of employer and employee. It is a two way street and no longer a one way street on either side.

There has been much opposition to this Bill from the employer sector in this country. I would say to them that no amount of economic good will make our people a united people unless we try to work together, we try to come together along the right path in a democratic fashion - a path in which we will feel more and more that this place is our home, that it is our destiny. Workers, employers alike must come to this realization, workers will then do more for it, more work, more effort, more thinking, more sacrificing and more discipline, than by any other measure we can bring.

In closing, I am touched to my heart because I think this is a great day for us if we try to work together and not try to tear down everything that is put up. Let us forget the personalities, let us look at the issues, let us forget our past frustrations, and forget the history that has plagued Cayman for so long, putting us one against the other. Let us forget it, let us look at the future and let us examine carefully the relative abilities of those who are capable of leading us into meaningful effort.

I support this Bill, and I trust that all Members will give it a vote of confidence.

Thank you.

MR. PRESIDENT:

Executive Council.

Would the Mover wish to exercise his right of reply?
The Honourable Second Elected Member of

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:
and thank you very much.

Yes, Mr. President, I would like to exercise that right,

I would like to thank all Honourable Members who spoke in support of the Labour Bill, as well as those who gave it, what I take to be, their silent support. I would like to especially thank the Honourable Second Official Member of Government for his very able contribution to this debate and his clear explanation of the technical aspects of the Bill which he is highly qualified and equipped to do. This is appreciated very much by me, and I am sure, highly appreciated by the listening public which was due an explanation, especially on the legal and technical areas of the Bill.

For the past three years, every Bill except one maybe, that has been brought by this Government, the cry from the Opposition always has been "take it back to the drawing board". This has been their refrain, no matter how necessary or good the Bill was, so I did not expect that the Labour Bill would be treated any differently by them.

I believe that I endeavoured to present the Bill, to the best of my ability, in a factual and fair light, and by no means will I attempt to answer all the opposing views and unjust remarks that have been made by the Opposition. But I would take this opportunity to touch briefly on a few points which I consider merit some comment and clarification.

I have not really been able to fathom, understand or rationalise the claim that this Labour Bill is of a "slave mentality". Something has to be contradictory here because in the same breath it is claimed that the Bill is all in favour of the working class. Now, labour legislation, no matter how bad it appears to be, has just got to be several levels above slavery. To my mind labour legislation and slavery are certainly at opposite ends of the scale. So I do not really understand this comment on the Bill and I will pass on.

It is true that portions of the Antigua Labour Code were originally used to prepare a discussion draft which was circulated and a request made for public input which was well received, and which I give a great deal of credit to for the very high quality of this Labour Bill. But I dare say that the process that the Committee adopted and followed eliminated many sectors unsuitable to Cayman that resulted in numerous and necessary changes being made to the original discussion draft that today we are considering a Bill that bears little semblance to the Antigua Labour Code. I do not believe that the Antiguan could read this and identify this as their Code.

As the Member for North Side pointed out in his debate, there is a comprehensive list of changes that were made as a result of representations from a wide cross section of organizations and persons in this country. I have had indications from Associations such as the Cayman Islands Hotels and Condominium Association and the Restaurants Association that they now find the Bill acceptable to them, and certainly this would not have been the case had the Committee ignored all their recommendations.

As far as the Chamber of Commerce is concerned, dialogue was maintained with the Chamber up until the very last minute. As a result, some of the recommendations which they made were accepted - I would like to outline just a few of them.

- (1) Pay by commission arrangements was inserted in section 7(2)(e);
- (2) that an employee may not unreasonably withhold consent to payment of his salary by cheque was put in section 27(2) - I should point out here that this request was also made by the Hotel and Restaurant Associations;
- (3) mandatory reinstatement of a worker for unfair dismissal was deleted from section 49;
- (4) conditions for buildings was changed in section 54(d);
- (5) remedial notices, in section 59 - provision was made where the Director of Labour must obtain written consent from the Member responsible for labour before he can issue a closure notice on a workplace; and any operator of a workplace may ask the Grand Court to stay the effect of such a notice until the Appeal is heard;
- (6) in section 69(2) provision was made whereby enforcement of payment of an award made by the Director will be treated the same as a judgement of the Grand Court for the collection of a debt instead of a fine as it was originally stated.

These are just a few of the changes that were made as a result of recommendations from the Chamber. So any attempt to claim that the Committee did not consider representations, or only did so in minor areas is simply not true and is merely a flimsy excuse for those Members who failed to attend the Committee's meetings.

Obviously, not every recommendation from every organization or person could be accepted or entertained by the Committee, otherwise we would have indeed been attempting to be all things to all people. This, the Committee naturally readily recognised and accepted as an impossibility. The Committee also had its own views, and by majority decision in the final analysis had to decide what it considered was best for the country and our people. This was what was done.

As I pointed out in my presentation, no one is pretending that this Bill is perfect. And since this or no other Law can be expected to cover every eventuality it must be recognised and accepted that working within its provisions on a day-to-day basis is bound to produce the need for amendments in due course. I am sure that this will be found to be the case and amendments will come, we are not unmindful of this.

It is true that under the Law employers will have to document a few things that perhaps have in the past been left to verbal agreements only. But, these are the very same conditions which have created cause for change. These are the conditions which have generated misunderstandings and disputes, and are partly what this Law is intended to correct. I maintain that the little extra time taken to fill out a simple form or open up an employment record will be time well spent, and in the interests of establishing better business practices in favour of both the employer and the employee.

To say that the Law will bring a burden of record keeping to employers who will need to hire accountants, lawyers, buy computers and build store rooms is an extreme exaggeration aimed at causing undue concern and enlisting support merely for opposition sake. First of all, the statement of working conditions consists of ten basic, but important items, items which can be held on a one page standard form - items to my mind, which no employer would offer employment without first deciding himself, and which no employee would accept employment before first understanding the terms and conditions of his job. Purely for the avoidance of doubt, these items will now need to be documented. This is similar to a letter of appointment, which should be in every employee's file for the protection of both parties.

Let me just repeat the information called for:

- (1) the job title and general responsibilities.
So the scenario painted by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town about the supermarket clerk who cannot fill in for a cashier - this is only a scare tactic. Because it says "general responsibilities". And we all know that to be totally specific is impractical and almost impossible.
- (2) the hours of work;
- (3) rate of pay;
- (4) pay days;
- (5) hourly equivalent pay or rate of commission;
- (6) period of employment;
- (7) probation period, if any;
- (8) vacation entitlement;
- (9) sick leave entitlement; and
- (10) length of notice of termination that each party must give to the other.

Personally, as a small employer myself, I would feel much more comfortable having these matters clearly understood and documented before any employee walks through my door and takes up a position with my company. In the case of the claim of high turnover of staff in supermarkets, I believe that in the majority of instances at the level of clerks and cashiers, where high turnover mostly takes place, there is little differences in categories, and sometimes the only change that would have to be made is the change of name. Surely this cannot be considered an expensive and onerous task to the employer?

Nevertheless, having said all this, I would say here that I am willing to give consideration to having the Director of Labour prepare pro forma documents, covering statement of working conditions which the public could collect from the Director of Labour's office. This I believe, especially in the beginning, would be helpful to the public. It has been recommended to me by some of the Members of this House off the record, and I think it is a very good suggestion, and I do not see this as being an impossible task for the Director of Labour to undertake.

The other record keeping required is for work accounts, which is not necessary to be kept by small businesses with less than ten employees. These work accounts themselves cover only three items: (1) the time worked; (2) leave taken; and (3) basic and other wages paid.

These are the only records which the Law would require to be kept for two years, and certainly this type of record should form a part of any company's operations and any company's files. Actually, other statements which an employee may request or the registration of a work place, are really nothing more than an exchange of correspondence, just an exchange of letters. So, the administrative burdens are only enlarged in the eyes of the opponents of this Bill. Additional work, yes, especially at the start-up of this Law, but that cannot really be termed an administrative burden.

The definition of "casual employee" was claimed by one Member to be totally unknown in Cayman. A casual employee, under the Law, will be a person who is employed on an irregular or intermittent basis. This, like other sections of the Law, means exactly what it says and I believe can be easily and readily understood by those who want to understand the term. An employee can be considered as a casual employee regardless of the category of the position he so fills in a company. To my mind this term should not be confused with unskilled labour. In other words, a professional person or an unskilled or common labourer can be considered a casual employee, and as such is not entitled to benefits set out in the Law.

The other category of employee near to this is defined as part-time and this is a person who is required to work less than the standard work week, but who is contracted on a permanent basis.

Much was made of the machinery provided in this Bill in case it is decided in the future to set a national minimum wage, and there were claims that Executive Council should not be the body to do so, but that it should be done instead by the Legislative Assembly's involvement.

First of all, in the Minimum Wage Law which was passed in 1946, under that Law the Administrator whose equivalent today would be the Governor, was responsible for fixing a minimum wage - not the Vestry, as it was called, I believe, in those days. Furthermore, the provisions in this Labour Bill as regards minimum wage were taken directly from the Minimum Wage Law of 1946.

As I pointed out in my introduction to this Bill, a minimum wage for labourers was in fact set in 1967 at six shillings per hour. So this is no introduction of anything strange, new or alien to the Cayman Islands. It has been around since 1946, and since that Law is going to be repealed much of it in this section of this Bill was lifted from that 1946 Law.

Although this was another matter disputed by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, it is my humble opinion that the matter of gratuities has been adequately and properly dealt with in this Bill. For example, in section (2) a very comprehensive definition of "gratuity" is made and in the same section in the definition of "wage" it is made abundantly clear here that "wage" does not include tips or gratuities.

As one Member previously pointed out, Government did not introduce the gratuity system. It was done and put into practice by the hospitality industry at their own decision. However, as this is and has been a problem area, and an area of discontent, section 33 of this Bill intentionally leaves employers and employees free to agree how the amounts represented by gratuities, if collected, will be distributed under an agreed registered scheme.

If there is a dispute, the Director of Labour can intervene and, with the agreement of the employer and employees, register a scheme which they must then abide by. But first of all, they are given an opportunity and an option to reach their own agreement or the Governor in Council may make Regulations prescribing a scheme. To attempt to develop a standard scheme that would suit all businesses and be convenient in the hospitality industry would indeed have been an awesome task. So to my mind, the provisions made herein are the best and certainly appear to me to be acceptable to those tourist related businesses concerned and practising the collection of gratuities.

Severance pay was dealt with and to repeat here, it is important to note that the payment of severance pay comes into play upon termination of an employee's employment by his employer - not when the employee voluntarily decides that he or she is going to walk off the job - they do not get severance pay in this case. I will not go into the details of contradicting the point in this regard that was made by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, as this was very ably clarified this morning by the Honourable Second Official Member. So severance pay cannot cause any business to be left in the lurch by dozens of employees deciding that they are going to walk out, this is another invention and exaggeration.

The Committee also saw fit to bind any predecessor employer as well in his responsibility for severance pay. This was done because of cases where one employee or the other has been passed back and forth between employers, former and present, and each one saying they do not know who owes him severance pay or who has to pay him. And one can easily see the plight of the poor employee caught in such a trap, so this is the reason that was put into that section.

As much as I have heard during many hours of debate of this Bill, and I believe there is a portion of the scripture which I do not like to quote in this House, but which says something like if it were possible to deceive the very elect. I have heard enough that could even have caused that to happen. But nevertheless, nothing that I have heard against this Bill could influence me, shake my position nor cause me to believe that this Bill is not fair, reasonable and equitable both to the employer and the employee.

I believe that repetition produces emphasis, and although I have repeated some things in my closing remarks, it is important and necessary for some points to be treated in this manner. I repeat here again that this Bill, when it becomes Law, will provide employers with a clear cut position through the minimum employment standards it provides. It likewise gives employees a fair and even understanding of what their entitlements are, providing of course that they keep their part of the employment bargain.

As I have said and was said by the speaker before me, the Second Elected Member for West Bay, this is a two way street. It legalizes many of the time tested practices in our country which could disappear or change without legal support and backing. This is one of the prime reasons to have legislation.

One Member said that the employees are not getting anything more than they got previously, so why have the Law. The Law is necessary to put in place and confirm that those entitlements remain as such. It does not bring to an end bargaining power. It does not bring to an end our free enterprise system which we cherish. It does not affect the confidential relationship on which our offshore business is based. Those who claim otherwise are stretching their imagination beyond recognition of the facts, and simply denying the real benefits of this legislation to our country, benefits to our honest, hard working class of people, and benefits to our respectable and honest employers.

In conclusion, Mr. President, I once again thank Members for their support of this Bill, and I look forward to a safe passage through its remaining stages.

Thank you, Mr. President.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clauses 1 to 2 do stand part of the Bill.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I beg your pardon, Mr. Chairman, perhaps I might just mention before the question is put that there was a typographical error which we have noted in there, and I wanted to make it clear to Members that I was going to correct that by deleting, in 9.03 the word "not", and that brings it in line with the white. So that it reads: "Spirits, unsweetened, containing less than 50 per cent by volume of alcohol".

MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you. With that amendment, as noted, I put the question.

THE LABOUR BILL, 1987

CLERK: The Labour Bill, 1987.

Clause 1. Short title and commencement.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I know what you said about typographical errors being corrected by the Honourable Second Official Member. I pointed out three errors in the green copy of the Bill that had to do with words. One has since come to my attention in section 5, where, in the third line that word should be "employee" and not "employer".

MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you, yes. Did you want to mention the other two now.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: The others I mentioned at the presentation of the Second Reading.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I see. Right, thank you.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I can repeat them if ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well, no, I think you have got them in your amendments, is that so?

I would mention one thing. Your first proposed amendment, to delete the words "Trade and" in the second line of the eighth paragraph of the Memorandum, this is not in fact necessary, I have consulted the Attorney General. The Memorandum is not part of the Bill, so it is simply amended without the need for a formal motion.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Okay, Sir, that is understood. In connection with the other amendments which I have circulated, should I deal with them as we come to the individual clauses, or should I move the entire motion in dealing with clause 2?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think when we come to each clause, because one other Member has five amendments. We will take them as we come to each clause.
So we have in fact, I think, got to clause 1. Please read clause 2.

CLERK: Clause 2. Interpretation.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, in clause 2, in accordance with Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I would move the following amendment: in clause 2, by deleting the words "Trade and" from the definition of Director.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that in clause 2, the amendment stated stands part of clause 2.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 2, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

MR. CHAIRMAN: We will now take clause 1 and clause 2 as amended. The question is that clause 1 and clause 2, as amended, do stand part of the Bill.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Could I just ask for clarity if, in the definition for "employee" we have corrected or substituted "and" for "have" in the fourth line? Somebody pointed it out.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: That was one of the word corrections I made in introducing the Bill.

MR. CHAIRMAN: So we take that one in.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: It is one I have noted, and I am sure the Clerk has noted it, and we will correct that rather than amend it when we come to print the Law.

MR. CHAIRMAN: In that case, can I revert to putting the question to you that clause 1 and 2 as amended, that they do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSES 1 AND 2, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

CLERK: Clause 3. Application.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clause 3 stands part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

CLERK: Clause 4. Powers of exemption conferred upon Government.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I had given Committee stage notice of an amendment to clause 4, that clause 4 be deleted from the Bill. I do not know if you wish for me to speak on it at this stage, or whether you just ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is open to you to speak on it if you wish.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Well, just briefly. As I mentioned to the Mover of the Bill, I felt that this could cause some problems, even though I did not see it happening with yourself in Executive Council, I believe that the powers here were too wide ranging. I had also received a number of complaints about this section.

Having discussed it with the Mover of the Bill, he was generally in agreement with the deletion of this section.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, it is quite correct that we have had representations about clause 4, and in discussing this, and in reconsidering this clause it was felt that the deletion of this would not in any way weakens the Law, because there are several other provisions in the Law where the Governor in Council can make regulations. For those reasons, since it has caused considerable concern, and we have had representations from various organizations objecting to this clause, I would support that motion made by the Second Elected Member for George Town.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does any other Member wish to speak on this amendment?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. Chairman, I do not particularly want to speak on the amendment, but if the amendment is to be passed, as it appears it will be, I do have to point out that this is going to involve a complete renumbering of the rest of the Bill and the cross references. As long as the House understands that, I am quite happy to undertake that without further vote or without further formal amendment. I would just like it to be noted that we will have to renumber and re-do the cross references.

MR. CHAIRMAN: That had occurred to me, and in taking the rest of the Bill I was going to seek your agreement that we stand with the present numbering.

In that case we will take the amendment. The question is that the amendment, as circulated, stands part of the clause which will now no longer exist. Rather strange is it not? I think I had better put this question another way.

The question is that clause 4 be deleted.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 4 DELETED.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I do not think, therefore, I can now put the clause as amended.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. Chairman, no, I think it now stands deleted and one just moves on.

CLERK: Clause 5. Establishment of conditions above minimum.
Clause 6. Conformity with the Law.
Clause 7. Statement of working conditions.
Clause 8. Probation period.

Clause 9. Termination: fixed term contracts.
Clause 10. Termination by notice: employer's notice.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clauses 5 to 10 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: CLAUSES 5 THROUGH 10 PASSED BY MAJORITY.

(Second Elected Member For Bodden Town voting against)

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: May I have a Division, Mr. Chairman?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think, frankly, you may of course under Standing Orders, but I am not quite sure of the point of it. It was perfectly clear there was one vote against being that of yours. With respect, the time of the House is at stake.

I am sorry, I did not turn to see whether you were insisting on having a Division. You are not?

MR. G. HAIG BODDEN: No, Mr. Chairman. I think I may as well go.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Your privilege.

CLERK: Clause 11. Termination by notice: employee's notice.

MR. CHAIRMAN: There are two amendments on this one.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I beg to move that in clause 11(1)(b) that the following words be deleted: "subject in either case to a maximum of thirty days."

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does any Member wish to speak on that amendment?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I would just like to say, as explained in my presentation of the Bill during the Second Reading, it was felt that this part served no useful purpose but could in fact create hardships down the line for employers who had to find a replacement, for say, a professional person - an accountant, or probably at any level. For example, if they had to obtain work permits it could take much longer. I really did not see the purpose in putting a maximum time limit of 30 days on notices that had to be served in this regard. I would appreciate the consideration of the Committee in deleting this section.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Does any other Member wish to speak?
The question is that the amendment stands part of clause 11.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. AMENDMENT NO. 1 PASSED.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Now the second amendment to clause 11 as proposed, please.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Yes, Mr. Chairman, that is clause 11(2)(b). The reason for this proposed amendment is that I feel that it is unreasonable in view of the powers of the employer under section (2)(a) of that clause. Section (2)(a) reads:

"Any employee who fails to give sufficient advance notice as required in subsection (1) may at the employer's option:

- (a) be dismissed prior to the date that he intended voluntarily to quit by the number of hours or days by which the employee's notice fell short of the required period of advance notice;"

I think to also deprives that employee of all accrued vacation leave is somewhat onerous and somewhat restrictive. I believe that you could conceivably have a situation where somebody worked for eleven months and when he is about to take his leave, because the period of advance notice was somewhat breached, he is deprived of the total accrued vacation leave. I feel that this is really somewhat unreasonable and should be deleted.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, this was discussed at great length during the Committee's meetings, and it was felt that a penalty of this nature should be put into the section to discourage employees from failing to give sufficient advance notice. I do not think it is really extreme. I believe that most responsible employees would consider this fair, and I am unable to support that motion.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I was told by the Mover that he would not be able to support it, I was just hoping that I would be able to work on him during Committee stage. I would like to further say here that in (2)(a) the employee is already paying for his indiscretion in not giving the full advance notice by having the number of hours or days deducted by the employer. He is already being punished in a way for not giving the full advance notice. So it does seem somewhat unreasonable that in addition to losing that amount of pay, he has got to also forfeit all accrued vacation leave he had coming to him.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. Chairman, I tend to agree with the Mover of the Bill. This basically is one of the sections that puts some teeth in the Bill and unless there is a penalty to be paid for people walking off the job without giving proper notice it is not going to serve the purpose for which it is intended.

I do not see this causing any hardship. If a person must leave a job in order to take up another job, he must have weighed the consequences of this section. If he is only doing it out of bloody mindedness, I think he should pay the penalty.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, just to say that it might not be a case that he is doing it out of bloody mindedness, it could be that he had very little choice, and I believe the fact that he is paying by the amount of pay being deducted from what he would normally have received if he had given the full notice is sufficient punishment. But if in the eleventh month of a twelve month contract he found out that he had to leave without giving full notice, then to tell him that all the eleven months accrued vacation leave would be forfeited, to me is a bit extreme. That is extreme. Whether it passes here or not, I think that is extreme.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: Mr. Chairman I think that in considering this Bill we wanted to make sure that the employer received equally as much consideration as the employee. I believe this is one of the particular areas in which the Committee felt that it gave the employer some consideration, because this has been a problem in Cayman. There are some people, if they know they can get $100 a month more at some other place, they simply walk off the job. I believe that anyone who would be looking for another job, whether it was for more pay or whatever it is, as the Second Elected Member for George Town mentioned, it could be up to eleven months. I certainly cannot see someone wanting to walk off a month early and lose his vacation. I believe any sensible individual would hold on for a month and tell his prospective employer "Give me a month and I will be there". I think it ought to be in there.

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. Chairman, this is a big problem here in Cayman, and I do feel that if there is a penalty, we will have the employee staying on the job and we will have less roll over if we have this clause. It gives the employer a little bit of a say in the running of his business, because we have had people come in one week and the next week they leave. This is the sort of thing that has been going on. The roll over is terrific. I think this will stop the roll over.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think I gather from the course of the debate, if I may ask a question, that leave does not become due until the period has been completed which earns it. So that contractually speaking the man who leaves at eleven months has not actually earned his leave? It is a technicality, I just want to be sure about this.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: That is correct, Sir.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The other question, if I may ask, in section 11(2)(a), does this not mean that if, for example, an employee gives four days' notice instead of the seven days required, the employer can tell him to go today, pay him four days, but not the three remaining? Is that what that means?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Yes.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Okay thanks. I just wanted to be sure what it meant. Sorry, I interrupted you, I think.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: No, I was just going to agree with the question you were asking that my interpretation of it is that. I feel that, as other Members have said, this is really not extreme and I think it is a penalty that employees who fail to give the required notice should consider before taking such action.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Do you wish to put the amendment?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: No, that is fine, you can take the vote on it, Sir.

MR. CHAIRMAN: You do not wish formally to put it?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Yes, you can take the vote on it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I will put the question, then. The question is that the amendment to clause 11(2)(b) stands part of clause 11.

that it be deleted, but the technicality is that I say "do stand part of the clause". I am not turning your thing upside down. I will rephrase it as I did the last one.

clause 11(2)(b) be deleted.

The amendment proposed, and the question is, that

QUESTION PUT: AMENDMENT DEFEATED BY MAJORITY.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am sorry about that semantic confusion. I think I should now put that the question is that clause 11, as amended, stands part of the Bill. Clause 11 (1)(b) was amended. Therefore I have to put the question on clause 11 as amended.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 11 AS ONCE AMENDED, PASSED.

CLERK:	Clause 12.	Statement upon termination.
	Clause 13.	Application of leave provisions.
	Clause 14.	Vacation leave.
	Clause 15.	Part-time employees.
	Clause 16.	Public holiday pay.
	Clause 17.	Sick leave.
	Clause 18.	Sick leave pay.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clauses 12 to 18 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSES 12 THROUGH 18 PASSED.

CLERK: Clause 19. Maternity leave.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I have a Committee stage amendment on clause 19(2). It states here during the first fifteen ... to get the full text of it, I would have to read clause 19(1):

"Every female employee shall be entitled to twelve calendar weeks' maternity leave in any twelve month period."

Clause 19(2):

"During the first fifteen working days maternity leave the employee shall be entitled to the basic wage, and the employer shall pay her the basic wage, ..."

My reason for bringing the amendment to change this from fifteen working days to thirty calendar days, or one calendar month is that to reduce this to fifteen working days you are effectively only giving the female employee fifteen working days. Most of these would not be in a position to stay off on maternity leave without pay and to cut this down to fifteen working days, even though you have provided, in 19(1) for twelve calendar weeks, effectively that person would have to be back to work after the fifteen working days because she would not be able to afford to stay off for a longer period. To increase this to one month would be a more reasonable period.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Except, Sir, if this is left as it is in the Bill, it would be an incentive to get the Social Security Scheme through where they will get thirteen weeks.

(LAUGHTER)

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think that is anticipating a Bill.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: February, Sir, February.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, the Member does not have any guarantee that in its present form it is going to meet with too much success, so he had better not anticipate it.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, the Committee discussed this matter at great length as to whether it should be more than was provided for in section 19 but during discussions, the point was made that the employee will actually get three weeks maternity leave on pay. In many instances they accumulate their vacation leave which, through an arrangement between them and the employer, can be taken around that time. They are also entitled to ten days' sick leave per annum, and it was felt that to increase this really could place some employers, in some instances, at a disadvantage, because a very valuable employee could be out of office for a total of seven or eight weeks on pay altogether.

Then they are also entitled to a balance of maternity leave without pay. So you could have an office or a small operator being without a very key person for four months. It was felt that to increase this to about three weeks was really taking it a bit far. That was the view of the Committee, and I support that view, Sir.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I fully understand what the Member is saying. My only point is that even though we are providing, in 19(1) for twelve calendar weeks, we know pretty well that the female employee would not in normal circumstances be able to take this full period, and will only be able to take, in normal circumstances, the period for which she is being paid, which is around fifteen days. This is why it was felt that if it was increased from three calendar weeks to four, or one month, then it would be a more reasonable period. Even though twelve calendar weeks are provided here (three months), she would not normally be able to take that without pay. This was my reasoning behind that.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: But the point is, Mr. Chairman, that she could end up getting three weeks maternity leave on pay, two weeks vacation, which would be five, ten days sick leave which is another two weeks, which would be seven weeks altogether on pay. If that was accumulated, it would be a considerable amount.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Yes, that is assuming, of course, she had not taken the sick leave prior to that during the year.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. Chairman, I am in sympathy with the amendment being proposed by the Second Elected Member for George Town. But if I remember correctly why this was arrived at was because this was the minimum mandatory requirement. The Committee looked at small businesses. Why the twelve weeks under sub-clause 1 is there, is that if the person can basically afford to take the vacation, it guarantees her job at the end of that period. But when the other side of the coin is looked at and you think about a small business that probably can only afford to employ one person to operate it, it would mean that for the three months, the proprietor of that business would be required to hire a second person. So you are looking at 25 per cent extra expense for that year to operate the business - 25 per cent of salaries, anyway.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Effectively, Mr. Chairman, what the Member is saying then, is that we give them the three months knowing full well that they will not be able to afford to take the three months.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: No, no. The point is that if they can afford to take it, they can have it and they have their job at the end of that period. But it does not require the proprietor of a small, one-person business to be paying two persons for all of that three months. It was felt by the Committee that that extra pay could actually put the business to the wall.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Just one correction. I am not talking about paying for three months. My amendment was to extend it from three weeks to four weeks, one calendar month. I am also a small employer. The experience is that most of these people, because they cannot afford to stay off, will be forced to come back to work after fifteen working days, and whether or not we are considering the best interests of that female employee after maternity for her to have to come back to work after fifteen working days is really another question.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Actually, Mr. Chairman, we are only talking about an extra week, then, because fifteen working days is in effect three weeks. So if we are only talking about a week, I personally have no strong feelings about it. If the rest of the Members will go along, I would.

I will just point out again, that we are making better provisions under the other Bill, which I should not anticipate!

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: He keeps talking about this other Bill, Sir. I would like to hear from some of the other Members of the Committee, whether they feel that paid maternity leave should be increased by an additional week. What I outlined really was the views of the Committee that I supported at the time. I have no strong feelings against increasing that by one week, because it is really not a lot. But, as I said, if you do accumulate it, then you are looking at possibly eight weeks in total. If you take four weeks maternity leave, two weeks vacation and two weeks sick leave, if they have not had prior sick leave, then you can end up with a maternity case having been out of office for three months and getting two of those three months on pay then, that is what we are looking at.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. Chairman, I have to be consistent and supportive of the Second Elected Member for George Town's request, because this was my position in Committee. I will have to support his request at this time.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: Mr. Chairman, I tend to go along with the Second Elected Member for George Town. I do not think that most employers are going to find themselves too often in this situation. Nowadays, most young women are conscious of the number of children they are having, and so on. I tend to see this not becoming that much of a problem. I have taken into serious consideration what the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council said, and hopefully small businesses will not find themselves in this situation, because I can see that it could definitely hurt. But on the whole, I believe that it is in the interest of most mothers, because I would hate to see a mother having to come back to work under three weeks. I believe if they knew they were going to get that extra five days' pay it would make a difference.

I support this amendment.

HON. VASSEL G. JOHNSON: Mr. Chairman, I too would like to be consistent, because I know the Committee dealt with this matter of maternity leave at great length. The thing is, that as another Member mentioned, this is not pertaining to any particular business, like, say, it was referring to banks, or to Government, or to something like that. It applies right across the board, to small and large businesses alike. What is provided in the Law here is merely minimum provisions. If there is a large company that feels that it can give a month on pay, well that is entirely up to the business. But what the Law is doing is providing a minimum requirement.

I feel that there are going to be businesses of all categories, small and big, some might be able to afford four weeks, some can afford only three weeks. I think what we have to look at is that the Law provides a minimum. It protects all sizes of businesses.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. Chairman, my position always was that I was in favour of what the Second Elected Member for George Town is now proposing. But I would also like to draw Members' attention to why I am supporting it, that this provision under the Law is guaranteed in every twelve month period. It could become onerous and you could be giving them opportunities for other things if they stayed home.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, after listening to other Members' views, and reconsidering the proposed amendment myself, I have no strong objection to what is being put forward by the Second Elected Member for George Town. I have had a change of heart, and I will personally support his amendment.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. Chairman, could we have the amendment that the Second Elected Member for George Town proposed? Is he going to say one calendar month or twenty working days, what is the exact wording of his amendment?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I wonder if I could leave that for the Honourable Second Official Member to give us his advice on?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I do not actually think it matters much either way, once you have decided the principle that you are going to give a month. I think the reason we expressed the fifteen days as working days it was on the assumption that the normal working week is five days, so it was intended to be three weeks. If you wish to put it to four weeks, you can say twenty working days or you can say four weeks.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I should have thought twenty working days was better, because in terms of weekly pay, four weeks' pay.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Twenty working days, then?

MR. CHAIRMAN: I will put the amendment then. The question is that Clause 19(2) be amended by the deletion of the words "fifteen working" and the substitution of the words "twenty working".

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. AMENDMENT PASSED.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: Mr. Chairman, may I seek leave of the House at this time to propose an amendment to clause 19(4)?

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well it is actually my leave you are seeking, but obviously I would consult the will of the House. I think it is up to the Member in charge of the Bill, really. Have you had a chance to discuss this proposal?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: No, Mr. Chairman, but before we reach there, I would just like to point out in 19(2) it appears that a word has been omitted between "days" and "maternity". I think it would be "twenty working days of maternity leave".

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: No, not necessarily.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Not necessarily? Okay. I just thought that the word "of" might have been omitted from that line.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I do not think the word "of" has been omitted. I think that when I drafted it I drafted it as "twenty working days maternity leave". It may not be perfectly grammatical, but I think it suffices.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Accepted, Sir.
I do not know what the Third Elected Member for West Bay is going to be proposing as her amendment. I would have to listen to what she has to say and I will take a decision.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Then we will grant you the time, but I ought to point out as has been pointed out so many times already, this Bill was a long time coming.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: I know, Mr. Chairman, but this only just dawned on me. 19(4) says:

"Subject to subsection (3) maternity leave may be taken in whatever proportions before and after actual childbirth that the employee wishes, provided that an employee shall not work where a doctor certifies that it would, by reason of pregnancy, be deleterious to the health of the employee for her to work ...".

I wondered whether or not it would be wise to say "to the health of the employee or to the health of her unborn child for her to work" ... And then in the line following, "... with a view to determining whether it would be deleterious to her health or to that of her unborn child to continue work". Because, Mr. Chairman, there are times when the pregnant mother's health may not be in danger but working could endanger the health of the unborn child.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I would not be asking the Attorney General for a doctor's opinion, but it would seem to me that the health of the mother is a broad enough term to embrace (there is a good word for you) the unborn child as well, in the circumstances.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman I think that section goes on to say that the employer can then ask for a doctor's certificate, and a doctor's certificate would certainly verify what the situation is, if there should be any doubt at any stage.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: I know, but what I am saying is it mentions the mother's health ...

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: But I think the Chairman's point is right, that a doctor is not going to draw fine distinctions between the health of the mother and the health of the unborn child. He is going to regard them as one. And so if it is going to hurt the child ...

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: The fetus definitely belongs to the mother. I cannot see how that can be separated.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think we have now strayed beyond law, into medicine to theology. I think this has gone far enough! But I do believe that your point is covered.

MRS. DAPHNE L. ORRETT: As long as it is, because I have known of cases where they have said to someone that if she wanted to have the child she would have to get off their feet, not that it is going to interfere with her health, but that of the child.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Surely the basic thrust of any doctor's certificate in a case like this is that it would not be proper for the woman to work. That is it. Now, I think we had actually got as far as putting the question, on clause 19 as amended.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 19, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

CLERK: Clause 20. National Minimum Basic Wage.

(INAUDIBLE INTERRUPTION)

MR. CHAIRMAN: We have an amendment proposed for clause 20?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I think the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council was reminding me that I may have voted against this at some stage, but like most Members I might have had a change of heart, too. This is why it is coming forward.

I was saying here, that we should add to clause 20 the words "Governor shall fix a date for the coming into effect of a prescribed National Minimum Basic Wage". This is to ensure that even though provision is made here in the Bill and it would be subsequently in the Law, that there is no question as to this not being acted upon as speedily as possible that a basic minimum wage will be set as soon as possible. This was the reason for this amendment.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Could I ask the Attorney General's advice on that? I have the impression that in fact an Order will specify the date on which it comes into effect. If it does not, is it the date that it is signed?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: That is right, Mr. Chairman, but as I understand the Member's concern, by either this form of wording or a similar one, he wants to ensure that this is done straight away. Is that fair?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: As soon as possible, yes.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: In other words, at the moment it is permissive and the Governor in Council may or may not proceed to put this machinery in motion. I think that the Member, by moving this amendment, is seeking to put a deadline on that process to make sure it happens quickly.

MR. CHAIRMAN: If that is the case, I am not sure the amendment does do that. Because the amendment says that the Governor in Council shall fix a date. It still does not say he shall fix an early date, or the soonest possible date. So I do not think it does what you are asking for.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. Chairman, through you, could I ask the Honourable Second Official Member, it is proposed to give a six month breathing period for the penalties. Would the minimum wage not have to be put into effect within that six months period to allow the penalties for not paying a minimum wage to come into effect once it is provided for in the Law?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I do not think that the minimum wage would have to come into effect within that six months period. The minimum wage could be brought in very quickly if the Advisory Committee sat and reported quickly. It could be brought in five years from hence if they took a long time or if Government did not go ahead with it.

I do not, with respect, think that the six month moratorium on penalties is a concern as to the commencement of the minimum wage.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: In that case, Mr. Chairman, I would like to amend the Motion proposed by the Second Elected Member for George Town to say words to the effect that the minimum wage must be declared under the terms of the Law by 30th June, 1988.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I have an objection.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am sorry, I think there is a different question being raised here. This clause is permissive. It does not say there shall be a minimum wage. It says the Governor in Council may, after certain procedures, declare one.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: That is correct, Mr. Chairman, and as I recall it was the Committee's view that this should be left open ended or flexible, so that if a decision was taken to establish a national minimum wage that the provision was in place. My recollection of the Committee's deliberations is that this should be left the way it was so it was not tied to any specific time frame.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, the only problem I have with that is that, as you rightly pointed out, section 21 states that the Governor may by Order prescribe a National Minimum Basic Wage. As the Honourable Second Official Member has said, this could be any time between now and five years.

I know that there have been representations that certain classes of workers were suffering because they were being paid much below what would be regarded as a basic wage. It was felt that because of this, this amendment would make it mandatory that the Governor would have to, within a certain period, fix a minimum wage. As the Member for North Side has said, perhaps this should be by June 1988 but I realise that would be an amendment to this amendment that would have to be moved.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think it is an amendment to the Bill, because it is a completely different statement from what is in the Bill, as it is. These are permissive clauses, they are not mandatory or creative. Am I right Attorney General? You must tell me.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: You are absolutely right, these are permissive clauses as they are presently framed. They are there to permit a minimum wage to be set, but they do not compel that action to be taken.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, it is my view that the establishment of such a national minimum wage, to get the National Minimum Wage Advisory Committee in place, I think there is substantial research to be done, and to be quite honest I would not like to see this tied to a specific time frame for its introduction.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. Chairman, I have a particular desire to see a minimum wage created as early as possible, because there are some members of my constituency working in the hotel industry who are presently, as far as I am concerned, being paid below a basic minimum wage. I would be happy to leave it open ended with a commitment from the Honourable Member that one is going to be set up as soon as possible, because I know 'as soon as possible' means exactly that.

My concern is that we are abolishing a law which presently establishes a minimum wage, even though it is outdated by today's standards, it does specify a minimum wage. If we do not, as early as possible, create a basic minimum wage, I think there are some unscrupulous employers who will take advantage of people because of their geographical situation in terms of being able to seek alternative employment and so on, and pay them below the basic rate. So I am very concerned that a basic minimum wage is established as soon as possible. But I would be quite happy with an undertaking from the Member that this Committee will in fact be activated as soon as possible.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, I have heard the Member for North Side, and I would have no difficulty with proceeding along those lines. I feel that it would be acceptable to leave that section the way it is. As I have said, to tie it to a specific time-frame might cause some difficulties as far as what I see as needing to take place is concerned. I can give the Member that undertaking, and also the Mover of that amendment for the Second Elected Member for George Town the same undertaking.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I am happy with that, Mr. Chairman. The only purpose of this amendment was to basically change the word "may" to "shall" because "may" is sort of open ended, "shall" would have closed it in a little bit more. I felt that if it read, "the Governor shall by Order prescribe a National Minimum Basic Wage" that this would be a little tighter than saying he may fix it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well, I think that is a pretty substantial amendment, and goes, I think, rather beyond normal amendments. You have been given the assurance by the Honourable Member in charge.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: It is my amendment here, Sir, because it said "Governor shall fix a date for the coming into effect of a prescribed national minimum basic wage". So that would be added to it, to say that the Governor shall fix a date. But I am happy with it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well, I understand that, but I do not think that actually takes your purpose any further. Because you have got all of the rest of the procedure under the section that has to be followed, and then at the end of it, when you have actually got the Governor in Council prescribing it, then you add on your amendment. But I do not think your amendment will have hastened the process, I really do not. I think that what you are after is an assurance of action which you have been given.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I am happy with that, Sir.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Okay, right.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Is the Member withdrawing his amendment, then?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Yes, I think I am.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Well, I had assumed that from the discussion, but I will put it if you wish.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: No, I am happy with the assurance given by the Honourable Second Elected Member. I will withdraw the amendment.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Thank you. In that case, the question is that clause 20 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSE 20 PASSED.

CLERK:	Clause 21.	Minimum Wage Advisory Committee.
	Clause 22.	Penalty for not paying minimum wage.
	Clause 23.	Rest periods.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clauses 21 to 23 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSES 21 THROUGH 23 PASSED.

CLERK: Clause 24. Standard work week.

MR. CHAIRMAN: An amendment?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I again here have an amendment. This is a touchy one, Sir. I have discussed this with Members of Executive Council and I am still of the opinion that provision should be made in this clause to include one hour per day for lunch breaks, and that this should be specified in this clause to avoid any abuse. I know that even though there are situations now where people are working below the nine hours a day, that there are cases where they are working over this and not getting any overtime. I believe that provision should be made here that one hour for lunch is included in that nine hours a day.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, this section says, as I am sure the Second Elected Member for George Town knows, that this 45 hours is a maximum. From my recollection of discussions in this regard, it was decided not to set a specific time for lunch, whether it was thirty minutes or sixty minutes. It was felt that this was something better left to an arrangement between the employer and employee. Consequently I am not able to support this, Sir. I think if we get into arranging times for lunch, the number of hours that an employee puts in in one particular business might produce hardships for another type of business. It is very difficult, I think, to set this and I am not able to support that, Sir.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I was advised by the Member when I discussed this with him that he would perhaps not be in a position to support it. He nonetheless, told me that I could perhaps just go ahead with it, he might have a change of heart if I could convince him. It is just that forty-five hours a week, unless it is spelt out, you could have the abuse of an employee, you could have him having to work for the full period, with few or no breaks for lunch. Unless this is spelt out here, it is really not offering any protection to the employee in this respect.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Could I ask for clarification? I know I am not supposed to take part in these discussions, but if I may ask; this clause is about the standard working week, outside which, or in addition to which, overtime is paid. Lunch times are not, I think, referred to in the Bill anywhere. So that there are two separate things, perhaps, that we are addressing? Is that right?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I think, Mr. Chairman, the two probably come together, that if lunch times are to be included, though the standard work week is forty-five hours, in fact as people do not work through lunch times and it is a five day week, it will be forty working hours. While if lunch times are not spelt out, then it is going to be forty-five hours working before the overtime provisions have to come in. So I think that is the point the Member is driving at. May I just say that the way it is drafted, "the standard work week shall not exceed forty-five hours". The Committee picked that form of words to make it quite plain that in particular businesses the standard work week could be a lot less, by agreement, but in no case might it exceed forty-five hours.

MR. CHAIRMAN: And if it does exceed forty-five hours then overtime is payable?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: That is correct.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Well, the standard work week cannot exceed forty-five hours, if the work week that is required exceeds forty-five hours then overtime is paid.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I think the point made by the Honourable Second Official Member is quite pertinent. It is not saying whether the employee has to work without a lunch break for nine hours per day, or whether after working for nine hours, the tenth hour is the lunch break. I think because it is giving some of us some amount of confusion, it will equally lend the same problem to the employer and employee trying to work under this Bill. This is why to insert this clause would leave it beyond any sort of doubt exactly what is intended.

But to put it this way, you could conceivably have an employer requiring his employee to work a full nine hours a day, and he would have to account for his lunch break whatever time after that nine hours, when in fact within that nine hours there should be some period, whether it is an hour, half an hour, whatever, for a lunch break. After the nine hours you would deal with the overtime, but that nine hours would include a period for lunch breaks.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I see the Member looking at me, but really I think it is whether the normal day should be nine hours plus a lunch break, or eight hours plus a lunch break, or whether we are looking in some industries at a longer working week than five days, maybe five and a half days with a Saturday morning and so on, are not legal questions. In the end it is a policy issue. At the moment, in my construction, if the Member is asking what I think the section means, I think it says that it refers to forty-five working hours. Lunch hours I do not think are working hours.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: So it means then the employee, as a minimum period, is working nine hours a day and he has to account for his lunch after working nine hours a day? This is really what it is saying.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: It relates to forty-five hours work. That is correct. And if you put in your recommendation you would end up with a forty hour week. In Committee we had representations from various organizations that wanted it to be forty hours. Some organizations wanted it to be fifty and after several weeks of discussion, the Committee settled on forty-five. I think that is striking a happy medium. I am still not able to support that amendment.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The Honourable First Official Member.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. Chairman, as we are at about 4:30 P.M., I would at this time under Standing Order 83, move the suspension of Standing Order 10 to allow the proceedings of the House to continue until we can finish the business completely this afternoon.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that Standing Order 10(2) be suspended.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED

MR. CHAIRMAN: Please continue.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I think I am sort of flogging this one to death. I do not mind if you would like to take a vote on it, I would like a vote taken on it.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I wonder, before we put it to a vote, at the risk of flogging a dead horse or whatever it is we are doing - there are two things here. As I understand it, this section prescribes a standard work week in order that the next section can say that overtime will be paid beyond that forty-five hours. It has nothing to do with how that forty-five hours is made up, whether it has ten minutes for breakfast and an hour for lunch or whatever. It is simply the number of hours worked in a week, after which overtime is payable.

I think, with respect, you are introducing another question into this. I am not sure that it is going to help the clarity of the situation to bring lunch hours into this section.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. Chairman, through you, could I ask the Honourable Second Official Member whether this forty-five hour work week, as it now appears in the Law, cannot be further clarified through regulations under the Law to say that the forty-five hours includes lunch times, or whether that goes beyond?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: I think at the moment that goes beyond the regulating power. I do not think the Committee had intended, in the Law, to address whether people should have lunch times or not, nor do I think that is the Member's concern in bringing the amendment. The question we have been, I think, clearly debating is eloquently summed up by the Honourable Second Elected Member of Executive Council, it is whether it is a forty hour working week or forty-five hour working week.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, I feel that to omit clarifying this point is going to put the employee and employer at the same time in a sort of a confused situation. Because if he interprets it the way I do then it seems as if we are setting minimum standards here, where the employer could ask the employee to work for forty-five hours a week, nine hours a day, and he would have to account, after working for nine hours a day, for lunch anywhere he can get it, whether it is at the end of the day or whenever. He would have to work nine hours a day. I believe it would be much easier on the employer and employee if we had this specified in here, that in this nine hours a day or forty-five hours a week, that periods for lunch would be accounted for.

I do not think that the Labour Law should omit that, because it is really not going to make the situation for the employee any better than it is perhaps now, if we omit that.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: Mr. Chairman, while I support the forty hour work week, I think that what the Second Elected Member for George Town is addressing in a lot of instances is going to have to be settled on the letter of contract and terms of conditions as to when your lunch entitlement is and what it is during that 165 hour work week. I think that is the point where the employee and the employer have to settle the issue of lunch times, coffee breaks, and so on. I was supporting it, because I have always advocated a forty hour work week, and it would just have been a clever way of getting my little thing through.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. Chairman, I see the point the Second Elected Member for George Town is trying to make, but I would point out that not all lunch breaks are of one hour duration, nor is it always convenient that it be an hour.

That is why I think the Committee arrived at this forty-five hours because there are some forms of employment where the work day in fact is separated by more than one hour, for example in the hotel trade it is not uncommon for some people to go in the morning and do a period, and then go back in the afternoon, with much more than one hour separating it.

In fact, I have had representation by people in the hotel industry that this forty-five hours is going to work to their disadvantage. So I think if we have been bold enough to put this in the Law, we are not doing badly. As the Member said, we certainly had recommendations for a longer work week. We struck a happy medium but it is not just a straight case of half an hour or an hour. That would be fine, if all jobs could permit for that to be done. There are some jobs that, because of the nature of the work, the lunch period is necessarily longer than one hour.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Could I ask legal clarification again? Clause 24 does not say that the minimum working week will be forty-five hours. It says the standard working week. It can in the context only refer to the next clause which is payment of overtime. It does not prevent an employer and an employee contracting to work a sixty hour week, for example. What it does say is that over 45 hours he will be paid overtime. I wanted to get that straight, I am sorry to hammer the point, but I think we are introducing a different question, which is the conditions of work rather than the hours of work. I do think the amendment, as tabled, will reduce it to a forty hour week, after which overtime is payable. It still will not stop the employer and employee contracting to work sixty or eighty or forty-eight hours or whatever they choose.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, that is correct, because clause 25(1) says "An employer shall pay overtime pay to an employee for every hour of work in excess of the standard work week", which is forty-five hours.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Is that right?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Yes, Mr. Chairman, the standard work week is simply the mechanism for deciding when overtime pay kicks in.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I think there may be another point here. For example, if the Labour Inspector goes around inspecting conditions of work and finds that people are being worked for nine hours without a break, that surely is not acceptable conditions of work?

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: I guarantee this will not happen, you will not work them for nine hours a day.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Mr. Chairman, maybe we could get an undertaking that the appropriate regulations would be made under the Law to spell out exactly the conditions of that, since we cannot put it here in the Law.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I would have to give that some consideration, Sir, I have to be careful with all these undertakings I am giving this evening.

MR. CHAIRMAN: It is an undertaking to consider ...

HON. J. LEMUEL HURLSTON: Mr. Chairman, clause 24(2) does seem to give some flexibility, in that, by an Order, Executive Council could vary in any particular industry where difficulty may come to notice.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER: We have put that in for the contractors who claim they are going to have a 27 per cent increase. If they start to abuse it we can lock them up.

MR. CHAIRMAN: I wonder if it would be acceptable, as the Member has given an undertaking to consider the point? I think on the fact of it the amendment will not be carried because of its implications.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: I am just wondering if the Honourable Member gave an undertaking?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I really did not give an undertaking, Mr. Chairman. I just said maybe it is something that could be considered, because at this stage, I am not sure to what extent you could deal with this under regulations. I suppose I could say that I would consult with my colleagues and also with the Honourable Second Official Member in this regard to see to what extent this can be done, but I would not like to give an undertaking that it would be ...

MR. CHAIRMAN: I am sorry, I was perhaps using the word too precisely - an undertaking to consider something does not strike me as being an undertaking to do it. But you are prepared to consider the point with your colleagues.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: I have no problem with an undertaking to consider, Sir.

HON. CAPT. CHARLES L. KIRKCONNELL: Mr. Chairman, we have spent more time on this clause, than on any other clause in the Bill. We had representations from the Restaurants Association, they wanted fifty hours, the hotels wanted forty-eight hours, the contractors wanted forty-five, the banks said thirty-seven and a half, some other places forty, so we figured that forty-five hours was a happy medium. That is why we settled on forty-five.

MR. CHAIRMAN: Do you wish to go ahead with the amendment, that is the question?

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Yes, Sir.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that the amendment as circulated for clause 24 do stand part of clause 24.

QUESTION PUT: AYES AND NOES.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON: Just for the record, Mr. Chairman, I would like a Division on this.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Would you like me to check the minutes to see whether you voted against that? (laughter)

AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 24(1) DEFEATED BY MAJORITY

QUESTION PUT: CLAUSE 24 PASSED.

CLERK: Clause 25. Occasions for overtime pay.
Clause 26. Overtime pay.
Clause 27. Form of wages.

MR. CHAIRMAN: The question is that clauses 25 to 27 do stand part of the Bill.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. CLAUSES 25 THROUGH 27 PASSED

CLERK: Clause 28. Deductions.

MR. CHAIRMAN: An amendment, please.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Mr. Chairman, in accordance with Standing Order 52(1) and (2) I beg to move that in clause 28(2)(d) that the following be added after the word "work", the words being:

"other than a deduction for any shortfall in a cash float provided to the employee."

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Does any Member wish to speak?

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

I would just like to say Mr. Chairman, that it was felt that it was necessary for an employer to be able to make such a deduction from an employee's salary who has been made responsible for a cash float in their particular line of work. Otherwise you could have a situation, especially in the hotel and restaurant businesses, where an employee is responsible for a cash float of, say, $100 or $200 and there is a shortfall. If this was not added, the employer would not be able to make such a deduction. So I feel that this is necessary, and I would be grateful for the support of Members.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

Does any other Member wish to speak?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Perhaps, Mr. Chairman, I might just say that this amendment fits in to section 28(2)(d) by way of removing such deductions from the prohibition on deductions for bad or negligent work. Somebody who is to be made subject to such a deduction is still going to have to agree to it in principle beforehand in writing, in their contract of employment, under section 28(3)(e) so it can qualify as a deduction to be made. I make that point because it is a safeguard. The employee who is to be subject to such a deduction, before he accepts the cash float is going to have to agree in writing, that he understands that he is getting it on the terms that if he mismanages it he is going to be subject to a deduction from his salary.

MRS. DAPHNE ORRETT:

Is that the right sub-clause?

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:
cannot hear them!

Mr. Chairman, Members are whispering at me, but I

MR. CHAIRMAN:

We seem to have some confusion over which subsection we are talking about. I had understood the amendment to relate to 28(2)(d).

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

That is correct, Sir. I think the Honourable First Elected Member of Executive Council is of the opinion that it should have gone under subsection (3)(e) or some other area.

MR. D. EZZARD MILLER:

He is celebrating Christmas you do not have to worry about his opinion.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

No, Sir, I see that this is "other than", but I still would have thought that since subsection (2) was dealing with those from whom it was not possible to make any deductions in respect of, that it would have been better placed under (3).

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

It works either way.

MR. CHAIRMAN:

assurance we are wanting.

Well, this is the point, if it works, that is the

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

I will not argue the point, if he is satisfied.

MR. LINFORD A. PIERSON:

Mr. Chairman, I tend to agree that it would be much clearer, since section (3) deals with the deductions if it had been perhaps made (f) of section (3), and that section (2) was left as it is now. I think it would be much clearer that way.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND:

Perhaps I might respond to that by explaining the thinking behind it, whether it answers the question or not, I do not know. But the thinking behind it was that the deduction would be made under subsection (3)(e). In other words, the man would authorise it in writing in his contract of employment and then it is not debarred by 28(2)(d) because we put the proviso in. It is convoluted and I hold my hands up in admission to the fact that it is convoluted. It nevertheless will work this way.

I may also say that an eminent lawyer from the private sector suggested it to go this way, and that is where the thinking came from.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN:

Mr. Chairman, I have an undertaking from the Honourable Second Official Member of Government that it works well where it is, and while it might look more, I suppose, logical to us that it should have gone in subsection (3), once it works where it is, I am satisfied.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS:

It is tied to negligent work, so it had to go under (2).

I am not going to make an issue of it Sir. I see it is Well, we all seem to mean the same thing, so I will Clause 68. Procedure to be followed on complaint to Director.

HON. RICHARD W. GROUND: Mr. Chairman, if I might just interrupt the Clerk on clause 68. There is a misprint in this Bill which I ought to draw to the attention of Members, because it is something I will be wishing to correct. In 68(4) if you look at it is obvious that a line has been missed out. The words that have been missed at the end are: "determine the procedure to be followed", coming after "shall". Those words were not only in the original discussion Bill as circulated, but they are also in the white copy. So the way it would read is, after the words "the Director shall", the new words are "determine the procedure to be followed.". I think Members will see that it does not make sense without that. So I would be seeking to correct that, rather than amend it when we print the Law.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

MR. PRESIDENT: Presentation of Papers and Reports, the Honourable the First Official Member.

GOVERNMENT MINUTE ON THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE'S REPORT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, in accordance with Standing Order 74(7), I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Government Minute on the Public Accounts Committee Report, and on the Auditor General's Report of the Accounts of the Cayman Islands' Government for the year ended 31st December, 1986.

MR. PRESIDENT: The paper is accordingly tabled.

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, it is usual in the past that I would read the contents of the Minute, but as we are moving on to long hours of the evening, I propose not to do so in this case.

CLOSING REMARKS

MR. PRESIDENT: Before the Honourable First Official Member moves the adjournment perhaps I might say a few words, and I too recognize the lateness of the hour.

First, Members may recall a note circulated earlier in this meeting about the proposed dates for the 1988 Meetings of this House. It appears that the dates proposed were convenient to Members so I will confirm them as:

The Opening and Throne Speech:	12th February
Second meeting:	18th April
Third meeting:	7th September

I shall confirm these dates to you in writing shortly. Secondly, on behalf of all of us, may I record our gratitude to the Clerk, the Deputy Clerk, the Serjeant-at-Arms and all the staff of the House for their able and willing support of our proceedings.

Third, may I express my appreciation to Members for their courtesy, patience and good humour towards each other and to the Chair. This has not only been the usual heavy sitting for the Budget, but it has seen the passing of a piece of very important legislation, the Labour Bill.

Finally, may I wish, on behalf of Mrs. Scott and myself, to all Members of the House and to their families and to our staff and their families, a peaceful and happy Christmas and a prosperous New Year.

May I now invite the Honourable First Official Member to move the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

HON. THOMAS C. JEFFERSON: Mr. President, I am happy this afternoon to move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 12th February, 1988.

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: Mr. President, on behalf of the Elected Members of Executive Council, could I wish for you and Mrs. Scott and your family a merry Christmas and a happy New Year? I would like to also extend these wishes to all of the Elected Members, the Clerk, the Deputy Clerk, the Sergeant-at-Arms and all the staff of the Assembly.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, as we come to a close ...

HON. BENSON O. EBANKS: The Member has given way, Mr. President. I realise I omitted the Official Members of Government in my good wishes, and I would like to say that I have included them.

MR. PRESIDENT: They looked very cast down.

HON. W. NORMAN BODDEN: Unpardonable.

MR. W. McKEEVA BUSH: Mr. President, as we come to a close amid this advent season, I would not fail to do as I have usually done at this time of the year, with, of course, the indulgence of the House seeing we are pressed for time.

But as we look back at our legislative year, it was a long and gruelling year for us as legislators, and each year it seems it becomes more demanding. But it only highlights the stages we are going through. Rapid development brings rapid change of life-styles, and unhappily, a loosening of our moral values and other attitudes as a country. Therefore we as representatives are called upon in diverse ways which were hitherto not usual. Although time consuming and sometimes a great amount of pressure is applied, I believe all of us in the final analysis find the greatest amount of satisfaction in knowing we helped someone in this country.

I believe when we are judged that it can be said we did our best as legislators. We are moving ahead progressively. The need is there for all of us to make sure we move together.

Mr. President, on behalf of this side of the House, seeing that it is your first Christmas here, we trust that you and your family will have a joyous Christmas and a rewarding New Year. We would wish, too, to all Elected Members and Official Members, the Sergeant-at-Arms, our good Clerk, her Deputy and her staff all God's blessings at this Christmas season, and a healthy New Year.

I am reminded of the words of the wonderful carol, "a thrill of hope the weary world rejoices, for yonder breaks a new and glorious morn.". That is it, Sir. A thrill of hope.

May God bless our people as we move in to the close of this year, and bring us safely into the New Year. Have a good Christmas.

MR. PRESIDENT: The question is that this House do stand adjourned until 10:00 a.m. on 12th February, 1988.

QUESTION PUT: AGREED. AT 5:10 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10:00 A.M. FRIDAY 12TH FEBRUARY, 1988
