FRIDAY
3RD MARCH, 1995
9.41 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the minister to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Rev. Godfrey Meghoo: Let us Pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

I will, ask the Clerk to read the Proclamation summoning the new Session of the Legislative Assembly.

PROCLAMATION NO.5 OF 1995

The Clerk: "Proclamation No. 5 of 1995.

By His Excellency Michael E. J. Gore, Commander of the Royal Victorian Order and Commander of the Most Excellent Order of the British Empire, Governor of the Cayman Islands.

WHEREAS, section 46 (1) of the Constitution of the Cayman Islands provides that the Sessions of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands shall be held at such places and begin at such times as the Governor may, from time to time, by Proclamation appoint;

NOW THEREFORE I, the Governor, by virtue of the power conferred on me by Section 46 (1) of the Constitution of the Cayman Islands, do hereby proclaim that a Session of the Legislative Assembly of the Cayman Islands shall be held at the Legislative Assembly Building in George Town, on the Island of Grand Cayman, beginning at 10.00 a.m., on Friday, the 3rd of March, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Ninety-Five.

Given under my hand and the Public Seal of the Cayman Islands at George Town in the Island of Grand Cayman, this 10th day of February in the year of our Lord, One Thousand Nine Hundred and Ninety-five in the Forty-third year of the Reign of Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II.

God Save the Queen."

The Speaker: I now recognise the Leader of Government Business.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I apologise for my lateness.

I rise and propose that this House do rise to await His Excellency the Governor and re-assemble on his arrival to receive a Gracious Message from the Throne.

The Speaker: The question is that the Assembly do rise to await His Excellency the Governor and re-assemble on his arrival to receive a Gracious Message from the Throne.

I shall put the question. Those in favour, please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Ayes have it. The House will accordingly arise and re-assemble on His Excellency's arrival. The proceedings are accordingly suspended.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 9.45 A.M.

ARRIVAL OF HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR
(10.00 AM)

The Serjeant-at-Arms
The Speaker
His Excellency the Governor and Mrs. Gore
The ADC

The Clerk of the Legislative Assembly
The Deputy Clerk

The Serjeant-at-Arms: His Excellency The Governor.

The Speaker: Your Excellency, I have pleasure in inviting you, sir, to address the Honourable House.

THE THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR
MR. M E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE

Madam Speaker and Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly, it is with great honour and humility that I present the speech from the Throne.

A year ago when Her Majesty addressed you during her second, memorable visit to the Cayman Islands, she spoke of the economic problems then facing the region. I am afraid that I must repeat that message this year. We are not alone in having to face economic problems. I do not think there is any country in the world which has not been adversely affected by the recession. But Cayman enjoyed exceptional growth in the 1980s, and it has taken a while for us to realise how necessary it is to keep Government spending within the resources now available to us.

In 1994 Cayman faced one of the most serious problems it has encountered in recent times - the influx of illegal Cuban migrants to our shores. Over the past 35 years we have from time to time received small numbers of Cuban migrants but between August and September last the number suddenly climbed to 1,183. This severely stretched the limited number of staff in the Immigration, Police, Social Services, Public Works, District Administration and Prison departments as they tried to cope with unprecedented numbers of Cuban migrants. The financial resources of the government have also been stretched to the point where capital projects may have to be reduced. While some of the illegal migrants have been transported to Guantanamo Bay, the financial burden on this country is still significant.

We have been loath to return the Cubans to Havana but because of the enormous cost to this government and the unacceptable pressure on our services (Police, Social Services, Immigration, etc.) I regret that we may have to resort to forcible repatriation of those who do not go to Guantanamo Bay or to third countries. This is particularly the case of those who arrived in the Cayman Islands after 16th September last when the Cuban government closed its borders again. The Cuban authorities have agreed to accept these people back.

Ever since the influx of Cuban migrants last year, the need for a Cayman regiment has been more evident. Recently a government delegation went to Bermuda to observe that country's regiment. The Government is now considering setting up a Cayman Islands Regiment to assist the country in times of need, particularly in times of natural disaster, and a Cadet Corp - as a disciplined service where young people can be given guidance in self-control and discipline.

That said, Cayman is one of the more fortunate countries in the world with a standard of living and, perhaps even more important, a quality of life second to none. I should like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to churches of all denominations who look after our spiritual well-being and who serve the community in so many ways, as well as to the voluntary organisations who look after those less able to look after themselves or concern themselves in areas which are outside the scope of Government, and to all residents who contribute to make the Cayman Islands such a wonderful place in which to live.

Let me now proceed to report on the activities and intentions of the various ministries, portfolios and departments.

THE JUDICIARY

The improvement of court administration, including the upgrading of the building and more extensive use of computers, is a goal for 1995. The difficulties in enforcing court orders are being addressed by proposed amendments to the Judicature Law which are already approved as a Bill and by the redrafting of the Grand Court Rules. The collection of Court fees will be simplified. A review of the Legal Aid system has begun.

Priorities will be established for detailed consideration and, where accepted, the findings of the review of court procedures prepared for the Chief Justice by Mr. Michael Bradley last year will be implemented.

THE PORTFOLIO OF INTERNAL AND EXTERNAL AFFAIRS

The Portfolio of internal and External Affairs saw a change in its leadership in late 1994 with the retirement of Chief Secretary Mr. J. Lemuel Hurlston, and the appointment of Mr. James M. Ryan in November as his successor. Mr. Donovan Ebanks became the new Deputy Chief Secretary.

The Civil Service reached another milestone during 1994 as their General Orders were amended to remove the sections which in the past discriminated against female officers. Now for the first time male and female officers are treated equally.

I will shortly be appointing a Committee, which will be chaired by the Chief Secretary, to carry out a comprehensive review of the General Orders and the Public Service Commission Regulations. This review is intended to bring these regulations in line with the needs of a professional civil service in the nineties and beyond.

Consideration is now being given to amending the Elections Law to allow for a permanent register of voters as well as to streamline procedural deficiencies which have been identified in the law.

THE ROYAL CAYMAN ISLANDS POLICE FORCE

The Royal Cayman Islands Police Force are under new command with the appointment of Mr. Anthony Grey as Commissioner of Police last month. The drugs task force also has a new head, Det. Chief Superintendent Derrick Haines.

Public concern has been understandably raised by the high incidence of burglaries during the past year. The Police continually review their methods of dealing with these and other problems, but must rely heavily on the cooperation of the general public in taking simple measures to safeguard their property.

Last year's increase in the establishment of the Royal Cayman Islands Police enabled its operational capabilities in drugs interdiction and uniformed patrols to be significantly enhanced.

Practical benefits of increased drug arrests and a reduction of most other crimes flowed from this extra manpower. The Royal Cayman Islands Police will seek to maintain, and where possible, improve still further on these results.

The continued co-operation of all law-abiding citizens is a vital element in curbing crime. Such co-operation is on the increase and must remain a strong partnership if crime levels are to be reduced. Special mention must be made of the success of the ongoing Crime Stoppers programme.

The Cayman Islands remain one of the safest countries in the world in which to live or visit and the Royal Cayman Islands Police are committed to Government's policy to ensure that they remain so.

THE PRISON DEPARTMENT

The Prison has maintained a high standard of operational efficiency in complying with its mission statement to keep in custody those committed by the courts and to look after them with humanity and help them lead law-abiding and useful lives in custody and after release.

The approved funding for 1995 will enable the department to provide an education program which will give inmates an opportunity to improve their educational qualifications.

Job training and interviews to secure employment on release, with a follow up programme will be put in place this year.

Drug counselling, in conjunction with the counselling centre will be given high priority.

The prison will continue to be involved in community projects and assist the Department of the Environment.

As in the past, the Prison department will strive to achieve the best standards of efficiency and economy in its management.

THE DEPARTMENT OF IMMIGRATION

In 1994 we saw the consolidation and settling down of the Immigration Law, 1992 (as amended in 1993). It is proving to be a robust and effective piece of legislation in terms of both port control and enforcement activity.

The work of the Immigration department has been seriously disrupted by the recent arrival of Cuban Asylum Seekers. A trickle of Cuban arrivals, prior to August, had become a torrent leading to almost 1,200 arrivals by the beginning of September. The strain of human and financial resources placed on Government has been considerable. A primary objective for 1995 will be to attempt to assist the Cubans to move on to other destinations, conduct the appeals process and arrange resettlement for the refugees as appropriate.

Considerable priority will be given in 1995 to reviewing the shift patterns of Immigration Officers, recruiting essential staff and reducing levels of overtime payment.

This year it is expected that a review of the other primary legislation of our main (Immigration) Laws, namely, The Local Companies (Control) Law and the Trade and Business Licensing Law will be carried out.

It will also be appropriate in 1995 to review the Directions to the Immigration Board. Immigration workloads have increased across the full range of responsibilities: work-permits applications, port arrivals, application for extensions, enforcement activity and latterly, refugee work. Our policies, procedures and resources will have to be reviewed accordingly in the light of these developments.

INFORMATION AND BROADCASTING

The department of Broadcasting and Information will strive to build on its achievements in all aspects of operations for 1995. It will continue to provide a service to the people of the Cayman Islands which is in keeping with the objectives of the department. Special attention will be placed on the community's general educational needs, cultural mores, and religious heritage in an effort to maintain the Caymanian way of life.

DISTRICT ADMINISTRATION

The economic growth and development of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman remains dependent on Grand Cayman. Government continues to be the major employer, and financial input to the Islands. Tourism has experienced a satisfactory occupancy level, especially in Little Cayman.

In January Cayman Brac had a call from a cruise ship for the first time and although local businesses did not gain much financially, it is felt that future regular stops could be very beneficial. Every effort was put forward to make the visit the success it was.

At the end of January Mr. Oswell Rankine, District Commissioner retired from the civil service. Replacing him as temporary District Commissioner is Mr. Joel Walton, the Deputy Financial Secretary.

Little Cayman

Tourism continues on the up-swing with more condos being built. The newly completed villa/restaurant complex (Paradise Villas) is now open. Phase I of a hurricane shelter/civic centre has now been completed.

Cayman Brac

During 1994 the emphasis was concentrated on maintenance projects rather than on new projects, although a new community park was started in West End and this continues to be developed during 1995.

It is our hope that with a strong infrastructure in place, some companies and other professional organizations will consider establishing satellite offices in Cayman Brac as there could be significant savings in operational and administrative costs on that Island.

PERSONNEL, TRAINING, MANAGEMENT AND COMPUTER SERVICES

The work of the Personnel and Training Department will be involved in the comprehensive revision of General Orders and Public Service Commission Regulations which I spoke of earlier. The job evaluation exercise will be completed. Human resource development programmes will be targeted to improve public sector performance and increase levels of individual skill and competence.

During 1995 Computer Services will implement major new or replacement systems for the Courts, Attorney General's Chambers, Police, Customs, Companies Registry, Financial Services and Planning Departments. This will improve the function and reliability of existing computer systems by continuing the move to ORACLE-based applications and PC networks as appropriate. Preparatory work will be undertaken for the introduction of new Government financial and personnel administration software which will provide departments with better management information.

THE LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY

During the term of the present Legislature, various Select and Standing Committees have been appointed. Reports have been tabled at the completion of the Committees' deliberations but final Reports of the Committees as listed below, with the exception of that of the Penal Code, are still to be tabled. Information of the various Committees that have not yet tabled final Reports are as follows:

- (i) The Select Committee to Consider A Register of Interest for the Legislative Assembly was established on June 9, 1994, with the passing of Private Member's Motion No. 11/94. The Committee held three meetings during 1994 and tabled an Interim Report in December 1994. The Committee will continue its deliberations during 1995.
- (ii) The Select Committee to Consider a Code of Ethics and Conduct for Legislators. Private Member's Motion No. 29/94, passed on December 7, 1994, resolved that the House refer the matter of legislation for a Code of Ethics and Conduct for Legislators to the Select Committee now reviewing the Register of Interest for Members and that the legislation in relation to the Code of Ethics be considered as "Companion" legislation. The Committee will therefore commence consideration of this matter in 1995 as part of its terms of reference.

- (iii) The Select Committee to Review The Gambling Law. Private Member's Motion No. 25/94, entitled, "Amendment to the Gambling Law" was defeated by a majority on September 29, 1994. However, on a motion moved in accordance with Standing Order 24(9)(ii) by the Honourable Second Official Member, it was passed by a majority that "the matter" be referred to a Select Committee. The Committee tabled an Interim Report on December 8, 1994 and will continue its deliberations during 1995.
- (iv) The Standing Select Committee to Review the Sunday Trading Law. With the passing of Government Motion No. 7/94 on September 12, 1994, the Standing Select Committee to review the Sunday Trading Law was appointed. The Committee held two meetings. Public input has been invited. The Committee will continue its deliberations during 1995 and individuals/entities that have expressed a desire to make personal representation will be invited to meet with the Committee on this very important piece of legislation.

The Select Committee to Review the Penal Code was established on March 25, 1993, with the passing of Private Member's Motion No. 1/93, moved by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and seconded by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

The Committee held 13 meetings during the period June 1993 to October 1994. The Second and Final Report of the Committee was tabled in the Legislative Assembly on December 1, 1994. In accordance with the terms of reference of the Committee, the recommendations of the Committee have been referred to the Legislative Draftsman for preparation of the draft legislation.

The Select Committee to consider the Bill of Rights will continue to meet during 1995 and recommendations will then be made.

THE CAYMAN ISLANDS GOVERNMENT OFFICE IN THE UNITED KINGDOM

The Cayman Islands Government Office, together with the Department of Tourism and Cayman Airways Offices in London, moved to alternative premises last month, with substantial savings in rental, as well as increased space.

THE PORTFOLIO OF LEGAL ADMINISTRATION THE LAW SCHOOL

1994 marked the graduation of the first students from the recently-introduced University of Liverpool Bachelor of Laws (Honours) degree with all eleven graduates achieving a second class degree (two at upper level). The guest of Honour at the graduation ceremony was His Honour Judge Stephen Tumin, Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons, who was appointed by the Attorney General as the Law School's first Senior Honorary Fellow.

In 1995 it is expected that ten further students will graduate from the Honours degree programme and one student from the Bachelor of Laws degree programme. This will bring the total number of graduates since the first ceremony in 1987, to fifty four.

The announcement by the Right Honourable Lord Templeman, the Law School's first Patron, of his intention to retire in 1994 was received by the Law School with much sadness. Lord Templeman had been appointed Patron in 1987. The Law School was honoured, however, to report the acceptance by Lord Nicholls of the invitation to become the new Law School Patron. Lord Nicholls, a graduate of Liverpool University, will be attending the Law School's graduation ceremony in 1995.

LEGISLATIVE DRAFTING

1994 was a busy year for the Legislative Drafting department; 18 Bills were passed by the Legislative Assembly and some 30 Regulations and Orders were drafted. The Attorney-General considers it appropriate to recruit a second Legislative Counsel and hopes that a suitable candidate will shortly be found.

LAW REVISION

The Law Revision Commissioner has begun his task and to date 18 revised Laws have been approved by Executive Council. The process will continue during 1995 and revised Laws will be published on a regular basis.

LEGAL DEPARTMENT

Possibly the most notable achievement of 1994 was the successful prosecution of the persons involved in the robbery at Cayman National Bank

The department continues to embrace specialization through local recruitment and training. A Caymanian Crown Counsel is presently studying in Rome at the International Development Law Institute. The Attorney-General is also hoping to recruit in 1995 an Attorney with particular expertise in prosecuting Commercial or White Collar Crime.

THE PORTFOLIO OF FINANCE AND DEVELOPMENT

In 1994 the Portfolio of Finance and Development amended key financial services legislation, revised company fees, and produced the Medium Term Financial Strategy and Public Sector investment document. A study of factors affecting local insurance rates and the Government's own insurance programme was also completed. The Portfolio successfully hosted the Red Ensign Conference.

The Portfolio has recently hosted conferences in New York, London and Hong Kong to promote financial and shipping services. It is proposed to introduce new legislation to foster the development of the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange and further amendments to the Mutual Funds, Insurance and Company Laws. A revision of Government's Financial and Stores regulations is also planned.

THE CUSTOMS DEPARTMENT

In 1994 the Customs Department exceeded its revenue expectations with a record total collection of CI$61.6 million.

In 1995 the department will continue to thoroughly examine loose and containerised cargo and will maintain vigilance in the areas of prohibited imports such as narcotics and firearms. Joint drug awareness courses with the Royal Cayman Islands Police as a means of strengthening cooperation between the two organisations will be held. The department also plans to develop a Commercial Fraud Unit. The major capital project planned for 1995 is the Phase 2 extension of the Customs Office at the Owen Roberts International Airport to accommodate the remainder of the Customs staff currently situated in the Tower Building.

THE GENERAL REGISTRY AND SHIPPING DEPARTMENT

General Registry and Shipping performed well in 1994. A number of Government initiatives resulted in a record number of companies being registered. Five thousand four hundred and nine (5409) companies were added to the register bringing the total number on the register at the end of the year to 31,612 companies. The revenue for this period exceeded CI$16 million. Improvements in efficiency have been achieved by organisational and system changes.

In 1995 further enhancement to the computer system will be undertaken to allow limited electronic access by the private sector to the Registry database. To sustain the increased growth in the register the department will be reorganised and additional staff recruited.

The Shipping function, namely Marine Survey and Shipping Registration, have been integrated and staffing levels and administrative procedures streamlined to provide an improved and responsive service to existing and potential ship owners. There has been a healthy growth in Yacht registration and a new marketing strategy has been developed to promote the register which should lead to a further growth in the size of the commercial ship register in 1995.

Representation at major shipping exhibitions in France and Norway are planned. As international pressures on sub-standard ships continue to mount it should place quality registers such as Cayman in an increasingly strong position.

THE ECONOMIC & STATISTICS OFFICE

The amalgamation of the former Economic Development Unit and the Statistics Office to form the Economics and Statistics Office has progressed extremely well. A further strengthening of the economics section is envisaged for 1995. The office has completed its second year of monthly Visitor Exit Surveys and has been generating visitor expenditure statistics on a quarterly basis. In addition to the regular publications the office compiled the first set of balance of payments statistics with assistance of the Eastern Caribbean Central Bank.

THE BUDGET AND MANAGEMENT UNIT

The Budget and Management Unit is now fully integrated after the amalgamation and completion of cross training. In 1994 the unit completed Inspections of the Planning Department, the Central Planning Authority and the Health Services Department. Organisational and Efficiency reviews were completed in Company Registration, Information and Broadcasting and Immigration and Customs service in District Administration.

In 1995 the Unit plans to streamline budget procedures and conduct major reviews in the Department of Agriculture, Department of Social Services, the Legal Department, the Post Office, Prison, Economics and Statistics Office, Currency Board and District Administration. The Internal Audit Unit has continued its task of examining systems with a view to ensuring that Government operations achieve their objectives in an efficient and controlled manner.

THE CURRENCY BOARD AND PENSIONS BOARD

The Cayman Islands Currency Board is committed to improve the quality of future Cayman Islands banknotes, manage a production plan for a 3 year remint of circulation coins and a 5 year reprint of currency notes with upgraded security features to protect against counterfeiting.

The Public Service Pensions Board completed an actuarial assessment of the Pension Fund which was used to assist the Government in reassessing the pension contribution. Plans have been developed to place the fund with investment managers with a view to increasing returns. The Board also plans to implement an automated pension administration system by the end of 1995.

FINANCIAL SERVICES SUPERVISION DEPARTMENT

The Financial Services Supervision Department has had continued success in 1994 and continues to meet its revenue targets, and in the case of Mutual Funds registration surpassed the 1994 budgeted figures by 57%. A total of 37 new Bank and Trust licenses were issued which after allowing for 14 cancellations 23 resulted in being added. This is the largest net increase in the past decade bringing the total to 560 banks at the end of the year.

On the insurance side 1994 was a record year for growth with 45 new captive (Class B) licenses being issued bringing the total to 361. Mutual Funds continue to do well at the end of 1994, 68 entities had been licensed or exempted as Mutual Fund Administrators and 890 entities had been registered or licensed as mutual funds. It is expected that 1995 will see continued growth as prime financial institutions seeking sophisticated services in an offshore domicile, which is well regulated yet responsive to the needs of the industry, will recognise Cayman as the choice for their operations.

THE TREASURY DEPARTMENT

Treasury increased its collection of tourist accommodation tax in 1994 by 54% over the 1993 figure which substantially exceeded the Treasury target of 30%.

Implementation of the Treasury on line payment system which facilitates direct access by all departments was completed. The target of paying all invoices one week after receipt was achieved.

In 1995 Treasury will manage a phased implementation of the Integrated Financial, Manpower and Project Management Information System which, it is anticipated, will replace three independent systems by mid 1996.

THE MINISTRY OF TOURISM, ENVIRONMENT AND PLANNING

DEPARTMENT OF TOURISM

This year the Department of Tourism will seek to foster further partnerships between the public and private sector raising the understanding and image of tourism locally. Efforts will be increased in the area of training and development and it is expected to be able to make study and work experience placements for eligible Caymanians in Europe through Caribbean Tourist Organisation/European Union programme funding. These 16 week placements will allow the participants to gain skills and experience in working in the European tourism marketplace. Additionally, teacher education workshops are planned for 70 teachers and training for an additional 100 individuals (Immigration officers/custom officers/taxi drivers etc.) within the allied tourism sector. Last month the joint scholarship between the Cayman islands Hotel & Condominium Association and the department was put into action when a young lady was selected to attend University to complete a programme in hospitality management.

With the laying on the Table of the Legislative Assembly of the Tourism Management Policy a comprehensive framework has been officially announced which will guide the development of efforts in 1995. Activities such as research, advertising and promotion will receive greater attention through the restructuring of the Department of Tourism ensuring that a Caymanian perspective is present throughout. The opportunity for more Caymanians to be involved in Tourism will naturally emerge. The establishment of an Information Systems Unit within the department will allow all services to be fully automated which will increase the availability of data as well as enhance decision making, also allowing for the repatriation of some research work now carried out overseas.

Further strengthening of the property inspection programme will seek to ensure high standards for all visitor accommodation. Additional to that will also be the upgrading of rating and inspections procedures of the Hotel Licensing Board. Efforts will continue to open up of European market with major promotions in the United Kingdom and Spain.

Overall, 1995 will be a year for strengthening the department both by manpower and resources to more proactively address the challenges we face as we seek to move this tourist destination forward into the 21st century. These challenges are represented not only in our efforts to retain our market share of Caribbean tourism but we also face intense competition building in the USA as aggressive efforts are made to keep Americans at home by almost all States. Our success in the future is largely dependent on increased efforts to promote these islands as unique by virtue of their culture and people as well as our efforts to pursue a high degree of environmental consciousness as we seek to preserve the marine and terrestrial sites which are only on loan to us for future generations of Caymanians.

A new career development initiative is also planned which will be a joint effort between the hospitality sector and the Department of Tourism. This program is aimed at providing support, guidance and work program opportunities for Caymanians who may be considering work in the tourism industry or those who may wish to further their career in the Industry but unsure how to go about this.

DEPARTMENT OF ENVIRONMENT

During 1995 a major focus of the Department of Environment will be to review and consolidate the laws that relate to the environment and to facilitate the drafting of new legislation which will better enable the department to carry out its responsibilities to preserve our environment. An environmental lawyer will be contracted on a temporary basis to assist in this legislative drafting programme.

The department will also aim to finalise the Oil Spill Contingency Plan for the Cayman Islands and to implement a Response Plan for Grand Cayman by the end of the year. The programme will involve further staff training in oil spill management and spill response procedures, as well the acquisition of spill response equipment and materials. The department will take the steps in 1995 to address the problem of waste oil disposal and the protection of the Sister Islands in the event of a significant spill.

A comprehensive coral reef monitoring programme will be implemented in Grand Cayman and in the Sister Islands by December 1995. The existing Resource Monitoring programmes will be continued to facilitate sustainable management of these resources, and a study to determine the carrying capacities of our marine protected areas is being proposed. Additional moorings will be installed on the North coasts of all three Islands, as well as at East End, Grand Cayman.

The enforcement of conservation laws and regulations will continue to be a priority and will receive increased attention with the hiring of additional Marine Enforcement Officers.

The recycling programme will be further developed with the introduction of recycling of cardboard and office paper. This, together with the mulching of yard waste, will divert 32% of the mainstream waste from the land fill. In addition, a new land fill site for Cayman Brac will be identified and the design completed in 1995.

The Department's mosquito larviciding programme will be continued in the wetland areas. Further research will be carried out to better enable the management of insecticide resistance. In addition, a concerted effort will be made to ensure the eradication of the Aedes aegypti mosquito. The Port disinfection programme will be strengthened by the addition of a Senior Environmental Officer who will assume the responsibility of coordinating all Port health matters.

The rodent control programme will be re-established on an island-wide basis in 1995.

In consideration of the fact that approximately 1700 persons are employed in the food preparation industry, there will be a series of seminars offered by the department aimed at insuring that all persons involved are trained in proper food sanitation procedures.

Finally, the Department of Environment plans to complete construction of its new office building and ancillary structures by December 1995.

PLANNING DEPARTMENT

In 1994 the Planning Department was kept busy, having processed for approval a total of 585 applications valued at $137.2 million. This amounts to a 24% increase over the 1993 value of approvals.

1995 promises to be an equally busy year for the Planning Department and the Central Planning Authority. Construction activity is expected to increase substantially with at least two major hotel projects slated for completion. Shopping and office complexes, large luxury homes and apartment buildings are also slated for completion.

Additionally the Development Plan Review moved a step closer towards completion, having been under consideration by the Central Planning Authority for most of the year and released for public comment in December.

Highlights of the Plan include new road corridors, the creation of an Historic Overlay Zone, the creation of an Institutional Zone, the creation of three categories of Commercial Zones, increased Public Open Spaces and an extension to the Stormbelt (to be renamed Mangrove Buffer) adjacent to the Central Mangrove Area.

The Central Planning Authority intends to undertake a number of electoral districts re-familiarization visits, with a view to producing area plans for each of the electoral districts.

The Central Planning Authority also intends to increase its enforcement activities to prevent the proliferation of illegal development. The addition of seven Planners to the Planning Department staff and the transfer of responsibility for the planning office in Cayman Brac to the Director of Planning demonstrates Government's commitment to long range planning.

PORT AUTHORITY

The Port Authority in Grand Cayman experienced an active year in 1994 with an increase of 8.4 percent in cargo landed over 1993. Cargo landed at Cayman Brac decreased by 6.5 percent in 1994 over 1993.

In 1994 the Master Port Development Plan was completed. This plan provides the Authority with the necessary development strategies to meet the challenges of the next decade. The report was accepted by the Authority and tabled in the Legislature.

Major rehabilitation of the Authority's cargo moving equipment was carried out during 1994.

On recommendations contained in the Master Port Development Plan major structural rehabilitation to the Cayman Brac dock will be carried out in 1995. Also planned for 1995 is the removal of the cargo warehouse at the Grand Cayman dock which will provide additional working space on the dock and greatly improve the efficient handling of cargo there.

The Port Authority is presently examining the installation of permanent cruise ship moorings for George Town harbour.

In addition, consideration is being given to a possible extension of the Cayman Brac dock to attract a weekly visit by a cruise ship- and to provide safety for passengers disembarking and embarking.

The need for additional work at the Little Cayman dock to provide safety at the dock and facilities for storage of goods is also being considered,

FIRE SERVICES

The year 1994 was one in which emphasis was placed on training and during August to October 32 officers attended Recurrent Airport Fire Fighter Training Courses in the United States.

The Fire Service, working in close cooperation with the Central Planning Authority, and the Hotel Licensing Board ensured that new and existing buildings met with basic fire requirements.

Statistics show that value of property involved in fires during 1994 to be approximately CI$4,666,000.00. Damage sustained was estimated at $615,950.00 showing that more than $4 million ($4,050,050.00) was saved as a result of the response by the Fire Services.

In 1994 a new Airfield Crash Tender was ordered for the Aerodrome Fire Section at Owen Roberts International Airport. The vehicle arrived in January 1995.

During 1994 a significant upgrading of staff was completed. In all, 18 posts were upgraded. All posts were filled by internal promotions.

The year 1995 will see the continuation of fire prevention and training programmes.

CAYMAN TURTLE FARM

The Cayman Turtle Farm continues to be a popular tourist and local attraction. 1994 was another successful year financially.

The emphasis for 1995 will be on continued profitability and the addition of attractions that will enhance the farm's popularity. The board is looking at the viability of adding an aquarium.

THE MINISTRY OF HEALTH, DRUG ABUSE PREVENTION AND REHABILITATION

The Ministry of Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation came into being in March 1994, and in just 10 months has laid the foundation for the achievement of major objectives in 1995. With the decision to undertake Strategic Planning for the Health Service, as well as the Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation Programme, this Ministry has detailed and costed plans for approval and implementation during 1995.

It is recognised that the Health Practitioners' Law of 1974 is in need of considerable review and with input from the professionals, legal drafting has begun with amendments to be brought to the Legislative Assembly in 1995.

HEALTH SERVICES

New and Improved Facilities

The Master Planning Study for the development of the present George Town Hospital site was completed in 1994 and approved by Executive Council in November. The construction of new facilities will commence later this month. These new facilities will be built in phases and are expected to include Paediatric, Physiotherapy, Maternity, Neonatal and Mental Health units as well as a Surgical Ward, Operating Theatres and a Maternity Operating Room. A Forensic Laboratory, Materials Management Building, Hospice/Geriatric Unit and Chapel will be amongst the new features. Additionally the Casualty/Emergency Department, Medical, Intensive Care, Radiology and Dialysis units, Pharmacy and Medical Records will be provided with urgently needed space.

Work commenced on the Bodden Town District Health Centre in December 1994 and is scheduled for completion in September 1995. The construction of the West Bay District Health Centre is due to commence this year. Plans for the health centres in North Side and East End will be developed this year.

A Continuous Quality improvement programme will be pursued in 1995. This programme will assure patients that a consistently high quality of care is provided with a built-in mechanism to monitor patient feedback and satisfaction.

OUT-PATIENT AND EMERGENCY SERVICES

The Out-Patient and Emergency Services will continue to be monitored and every effort made to deliver high quality services in a timely manner by reducing the waiting time and increasing access to these services.

Efforts will be made to encourage more Caymanians to pursue careers within the Health Services. Doctors, Nurses, Physiotherapists, Medical Technologists, Radiographers and other professionals on staff will be visiting the schools to give encouragement to any Caymanian student wishing to pursue a career in health.

With the anticipation of new purpose-built facilities, the Health Services staff will ensure that the facilities will have an appropriate level of technology and that a high level of health care will be provided to our community, thereby making it more attractive to Caymanians as a chosen career.

DRUG ABUSE PREVENTION AND REHABILITATION

The Cayman Counselling Centre, under the direction of the ministry will be reverting in 1995 to its original function of treating alcohol and drug addicted clients and the family members directly affected by drug and alcohol addiction.

The need to expand the services is increasingly apparent as drug abuse has begun to find its way into schools and to affect our children. To accommodate these and other needs (such as space and confidentiality), the Cayman Counselling Centre was relocated on 1 March, and the complement of counsellors will be increased. Two will be recruited to provide structured educational and individual treatment for adolescents at risk and those already addicted.

The Cayman Counselling Centre has reinstated the counselling programme for inmates of HMP Northward on 7th February. An additional Counsellor will be recruited to expand this service to a five-day intensive group and individual counselling programme to drug addicted inmates or those in prison for drug related offences.

At present the Cayman Counselling Centre is developing an Intensive Outpatient Programme for the Sister Islands with an office in Cayman Brac. A Counsellor is in the process of being recruited for the Sister Islands.

NATIONAL HEALTH INSURANCE

Following an undertaking given in 1994 by the Minister at a session of the Legislative Assembly, a Health Insurance Advisory Committee has begun its deliberations and it is planned that a National Health Insurance scheme will be in place by the end of November.

THE MINISTRY OF COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT, SPORTS, YOUTH AFFAIRS & CULTURE

SOCIAL SERVICES

1. Juvenile Law

In 1994 the Juvenile Law 1990 was reviewed and drafted into two separate Bills for Laws; the Children Law 1995 and the Youth Justice Law 1995.

The Bill for the Children Law 1995 reforms the Civil Law relating to children and seeks to protect them and promote their welfare. The latter Bill makes provision for disposition of criminal offences by young persons, and is based on the relevant sections of the Juveniles Laws 1990, 1975 and 1964 and the Joint Trial Law of 1976. The two Bills will be presented to the Legislative Assembly in June, after public consultation.

2. The Young Parents Programme

The Young Parents Programme was started on July 11th, 1994. It will be officially opened in March 1995 and will be named after Mrs. Joyce Hylton, a veteran in the field of social work. The programme caters to teens and young adults between the ages of 14 & 24. The first group is progressing well in the pilot stage of the programme. Perhaps the biggest disappointment is that young fathers have not yet become involved. It is intended that all avenues will be explored with a view to overcoming this drawback, wherever it is feasible to do so.

3. The Status of The Family in the Caymanian Society

In keeping with a commitment made during 1994 "The Year of the Family" the Department of Social Services, supported by the United Nations Development Programme, will conduct a study during 1995 on "The Status of the Family in Caymanian Society". Such a survey is being conducted because the Islands over the past thirty years have undergone rapid economic growth and change which has had a tremendous impact on society as a whole. This study should better equip government and the community at large to tackle the social issues facing us in Cayman today.

4. Annual Youth Week

It is planned to hold a first Annual Youth Week in 1995. Included in this week will be a National Youth Day, when an award will be given for an outstanding youth, and there will be competitions in Art & Craft, music, and other areas. Other activities will focus on the parent/child relationship and the encouragement of youth to be exemplary citizens.

5. Crime Survey

It is proposed to carry out a crime survey in Grand Cayman. The preliminary work for this survey has begun and the survey should be completed by June 1995.

DEPARTMENT OF TRADE & LABOUR

Plans for 1995 include assistance with the completion and implementation of a Manpower Development Strategy, amendments to the Labour Law to increase its effectiveness. A Minimum Wage Advisory Committee has been appointed, to advise on the need for minimum wage. The department also plans to explore suitable apprenticeship schemes for implementation on a pilot basis; enhancement of the job placement system and extension of technical assistance to help the unskilled secure and retain suitable employment is also proposed. One additional labour inspector will be hired to enable the department to increase the frequency and scope of workplace inspections, as well as to increase the awareness of the Labour Law amongst employees and employers.

HOUSING DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION

To date 4 banks have become participants in Government's Guaranteed Mortgage Scheme. Approximately two dozen mortgage guarantees have already been issued, with several more in the pipeline.

A survey of housing needs in the Islands will be conducted by the Housing Development Corporation in 1995 assisted by the Statistics Unit.

The Housing Development Corporation intends to divest its mortgage portfolio in 1995. This will be done through a suitable tender arrangement to the existing debenture holders and under terms which do not disadvantage the mortgagees.

AGRICULTURAL AND INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT BOARD

As a result of the policy decision to phase out the Board as a direct lender for student loans, caused by new unacceptable terms proposed by the Caribbean Development Bank, government has embarked on a new initiative to meet the demand for such funding. The guaranteed student loan scheme, which like the new housing scheme represents an important partnership between government and the banking community, is expected to be formalised and officially launched in the first quarter of 1995. This new initiative is a significant step towards supplementing the funds available to support Cayman's manpower development strategies.

WATER AUTHORITY

In early 1995 the Authority intends to conclude a debt refinancing package with C.I.B.C Bank & Trust Company valued at US$22.15 million. This refinancing will consolidate two existing loans which were taken with the Caribbean Development Bank in 1986, which was a multi-currency loan resulting in losses to the Authority over the years due to currency fluctuations. This consolidation will give the Authority the capacity to act on any needs arising with respect to future extensions of the water and sewerage systems.

NATIONAL MUSEUM

1995 will be a very busy year as the Museum will move its collections storage, conservation laboratory, workshop and research centre to a new 4,000 sq. ft. leased facility.

The "Wreck of the Ten Sails" exhibit closed in February and is being redesigned as a travelling exhibit which will be taken to each of the districts on Grand Cayman as well as to the Sister islands. A book on the subject written by the Museum's Archaeologists will be published during the second quarter of this year.

The Museum will also feature temporary exhibits including "Artists of Cayman Brac", "Patrick Broderick: Yesterday's Cayman" recent acquisitions, "The Art of Miguel Powery", and "Traditional Caymanian Crafts".

The museum will assist with the upgrading of the operation of the Cayman Brac Museum.

Utilizing a grant from UNDP, the museum will also create a comprehensive master plan for the next five years.

THE NATIONAL ARCHIVE

The Caymanian people desire to explore and understand their history. With this in mind the Archive will further develop the publication of relevant books and papers, the first being the republication of Hirst's "Notes on the History of The Cayman Islands."

Storage facilities for government records will be expanded so that more government departments can take advantage of the Archive's secure and efficient records management system. A new microfilm camera designed to film large and vital documents will be installed.

The oral history programme of the memory bank will continue its work of capturing the social history of all three Islands through interviews and transcriptions. Growing numbers of researchers, from genealogists to academics to school children, are now using the reading room at the Archives, and making both archival and oral history sources available for the public is therefore of increasing importance. All these resources will be fundamental to the preparation of a new history of The Cayman Islands, which will start in 1995.

THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

In 1995 the Public Library in Cayman Brac will have its grand opening celebration. This facility was donated by the Rotary Club of Cayman Brac last year.

The public library will initiate a membership campaign to promote library services to those who are not aware of the variety of reading materials and information sources that are available in the libraries. This will also be promoted through the formation of a "Friends of the Library" organisation.

Plans are in place to turn District Town Halls into District Libraries once Civic Centres are available for all and appropriate discussions held with the public. The exception to this will be in East End, where it is thought to be more appropriate to relocate the Post Office to the Town Hall, and use the entire building now shared by the Post Office and Library, for Library purposes. This building is more accessible to the Public. Therefore this on balance seems to be the most appropriate of the uses for the building.

SPORTS

1995 will see the continuation of several sports capital projects, the hosting of three regional games, the hiring of technical directors for football and basketball, and coaches for netball and cricket, and the ongoing involvement of sports office employees in the "Time Release Scheme" to supplement the after school programmes.

The George Town Sports Centre will be completed by early April and will host the upcoming CARIFTA and Shell Cup Games. The CARICOM U17 Basketball Championships will be hosted at the Lions Centre in April.

The plans for Phase I of the National Sports and Recreation Centre in Spotts will be completed. Phase I will consist of a 50 metre swimming pool, with necessary amenities, and a multipurpose hall. The contribution through private sponsorship of a recreation park will also be realised in 1995 at Spotts.

In West Bay the Scholars Community Park, a facility for the West Bay Heritage Day Committee, softball diamond and cricket pitch will be completed as well as additional toilet facilities and upgrading the lighting facilities at the Ed Bush Field.

In Bodden Town a master plan is being developed for the completion of the community field. Land has already been cleared for this project. It is expected that Breakers Community Club will assist with the developing of the Breakers Sports Field.

The North Side Field will require more land space to house toilet facilities and parking, so acquiring this land will be a priority for 1995.

THE CAYMAN NATIONAL CULTURAL FOUNDATION

1995 will see the Cayman National Cultural Foundation continue its efforts to broaden awareness of the arts by providing programmes for youth, promoting greater participation at district levels and providing professional development opportunities for local artists. The Cultural Foundation hosted the Carib Art Exhibition, the largest-ever travelling exhibition of Caribbean contemporary art, in January to February 1995.

The theatrical season is planned to include five productions, three of them locally written including the winner from the Foundation's National Playwriting Competition.

The Foundation will participate in the 1st Annual Festival of the Creative Arts in England and Caribbean Festival of The Arts in Trinidad and Tobago.

There will be ongoing training for local artists and the formal establishment of a core of Caymanian actors.

THE MINISTRY OF EDUCATION AND AVIATION

EDUCATION

The Education Strategic Planning exercise commenced in January 1994, when awareness sessions were held in all the districts and for selected audiences, including the Legislative Assembly. The first meeting of the 35 member planning team took place in Cayman Brac in March. From this meeting, a mission statement, four objectives and nine strategies were developed. The mission, objectives and strategies received wide coverage in the press, and interest in serving on the action teams was high. Eighteen action team leaders from Grand Cayman and ten from Cayman Brac took part in 6 days of training, the first of which was held in May just prior to the start of action team meetings. The total number of individuals involved in the planning team, and the action teams numbered three hundred and fifty three. In November 1994, the Education Planning Team approved one hundred and five action plans which were then costed and scheduled over the next five years.

A detailed Five Year Development plan for Education to be implemented during the period 1995 - 1999 has now been accepted by the Minister.

It has been recommended that all government schools develop their own site-based plan by 1998. Site based planning is the process by which the overall mission, and strategies of the public school system will be interpreted and carried out for a specific school.

The Second Annual National Education Conference took place in November. The theme of the conference was "Partnership - Education's Vital Link". All teachers in the Cayman islands attended the conference. A School Inspectorate will be established this year.

The United Nations Development Programme will give the Cayman Islands over US$400,000 towards the development of education over the next five years. The first draw down of funds was used to effect the implementation of the strategic plan activities in January 1995.

While all our schools continue to make very real gains in both academic and social areas, most notable in 1994 were the results of the first CXC examinations taken by students at the John Gray High School and the Cayman Brac High School. In terms of numbers of good passes and quality of passes these were the best results in the history of secondary education in the Cayman Islands. We were delighted to learn of our high standing in the region at the recent CXC meeting in the British Virgin Islands. However, in those cases where CXC either provides no examination, or the syllabus is not appropriate to our students, Cayman has opted to use the International General Certificate of Secondary Education (IGCSE). Ten subjects will be examined at CXC in the next examination series in 1996, six will be examined at IGCSE and three at GCSE.

Capital works completed in 1994 included the laboratories and class rooms at the George Hicks High School completed in the record time of 19 weeks by McAlpine at a cost of $1.78 million. The Community College's new general studies block, which is being built to accommodate the Sixth Form group transferred from the John Gray High School, was completed at an approximate cost of $1.2 million.

Construction has begun on two other projects, the hall, administration block and library for the John Cumber Primary School, and four classrooms for the Red Bay Primary School. An extensive maintenance programme was carried out in all the schools during 1994. Emphasis will continue to be placed on maintenance, in order to maintain a high standard of physical facilities in all schools.

A new programme for Spanish speaking students was instituted in September 1994 to accommodate the school-aged children of Cuban Caymanians offered residence in Grand Cayman. The programme has now been extended to deal with the children of Cubans granted political asylum, as well as other non-English speaking students in the school system.

The private school system continues to provide a vital service to government, accounting for 33% of the total number of school places needed in the islands, at an approximate savings to government of $6 million per annum. The St Ignatius High School was formally opened in December 1994, and will eventually provide place for three hundred high school students. The Cayman Preparatory School and the Triple C School have also announced plans for expansion. These developments in private education should, if they come to fruition in the next few years, postpone the need for a new public junior high, or senior high school until well into the next century.

The Education Council continues its valuable work. Under its directives twenty three of the twenty five existing pre-schools were licensed, and methods of yearly inspection streamlined. A new school was formally registered, the Faulkner Academy which will eventually cater for one hundred children with specialised individual needs. The scholarship programme continues with forty two students being granted scholarships in a variety of fields. The Cayman Islands Scholar Award was approved, and will be offered for the first time in 1995.

CIVIL AVIATION AUTHORITY

The Owen Roberts International Airport terminal has been expanded, both at the departure and arrival concourses. Additional stations were provided for the Immigration service, and additional check-in facilities were added to cope with the increased number of flights, as well as carriers. Crewe Road was displaced some 600 feet to allow for an additional 600 feet of built runway to be utilised. This has increased the runway length available for landing from the west and added to the safety of all aircraft using the runway. In 1995, there is a proposal to further expand the arrivals concourse, specifically the Customs Hall, to allow for increased capacity and efficiency. Following a major security audit carried out by the U.K. civil aviation authorities, security arrangements for the two international airports have been revised so that the Civil Aviation Authority is now responsible for all screening of passengers and carry-on baggage. In Cayman Brac, the security equipment at Gerrard Smith International Airport has been upgraded to allow for X-ray screening of carry on baggage. Progress was made on surveying possible sites for a proper runway on Little Cayman. It is anticipated that a decision on a permanent, government owned runway for daylight landings of light aircraft in Little Cayman will be made very soon. The inter-ministerial committee dealing with all airport services was initiated in 1994, and shows promise of solving some of the long standing problems of organisation and management.

CAYMAN AIRWAYS

The recapitalisation and downsizing of the national flag carrier has been completed and for the first time in recent history, it appears that Cayman Airways has a fighting chance of survival. At a mid-year meeting the Board decided on a period of conservatism over the next twelve months. This included a decision not to apply for any new routes, and a policy to retain the 737-200 series aircraft presently in use. One of the 737-200s leased from International Leasing Finance Corporation (ILFC) was returned in 1994, with the other due to be returned in 1995. Another 737-200 has been leased at a savings of over $300,000 per year, and arrangements are ongoing for another plane to be leased mid-year. Cayman Airways has no plans to increase its fleet for 1995. Instead the company will concentrate its efforts on maintaining a high quality of service and strengthening its marketing strategy. It is expected that the company will realise a small profit, after subsidy, at the end of the year.

Cayman Airways continued to handle US Air and, in addition to handling several repeat charters, in 1994 picked up contracts for both Air Tours and Caledonian Airways.

AIR SERVICES AGREEMENT

The UK Department of Transport has continued to work assiduously on our behalf to secure protection for Cayman Airways on the vital Miami/Cayman route. Earlier this year the Ministry prepared a position paper on behalf of government to be submitted to the United States government in preparation for talks on route allocation. However, on February 3rd, only a few days before the talks were scheduled, the United States offered a roll-over of the existing agreement for a further twelve months. This has been accepted by the United Kingdom on Cayman's behalf, and gives Cayman Airways a further 12 months to consolidate and build on the very real gains of 1994.

THE MINISTRY OF AGRICULTURE COMMUNICATIONS AND WORKS

This Ministry continues to pursue its objectives which will be substantially increased in 1995 with the many projects proposed and slated for completion. In addition to completion of various pieces of long awaited legislation, it is proposed to also complete the much delayed street naming and numbering project. Considerable emphasis is to be placed on finalising road corridors in George Town and other districts in order to maintain adequate traffic flows.

THE DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

The Agricultural Development Plan will enter its 5th year of implementation in 1995. A comprehensive evaluation of the progress that has been achieved to date has been completed. 1995 will see intensive development in capital projects in this department. These will include the preparation of a new access road to the agricultural complex at Lower Valley, initiation of the plans to relocate the Department's offices to Lower Valley as well as the commencement of the abattoir for improving the conditions under which local meats are processed. In 1995 the department plans to place greater emphasis on consumer education about the quality and value of locally produced food. It is a major objective of the department to stimulate greater efficiency of production through a more intense extension programme, more food security and better health to the Islands through the availability of fresh wholesome foods.

TELECOMMUNICATIONS

The Telecommunications section of the ministry is embarking on several major new projects in 1995. Foremost on the list is the establishment of an enhanced 9-1-1 emergency communications system. An emergency operations centre is to be constructed in the fire services headquarters to accommodate the E-9-1-1 system as well as to provide a coordination and operations room for any disaster or emergency that may occur. The Emergency Operations Centre will provide the National Hurricane Committee with effective command, control and communications capabilities.

Cayman Brac and Little Cayman will be getting a new 200 ft. telecommunications tower to provide improved radio communication throughout the two Islands both in 800 Mega-hertz and F.M. All radio communication requirements will be met by the Telecommunications Section for the 1995 CARIFTA Games.

THE POSTAL DEPARTMENT

The Post Office will continue an ambitious programme to improve all areas of its operations, buildings and quality of service. Renovation to some district post offices as well as the construction of a new mail sorting and distribution centre is planned for 1995.

A new organisational structure will be introduced which will provide more efficient managerial and operational control. Additionally, there is to be the introduction of a guaranteed international express mail service.

LANDS AND SURVEY

This Department continues to grow demand for its services in increasing. This reflects the growth and overall development of the Islands as a whole. Development of the land information system will continue despite the curtailment of funds in the 1995 budget. It is anticipated that by the end of the year land registry records and data will be computerised.

THE PUBLIC WORKS DEPARTMENT

In 1995 the Public Works Department will continue its role of maintaining public buildings, roads and planning and implementation of the necessary expansions and improvement to these vital elements of Government's infrastructure. Much of the capital works proposed for 1995 will either be constructed by this department or contracted out with direct supervision provided from the engineering pool with the department.

Emphasis will continue on training of Caymanians to fill the engineering posts in the department.

DEPARTMENT OF VEHICLE AND EQUIPMENT SERVICES

The Department of Vehicle & Equipment Services (DVES) will continue to provide maintenance services for government vehicles and heavy equipment. The department is also responsible for replacing approved vehicles and equipment in consultation with user departments.

Ongoing negotiations with the two local oil companies will be completed and a purpose built facility will be constructed at the PWD/DVES compound on North Sound Road to provide fuel and lubrication services to all government vehicles. The facility will provide significantly easier access for the larger trucks and will be automated to allow 24-hour service for emergency vehicles.

Madam Speaker and Honourable Members, as I conclude my speech from the Throne, I should like to record my thanks to the many persons who were involved in providing me with the material for this speech.

At the recent Governors' Conference held in Cayman last month, my colleagues, the Governors from the other regional dependent territories offered their congratulations on the high level of organisation and efficiency of the government and particularly the civil service in this country. I concur with their views.

Indeed, I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Cayman Islands Civil Service for their dedication to duty and their support. We are fortunate indeed to have a service of this calibre. It is perhaps timely to emphasise that the Civil Service comes directly under my command and I take full responsibility for all decisions regarding the CMI Service. I am, of course, aware of a rumour of outside interference, particularly in connection with the announced early retirement of two senior officers. This rumour has been conveyed to London recently. I think it appropriate to make the point that these retirements were the subject of discussions solely between myself and the officers concerned and that no one else was involved or even aware that they were taking place.

Finally, as you embark on the first sitting of the 1995 session of the Legislative Assembly, I pray that Almighty God will bless and guide your deliberations. May He always prosper the people of these Islands.

WEDNESDAY
8 MARCH, 1995
10.09 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us; and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed in the Legislative Assembly.

The administration of the oath of affirmation to Mr. Donovan Ebanks, MBE, to be the Temporary First Official Member.

Mr. Ebanks, would you come forward to the Clerk's Table?

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF AFFIRMATION

Mr. Donovan Ebanks, MBE

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I, Donovan Ebanks, do solemnly and sincerely affirm and declare that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II her heirs and successors according to law.

The Speaker: Please take your place, Honourable Member, and I welcome you to the House during the period of your temporary appointment.

Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question number 1 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 1

No. 1: Mr. Gilbert McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Planning, what action has been taken by Government with regard to the recommendations of the Review Committee on the proposed preservation of the wetlands and the Mangrove Buffer Zone.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Government, as stated in the Caymanian Compass of Monday, 29th August, 1994, had called for further scientific study and input from a wide cross-section of the community. In this regard the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Planning is currently involved in discussions with the National Trust, the Department of Environment and the Central Planning Authority regarding future action on the wetlands.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Minister give any indication, then, if emerging from these discussions there may be a change of policy in terms of what was published in the originally proposed plan which has been in public circulation?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I do not think there is any change in policy—I do not think there is any policy as yet. The policy is made after the legislation is passed by this House. What we are basically doing at this point, having a number of public meetings being held on the subject, having had a significant number of members of the community who have given us feedback on the issue, we have taken that on board and, obviously, we will use that in our thinking when the time comes. But the procedure is still that objections have to be heard by the Field Tribunal, which is the next step.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 2, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 2

No. 2: Mr. Gilbert McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Planning what is the present status on the issue of cruise ship moorings in West Bay.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The proposal to consider the installation of cruise ship moorings in West Bay requires further study. This is not a project that Government ever intended to rush into without serious consideration being given to the surrounding environment.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Minister give any indication as to how far discussions have gone—whether there has been technical study, recommendations or whatever in regard to this?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I believe that when all the records are checked we will find that from the outset we said we were considering it. Considering it means just that—no action has been taken, and certainly we will continue to consider it. If any action is taken, a marine environmental impact study would have to be completed.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 3, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 3

No. 3: Mr. Gilbert McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Planning what are the qualifications of the new manager of the Turtle Farm in respect of breeding and rearing of turtles.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The new Managing Director does not possess any technical qualifications in respect to the breeding and rearing of turtles. However, he has extensive experience in Business and People Management. It should also be noted that Mr. Ebanks' predecessor had minimal knowledge of turtles and management experience at the time of his appointment also.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: As a matter of clarification, is the Minister saying that Dr. Jim Wood did not have scientific qualifications in the management of turtles and their breeding, reproduction and so on?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding is that when he arrived at the Turtle Farm in the early 1970s, the people who were already there had to teach him what to do in respect to the rearing of turtles. One can have academic knowledge, but the practical implementation of that knowledge in rearing turtles is a different matter.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Minister could say what arrangements have been put in place to ensure that the technical side, as far as the scientific aspect of the Turtle Farm, is taken care of?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Board of Directors of the Cayman Islands Turtle Farm is of the opinion that to successfully direct the Farm, one does not necessarily require experience with turtles but should, more importantly, be experienced in management. A competent and qualified individual will be hired to oversee and direct technical, scientific and data collection aspects of the Farm's operations, together with a suitable young Caymanian understudy who will be trained academically on the job.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Minister say if there is anyone now at the Turtle Farm with the scientific knowledge to make determinations in the case of illnesses or viruses and the like which might occur within the Turtle Farm among the herd?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: If the Member does not mind, I think the answer will come in question No. 6. He may hold his supplementary if it is not flushed out by that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister is quite right, we can leave that until question no. 6. If there are no more supplementaries, the next question is No. 4, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 4

No. 4: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member what was the purpose of the Minister of Education and Aviation, the Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture and the Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning, Leader of Government Business, accompanying the recent Financial Industry promotion delegation overseas.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the concept of the financial industry promotions which took place recently in New York, London and Hong Kong was put forward by the Private Sector Consultative Committee, otherwise known as the PSCC. All members of the PSCC were, as a matter of course, invited to participate in the promotions. It was felt particularly appropriate to the nature of the exercise and the calibre of the intended audience that the Ministers be involved given their dual capacity as Members of Executive Council and of the PSCC.

This involvement proved to be key to the exercise in very concrete ways. An issue at the conferences was Cayman's political status, especially since some Governments in other leading offshore financial centres are discussing independence. Ministers were able to personally assure the conference attendees that such changes were not being contemplated by the Cayman Islands.

The presence of the Ministers also resulted in the significant opportunity to meet with the United Kingdom Branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association at the House of Commons. We were thus allowed to fully brief an influential audience on the operations of Cayman's financial industry and regulatory regime, with particular emphasis on legislation and associated measures promulgated to deal with drug money laundering.

The impact of the briefing was such that one of the lords commented afterward that his suspicion that the BBC documentary, aired last September was a hatchet job, was confirmed.

At the Hong Kong conference a leading trust attorney pointed out that Cayman was considered the jurisdiction of choice in terms of quality for the setting up of restricted trust companies; however, because of the fee of C1$6,000 per annum, as opposed to the standard fee of US$2,000 per annum in other jurisdictions, Hong Kong law firms were referring business to the less costly jurisdictions.

The Ministers were able to consider this issue on the spot and later that same day it was announced that a decision had been taken to realign Cayman's fees to US$2,000 per annum, effective 1st March, 1995.

It also has to be noted that the previous experience of the conference organiser suggested that attendance levels would average 80 persons; our conferences exceeded all expectations with attendances in New York, London and Hong Kong of over 170, 200 and 130 persons respectively. Again, it is clear that the presence of the Ministers was a contributing factor to these above-average numbers.

The overall conclusion to be drawn is that although the absence of the Ministers would not have led to the conference being unsuccessful, the fact that they were involved elevated the status and recognition given to the Conferences with distinct results.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

What formal presentations did these Ministers make? What were the topics of their presentations?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, an important segment of the conferences were the social gatherings after the conferences concluded for the day. This is where the Ministers had the opportunity to meet different individuals within the audiences in London, New York and Hong Kong. Particularly in Hong Kong this was quite a regular question that was posed. The Ministers were identified during the course of the conference and it was pointed out that they would be available. As a result, they were targeted with questions that could best be answered by politicians providing the assurances being sought.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Am I to understand then that the Ministers' role was purely one of social importance and that they offered no technical or political expertise of a formal nature through the method of presenting positions or policy papers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: That would not be a fair conclusion to draw. Whenever conferences are being held or attended at an international level, one of the disadvantages that Cayman always finds itself in is that there is only one individual leaving the Cayman Islands for such conferences. I have attended conferences in countries such as the BVI and elsewhere, where there is normally a contingent of government officials and ministers in attendance.

Because of the fact that quite a number of the leading jurisdictions at this time are contemplating the subject of independence, and some of them are not far removed in terms of moving into that political area, it was felt important for Ministers to be available to deal with these questions. It is to be regarded as a contingent measure put in place.

At this time hardly anything can be taken for granted and, most importantly, what we find is that although recognition is given to officials when answers are provided, this does not provide the level of assurance that comes when such answers are given by the political machinery of any government.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Were these audiences handled in a formal way, that is, in small groups with question and answer periods, or were they purely at a social cocktail level?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: No, Madam Speaker. For example, during the luncheon arrangement several tables were set up and Ministers along with other government officials were ably dispersed at the various tables in order to deal with the questions.

I sat at a table where six individuals all seemed to be using a form of unique language, and I found out while sitting there that these six persons were from a country called Micronesia. The six persons consisted of the Attorney General, her Deputy and two other persons from the Legal Department, the Finance Minister and the Permanent Secretary. I thought for a minute, then raised the question why such a large group from any one country? We were told that Micronesia is now contemplating the setting up of an off-shore financial service industry, and obviously they wanted to glean as much as they could from being in attendance at the Cayman Islands Conference.

It was also noted, particularly in relationship to the BVI, that not only was their private sector represented, but the PR firm that does the representation for that country was also represented at the New York conference, and raised questions as well.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 5, standing in the name of The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 5

No. 5: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning, what is the policy regarding the sale of "public open space" in subdivisions.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Ownership of land for public purposes in subdivisions normally remains with the developer, and protective measures such as restrictions on the land register and a series of 'Lands for public purposes' files are maintained to prevent any alternative use from occurring.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Have there been any cases recently where application was made for the sale of such land, or where actual sale of such land has been made?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Not to the best of my knowledge.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 6, standing in the name of The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 6

No. 6: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning what provisions have been made for the continuation of scientific research and data-keeping at the Cayman Turtle Farm.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, the Farm will continue all scientific research as this is an integral part of its conservation effort. It should be noted that the majority of research and data-keeping was previously conducted by Mrs. Fern Wood and not the former Managing Director.

These duties are currently being conducted to a certain extent by Mrs. Wood's former assistant, Miss Michelle Cascante. Efforts are presently underway for the recruitment of a qualified scientist to head up all research as well as a suitable young Caymanian understudy who will be trained academically and on the job.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

On a point of clarification, could the Honourable Minister explain what is meant by the term "suitably qualified" scientist, in this case?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I do not claim to be a scientist, neither do I claim to know all the qualifications necessary to deal with turtles. But it seems to me that it has to be in the marine biology area, or zoology.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Let me assure you that the question was not intended to be facetious, as I would not wish to waste the time of the Honourable House. What I meant was if the Honourable Minister deemed it necessary for a scientist to be at the doctoral level, or to be someone who is conducting research prior to doing a thesis in this particular area.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I think we perhaps should step back one step. We do have scientific people already in the Department of the Environment—we have PhDs as well as massive degree individuals who are in the marine biology area. So we are not adrift for expertise, if that is what is trying to be conveyed.

What we said from the very beginning, as the Board of Directors of the Turtle Farm, is that we will recruit a person. In the meantime, the Department of the Environment has sufficient expertise to bridge the gap until we recruit this new person.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Minister say if attempts are being made, within the job description of such a scientific person, to recruit someone who has had some dealings with turtles—be they from the French farms in the Islands where a farm closed... and, also, if Mrs. Fern Wood was formally appointed or was she an employee of the Turtle Farm?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, the answer to the last question first: She was an employee of the Turtle Farm, and very ably remunerated.

Personally, I would not be too eager to hire someone from the farm which closed down. I do not know what the background of that closing down really is. Was it all financial, or were there also technical problems which resulted in the closing down, or was it not operating efficiently? I would be inclined to recruit someone who is seen by an interview panel to have some expertise in the area of which we are seeking. Obviously, the advertisement should say what exactly this team of experts (helping us to do the advertisement) should be.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say if there are currently existing at the Turtle Farm any records of scientific research and data kept by the departed director and his research assistant wife?

The Speaker: I believe that the Honourable Minister answered that when speaking about research and data keeping. He said the duties are currently being conducted to a certain extent by Mrs. Wood's former assistant Miss Michelle Cascante. I think that was the answer. You may not have that supplementary.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Seeing that the Cayman Turtle Farm is supposed to be the only one in the world that has had success with breeding and rearing of turtles in captivity, it would seem to give Dr. Wood a certain degree of expertise. Would the Government be inclined to rehire this gentleman to continue the success story?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No way.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I hear various answers coming from this Chamber to the Member. I am not proposing to give those answers. What I would say is that sometimes people are deemed to be experts and to be successful because they have a good team of supporting people below them. If I have to put my marbles on the table, I would say that much of what has been accomplished has been by the people who have been working at the Turtle Farm before and after the former director—some of whom are still there doing their daily work needing no supervision, and who understand turtles.

I think the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman can listen and understand what my answer is to him on the latter part of the question.

The Speaker: May we now leave the matter of the turtles and go to a more solid matter concerning question No. 7, asked by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 7

No. 7: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works what plans exist for the Public Works Department to carry out repair on the hard-courts at the John Gray High School.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Public Works Department is currently carrying out a detailed survey of the hard-courts to obtain existing grades and elevations in order to formulate plans for the most cost-effective measures for improving the playing surface and drainage.

It is anticipated that this project will be completed in April or May.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Minister could say if before the $64,000+ dollars was authorised to the private company for the servicing of this court Public Works inspected it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am not certain of what $64,000 the Member is speaking of, but, yes, it was checked out by Public Works prior to the contract being given.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The $64,000 that I refer to—we were told during a tour of the school—was authorised by Public Works to the private company that had worked on the court. My concern is that there is some disagreement between the school and Public Works because no one wants to accept the responsibility for this court. That is why I asked this question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, it is my understanding from the Public Works Department that only the usual 10% on any contract has been paid out to date on this project. I do not think there is a disagreement between Public Works and teachers or the school, I think there is a misunderstanding between the contractor and the Public Works Department, which as I understand it, is presently being worked out. As I pointed out, the project will hopefully be completed by early May.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give an undertaking, based on the fact that the school's faculty have certain opinions about what needs to be done with the repair work, that whoever is dealing with it does so in consultation with the people at the school.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: I can give that undertaking because that is exactly what I have said about it. I would point out that the work that is being carried out presently will assure that we have a smooth court when it is completed.

As a matter of fact, I visited the site only two days ago and there is one area that is not quite level and not as smooth as we would like it, but that will be corrected.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 8, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 8

No. 8: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education and Aviation to give a statement on the Drug Awareness Education Programme in the Primary Schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Drug Awareness Education in Primary Schools is currently being addressed through the Quest Programme which directly complements the health curriculum. All primary school teachers on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac have received training in the presentation of the Quest Programme supported by the Lion's Club.

The programme "Skills for Growing", ideally geared for the primary grades, uses the holistic approach to teaching self-esteem, relationships, refusal and problem-solving skills to younger pupils.

The programme is further enhanced through the local chapters of Cayman Against Substance Abuse (CASA) and Youth to Youth.

Drama, skits, guest speakers and a variety of video presentations are utilised to demonstrate ways pupils can deal with external peer pressure and subtle internal pressures. Following the Skills for Growing Programme in primary schools, students then make the transition to the Skills for Adolescence and Skills for Living which is being addressed at the middle and secondary levels.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Minister is in a position to tell us what type of existing timetable there is with regard to the last part of his answer about the drama, skits and guest speakers, or is this something that is only done when it is available?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, the curriculum aspect of it would be time-tabled. Things like skits, or when the police visit, would naturally be put in when there is time. This is given top priority. It is being looked at in depth, as the Member knows, through his Lion's Club, as well as through the Ministry and the Department.

I pledge to do everything possible to ensure that everything is done. But while I am saying this, I hope that Members will support doubling the penalty for drugs in relation to any adult who gives, sells or otherwise deals it to a juvenile or within the vicinity of a school.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 9, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 9

No. 9: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Third Official Member: (a) If unbudgeted expenses have been incurred since the approval of the 1995 Budget; and (b) If projected revenue is on target.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The answer to part (a) is yes, unbudgeted expenditure has been incurred since the approval of the 1995 Budget. Up to the 6th of March, 1995, CI$653,503 has been spent as authorised by Executive Council. Included in this sum is an amount of CI$115,268 previously approved by Finance Committee on 21st December, 1994, for the purpose of settling an outstanding loan balance due to the Agricultural Industrial Development Board from a farmer. A re-vote of this sum will be sought at the next meeting of Finance Committee.

The answer to part (b): At the end of January, 1995, 9.83% of budgeted revenue had been collected. However, as noted during the winding up on the Budget debate last November, two areas in which shortfalls are likely to be experienced are tourism accommodation tax and garbage fees. A decision by the Government to consider expenditure reductions in line with this likely shortfall is on hold pending the results of the financial position of the year ended 31st December, 1994, being established. If the surplus realised exceeds the CI$2.9 million as projected in the Budget, the excess will be applied as an offset against the likely shortfall which has been approximated at CI$2.4 million.

If an enhanced surplus balance is not achieved, expenditure programmes will be examined by the Government and adjustments proposed with a view to realigning the Budget for 1995.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Third Official Member could expand on the last part of his answer by telling us whether the expenditure programmes will be examined with regard to capital expenditure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, that is a possibility, but at this time I cannot give an answer in the affirmative because if it is likely that necessary savings can be achieved in the recurrent expenditure that will also be considered as well.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Member could give some details about the approximately $538,000 of unbudgeted expenditure which would be the remainder of the $115,000 of the outstanding loan balance which he mentioned.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: This amount is broken down as follows: Reallocating of Cayman Counselling Centre—a sum of $44,976 has been approved; payment to Universal Postal Union (this had to do with rate increase) $4,735; Interest on land purchased at the Spotts jetty, $40,764 (this is a loan that is currently outstanding with the Bank of Butterfield—the full amount of this loan will also be included on the agenda at the next Finance Committee meeting); Maintenance of refugees, $435,511; Office furniture for the Department of Tourism, a sum of $11,554. That is the breakdown.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Member just mentioned some $400,000+ dollars for the maintenance of refugees. I wonder if he could enlighten us if there are any outstanding payments which the Government will be responsible for while these people are in Guantanamo?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: There will be a briefing made to Honourable Members of the Legislative Assembly during the course of this meeting, and I think this will either be done by the Acting Governor, or the Acting Chief Secretary. But the answer to that question is yes, the Government will be required to make a payment.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for today.

The next item, Statement by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

STATEMENT BY MINISTER OF GOVERNMENT

ESTABLISHMENT OF A CADET CORP

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, Honourable Members of this House are aware that a concern exists in the community regarding the future development of our young people. While it is generally agreed that the law breaking and general negative social behaviour is exhibited by the minority of our young people, there is also a feeling that efforts need to be made to improve the social infrastructure and, thus, the social environment within which our young people must "live and move and have their being".

Accordingly, parents have been encouraged, exhorted and offered training and support from a number of quarters. Youth organisations have been established and strengthened, sports facilities and amenities augmented, schools have sought to establish partnerships with the home, rehabilitation facilities have been set up, legislation is being overhauled, and major studies are being organised.

Much of this activity is geared to addressing the perceived need for enhancement of youth discipline, broadly interpreted as an approach to life geared to seeking out and building on opportunities for personal growth and self-improvement. The aim, as I understand it, is to optimise the chances of producing a body of good citizens.

In this regard, the idea of establishing a cadet corps possibly attached to or based in schools, has been discussed for a long time and further investigation of this, was part of the purpose of the official delegation which I led to Bermuda at the end of January. I shall now give Members a brief description of some of the positive attributes of the 'Bermuda model', so that we may see some of the aspects we may wish to emulate here.

The Bermuda Cadet Corps is secondary school-based. It may be treated as extra-curricular, or integrated into the curriculum, depending in part on the judgment of principals of the schools. From a curriculum perspective, it is regarded as 'life skills' training. There is apparently a move afoot to incorporate the corps into the schools' curriculum formally.

This may derive from the growing popularity of the cadets with parents because of the discipline it requires, and with the young persons it also seems to be reaching that critical age group when most young people tend to drop out of other organisations such as Scouts, Brigade, et cetera.

Another positive feature of the Bermuda experience is that cadets are required as part of their programme to do community service, for instance, give assistance to elderly persons.

On the same visit, the Bermuda regiment was discussed in some detail. This again arose out of interest here in the possible establishment of a Cayman Islands regiment. Government is aware that there are many differences between the Bermudian and the Caymanian situation, and, therefore, the purposes which the regiment might serve here would not necessarily be identical. Important information was gathered, however, on the Bermuda regiment's background, organisation and management, legislation, and so on. Other useful contacts were also made and relationships forged.

No detailed planning for the Cayman Islands regiment has yet taken place, but it seemed to be important to advise Members at an early stage in the initial thoughts about the matter. In brief, it is considered that as in Bermuda the regiment would be extremely useful in the event of natural disasters or possible industrially related environmental impact responses, such as clearing up of oil spills. It could possibly also relieve the police from duties outside of basic police work, such as marine patrols, guard functions such as at Government House, and possibly ceremonial duties. The idea has also been floated that some serious young offenders might benefit from a stint with such a regiment, and a serious young offenders programme is being considered to be a part of, or attached to the regiment somehow.

Members will observe from what has been said in this brief statement that the proposed cadet corps and regiment is still in its formative stage. It is hoped that the gesture of providing this information at this early stage will be appreciated and, if anything, constructive comments will be provided, whether critical or otherwise.

This is a good opportunity for Members of this Honourable House and the public at large to let me know what their feelings, or ideas are on these two programmes.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Would the Honourable Minister undertake to inform Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition as to any technical or useful information he thinks we could use in broadening our understanding on the ideas he just quoted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: I just finished saying that I hoped that the gesture of providing this information at this early stage would be appreciated and, if anything, constructive comments will be provided—whether critical or otherwise. This is a good opportunity for Members of this House to let me know, or the Government know, what their feelings or ideas are on these two programmes. I thought I was clear on asking Members to provide comments.

Equally, I would not only provide Her Majesty's Loyal Opposition, but I will do what I have done today—provide the House.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I think this is what the Member wished to find—if there were further details. So that has been cleared up, thank you.

The next item is the commencement of the debate on the 1995 Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency, Mr. Michael E. J. Gore, CVO, CBE, Governor of the Cayman Islands, on Friday, 3rd March, 1995.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

COMMENCEMENT OF DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, I would like to offer congratulations to His Excellency the Governor for the Throne Speech which was delivered last week.

It is the most positive Throne Speech I have heard in this Chamber during the time that I have been here. The National Team Government has a lot to crow about and they are justified in pluming their feathers.

The country has been brought back from the brink of the financial disaster we faced in November 1992. The unfettered borrowings have stopped, the grandiose and wildcat schemes have been replaced with sensible projects. Cayman Airways has been able to lift up its wings and regain some of its former glory. I think the speech actually said that the airline now has a fighting chance of survival.

Investor confidence has been restored to these Islands. The tourist industry is doing well, the banking industry is on the move. Finance Committee has been put back into the hands of the Elected Members, and we have at the top of the Civil Service a Governor whom we are all proud of, one who commands the respect of the public.

It will not be possible to deal with the many details of the Throne Speech, but there are many positive factors in it and many positive projects which should be mentioned.

First of all, there is the Government's handling of the Cuban refugee crisis. When the refugees started to arrive in these islands everybody thought that the country would be choked with them, believing that the finances necessary to take care of them would bankrupt the Government. The expenses have run into millions of dollars per year; this is a large sum for a small country that did not have any advance notice and did not have the resources set aside to deal with this particular problem. Yet, money-wise, the Government has coped with the situation and the public, not only individuals, but certain organisations, have come forward and provided humanitarian care on a high level.

Throughout the Throne Speech mention was made of many areas in which the Government will be making a physical improvement on buildings. It mentions the Courts Building and it says that more extensive use of computers will help in the proper administration of the offices and provide an improved service to the public.

The Governor mentioned that in 1994 the General Orders had been amended to remove the discrimination against the female members of the Civil Service, and this is welcomed news. Also, he made it clear that he will be setting up a committee under the Honourable First Official Member to review the General Orders and improve the Civil Service.

Someone in the press indicated that it is his hope that more freedom of expression will be given to the members of the Civil Service. I must say that this has to be handled with caution because every business, and particularly, every big business, has certain rules which have to be followed by the employees. If you work with Esso's or Texaco's bulk plant, you are not allowed to smoke in the area of the gas tanks; if you work in the construction business you are compelled to wear a hard hat; and if you work with the Government where the situation is loaded with politics, civil servants cannot be allowed to curse, condemn and criticise the Government, because there would be a breakdown in the Service between the employer and the employee.

There is a sacred trust where the employee must be loyal to his or her employer, and if we do not have complete loyalty, complete trust, there is a breakdown in production in that business. Nobody would be able to work for a law firm or a bank if that person went out and constantly downgraded the institution for which he worked. This is not to say that civil servants cannot have their say, but it must be done in the right manner—and the right manner already exists.

Sometime ago Mrs. Lucille Seymour, a top-ranking civil servant in the Department of Education, said on a television talk show that the mechanism (these are not her exact words, but this is what she meant) for a civil servant to air his grievances already exists in the Service. If there is something the individual is not satisfied with he must go to his superior officer, and perhaps through the superior officer on to the Governor who is the head of the Civil Service, and make his dissatisfaction known. No member of the Civil Service is going to be injured by this type of action.

If someone works in one of the Portfolios headed by an Elected Member, and that person does not seem to like the policies of that Portfolio, there is a provision for the person to make his thoughts known. But he cannot be allowed to go out and write letters to the press that are critical of the people whom he serves. No intelligent person would tolerate that because he would not be governing his own house. If this happened there would be chaos.

The Governor also took the opportunity to mention that he had been inflicted with rumours regarding outside interference which may have influenced his actions with the Civil Service. He made it quite clear that no such thing happened. In fact, we, the Members of the Legislative Assembly, know that this could not have happened because there is a section in the Constitution which is very clear. That section says that the Governor has sole responsibility for the Civil Service in regard to hiring, firing, discipline and so on. The Executive Council has nothing at all to do with it.

While the Governor may inform his Council of any action he has taken with regard to a senior-ranking civil servant, or a lower-ranking civil servant, the Governor cannot consult them as to what he should do.

This is not a new thing. From as far back as I can remember the Constitution has stated that the Governor, and the Governor alone, bears the responsibility for the firing of civil servants and, of course, hiring. It is true that he has the help of the Public Service Commission, and undoubtedly he receives recommendations from the Heads of Departments, but the sole responsibility is his. This Governor has not shirked that responsibility.

On the last page of the Throne Speech he had this to say, and I quote: "It is perhaps timely to emphasise that the Civil Service comes directly under my command and I take full responsibility for all decisions regarding the Civil Service." But, here again, if there is a rebellious civil servant who cannot contain himself and abide by the rules and the regulations of the Civil Service, that person can find another job, or he should be helped along to another job. You cannot bite the hand that feeds you.

I am certain that any civil servant who is dissatisfied with his lot can get an audience with the Governor or an audience with his Head of Department, or his Supervisor; and if he wants to write a letter to the press the regulations also make that provision. But the letter has to be approved by the Governor. So, there is no getting around it. In order not to damage the relationship between a worker and his employer, the worker must always abide by the regulations of the organisation in which he finds himself.

The Elections Law is to be amended, according to the Throne Speech, in order to provide a permanent Register of Voters. This will replace the register which is completed every four years. It should eliminate the problem that has been encountered so many times when, during the short period of registration, some people find themselves unregistered on Election Day. It seems like a small item to be in the Throne Speech, but it is very important and I support the move.

One of the pluses of the Throne Speech is the announcement that we have a new Commissioner of Police. I know this is welcomed by my friend the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, as well as by myself, and probably will be welcomed by many of the inhabitants of the islands. Only last week we visited the Police Station in Bodden Town and found that despite all the additions to the Force, the previous Commissioner could not find a way to have 24-hour service in the Bodden Town Police Station. We trust that the new Commissioner will be able to properly deploy his men so that this can become a reality without the addition of more officers to the Force.

A positive step is the announcement that the Government will in earnest have an education programme for prisoners. There will be job training, and what is even more important help in finding jobs for the prisoners upon release from prison, because the rate of recidivism at our prison is very high. The same persons tend to go back again and again. Perhaps it may be the attraction of the fine accommodation and the excellent food at 'Her Majesty's Hotel in Northward', but I believe one of the reasons for a prisoner becoming a recidivist is that when he comes out of prison he comes out probably in the same condition in which he went in—unemployed, not interested in a job, and not having the skills to compete in the work force.

I know that there are some that no one will ever be able to help. But, certainly, among the younger prisoners an attempt must be made to salvage them so that they can lead a beneficial and productive life and become interested in a job which they can hold. If this programme results in saving even one life it would be worthwhile, but I believe many of them can benefit from it.

On the financial side, there will be amendments to the Local Companies Law, Trade and Business Licence Law, and other areas affecting the financial community. It is necessary that we keep our house in order and that we continue to be a leader.

Only this morning the Honourable Financial Secretary mentioned that another country, Micronesia, is becoming interested in the financial services which are currently only offered by a few of the world's many countries. It is absolutely necessary that we continue, as we have for many years, to be amongst the top countries offering these services.

Mention was made in the Throne Speech of the visit of a cruise ship to Cayman Brac. This was really a red letter day for Cayman Brac, and I am certain that the inhabitants of that island will be happy with repeat visits. But this initial visit is important because it took the National Team Government to bring that visit to Cayman Brac. It was the first, which is important because it showed that it could be done.

I understand from some of the people I spoke to in Cayman Brac, that comments made by most of the visitors about the way the people of Cayman Brac received them were very favourable and many of them would be delighted to come back again. Every day I talk to people who have been to other Caribbean countries and many times their comments are not favourable. I would like to say that most of the comments I have received about the Cayman Islands have been worthwhile repeating. The first two that we get are: 'You have a clean island, when we move around George Town we do not notice any ugly smells,' and, 'We are delighted with the attitude of the Caymanian people towards us.' These two things go a long way. I believe that Cayman Brac is, perhaps, even more able to provide the friendly atmosphere which is the delight of the tourists.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, would this be a convenient time to take the suspension?

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.38 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.59 AM

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, continuing.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Little Cayman also came in for positive comments in the Throne Speech. Mention has been made of the completion of Paradise Villas, together with an excellent restaurant, and that the Government has completed Phase I of the Hurricane Shelter and Civic Centre project.

I know that there are a few people who would like Little Cayman to remain undeveloped, but no place can remain undeveloped or under-populated forever. One of the major problems with Cayman Brac is that the population is so small that it is very difficult to support businesses, it is very difficult to provide jobs, and there has to be a certain amount of infrastructure in the country.

Many people know that as long as Grand Cayman remained in isolation there was no development. I believe that the economic success story of the Cayman Islands started many years ago when the government decided to build an airport that could connect us to other countries. There has to be a high level of infrastructural development if the country is to enjoy the benefits of economic growth, and Government is responsible for putting in the infrastructure.

In the Throne Speech it was mentioned that in Cayman Brac emphasis had been placed on maintenance projects, that is, continuing to upgrade the services which already exist. For example, this is very true of the roads. I believe all the roads in Cayman Brac are superior to the roads we have here, especially in many of the well-populated subdivisions. This has come about because for many years the Government has spent a lot of money on roads—not because they were in such bad shape, but because they felt the need to provide work in Cayman Brac. So, in a small place you will find that some of these services will be highly developed, and because there is not as much use, these projects stand up better and last longer.

It was mentioned that a new Community Park has been started in the West End area, and that this will be completed in time. The point that I am trying to make here is that the present government seems to be looking at the overall picture, that the Cayman Islands is not only Grand Cayman but it includes Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, because whenever they suffer we will suffer as well. So the Government has to pay attention to the Sister Islands.

Mention was made that the Computer Services Department will continue to improve the services to many departments of Government. They have singled out the Court Office, the Attorney General's Chambers, the Police Department, the Customs Department, the Companies Registry, the Financial Services Department, and the Planning Department.

The Legislative Assembly (although some may not realise it) is comprised of the Elected Members and has carried a heavy load and has performed well over the period under discussion.

The Penal Code has gone through a Select Committee and a report was tabled in the House. That report has now been sent off for drafting and shortly, I imagine, the Draft Bill will be coming back to the House for passage. Other Committees have been active, and reported that they had done some work, that is, the Register of Interests Committee, the Code of Ethics and Conduct Committee, the Committee to Review the Gambling Law, and the Committee to Review the Sunday Trading Law at the end of 1994. Hopefully, sometime before election time next year, these Committees should have presented the reports which can be used for drafting the necessary legislation to complete these important matters.

In addition to that, 18 Bills were passed through the Legislative Assembly, some of them were minor amendments to existing Bills, but necessary legislation. In addition, another 30 Regulations and Orders were drafted. Some of those Regulations came to the House for approval while others, according to Law, only had to be sanctioned by the Executive Council. In addition to this, 18 Laws were revised by the Law Commissioner and have been completed.

The revision of the Laws is merely putting into one document all the amendments which had been made over the years. The revision does not in any way change the existing Law.

The London Office of the Cayman Islands Government, headed by Mr. Thomas Russell, a former governor, has been moved to a more spacious and, we understand, less expensive office. The Cayman Airways Office in London also moved to a more spacious accommodation with substantial savings in rent. It is important that we keep up our image abroad, and whenever we can, reduce the expenses to do so. Perhaps some of them who referred negatively to the Government not reducing expenses do not care about these matters.

On a very positive note, 11 students graduated from the Law School in 1994 with the prestigious University of Liverpool Bachelors of Law Honours Degree. We were told that another ten students are on line to graduate during this year. The 1994 Graduation brings the total number of students who have graduated since the establishment of the Law School to 54.

The Honourable Financial Secretary has to be congratulated on moving into another area of the finance market. It is contemplated that new legislation to foster the development of the Cayman Islands Stock Exchange will be introduced, hopefully this year. This will be another first for the Cayman Islands.

The Customs Department, the heart of Government's revenue, had an excellent performance in 1994 and produced the record sum of $61.6 million dollars in revenue. That is no small accomplishment for an Island of less than 30,000 residents. All areas of finance seem to have done well, and I maintain that they did well simply because of the Government. Investors have other places to go, but if you have a government that creates a climate where the fiduciary institutions can be content, those people will come—and this is not mere talk; the results bear it out.

Last year 5,409 companies were added to our Company Register, an average of 15 companies per day. Which other country can boast this? Yet, the Chamber of Commerce talks nonsense about the Government and its expenses and its lack of financial stability; because that is what the report said, although it might not have said it in the same words. That is not borne out by the facts because those 5,409 companies that were added to the Register brought the total of registered companies up to 31,612. These are not peanuts. The revenue from these companies in 1994 was a total of $16.0 million—not a small sum.

Thirty-seven new banks were added bringing the total of banks registered here up to 560, and amongst them are some of the world's largest banks.

Since the National Team took over, they have introduced Mutual Funds and passed the Law to allow for Mutual Funds Companies to be registered here. It was an overnight success. The budgeted figures for revenue from the Mutual Fund area in 1994 was exceeded by 57%. This is Government not looking to squeeze and to tax the residents, but to bring in money from other areas. We had the same success in the Insurance industry where 45 new Captive Companies were added to the register in 1994—a record year for growth.

Now, I have only merely touched upon some of the positive actions of this Government. But, unfortunately, I may not be here tomorrow, and there are some other matters which need attention so I would like to look at some of them.

During 1995, as mentioned in the Throne Speech, the Bodden Town Health Centre will be completed at a cost of $485,000—almost half a million dollars. There has been some criticism of the site upon which that clinic is being built, but the objections are very feeble indeed. Some say it should be put where the old clinic is—which is utter nonsense. The reason why the clinic is being put in another place is because there is absolutely no parking facility at the old site. What would we do with our patients? Do we put them in a refrigerator while we pull the old clinic down and build the new one? That is nonsense, it cannot go there.

The main reason for building a new Clinic is that since the old one was built the population of the Bodden Town district has increased seven-fold, maybe more, and the old facility can no longer serve the public efficiently.

The present site can provide adequate parking and the entrance is off the main road. People will be using the side entrance to the building, which means that there will be safe and easy accessibility for those who will use the Clinic. This is a very important factor when we are going to have sick people, old people, physically incapacitated or otherwise infirmed, and very small children going to the Clinic.

Another objection is that it is close to the Bodden Town Police Station and there is not adequate space for emergency vehicles to pass. The fact that it is close to the Police Station enhances the Clinic, because it will be less vulnerable to vandalism and, in the case of a real emergency, they can be helped by police officers who know a little about First Aid and in coping with emergencies. So, it is a plus that it has been put on this site. As to the nonsense that there is not enough space—what do they want? Last week I had another look at it and the distance between the Police Station and the Clinic is at least 50 feet, maybe 60 feet. How much road do they want when the main road in Bodden Town, the main highway is less than 30 feet wide? There are other areas where the road is not 50 feet wide. So, why just to get into the Clinic do we need more than 50 feet of road space? On 50 feet of road you can park cars one side of the road and two large vehicles, bigger than any of our emergency vehicles, even two of the large fire trucks can pass at a comfortable speed. But it is my understanding that no cars will be parked in this 50 feet-wide roadway.

Another objection is that the Clinic blocks the view of the James Manoah Hall, which is on the same property. That has to be the most ludicrous of all objections, because the Clinic is not sited in front of the Hall but is more to the west of it. And anyone who cannot see that Hall through a 50 foot-wide roadway must be blind indeed.

The Clinic is bound to enhance the James Manoah Hall rather than to detract from it, because you will have a fine, new modern building on the same site and the Hall has to be enhanced.

What gets me about the James Manoah Hall is how it has grown in stature over the 11 years that it has been built. When we opened that building in 1984, the opposition in Bodden Town did not want to go to it and boycotted it for a number of years. They would not go there for any function. Now, they are worried about whether you can see it. The press at that time had so poisoned the minds of the public against the Unity Team Government that people called the Hall a "White Elephant". But, I am glad to report that the years of rain and heavy wind have washed away the political muck from the James Manoah Hall. Now, this magnificent Hall stands as a symbol of the Government that put it there.

It had been used over the years as a hurricane shelter, it has been used as a refugee Centre, as a hall for the General Election, it was the venue of Princess Alexandria's visit. Political meetings have been held there, Church services have been held there, weddings and receptions, social activities and hundreds of other events.

Some sporting events have been carried out in the hall and in the yard.

What I am saying to the new Member (because he may get worried about these nonsense criticisms) is that the day will come when the Bodden Town Health Centre will be accepted, used and appreciated by generations to come.

It is true that the Government could have gone and found another piece of land for the Clinic, but everyone knows that the National Team Government inherited a bankrupt purse, and does not have a lot of money to squander. But even if things were different, and the land had been available in Bodden Town (and land is scarce there), this particular spot is still the best spot for the Clinic.

Having made these few comments on the Clinic, I want to state that the real reason for the objections to the clinic is political envy. The Clinic will cost, as I mentioned, C$485,000. This is the first Capital Project by Government in the Bodden Town district since 1984 when the late Jim Bodden and I lost our seats in the Executive Council. Eleven years we had to wait for a major capital project. It is true the last Government bought the public beach, but I am talking about a construction project.

You know, my enemies rate my representation very low, but that is all right because I have survived for more than two decades against an unfavourable press and against those people who could not control me. So, they are wasting their time on me. Eleven years we had to wait. During the few years we were in Council there were at least a dozen capital projects, such as things like the Civic Centre, the Police Station, the Fire Station in Frank Sound, the Prison, the Water Plant in Lower Valley, the Community Hall at Breakers, the new School Buildings in Savannah and Bodden Town, and the first playing field—the only play field in fact, in Bodden Town and Savannah. And I could go on and on and on. But it is just political, because this Government is doing what had not been done in 11 years. While they know we need the clinic, they pick at some little thing to make the public believe that the Government does not know what it is doing.

The reason why we had nothing in those 11 years is because the Executive Council controlled, with their majority in the Finance Committee, the spending of Government and dictated where the projects should go. In those years we had no representation in Council. But today I am glad to say that we have a Member in Council and I would like to believe that although the other four Elected Members may be favourable to Bodden Town, the voice of the Bodden Town Member helps to get projects like this done.

But do you know why they criticise? Not because we are building a single clinic. No. But, because the Government is spending $3,820,489 this year on a capital works project, of which the clinic is only a part. So, is it any wonder that the Opposition cannot contain itself? They are as surprised as Alice in Wonderland that something is coming to Bodden Town and not only is the clinic coming to Bodden Town: there are plans this year to commence the West Bay district Clinic, and to develop a Health Centre for North Side and East End. A Government looking at the whole picture!

Some of the projects in this nearly $4 million package are worth mentioning. One of them is the public beach for the Savannah District, and here I would like to congratulate the people of Savannah and Newlands for showing their strong appreciation of the Government's purchase of this piece of land. It is my understanding that the people of Savannah did not find out that the land was being bought until late Friday evening and, while the ink was not even dry on the paper, they turned out on Sunday and cleared up the beach. They dug a hole about 12 feet deep and brought up the white sand and covered all the black sand. By the next day the ladies of the district had prepared refreshments and held a reception for the workers and anyone who wanted to share in it. In spite of all of this, we get criticism that the Government is doing nothing.

This year $32,000 will be spent to put on a new roof and ceiling on the Breakers Civic Centre. Over $400,000 will be spent on construction and repairs of the Bodden Town roads. Yet, we see that nonsense article this morning giving the Government a "below average" score on roads. I am going to deal with that in its entirety later on. But I only mention these things in passing.

The Department of Agriculture, according to the Throne Speech, will be relocated to Lower Valley—this has to be a plus for Bodden Town. The Abanks Dive Lodge is to be renovated; another $610,289 will be spent on prison facilities—the first major enlargement of the Prison since it was built; $154,400 is to go on the Savannah Primary School improvements. Yet, the Bodden Town Members get a low score for not representing their constituency.

One million dollars is to be spent on the Pedro Castle Restoration project. We are not talking about peanuts. The Elected Members of Bodden Town also supported the purchase of that land and any improvements that go with it. There will be a sum of $160,000 that will be spent on the Bodden Town Post Office. There is mention in the Throne Speech about the new Postal Building, and also the mention that in some of the other districts the Post Office facilities will be upgraded. I wonder if the people who published that nonsense in the newspaper today can really look at themselves in the mirror, because they are not being honest.

The facts are here: There is $22,000 for cemetery maintenance so that our dead may find sweet repose, and rest in dignity.

The Throne Speech mentioned that there is a detailed plan for constructing the playing field at the Civic Centre in Bodden Town. What the speech did not say was that $100,000 will be spent.

I remember in 1984 when we completed the Civic Centre and immediately like Sir Winston Churchill, after he won World War II, lost the Election to Executive Council. I was asked by the Council Members at the time, what would I like in Bodden Town? I mentioned four projects, and neither one of them has yet been done. But one of those four projects was the playing field in Bodden Town. They promised that they would do it and when the first Finance Committee Meeting was over they looked at me and said: "Haig, you will have to wait until next time." That kept up for the 11 years that have ensued since.

Now, the Government—the Government with a heart, the Government with a knowledge of what is right and wrong, will complete that field. When they kept this facility from Bodden Town, they were not hurting me. I am too old to kick a football—it is the youth. They were trying to 'starve me out', they said. In their vicious circle they were hurting the youth of this country and we are going to correct it with positive actions; positive actions that will flow from a Government that knows what it is doing; positive actions that run through the Throne Speech.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, at this time proceedings will be suspended until 2.00 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.11 P.M.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing the debate.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, I had about concluded my remarks on the large package ($3,820,489) which is earmarked for spending in the Bodden Town District, some of which has actually been spent.

The last item I would like to mention regarding that package is the purchase of the O'Connor house for a retirement home for elderly people. This house and land has been purchased at a cost of $137,500, but it is well in keeping with the National Team's promises and the fulfilment of those promises.

I also touched upon the final stages of the Civic Centre in Bodden Town, and I would like to say that it is not only in Bodden Town that work is being done on civic centres. In fact, the Throne Speech mentioned that once the civic centres are in place it is the hope of Government that the Town Halls can be converted to libraries. Perhaps in Bodden Town a good use for the old Clinic would be to turn it into a library, although I do know about the restrictions of parking in that area, and would have no strong objections to the Town Hall being utilised as a public library.

In North Side the Government will spend almost $1 million this year to provide a Civic Centre. This is in contrast to what was done when another Member was a part of Executive Council, because I did not see any projects like this in North Side, although there was a Post Office built at a cost of $350,000 on land which had been a public beach. The only other major project in that district was an upgrading of about one-half mile of road.

So, for the first time, the district of North Side will have a hurricane shelter, and also on this, it is the first time that the tourists are able to visit the Kaibo Beach and enjoy it because it has been cleaned up. I could go on with this, but I do not want to get into too many details on the other districts.

This morning I was surprised to see an article in the Caymanian Compass headed "Survey Rates Government." If the contents of this article were true, every word in the Throne Speech would have to be a lie. If we believe this survey, which berates the Government, we cannot accept the Throne Speech as being true. I, however, prefer to believe the Throne Speech, because the words in it are backed up by facts.

When they speak of having done something, or planning to do something, we can go back to the Estimates and see that the money has been approved. I do not believe that we should sit idly by and let the Chamber of Commerce get away with this article.

It was Richard Thornburg who said, "If the other guy is out there saying unfair things about you, you have to respond or people will start to think they are right. When you are being attacked by the other guy you had better say something." The only fault I have with the Elected Members of Executive Council is that they have played the gentleman too often with these people who have no interest in this country.

There are two individuals (not Caymanians) who continually berate the Government, yet they earn their daily bread here. As leaders it is wrong for us to allow these people who do not have a pot to pee in, or a window to throw it out of, to get away with this. If their sayings were true that would be a different matter. We would not dare to try to say that the Chamber of Commerce should not criticise. We believe in freedom of speech. They can say whatever they like, providing that it is not libellous. But, when they say it, I feel that the Government should correct it. They should show the areas in which these people have failed.

It was Harry S. Truman who said; "If you want to get on the front page of a newspaper, you should attack someone." Now, the Chamber of Commerce certainly knows how to get on the front page of the newspaper.

I am not certain that their survey actually produced the results which they said. I seem to be quoting authorities all the time... Benjamin Disraeli said; "In estimating the accuracy of a political opinion, one should take into consideration the standing of the opinionist." I understand that there is one gentleman who controls the policy of the Chamber of Commerce; one gentleman who is very angry because of a personal matter with the Government. I am very worried that the Chamber of Commerce, which hitherto had been an organisation of great repute, has allowed the vendetta of this member to cause a deterioration in the standing of the Chamber and to allow it to degenerate into what I call a ribald and a vicious organisation.

As far as I am concerned, the Chamber needs to survey its own actions. It is not carrying out the functions of a Chamber of Commerce when it tries to put down the Government. Constructive criticism is all right, but there are many large matters in business on this Island that could take up the attention of the Chamber of Commerce but they seem to ignore them while they gallivant all over the elected politicians.

When I received my phone bills recently, I noticed what has been going on for a long time: the bill says that this invoice must be paid within 14 days from the date on the invoice (this is contained on the little remittance slip). We know that the bill is made up on the first of the month and only mailed out a few days later. By the time the person gets it, the 14 days are gone. The result would be that his phone lines would be cut off. That is a matter that the Chamber of Commerce should be taking up if it wants to benefit the people of these Islands.

The other big utility is in the same position—Caribbean Utilities gives 21 days from the date of billing to payment. It is not sufficient time. This is a matter the Chamber could well investigate.

I know the policy of Florida Power and Light is that when a bill is mailed to you, you have 90 days in which to pay it, and if it is not paid within 30 days you are charged interest. But you get 90 days before you are cut off. Here our people are cut off after 21 days, the phone is cut off after 14 days. These are serious matters which the Chamber of Commerce could look into.

There is the matter with the cruise ships and how they try to monopolise the business so that it goes to only a few individuals. These are matters that the Chamber of Commerce should look into. When I was making my notes yesterday, I listed about 25 to 30 business matters that are crying out for attention—and the Chamber of Commerce uses its time to be a watch dog for the Elected Members.

They have put themselves in the same position that the press had put itself in during the late 1970s and early 1980s when they thought their business was to run the Government, not to report and criticise or commend what the Government did. The Chamber of Commerce is out of its league, and I believe that there are only one or two people in it—but those two people are very articulate and seem to control and influence the others. I say to the Chamber of Commerce, Pull up your socks and deal with the business of commerce and stop your vendetta against the Elected Members.

Their survey is so unprofessional and so biased that the Caymanian Compass wrote a scathing editorial against it. For example, when they say that the responses they received from North Side could not be published because they only received a few, that tells me that politically they are trying to victimise the North Side Member and perhaps help their favourite previous member who was discarded by the public.

When they tell me that they cannot report the responses received about the Member for East End, I know it is because those responses are good. In my opinion, both the North Side Member and the East End Member received 100% good responses and the Chamber absolutely refused to publish it because they do not like those Members. It is not because the responses are small: the responses must be small because North Side and East End are two of the smallest districts. The population of George Town and West Bay is many times as much—maybe 15 or 20 times as much. So, what do they expect? If they get 20 responses from West Bay, they are lucky to get one from North Side. They hide the responses, claiming that they are too small. No, they got responses and they were good ones.

The editorial in the Caymanian Compass contains almost the same words that I had put in my meagre notes last night. My notes were based on the previous article in the newspaper. They say it is interesting but it must be seen in its proper perspective. I do not know what the writer had in mind, but it is a sound statement. Is this a fair survey? The survey was not done by professional pollsters. We do not know what the error margin is on it. I do know, however, that any questionnaire can be rigged to get the response one wants.

It says: "The Chamber will readily admit that the survey results are not based on scientific procedure, the poll is not representative of the population as a whole, although the results are an indication of what many people believe." The reason why I take the time to answer this survey is because it appears on the very day that we are debating the Throne Speech and I could not honestly say that I agree with the Throne Speech if I did not believe this poll was specially conducted. What is even worse is that the results published were managed so as to reflect the view that the Chamber wants reflected, rather than publishing the response that they received. According to the newspaper they would not tell anybody how many people replied—it might only be the two individuals that I spoke about, we do not know.

The editorial says: "The Chamber declined to reveal how many questionnaires were returned, except to say that the number of completed questionnaires was overwhelming." What does the word 'overwhelming' mean? In the biased mind of two people, the word 'overwhelming' might mean their two responses. "It is therefore impossible to say what portion of the population or even if the Chamber membership responded."

The way the questionnaires were sent out—by post office boxes—regulated, to a certain degree, the replies which would come back. Even the most stupid person must agree with the next paragraph of the editorial: "Having said all this, it is still interesting to see how the overwhelming sense of optimism that swept the Cayman Islands after the last election has turned to a much more critical attitude." How, in such a short space of time, could the electorate, which put this government in power, change when this government has carried out nearly every item set out in their Manifesto?

The other night I had a look at the Manifesto and I only found four items promised by the National Team which have not yet been concluded. One of them was the reduction of the 25 cents on the diesel tax. We know the reasons for that. When the new Government took over, they found the finances of this country in far worse condition than they had expected to find it. But there is a motion before the House now, asking the Government to consider reducing this tax. I do not know what the position of Government is, but they will probably agree because it was a part of their Manifesto. In this short time (two years) they have reversed the years of deficit and turned them into years of surpluses. So, it may well be that this could be done now.

The Chamber seems to believe that if this Government does not mend its ways that it may be rejected at the next election. I guess the Government (because the Members are mortal) has made a few mistakes. I will mention one of them: Not correcting the lies and propaganda being spread by organisations like the Chamber of Commerce and other people. But, I think in order to be elected next year, all this Government has to do is to keep on doing what they have been doing.

The editorial says, "Government performance [speaking about what the survey shows] does not seem to rate highly on any issue, but most poorly regarded are its efforts on the development plan, environmental protection, long-term planning, public consultation and advance notice on bills. This is followed by road improvement and immigration which rates only slightly better."

From 1994 the Chamber has been harping on the fact that the Government is not giving 90 days notice for Bills. I remember saying that during the election time I would support a long notice for Bills, but we also have to consider that there are times when it is impossible for the Government to give long notice because some things come up that are very important that have to be acted upon right away. The Government has been elected to run the country and if something is going amiss, they must take action—and take it swiftly. When things are well ordered, sure, they can publish a Bill and wait six months before it goes into law. But there are times when action has to be taken—and taken right away. If this were not so, the Government would stagnate; the business of the country would come to a halt or would grind to a slow pace and they, the Government, would be accused of lethargy and not taking action. I would rather see a government which acts, doing what it believes is right, and if a Bill is passed which contains some clause that does not sit well with the majority, the Government should amend that Bill, they should not hesitate to amend it. The Government, as the government, must do what it has been elected to do.

It says that the "Government's Election Manifesto contained its intention to improve on public consultation." I think there has been a big improvement—a lot of things are known to the public long before they are known to the Members of this House, and on many occasions the Government has been invited to give their comments.

What amazes me, by the comments in this survey, is that many of them have been heard many times in the past by certain individuals whom we know do not mean this Government any good. For example, I see here a statement which is untrue, but which appeared in a letter to the press only a couple of days ago. The statement is: "It is ridiculous to spend $21 million on the old hospital site."

That same statement appeared in a letter to the press, written by Mr. Ezzard Miller, sometime ago, when he said that the Government had stopped his $16 million new hospital and was spending $20-odd million on the old one—identical to the words in this survey. If one looks at the Throne Speech (I think it is on page 17) it is made abundantly clear that the Government is not spending this $20-odd million on the old hospital. I will read the exact words: "The Master Planning Study for the development of the present George Town Hospital site was completed in 1994 and approved by Executive Council in November. The construction of new facilities will commence later this month. These new [I repeat the word NEW] facilities will be built in phases and are expected to include Paediatric, Physiotherapy, Maternity, Neonatal and Mental Health units as well as a Surgical Ward, Operating Theatres and a Maternity Operating Room. A Forensic Laboratory, Materials Management Building, Hospice/Geriatric Unit and Chapel will be amongst the new features. Additionally the Casualty/Emergency Department, Medical, Intensive Care, Radiology and Dialysis units, Pharmacy and Medical Records will be provided with urgently needed space."

While the new plan will undoubtedly use whatever of the old hospital is still in good condition, the bulk of it is going to be new. But, you know why we hear this comment from the Chamber of Commerce? Because they cannot accept the fact that this Government will be providing a hospital on the 13 acres site—which is already there on one site—instead of the nonsense split site that had been proposed. They know full well that when this purpose-built medical facility is completed on one site there will be a substantial reduction in the cost of operating it as compared to a facility which might have been built on two separate sites.

As to the public turning so quickly against the Government, as far as I am concerned, all the Elected Members here (at least those who were elected on the National Team—certainly the Bodden Town Members) were elected to stop the hospital, to stop the madness and to have an economical and workable hospital.

The other thing that strangles the opposition to the Government is the fact that—as set out in the Throne Speech—the hospital will be built in phases. In the middle of the paragraph I just read, it said that these will be built in phases which means that they will be built not all this year, but in the years to come as the government can afford. This must be hard for some people to accept, but these are the facts.

I am not surprised at the comments in this survey. But I found it difficult to believe that my friend from West Bay, the Honourable McKeever Bush, or I should say, the Honourable Minister of Executive Council, received a low rating in looking after the affairs of his district.

There has been no Member of this House either present or past—not even in the days of Jim Bodden—who showed more love and respect for the needs of the people in the district. I go to West Bay, and I probably know more West Bay people than most people who live outside the district because I have been going there for years, and everyone that I speak to gives that gentleman top marks for his efforts. He may not always be right—and he does not want to always be right because the man is mortal, and if he gets too perfect the gods may take him [Members' laughter]. He has done a good job in representing his people, and for them to say in this survey that he gets zero marks—a lot of marks have to be wrong. A bogus survey.

One of the comments is that the decision to remodel the George Town Hospital was a hasty one which could backfire. That was probably written by the same people that signed the contract for the hospital which the public asked us to stop. That contract was signed on the eve of the election, despite all the technical people in the government—including that of the Governor himself, I understand. Now they say that this decision was hasty? The public demonstrated to stop that hospital in the swamp. I, myself, marched with the noble throng that day.

All through the campaign at every election meeting the cry from the candidates was that if we get elected we will stop the hospital. I know that every time Roy and I mentioned it in Bodden Town, we got tremendous applause. I do not think the feelings of the public have changed. We are now on the right track.

Whose hospital does he think is best—Ezzard's or the National Team's? Confused? I bet—you are right, they are confused [Members' laughter]. Confusion!

It has been said that when you are in the majority you should vote, but when you are in the minority you should talk. [Members' laughter] I believe they are carrying out that political axiom. They know they are in the minority; in fact, they are singular in their beliefs. So they can talk, and talk, without any substance or without any facts to bring it up.

My good friend, the Honourable Minister for Aviation, also got low marks. I do not know what he has done to these gentlemen who control this organisation. How can they give him low marks when he single-handedly rescued Cayman Airways—single-handedly made education bloom within this country again. He has plans, as set out in the Throne Speech for continuing to upgrade the educational system. I know that there are a lot of people who do not like his manner, one of the reasons being that he works too hard and really does not have the time to palaver with these no-gooders who do not work. But to give him a below average for education and a below average for aviation is an insult to the intelligence of the people of the Cayman Islands...

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: ...who know better, who have seen better.

They gave my colleague from Bodden Town low marks for his representation. In fairness I must say that cannot be right, because everyone knows that he has tried to put forward whatever any constituent whispers in his ear. So, whether they like my friend or not, they need to be honest, because they are putting the survey out as by belief; and, if they were charged for putting forward an honest survey, they could not be convicted.

The Chamber has, in my estimation, fallen to below average because even if they received a few crank responses, it is their responsibility as an organisation of worthwhile objects and aims to present to the public not only the crank observations, but the good ones they received about the Elected Members for North Side and East End.

The Throne Speech mentioned the action being taken by the Planning Department and indicated that two hotels will be coming on line sometime this year. I can only wonder if one of these is the hotel to be situated in Bodden Town.

I saw in the newspaper some months ago that the Central Planning Authority had approved the construction of the hotel in Pease Bay. But, reading from the article, which I must admit was not clear, I got the impression that some 17 or 19 restrictions had been put on it—it had been given permission but there were some 17 or 19 conditions that would have to be met. It appeared to me that these trivial conditional requests had been the work of someone in the Planning Department, and I am asking the Member to examine this and find out why it is we cannot get a hotel in Bodden Town. I understand that the big objector is a stranger to our land—a person who does not care whether there is development in that area or not.

Bodden Town is the only district that does not have a tourist facility. There are hotels in George Town; on the West Bay Beach; West Bay; North Side; East End; Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Bodden Town is the only district that does not have a hotel.

It is strange that quite recently rapid approval was given to a hotel on the Seven Mile Beach, an area that is almost saturated with hotels. Yet, when somebody applied to put in the first hotel in the Bodden Town district, stumbling blocks are put in the way by the Department of Planning and the Central Planning Authority. I am asking the Minister to investigate this matter and to urge these people to have a new look at this.

This hotel would provide work for the Bodden Town district. Very few of them work in the tourist industry and those who work have to travel to Seven Mile Beach to get employment. I understand that this facility would have been a first class one; and one of the things to go along with it was that the people were prepared to clear the island channel which is the deepest channel in Bodden Town and the only one that can be safely used by a big boat.

Anybody can object. We find that the objections come from people who are not hurt if the development does not go through. There has to be a balance between the nonsense spread by the environmentalists. We live, as far as I am concerned, in a world where the human being must come first—not the little prickly pear or the little water snake—man must not become extinct because certain people have the clout to raise objections.

So, as the Throne Speech says: "The Planning Department was kept busy, having processed for approval a total of 585 applications valued at $137.2 million", we, in Bodden Town, would like to see this hotel go ahead.

I am alarmed about the addition of seven planners to the Planning Department. I was hoping that they would cut the staff in half. Maybe then we could get along with the job in Planning and the job of building this economy, rather than having dozens of people listening to all the silly objections which flow from the mouths of those who really have no interest in this Island.

Whatever we may say about economic growth, we must remember that we cannot do anything in a country—we cannot feed the poor, we cannot help the homeless—unless there is economic growth. The country must go forward, it cannot stagnate, and it cannot go backwards because the standard of living will fall.

The Throne Speech outlined one fact that we need to seriously look at. It said that the importation at the Port in Grand Cayman increased by a reasonable percentage, while in Cayman Brac they decreased. I have no idea what caused the decrease of importation into Cayman Brac, perhaps it is because there is not enough economic activity. The Planning Department needs to give special attention to Cayman Brac, because in the Throne Speech there is a paragraph that deals with the need for repairing the Port dock at Cayman Brac. This is necessary for the safety of the vessels, and is necessary to keep the dock from further deterioration. If there is to be a large capital expenditure on this dock, which I support wholeheartedly, we need to look at the proper utilisation of the port so that in times to come it will be able to pay its own way.

I cannot close without congratulating the Honourable Member whose score was not published, that is, the Minister for Agriculture, on the improvements at the George Town Post Office—both inside and outside of the building. There has been a face lift which has been needed for many years. Despite the refusal to publish his score on another matter, I can only say that I feel proud when I go into the Post Office now and see the new counters and the pleasant staff that is there, and I am very happy that he is not as bad as the score makes him look.

One of the most remarkable events of this year has been the new road by the airport. The Government has come under a lot of fire for this, but when we consider that an additional 600 feet of runway is now available for the use of aircraft at such a low cost, this is really a feat to boast about. If the airport had been extended into the North Sound, as some had suggested, to provide this additional 600 feet, we would have had a cost of many millions of dollars. Perhaps the time will come when the airport will have to be extended into the North Sound, but what has been done is practical management of the facilities that already existed and could not be used.

It is true that there was some discord when the stop signs held the traffic on the main highway and allowed the right-of-way to the traffic from the airport, but this has been corrected and is working well and there is nothing wrong with trying something and if it does not work, we change it around.

So the job of increasing the use of the runway which existed, will benefit all airlines. There were a few who said that we were doing it for one aircraft, but on a short runway such as we had, every aircraft was in danger. The increase in length will benefit the users, the pilots who have to make the decisions, and best of all, the safety of the passengers.

The speech mentioned the work of the Legal Department, the Police, and the Courts, how they are coping with some of the problems. I seldom read the crime reports in the newspaper, but yesterday I was alarmed to read of the many cases that had come before the courts of people driving while intoxicated. There must have been 6 to 10 cases mentioned which had been dealt with in the courts. This has become a serious problem on our roads.

Sometime ago, we had fatal accidents which were attributed to drunkenness, and I think the Government should increase the penalties for driving while intoxicated because when we have a drunk driver on the road, every user of the road is put in peril. I would support increased penalties, including jail sentences and loss of licence.

I think Government should take a look at the law and if they feel that it is not sufficiently harsh, they should increase it.

The Speech dealt with the role of the Public Works Department in maintaining public buildings and taking care of all of the elements of Government's infrastructure. The large capital works programme for this year will be carried out either by Public Works or by contractors who will work under the supervision of the department. We know that it is never possible to satisfy the public when it comes to road works. It is really comforting to see that each district has been allotted a certain sum of money this year which will be used for maintenance and repair of roads. The district of Bodden Town has been allotted some $400,000 for construction and repair for the roads. I would like to personally thank the Finance Committee and the Executive Council for this provision.

We note that the oil companies will provide the facility for supplying Public Works Department and the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services with fuel and lubrication services. They will have provisions for servicing emergency vehicles on a 24-hour basis. They will make it easier for the larger trucks to be serviced. This is something that has been needed for a long time and, hopefully, because of the more efficient facility Government will have better control of their vehicles.

I mentioned that I would not endeavour in one speech to list the many positive aspects of the Throne Speech; I think it would become too tedious. Therefore, Madam Speaker, I would like to close by saying if the Government continues to do as they have done in the past, the little flurries from the Chamber of Commerce will certainly not affect their standing among the real people of the Cayman Islands. Those few people who are outside will always find something to bark about. I am always consoled by the book of Revelation which tells me that "without are dogs and whore-mongers", but I believe that the people who really matter are satisfied with the Government and will continue to support them because they continue to do a good job.

[Members: Hear, hear!]

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.26 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.59 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. [Long pause]
The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Thank you for your patience in that no one would rise. Since I am not shy, I will come to the rescue and offer my input on the 1995 Throne Speech.

Madam Speaker, this was a very positive and upbeat speech, and I appreciate all of the effort that went into producing this, outlining the projects and the works for 1995.

One of the statements in the introduction of His Excellency's speech was, and I quote: "it has taken a while for us to realise how necessary it is to keep Government spending within the resources now available to us."

This is quite a switch from two years ago when we had overspending. If we are responsible representatives and we have responsible civil servants then we must work within the resources that we have, and keep the Government spending within those resources that are available to us. I believe this was the main theme of his speech, at least I tend to think so.

Unfortunately, we do have some serious problems: everything is not a bed of roses. But then life is never intended to be easy in anything we put our hands to. We have the influx of Cuban migrants and all the problems that have arisen over the past several months.

I believe that we have been too soft. In fact here it says: "We have been loath to return the Cubans to Havana." Caymanian people on a whole are very hospitable, very receptive and kind to others in need. But, Madam Speaker, I feel that we should have given them food and had them continue on their way as it has really burdened our three islands, our resources and services. Resentment has come about as some of our people feel that their needs are not being met—yet the Cubans are being served three meals a day, with free medical and everything else that goes with opening our arms to the Cubans.

I realise that they are human beings, they have feelings, and we could be in their same shoes, and that we cannot completely turn our backs on them. But, enough is enough. I noticed in the news this morning that more are leaving for Havana, but this should have happened several months ago. It is not the fault of the British Government, or the Cayman Government, that they have had to seek visas from the United States outside of Cuba in the hope of getting to the United States. I feel that they have not addressed the problem with Castro being in power for over 33 years; take care of him and get help to get rid of him so that they can get their country back in order.

I am a little reluctant... I am scared of Castro, if the doors ever open up. What will happen to us and our tourism and banking and all the other economic freedoms that we are enjoying? Should we be helping when in turn he is probably smiling and saying, "Oh yes, this way I can help my economy and begin to build my tourism." In the mean time, several years down the line we will be suffering.

Earlier this morning, the Minister shared the tour that was taken in Bermuda in investigating the regiment and the development of a cadet corps for our young people. I am pleased to know that this includes men and women. In times of need, especially in time of disaster, we can fall back on this cadet corps or regiment, and have some help. It will also develop self-esteem and discipline among those in the regiment.

The churches are doing a good job, not only for our spiritual well being, but they are also working with our young people. They have several youth programmes going in all of the churches. Maybe not all of the youth attend like adults would like for them to be attending, but I would like to commend the churches for the part that they play in the Caymanian society.

Moving on to the different sections: In the Judiciary I am happy to learn that a review of the legal aid system has begun. I have heard publicly that this needed to be addressed and that certain firms were getting more legal aid cases than others. One particular lawyer even mentioned that if he continued with more legal aid cases that he would have to consider closing down. This might be a bit over-stretched, but I feel that a review is necessary and I am very happy that it is taking place.

The Judicature Law is placed on the Order Paper for this Session, after having been made public back in November. I think that this is a useful law and I look forward to all of my colleagues supporting it.

I realise that there should be a separation of the judiciary from politics. I must comment, however, on some of the sentencing that I have read about in the paper in the last few weeks, especially on the defilement case of the 14-year old child; sentences for theft by bank employees and an increase in driving while intoxicated. We, as politicians, must be separated from the judiciary; yet our constituents are very concerned as well about the sentencing and what is taking place.

Sometimes we hear the comment that the laws are written for the criminal and not the victim. Perhaps it is time that younger magistrates be awarded contracts—maybe the present ones are too old, and not in the best interests for justice in our Islands.

Last year the Civil Service amended their General Orders, and it was gratifying to see that male and female officers are now treated equally in all aspects of the Civil Service. I am not saying that males do not have their place, and with the Biblical society that people from our Islands were raised in, where the female is submissive to the male, I can understand how this was neglected for so many years.

As a matter of fact, in going to the library of the archives, I was thrilled to see and read the petition by women petitioning to be able to vote in these Islands. Most of the people who had signed it were women I knew in our community. I was pleased to see that they had spoken out. I am very happy that this has taken place and that female officers will be treated equally in the civil service. I believe that women have their equal rights, not as individuals, but rather based on their ability.

A permanent register of voters is being considered and this can only help in our elections so that the huge task of streamlining and registering individuals to vote will be done quicker and more efficiently for the next election and those to come.

In the Throne Speech, His Excellency said that "the Cayman Islands remain one of the safest countries in the world in which to live or visit..." and even though we hear that crime is on the increase, statistics are apparently not being kept for some of these crimes that are taking place, such as abuse in the home. We are perhaps more aware of what is taking place with the public relations officer established in the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force.

This works both ways, Madam Speaker, in the public being made aware of crimes committed—maybe we thought that these crimes did not exist before—we are more aware that we need to protect ourselves and not put temptation in one's way. Also we should be more cautious.

Some of the programmes, like Crime Stoppers and Neighbourhood Watch, seem to be very effective and they should be complimented for the success they have in helping the Royal Cayman Islands Police deal with crime.

In the previous sitting last year, I shared some statistics on crime via the super-link highway in California. I hope that these statistics, since they were challenged, even though they were by the hundred thousand, and Cayman placed very high in those statistics, I hope that the Department of Statistics has been able to correct this and help in changing the statistics that were printed and sent out saying that we were very high in crime. As a matter of fact, in the Daily Mirror, earlier this year, it states that Cayman was the fourth highest in crime in the world. If these statistics are being put out they should be corrected as this was in England, and it goes all over the world. The superhighway was in California for North America. This is very damaging for our Islands and it should be corrected.

About three weeks ago I had the task of going to the Prison to visit an inmate and I am a bit upset because the individual has been there from the 26th January, and will not have an assessment until the 15th of March. If this individual had mental problems prior to this, I would have thought that counselling, or an assessment, would have been speeded up. He could have been given an opportunity for an appointment sooner, as this is a very long time to wait for an assessment.

I am happy to see that drug counselling from the counselling centre will be given high priority. Having encountered this situation and listening to some of the other individuals who visit the prison, this seems to be one of the major concerns with Her Majesty's Prison, in that they are not given the opportunity to receive drug counselling and other counselling needed while they are at Northward Prison.

The Department will continue with its Education Programme so that when individuals come back into the community their self-esteem will be improved. They will have some type of trade that they can use to go back into the society and be better citizens in the hope that they will not return to Northward. So, I hope that the Education Programme will get started as funding was approved for the 1995 fiscal year.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, it is now 4.30 PM the hour for interruption. But, before I ask for the motion of adjournment, I would like to bring to the attention of Members that Mr. Calvin Glidden, the brother of the Sergeant-at-Arms (Mr. Cline Glidden), is seriously ill in the hospital. I am sure that Members would like me to express our hope for the best. We shall be praying for the whole family during this time.

May I ask the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning, Leader of Government Business, to move the adjournment of the House?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I have pleasure in moving the adjournment of this Honourable House until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that the House do now adjourn until ten o'clock, tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until tomorrow morning at ten o'clock.

AT 4.31 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 9 MARCH 1995.

THURSDAY
9 MARCH, 1995
10.05 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order! Proceedings are resumed in the Legislative Assembly.

Questions to Honourable Members. Question No. 10, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS

QUESTION 10

No. 10. Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Development, what was the cost to Government for the closure of Finsbury Bank and how does Government intend to recoup the cost.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The amount paid out to the Government's appointed controller and his lawyers in connection with the closure of Finsbury Bank was C1$124,488. Of this sum, C1$121,548 is reimbursable to Government by the liquidators of Finsbury Bank, and legal proceedings are being taken against them to recover it.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, could the Honourable Member say if these legal proceedings have actually taken place or are they in progress at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, I understand that while legal proceedings are entrain, the current position is as follows: The status of the proceedings against the liquidators of Finsbury Bank for the funds reimbursable to the Government is that, discussions are continuing with a view to settlement and it is hoped that an amicable resolution will be reached.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. I wonder if the Honourable Member could state whether the liquidators will be liable for the costs of the legal proceedings?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, according to information provided by the Honourable Attorney General the costs are included in the claim.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Member say if the bank is counter suing the Government on the basis that it was wrongly closed down by the Government?

The Speaker: I am not certain that is part of the original question. The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Madam Speaker, I appreciate your intervention. According to the Attorney General there is no counter claim.

QUESTION 11

No. 11. Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member for Finance and Development, what is the total cost of the publicity seminars on the Cayman Islands recently held in New York, London and Hong Kong.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The cost of the Cayman Islands' overseas' Conferences is broken down as follows:

Fixed cost: developmental fee	$130,000
Variable cost: hosting expenses, receptions and collateral material (maximum)	96,000
Conference space and equipment	9,000
Travel	36,653
Accommodation	28,224
Subsistence	9,900
Gross Cost:	$309,777

The Conference attendees were required to pay a fee of US$150 yielding a total of CI$52,200 in revenue. This results in a net cost for the Conference of approximately $257,577.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Member elaborate on the developmental fee, and could he also say if spouses of Members of the delegation were paid for on this trip?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the developmental fee was the amount paid to the Conference Organisers, International Business Communications Incorporated, the firm that was commissioned to organise the conferences. On the second question, the costs of spouses were borne by themselves.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Member say to what extent this figure of $257,577 would have been reduced had not the Elected Members of Government gone along on this particular trip?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: [addressing the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac] Jealousy is going to kill you!

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the three items that would have been affected are, travel, accommodation and subsistence. From what can be seen here, this would represent a marginal reduction in that figure. It would not have been a significant percentage of the cost.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 12, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 12. Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Development, (a) what was the total number of employees working for Guardian Bank at the time Government appointed persons to assume its management; and (b) what is its current status as a bank.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The total number of employees working for Guardian Bank at the time Government appointed persons to assume its management was 20. Part (b): Its current status as a bank is that its banking and trust licences were revoked on 24th January, 1995, and it was placed in compulsory liquidation on 10th February, 1995. Messrs. Christopher Johnson and John Dinan of Coopers & Lybrand have been appointed as official liquidators.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The bank having being placed into compulsory liquidation, does it mean then, in effect, the 20 persons are no longer employed and only the liquidators are now doing whatever is necessary in relation to the bank? And, was the bank placed into liquidation by Government itself or by its shareholders?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the company was put in compulsory liquidation by the Court on the petition of the Government.

On the question of staff, those staff members that the Inspector of Financial Services has taken the decision that they should remain to assist with the liquidation are currently employed.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker. If the Honourable Third Official Member has the information, I wonder if he could confirm how many members of the staff are Caymanian?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the number is 14.

QUESTION 13

No. 13. Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, to provide the details of the programmes implemented against the spread of sexually transmitted diseases (STD) since he took office.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Over the last year, the Ministry has been fully committed to the prevention and control of sexually transmitted diseases (STDs).

As a reflection of this commitment, having recognised the need to strengthen programmes on STDs, the Ministry has appointed an STD Coordinator who is based in the Public Health Department. The STD Coordinator offers pre-test and post-test counselling, organises follow up treatments on contacts, and participates in educational programmes.

The Ministry is also committed to an accessible and confidential STD screening service and our aim is to maintain an effective treatment programme for people with STDs and their contacts.

As a result, a comprehensive programme of training for healthcare workers, both public and private, has been implemented, including Seminars on HIV/AIDS and the management of STDs.

To promote greater awareness of the prevention of STDs and screening for STDs, the Public Health Department has designated the last week in November as STD Awareness Week. During that week in 1994, a number of activities took place including free STD screening, distribution of leaflets on STDs via all mailboxes, radio spots, interviews with health professionals on radio and television, as well as education sessions for local schools.

In addition, continuing community education programmes have been developed. To date, the Health Promotion Officer and STD Coordinator have run training sessions for voluntary organisations, schools, the Prison and local companies.

Pan American Health Organisation (PAHO) funding has been obtained to organise seminars for teachers during 1995 to equip them with knowledge to be utilised as they see fit, depending upon the ages of children they deal with.

Finally, in mid-October, 1994, a two day workshop was arranged to update doctors and nurses on the management of HIV infections and AIDS. Two eminent specialists from the University of Miami School of Medicine were the guest presenters at these extremely well attended seminars and participants were enthusiastic at being exposed to the very latest techniques in dealing with HIV infections and AIDS.

I must add, Madam Speaker, that I did attend this last seminar and it was quite a revealing thing.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister say what support was received from those elements of the community to which the education programmes were targeted and also, what follow-up plans are there by his Ministry for continued dispensation of information?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, we continue to have these awareness sessions and the feedback that we keep getting from the public is very good.

I would ask if the Honourable Member could repeat the last part of his question, I did not get that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. What plans are there for continuation or follow-up of these programmes set in place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker, we plan to keep working with the television, the radio, and meeting with the people. As was probably heard this morning through the media, Mrs. Pauline French was appointed coordinator of the STDs, and this will lead us and guide us in a definitive position where we have only one person dealing with it with much support.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In the answer provided by the Honourable Minister, there were some references to schools. I want to know at what level are you coming in at, is it at the primary level through to the High School? And, how often are these visits made?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: This information is disbursed at all levels, but with the pertinent information depending on the actual age-level within the schools. We are also working with the Education Department to include it in the curriculum.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The reason why I asked the question is that I was just recently informed that there is a student at the primary school level who is now infected with AIDS. I want to know what plans the Government has in place or plan to put in place to educate our students at a very early age as to the dangers of STDs or AIDS?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

This is certainly a tragedy at this the primary school level. But this is what our Public Health Department is dedicated to—getting into the schools at as early a level as possible. Also, in relation to drugs, we will be getting into the schools at a much earlier level than has been happening before.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: I heard the announcement this morning with regard to the appointment of the coordinator. What size staff is she going to be working with? It is impossible for her as one individual to do very much. What kind of contingencies as far as staff is concerned do you envisage?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, this lady will be the coordinator but at her disposal she will have all of the Public Health doctors and nurses to give her assistance as needed.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say if the Public Health system has the ability now, to determine results for the various diseases when tests are taken?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker. I have been made aware that through the Hospital Laboratory all these diseases can be confirmed.

No. 14. Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to state why the new clinic in Bodden Town is being erected on that particular site?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I am very pleased to say that the Ministry of Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation has not only been very careful in the selection of the site for the new Bodden Town Health Centre, but it has also complied with the requirements of the Public Sector Investment Committee and the Central Planning Authority in this regard. In addition, the Ministry consulted the constituents of the Bodden Town district at a meeting held at the district Town Hall on 19 May 1994. Over 50 persons were in attendance at the presentation where the need for a new health centre was outlined and the various options for its location described with the aid of charts. The option of purchasing land for the purpose was described as prohibitive and it was therefore considered prudent to erect the health centre on Government's property next to the civic centre and right across from the police station.

Finally, at that meeting I put it to the people of Bodden Town that if they were comfortable with the proposed location, construction could begin in two to three months.

Madam Speaker, the overwhelming response was that a new health centre was desperately needed and that construction on that location should proceed as soon as possible. With the support of the constituents, construction of the new facility was initiated.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say if one of the options outlined was the possibility of construction of the clinic at a different section of land in that general vicinity presently owned by the Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, originally, certain areas were looked at but when we met on site with the Public Works Department with regard to the development of the playing field, because of the amount of space that was needed, it would have been almost cramped with the playing field coming against the clinic. That is why we decided on siting it in this location.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say if it will become necessary now to purchase additional land for parking after the completion of the clinic?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Madam Speaker.

The design that has been shown to me by the Public Works Department and the architects shows very much adequate space for the clinic going toward the civic centre and for the police station on the east side. Once you go there and see the space between the two buildings, and the layout, I have no doubt that we have adequate space.

No. 15. Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, how many patients have been referred to the Baptist Hospital since the agreement has been in place?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Since the signing of the contract with Baptist Hospital in late July 1994, the number of patients referred up to the end of January 1995, was 128.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Is the Honourable Minister in a position to say how this compares with patients referred to the Cleveland Clinic for the same period of time, and, also, any savings that may have been realised?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I think that is far beyond the question that has been put. Research would certainly have to be done to get the figures and probably comparative figures of patients.

If the Honourable Minister could provide that at a later date, he may so indicate. Honourable Minister for Health.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I will certainly undertake to pass the information on to the Honourable House.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Minister give any indication as to the overall costs involved with the 128 patients that have been referred to the Baptist Hospital?

The Speaker: I think that is another supplementary that would certainly require further investigation. If the Honourable Minister would undertake to provide the figures in due course... Honourable Minister.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker, as has been requested.

QUESTION 16

No. 16. Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture to give an update on the Manpower Development Study presently being conducted.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, it is a well known fact that this Government is concerned about the training and long-range career development of able and willing Caymanians as a means of fostering sustainable economic development and continued labour tranquility. The articulation of well-defined and workable manpower development policies and strategies are essential tools for achieving these important objectives.

As Honourable Members should be aware, Government's policy on manpower development and training supports the Caymanianisation of positions within the public and private sectors whenever there are competent Caymanians to fill these positions. The policy further requires that adequate training programmes become common place in order to ensure that Caymanians are able to fill responsible positions consistent with career paths and succession planning and the development and monitoring of workable and specific labour budgets.

In order to fully examine this policy for implementation, Executive Council appointed an Advisory Committee in July 1994, and my Ministry developed broad terms of reference to guide the Committee in its deliberations.

The Manpower Development Advisory Committee, is comprised of 20 members representing a broad cross-section of knowledge and expertise from the private and public sectors, all of whom have been working diligently in accordance with the Committee's terms of reference.

The general terms of reference for this Advisory Committee are:

- (1) Review existing studies, surveys and policy directives on the subject and identify existing issues or potential obstacles to Government's policy objectives.
- (2) Consult with employers/ employee groups and professional or trade associations or other bodies on problems and realistic approaches to solutions.
- (3) Consider appropriate solutions and make recommendations.
- (4) Advise on any institutional or regulatory or tracking mechanisms which may be necessary to ensure the consistent execution of any accepted policy initiative or strategy.
- (5) Prepare a report to Executive Council by June 1995, with recommendations for the establishment and implementation of a National Manpower Development Strategy.

Madam Speaker, ours is a country which has significant over-employment, together with a large number of foreign workers, due to a lack of persons and skills to fill all of the demand for labour and skills in our economy. We are a service economy, which suggests that the development of skills, a sound work ethic, and good attitudes are of strategic importance if these Islands are to remain competitive in the global market place.

At the same time there are undeniable and well documented cases of unfair treatment and insensitivity to the upward mobility of some of our qualified and/or experienced and willing Caymanians.

Government is confident that this initiative is a bold step towards meeting Cayman's needs for long-range manpower development and labour tranquility whilst working within a free enterprise philosophy. The mandate of this Government calls upon us to actively pursue this important policy through effective leadership.

No longer can we continue to address this strategic interest with Band-Aid solutions; instead time is of the essence to deal with this challenge in a comprehensive, equitable and responsible manner.

The Committee is presently undertaking a survey of private sector employers to gather information on existing policies and practices regarding the training and career development of their Caymanian employees. The information from this survey will assist the Committee in making well informed recommendations to Government on this subject.

The Committee expects to report to Government in June of this year. If the recommendations are accepted, Government will formalise its policy framework together with assessing the institutional strengthening which may be needed to support the manpower development and training strategy.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say if, whenever the policy framework is formalised, the leaning will be towards dealing with the public sector as a priority simply because that may be more readily accessible?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I think in this answer I have laid out the policy as initiated by this Government. The broad framework will be formalised in dealing with the private sector. The Government's policy speaks for the country, but we all know the Governor is constitutionally responsible for the public sector, that is, the civil servants.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Just to explain, if I was not clear, I simply asked the question because if the manpower development and training strategy is developed and put in place in the private sector—while I understand the chain of command with the Governor being in charge of the Civil Service—is this something that is expected to be adopted by the mechanism which provides upward mobility within the Service?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I can only add further to what I have said, by saying that the Civil Service Training Unit and the Personnel Department of the Civil Service are both represented on the Committee. I think I answered the rest of the question in the first supplementary.

QUESTION 17

No. 17: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture if the Government is giving any consideration to the establishment of a National Pension Scheme.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: As I have been saying for the past year or so, Government is committed to developing a fair and workable National Pension Plan framework for the Cayman Islands.

Government's stated policy on pensions calls for the introduction of legislation to enable Government, through a relevant inspectorate, to properly regulate existing and future private pension plans.

In order to fully examine this policy for implementation, Executive Council appointed an Advisory Committee in July 1994, and my Ministry developed broad terms of reference to guide the Committee in its deliberations.

The National Pensions Plan Advisory Committee, is comprised of 13 members representing a broad cross-section of knowledgeable individuals from the private sector, together with a number of public sector counterparts, all of whom have been working diligently in accordance with the Committee's terms of reference.

The general terms of reference are:

- (1) Review guidelines and regulations of existing public sector and private sector pension plans or proposals.
- (2) Identify prudent and equitable provisions and safeguards.
- (3) Consult non-Government and private organisations on their plans, as well as on their ideas or suggestions in achieving Government's policy objectives.
- (4) Advise on the institutional and regulatory mechanisms which would be needed to monitor and enforce the Law.
- (5) Prepare a report to Executive Council which may be used as drafting instructions for a National Pensions Plan Law.

Clearly, there is an urgent need for a National Pensions Plan framework for these Islands. Government's role would be to prescribe the legislative environment, establish a regulatory authority and licence the companies that will be allowed to provide pension plans in these Islands.

Some of the minimum standards which have been identified to date include:

- (a) Immediate vesting of the employee's and employer's contributions for the benefit of the employee.
- (b) Portability between private plans or employer plans within the Cayman Islands.
- (c) Prudent and conservative investment guidelines which produce the maximum yield.
- (d) Equal contributions from both the employee and employer, at a level which provides a reasonable retirement benefit.
- (e) Mandatory plan for all employers and employees in Cayman.

- (f) Existing plans which meet the minimum standards will be allowed to continue, even if with a phasing-in period.

Madam Speaker, the Committee is also concerned about the "graying of Cayman" and the tremendous financial liability associated with this phenomenon. Many of our elderly people are of limited means, either due to the inability to accumulate sufficient retirement provisions or having depleted what little provisions they may have had. This Government has tried to respond to this.

Through the Social Services Department, we have increased the financial assistance to the elderly twice in the past two years (from $50 in 1992, to $75 in 1993, and then to $125 at the last Budget sitting). Hopefully, ideas will emerge from the review exercise by the Committee on how best to deal with the issue of financial assistance to the elderly citizens in these Islands.

The Committee is presently undertaking a survey of private sector employers to establish the state of pension plans availability in Cayman. The information from this survey will assist it in making the well-informed recommendations to Government on this subject. The Committee expects to report to Government in June of this year. Government intends to introduce appropriate legislation and a regulatory framework during 1995.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I thank the Honourable Minister for the abundance of information that has been provided.

I would just like to ask the Honourable Minister if any consideration has been given, or might be given down line, in comparing the various plans from the companies which might be licensed in order that the possibility may exist that one plan be accepted based on having put together the consortium of plans?

When I get that answer, I might be able to follow-up with what I am really trying to get at.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I think the answer, as the Member himself agreed, was quite specific. We are not considering a one-pension-plan-situation. It will be multiple plans once they conform to minimum standards.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I will best try and explain in a little more detail what I am trying to get at.

Looking into the future when plans have been made available to the Government for them to consider licensing these bodies, from a cost point of view (by way of contribution and the benefits that are to be derived) that will vary from plan to plan, would the Government not quite rightly wish for the best plan to be the one that the people have access to? That is my question.

While I understand the free enterprise system, if it is simply to licence bodies to provide these pension plans and people will simply be paying into any plan without knowledge of which is best, I am wondering if the Government would not be considering taking some of that responsibility, because many of the people, including the employers, might not be in a position or know which is the best plan.

If I am going too far with this, I will take it back. But this is what I am trying to achieve.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the Government's position is that we are going to be a Regulatory Body that will prescribe minimum standards. There will have to be more than one plan in the country because I believe from what was said to us in recent times, and what had been said to us leading up to the Election when we canvassed the country on pensions, people were not satisfied that Government was getting in as a pension provider. Therefore, we took the position that we will be regulating pension plans and mandating minimums. Of course, people who have better plans will not be able to downgrade their plans.

We are certainly not going to be a provider of pension plans. There are going to be multiple plans in the country as the people want except, again to say that they have to conform to the minimum. Thank you.

QUESTION 18

No. 18. Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, what are the Government's plans are for the future use of the property in Breakers known as the "Hawley Estate", originally purchased to be used as a Drug Rehabilitation Centre.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The Strategic Plan for Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation has addressed the urgent need for local rehabilitation facilities and has made recommendations for a comprehensive approach that will meet the needs of drug abusers and the community at large.

It is anticipated that later this year, once all the required procedures have been completed, that the necessary renovations to the buildings will commence.

The proposed date for commencement operation of the Rehabilitation Centre has not been set as yet.

In the meantime, voluntary work on the grounds of the Hawley estate to prevent further deterioration has been undertaken, both by the staff and inmates of Northward Prison.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

While I fully understand the answer, which says that the proposed date for commencement of operation of the Rehabilitation Centre has not been set as yet, I wonder if the Honourable Minister might be able to give us some timeframe when we might be able to expect this based on what information he might have available to him, or any thrust that he might know is going forward with this matter?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker. A lot of the design work is now, and has been in place for the idea of this facility. It will be submitted shortly to Executive Council because there was no money approved in this year's budget for it. But knowing of the desperation and, as we all know, each time we pick up a newspaper, the judges, the prosecutors, and the defense attorneys continue to talk about the necessity of this facility, I must say at this time that what we now have is more of a place where people who are using drugs are going. So, we are hoping that as soon as we can get in there this problem will be eliminated and we will get down to treatment, getting many of these problems solved and getting these addicts off the streets and back on a desired course.

The Speaker: The last supplementary. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wish it to be very clear in my mind . . . the second paragraph of the answer, which referred to the necessary renovations to the buildings that will commence, . . . are we talking about the Hawley Estate?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker, estimates have been done by the Public Works Department and it is just a matter of getting things rolling.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for today. Government Business. Suspension of Standing Order 14(3), the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(3)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 83, I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(3) to allow the debate on the Throne Speech to continue as was recommended by the Standing Business Committee of the House.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(3) be suspended in order that the debate on the Throne Speech might be continued today, today being Private Members' day.

I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order is accordingly suspended.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(3) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER OTHER BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Debate will continue on the Throne Speech. The Third Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Continuing with the debate, I would like to touch on the Department of Immigration. This is one department that I hear a lot of complaints from the public at large about the delays in dealing with work permit applications or for residency and mostly for temporary work permits.

In the past, an application for a temporary work permit was processed within three or four days. Now, such an application is taking almost two weeks.

In 1994, the Queen's visit was blamed for everything by every department; and the Cuban refugees are getting the blame in 1995. But things in our community are being neglected: status applications for those who are eligible for status, applications for work permits are taking four or five months, lives are at stake and I think that an overall review of the administration of this department needs to be looked at very carefully and seriously as it is affecting a lot of businesses and individual plans so that people can continue with their everyday lives.

The Review of the Local Companies (Control) Law and the Trade and Business (Licencing) Law is very necessary. The problem of fronting... I am sure most of the Honourable Members of this House have seen the Newstar Magazine where my colleague, the Second Elected Member for George Town and I expressed our feelings in dealing with the fronting problem and the Trade and Business Licensing practices that are taking place in Cayman.

Going back a bit to the Department of Immigration, I would like to share a little incident that took place—and not only is work and business being hampered, but Government is losing revenue with the lack of administration in the Immigration Department.

On 12 January 1995, a gentleman who uses our post office box came to me with a letter from the Department of Immigration and said it was for me because it was for Daniel Murphy (my son's name is Daniel Murphy). He said this is a work permit for Daniel Murphy. Daniel Murphy is ten years old and he has been granted status, and I did not understand it. So, I looked at the letter and it was for Daniel Murphy—in St. Thomas!

This had been returned to this Daniel Murphy through the Immigration Department. On 8 November he applied for a temporary work permit to come to these Islands as a salesman (I think he sold resort beachwear). Here it was 12 January. This gentleman has not been told—it came to my mailbox here in the Cayman Islands, when it should have gone to St. Thomas.

Now, I know mistakes are made, but I called the Department and they asked me to bring the letter to the Department of Immigration. I asked them to kindly call the gentleman. Not only has he not come—or if he has, Government lost out on the revenue—but this was a serious mistake. I am not sure whether this gentleman was contacted or not, and I am sure that this is only one of the problems taking place in the Department of Immigration and this should be corrected.

Another concern with the Department of Immigration, which I have had several complaints about, is the counters at the airport being manned. A lady told me that she arrived on a flight (she was Caymanian) and walked right through Immigration as there was no one in any of the booths. The flight was from Jamaica and it was very full. She got up to the counter and there was not one Immigration official there. She walked right through, went to Customs (actually she only had a little tote bag) and told the officer that there was no one in the booth. The Customs Officer said that it happens all the time and he checked her through.

This is serious and this needs to be addressed. I am calling on the [Temporary] First Official Member to kindly make sure that these practices are corrected as this is not very businesslike, nor is it a good practice for Government to have in any of its departments.

In the Department of Broadcasting and Information, Radio Cayman is very well used. I think many of our residents listen to Radio Cayman, especially for the news and the Bulletin Board. I would like to especially commend Radio Cayman for some of its educational tips and programmes that it presents in dealing with the educational tips, like bicycle riding on the correct side of the road, and different things that Radio Cayman puts out.

It carries the proceedings of the Legislative Assembly and a lot of the residents look forward to this and it is very well listened to. I would like to thank them for their efforts in this regard.

Another area that I am pleased to see that Radio Cayman is doing is that they are carrying the sports on the radio on Sundays when the different sports, especially soccer. One can sit and listen if they are unable to go and I am very appreciative of that, and I want to thank them for that as well.

The Department of Information, I know, has a very heavy workload with the Gazette and other things that need to be published. I feel that public relations, on behalf of the Government is one area where the National Team is very, very sadly lacking. This is an area that I have pushed for, in fact the whole Team is trying to find an individual who could do public relations as the Department of the Government's Information Services is stretched. While they are very helpful in helping to carry out Public Relations, I feel that more should be done on behalf of the Ministers.

Dealing with Little Cayman. When I joined the Economic Development Review Committee back in 1990, there was a guideline for planning in Little Cayman that was presented by the Department of Planning—a very comprehensive plan. It was not perfect, but it was a very good plan, mainly because at the time (1991) Little Cayman was not so well sought after as a resort or for tourism, or as a getaway site. This is a very careful plan with recommendations for policies and action. But this has never been accepted. I would kindly ask that this be reconsidered. It was very carefully planned—setbacks, bicycle trails, walking trails, even the street lights were all uniform and of a special design that would be very appropriate for Little Cayman, as that is a very special little Island. That could be developed and very well planned and used as a model for other islands in the Caribbean.

I think we have to determine if we want lots of development helter-skelter, or do we want careful, planned Development in Little Cayman? Or, do we want it to continue as here in Grand Cayman, with trees being torn down, a building going up and things not being properly planned? So I kindly ask that these plans be studied again, and taken a very close look at to see if they could be implemented.

The idea of satellite offices in Cayman Brac is very good and I believe that the Chamber of Commerce should be trying to push these satellite offices in that significant savings in operation and administrative costs could be felt if these satellite offices were to open up over there and more development could take place in Cayman Brac. Then fewer of the residents would have to move over here to Grand Cayman in order to work and be a part of the community.

A few weeks ago the Elected Member for North Side and I took it upon ourselves to go to the Department of Personnel and Training to learn about the record-keeping of Personnel and to see how their follow-up records were kept for members of the civil service as to sick leave, vacation. We were a bit curious about the computer services in that each time we come to Finance Committee we see large sums of money being requested for computer services. We were both surprised to learn that the computer software that is in place for Personnel is very sadly lacking. The files for Personnel are done manually and if a file is lost there is no other record that is kept on an individual, and that should be addressed. Proper computer software should be implemented so that employees' records for the civil service are properly and efficiently kept.

I would like at this time to say a very special thank you to the staff of the Legislative Assembly in their efforts in dealing with the Members of this House and the efficient and congenial manner with which we are always met—starting with you Madam Speaker, and all the members working in this department in dealing with the Members of this House.

The different Select Committees have met and have been reported. I am very anxious to get the Code of Ethics Committee started, and also the review of the Sunday Trading Law. I have had lots of letters and verbal representation from individuals on the Sunday Trading Law and we have had two meetings. Input was invited and we need to get working on this, as it is very important.

The Committee to review the Penal Code has made its recommendations and it is now up to the Legal Department to follow through and come up with a revised Penal Code.

The Bill of Rights Committee met last week and we are working on this, and I am sure that before 1996 a Bill of Rights will be in place for the people of these Islands.

The Law School is working well and the number of graduates (54) is very remarkable in that it only had its first graduation ceremony in 1987.

I am not much of a feminist, but I am always anxious and pleased to assist and favour the women. Of those 54 graduates, a high percentage was women. They take advantage of the Law School more than the men. And I would like to commend these women.

Earlier this year there was a letter in the newspaper from an unnamed individual regarding the advertisement for a legal draftsman for the Legal Department, saying that we had a law school and lots of lawyers. They asked why the advertisement was being tailored for someone from overseas. I wondered the same thing. After speaking to the Attorney General, I learned that legal drafting is quite different. It is like being a doctor—it is a specialised area in the Legal Department.

We had one drafts lady, Mrs. Sheridan Brooks, who unfortunately left the Government and is in private practice now. The Legal Department did not take the time to explain or respond to this letter. So for whoever the individual was (as usual—unsigned) I would like to take this opportunity to say that it is different, we do not have an individual at the Law School who is studying drafting. But I would encourage new candidates who are thinking about attending the Law School to consider legal drafting as this is a specialty within the law; there is a need within our community and I encourage candidates to consider this.

The Law Revision Commissioner has revised 18 laws, and is continuing. I hope that the Legal Department will continue with its drafting.

Last year a private member's motion dealing with photo identification for people within our community was passed. It has been almost a year and nothing has been done by the Legal Department about this; also about having designated places for smoking. I would like to have the Legal Department follow through with what is necessary to get these two particular things in place.

I am happy to learn that a Caymanian Crown Counsel is studying at the International Development Law Institute, and that expertise in prosecuting commercial or white collar crime is being sought. I am sure there are more cases of white-collar crime that take place within our community than the public is aware of. Those people committing these crimes must be dealt with and justice must prevail as this can be damaging to our reputation as an international finance centre.

From the Portfolio of Finance and Development, the study of factors affecting the local insurance rates has been completed. I wonder what the results of that study were, and I wonder if this could be shared with the Members of the Legislative Assembly.

After we were elected, I think every Member of this House was approached by constituents about these very, very high insurance rates that everyone that has a mortgage has to pay. If the study was conducted by Government, then I think we need to see and understand what the findings were. I would like to find out if there is any way that the insurance rates can be regulated and if they can be adjusted; or if Government is satisfied that the rates we are being charged are reasonable or justifiable. This needs to be addressed as well.

The revision of Government's Financial and Stores Regulations is very important. I would have thought with all the various contracts that were issued by the previous Government in their heyday that the Financial and Stores Regulation would have been reviewed before 1995.

The Customs Department should be commended for the amount of collection that took place in 1994 ($61.6 million). One of the recommendations of the Public Accounts Committee was for the Customs Department to be able to examine loose and containerised cargo on a much larger scale. Government is losing revenue in that they are short-staffed and not able to carry through. We are not sure what is being imported and we are dealing with firearms, narcotics and other illegal things in the containers that are not examined. I hope this will continue to be a priority for the Customs Department.

The new building that was completed at the Airport for the first phase of the Customs Department is very well used. I look forward to the second phase taking place to accommodate the remainder of the Customs Staff in the Tower Building.

In the General Registry and Shipping Department, I am very pleased to learn that a healthy growth of Yacht Registration is taking place. I have felt for a long time that this is one area the Marine and Shipping Registration should target, and I would like to commend them for working and being diligent in increasing this number.

The Budget and Management Unit seems to have been very busy in that they carried out inspections of the Planning Department, Central Planning Authority, Health Services and Organisational and Efficiency Reviews were completed in Company Registration, Information and Broadcasting, Immigration and Customs Service, District Administration. Hopefully these recommendations will be implemented and streamlining budget procedures is very important.

I know in the different Departments that I work closely with, such as the Library, the Community College and Museum, that from about September through November a lot of effort goes into preparing the Budget for the following year, and this can only benefit the Heads of Departments in working on their Budgets.

The Financial Services Department should be commended for their increase in their banking licence with 560 banks at the end of 1994. Considering the number of years that Cayman has been a financial centre, and having so many banks it is to be commended that we have only had four (that I am aware of) closures of banks. This is a very small percentage considering the number of banks that have licences. So, I think the Financial Services are watching and monitoring this very closely and I would like to congratulate them as well.

Another area of concern for the Public Accounts Committee was the collection of tourist accommodation tax. In 1994 this was increased by 54%; this exceeded the Treasury target of 30%. Treasury is diligent—an individual was hired and revenue for Government has been increased. I would like to thank them for looking at this.

The target of paying all invoices one week after receipt was achieved. If Government is to run like a business, this is very commendable. The Treasury deals with all different aspects of Government and to be able to pay an invoice one week after it is received is very, very commendable. I know that years ago, before computers and sophistication arrived in Cayman, it would sometimes be months. So this is very heartening.

Moving to the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Planning. The partnerships between the public and private sector can only be beneficial, not only with raising the standard of the tourism sector, but I would hope that they would also have a partnership in advertising, and working with the airlines and some of the major hotels. The amount of money that the Department uses on advertising could be cut back and a partnership developed.

The European tourism market seems to be on the increase and this was one of the things that the National Team said in their Manifesto that they would endeavour to work on. So, even though we are accused of making promises, this is one promise that is taking place and we can see the fruits of that promise.

I am very concerned about the opening of Cuba as a tourist destination, which is possible. With all the restraints and restrictions that are taking place, there is only one way that Castro can go, and that is to try to negotiate and have free trade again if Cuba is to survive. If this does take place, where does Cayman stand in regard to tourism? I hope that plans are being looked at, and the possibilities if this does take place. Perhaps a three-day cruise could be developed to include Florida, Havana, Cayman, maybe on to Jamaica and back up to the United States so that we can benefit. We cannot be complacent and sit back and let Cuba come and take tourism away from us. We know that individuals are very curious and many people will be curious about and want to visit Cuba.

The culture and heritage continue to be promoted by the Department of Tourism and I think we need to be grateful for this as well.

Environment consciousness is being brought to the forefront in trying to preserve our marine and terrestrial sites so that we can be good stewards over them. I think that we need to concentrate very much on the marine and terrestrial sites that we have as this is the way for tourism for this century. We should preserve and protect our environment as much as possible.

The Department of Environment is working diligently on their recycling programme. The recycling of aluminum and cardboard and paper has long been needed. We know that garbage accumulates, and one has to stop and wonder where does all the garbage come from? A recycling programme can only benefit these small Islands and I would like to commend them for getting this started, as well as the larger businesses that recycle cardboard and office paper.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, may we take the suspension at this time?

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.38 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12 NOON

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Third Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break I was dealing with the Department of Environment and I will continue on this department. I am happy to see that a comprehensive coral reef monitoring programme will take place this year so that the capabilities of our marine life will be protected and, maybe more protection will be necessary, but an assessment will be done which is so very important to our watersports operators and all the divers who enjoy our reef,

The Rodent Control Programme will be re-established and I wonder why it was ever stopped when we know that we have a lot of rodents in the Islands. I am pleased that it is being done again.

One of the areas of concern that I have had for several years is the lack of laws drawn up by the Department of Environment and the Public Health Department to establish standards for people selling food from their vehicles. This is very dangerous in a hot climate with products, such as mayonnaise, that spoils very easily. Individuals going from site to site... laws should have been established a long time ago to deal with this problem.

I am sure that when individuals in the community have a virus or salmonella poisoning, it is probably as a result of contaminated food not being properly inspected. Nine times out of ten it was probably from food being sold out of the trunk of a vehicle. This should be addressed immediately by the two departments to ensure that someone does not react and have a very serious case of food poisoning and perhaps die. This should really be addressed.

The Planning Department (next to Immigration) is perhaps the most talked about department in Government. Perhaps because it is the most used by the public for applications and development. I was there on Tuesday and I was happy to see that they are redecorating and getting better organised, as it was very cramped and not very spacious. It will now be easier to deal with and please the public.

I am wondering, like the previous speaker, why the addition of seven planners to this department? A lot of development must be expected to take place. But, then again, I had an individual come to my house yesterday morning to complain about an application for a commercial building that went to Planning back in September. No formal response has been given to the gentleman and he is still waiting for the approval or disapproval of this building. Perhaps they will need seven planners, if they are so backed up in dealing with applications.

The application by a developer, namely, the Beach Club Colony, for further development with two buildings five stories high, I am sure will be quickly placed on the agenda. But I hope that this will be looked at seriously, in that it causes me grave concern with the development on West Bay Road. When I look at the existing site where these two buildings are proposed to go, I wonder, with commercial shops and a resort, if it can adequately take care of parking adequately, as it is a very, very cramped area at that resort now. I hope that this will be closely examined.

The Development Plan Review has been a very hot subject for several weeks now. This has not been reviewed since 1977, and I feel that there are many, many important issues in this review that need to be addressed. I would have thought that public input during the meetings that have taken place over the past two years by the Central Planning Authority in coming up with the Development Plan Review would have been better included. In listening to the public and to the media, apparently many of the views expressed at those meetings have not been considered and put into this Plan.

I can attest to this as well. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning, with the Chairman of the Central Planning Authority and the Director of Planning met with the George Town Representatives and shared this plan. I expressed some concern over the plan and asked for some things to be changed. When the plan was made public again, I do not think one change I suggested took place. I hope that when the extension is granted to the review of this plan that the public will be listened to and an agreeable plan for all will be put in place and that the environment... not only environmentally because we have to have some development, a carefully planned development will take place and that all will be happy with the Development Plan Review that will take place.

With the new town planners, I hope that the planning inspectors will be relieved of some of those duties. Since being elected in 1992, there are two particular sites that individuals have constantly complained about. I have spoken to Planning. There is one in Bodden Town and one in George Town where a small office, or workshed, has been established prior to the building of a house and those sheds now have individuals living in them. The one in George Town has a fence, an extension cord (because it does not have its own electricity) and I have constantly asked Planning to address this. Enforcement is not carried through. If we are to have proper planning, and not create situations like this, then it must be followed through.

In South Sound where there is a very popular restaurant, the residents in that area are very disturbed that for almost three years an enforcement has been given to the owner of this restaurant to address the parking situation. On Friday and Saturday night cars have a hard time driving through this area, yet nothing has been done in the last three years. I am calling upon the Planning Department to address this situation, as this is not fair to the residents or to the drivers on the South Sound Road.

The Master Port Development Plan was completed in 1994 and I am pleased to learn that this will enable it to meet the challenges of the next decade. They are presently examining the installation of permanent cruise ship moorings for George Town Harbour. This has been talked about and tossed around since the Port Authority, I am sure, was established. I do not understand why the installation of these permanent cruise ship moorings has not been established before if this is what is necessary.

We all remember that back in 1984, the cruise ship Rhapsody ran aground in George Town. Some of the equipment (anchors) that was used to free the ship from the reef was purchased by the Port Authority to be used, I understood, as permanent moorings for George Town. That sat on the Port Authority dock for many, many years, with several thousand dollars invested. Where they are today? I am not sure. They could probably be at the cargo distribution centre. But from 1984 (and it is now 11 years later) these cruise ship moorings are still not installed and no serious effort has been made to put them in place so that other areas of our Island will not be destroyed by the cruise ships mooring.

The Fire Department seems to be working fairly well. It is commendable that over $4 million has been saved because of the quick response by the Fire Department. Often times we hear the public commenting about how Caymanianised the Fire Department is. I think the Fire Chief should be commended in trying to maintain a very, very high level of Caymanian staff members.

The 9-1-1 Emergency Number is coming in place, and I am sure that the Fire Department will be working closely with that in their fighting and prevention of fires.

The Turtle Farm seems to be progressing successfully, from a financial point of view. The viability of an aquarium I am sure will be a much added attraction. Not only tourists, but residents will enjoy the aquarium, more so than they are presently enjoying the Turtle Farm. However, the public should be given an explanation of the exact development with the resignation of Dr. Jim Wood, and the new manager, and all the letters and controversy that has come out in the media. I think that a proper explanation should be given to the people of these Islands concerning this situation. When there is information and people understand then there are no questions asked.

Moving to the Ministry of Health. The Minister has had less time than the other Ministers with his Ministry in that he only joined the Ministry in early 1994, but he seems to be progressing well. The construction of the new hospital facilities will take place later this month, but that seems an awful long time. I am sure that he has received a lot of opposition in trying to get this going. I wonder why the same architects were used as they dealt with the former Minister, and I wonder where their loyalty might be. Perhaps this is why the facility has taken so long to get operating and begin construction.

The Mental Health Unit is very important and I am extremely happy that the Minister had included this in the new facility with a Chapel, the Hospice and Geriatric Unit. I feel that this will all be very beneficial in that it is being phased in and not hurriedly prepared like the former Minister was doing everything.

The programme for Sexually Transmitted Diseases in the George Town Clinic seems to be reactivated, which was one of my concerns when I visited the Public Health Clinic in George Town. It seemed to be at a stand still. We learned this morning that a coordinator and a good programme has been put in place, and that our young people will benefit in that they will have this included in their curriculum and an awareness in our community so that these diseases can be prevented.

Some individuals have said that the Bodden Town District Health Centre is not going in at the proper site. I think the Minister explained this morning why it is being built there. We learned that consultation was made with the people so this is what most of the constituents of Bodden Town want and he has to carry out their wishes. I feel that the Minister has made a good choice in placing the district health centre at the present site.

I would just like to say that in talking about the former Minister of Health, I was not referring to the Honourable McKeever Bush, but to the Honourable Ezzard Miller. I just wanted to clarify that.

Waiting time at the outpatient and emergency services is being closely monitored and this is very encouraging. Often times it is used by young children and mothers have to wait hours upon hours and it is rewarding to learn that this is decreasing and being more efficiently run.

Efforts to encourage careers in health can only be helpful to our community. I also hope that students will have an opportunity to do an internship (maybe two or three days per week) at the hospital to understand the running of a health care centre, to learn if this is a career that they would like to pursue before moving off of the Island to further their education. This is very encouraging and I commend the Minister for putting this in place with the medical technologist and members of the medical staff.

The counselling Centre is reverting to its original treatment of alcohol and drug addicted clients; also in helping the families of these clients in dealing with their addiction. This is very good as well as I heard some constituents saying that it had gotten off of its original function. Again, the Minister is to be commended for reverting it back to its original function of dealing with clients that are addicted.

They have also relocated and this, I am sure, will aid in confidentiality and being more accessible to the public. I am happy to see that the counselling programme started at Northward in February. The Sister Islands will be receiving help in this area as well. It sounds like the counselling centre will have its hands full in developing all of these programmes.

I must say that I am disappointed that the National Health Insurance Scheme has not taken place as yet. I feel that Government should have regulations in place almost like our car insurance—let individuals shop and purchase the best insurance scheme for all of their employees so that health insurance can be enjoyed by all working individuals in these islands. Government should purchase a policy for its employees and that should be funded the same as the private sector with a programme for the indigent, or those that are overage who are not able to obtain insurance so that it will not be a financial drain on the government in providing health care and so that everyone will have the opportunity to obtain health care. I hope that this will take place by the end of November as stated here in the Throne Speech.

The Ministry for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture is a very busy Ministry. I know because I work closely with this Ministry. The Minister has had a lot of criticism for his sports facilities. I am commending him for the facilities and the programmes. Yesterday we learned about the regiment and cadet corp. programme that is being considered. The Juvenile Law is under review and we have the Children's Law and the Youth Justice Law. After public consultation this will be brought to the House in the next sitting in June.

The Young Parents Programme is one that is very essential. I was so happy to be able to attend a presentation, explaining what this pilot programme is all about and to see the way that it is helping young mothers who are just children themselves. They are being taught how to handle their affairs, how to budget, how to shop, how to care—to the very idea of rocking, reading and singing to the child. The programme was opened on Tuesday and I hope that more fathers will also take advantage of this programme, which was very ably named after Mrs. Joyce Hylton who has spent her life working with our youth and the Social Services. I am happy to see that her efforts have been rewarded and that she could enjoy this, and that we did not wait until she passed away to name something in her memory.

The Study of the Family is long overdue. I am happy to see that this will be assessed because the family has been affected by the rapid development in our community. When the study is completed, I am sure that some of the family problems, and the far-reaching effects in our community, will be tackled as a result of this study.

The Annual Youth Week is also to be commended in that it will encourage our young people to work toward developing their talents in arts, crafts and music. A competitive spirit will be developed.

Watching the Youth Choir when it performed last December was very touching as they shared their talents with the community. I am sure with Youth Week this will create more self-esteem and develop more competition among our young people.

I hope the Crime Study will be completed by June of 1995, as this can only help. We hear so much about crime, and while we know where some of it takes place, finding out the reasons behind it will be assisted by the study.

The review of the Labour Law and the Manpower Development Strategy was explained to us here this morning. The Committee has the task of completing a report by June and I am not sure if that will be accomplished, but we are working very diligently in trying to assess and make recommendations on the manpower development in these islands. An additional Labour Inspector is required in that many complaints are received by constituents from all districts who are having problems with injustices at work. I am sure that with an additional inspector these problems can be lessened and our labour force will be better served.

Two dozen mortgage guarantees have been issued since the Government Guaranteed Mortgage Scheme has been put in place and this will show that there are individuals who are in need of housing. I am sure when individuals have a home that they can relax in pleasant surroundings, then we will have better workers in the work force.

The Water Authority is seeking refinancing of $22.15 million. This is a large undertaking. But with the demand for water services I believe it is realistic. This was one area of concern for the Public Accounts Committee. I hope that the recommendations made by the Public Accounts Committee to the Government will be followed and adhered to concerning the Water Authority.

The National Museum seems to be working very well. As I serve as the Chairman of the Museum Board, I spend a lot of time there at the Museum. It is expanding and moving its collection from the Archives Building, as the Archive is in dire need of extra space. So the area that they shared will now be solely for the Archives. The work-shop and research centre will be better established with a little more space.

The Wreck of the Ten Sails exhibit was quite successful and it will be travelling to the districts. So I encourage all those who have not viewed this exhibit to take an opportunity to do so when it comes to their respective districts.

The Cayman Brac Museum now has a representative on the Grand Cayman Museum Board. This was done so that we may liaison and work closer with the Cayman Brac Museum with the view to eventually having a museum in Little Cayman as well.

The Archives has a very comprehensive library and it is very enjoyable to go there and read. I would encourage the public to take advantage of the Archives Library as it is very enlightening and there are many good books, not only on the Cayman Islands, but on the regional area. Hopefully a list of books will be published by the Archives so that the public will know of the different sources available there in the library.

Yesterday the George Town Public Library was declared an historical building. We are very grateful to the Trust for recognising this as it is a very beautiful building. Unfortunately it is becoming inadequate. As the Chairman of the Library Committee, I can tell you that we have been working on a position paper to have libraries in all districts. An educated community can only be a healthy community and having Libraries in all of our districts is very important.

The Library received a facelift within the last week. Not only would I like to take this opportunity to thank the Library Committee, but I would also like to thank Steve and Frankie Flowers for donating the pavers, and Mr. Amil Scott of Paving Systems for graciously donating the labour to install the pavers and for the wonderful face lift at the Library.

Sports is an area that is very dear to me. Not being athletic, I enjoy watching others perform. I must say that I try to attend all the football matches that take place on the weekend, especially when FC International is playing. I think most people know that I am a very big fan of theirs. But, George Town needs to have a football practice field. When the representatives from George Town accompanied the Minister for Education to the School, this was one complaint that the George Hicks and John Gray High Schools had—their fields are so widely used for football, softball and racquetball practice that the fields are over used. Hopefully, by the end of the year we will be able to identify a field for football and softball users in the George Town area.

The park at Spotts will hopefully be completed this year. This was one of the things that the George Town representatives decided to take on and to follow through on when the land became available at Spotts. We felt it would be enjoyed by people not only from George Town, but from the outer districts as well, and they would have an opportunity to enjoy this recreational park that we would like to have in our island.

The National Cultural Foundation should be commended for hosting the Carib Art Exhibition and for the establishment of training for local artists and Caymanian actors. I wonder if the importation of foreign entertainers, like Patra last week (which was not done by the National Cultural Foundation, let me hasten to say, but done by private enterprise) are the types of entertainers we would like to have in our community. I feel that a closer look at importing entertainment from overseas should be addressed either through the Department of Immigration or a Committee established for application for entertainers and what they are promoting, and the way they entertain should be looked at very closely before entertainers, like what was here last week, are brought in to perform for our people. It was distasteful and very unnecessary in our Island.

Also, with the advertising, I feel that the Caymanian Compass, in particular, should be more responsible. There is an ad that I received at least six telephone calls about, as well as verbal representation, regarding Rum-heads' ads. I feel that the media should be more responsible in printing these ads, in that it is going out to the public, especially our children. I call upon them to be more responsible in printing ads such as this.

The Ministry of Education and Aviation seems to be working well. Only this morning I was speaking to the Permanent Secretary there, and the implemented Strategic Five-Year Development Plan for Education has been accepted for 1995-1999. The site base planning is being worked out so that all the schools will have a mission so that strategies for the schools can be carried out and that a specific school will meet a certain need, and this can only work well in any public school system.

The school inspectorate is going to be established this year, and this is very necessary as this has been neglected for so many years. Most of our preschools have been granted licenses. This is very encouraging. I will not touch on the results of the CXC, as this was already touched on in previous sessions, but it is to be commended. Our children seem to be working very hard in performing and carrying through their schoolwork.

The Community College General Studies Block is now completed and the sixth form will be transferred there from the John Gray High School. The Associate of Arts Degree will be in place in 1996 at the Community College and the Board of Directors for the College is working very diligently in putting this into place so that members of the community will be able to work on a part time basis towards earning a degree and be better educated and take their place in our society.

The Maintenance Programme was carried out during 1994 in all the schools. When we visited the schools the main complaint was the hard court at the high school, and this was dealt with in a Parliamentary Question yesterday, so I will not deal with this at this time.

The private schools seem to be working well and expanding, taking some of the burden off of Government—not only financially, but they also can be competition for the public schools in keeping the level and standards of education high.

The Education Council continues to work well and in the new school recently registered, the Faulkner Academy, I am very disappointed in that this academy will be going on Walker's Road, a road that is very heavily used by the other schools yet Planning Permission was granted on this site against the wishes of my constituents whom I worked very hard to help when they were objecting to this school being placed on only half an acre on a road that is heavily used and in a residential area. Yet, permission was granted. I wonder if all the facts were presented to the Central Planning Authority and to the Education Council in that the fee for this is about $300 per week to attend this academy and I know that the average child, if they have a specific education need, how in the world will this fee be met. So this academy is only for select individuals, against the wishes of the residents of that area. I must say that I am very distressed that it will be placed in this area.

Under the Civil Aviation Authority is mentioned a runway for Little Cayman. The Planning for Little Cayman should be looked at carefully, as I mentioned earlier, in planning the runway to protect the environment in Little Cayman.

Cayman Airways seems to be working well and will realise a small profit. This was one of our concerns when we were elected—that Cayman Airways was draining our economy. This has been corrected and now has a fighting chance for survival. The Air Services Agreement has been finalised, or extended, and this can only help Cayman Airways as well.

Moving on the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications and Works. The street naming committee is up and running. We met on Tuesday, after being inactive for two years. This will work along with the 9-1-1 emergency number and with the Post Office in the event that we will have a postal code or home delivery. The street naming committee will be contacting the schools to have a competition in providing names for the streets. I encourage all children and parents in helping to name the streets, so that there is no duplication and that the names will be agreeable to all residents of these Islands.

The Department of Agriculture seems to be working well and is to be commended for their fast action on the white fly on the poinsettias and the disease on the mangoes to prevent further spreading in our islands. The Agriculture Complex at Lower Valley will enhance the department. Through the efforts of the Agriculture Society in staging the Agricultural Show it is hoped that more local produce will be purchased and the importation of certain products will decline.

The Emergency 9-1-1 system can only help as lives can be saved through the use of this number, as I have seen on television.

The Postal Department, with the new Postmistress, seems to be working well. There is a new facelift at the Post Office and the Post Offices in the other districts are performing. The international express mail service is to be introduced and this will help our financial centre.

The Public Works Department seems to be working hard, at times, but I feel that at times they lack supervision in some of their projects, such as the hard ball court that was mentioned earlier. Our children are not benefiting from the use of the hard ball court, because of a lack of supervision (or whatever the problem seems to be) and hopefully this will be addressed.

In the new road at the junction at the airport, the bids that were put out, it seems to be that one company is benefitting from a lot of the private sector bids in supplying the material for the roads. I hope that it is not necessarily the cheapest that is also the best but I think that it should also be spread around so that all private sector companies have an opportunity to benefit in working with the Public Works Department. In speaking of the new road at the Airport/Kirk Motor junction, on Monday the flow of traffic was directed in the opposite direction with the traffic from the airport stopping, which is the way I thought it would have been from the beginning. It has caused some confusion. I am confused myself at times, I am not quite sure how to turn to go towards the airport. I must say that I kindly ask the Public Works to go back and take a look at the way the directional arrows are placed, as it is not a very professional job. The lines and arrows should have been completely sanded down and repainted before new arrows were placed there as this is, perhaps, going to cause an accident. This should be re-addressed and a more professional approach must be taken in dealing with this.

In dealing with the civil servants, the Governor stressed that this is his responsibility and the former speaker mentioned yesterday the loyalty of the civil servants. I will not touch on this since it was so ably expressed by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. But one thing that I must touch on is that I have had two individuals (who are civil servants) come to me that are now past the age of 60 and they have been told that they have to retire.

In 1989 a law was passed by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and Mr. Franklin Smith, changing the requirement for civil servants so that they could continue to work until the age of 65 if they were physically examined to prove that they were physically able and if the Head of department agreed to it and if they were not keeping a young Caymanian from promotion. The two individuals who approached me are very capable, looking at them physically. But I call on the Governor to make sure that these two individuals will be treated fairly and that if the private member's motion in 1989 passed with these requirements, then I hope that these two individuals will be dealt with fairly.

I have to wonder, and this was also expressed by these two individuals and members of the public, that we have judges that are 67 and 68 years old who are imported, yet our Caymanians are not being treated fairly and they must retire at 60 or 65, if the 1989 private member's motion is accepted by the Governor.

The review of the performance and the recurrent expenditure of the civil service should be ongoing. In 1993 the Governor, in his Throne Speech, mentioned that a review of the performance of the civil service, perhaps cutting back by 7%, would take place. Hopefully this will not just be carried out in 1993, but this should be done on a yearly basis.

The recurrent expenditure for civil servants is over 60% of the expenditure just to pay their salaries; yet when I was studying economics and business management at university the cost of your labour should be between 10% and 15% of your sales (in the private sector). So I wonder if Government would consider looking at this and reviewing the performance and expenditure of the civil service each year.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, proceedings will be suspended until 2.30 P.M.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.58 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.36 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Third Elected Member for George Town, continuing with the debate.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the lunch break I was talking about the performance and the recurrent expenditure of the civil servants, and maybe it is time that we look at some of the Government Departments being privatised, for example, the Public Works Department, the Environmental Department, Garbage Collection, and so forth, in cutting down on some of the bureaucracy that we campaigned on.

When one goes to the Department of Vehicles and Inspection to have their car inspected... it is the most frustrating department that I have ever seen in my life. You pay $10 to someone, you go and get your car then you come back, you go again and you never see the same individual twice. I believe that some of these departments should be reviewed to see how we could avoid some of the runaround, and cutting back and maybe consider privatising some of them.

For the last several years back in England, this has been one of the things that has been strongly considered by the United Kingdom's Government—to privatise and get rid of some of the departments in the Government.

In dealing with the George Town district, the Sports Complex for the CARIFTA Games is near completion. As a matter of fact, I will be there on Saturday for Sports Day. So, we appreciate the Ministry allowing us to use that facility before the CARIFTA Games.

The Spotts Recreation Park we hope will be completed this year. We are looking at putting in some practice areas for football.

Road improvements in the different areas of George Town. We have taken a tour and I hope we will have a listing from the Public Works Department shortly and the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications, Works so that we can see the listing and prioritise the roads so we can get to work on the roads in the George Town district.

One area on Eastern Avenue that has raised some concerns for the people of that area has been the building of the new McDonald complex. About three individual landowners have been landlocked with no access to their properties, and I know that the Fourth elected Member for George Town and I have worked closely with these individuals in helping them. I am a bit disappointed again, in that the Planning Department did not try to help these individuals, whereas I worked, spending many days on this project trying to deal with the problem and nothing seemed to have been accomplished and will probably end up in court. This was not necessary and could have been avoided if some help had been forthcoming from the proper department that should have been helping.

The representative of these islands... the former speaker has been the first one, and in talking with the other Members about the performance of the different Ministries and the representative, according to this Chamber of Commerce survey is a bit confusing. Here in the different sections of the survey we have a report of things that are trying to be put forward and in what I have said over the course of this morning, this is not all perfect. Things are getting done. I am not as patient as the average person and feel that the wheels of the Government can move faster in a lot of areas. A lot of my constituents feel the same way too. But I guess that is the way it is and I supposed we will just have to learn to live and accept it and keep pushing in hopes that things will move and get accomplished faster than we would have done sometimes.

When I look at the Ministry of Tourism and see some of the things they are working on (and you have heard my concerns in some areas, and the same thing for the Ministry for Education and Aviation) . . . and then this survey says that their performance is below average. Yet, Cayman Airways seems to be on a level keel with a minimal profit again. I wonder how this survey could be very accurate. First of all it says that the numbers had not been revealed for the people who participated—I know of different individuals who have a post office box, yet it never came to theirs—but the one thing that I would challenge all representatives is that if we do not feel that it is representative, let us conduct our own survey of our constituents to see in what areas we can better represent them, what areas they would like for us to work on and have improved.

In the Caymanian Compass one of the areas that the performance was rated very low, according to this survey, was Public Consultation and Advance Notice on Bills. I agree that public relations have been slow with the National Team in a lot of areas, but in different districts we hold meetings; we have our offices and we are readily available by telephone. We receive letters and, in George Town particularly, we try to move around and meet with our constituents to get input from them. For the Chamber of Commerce to talk about advance notice on Bills and in giving 90-day notice, I agree that in some instances it is very important. We cannot be expected to come in hear and receive a Bill and vote on it and not have consultation from our constituents. But charity begins at home, and I have yet to see the result of this Chamber's survey. They have said that they will share it with the Members of Executive Council and I believe that the Members of Executive Council have not received a copy of this survey, therefore, consultation is lacking with them as well. It is a two-way street and it must work for the betterment of all involved.

The present Government is made up of human beings. No one is perfect, and there are a lot of things that need to be corrected. But when we took office there were so many things that needed to be addressed that I believe that finally we are now beginning to level off. We must put in different checks and balances and start working together to improve the surroundings, the environment and all aspects of these Islands to make it a better place not only for us, but for our children and our grandchildren so that some of our heritage and culture and things that we believe in will be carried on down through the years. And we as good responsible Legislators will make sure that all of this takes place while we are here.

Going back to the results of the survey on the Government's performance, as the Editorial said, with the obvious shortfalls of this survey there is a definite message that Members of Government should ponder. And I feel that we should all sit back and take a look and see how we can make things better as representatives of the people to make sure that we have very good Islands to live in and truly represent the people.

I hope that we will all continue to ask for guidance as we take on this responsible role of being elected representatives of the people.

Thank you, Madam Speaker and Honourable Members of this House, for your indulgence.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, it never fails to amaze me that in this Legislative Assembly, when the most important matters are up for debate (such as the Budget Address and the Throne Speech) that there are so few who rise to make use of the time.

Yesterday afternoon almost ten minutes passed before anyone rose to speak. I compliment the Third Elected Member of George Town who finally got up and spoke. Considering that there were 17 people in the Chamber, one should marvel at it all.

After the last Throne Speech, which was delivered by Her Majesty the Queen, no one spoke at all. I happened to have been out of the Chamber at the time getting some papers I was going to refer to, and by the time I got back (in about five minutes) it was closed. This one, however, Madam Speaker, will not close as the last one did, since I feel sure that once I have spoken it will stimulate the others to then get up and talk about me—as is normally the case—rather than about the Throne Speech. I do hope that I give the reluctant ones something to talk about.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town said yesterday that he found this particular Throne Speech to be the best that he has ever heard in the House from the time he has been here. That gentleman has been serving in this Legislative Assembly for 20-odd years. Personally, I found this Throne Speech quite bland, nothing earth-shattering, and it simply reiterated what has been in the press from time to time as claims by the Government with regards to work it intends to do, or is doing.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town also listed a number of things which he said had been done by the National Team Government which were left untouched by others prior and, indeed, which they, the National Team Government, had fixed.

I think, in presenting that list, Madam Speaker, he left out a number of achievements of the National Team Government since 1992. I believe it is necessary that all of its achievements be brought into focus and, as I fill the role of Opposition in this House, I am duty bound to try and create a balance in perspective. So, I would like to refer to a few achievements.

Its first major achievement was the stoppage of the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital—at a tune of almost $6.0 million which had to be paid out in damages on broken contracts. The country does not have a hospital, the new facility that it could have had.

It accomplished the repealing and stoppage of the Health Authority, the Body which made it possible for the Health Services to be managed by an entity that was at some arm's length away from Government. It also accomplished the task of stopping free medical aid to the seamen and their spouses of the Cayman Islands. It stopped the National Health Insurance Scheme that was in place and was possible to be carried on. All of the citizens of this country could have been insured for health; we now only hear talk about it.

The Education Plan which was in place was stopped and put on hold, as was the Caribbean Examination Council Examination (CXE). With the gallant effort of teachers and students it was proven that with good teachers, and students who are challenged, they could pass this examination which, according to the Minister, was only suited to 35% of the population.

Certainly, one of the most recent things that has been done is the road which has been diverted at the Airport—perhaps the most travelled piece of road in the Cayman Islands—into a maze that seems to change every few weeks. As one driver said on television about two or three mornings ago, it seems like a suitable enough name of "malfunction junction".

This Government must take the credit for buying land, which was transferred on one day for US$140,000 and sold to Government on the same day for US$880,000. Also this Government can take credit for spending, for the first time ever in the history of this country, public money to build over 32 private driveways in the district of West Bay with other districts not receiving similar consideration.

This Government must take credit in its accomplishment for stopping the Housing Development Corporation which offered funding for lower income housing to bring into play another programme that does not offer the same type of funding, and has not replaced nor provided for these persons in the lower income brackets.

Of course, in keeping with its promise the first move was to reduce the civil service of the Cayman Islands by 7.5%—falling short of this, I understand, by 2.5%. So, for one to get a balanced view one has to look at the other side of the coin and that is the other side, without question—as it is all facts and factually known to anyone who chooses to know.

I wish first to speak on matters relating to the civil service, and to look at what I consider the function of the civil service is, and what has happened with it and what, in the Throne Speech, supposedly will be happening with this organisation.

The civil service in my opinion, is the means by which Government goes on and why Government continues. It is not the changing of politician every four years in this country that guarantees the function of Government. For there are separations between the civil arm of Government, the Legislative arm, the Judiciary and the Executive—at least there is supposed to be.

The Cayman Islands civil service has grown from a minuscule number to now over 2,000 people. I have been a civil servant as have a number of people who are presently Elected Representatives in this country. I have a great deal of respect for the civil service and for what it does and for its accomplishment. I am also one who criticises various areas of it where I think it lacks impetus or performance. When one looks at the civil service, anyone who knows must first understand that it is there as a service-machine for the country. It is quite true, as was stated by the Third Elected Member for George Town, that if it were a retail businesses and any retail business that attempted to pay the percentage of some of the recurrent expenses and to pay staff—that would be a business that would be out of business. But the vast difference is that the civil service is all about people and delivering certain services, most of which the private sector do not wish to be into. Yet, these services have to be delivered because it is the obligation of the state.

I said, when I first heard that the Government was undertaking to hastily cut civil servants out of the civil service, that it was not the way to do so. For, in any such exercise a sensible manager would first do a proper study and determine if there are duplications, if one can amalgamate, reassign or shuffle duties and responsibilities, and then make such reductions. This was not done.

If we just look at the figures, at the end of 1994, there were 2,043 established posts. For this year 1995, there are 2,151 posts. Can that 151 be taken out? It cannot. If they are taken out, something is seriously going to suffer. So is the reality of the civil service.

There are some services that would interest the private sector; there is the Water Authority for example. Of course the private sector would like to take that up, that is a money-making venture. But Government, in the first instance at least, made a smart move in that it was put into an Authority where a management was in place with the ability under legislation to collect bills, to do business in a more private sector format, than it being a department of Government.

One thing is wrong with it, I certainly believe, and that is the Minister responsible for the Authority is also the Chairman of the Authority. For there it loses its autonomous side to some extent because the Minister just happens to be an Elected Member of the people there are always some political demands present by the public on him or her as the case may be. With an Authority and the person employed being someone other than a political figure, it can, in my opinion, operate much more smoothly.

The Cayman Islands Civil Service is in a state of flux; it is threatened; it is fearful, and I do not foresee it getting any better any too soon. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town and myself, made a recent visit to the United Kingdom where we had the opportunity of meeting with the Officials of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office who have the exercise of legal and administrative authority for the Cayman Islands. We expressed to them our concerns about the civil service and what is happening at this time. We told them that we thought the civil service is very unstable, and with good cause.

Civil servants on a whole began down the line and worked themselves toward the top, at least in years past. This was so to some extent because we did not have a large pool of professional people, technocrats, and so on, to draw on. That is still the case, but we have improved the base; there are increased numbers in that area. They grew with the civil service, they knew its every nuance, and many of them made it to heads of departments, permanent secretaries and otherwise.

Many of those persons who joined in the early years quailed and hold qualifications relevant to the job they hold. The younger officers and heads of department, and at the top, permanent secretaries, and so on, many of them hold qualifications in one area or another. What is for sure, is that the Cayman Islands that I live in... and as I am aware of them by the Government produced statistic which tell me that if there is a society in the world who has to attempt to get from its qualified citizens every bit of service, work or duty, it has to be the Cayman Islands; this country does not have the luxury or can afford to send people into early retirements.

I believe it is truer in the United States and England, for example, to think of people just over 20 as being old. Songs are written about being young and beautiful and so on—supposedly, young means being a teenager. But in these parts of the world, perhaps you defy nature or the concept, because there are 60 and 70 year-old people in this country as healthy as many of our 20 year-olds—in some instances, healthier than them, if we compared some of them to some of the unfortunates here who wreck their bodies with illegal drugs. So, we cannot afford to retire our people in this country who have the ability and the willingness to go on working. Too much of that has happened in recent times.

It has happened during the time of this present Government, and never before under any other Government. There are persons, former Chief Secretary and First Official Member, Mr. Lemuel Hurlston, who disappeared off the scene—early retirement. The latest casualties: Mr. Oswald Rankine, Mr. Audley Scott—young men, by no means old, willing to work and who have worked. Something is seriously wrong, and I share the view of the majority of the Caymanian public, that much of it is due to political activities causing undue pressure on some persons in the civil service.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town and I said as much to the Foreign and Commonwealth Office. Perhaps that is why the Governor in delivering the Throne Speech on the last page spoke about a rumour of outside interference; that outside interference, we believe, is political interference and it is no rumour; it is popular belief in this country—that would be a more correct definition.

Certainly, my before mentioned colleague and I stated as much to the United Kingdom Officials. In doing so we took along various articles from newspapers, and we did not just ask the officials to believe us, we encouraged them to take whatever steps they believe are necessary to look closer into the situation. We left with the distinct impression that they would, and I suspect that they have to some extent. How much? I do not know. But I hope it continues, for this country cannot afford to lose any more civil servants as it has been losing them in the recent past.

I will not call the names of civil servants that are still in office, but I prepared quite a list of those who are still supposed to disappear off the civil service scene. We will see whether that happens or not.

Madam Speaker, I try to keep as close in touch with changes in the world around me as I can. I am aware that manpower resource is something which is limited in many instances, such as in our country, and even in the United States—when one compares by their statistic the need for qualified, trained people and those who they actually have, as well as the fact that persons who are trained in a particular field now make deliberate decisions to enter another field and are retrained. I think we need to adopt such a practise right now. We cannot send any more civil servants out to pasture.

I believe it should be timely for the General Orders to be reviewed was stated in the Throne Speech. I trust that there could be an awakening in what used to be a highly recognisable body called the "Cayman Islands Civil Service Association". This used to be a force to be reckoned with, and it did not just include top and middle managers, it included representatives from every level of the civil service. In the times that I can think about, when strides were made in the terms and conditions of services of civil servants in the Cayman Islands, one saw to it that persons who were head of departments did not hold the post of its presidency; for that created a situation where you had top management having to wrestle with matters which were real to those, in many instances, who were in the lower echelon of the civil service, who did not accord with what was top management's view on the matter. I trust that there will be a reawakening of this Association and that they will look very carefully at the General Orders that govern them—both in terms of what might be rightfully theirs in terms such as money, safety in the work place, pensionable rights, or whatever, and that they will make clear and specific recommendations to the Government, to the Governor, the Government Executives, as to what they will be prepared to live with, what they want to see changed, or whatever may be their views for making the civil service an improved place to work and to be.

I think the Public Service Regulations also need to be reviewed quite regularly, and to the best of my knowledge it has been some time coming. So, the fact that there may be in place a review, I believe the civil servants should seriously become involved in that process also.

If the Cayman Islands' Civil Service Association fails to exercise its significance on its own behalf and that of civil servants, there is going to be more of the trauma the civil service is undergoing presently: because of the early termination of the District Commissioner and the Deputy District Commissioner in Cayman Brac, we now find a dislocation in the Portfolio of Finance and Development, where the Deputy Financial Secretary has been sent over to the Brac to act in that position. This is also causing the Permanent Secretary of Personnel to be displaced from that office to supposedly go to the Brac to fill that position. It is then creating a vacancy in Grand Cayman in the post of Permanent Secretary for Personnel. Who is in line for it? That will be, I daresay, another surprise.

Madam Speaker, in my opinion the civil service ought to be so organised, so managed, that it is clear to anyone working in the service the line of ascension and who is in line within each department, or who is in line in any given category of posts within the civil service so that there is no speculation every time a vacancy occurs.

There is not, in such an unsettled state of being, the question that political favour may work on anyone's behalf, or that a good word said in a particular place might work to someone's destruction. The civil service is not so designed at this time. It is most unfortunate. It is no mammoth task that persons can be clearly identified by grade, by category, so that if there is a vacancy that has occurred in the position of a Senior Assistant Secretary level, for example, one knows immediately how many are there that might be moved across the board, or who have seniority within the Assistant Secretary level to move up. It should not be a secret. It should be top management making this easy transition to be in place.

Rather than firing civil servants and rather than going afield hiring civil servants into the very top levels of the civil service without the relevant experience born from working within the civil service, there should be a clear policy for training of civil servants. There is some. There is, as far as I know, the Training Unit. To what extent it is allowed to function by monitory consideration and manpower, I really do not know. But, surely, there has never been a time in the history of the civil service before—like now—where that is necessary.

There is another matter, Madam Speaker, that is wrong, unjust and unfair. If a civil servant is found committing a misconduct, an illegality—whatever, justice says that you must charge that person and give that person the opportunity of defending himself or herself against that charge; and it must be done as quickly as is possible. That is not happening in this country now. There is one case that I can think about for an officer who did head the office of Supervision of Insurance—Superintendent of Insurance the post was, I think. I believe until this time that man is still suffering the trauma of being accused and no one as yet has him to where he can defend himself. In the meantime he is being kept out of a job. He has suffered health problems, and that is what is happening in this country at this time, that is what is happening to civil servants.

If he did something wrong, let the court find him guilty and punish him accordingly. But the man should not be left hanging in the air as is the case now—he or anyone else. What kind of government is this? What kind of management is this? I trust that the Governor will take cognisance of it—as he said in the Throne Speech, the civil service is directly under his command. So, all I would want to say to the commander is: 'Please do the right thing', as we all know the right thing to be.

As to how many in this country believe that the early disappearance of the civil servants in the civil service in recent times has been a matter between those officers and the Governor, I would make no comment. It is really odd, though, that months before everybody knew who was getting it and why, and how. It ought to stop. It is bad for this country, it is bad for me; it is bad for every member in here. It is bad for our children, and it is bad for our image. It is bad for proper Government management.

Reference has also been made to pensions and service—pensions for civil servants. A study has supposedly been done to determine the liability to Government in this particular area. If there is an actuarial assessment, I wonder why it is such a secret? I remember back in 1991, I think it was, when the former Member for Health and Social Services had a study done (and it was the first one so done) that I think determined that there was $32 million (thereabouts) that was a liability. That was certainly made available to every Member of this House and, of course, interested organisations and other persons as well. Why is this such a secret? I would say to the Government that if they have such a study, they should let the country on a whole know, for it is everybody's business. Why I say it is everybody's business, it is that civil servants who retire with pensionable rights have the first call on the finances of the country. I do not know how many of us know that, or agree with it, or whatever, but that is a fact. The bigger the number, the bigger the piece that is coming out of the revenue. One wonders just how safely, how wisely, how well managed the money that is earmarked to meet those pensions is. This report ought to be made available to the public on a whole. Public input in these times is good, indeed.

This is another reason why people who are able and willing to work, and who can work, should be kept on. What is the sense of retiring someone six, eight, ten years early and having to pay them what they would not have had due them until ten years later? What type of management is that? It is happening, though, in lots of instances.

Precedents have been set in this country where one can retire at 50. It was the first instance where someone retired at 50—simply took early retirement. The Governor has certain discretion to give a person retirement, basically when he chooses. But 50 years old has become the magic figure when a certain civil servant retired early. He is around with us nowadays, in fact—in Government!

Madam Speaker, this country is in for more trouble than we need if something serious is not done to regularise situations in the civil service. This country cannot be helped if conditions persist where we hear of more and more top people who are loosing their jobs—call it what one will. If you can take away my superior (the man at the very top) and I am just a small fish down in the middle, what about me? It surely does not inspire confidence. In fact, it makes me rather fearful. Will I be next? When? How?

When I speak of considerations to be given to keep civil servants in place, I am talking about civil servants that are prepared to work. Civil servants who are loyal to the organisation, civil servants that are, indeed, the type of people anyone would want to hire because they are good, dedicated, hardworking persons. Be it far from me that I should suggest that if there are persons who are slacking on the job, who do not care about the job, who do not get to work on time, who get there in all sort of dress or manner, with an 'I don't-care' attitude—no. Any organisation, including the civil service, must rid itself of those persons. But, surely, it is not grounds for getting rid of a civil servant if all that civil servant did wrong was to say: "There is another way we can do this. I suggest we do it this way", and they chose to have an opinion about the job they are doing. Or, for that matter, an opinion about the job that Government is doing. As long as they do not get on a soapbox like the politician or the Elected Representatives can do, they have the right to that opinion. And as long as that opinion does not cause disruptive activity within the organisation, then that should not be grounds for a civil servant losing his job or, indeed, the country losing a civil servant.

Madam Speaker, there has been reference made to a study recently done by the Chamber of Commerce. Much has been said in the press, the written media, the radio the television, and it has also been mentioned in the debate in this Legislature in the past few days. Now, I want to first of all say that I believe I know what the function and role of a Chamber of Commerce is, even one in the Cayman Islands. I also want to say that I have been at variance, numerous times, with the Chamber of Commerce of these Islands, for I believe it has assumed positions or roles that it has no business in and, indeed, has promulgated opinions about things which, in effect, would direct Government policy and various matters, laws and otherwise.

However, I know that the Cayman Islands has a Chamber of Commerce and I know that there is a push and a shove between the Government and the Chamber of Commerce when there should not be one. I do not kid myself to believe that it does not wield significant influence and authority in these Islands. This survey has to be something which the Government of the day does not want to hear about, for I have read it and I see where the findings as published by the Chamber of Commerce are most unfaltering in almost every way to the work of Ministries, their work on issues and, indeed, an assessment of Ministers.

I have also read the Caymanian Compass, which had an editorial regarding it, pointing out that it could not lay claim to being a scientific study. I think there is truth in that. I believe that various things that were pointed out within the article in the Caymanian Compass, including the fact that the Chamber of Commerce chose not to say how many replies it had received and how many from its members and from the public, gave a certain scope for one to form one's own opinion.

There is one thing that I think is significant about it at this time, however, that it did not just poll its members, it polled the public on a whole—it blitzed mailboxes around the country. I know I received one, I am aware that my mother received and, I heard numerous people said that they received one. I did not answer or reply to mine. I did not do that basically for one main reason, and that was that I did not believe that in assessing a Government you assessed the personalities of each individual person, for I am advanced enough in my thinking to understand that Government is a collective body, and if you wanted to assess what the Government is doing in sports, or with roads, or with whatever, you assessed Government—you do not assess individuals. Purely on that ground, I objected to answering it, and I did not.

I might just mention here, Madam Speaker, that, supposedly, the Executive Council is held to collective responsibilities. On that principle that is why you can have one person who speaks for it in the form of a chief among the Ministers called the "Chief Minister", because if he gives you an answer on any one subject that is the answer for all five of them. But, unfortunately, we live in a country that has five Governments—each Minister is a Government. I had difficulty with that perverted concept of Government, so I did not answer it. However, some people obviously did.

I think it is very significant, Madam Speaker, to get a political perspective in our country at this time, which one can from some of these findings. I would like to refer to this document in some instances.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, before you refer to the document could we take the suspension for 15 minutes?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.43 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.11 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, continuing.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

At the point when we took the suspension I was about to refer to the Chamber of Commerce's survey. I want to add, before I quote from it, the point that there is no doubt in my mind, nor do I believe there could be a doubt in the mind of any reasonable person in this country, that the Chamber of Commerce favoured the present Government to the furthest and widest degree in the 1992 Election, and that every report, with few exceptions, from that time to now has been in favour of the Government of the day. So, when I hear the protestations from Government Members about the awful Chamber of Commerce, and what that is doing to them now, it is certainly falling on my deaf ears; for I believe if the Chamber of Commerce could have truthfully avoided this, they would have.

As I read it, I get the feeling, in any event, that it is more cajoling the Government, to say: 'Look, you better make some changes for it is clear to us what you are facing.'

In the introduction of the document it says: "The 1995 survey reveals a disturbing depth of dissatisfaction with Government." And it goes on to make certain disclaimers. For example, the percentage, and I quote: "While the Chamber received a considerable number of responses from the general public, these represent a far smaller percentage return than the percentage of Chamber members who responded. For this reason, we recommend that the general public's results be considered as a sampling rather than a comprehensive review." I think it is very fair in pointing out these things.

Relating to what I said earlier with regard to the concept, the feeling of victimisation in this country, the Chamber in the Introduction says: "The public are more fearful than Chamber members of offering any information which could serve to identify them, with many of them expressing fears of victimization. [These are not my words] (This is understandable. It has taken years for Chamber members to accept that the Chamber will never provide any information which will identify them, even if they sign their names to the forms, which many of them now do)."

It also says: "The verbal comments supplied by the general public have reflected the same opinions as those received from Chamber members; however, those from the general public have been, by and large, more strongly stated."

Madam Speaker, under the section dealing with Ministries it dealt with the Ministry for Aviation and Education. The public thinks that its performance is satisfactory and the Chamber feels that it is below average. Education: both the public and the Chamber think that education in the country after two years is below average.

Two comments from that section state: "The school system and attitude of students needs looking into", and another one says: "There still appears to be no concrete direction, regarding secondary education on the Island."

The Ministry for Communications, Works and Agriculture, on the matter of Communications, the public feels that its performance is below average and the Chamber thinks its performance is satisfactory. On Works, both the Chamber and the public believe it is below average. On Agriculture the public and the Chamber think its performance is satisfactory.

The Ministry for Health and Human Services (sic): Health—the public thinks that its performance is below average and the Chamber thinks it is below average.

Madam Speaker, I try to keep my personal feelings out of this, but I must add my share to this one; I surely do believe that it is atrociously below average. It is a crime and a shame what is happening in the medical services of this country. During the suspension I had a telephone call telling me that my mother, who had been operated on two weeks ago, has been rushed to the Hospital where she lies on a banana cart in the Casualty Ward waiting to see who can be discharged so that she can get a bed. Yet, in this Honourable House, time and again, we have heard lies that there is always the sufficiency of beds and no such thing happens.

Human Services: both the public and the Chamber think they are below average. Two comments listed in the section are; "It is ridiculous to spend $21 million on the old hospital site . . ." and "The decision to remodel the George Town Hospital was a hasty one and could backfire."

The Ministry for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs, and Culture—and, we could add to that, everything else—Community Development: the public thinks that its performance is below average and so does the Chamber. Youth Affairs: the public and the Chamber think it is below average. Sports: the public thinks it is satisfactory and the Chamber thinks it is satisfactory. Culture: the public thinks it is below average and the Chamber thinks it is poor.

Comments from the public: "Too much emphasis on sports has far exceeded that which is prudent." and another, "He has a misguided conception that sports, and not culture and education, is the priority in stabilizing the community."

The Ministry for Tourism, Environment and Planning. Tourism: the public thinks it is below average and the Chamber thinks it is below average. Environment, the public and the Chamber think its performance is poor. Planning, the Chamber and the public think its performance is poor.

Comments: "Should not have lifted the moratorium. Our infrastructure cannot handle what we have now.", another, "Pays lip service to environmental concerns and totally ignores public input into planning."

Madam Speaker, that is not what the Government wants to hear, but I do not believe that the Chamber in this exercise made up any negatives on this Government. Be it far from me to ever imagine that. What they have compiled here has been said, and the thing about it that makes it so real is that nobody inside the peoples' houses or offices when they were filling out those forms where there to see, or to intimidate, them and they felt freer from fear and victimisation. They could do it anonymously, and they did.

They chose certain areas, the limited amount, for issues such as Trade and Commerce although the Government and, particularly, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town who presented the major view on behalf of the Government and on this survey, spoke about all that is happening in Commerce and Trade and all the rest of it. The findings? Both the public and the Chamber think it is below average. Crime: both the public and the Chamber think it is below average. Reduction of Government expenditure: the public thinks it is below average and the Chamber thinks it is below average. They listed a comment: "They have saved some just to turn around and waste it somewhere else." Another comment is: "Fire more civil servants. Please this time not for political reasons. Fire the useless, not the ones you do not like."

Road Improvements: The public thinks it is below average and the Chamber thinks it is poor. The Development Plan: both the public and the Chamber think it is poor. They listed a comment: "No notice taken of public input." A judgment call on the Government by the Organisation that undoubtedly has supported it in its general efforts and, certainly, I think subscribed to its promises and its Manifesto.

Another comment: "Not satisfied about providing private driveways with public money, for voters in West Bay." And: "The private drives and roads look good. The public roads need help."

One thing that we talked about here in the House is tourism. Everywhere now environment has become the thing and we hear much about this. Environmental protection: both the Chamber and the public think it is poor. Immigration: the public thinks it is below average and the Chamber thinks it is poor. Long-term Planning: both the public and the Chamber think it is poor. I could not agree with them more.

Public Consultation: both the public and the Chamber think it is poor. Absolutely, because the Government at this time it knows it all. Most Ministers in their minds have become experts in the subjects that they are supposed to be politically responsible for. That is why persons like myself, who in this Chamber may have a view about something and rather than exploring or condemning that view and showing reasons why, they get up to condemn me—standard practice. That strikes me like that is all they are capable of—the personality attack, not the insightful analysis of the subject.

Here is one that even those persons most inclined to deficiencies in truth could agree with: Advance Notice on Bills—the public, poor; and the Chamber, poor.

I stated earlier that where it polled people individually, or elected members individually, I did not see the right in that particular situation, in that the Government Executive is a collective body acting under collective responsibility. And I think that the survey missed the point in that ordinary Members of the House cannot make things happen—although it seems that you have Ministers also misguided in accusing Members on the Backbench about not doing so and so, and what they did to do and so. They miss the point that it is they who are supposed to be doing. They missed the point that it is the duty of the Members on the Backbench to bring to them the requests from the people of each district, and it is they who are suppose to do something about it. They are suppose to do it—roads, environment or whatever. Where do the rest of us on this side, including the Opposition and the Government Backbench, where do we have the authority to tell the Permanent Secretary that he/she should spend such and such or make a move and tell the Head of Department to do whatever by Thursday or Friday. We do not. So it is absurd.

I think that asking people to poll individually in this survey, missed the whole point. But it comes back to the disease we suffer from in the Cayman Islands, that is, that unfortunately we are a society and largely a cult of personalities. That is why political parties—which are groups of people subscribing to specific goals, views, hopes and aspirations for country and Government—is not good enough. Each one has to have his own agenda. So, that is simply just carried on in this particular case.

To find Ministers of Government, and ordinary Members of the House rated on a listing, to me is unrealistic and farfetched. It does not make a lot of sense.

Certainly, the managers of the Ministries are those persons who do have hands-on authority and ability to do, and there were comments made on this. Without naming names I will quote but a few comments. I quote:

"This member needs to take a hard look at what is best for the people, not to appease his conscience. He needs to look at the country's future. At meetings he is too busy agreeing with everything that nothing gets done."

Comments on another: "He is too much of a yes man and can't stand on his feet. He will do what he is told. Easy going and out of his league."

Comments on another: "He apparently went along with the paving of the private roads and driveways."

Comments on another: "He is a big mouth man blowing a lot of hot air. He is a disgrace to the community. Ill mannered, no self respect, or respect for anyone else."

Comments on another: "He must get out!! He is putting our country in great danger! Unbelievable. Is he trying to ruin the country. Will he fire everyone that is competent? Change his title to King or Dictator."

Madam Speaker, I but make the point that there are those persons in this country who do not believe that this is the best Government that has ever been in place.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Honourable Member, it is now 4.30. May I ask for a motion for the adjournment? The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Planning and Environment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until ten o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that this House do now adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 10 MARCH 1995.

FRIDAY
10 MARCH, 1995
10.05 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Elected Member for North Side to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Order. Proceedings are resumed. Questions to Honourable Members. Question No. 19, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 19

No. 19: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Third Official Member if Government has disqualified Hurlstone Construction Limited from bidding on works tendered by Government.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, the answer to this question is yes. This decision has been taken as a reasonable precaution pending the resolution of the Court case brought against Government by this Company.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Member say if the company has been so informed by Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I am not aware of this decision being communicated to the company in writing, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Honourable Member give an undertaking that this company would be so informed, and that Government do so in the usual, proper manner—in writing?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I will convey the request that has been made by the Honourable Member. But at this time I will have to consult with the Honourable Attorney General as to the implications of that undertaking.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Honourable Member say, if I am understanding this correctly, that the fact that Hurlstone Construction, if it was allowed to bid on jobs (even jobs unrelated to any that it may be litigating) that this would affect Government's position vis a vis the two entities—Government and this company?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, according to the advice given by the Honourable Attorney General, the decision is up to Government whether it wants to continue doing business with a company that is presently suing it.

QUESTION 20 (Deferred)

No. 20: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister for Agriculture Communications and Works what is the cost to date of the diversion road at the end of the Airport runway.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, I would ask that this question be delayed a bit and set down on the Order Paper for a later date. I had to withdraw the answer for some corrections.

The Speaker: The question is that the answer be delayed for a period at the request of the Honourable Minister. I shall put the question. Those in favour, please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Permission is granted to delay the answer to this question.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 20 DEFERRED UNTIL A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 21, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION 21

No. 21: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works what is the present 24-hour average car movement on the new diversion road at the end of the Airport runway and Smith Road, compared to the last published statistics.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, an unpublished summary of the 1994 Island-wide traffic survey showed the following traffic volumes: Crew Road south of Owen Roberts Drive: 19,162 vehicles per day; Smith Road west of Crewe Road: 10,577 vehicles per day. These counts were made in March of 1994.

On 8th February, 1995, a 24-hour traffic count on the diverted Crewe Road at the end of the runway found 17,865 vehicles. It should be noted that this is only one day and is not necessarily an average number to compare to previous years or to other averages.

A recent traffic count has not been made on Smith Road. The entire Island-wide annual traffic survey is scheduled for March and will provide comparable average traffic counts for Smith Road as well as the other locations.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Taking note of the fact that there has not been sufficient statistical data to strike a meaningful average, it appears that there has been a decrease on this road. Does the Honourable Minister have any indication whether this traffic has diverted down Smith Road instead of the usual movement across Crewe Road?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, Yes, I believe that traffic has diverted in two areas: I think more traffic is presently on the Airport Road and also on Smith Road.

No. 22: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to state how many persons have completed the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation Programme offered at the Counselling Centre during the past two years.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, a total of 57 clients completed the Drug and Alcohol Rehabilitation programme at Cayman Counselling Centre in 1993, and a total of 43 clients in 1994, which brings the total to 100.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, Can the Honourable Minister state what was the rate of recidivism amongst these clients?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, I have been told that it is in the area of 60%, but I could look into this and get a more accurate figure.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, Can the Honourable Minister state if in the cases of recidivism the programme is merely repeated, or if alterations are made to take into account some factors which may have led to recidivism?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker, this is looked at and necessary adjustments are made. Just recently the programme was extended to 10 weeks.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker,
I wonder if the Honourable Minister is in a position to say if, from the statistics, there is any rationale to understand the decline from year to year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, the problem is that we have not had a complete staff until recently. The numbers were put in the Budget for last year, but they have not yet been put into place. We are planning shortly to bring a requisition to increase the staff to full total and we have recently moved over to Paddington Place. We now have more space, we had been so cramped with hardly any place before to put the counsellors.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, am I to understand then that there are people who have been turned back?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, no one has been turned away; but because of the lack of staff, not as much time has been spent with these people. With the increase to 10 weeks we hope to see a major improvement in this area.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, can the Honourable Minister say if, in the rehabilitation programme, a distinction is made between alcohol abuse and other substance abuse; and, also, if the distinction is made which of the groups constitutes the greatest number of recidivists?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The treatment (counselling) is basically the same for both. The greatest area of recidivism is with the crack cocaine.

QUESTION 23

No. 23: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what is Government's position on the call by the Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Society (CIMDS) to limit the number of doctors allowed to practise in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, an inspection of the Health Services was ordered in 1994 and one of the terms of reference was "to review the role and function of the Health Practitioners' Board" which is appointed by the Governor in Council under the Health Practitioners' Law of 1974. The function of the Board is the registration and discipline of health practitioners practising in the Cayman Islands.

The Health Service Inspection Team, in response to the previously stated terms of reference, met with members of the Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Society (CIMDS) to seek their perspective on the role and function of the Health Practitioners' Board. At that meeting CIMDS made the recommendation that manpower guidelines for private health practitioners be legislated.

An extensive report on the inspection of the Health Services, with 104 recommendations, has been presented to Executive Council along with recommendations on the call by CIMDS for manpower guidelines. When Executive Council has completed its review of the recommendations, Government will be able to say what its position is on the call by CIMDS to limit the number of doctors allowed to practice in the Cayman Islands.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, can the Honourable Minister say if it is the intention of the Government to seek public input, or to take this matter for public consultation before the decision is made?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, would the Minister say (and, indeed, this has been told to me by a practitioner and I would like to query the Minister) if there have been regulations made in the very recent past which have limited, or with the intention of limiting the number of doctors who work in the Cayman Islands and these have been put on hold rather than being published in the Gazette as would be the normal process?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Not to my knowledge, Madam Speaker.

QUESTION 24

No. 24: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation what scholarships, loans or financial assistance does the Government provide for Caymanians studying at the International College of the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Government provides no direct assistance to Caymanians studying at the International College of the Cayman Islands, but this is now under consideration by the Ministry. However, despite the fact that the yearly grant had been stopped by the previous two governments since 1985, the Ministry now provides a yearly grant to the College.

At the Standing Finance Committee meeting, which considered the last Budget, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town did not ask for such assistance.

SUPPLEMENTARY

Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, if my asking for the assistance is enough to grant it, may I now convey my request to the Honourable Minister?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, we are not in Finance Committee. If this was uppermost in his mind, and he was thinking about the International College... He has been in a Finance Committee every two or three months and has done nothing about it. It is a question now, I suggest, he puts up when he remembered the college for the first and the last two years.

No. 25: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what is the present average waiting period for outpatient treatment at the George Town Hospital.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, the average waiting period for outpatient treatment at the George Town Hospital varies, and is dependent upon the following factors: (i) the time of day; (ii) the medical condition of the patient; and (iii) whether the patient had an appointment.

Genuine emergencies are provided with services immediately.

Patients without an appointment (walk-in) are triaged within an average of 15 minutes. Upon the completion of the triage, and if the patient is assessed as a genuine emergency, the patient is provided with services immediately.

If the patient is not assessed as an emergency then the waiting period can vary from half an hour to one and a half hours or more, depending upon the availability of the doctor dealing with a genuine emergency.

Patients with appointments wait an average of 20 minutes.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: During the course of the day, namely nine to five is when it is most likely that people would seek appointments, can the minister say how many doctors are available for such appointments on a regular basis during that time period?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, there are three doctors for walk-in patients and for specialist visitation there are between three and four doctors.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Minister can tell us if the three doctors are extended to five onward through the night?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker up until 10.00 in the evening there are two doctors, after that there is only one. But if an emergency arises and a doctor determines that help is needed, he has the responsibility to call another doctor in for help.

QUESTION 26

No. 26: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to provide an update on any forthcoming legislation regarding National Health Insurance.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, in late 1994 Executive Council approved the setting up of a Health Insurance Advisory Committee which would assist my Ministry in its efforts toward achieving the goal of providing a realistic, workable health insurance programme for Caymanians and legal residents. This Committee has been meeting since January of this year and will report its findings to me as soon as its deliberations are completed. At that time I shall be in a position to make a statement to this Honourable House setting out the Ministry's programme for ensuring health insurance coverage for the Islands.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give us some idea of who makes up this advisory committee?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Yes, I can.

The Members of the Committee are: Miss Andrea Bryan, Chairperson, Permanent Secretary for Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation; myself; the Honourable Truman Bodden, Minister of Education; the Honourable McKeeva Bush, Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture; the Honourable James M. Ryan, Chief Secretary; Mr. John Darwood, Deputy Insurance Inspector; Mr. Ervin Conolly, Director of Health Services; Mr. Leonard Dilbert, Permanent Secretary for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture; Mr. William Adam, Hobbies and Books (as a private sector individual); Mr. Roy McTaggart, representative of the Chamber of Commerce; Mr. Derek Bogle, of Derek Bogle and Associates, Insurance; Mr. Danny Scott, Cayman General Insurance Company; Mr. Spencer Marshall and Mrs. Laverne Dalkon of Cayman Insurance Centre, Ltd.; Mr. Roger Corbin, Cayman Insurance Brokers, Ltd.; Mr. Harvey Stephenson, British American Life Insurance; Mr. Norman Wilson, Capital Life Insurance Company, Ltd.; Mr. Colin Luke and Associates; Mr. Chris Gunby, Bankers Association Representative; Dr. Victor Lookloy, Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Society; Mr. Jeff Schofield, British Caymanian; Mr. Colin Ross, as an Assistant Secretary; and the Minister of Health and Drug Abuse as the Secretary to the Advisory Committee.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

If I do not pry too far, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could advise us as to how often the Committee meets or has been meeting?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker, the overall committee meets at least once per month and we have now broken down into a smaller group which meets at least once per week as subcommittees.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Minister say if any target date has been set for the committee to make a report?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Madam Speaker, not a specific date, but it will certainly be before November of this year.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This may be seeking an opinion...

The Speaker: Well, Honourable Member, if you are aware that you will be seeking an opinion...

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will ask the question... sorry.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say if in his opinion a greater thrust should be made toward this, seeing it is so important, and there has been nothing done about it since the Health Services Authority and the Insurance Law were repealed.

The Speaker: That is still seeking an opinion because the Honourable Minister has arranged for a committee and I cannot allow that.

The next question is No. 27, standing in the name of The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 27

No. 27: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what is the status of the proposed new George Town Hospital facility.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The answer: A major planning exercise was carried out during 1994, culminating in a report entitled "Master Planning Study for George Town Hospital". This study was conducted with major input by the Hospital staff, through its Facilities Review Committee.

In December 1994, a Steering Committee chaired by the Permanent Secretary in my Ministry was set up. One of the primary functions of this Committee is to ensure that the project implementation is in strict accordance with Government's established procedures.

An Interim Project Manager was appointed in January, 1995, to lead the implementation of the Master Planning Study. The current plan is that this Project Manager will see the completion of design and award of construction contracts for phases I and II. Another person will be appointed to oversee the construction of the remainder of phase I and phase II.

The first item to be constructed as part of the overall project is a desperately needed new waste-water treatment plant. Responsibility for design and construction is with the Water Authority and the new plant will be in operation mid July of this year.

The first building to appear on the site will be a materials management building. This building has been advanced from the main body of the work because it is desperately needed. At present, Government is paying $5,000 rent per month for an off-site storage facility and in addition there is considerable cost, inefficiency and delay in transporting materials to and from this store. The new building will be a steel-frame metal-clad structure, able to withstand hurricane-force winds. Completion will be in December of this year.

Eight consultants with international experience have been shortlisted and invited to submit proposals by 17th March of this year. From these will be selected one consultant who will be engaged for the final design and supervision of the construction of the main components of the project.

It is expected that construction will begin in mid-October of this year.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Are funds in place to undertake the construction envisaged this year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker, there are funds to get us going for the first phase of this in the budget. We may need a supplementary to get through, but we have funds there that will get us going into the first phase. As we know, the majority of the buildings will be going on in 1996.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say whether the $21-odd million that has been cited as a figure for completion of the new facility is based on a bill of quantities or simply on a generic plan?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, a very detailed plan was done with the square footage, and the consultants that did this during the latter part of last year have put this forward. There is not a detailed quantity surveyor on this as yet. We hope to have that going next week to get the actual final figures. But this came from an estimate by the people who worked on the design of the previous facility.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

So, is it fair comment then that the amount quoted is an estimate, not a final figure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: In view of the answer given by the Minister, the matter, then, of tendering could not be started until an accurate figure is known. Would the Minister say if it is the Government's intention to set a ceiling as to what the Government will pay to have the hospital?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker, we have asked for the detailed bill of costs to be in place shortly, and until this is in place the contract would not be offered. But the consultants will have their estimates in by the 17th of this month.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for today.

Government Business. Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, continuing.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, when we adjourned yesterday afternoon, I was discussing the Political Survey done by the Chamber of Commerce regarding the performance of the Government at this time.

In its concluding comments, I quote: "The following unedited comments are representative of the most repeated views." Once such view is: "This is the most vindictive Government I have known in these islands. Their bullying tactics do not belong in a democracy." Another quotation is: "Gradually Cayman is degenerating into a banana republic." There is another which says: "It is time for a big clean up. We hope that it doesn't have to wait for the next election." And a fourth: "Help us, Lord, to correct our grave voting mistake in 1996. Chamber of Commerce—please, please help Cayman to get a respectable Government again!"

As I said yesterday, the situation regarding the Chamber of Commerce's survey leaves it open to various views and conclusions. I stated some of my reservations, which I do not propose to restate, but I think it is real enough to say that the public of this country and, indeed, the members of the Chamber of Commerce, have given considerable indication of their private thoughts as to the Government's performance and their view as to the Government on a whole.

The Chamber of Commerce also offers some opinions, and one is: "If a Government does not follow the path of representative government, it will surely be removed." I believe this is a very true statement, and it follows through not only in the Cayman Islands but elsewhere.

It also makes the comment: "There is no shame in a Government taking a wrong turn now and then. There is only shame in refusing to correct that turn, once it is learned that it is considered wrong in the eyes of the people."

In learning these things, any well-thinking government takes into account also the views that they hear in parliament which do not necessarily coincide with its own. One of the most unfortunate conditions with governments—and I think this one suffers considerably from it—is that because of the large majority which forms the Government, the Government is led to believe that it is infallible and can do anything and everything it might want to do. Obviously, there are those who know better, and those persons are the lowly people who vote every four years. Among those must be some with the views as expressed in this survey.

In the conclusion the Chamber of Commerce notes: "It is entirely likely that the constituents have not spoken directly to their MLAs with the vehemence that they have expressed here." And, "Airing the problem now gives Government an opportunity. The choice is clear: to continue to act in a fashion which has been described as arrogant and dictatorial, or to return to the campaign promises which inspired the people to vote for them in 1992; to provide Cayman with a truly representative government in 1995."

The point that I return to is that the Chamber of Commerce and this present Government in the beginning, in my opinion (I said it then, and I say it now) was synonymous. Obviously, something is wrong, and it is coming from a larger representative body than just myself and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town as Opposition Members in this House who do offer a differing point of view from time to time on issues and on the performance of Ministers in their duties.

I would like at this time to offer some comments regarding District Administration, or the administration of Government in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Oddly enough, I see in most references to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that they fall under the terminology of "Sister Islands", even though major revision was made in every Law in the Cayman Islands to remove (would it be correct to say) a nom de plume of 'lesser Islands'. Now it seems to have been replaced by 'Sister Islands'. The two Islands of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman seem to not even be afforded their proper names. The Islands are referred to verbally and in print by Sister Islands. I really do not know of any such. I am referring in this instance to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

One of the most outstanding conditions existing in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman at this time is the uncertainty with regard to its management. The District Commissioner and the Deputy District Commissioner are gone from the scene. With them is gone the continuity of management and the knowledge of prior work activity which they would be aware of.

In the position of top management and in an acting position at this time is the Deputy Financial Secretary, whom I have no doubt is giving of his knowledge and experience and best endeavours while he is at this post with the demands of his normal duties in Finance. It is not a happy state of affairs.

To come yet is a new District Commissioner in the person of the Permanent Secretary of Personnel, as recently announced in the newspapers. I believe that this lady will also give of her very best endeavours. But, it is my understanding that she will be occupying this post for about a year and no one is absolutely certain—certainly I have seen no official statement as to any long-term projection for this particular post. I do believe that post can be better served with certain limitations of time in terms of the number of years (I would not say a yearly turn over) rather than indefinite service by any given officer.

The fact that these Islands are somewhat displaced from the seat of central Government here in Grand Cayman, and due to its geographical location and general attitude over the decades by successive administrations, it tends to get lost. As such, a District Commissioner or an administration can get lost to some extent from the main stream, the main management process, and more and more decisions become those of anyone who is a District Commissioner and continues indefinitely in the post.

I have heard something—and from quite a reliable source—which disturbs me considerably, especially seeing the way things have been going with civil servants. I would not be surprised if such a thing occurred, and that would be something quite major—because I have heard that there have been considerations of downgrading the post of District Commissioner from that of a Permanent Secretary level. I would simply say on that matter that if anything, like the post of Financial Secretary, which is above Permanent Secretary level, if anything, that post should be graded above the Permanent Secretary level line.

Irrespective whether one hears that Social Services is now answering to the Director of Social Services in Grand Cayman, and it is not under the District Commissioner there, or Public Works is under the Public Works in Grand Cayman and not under the District Commissioner there, or MRCU, or any string of departments that are appendages or extensions of the departments in Grand Cayman. The on-the-ground responsibility for Cayman Brac has to sensibly rest with the District Commissioner and that person needs to be someone of the level of Permanent Secretary or above who would be the person to give an official point of view, a Government assessment and summary of what is the case in any instance where any matter relating to any government department is concerned.

I have heard that there is the suggestion that, because there is supposedly a reluctance among Permanent Secretaries in Grand Cayman to even think of transferring there, even for limited terms, thus if the grade is reduced it becomes more common-user and civil servants may be directed to take up posts there. I hope seriously that no such attempt is made.

Anyone thinking a bit further would realise too that the District Commissioner is in many ways a mini-governor over there who is expected to officiate at everything that is of any official significance. One who can speak with some degree of authority as to what is happening in Grand Cayman and share similarity of relationships with Permanent Secretaries here who are the ultimate accounting officers for Government business as set up under our form of Government administration.

The economic needs of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman continue. Fortunately, during the time of the last Government most major infrastructure took place. There is now a bulk storage of fuels on Cayman Brac and there is no longer a question of whether so many drums or tanks full come on a particular boat. There is water in place on the western end of the island; people who might want to invest in the tourism business or homes or otherwise can hook up to it. There has been in place for some time telephones and there have been certain upgradings there. The Power and Light people have a very good service going there. Roads have been considerably improved, maintained, and some have been built. So, there are basic infrastructural developments in place.

What is causing these islands problems is the lack of investment. I believe there is a need for Government to seek to promote Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in a more meaningful way with a harder push for people to invest in these islands—foreign or local persons.

I firmly believe that if it is possible in these two islands to create a certain number of jobs—100 or 200 jobs—that it will take care of young people coming out of school seeking jobs, and it will provide employment in a more full time way for middle age and older persons on Cayman Brac. An unfortunate truth is that every time we hear of a graduation of young people in Cayman Brac (12 or 15 as the case may be) inevitably, almost every one has to leave his island to come to Grand Cayman to find employment. It is the truth. It is fortunate that there is employment here, but, indeed, that is a recurring condition that is not the most favourable. Families also continue to have to leave homes and come to Grand Cayman. In many instances it is not even possible to find renters for those homes that they leave behind and which, for all practical purposes, tend to deteriorate.

On the other hand, in Little Cayman, there is considerable development going on. But, quite recently (I would say about one month or five weeks ago) there were only about two people who were from Little Cayman working there in the many jobs that have been created in Little Cayman. So, there is a considerable, unusual social condition in these two islands which I believe the Government needs to practically address.

A considerable number of hospitality developments have been established—a hotel, apartments et cetera. But almost in every instance there are foreign people who are working there. I understand that as part of their pay the foreign people get housing while others are charged for their housing, although the housing is being offered by their employers. For people to leave Cayman Brac to go to Little Cayman to work they have to pay rent, because there is not sufficient transportation between the two islands for them to travel daily—although some businesses have to make arrangements by small plane, to pick them up and take them back.

The potential for tourism in these two islands is unlimited. Each one offers a different type of tourism. It is possible for the Government, for the Minister of Tourism, for the Department of Tourism, to offer tourism packaging of visits in these islands to include Cayman Brac and Little Cayman so that the two latter islands can be helped more than they are being helped now.

There has been some improvement in arrivals by jet, but I would suggest that there is a need for a planned programme of usage by the jet planes which Cayman Airways operates, to ever keep in place air services which are dependable and which do not change every month or every other month. That is my opinion, and that was a recommendation made, back in 1991, by experts in the field who have made that very same finding and recommendation.

There is an urgent need in Little Cayman for a place where fire engines can be properly housed, where firemen can have someplace to sit, even a shed, instead of frying in the broiling sun—which is the case in Little Cayman. A few months back the only housing for trucking personnel while on duty was sitting in those trucks in the intense heat under a coconut tree about halfway down the present runway.

The small terminal building there, as far as I understand, has been taken over by Island Air, the private inter-island service. Now there are regular flights into that island, sometimes 16, 22 flights per day, shuttling in and out, and there is more and more use of that little building by visitors and persons connected with the airline industry. More and more, the firemen who must be there are not being given an opportunity to be properly housed while in the performance of their duties.

Anyone who goes there and stands around that terminal building on any given day will see what I am saying to be a fact.

Even in this age we have a lack of air services within these islands. There is 100% better air service between the outside world and Grand Cayman than there is within the Islands of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and Grand Cayman. One of the problems has been the lack of a proper runway in Little Cayman. It has been talked about for decades. What presently exists has been existing for decades. There has always been the suggestion that the runway needs to be extended and levelled (because now it has a huge belly in the middle of it) so that planes of a larger capacity can land there with safety. Of course, those larger planes can serve Cayman Brac, therefore overall, the service can be upgraded. No one has done anything about it up to now. The present Minister has done what the Minister before him did—cut trails to the north into the interior land to, supposedly, look at the topography to see whether it would be better to put an airport in there.

Madam Speaker, I want to see the best for Little Cayman and Cayman Brac, but it really stretches my imagination to think that on that island of about 10 local people (and I am stretching the number there) that we would put down a $5 million or $6 million runway to say we put down a new runway somewhere in the middle of it, when for the past 30 or 40 years the one there has been serving.

I have seen what was done during the time of the previous Minister for Aviation. There were three sites looked at, yet the engineers concluded that where it is, while it was not the most ideal in the world, it could better continue there. I try not to be too naive as to not understand that to the north, middle and further north there are certain lands (some Government owned, some would have to be purchased by Government) so there is always business interest involved in the affairs of Government in any event.

But, I surely believe that with the Scott's development and with the quarry, it is possible for Government to make one final decision, as should have been done 40 years ago, and decide that the present runway will be the runway to serve Little Cayman and that they will acquire such land to the west of it and to the north of it to make that acceptable to the grade of runway that will fall in line with ICAO standards. If there is going to be the constant talking about it, nothing will change.

It is fortunate that there is a hurricane shelter there now (started during the time of the District Commissioner who has just left) and it is near completion. Someone became wise enough to realise that if there is threat of hurricane—hurricane conditions can come down upon these Islands so quickly that it does not coincide with what the Miami Hurricane Center is saying—the idea of shuttling people out of Little Cayman to safety in Cayman Brac is ridiculous. There has to be some place there that they can go to quickly which offers some degree of shelter and protection. As best I can see, this has been the case with the shelter that has been built.

I think that there are other ways one can help, that the Government can help, and that is considering the fees for banks and trust companies in Grand Cayman and charging half of that in Cayman Brac. Accounting firms could be dealt with in the same way—money savings attractions so that they will make investments. For people who are doing business, there is no good reason why, if they can get direct air service to Little Cayman and Cayman Brac to do business like they do here in Grand Cayman, that it would not be satisfactory to them; particularly if they were paying a reduced cost to do business there.

The island also needs to make serious efforts for a cruise ship call at Cayman Brac. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town made reference to this matter. He said, and I quote from the Hansard: "Mention had been made in the Throne Speech of the visit of a cruise ship to Cayman Brac. This was really a red-letter day for Cayman Brac and I am certain that the inhabitants of that island will be happy with repeat visits. But this initial visit is important because it took the National Team Government to have brought that visit to Cayman Brac." [Hansard 8 March 1994]

I am very happy that the visit was made, but I think one should deal with it in the truth and circumstances in which it occurred. Two people from Cayman Brac called me and asked me to correct that wrong impression and to tell the truth about how Cayman Brac got a cruise ship visit. I would like to present the true facts on that.

Quoting from the Hansard, the Honourable Thomas C. Jefferson made this statement: "Madam Speaker, I rise to advise Honourable Members and the listening public that the Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning and the Department of Tourism has been working for some time to bring a small cruise ship to Cayman Brac and, with God's help, we feel that we have succeeded. The ship's name is Kazakhstan II, with between 450 to 520 passengers on board who are mainly Germans. It is due to arrive at 8 AM, on Monday 9th January, 1995, and depart at 1.00 PM on the same day." [Hansard 8 December, 1994]

That brief statement having been made, Mr. Haig Bodden is quoted in the Hansard as saying: "Madam Speaker, may I be allowed one question?"

The Speaker said, "You may." Mr. Haig Bodden is quoted as saying: "I would like to ask the Honourable Minister if it is expected that these visits will be on a monthly basis."

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, the Honourable Thomas C. Jefferson said, "Madam Speaker, as I understand it, this ship is on a `round-the-world charter and was due to come into George Town Harbour. Unfortunately, we were unable to allow them into the Harbour because we had too many ships in on that day. So, I guess the answer to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town on this occasion is, No."

I feel certain that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town forgot that exchange on that occasion and he, like myself, has to remember the word `No'. There was no special effort in getting a cruise ship to go to Cayman Brac—it was because there were too many in George Town on that day. Therefore, they suggested that they go to Cayman Brac. My suggestion to the Minister is that it should then be suggested more often so that Cayman Brac can get a cruise ship call.

Since that time, I have inquired about cruise ships and what has been done, and I have been told that there are some smaller ships that have shown an interest in calling here at Grand Cayman. But, indeed, they would have to call on days when the big ships are in. That would simply add to the numbers over and above what the Government believes could be sensibly handled on any particular day. But the key thing about that is that the Government has not suggested to those smaller ships to call at Cayman Brac. I would like to see efforts made for this to be done.

Naturally, the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman were not ungrateful for the call, and they rolled out the red carpet for the people who visited, even though there were few who could speak enough English to talk freely with the residents of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Fortunately, there were one or two foreign residents there who were more than happy to offer their help in conversing with the visitors in their native language, helping to sell the idea that Cayman Brac is a place that would welcome them (and others like them) again.

The islands of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have special needs. If these needs are to be truly met, it has to be through deliberate action and not by chance. I would say to the Government (when they propose to talk in such flowery language about all that they are doing for Cayman Brac, and all of the considerations that they are giving Cayman Brac and Little Cayman) bear in mind that the citizens of those islands are very perceptive, and because things are on a much smaller scale they are more easily discerned, and because of hard times over generations they are very perceptive people and they can easily separate the flak from the fact.

I share the view of the Third Elected Member for George Town, that something needs to be done in bringing about some sort of development guidelines in the two islands. I recently said this at a public meeting, that the exercise of looking at a development plan should include Cayman Brac and Little Cayman; particularly from an environmental point of view because there are still many undamaged physical conditions remaining in these islands to be preserved. Secondly, from a developmental point of view, that people who wish to invest and develop would be guided through the zoning so that they would know what to put where, and what were the considerations.

There were some very detailed guidelines drawn up for Little Cayman, and I think they are largely being disregarded simply because the people who own the land there just do not want it. They have been successful in that. I think practical and sensible guidelines are needed, and I go on record in stating that.

I would now like to turn my attention to the Police Department. The police in this country, as in any country, are a necessity of life. They have become a necessity ever since mankind chose to live in certain structured societies and realised that they had to choose from among themselves those to whom they would give the authority to coerce them under certain legal restraints.

I think that overall the Police Force in the Cayman Islands does a good job. I think also (and I know) that percentage-wise we have one of the highest ratios of police to population. There is talk of increasing the Police Force. I have recently heard advertisements on the radio looking for persons to join the Police Force. I am one who believes that numbers count in some situations, but in some situations quality of service is the biggest thing to be desired.

As far as I can tell, there are many young officers in the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force. I think that is good, because it creates a situation where there will be those who can fill the ranks as the older officers, or their superiors, move on.

I believe that there can be better deployment of police in this island and in Cayman Brac (there are none in Little Cayman). A deficiency in deployment creates a problem for policing. I firmly believe that when you can drive the streets any morning or evening and there are two police officers in a parked car who lay waiting for someone who might be doing five miles over the speed limit, if it is possible to find police to do that, there are too many police. The police are not being deployed properly.

The police must be the ones who control and supervise traffic movement and watch out for it. But they have to serve a better purpose if they are on the move where traffic is on the move; their presence there has a better stimulating law-abiding effect I think. No one—I do not care who it is, including the Commissioner of Police, himself—loves to see a car shoot out from a side road or from the edge of the road behind them with the siren on. Sometimes it has to happen, but I think we can use less of it in these islands now. The amount of traffic flow alone in these islands does not allow one the ability to be able to speed, or for crazy driving as before. That, in itself, should be an indicator where this particular situation is concerned.

Those police who are sitting in motor cars, dodging somewhere on the road, could be better utilised on patrol in areas where there is crime during the day and the night. We do have certain restrictions under the Communities Law on the loudness of music, and even right here in central George Town one could be in an office building and some of these cars pass and the walls vibrate from the sound coming out of them. It is against the law. Do they want something to do in stopping that traffic? There is an opportunity to do so.

It is also my understanding that until now there has not been a gadget purchased that can test the decibels and immediately tell if they are breaking the law or not. This amendment was passed, easily, three and a half years ago, maybe four. These are the things that need to be addressed.

I think that the Royal Cayman Islands Police need to be trained within specialised areas. They need to be trained in public relations. Because the law gives certain people in our society the right to break a citizen's head in certain circumstances, or to break a leg, if that is necessary to subdue someone, they do not have to walk around with an attitude all the time; "Listen boy (or woman), I can break your head and break your leg." They can just carry that around in their minds, and display the most pleasant attitude to the world. I think it is generally done, but I think an awareness, not just about the laws, but an awareness to help, to protect and to serve needs to be introduced. We need specialists.

We need police officers who are trained in law to the degree that is necessary. We need them trained in investigative skills so that when cases are taken to court and so on, they can stand up without question. We do not need any dishonesty whatsoever.

We do not need a situation in the Cayman Islands where articles that are taken from people who are arrested and put in safe places are stolen within the ranks.

If they are stolen within the safe-keeping of the police, if necessary, every single policeman on duty during that occasion should be dismissed. That is my feeling. It would send a message to everyone else that it should not be. We should not have problems like that to deal with.

We have a new Commissioner. I imagine that he will find this an interesting post, for it has to be unlike any that he has had in the past. He is on an island surrounded by water, driving along a coastline, different people and cultural conditions. So, I hope that he will give an ear to people like me. I hope in the not-too-distant future to have an opportunity to speak with him for a while on certain issues. He is new and he will be coming in with some new rules and attitudes.

Because the Police Force is a coercive force, there is always present a certain distrust and certain resentment from the civilian population. There are civilians who will untruthfully complain. There are civilians who respect the law and the police to the highest degree and I would say to this new Commissioner, or to any who come after him: When complaints come in that they have them dealt with by someone who will hear those complaints and record them accurately and truthfully; take them seriously and investigate them in a manner consistent with proper process of law. Somewhere along the line, the police have to be wrong and the public has to be right.

Important to this exercise is that the public has the 'pleasure' (there is a certain amount of 'pleasure' when those who can beat us up get stuck themselves) to hear that policeman "X" has been found guilty of misconduct and has been punished for it. It balances the equation.

The Police Force obviously needs equipment, including motor cars. That became absolutely abundantly clear during the Finance Committee meeting when we were dealing with the Appropriation Law. They asked for 18 cars. A very large number anyone would say. But when they explained that the cars that they are driving have mileage over 100,000 miles (just about all of them) then it makes a lot of sense. When we understand that there is no programme of writing off like they have in the United Kingdom after so many months or so many miles, when they explain that there is an emergency call and they get in the car and the car does not start, then a lot of things become clear. I do not say give the Police the whole budget as was suggested by the Minister for Tourism on that occasion. I say do not give them any money: give the people of this country the proper use of their money to purchase the necessary amount of their cars that their police can drive. That is what I say. Do not believe for one minute that the police can perform where they do not have the tools to perform with.

I certainly am one who believes that there is a limited amount of money in this country and that it has to be used in the right priorities. The right priorities are such things as giving police motor cars and such equipment as they need. That is a greater need than a stadium in Spotts—a much greater need. There is a greater need to provide funds so that police officers can be sent overseas and trained in specialist areas, so that more training can be done locally, which includes civilian training and public relationships. That is where we need to put money.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.39 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:05 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, continuing the debate.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: When we took the break I was speaking on the subject of the police. In this regard I would like to say that I think it is most important to the welfare of these Islands that we get back to where we were 20 years ago, in terms of having police presence in each district of the Cayman Islands 24-hours per day, including Cayman Brac.

When I say police presence, I mean that the police so conduct their deployment or the allotment of their time and manpower so that one can find officers at the police stations where one would expect to find them; that there would be persons at all times at the stations and there can be one or two who might have to go to answer a call.

It is not sufficient that one calls the police station, as is the case in Cayman Brac, and gets an answering machine. I do not believe it is sufficient in other districts in Grand Cayman where one hopes to get police responding from another district. Persons need to be on duty in these various stations.

The police need to work within a framework of organisational structure so that each one who enters, and, indeed, those who are there, have the opportunity for advancement by merit and by acquiring certain qualifications. I have heard of some instances of dissatisfaction where persons feel that they have not had the opportunity of moving upward where they deserved it.

What also comes into play with regard to the Police Force is that we cannot dispose of men and women of good, able mind and body simply because they reach the age of 50 or 60. We cannot have the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force progressively becoming more and more made up of non-nationals, we have to make every practical effort to keep the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force an indigenous force.

As I mentioned earlier, I believe that, generally speaking, the Police Force in the Cayman Islands performs well. But, I also believe that there are problems that need to be solved. There are a few officers who do not do the very best for its image, and those persons need to be identified and they need to be either re-trained, admonished or removed because it is unfair for the majority to suffer because of the faults of the few.

Lastly, I wish the new Commissioner and the Police Force the very best in carrying out their many and varied duties, even though they must do so in an environment where the Government seems very unsympathetic to some of their most basic needs.

I would like to refer to the Health Services as covered in the Throne Speech and to offer some views on this.

I believe that one of the most pathetic and unfortunate situations in this country is that we can boast of five-star hotels, five-storey modern buildings in the middle of George Town, $2 million condominiums on Seven Mile Beach and yet we have at this time an aged and decrepit little building that is serving as the hospital for every single inhabitant of this country—for that matter, the hundreds of thousands of people who visit this country.

The management of the Health Services in the Cayman Islands—political management, that is—leaves miles to be desired. The first hard-nosed, modern approach to revolutionise it and to bring about some changes happened during the time of the last Minister, Mr. Ezzard Miller. What was the revolution? He believed that fees should be collected for service and that there should be more pure management in managing this service. Thus, there was a statutory authority formed, which has since been destroyed by this Government.

He believed that the hospital was inadequate and that a new building facility was necessary. This Government obviously thinks that it is not. And in statements in this House over the past two years we hear about its adequacy and all the rest of it.

He obviously believed that there was a need for something called health insurance and he made efforts in that direction. That has been destroyed with nothing in place of it. He obviously believed that there was a way to systemise the performance of health care professionals and technicians, and certain recommendations and suggestions were made in that direction.

I cannot say that every view held by him, and every idea suggested for implementation was absolutely perfect. But, what I can say is that there were some—and it was for the first time—and he had the gumption to push that effort. I would have thought that any responsible government would have taken those basic conditions that were in place and modified them to suit its own policies. Rather than that, they wiped them out with nothing to replace them.

The hospital that was stopped has set this country back, who would guess how many decades? It drew the terminology 'the hospital in the swamp'. I, myself, used that handy title during the time of its coming to life. When the decision was taken in this House that it would come about, I respected the wishes of the majority and, indeed, I respected the legality of it.

One serious point which needs to be made is that that hospital was not Ezzard Miller's hospital, that was a hospital for the people of the Cayman Islands, and by stopping it they have been denied such a facility.

What were the costs? They were alarming—$6 million paying off contracts and other associated costs. Government's withdrawing its guarantee damaged this country's credibility. Now we hear talk about another hospital, supposedly in the same spot, and I want to speak to that just briefly.

At this time, we do not have accurate figures as to what it is going to cost. We have a guesstimate of approximately $22 million. Twenty-two million dollars is more than $16 million, which was what the so-called hospital in the swamp would be costing. There had been no feasibility study done as was done by the past Government to show how many rooms would be needed and so forth, yet I understand that it is something like 130 rooms, whereas that other hospital was something like 98. The amazing thing is that, at the time, there were medical professionals and political professionals, and so on, saying there were too many rooms. Nothing like that has been done in this case, that I am aware of.

The tendering process in the last instance was the first that I have ever known where the Minister said, "Look, this is the amount of money that I have to spend, as directed by the Executive Council, and by the information given by the consultants and the Public Works Department...." The tenders had to come in within that figure if they wanted to get that tender. Most interesting to that process was that each person had to agree that the amount that he tendered must be publicly known. That immediately set a precedent which I recall asking the Financial Secretary at Question Time thereafter, whether it would become more a practice, and he said, at that time, that it would become something positive and it would be ongoing. I have not heard too much of it since those times, but that is, indeed, on record.

I stand very appreciative of the fact that the people who work within the present facility with all of the problems (and, indeed, there are many I can personally speak on that I am aware of), they do so well. And with nationalities from all over the world. So, it goes to show that the general feeling of purpose must be there in the hearts of the staff, the problem is that they have no decently designed place to work. The physical plant is inadequate overall.

If a hospital is to be built on the same site, it is going to cause major disruptions. The MRCU has to be knocked down, costing who knows what. I understand that it will be re-built somewhere in the North Sound costing a few million dollars. That is cost that has to be added to any concept of true costing of the hospital.

There is a four-way traffic junction by the hospital. I wonder how many people feel thrilled at the thought of heavy equipment, trucks and so on, in that four-way junction in the mornings and during the day. That was one of the things that the former Minister pointed out, to which I disagreed because I did not see that argument at the time; surely, after thinking about it I now see it.

There is a problem with major construction on the same grounds where you have sick people in a hospital bed, where ambulances are going to be moving in and out. Again, that is what the consultants said the last time. Perhaps that went over my head at the time, but I do not have a problem with admitting my wrongs, or my difference of opinion. I see that now at this stage.

About a week or two ago I saw an aerial photograph of the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital and it is clear to see what that building would be like. That is standing there, up to the belting with sections completed, now housing refugees, and we cannot house our own needy people in that by completing it. They are not completing Ezzard Miller's hospital, that is a hospital for the Cayman Islands.

The Throne Speech mentioned careers in health; I would like to see that in this country. But I would also say to the Government that for those who are there already in the health field in their particular profession, be it nursing or technicians, we had better hold on to them as long as we possibly can instead of putting them out to pasture as is apparently the policy under this Government.

Training doctors is a long process. For that matter, training nurses is a long process, and do we have that large of a pool of persons to draw from? I think not. If they want something to soothe their conscience they are in a position to refer to a scenario of building a hospital in a swamp and building a health clinic in the street, and to compare whether Caymanians (being good swimmers) would be more likely to drown or more likely to be killed by a car. That is, at least, a comparison.

Health Insurance in this country is an absolute necessity. Private doctors do not have any less of a problem, in some of the instances I have heard about, collecting money for services than does the hospital—simply because people cannot afford to pay. They are less able to pay when they are sick. This country needs a health insurance plan. We will never have one that pleases everyone, but we need it fast and we need it desperately. That is a priority. If people are injured in sports—broken arms, broken ankles, broken heads—they have to seek medical attention. That is a priority.

This is an area that is woefully lacking in this country which needs to be addressed with the greatest haste. The situation is worsening. If we talk about careers in health we have to think about doctors. How many do we have? Perhaps three Caymanian doctors, there may be more, or a few persons in training.

I was very interested to learn this morning (in an answer the Minister for Health gave to a question I posed to him), that there are no directives or regulations where limitations have been placed on doctors. I had been told this, so I inquired, as this is the place to do so.

I think that before any move like that is made in this country there needs to be a very serious examination. Good doctors with the right public relations, the ability to treat the ailments that a person goes to have treated, are those who are going to get the patients going to them; those who do not will not have a good practice. But to consider that there is a suggestion to put limitations on persons in practice (and we only have two or three of our own) really stretches the imagination.

I think that rather than talk about limitations being placed on doctors . . . and there are some in any event because they have to go the route of the Practitioners Board and the Caymanian Protection Board or the Immigration Board, so checks and balances are already in place. But to deliberately set up a limitation and say that there are only going to be six general practitioners and only two surgeons and so on is not good for this country. I do not believe it is good for this country, and I hope that the Government takes the views of all the practitioners on board, and consults the views of some experts (other than themselves) to arrive at a proper conclusion on this matter.

Only last night I heard from a practitioner that I had the wrong idea about it and I was talking cartels. I did not talk about cartels myself, but my colleague, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, used that terminology whether he wondered if that was the suggestion. Indeed, would we want to see that happen? Certainly not I, myself. That needs very careful consideration.

Of course, the health services in this country have been further pressured by the presence of Cuban refugees. They came in vast numbers, unchecked, to these shores. At no point were they prevented as they were in the United States, where, by Presidential Order, they were not allowed to enter—although I believe that the British Government could have lent a similar hand in this instance. This has brought exceeding cost to this country—not to the money of the Ministers of Government, to the revenue of this country that belongs to the people of this country.

We heard about various attitudes of Caymanian people towards the Cubans who are on these shores. We have heard about outpouring of love and kindness. We definitely have heard of millions of dollars spent by the Government for this particular situation of paying for every need of the Cuban nationals—when we are not doing similarly for our own people. I do not know about the various Ministers of Government or, indeed, the Backbench supporters of Government, but I have heard many vehement statements about the unfairness and the unacceptability of this situation.

When my colleague, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, and I were in the United Kingdom, this was one of the matters that we discussed with the officials there. It was clear to us that the British Government has a very straight forward policy on it, and that was generally that the Cuban nationals could not continue indefinitely in the Cayman Islands. It was stated by the Minister of State and also by the Civil Service Officials.

We also gathered that the speed or the slowness with which the Cuban nationals left these shores was basically dependent on the view of the Governor and his Executive Council as to their movement, including the Cuban nationals who came here last and landed in Cayman Brac. It was stated to us that they simply could have been repatriated to their homeland, for that was the agreement that was in place between the Cuban Government and the British Government and, by extension, the Cayman Islands.

I think there has been great laxity in this country in dealing with the situation. I cannot for one minute believe that it is fair and reasonable that one nationality comes here illegally immigrated into the country, and has free access to walk the streets simply by wearing a name tag; whereas, another nationality, may I say Jamaican, for example, legally immigrated into the country, stays a few days over time, and is arrested and taken before the courts and made prohibited Immigrants. There is something wrong. The same law must be applied similarly across the board to all nationalities, including Caymanians.

We have two places where Cuban nationals are being kept: one is Tent City and, certainly, if not in the immediate past, I gathered that that had become a lonely hearts club [Members' laughter] where Caymanian men sought friendship with females, and Caymanian females sought friendship with males there. I thought what a sad, sad situation.

What have we come to? Why is it being allowed? Why are Caymanian people being allowed this traffic in and out of a refugee camp where persons who have illegally entered into the country are being held in detention? Incredible situations of civil servants—top civil servants—and some even applying to be married to some of them. These things alarm me, perhaps they do not alarm anyone else.

I hear that in the processes of outpouring of love, that in the district that I represent there are three children of love on the way with young ladies who have been allowed freedom of total interaction with men there walking around the place. Does the Government not take responsibility for this? Do they not see that it is the duty of the Government to stop this situation?

These things cannot be stopped if some Ministers of Government entertain refugees at their homes. How are those Ministers expected to objectively make a decision relating to their presence here? The situation is real.

I share sympathetic feelings, as do other members of the community, with people anywhere who are repressed, suppressed or imprisoned, or made to live under hardship. But my first and foremost obligation has to be to the people who elected me. I have first and foremost to see that Caymanians are provided for. As soon as we can provide for every need of our needy, then I can go 100% overboard to provide that for non-Caymanians. But, until that time, I have to see it in its proper perspective.

Madam Speaker, I think the Government needs to see to the situation of the repatriation of the Cuban nationals. Those who want to go on and leave these shores should do so. I do not believe that there should be any instance whatsoever where officially, persons are helped to go wherever. It is my understanding that if we provide these persons with their boats, food and rations, that they can legally leave and move on to whatever destinations they choose. I think we should do that.

If there are five who want to leave, then we should get a charter to take five; if there are 20, 100, however many, we cannot begin to count the cost of chartering an airplane when we see the way money is being spent left, right and centre on things which do not benefit all of the people of this country.

This brings me to the point of the suggestion for a regiment in the Cayman Islands. The implication there, of course, is that a regiment would have use in these types of conditions which have been straining the police and so on, to guard the people at Tent City. When we talk about a regiment, we are talking about an Army. I fail to conceive how we could start a regiment here if we were talking about filling it with Caymanians—since we do not have enough Caymanians to fill our Police Force and we do not have enough Caymanian to go in the Prison Services.

The question of the Cadet Corp makes a lot of sense. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town and I talked about this years ago, pointing to the days when we were at Mico College and we saw the students at Wolmers High School, parading and drilling. I personally believe that is a good thing to have in the high school—a Cadet Corp—it is a discipline and a training.

But I would say that in the statement made by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture, that the seriously bad eggs in this society should be put into the regiment, I would not want to put rifles into the hands of some of the young punks that are giving trouble here in this society, or even worse, to train them in military knowledge. That could create a real problem—we may all have to take guns to defend ourselves.

I cannot perceive the concept of a regiment here as being practical or sound, unless what is being thought about is that we go to some other country and choose their nationals to make up our regiment. I would be 110% against that. But I think the idea of a cadet corps within the high schools is a good one. If the Minister wants to set up some type of a boot camp idea, where they train and drill, it cannot be in the true sense of an army or regiment.

Tourism is the life's blood, to a large extent, of this country of ours. It is extremely fickle. It is unpredictable, particularly for ourselves as we have no control over it. At best, we can try to attract people by providing for them the entertainment they seek, the hospitality they want, the prices that they hope for, and encouragement to come again. But we have no control over what happens in the countries that these people come from.

There have been considerable increases in the numbers of tourists coming to these islands and we know that the Minister for Tourism has taken credit for this. So, it is only natural that he must also take credit for the decrease in tourism that we read about recently.

I do not think the decrease is because of the genius of any one individual. I think where we have to look in regards to increase or decrease is in what we are offering. We have to look at how well we are advertising our product. We have to look at the quality of our product and see that it is as good as, or above that in the region. We have to look at the prices that we are charging. I think it is the duty of the Minister to prevail on the hospitality properties in this country to arrive at costs and fees where they make a fair profit but do not kill tourism for all of us. I believe that is of grave necessity.

We, in the Cayman Islands, have but so much to offer. We do not have the kind of topography—the beautiful forests the mountains to climb et cetera. Nor do we have the horse-riding that goes on in some other places, the canoeing on rivers, the rafting: we simply do not have those things. We have to be sensible in arriving at cost and not so cocky about what we have to offer, for it is limited. There needs to be some serious tourism policy in place to address this matter. We say that we have night clubs. We only believe that we have night clubs. Night life in other islands is far and beyond what we offer, so we need to be realistic.

The Cayman Islands is a free enterprise society where we welcome people making a profit. But if we allow a situation of greed to prevail we are going to destroy it.

We need to be mindful of our environmental factors. It should be so easy for the Minister of Tourism, or the Government, or all of us, to understand that since the highest percentage of people coming to the islands come to dive our waters to see what is under the sea, if we destroy what is under the sea they are not going to come. Simple—beginning and end. So, preserve our reefs, do what is needed to preserve our marine environment. This includes cruise ship moorings. They have been talked about for the last 10 or 12 years.

[Addressing the voice across the floor] The Minister is asking why do I not do something. I have never been in the position to do something about it, for if I were, it would have been done. But he is in the position and I call on him to do it. It is not as if there is not enough representation for it, for the Chamber of Commerce, among others, is making that message clear.

Career development for Caymanians in the hospitality industry is necessary. But I think that we have to look very carefully to help those who are making a career out of it now to ensure that their condition of service is consistent with our Labour Law: that they are not being unfairly treated, that gratuities are not being stolen from them, that they are being treated with the dignity that should exist between an employer and an employee, that they are not constantly threatened in the work place. These are all real matters to be addressed by tourism.

Another matter that recently came to my attention is in regard to taxi operations at the Port Authority. I was more than happy to hear and support the Bill to create a law that governed the way taxis were operated.

I heard recently from some taxi operators about how some things happened there, and I have taken time in the mornings to go there and see the line-up. There are hundreds of people on the move on the waterfront. From what I have heard, it strikes me that things could be helped immediately if there were two or three more people hired by the Authority to guide the flow of human traffic as they come off the boat to the taxis. I gather that the people offering taxi service who are best off are the large operators in that they have the large groups—they have signs, everyone routes people to them. But it becomes a problem to the smaller taxi drivers to get a fare.

If what I was hearing was correct, and I did hear it from two credible persons, the way they are routed (where they are allowed to physically pick up the passengers), is creating a logistics problem. From what they have told me, it would seem sensible to have at least three areas designated, rather than people moving from long distances and taxi cabs having to move one-by-one to a particular spot where other cabs that take 8,10,12 persons sit and wait for their cabs to be filled, while the other driver with a capacity of three or four is not having an opportunity to get any. I gather that there are conditions there which need to be dealt with. I certainly suggest as much.

In all of this there needs to be a plan. And I think one besetting problem of the Government of the day is that it does not have a plan other than to insist that it has its way in whatever it may come up with. Freedom of speech, and so on, is not necessarily the best thing to have. Suggestions, while in some instances taken, do not seem to be regarded in most cases.

The Coopers & Lybrand Report gives the greatest, most comprehensive, report that was ever done on tourism, including actual recommendations for implementation detail. I think that the country needs to be guided by that as quickly as possible.

I wish to speak on matters related to the Legislative Assembly at this time.

The Speaker: Would you take the luncheon suspension at this time?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Yes.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.36 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman continuing the debate.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Just before we suspended I had indicated that I would like to comment on matters pertinent to the Legislative Assembly.

I am very much concerned to see certain of the select committees that have been set up, such as the Committee dealing with the Register of Interests and the Code of Ethics, and the Committee dealing with the Bill of Rights, conclude its business. These are matters which are extremely important and which deserve to be concluded as quickly as possible. A Code of Ethics and a Register of Interests impact directly on the conduct and performance of legislators. It sets up parameters in which we work and gives us certain guidelines as to what might be an acceptable range of activities, as far as it relates to ourselves and that of our official business.

I have always believed that the Legislative Assembly is one department of Government which deserves the highest regard from all persons concerned therewith, in particular Elected Members of Government. It is the place where the nation's business is debated and discussed, and within it are certain prescribed guidelines, long-standing conventions, traditions, practice and procedure.

I have been somewhat concerned now for some time about some of the attitudes and behaviours which I see here, abusing the rules in some instances. In the latter case, I think there is more than sufficient use of the suspension of Standing Orders. I think that suspension of Standing Orders should be the exception and not the rule. I have serious concern when I see certain changes to laws come about, virtually instantaneously, by the suspension of the Standing Orders and even where these matters interrupt business that has been on the floor. I cite the example of the three minute amendment to the Marriage Law, and the amendment to the Customs Law that was passed late in the night where it changed the condition of what could be imported into the islands and put it squarely into the hands of the Executive Council. This touches on such things as parts for heavy equipment, motor vehicles, apparatus used in construction and so on.

It has been my impression, up to now, that the reason the rules are adhered to is that any group of legislators at any time would not want to create precedence which would move it away from the time proven processes which are in place; it may be slow and it may be considered somewhat methodical, but it has been time proven and I think that we need to adhere to those religiously.

I have grown used to being personally attacked in this House over (at least) the past three years, but I deplore the fact that it seems that so many legislators are unable to debate an issue, rather than debate the person who brings the issue. I am sure that will not be any different where I am concerned in being attacked once I have finished my debate today—although, in the past three days, no one has been rushing to their feet to debate the Throne Speech.

I am also somewhat put off, but I understand it very well, by some of the interpersonal relationships among legislators. While I can understand that there can be certain disagreement among legislators, and so on—and sometimes it can be pretty strong—I get the distinct impression that in many instances it is pure hate and venom that is poured out. It is destructive. I think that there is considerable protocol among legislators which is not observed. Certainly, being an Opposition Member does not mean being a leper, for the system works on the process of Government and Opposition. Between the two there normally emerges understanding and a decision.

On the other hand, I hear remarks every now and then that would suggest that I should associate with different individuals, who are most objectionable to me in a way that is beyond differences in political opinions; or that I should find it imperative that I wine and dine with such persons. Surely, that does not fall within the line of my duty in representing the people. I normally wine and dine with my friends in an easy atmosphere where I am not constantly having to keep my ears tuned in some way to rebut some insulting or snide remark.

I think that it is well that the Election Law gets some review. I trust that this review is not going to take place solely among the members of Executive Council, for this affects all Members of the Legislative Assembly and, indeed any that will come.

I do not think, in principle, that there is anything wrong with having a permanent register of voters. But, surely, one must be aware that our Election Law provides conditions where certain people may be taken off the register because they do not fulfil certain requirements, such as a certain length of residence on the Island prior to an election or a loss of Caymanian status, as the case may be. There are considerable variations in our Elections Law in that particular section itself. So, we need to be very careful in setting up what is termed a permanent register of voters.

There are other instances I have observed during past elections as to what happens at the polling stations which I think deserves some consideration that could make it better. Indeed, I would be more than happy to share my views and observations on this, so I trust this will not be an in-house exercise for Executive Council.

I believe the Legislative Assembly needs to have all the staff and office equipment necessary to carry out the work, and all the furniture it needs to operate as it should. I also believe that the time has not just come, but is past, when we should move into the full concept of the Legislature (which was proposed by the Last Governor) being a department full and complete onto itself under the Directorship or Head-ship of the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly. That has not taken place up until now, and I can but hope for the day in the not-too-distant future when another Government will insist that this take place.

Madam Speaker, much in this country, if not everything, hinges on education. The progress we have made as a people has been two-fold in that, unlike the claim nowadays, that Caymanians are lazy, Caymanians have been hard-working people. In many instances the men have gone to sea and spent many years out there, sending home money for their families, working in other jurisdictions. So that type of work ethic has done us well.

On the other hand, the other side of the coin in our society has been where some percentage of our population has acquired higher education in different professions. We do, however, have a serious lack in the number of persons it takes to do the various jobs in the country by not having sufficient numbers of educated persons in various areas. It is highly unlikely that at any time in the near future we will have all the professionals that we need, or all the persons trained in the vocational skills, but it is my belief that the odds can be greatly improved by the education system. I emphasise the word system because education is not one individual.

By education being played as if it were one individual, as I think it has been since the present Minister has taken on the task, there are deficiencies. The Education Plan which was drawn up over two years ago should be followed. If it needs updating in the light of present conditions it should be done. But it was a plan that was drawn up by some of the best experts in this region; indeed there were some of international standing. It also included input from our own teachers. So, there is no excuse not to follow that plan.

There is no national curriculum and it has been talked about now for years. With all the strategies that were being planned, one would have thought that a national curriculum would have been alive and well on its way to the success which I believe a proper national curriculum could bring.

We need to very carefully evaluate the need for schools in this country and evaluate that against the need, for example, of stadiums. Our children are our greatest assets: in fact the greatest asset of the Cayman Islands is its people. That is all that we have sold for a very long time—from the earliest times of our seamen to our people now. Our people are considered some of the friendliest in the world and smart enough to have, if anything, a preference for the colour green (in terms of dollars) rather than a preference for any pigmentation of the skin. We have been that smart. A small population, but, indeed, much wiser than the rest of the world in a large totality.

I do not know how successful this change to the student loan is going to be, because the banks are certainly going to want to be paid. And this business of guaranteeing students' loans as has been proposed by Government, could lead to some serious liabilities and expenses I believe.

I think the Government would have been better off (instead of some of the outlandish expenditures that it has voted money for) taking $1 million and putting it into a special fund, to remain into perpetuity, to serve as loans for our students (the citizens who will take over for us) to pursue various courses of education—both externally and internally. Once it is in place, and by adding annually to it, and with the interest accrued, it can grow into a large sum that can take care of our needs for many years to come.

The Minister for Education is also the Minister for Aviation and that is somewhat of an odd-ball combination—something not unfamiliar in the present assignment of subjects under the present Government. It has certainly made considerable claim to success with Cayman Airways, and I dare say there have been some. However, there are some areas—many areas in fact that need serious consideration.

If I am hearing correctly, there is considerable room for increasing the salaries for some of the people in some of the lower paying echelons of the organisation—people at the counter, flight attendants and the like. In the latter case, I have no doubt that it is possible to find Caymanians to fill the posts of flight attendants. I would certainly hope that some effort will be made to do this, as it seems to be seriously skewered towards other persons in the country other than Caymanians.

There have been new leases of planes, and the gravest mistake that was ever made has to be that we sold the 727 planes which would have been the ideal type of aircraft to be operating at this time and one which would serve the needs of both cargo and passengers and have the ability for long range flying.

Since 737s have come into vogue, I understand that this company, which indirectly is the Government, has paid some vast sums of money. I understand that there is certain electronic equipment that has been put on some of these planes that cost tens of thousands of dollars that has left these shores with these planes. I understand that the latest acquisition is not that 'honey' of a piece of equipment that it is supposed to be. I understand that almost half million dollars has been spent, or is to be spent, in changing overhead bins; it will have to have a C-check at some point; there is a fuel tank that needs to be removed, and if it is removed it will have to be replaced when it goes back. It also has to have electronic equipment to the collision avoidance system which, I understand, once it goes in it does not come back out, we have to let it go with it. Of course, there should be some repainting and I understand that the numbers run real high, indeed.

I also understand that some of the parts that are presently in the possession of Cayman Airways for 737s are not the parts that fit this particular plane now acquired. I also understand that there is over $4 million worth of stock held by the company for the 400s that were here. If this is so, someone should at least try to dispose of them to companies which operate this type of aircraft.

The need for roads never ceases to be in the forefront for every citizen in this country, if no more than every time someone gets in his car and gets on the road. There are serious problems with traffic congestion in this country. There was a plan, the Master Ground Transportation Plan, with which there was nothing wrong in its technical comprehensiveness. What was wrong was that the government which brought about this study did not take the time to cost it by prioritised steps and phases.

Regrettably, what happened was that at that time there was a major issue: Parliament was being asked to approve what would run into about $200 million in its entirety. There was no costing on the corridors, and the special changes to the roads that had to be done so that it could be packaged in parts and segments. Due to that, and particularly in the question of the road corridors where considerable land would have to be acquired, the House did not approve that plan which was brought before it. In effect, it reversed the road corridors in one instance.

I say that to give a brief sketch of the background, as I call it, and also to say that I think that plan is as real now as it was then. Before we go off on a tangent having more studies done, I think that those concerned should go back to the drawing board with what we presently have and select from that the parts that we need to deal with and need to know the cost of.

For example, there is a bypass road along the West Bay Road leading into the Airport. There was such a road in the Master Ground Transportation Plan. Still, no one seems to know what it is going to cost to purchase the land and put it down. It is certainly going to be more than $400,000. The longer the Government dilly-dallies with it, the more the need is growing, and if it is going to cost $5 million now, it will likely cost $6.5 million next year. If the costing is done, and the facts are known, the thing to do is to face the situation now. If we can face the voluminous cost of taking care of nationals who are not our own on a daily basis, surely we can face the cost of a road which most people agree is necessary.

I understand that the Public Works Department is a department that we depend upon for road design and engineering, except, of course, in instances where we might hire other qualified persons to do so.

It is my understanding that the road design and engineering now falls (at least some of the time) into the hands of our political leaders who design and order certain roads in certain ways. Surely, that must have been the case where the road at the airport is concerned. It could only have been designed by someone with a lack of knowledge in design and engineering, such as our political leaders, or someone who really wanted to make a monumental mess with the design that has been done there.

It has been changed. As observed by the Third Elected Member for George Town, that change has helped the flow of traffic to some extent; but someone should have at least tried to grind out some of the paint. For instance, last night it was raining and the car light was hitting the wet road showing so many lines that I did not know which one to follow. I do not see where that should be such an expensive exercise, and I daresay there are ways and means of doing it with better highlighting than what is presently in place.

I was very happy to see that consideration is being given to minimum wage. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town and I brought a Private Member's Motion to the House last year asking that consideration be given to minimum wage by category, similar to what is done in Government. At that time it was shouted down and voted down as being unnecessary, and not in the best interests and it was already being done. It has been a long time since then, and it is not being done—was not done then and is not done now—but perhaps someone is seeing the light.

Surely, unless economics have changed most drastically the principle still holds that anything, be it services or goods, can be costed or valued in terms of money. Certainly, wages that are being paid in some jobs cannot be fair hourly wages. If we consider that everyone in this country buys from the same supermarkets, has the same needs for goods and services, and faces the same prices for these goods and services, then one can see the need for minimum wage as a means of assisting those who work for wages.

It is not unusual that countries, particularly those where free enterprise exists, go for so-called cheap labour where one can import persons who would work for less wages than the going prices in the country. That is the case, in some instances in the Cayman Islands.

While we have a need for people other than our own people to fill jobs, there are cases where persons resort to cheap labour. That only helps the person who is employing that person, it does not help the would-be employee who could work as hard but who would demand a higher wage. While it helps the employer, there are few instances where that type of savings is reflected in the price of the goods or services in this country.

There is an ever-constant complaint among our own people that they are not getting the jobs that they could and would do because cheap labour is being employed. I think steps should be taken to monitor this situation and to put a stop to it. It is a growing problem, because if more jobs are created, more persons are going to be needed to fill them creating more need to import persons and a greater demand on our own people, who will resort to but one action (and it is not a very practicable one) they will refuse to work for the lower wage. Because of that, among other things, they are labelled as lazy.

Madam Speaker, we have been quite a success story in the Cayman Islands because of the good sense of our people over the generations whom, as I noted earlier, had a preference for business and the colour green. We realised that we could better our lives through commercial activity—the buying and selling process—and if there was business then the chances were that there would be employment, and through employment everyone's needs would be met to one degree or another.

The financial sector of this country has been quite a success story. I personally hope that it will be that way forever. But, I think it is very necessary to take stock of things which could damage it. The lack of credibility in Government administration and its many facets can do so. Pricing ourselves out of the market can do so and allowing businesses (be they whatever) to continue which might be such that could injure our image is also negative and disastrous to us. Allowing people, even though they may have vast sums of money, to come to our shores and invest and make all of the profits that they can, while these individuals themselves are exceedingly unsavoury, can damage our image and our financial industry. There is no one person, no two, three, a dozen or one hundred that should be allowed to do this damage to the country on a whole; there is no bank, no trust company, no accounting firm, no hotel, nothing whatsoever, that should be allowed where the credibility of this country is concerned.

I think much has been done in the line of creating legislation which makes it much more difficult for bad money to circulate or be manipulated, and I believe that we need to be ever vigilant to this side of things. I believe it is necessary to sell the fact that our banking system offers confidentiality, as the term 'secrecy' is suggestive of something that is to some extent untoward.

I also believe that if our financial industry is to continue, and prosper, we have to be as open as we possibly can, keeping the confidentiality necessary to do business in place. I am for seeing as much of the international money market as possible cornered in the Cayman Islands, for where one's money is, there will their hearts be also. No country prospers without money, so the more we can attract, the greater are our chances of prosperity. But, I would say to the Government of the day, and any Government to come, that we need not pussy-foot around with any situation which may threaten it, be it institution or be it an individual.

In looking at areas where Government expends money, anyone who examines money spent in this country since 1993 will see that large amounts have gone into the area of sports. Sports is necessary in this country like it is in any other, but it can surely not be the answer for every need. There has to be a re-evaluation and prioritisation of where this fits in and to what extent. Sports helps and assists a certain percentage of the population, it does not have direct impact on all.

Unfortunately, while mention was made of sports in the Throne Speech, I saw no mention of Cayman Brac in it. Cayman Brac has as much need for sports because it has far less than some districts of Grand Cayman.

My main perception is that to get sports on a practical footing one needs to hire sufficient persons skilled in various games and sporting activities to be reasonably well distributed around the islands and in the various districts. Facilities that are immediately necessary are good playfields with some metal bleachers because they will withstand the elements and, in a planned manner, some lights that can light these fields in the night time; although we are talking of youth and so on, it is more likely the late daylight hours could be more conducive to games and the weekends, because one would hope that they would otherwise be at school in the day or at home at night.

I think the Middle School complex, which I understand is reaching completion, is indeed what we need for some foreseeable time for grandstand operations and for necessary fields for Track and Field and other such activities. It is also close to two of our major schools.

There is an entity in these islands, the Turtle Farm, which plays a very significant role in tourism. It is the only such farm in the world. I guess that is particularly so since the one operated by the French has recently closed. As such, it is a national attraction and the fact that the farm is making money is because of its being a tourist attraction—not the sale of turtle meat.

Turtle meat has long been looked upon in these islands as our national dish. History and seafaring has been made around our men going to sea and the turtle trade. I was told that at the Lord Mayor of London's Banquet there was always turtle soup served from the Cayman Islands.

I take note of the fact that the manager of the Turtle Farm, Dr. Jim Wood, in more than one article appearing in the newspapers, has expressed certain concerns that too much attention would be given to the sale of the turtle meat and less to the growing of the stock and the scientific side of things.

I know there has to be a limit on the number of turtles that are at the Turtle Farm that are available to be slaughtered. I observe what seems to be an increase in the sale of the turtle meat. I wonder what is happening in that regard, whether too much of the sale of turtle meat and just how fast is the stock being replaced—how fast is it replenishing itself. There obviously has to be some limit on it.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It is in good hands.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The Minister says it is in good hands. I have heard what he said, and he will allow me to differ on this, I am sure.

Madam Speaker, I think much can be done at the Turtle Farm, and I see that there are plans to make certain improvements there, including an aquarium. I think that as a sightseeing venture it can be improved much over what presently exists

I am aware that on the opposite side of the road from the Turtle Farm are some tanks, and I am not sure if they are presently being used to grow turtle stock or not. However, I hope that some serious thought will be given as to how this money-earning business here in this island can be improved and enhanced. I believe that we need to follow, most strongly, a scientific approach for there are persons connected worldwide with an organisation called CITES who believe that there should be no Turtle Farm at all. That should ring the loudest warning bell for us.

I am pleased to see that certain practical changes are being contemplated in the Northward Prison, including training and other areas of opportunity for those persons who find themselves there—unfortunately, too many of our young people. I certainly support any efforts in this area. I have heard from a reliable source that there are certain Cuban migrants there who have caused considerable disorder, but my feeling is that in a prison there should be order, rigid order. Those persons who are there should live by the rules of that institution. Whatever steps are necessary to ensure that this happens should be taken. Our own people are incarcerated there and they do not stage demonstrations, or throw soap or toilet paper over the fences, or tear up their prison uniforms; so I think some strong steps should be taken to keep the rules of the prison in place for all.

The Cayman Islands is our home country. It becomes our obligation to guard it well. The Government of the day has that obligation. The United Kingdom, as the administering authority, has that duty to see that it is done under International Law. During the visit that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and I made to the United Kingdom, we asked the officials to attempt to keep in better touch with these islands through visits (by whomever would be appropriate to visit), as what might be their policies and perceived policies here might differ. The Government of the day undoubtedly has the belief that they have all matters in hand and that the road they are pursuing is correct. I have various disagreements with that in totality, and, certainly, there are those with which I agree.

It is my intention, as one of two Opposition Members in this Legislature, to continue—and I reaffirm that I will continue—to raise matters in this House and elsewhere on issues that I do not feel are in the best interest of this country. Everyone can be assured of that. The fact that I get attacked or have all manner of evil said about me has not caused me to lose any weight.

I believe in certain things and the way that certain things should be. I think, also, that the survey conducted by the Chamber of Commerce, which meets with much disapproval from the Government, should be taken as giving a very sharp insight into the feelings of at least some percentage of this population: that the Government should modify its behaviour in the way that it thinks best. Of course, for every action there is a similar and opposite reaction and the Government is free to do what it chooses to do. Surely, I am free to offer my opinion where I feel it is appropriate. That is what I have done during my debate on the Throne Speech.

Now, I shall sit and hear the reluctant persons in this House, who were unwilling to speak on the Throne Speech, now speak about me.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

[Pause]

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to offer my contribution to the Throne Speech presented by the Governor last Friday. I will start by saying that I think it was a very positive and realistic reflection on the performance of this Government since it took office in November 1992.

Despite the claim from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman with regard to Members' reluctance to get up and speak, there is no reluctance, Madam Speaker. As far as I am concerned, the Throne Speech reflects the financial performance and otherwise of the National Team Government, of which its Backbench is a part. Once that Throne Speech was presented, it reflected the position that has been attained in this country as a result of a team effort. It is the responsibility of the Opposition (the few that we do have) to get up and attempt—as the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman has attempted for the past four hours—to mitigate the performance of the Government. The Throne Speech comments on a number of very important matters of accomplishment, and also highlights areas that still need to be addressed.

When we took office in 1992 we did not perceive that last year we were going to be literally overrun by Cuban refugees. That has cost this country a lot of money and effort along with everything else that goes along with that type of situation. But I must congratulate the Churches, the other social organisations, as well as the Cuban Community in Miami with regards to their support of those migrants while they are here in the Cayman Islands. Otherwise, the cost and financial burden to Government would probably have been twice as much as has been realised so far.

The Opposition, who do not have any portfolios, can say any kind of nonsense they want to say because they are not responsible for anything. They can say what should have been done in regard to the Cuban refugees who fled their shores in pursuit of a better life and who ended up here on the Cayman Islands. But when you are a part of a recognised Government, like the British Government, there are certain conventions which exist and which must be adhered to, and there are certain procedures which must be followed in these instances.

Now, let me be swift to add that I personally do not support the very little assistance that we have received from the United Kingdom on this issue. But I do not believe that the elected Executive Council can be held at fault with regard to the approach that they have taken to this issue. I believe that they, like the majority of us in this House, were deeply concerned and made those concerns known to His Excellency the Governor who in turn made a fair attempt to convey those concerns to the British Government. But the response from the British Government has been very little in regard to financial assistance.

I am very glad to see that the Cuban refugees have basically been convinced that they should move on to Guantanamo Bay or some other base from which they can attempt to obtain a visa to the United States. Just this week there was approximately 200 that left for Guantanamo Bay. That really pleases me, because despite all of the efforts and accomplishments that the Government has realised since it took office in 1992, and the financial performance of this Government since that time, if we were burdened with that financial commitment with regard to the Cuban migrants over and above an extended time that would prove to be a very costly exercise indeed.

The people of this country have to be reminded of where we have come from, as far as this Government is concerned, in so short a period of time. The thing that amazes me, Madam Speaker, when I listen to people like the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman speak on issues that only two or three years ago he was so adamant about opposing—all of a sudden there is a 360 degree turn. For what reason? For political expediency?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, true.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: I recall, Madam Speaker, that no one had more to say on opposing that hospital in the Swamp, as he keeps referring to, than himself. Now why is it, all of a sudden, such a good idea and this Government was wrong in stopping it? Is it because he is now aligned with the former member for health, Ezzard Miller, in an attempt to form the next government?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: True.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Now, Madam Speaker, I believe that the people of this country elected 12 out of the 13 members of the National Team who ran as a ticket for those very reasons. That was part of our Manifesto—that we would stop it. And we did!

Now, we did not say that we were going to stop it and deprive the people of this country of proper health services. The new Minister for Health, the Honourable Anthony Eden, has plans in place. I was very pleased to see that they will be breaking ground some time later this month for a new health facility at the present site—which makes sense.

This idea of a split site hospital with duplication of services and costs, only Ezzard Miller could think of something like that. So, it amazes me how quickly these Opposition Members have changed their position.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman reminds me of an advertisement I saw with regard to one of the large brokerage firms on Wall Street, known as E.F. Hutton. The ad says that when E.F. Hutton speaks, the people listen. He believes that all he has to do is get up and speak, and he has the ears of the whole world.

I believe the people of this country are looking for leadership that is consistent, that takes a position and moves forward with that position, not changing with every wind of fancy that comes along, like that Member does.

At the end of the day, the people of this country are going to have health facilities that they can be proud of and that the country can afford to support. This Government, with the conservative leadership that it has, and the conservative members of the Backbench, have always practised the philosophy of living within one's means. That is where the last Government got into trouble. They could spend money—they had no problem spending money—and they spent it as if it were going out of style.

But this Government has taken the position that I have always supported: they take projects, issues and services and arrange them according to priorities and do them when funds are available to do them. That is what we are doing with the new hospital facility. It will be something that we can be proud of, and I congratulate the new Minister for Health for the excellent job he has done in such a short period of time, and in moving ahead with his plans.

In connection with health services, I am also pleased to see that our new district health clinic (which we mentioned in our Manifesto) will be started later this year. Hopefully we will have it before the 1996 General Elections come. There is also one planned for Bodden Town which is well underway, and I believe that that is scheduled for completion some time in September 1995. Also, there are plans in the works for district clinics for East End and North Side.

The new Minister for Health is getting on with the job that he was elected to do, and he is doing a good job with regard to his responsibilities.

I also have some concerns with regard to the Immigration Department, Madam Speaker. I believe that there is still a need for proper recognition and upgrading of leadership in that department. Also there is a need for some attempt to unify that department and, hopefully, to re-emphasise the focus and objectives of that department in providing a first class service to the people of this country. I also believe that the senior officers in that department, who are all Caymanians, have to be recognised and compensated for their efforts over the many years that they have served so faithfully in that department.

What has happened in a lot of cases, is that somebody new at the top is brought in and those officers who side up to that particular leader are the ones who always get the breaks. While the others who are so effective as far as serving the needs of the public get looked over and become frustrated. What I have found in the Civil Service, because I was there for 7 years, is that there are no clear cut career paths. In the Civil Service, the person who makes the loudest noise is normally the one who moves ahead, not necessarily the most competent. That is what is unfortunately happening in this particular department.

So, this does not fall under the responsibilities of an Elected Member, this is the responsibility of the Governor himself with the assistance of his Chief Secretary, and I believe that there are many needs which have to be addressed in this area. Unfortunately, anything that goes wrong in any of these departments, even though the Elected Member is not responsible, he gets blamed. I am saying to those who are in charge to get on with the job that they are responsible for doing and see to it that all persons, all officers in that department are fairly treated and compensated for their efforts.

I am also very pleased to see that the review of the Court procedures is well underway. I think a report has been presented to the Chief Justice for his review and comments. I trust that the recommendations of that review will be seriously looked at with regard to improving the overall administration side of the Courts.

As far as the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs is concerned, I want to congratulate the Honourable James Ryan on his appointment as the new Chief Secretary, and to also wish the former Chief Secretary, Mr. Lemuel Hurlston, all the very best in his retirement. I was also very pleased to see the appointment of my good friend, Mr. Donovan Ebanks, to position of Deputy Chief Secretary. I believe that this is a very positive move, a welcome move, as far as he is concerned, because I believe that with his background and interests he is in a position to make a very positive impact and contribution to the Civil Service.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, would you take a suspension at this time?

Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDING SUSPENDED AT 3.52 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.17 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Madam Speaker, when we took the break, I was dealing with some of the changes in position by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I would just like to add, and I mentioned it before to some extent, that no one took a more rigid opposition to the new hospital in the swamp than that Member. My colleagues reminded me that when the Member was a part of our Backbench from 1988-1992, he went as far as bringing down a dog doctor [Members' laughter] with plans for a new hospital on the present site. Even if it had been a qualified doctor, you could understand, but a dog doctor—not even a dog doctor, he was a bird doctor. So it shows how involved he was in opposing that. Now, all of a sudden, to have that Member get up and tear down this present Government for doing what we promised the people we were going to do is total nonsense.

It was also mentioned in the Throne Speech that plans are in place to amend the Elections Law to allow for a permanent register of voters, and to also streamline the election process. I must say that I enjoy the election campaign, especially West Bay. I believe that during the 1992 elections that atmosphere prevailed throughout the island. It was almost like a carnival atmosphere, as far as the people were concerned.

I look forward to some system of permanent registration as far as the voters are concerned because what concerns me is that political candidates as well as current politicians (and I am not talking about the present House, but politicians) will try to deprive individuals of one of the most sacred rights that an individual has, that is, the right to vote. That is not right. I have always contended that one has the right to vote and one has the right to cast that vote in any manner that he feels is best, even if that means not voting for me. I believe that it is time in this country, with all of the modern advancement that we have experienced here to have in place a proper election system to ensure that every eligible voter in this country has a right to cast his vote.

I look forward to the day when we have election booths where people can go in and pull the lever on the name that they want, and by the end of the day we will basically know who our new representatives are. I have enjoyed the past two elections that I have been a part of because of the people who were a part of my team, and also because of those faithful supporters, there through the thick and thin.

The only thing I would caution the present Government, and those who will have the responsibility of getting on with this, is that whatever has to be done, has to be done quickly because November 1996 is not very far away.

I also want to be one of the first to congratulate the new Commissioner on his appointment—that is Mr. Grey. Also the new head of the Drugs Task Force, Mr. Haines, on his appointment. I wish them every success in their new positions.

I believe Mr. Grey, in particular, has quite a challenge before him because with the money that we are spending to date with law enforcement, the number of officers that we have employed in that area, he has to come up with a system, a scheme of better deployment as far as his personnel are concerned. I see no reason why every district, every outer district police station is not properly manned, and I believe there are still enough police around that we could also have a very active foot patrol in each district. The only time I see most police is when they pass in an air-conditioned car. That poses no deterrent to those who carry on criminal activity in our districts.

I believe it is also very important for some kind of public relations campaign with regard to getting the public to support the police and come forward with regard to information of criminal activity in their respective districts.

One of the problems that we have had in the past is that one goes in confidence and mentions a particular incident or activity to a police officer and before one gets home the criminal confronts them and asks why they went to the police. I believe that because of that the public, at present, is scared to come forward and co-operate with the police in regard to criminal activity. But that is a must if the police are to be effective in carrying out their duties. They must have the support and co-operation of the public.

I am also pleased to see the effective job that former Chief Superintendent Cutts did with regard to the Drugs Task Force, with regard to interdiction. I trust with the new patrol boat in place that the vessel will be properly utilised on a 24-hour basis with regard to surveillance by patrolling our waters. I heard it the other day and I checked it out. I was told that it was not so. But I still believe that my source was reliable about that boat being docked there for weeks because it did not have a captain, or another officer, in order to make sure that it is fully utilised at all times.

The other thing that baffles me is that here we are a people whose history was derived from our outstanding performance as seamen, and we cannot find enough Caymanians. Not that we cannot find them: I think the Force refuses to appoint them—to see to it that that boat is properly manned and carries out the responsibilities for which it was purchased. Madam Speaker, Caymanians were known worldwide as some of the most outstanding seamen.

I am also pleased to see the progress that has been made in regard to educational opportunities which are made available to the inmates while they are in prison to enhance their education. I know a number of inmates from my own district who have taken advantage of these opportunities and have come out with GCE levels, or GED Certificates, which is the equivalency of the High School Diploma. This puts them in a much better position when they come out to successfully land a job.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, it is now 4.30. I will ask for the adjournment to the House.

Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Planning, Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 o'clock Monday morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 o'clock Monday morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 13 MARCH 1995.

MONDAY
10.05 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Order. Proceedings are resumed.

READING OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS BY THE SPEAKER

LIGHTHOUSE STUDENTS

The Speaker: First of all, I wish to welcome to today's sitting a group of students from the Lighthouse School together with their teachers. We hope this will be a profitable sitting for them.

OBITUARY
Mr. Cavell Glidden

The Speaker: I would also like on your behalf to extend our condolences to the widow and relatives of the late Mr. Cavell Glidden who passed away. He is the brother, as you know, of our Sergeant-at-arms, and we send our condolences to the family. I would ask the Clerk to convey these condolences in writing. Thank you.

As Honourable Members know, today throughout the Commonwealth is being observed as Commonwealth Day and Speakers of parliaments who are sitting today, in all Commonwealth countries, have been asked to read the message from Her Majesty the Queen, which I now take pleasure in doing.

1995 COMMONWEALTH DAY MESSAGE FROM HER MAJESTY THE QUEEN, HEAD OF THE COMMONWEALTH

(Read by the Speaker)

"The General Assembly has proclaimed 1995 as the United Nations Year for Tolerance, a choice which is particularly appropriate for the Golden Jubilee of the United Nations Organisation itself. The same theme has been chosen for this year's Commonwealth Day.

"We in the Commonwealth can teach the rest of the world something about tolerance, because it is of the heart of the unique association to which we belong. Although our countries are spread all over the world and face many different problems, we know a great deal about each other and it is therefore easier for us to understand each other's point of view even when we disagree.

"That understanding is essential to a tolerant society, which is not simply one which gives to the individual scope and freedom from restraint. Rather it is a society which actively develops the people who belong to it, brings out their gifts and enriches their lives because it values their diversity. It does not condone persecution or the harming of some people by others, but it knows how to make allowances when things go wrong. It can forgive mistakes as well as give encouragement and guidance on how to avoid them. It knows also that enhancing the quality of life of the individual brings benefit to the family, to the community, to the nation and to international relations.

"That sort of tolerance is something which all of us must learn if we are to restore peace in the world, and here the young people of the Commonwealth have a special part to play. The young have the vision and the ability to make the world a better place, and are not fettered by experience. They can see where the older generations have made their mistakes through intolerance, and they can do better.

"Over the last year we have seen shining examples of this quality in action in the emergence of a new South Africa, which I shall be visiting next week, and in the recent signs of change in Northern Ireland. We pray that these examples will inspire everyone to try harder to make tolerance a universal rule of life. On this Commonwealth Day, as we make the traditional affirmations which are at the centre of the Commonwealth Day Observance, I send to all of you, with these examples in mind, a message of encouragement and hope for the future.

"Elizabeth R. 13th March, 1995."

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

The Speaker: Continuing with the orders of the day. Questions to Honourable Ministers/Members. Question No. 28, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 28

No. 28: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning if the advertised post of Press Officer in the Ministry of Tourism is to be a Civil Service one.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Development and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, the answer is no.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Minister say if it is intended that money from the revenue of the Cayman Islands be paid to the person for doing the job?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, it is intended that the work on behalf of the Government and the people of this country will be charged.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could clarify what he has just replied; I do not understand what it means 'that the work on behalf of the Ministry and people of the country shall be charged'.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism,

Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, obviously, the appointment of a press officer is to carry out work. It should be the work of the Ministry and the Portfolios of the Government as advertised, and that work will be a charge.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The advertisement in the newspaper said that this press officer would be carrying out the business of writing stories and feature articles about the Ministries, and the person is to apply to the Minister of Tourism.

Could the Honourable Minister say why the usual route of this advertisement going via the Public Service Commission was not adhered to?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I thought it was clear to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, he is a former civil servant and he knows the procedures. There is no need for this post to go via the Public Service Commission.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Minister say how such an officer would be allied to, or would it be opposed to the work now carried out by Government Information Services which is supposed to keep the public abreast of official activities.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I think the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman can search his own memory, as the Principal Secretary for Tourism, Environment and Planning, when we had a similar body of people who worked in that area.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Minister say if there are any funds in the 1995 Budget to fund such a post with a salary of $50,000 per annum for such a person?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, the answer is yes.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 29, standing in the name of The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 29

No. 29: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works if the parcel of land known as the "Old Gal-leon Beach" has been sold or had its lease extended.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The answer is No.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Minister say if there are any discussions on course with any parties as to the extension of the lease or the sale thereof?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The answer is still No.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 30, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 30

No. 30: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works if consideration is being given by Caribbean Utilities Company Limited to install underground electrical power lines.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The answer is No.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: One observation made by persons who have been studying various things about our islands—especially knowing that these islands are subject to hurricanes—is that the overhead electrical lines present some dangers and are unattractive. Has Government thought of discussing with Caribbean Utilities the possibilities of installing underground electrical power lines?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, this has been something that has been discussed many times, but one has to take into consideration the present franchise which exists between the Government and CUC. Indeed, to place lines below ground would be very costly and in some areas impossible.

However, under the franchise one must realise that in whatever Government goes along with CUC to invest, under the franchise they must have a rate of return. Therefore, what I am saying is that with such a very costly exercise it would no doubt be passed on to the people of this country.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

We are aware that CUC is allowed to tax the country 15% for profit each year. We also know, from what the Honourable Minister has said, that it would be costly to carry out this exercise. Has any actual study or attempt been made to analyse the cost of underground installation versus leaving it the way it is, from the point of view of cost and safety?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I know of no actual study that has been carried out. But I am aware that in certain parts of the country, namely, George Town, it would be utterly impossible to put lines below ground. We already have fuel lines, we have Cable and Wireless' lines, we have water lines and going west we have just about the same lines with the exception to the fuel line. We do have sewage lines on the West Bay peninsula.

So, Madam Speaker, I cannot see how this would be possible in certain areas of this country without creating a very, very high cost.

QUESTION NO. 31

No. 31: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education and Aviation what is the Ministry's policy regarding school visits.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, the Ministry's policy is to visit all public schools in the Cayman Islands at least twice during the school year and to meet with the teachers and principals to hear their problems and concerns first hand.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say what is the procedure of the Ministry when problems and concerns are discussed as a result of these visits?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If they relate to policy, I try to solve them.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say if any visits are made to schools in the private sector and, if so, why not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker, upon their invitation.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 32, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 32

No. 32: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation to provide a list of the educational institutions visited by the educational delegations from the University of the West Indies and United Nations Agency during 1994.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The answer: Sir Alistair McIntyre, Vice Chancellor of the University of the West Indies, visited the Ministry of Education in October 1994. During this time he visited only the Community College campus.

Two UWI pro-Vice Chancellors, Dr. Hamilton and Professor W. Marshall, visited the Islands in December. Dr. Hamilton visited the John Gray High School and the Community College and Professor Marshall visited the Community College.

Mr. Joachim von Braunmuhl, Regional Representative of the United Nations Development Programme, visited the Cayman Islands in October. He did not visit any schools.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister briefly outline to the House the purposes of the visits by these gentlemen?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, that is not directly within this and it will take some time if the Elected Member is looking for briefing on what they did and where they went.

The Speaker: In the opinion of the Chair, it does really come within the ambit as a supplementary of the original question. But, if the Honourable Minister is not prepared at this time, could he undertake to give the information in writing at a future date?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sure, that will be good, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Minister say if, due to these visits by these various persons from the University of the West Indies and the UNDP, there have been any offers of scholarship funding or opportunities for resource persons, lecturers, or teachers with the education system here on the Island?

The Speaker: I do not know if the Honourable Minister can reply to that.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, Ma'am.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 33, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 33

No. 33: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works which private sector companies have been contracted to carry out road design work for the Cayman Islands Government since June 1993.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Since June 1993, no road works had design work contracted out. The Chief Engineer of Public Works employed the services of a design engineer from Quarry Projects on a per hour basis to assist with road works on two occasions in 1994.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
Can the Honourable Minister say if this arrangement continues?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
The individual is still working on that basis to complete some small projects for the Department.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
I wonder if the Honourable Minister could advise this Honourable House if there are any design engineers employed full-time at the Public Works Department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Communications, Works and Agriculture.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
As the Budget was cut for Road Works in 1993, and as the Finance Committee advised that the total Capital Works would not exceed $5 million for 1994, it was decided to cut this post during the 7.5% Civil Service cut-back in 1993. However, it is anticipated that with the upswing in road projects this post will be reinstated.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say if the per hour cost for this design engineer exceeded what the annual full-time employment costs would be.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The answer is No.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden

Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
Madam Speaker, through you, can the Honourable Minister say what is the per hour cost of this person to the Government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, as I pointed out, the Public Works Department has been dealing with a company, Quarry Products, and the figure was $28 per hour.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 34, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 34

No. 34: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works to provide the list of outstanding requests for street lights for the district of George Town as requested through the Ministry by me—the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, according to the Public Works Department and Caribbean Utilities Company Limited, most of the lights requested have been installed. The remainder will be installed in due course as priority has been placed on heavily trafficked roads, isolated areas, and high crime areas. It should be noted that George Town has received the lion's share of street lights since the lighting programme commenced. The following areas have been lit with 400 watt lights:

1. North Church Street
2. Bodden Road
3. Diaz Lane
4. South Church Street to Smith's Cove
5. Walkers Road
6. The Hospital compound
7. Elgin Avenue to the hospital
8. Shedden Road
9. Lower Crewe Road to Kirk Motors
10. Airport Road to Crewe Road
11. George Town Primary School
12. School Road
13. Crescent Lane

The street-lighting programme is still ongoing, and will continue into 1996, or until all areas outlined in the programme have been lit.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I thank the Honourable Minister for informing us about the various locations. But with the greatest of respect, the question asked to provide a list of the outstanding requests made by me.

If the Minister is not in a position to do so, at least I would like an undertaking to have it in writing.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, I do not have a problem with that. I thought that by saying that most of the places which the Honourable Elected Member had identified in his request for lights had been covered, that that would have been sufficient. But I will definitely write to him and give him what he wants.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, the purpose of the question was to determine if any of the requests had been lost in the woodpile. I just wish to express to the Honourable Minister that that was the reasoning behind it, and I would appreciate the answer in writing from him so that the question that I asked could be answered properly.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, perhaps next time you will avoid making such a lengthy statement.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Ma'am.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 35 standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION NO. 35

No. 35: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning why has the proposed Development Plan not been taken back to the public, through public meetings, as was promised during public meetings held to bring about such a Plan.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The method of presentation for the proposed Development Plan complies with the requirements of Section 8 of the Development and Planning Law.

Although it was envisaged at the time of the first district meetings that further public meetings would take place, it was subsequently decided by the Central Planning Authority, in the interest of expediency, that further public meetings in the districts would be forfeited. Public concerns, it was felt, would be more effectively addressed if they were submitted in written form in accordance with the Law.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister will say if he would be prepared to give some consideration to amending section 8 of the Development and Planning Law, whereby, in the future, documents of such public interest and concern could be dealt with by public meetings, as we have found that Caymanians would prefer to put their views in a public meeting rather than in a written form.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, section 8(1) of the Development and Planning Law, if you would allow me please, reads: "The Authority shall, in the course of preparing a development plan related to any land, or proposal for alteration or addition to any such plan, consult with the Board [in this case being the Development and Control Board] and any other public authority concerned with the development contemplated in the area concerned, and may consult with such other persons or bodies as they think fit, and the Authority shall, before submitting any such plan or proposal for approval by the Legislative Assembly, give to the Board and to any public authority as aforesaid, and to any such persons or bodies as aforesaid an opportunity to make objections or representations with regard thereto."

That is really subsection (1) of Section 8 being referred to by the Elected Member for North Side. I believe that we could look at it, and see whether there is need for an amendment to give further public opinion on matters of such importance as a Development Plan that will take us into the future.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could kindly outline the procedure that took place in coming forward with the proposed Development Plan.

The Speaker: If the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning can so do.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I will do the best that I can, off the top of my head. I understand that district committees were established and those committees held public meetings in the various districts, with the exception of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman because the Development Plan is looking specifically at Grand Cayman.

The district committees produced reports of the various meetings which then became a centralised document within the Department of Planning under the umbrella of the Central Planning Authority.

The Central Planning Authority in conjunction with the various chairmen of the district committees, who I understand went back to their members, then produced a survey report. That survey report, as I understand it, formed the proposals which have been advertised to the public where they have been given until the 3rd of March, 1995, to send their objections in written form to the Planning Department where those objections will be heard by the Statutory Board called the Appeals Tribunal for Development. I understand there are something in the area of 140 objections which have to be heard by the Appeals Tribunal.

Madam Speaker, once that process is completed, we then move on to deciding what amendments should be put to the Development Plan, and whether the Law and the Regulations need to be amended.

The Speaker: The next question is no. 36, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION NO. 36

No. 36: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs why, and on whose instruction, was the Immigration booth at the Airport serving Caymanians changed to the extreme left of all the other booths.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the Immigration Booth serving Caymanians arriving at Owen Roberts Airport was changed in an attempt to improve passenger-flow during peak arrival times.

The change was authorised by the Chief Immigration Officer following discussions in late 1994 between representatives of the Ministry of Education and Aviation, the Civil Aviation Authority, airlines operating locally and the Immigration Department.

The matter will be reviewed in late April after the current winter tourist season.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Temporary First Official Member would say how the Caymanian booth being at the extreme right disturbed the traffic flow of passengers arriving at the Owen Roberts International Airport?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I am unable to say how it disturbed the flow. As I have said in the substantive answer it was the consensus of various parties involved in the airport operations that this configuration would enhance the flow of all passengers.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Temporary First Official Member could tell us, since this is going to be reviewed in late April, if in the meantime it is being monitored to see how it is affecting the flow of traffic that takes place at the present time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Madam Speaker. The situation is being monitored.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Temporary First Official Member can say if he is aware that the Caymanian Booth at the airport is normally not manned by an Immigration Officer when flights arrive in this country.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker, I was not aware that it was not normally manned.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Temporary First Official Member can say if there is a policy at this booth regarding Caymanians arriving to these Islands?

The Speaker: I do not know if the Honourable Temporary First Official Member could answer that. It does not, in my view, constitute a part of the original question.

The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Would you then, perhaps, be in a position to supply some information in writing to the Member?

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Madam Speaker if she will give me the question as she has just stated it, because I did not understand what she meant by "if there is a policy."

The Speaker: Would you sit, then, and let her give you the question again?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. What I am trying to arrive at is, if a policy has been given to the Immigration Officers that are manning the booth upon the arrival of Caymanians, if they are allowed to move to the front of the line above visitors—if this is the policy—as I do not believe that this is taking place at the present time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I am unable to say whether that is the policy.

The Speaker: Perhaps the Honourable Member will undertake to give the Member an answer in writing once it has been investigated. Thank you.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 37, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION NO. 37

No. 37: Mrs. Edna M. Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works if any consideration is being given to the installation of parking meters or the setting aside of an area as one-hour parking in central George Town.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Ten one-hour time limited parking spaces are now in operation on a trial basis in the old Public Works Department compound in central George Town.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I would like to thank the Honourable Minister for setting aside these ten parking spaces so quickly after receiving my question, but I would like to ask how are they being policed, and if the public is now aware, through any media, that these ten parking spaces are available in Central George Town.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

There are signs indicating the time limit on parking in the area. And I would like to say that it was not because of the question I received from the Honourable Member, but this has been something that we have been looking at for several months from the time the old Kirk Plaza parking area was taken over by Barclays Bank PLC. We finally decided on this present area. So it is all timely.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 38, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 38

No. 38: Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture if the Minister would say what progress is being made on the preparation of the building to house the facilities of indoor sports in West Bay.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, in West Bay, it is proposed to house the indoor sports facilities and the new Civic Centre under one roof. And I will ask the House to disregard the last sentence, Madam Speaker.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Minister say if there is any time factor for the starting and finishing of the project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, as soon as the Honourable Financial Secretary agrees to the request for a new Civic Centre in West Bay, which has been on the Table for some time.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 39, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION NO. 39

No. 39: Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks asked the Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture if any consideration is being given to the construction of a building in Cayman Brac to house indoor sports.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, in regards to the supplementary a while ago, I should have added

`when the money is voted'. I said: `when the Financial Secretary agrees'...

The Speaker: You were being a bit facetious, right?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No I was not, because we actually have to get his agreement.

The Speaker: Fine, thank you.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The answer to question No. 39: Yes, consideration is being given to the construction of a building to house indoor sports in Cayman Brac.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Minister give any indication of how soon such assistance might be considered for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, that is a very good question this morning, because this Minister has been accused by that same Honourable Member of spending too much money on sports.

Madam Speaker, Members cannot criticise Government bench or Government for spending too much money on areas and then come with a long list wanting to get this, that and the other thing.

If we want these things the country will have to spend money to get them. And that sports centre in Cayman Brac is part of our long-term development sports plan.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Minister say if any location in Cayman Brac has been identified where the Sports Centre might go and if any thought has been given to spending any money in the area of Cayman Brac?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I am also glad the Honourable Member has asked that question. I would like to inform the House of the different improvements in Cayman Brac since we took over.

There was the lighting of the playing field at the Cayman Brac High School; some upgrading and maintenance of that same playing field; the purchasing of the Lazzari property which includes the pool, property for parking for the pool, the school and the community play field; and additional land for other development which has a cement slab on it for possible development of a hard court.

There was some upgrading of the other football field; lighting of the hard court; the surfacing of the running track; and there is a cricket pitch to be built this year.

Madam Speaker, some research has been done on possible sites for new playing field and a building to house in-door sports.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Statement by the Leader of Government.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

STATEMENTS BY HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

FURTHER PROTECTION FOR MARINE ENVIRONMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The statement which I am about to read is titled "Further Protection for Marine Environment."

Madam Speaker, Honourable Ministers and Members, I am extremely pleased to report to this Honourable House that Government has made further progress on one of its long term initiatives aimed at safe guarding the marine environment of the Cayman Islands.

At an earlier session of this House, I advised that Government has reached agreements with both Holland America Line and Carnival Cruise Lines that their ships would adhere to a "zero-discharge" policy within the 12 mile limit of the Cayman Islands' territorial waters.

Government has now also received a similar commitment from Princess Cruises, another of the major cruise lines whose ships call here. Specifically, it means that the Crown Princess, Regal Princess and new ships the Sun Princess, Dawn Princess and Grand Princess agree that there will be no discharge of raw sewage, solid food or galley waste, as well as ballast, laundry and galley waste water. In addition, the ships will not conduct any over-the-side chipping or painting while in port.

In 1994, the Cayman Islands enjoyed the benefits of some 465 cruise ship calls, and some 599,387 passengers. The three Lines that have now agreed to uphold the "zero discharge" policy, together made 178 visits and brought some 266,734 passengers in 1994. This means, effectively, that at least 38% of the visiting cruise ships, carrying 45% of the total passengers will meet these very high environmental standards in 1995.

Madam Speaker, I believe these agreements between Government and the Cruise Lines are shining examples of what can be achieved through mutual respect and co-operation between the partners in our tourism industry. And as the Cayman Islands continues to take a leading role in the area of marine conservation, I look forward to discussions with other visiting ships to achieve similar commitments to those already made by Holland America Line, Carnival Cruise Line and Princess Cruises. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Government Business. Continuation of the Debate on the 1995 Throne Speech. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, when we took the adjournment on Friday, I was dealing with the comments in the Throne Speech with regard to the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force. I mentioned that I felt that there was a need for greater deployment of officers, a definite need for foot patrol in the districts, and an effort to enhance the co-operation between the public and the police because it is almost impossible for their efforts to be successful without the support and co-operation of the community.

There is one comment that is mentioned in the Throne Speech regarding the Royal Cayman Islands Police that I agree with, and that is that the Cayman Islands remains one of the safest destinations of any place in the world.

I was a little taken back by some of the statistics that I heard read by the Third Elected Member for George Town, which basically said that the Cayman Islands are fifth on the list among the most unsafe places in the world. I think that is total nonsense, Madam Speaker. It is only propaganda, and I believe that we here in this House have to be very responsible and see to it that we check out our source of information, and the credibility of the source, before we get in the House and make those kinds of comments because it could affect our visitors who come here for that main reason. They are convinced that it is a very safe environment and are able to come here and not have to worry about someone knocking them over the head and taking their money.

I think here in the Cayman Islands we do not recognise exactly what we have, as far as our country is concerned. I, for one, like many of the other Members of this House, have had the privilege and opportunity of travelling quite extensively, and I am convinced that there is no place I would give up the Cayman Islands for. Madam Speaker, I believe that we have to make a conscientious effort to keep these Islands with that type of safe reputation.

Before going on to address the other areas of the Throne Speech, I was kindly given a copy of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman's opening remarks which I would like to address at this stage. First of all, Madam Speaker, he said and I quote: "...as I fill the role of the Opposition in this House, I am duty bound to try and create a balance in perspective. So, I would like to refer to a few achievements."

He did not even have the courtesy, Madam Speaker, to acknowledge, at least, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town as being a part of that Opposition.

He went on Madam Speaker, to say that he would "refer to a few achievements" of the Government, and at the top of the list is mentioned the stoppage of the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital at a tune of almost $6 million. On Friday when I stood up to speak, I briefly outlined the inconsistencies, as far as this Member's position on this subject, that is, the stoppage of the new hospital. I pointed out that no Member of the House at that time fought harder, had more to say, than the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

What he advocated was that we look at the possibility of constructing a new hospital on the present site of the George Town Hospital. In order not to be accused of making statements that I cannot support, I was also given copies of the Hansard Report dated 29th of November, 1991, which included the comments of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman on this subject. The excerpts are not very long and I crave your indulgence just to read a few of them in order to support what I am saying.

He said: "We are talking about expenditure and there is no one except the Member [the Member he was referring to there was the former Member for Health, Mr. Ezzard Miller] that has said that $16 million can build a hospital and fix that site." The site he is talking about is the site in the swamp that was chosen for the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital. He said: "When I read in the papers from one of the engineers and so on, was that the mud was not any deeper than what it was somewhere down around Lime Tree Bay. He is fixing his posture, nobody is going to nail him down when it takes $10 million to fill the site." [Hansard, 29 November 1991]

So, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman was convinced that, contrary to what he is saying now, $16 million could build the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital. He was contending that it could cost as much as $10 million just to fill the site for the new hospital. So, he was not convinced that it was a good idea, and he contended that the Government of the day should move forward to construct a new hospital on the present site, that is the site we now have the George Town Hospital on.

He says here: "I personally believe that MRCU should be ideally moved from there, that is, on the present site. Take that to the area of the land the Government owns in the swamp on the dyke road." So, he is advocating moving the MRCU in order to create sufficient space for the construction of the new hospital. He said: "Knock it down and use that large area there that the people of this country have known of forever as the Hospital and build a new hospital there in phases."

Madam Speaker, what he is saying here makes sense, and this was the position that the Backbenchers of the day, of which he was a part, took. We were not prepared to deprive the people of this country of proper health facilities, but we wanted the Government to be sensible with regard to moving forward with this very expensive project and ensuring that at the end of the day we had a facility that the people of this country could afford and one that in one or two years would not disappear—being situated in a swamp.

So, Madam Speaker, it kind of reflects the inconsistencies as far as that Member is concerned with regard to positions he has taken on very important issues in this House.

Madam Speaker, this Member has gone as far as—and he has mentioned this in his speech—that this was one of the issues that they discussed with the Minister responsible for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office during their recent visit to London. What a change of heart, Madam Speaker!

He also accused the present Government of repealing and stopping the Health Services Authority. That was one of the most important decisions this Government has taken since it took office in November 1992. We had a situation, contrary to what the former Member for Health was saying at the time, that it was going to save us money and improve the overall efficiency of the George Town Hospital, where expenditure was not controlled, there was total anarchy as far as the running of the operations was concerned, and the Member, himself, played such a vital role in running that hospital on a daily basis. All major decisions were not taken by the Health Services Authority Board at the time, but a lot of those decisions were made with the support on a daily basis of the Member himself.

So, it was a very wise decision to repeal the Law, cancelling the Health Services Authority, and bringing the medical services back under Government as a government department.

He also went on to accuse the present Government of stopping free medical aid for seamen and their spouses in the Cayman Islands. The Minister for Health at the time, the Honourable McKeever Bush, had to start somewhere because of the rampant abuse of free medical services, with regard to depriving those persons who were on the list who it was felt could afford to pay for medical services. He had to start somewhere, Madam Speaker. Gradually, what has been done—I think it has been accomplished so far as the seamen are concerned, and I support that position—is that those seamen who have made such a valuable contribution with regard to the development of this country, who cannot afford to pay for medical services, should be offered free medical, they and their spouses. But only those who cannot afford to pay for those services on a personal basis.

He also accused the National Team Government of stopping the National Health Insurance Scheme. That was also a very wise decision as far as this Government is concerned, because the scheme that was established by the former Member for Health, that is, Mr. Ezzard Miller, did not have the support of the insurance industry. It was not practical as far as the premiums that were being charged, and it would have been realised to be a failure in a very short period of time.

I am aware that the present Minister for Health is moving ahead with a National Health Insurance Scheme, but it is with the support of the insurance industry, which is so vital.

Madam Speaker, the difference with regard to approach is that the Minister for Health is saying, let us come up with a scheme that people can afford; one that does have the support of the insurance industry; one that will meet the needs of our people with regard to medical expenses.

At the present time the Government of the Cayman Islands is called on quite frequently to refer residents overseas for medical attention, and that is a very expensive venture, indeed, Madam Speaker. We need to come up with some scheme that will offer the same kind of benefits, including overseas medical referrals; one, as I said before, that the people of this country can support and afford.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman went on to comment on the extension to the airport and to criticise the diversion of the road around the extension.

Madam Speaker, I must congratulate the present Government and the Honourable Ministers for the outstanding job they did with regard to providing our pilots with an additional 600 feet of runway which is so critical with regard in approach and landing, while at the same time providing a diversion as far as the road is concerned, which I personally have only gotten positive comments on. The comments that I have heard is that driving on this road does not feel like you are in the Cayman Islands. It reminds you of some highway in the United States.

So, I do not believe that those criticisms are warranted. I believe, also, that the businessmen in those areas that were to be affected are very positive and very pleased with the way the whole project turned out.

Madam Speaker, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman also made a statement which is, in my opinion, totally false. He said, and I quote: "The first time ever in the history of this country, of spending the public's money to build over 32 private driveways in the district of West Bay with other districts not receiving similar consideration." There is nothing further from the truth than that comment.

The Budget process has always been—and I have a Member of this House for the last seven years like himself—that a provision is put into the budget with regard to district roads. The representatives from the districts get together and determine what roads have priority, because you always have more requests than you are able to take care of from the funds that are voted. But, it is done as a joint decision as to what roads are given priority in that year. That is the way it has always been. To give people the impression now, Madam Speaker, that since November 1992, all of a sudden the present Government is doing something that is dishonest, I think is totally unfair.

I personally have no apologies for the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, or any other Member of this House, for attempting as a representative of the district of West Bay to see to it that my people have decent roads on which to drive back and forth. No apologies, whatsoever, Madam Speaker.

There were also budget provisions for road work in all of the districts—all of the other districts. In 1994 those districts also received their fair share of road works.

What was so amusing with regard to that Honourable Member was that the Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works could produce requests from the same Member, that is, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, for private roads that he wanted done in that district. So, on one hand he is saying, do not give West Bay any roads but give me private roads in Cayman Brac that will be repaired at Government's expense.

I imagine that when he and his colleague, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, mentioned this to the Minister of the Foreign and Commonwealth Office for the Cayman Islands, it must have been quite amusing to him, because this is total nonsense. If he believes that because he brings a motion to this House calling on Government to consider changing its policy in this area it is going to be done, I can guarantee him, Madam Speaker, that the majority of the Members of this House support the present policy and will continue to support roads being dealt with in this manner.

What is important to remember, with regard to public funds, is that no Elected Member or Minister of this House has the authority to sign any cheques for such works. There are all the controlling officers who take care of carrying out these instructions in seeing to it that money is well spent.

So, Madam Speaker, I trust that in the future, before the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman gets up and pounds his chest, he will think about what he is going to say before he says it. I believe, Madam Speaker, and I am quite sure that I am not the only one who is going to mention that. I think that I have been able to quite adequately reflect the inconsistencies as far as the Member's position is concerned.

Madam Speaker, getting on with my contribution to the Throne Speech, I would like now to offer my comments on the Prison Department. I am very pleased to see that the Educational Programme at the Prison has been strengthened and that inmates who are interested now have an opportunity to further their education. I recall on a number of visits to Northward Prison that we were requested to go on tours actually visiting some of these classrooms, meeting some of the staff and the inmates who are enrolled in the programme. I, personally, know of a number of former inmates who, while in prison, took advantage of the opportunity to further their education to the extent that many of them came out with their GED certificates or passes at GCE O Level. This will instil personal confidence in the individual who finds himself in problems—and that is probably one of the main reasons why so many of our young Caymanians find themselves in prison—they have very low self-esteem. By their accomplishment in the area of education, it makes them feel good about themselves and it also enhances their chances for employment upon being released from prison.

I am pleased to see that the job-training and interviewing-process at the Prison is being emphasised, because I recall in my first term as a Member of this House that I brought a motion asking specifically for this to be done. I do not care who you are, how qualified you are, if you have been to prison, upon your release it is much more difficult to find a job. If our inmates can be assisted with landing a job before they are released, then it enhances their chances of adjusting well in society; it reduces the incidents of repeat offenders and it gives the person a second chance of making a very valuable contribution to society.

I am also pleased to see that the frequency of the Drug Counselling Services at the Prison is being increased. Madam Speaker, I feel (and maybe I feel a little different from other Members of this House) that if you are convicted and you are serving a term of imprisonment, especially for drug abuse, that it should be mandatory while you are in prison to attend these drug counselling sessions. Not only that, after you are released from Prison it should be mandatory for you to continue to attend those sessions in order to get the support from other members of the public who may be suffering from similar experiences. Madam Speaker, I believe that it is much easier for an individual to kick a habit of this nature if he has others who have had a similar experience to lean on for support.

I am also one Member who has called on Government to expand the Prison Work Programme, and I know that to a limited extent we are now using inmates for certain projects and programmes. I think the National Trust has used them on a number of occasions. But I believe that greater emphasis has to be placed on utilising the skills of these persons while they are in prison.

In prison you meet persons from all walks of life: you meet those who are not educated to those who are highly qualified—who possess certain skills which government could use. I see no reason why we could not have work teams of prisoners assigned to districts for clean up purposes in seeing to it that our roadsides are kept clean from litter, and other services that are needed in our community. I certainly would welcome such a team in West Bay, Madam Speaker, in order to ensure that my district is kept clean.

I think the idea of not using them because of fear that they will run away is total nonsense. I would not put persons who are convicted of murder or other serious crimes on the street like that, but the little boy who is in there for consuming a stick of ganja does not pose that much of a threat to our society. He knows that if he is out there on a work programme and he escapes... where is he going to run? Once he is recaptured it will probably add another six months to his sentence. So, I do not think that poses much of a threat to our society.

Madam Speaker, it could provide a valuable service to the community and to Government, and the Government would in turn recognise a savings in those areas because regardless of who provides the services it has to be done and, if the prisoners are not used for this purpose, the Government has to pay somebody else to do it.

Many of these inmates are qualified mechanics, qualified painters, who could be used in connection with the Public Works Department programmes on building maintenance and the other services that the Public Works Department is called upon from time to time to provide. So, I believe that we have to look at what we have and do our best to ensure that persons who are in prison are, first of all, exposed to proper work ethics, exposed to an opportunity of furthering their education, if that is a necessity, and when they are in prison to make a contribution to our society by getting out there and working in the community providing the kind of services I mentioned earlier.

I recall being told that in North Carolina—I believe it is—the Governor's residence is fully staffed by inmates, (that is, by chefs who provide the cooking, gardeners, and other personnel who are needed), who are all inmates provided by the Prison System. I was also told that when many of those inmates, especially ones who are in there as chefs or cooks, are highly recruited upon being released by some of the major hotels. So, I believe that the programme here could work.

Immigration: I believe it is time for the Civil Service to recognise the Senior Officers in that department because many of those officers have been there for 20 to 25 years. They are at the top of their scale and there is no hope of any promotions because of the scheme. But many of those officers provide a very important service to the public. Madam Speaker, there are four names that come to mind: people like Dolcy Powery, Sharon McCoy, Darlene Owens and Pat Godfrey [Forbes] who I believe is married now—I do not know her married name. These are officers who have been there over the years and have provided first class service as far as the public is concerned. Yet, they go on from year to year with little or no thanks or recognition. I do not believe that is right.

As an employer, I know how important it is to motivate staff and to make them feel important. I believe that much has to be done in that area with regard to the Civil Service as a whole, but in particular the Immigration Department. What I see is a group of young mavericks going into the department who do not necessarily have the interest that those senior officers have portrayed over the years with regard to public services, but who are more interested in earning stripes and promotions.

I believe it would be in the best interest of that Department if something is done to recognise these Senior Officers for their efforts and measures taken with regard to some type of regarding of posts to reflect the appreciation for their years of hard work.

There have been some changes to our policies on temporary work permits, and the intention was that those applications would be dealt with by the Chairman of the Board and the Chief Immigration Officer. There were some reasons why that was done, but my experiences have been that the process now with temporary work permits—and temporary work permit means exactly that, "temporary"—it is normally a permit that people need within a day or two and sometimes that process takes as long as two weeks to issue. In a lot of instances the person has come and gone before the permit is actually issued. I think it is time for us to have a second look at that process.

I believe that if you are going to have senior officers in the department you have to delegate some responsibilities, as far as they are concerned. And I also believe that they could help tremendously in this area.

The other thing that I am not totally happy with, Madam Speaker, because I recall in 1992 as part of the National Team's political campaign we emphasised the need for looking out for, and ensuring that Caymanians have their fair share of what is going on in this country with regard to positions, and after the 1992 Election visiting a few establishments that were the topic or issue that was being addressed. How do we put in place programmes for the training of Caymanians?

I believed at that stage people had a genuine interest in training Caymanians. But shortly after taking office there was an article by, I think the Chamber of Commerce, that Government was being too restrictive with regards to its work permit policies. I, for one, as a Member, recognise that you always have a need for work permits in this country—always. We are not producing Caymanians that fast to fill all the positions that are created in this country.

But, I believe that it is the responsibility of the Immigration Board, with the support of Government, to ensure that any job that can be filled locally by Caymanians, where they are willing and are available should be filled by Caymanians. I also believe that it is time that we put in place some type of sensible Immigration Board policies with regard to issuance of work permits. It is impossible for the Immigration Board to meet one or two days a week and deal with 400 to 500 applications for work permits at any one sitting, and to expect them to do a good job in perusing those applications to determine which ones are legitimate from those that should be refused.

I do support the philosophy as put forward by the present Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning. His feeling was that the Immigration Board should call in your employers and they come forward with a staffing plan for the next three or five years. They sit with the Immigration Board and say exactly what their needs are in regard to personnel from the outside that they are going to require work permits for. And, also, insist that the employers have in place a training programme to ensure that at the end of that period of time (be it three years or five years) that there is a Caymanian who has been trained and capable of filling at least some of those positions.

I believe, Madam Speaker, that unless Government insists that it is done on a national basis very little will be accomplished on a voluntary basis as far as training of Caymanians by the private sector.

The Speaker: Will this be a convenient time to take the suspension? Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.43 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.11 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Third Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Madam Speaker, when we took the suspension I was dealing with the Immigration Board and the issue of work permits. The issue, as far as I am concerned, is that at the present time it is too easy to obtain a work permit, especially in areas where there are sufficient Caymanians looking for jobs.

I also mentioned that I am conscious of the fact that there will always be a need for work permits in this country because we are not training and producing Caymanians fast enough to fill all the positions which are available in this country.

Frankly speaking, Madam Speaker, there are some positions that Caymanians have no interest or desire to fill, so if you are going to have a service in those areas it must be provided by someone from the outside.

I also touched on the idea of there being a proper policy established by the Immigration Board with regard to the issuance of work permits in order to, first of all, reduce the volume of permits the Board is called upon to deal with on a weekly basis, as well as to put the Board in a much better position to scrutinise those applications that have come before them, and to also determine from the employers what they are doing in regard to the training of Caymanians to eventually fill those positions, especially in the financial industry. There are a number of very attractive positions available in that sector, and I believe that, given an opportunity for training, Caymanians are capable of filling any positions that may be available in that industry.

Madam Speaker, I also believe that it is time that our people enjoy a greater degree of opportunities which are available in this country, especially in the higher echelon of positions that are available. I also emphasised the need for Government to insist that vigilance be kept by the Immigration Board with regard to work permits. I am aware that Government is moving ahead with its Manpower Survey Development Program and the whole issue of that is to determine exactly what the needs are, as far as labour is concerned and what programmes are in place with regard to the training of Caymanians so that Government is in a position where they can make informed decision on the issue of labour in this country.

I am also pleased to see that there are plans to review the Trade and Business Licensing Law and I believe that this is every essential. We, as Legislators, have to take a very close look at the rules in that area. Because of the attractiveness of investments in this country at this present time we have to be very careful to ensure that Caymanians are protected to some extent, because Caymanians do not have the financial resources to compete with Peter Saville, and people of that calibre who have unlimited resources available to them.

The other issue that we have to be very careful with and one that has to be addressed, is the issue of fronting. That is a serious issue at the present time in this country; many, many businesses have been established with some little Caymanian up front who is not benefiting at all, just allowing their names to be used for pittance. I have been given some suggestions on how to address this issue. For example, insisting that the Cayman partner is designated as your managing director and maybe chairman of the board to retain some control as to what goes on in the company. But, I believe that the Board should take the approach of not just automatically granting new Trade and Business Licences, where there is a foreigner involved, without paying very close scrutiny and asking questions on the proposed business, the Caymanian partner involvement et cetera, et cetera.

Madam Speaker, I believe that there are areas where we should restrict the issuance of new Trade and Business Licences. One area that comes immediately to mind is the area of Watersports. There is a lot of conflict at the present time between the Caymanian operators and foreign operators in this area.

First of all, because the foreign operators have the contacts with the cruise ships, they have the financial resources available to advertise and do whatever they have to do in order to attract the business. And a lot of times they under-cut, or under-sell the Caymanian just to get the business because they can afford it and be in a position at a later stage to write it off as a tax or business expense. So, we have to address this issue.

I hear horror stories of operators in the North Sound, for example, who are just coming here on a work permit who have no knowledge of the environment in that area, they do not know the waters. They are placed in position of Captains of these watersports boats that go back and forth between the dock and Stingray City and other attractions in the area. Because they do not know the area, boats loaded with passengers run aground on the reef, destroying the marine environment and also posing a very serious risk to the safety of passengers on those boats.

I do not believe that Government can take the attitude that competition can take care of itself in that area. I think some type of controls have to be put in place to ensure that operators in this area have the proper knowledge and skills to operate in these areas. Also, to ensure that those Caymanians like Capt. Marvin, Capt. Crosby and Capt. Ertis and the others who have made a living in this area for so many years are in a position to continue to earn a livelihood in this industry.

Madam Speaker, another area that I feel that licences should be restricted is the area of boutiques. It looks like on every corner, regardless of where you go, you will find a boutique. What has happened, Madam Speaker? Because the policy is so relaxed you get all these people going into the business, and there is only so much for everybody. As a result many of these small entities get hurt financially because there are too many competing for such a small piece of business.

The other area where I believe that Trade and Business Licences should be restricted is the area of building contractors. You have in this country at this present time a sufficient number of Caymanians and other foreign entities that are capable of constructing anything that has to be constructed. What is happening, Madam Speaker, especially with the recent slow down in construction that we have experienced, and this industry is on the rebound, but there are those Caymanians who have made a livelihood in that area and those who have had difficulties continuing to find employment in the industry.

I believe that as a representative, regardless of what people say, my primary responsibility is to ensure that our Caymanian people who make a livelihood in this area continue to be able to do so.

I was very pleased to see the Local Contractors' Bill circulated on the 22nd of February, 1995, to the Honourable Members and you, Madam Speaker. I am also pleased that the Minister of Tourism, Environment and Planning decided weeks ago that the Bill would not be passed in this sitting, but would probably be addressed in the June session which is some three months away. It gives ample time for the local contractors to offer their input and also to get input from the general public on this very important piece of legislation.

So, I believe that this Government, over the next year and a half, has a lot to do and there is definitely sufficient to keep them busy. The issues that we are faced with are issues that must be addressed in order to safeguard the interest of our Caymanians. I would also urge Caymanians to think twice about selling their birthright, that is, by allowing their names to be used to front businesses that are owned by foreigners in this country.

I was most surprised just recently to learn that a comedian at the Holiday Inn is no longer only a comedian: he now has I think one or two boats that he operates in the North Sound, competing with our Caymanians in the watersports industry. This is ridiculous, Madam Speaker. When I enquired about it I was told that there is a Caymanian up front providing the Caymanian partnership side of the operation.

Madam Speaker, I believe that this type of thing has to be looked at very carefully and licences issued only when the Immigration Board is convinced that this is a genuine partnership between a Caymanian and a foreign investor in the area of watersports.

Moving on to District Administration, I was very pleased to see that in January of this year a cruise ship made a call in Cayman Brac. I was also pleased to see the positive responses and the reception received that this incident got by the residents of Cayman Brac.

Madam Speaker, Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, especially Cayman Brac, is in a very unique position in that its development, its labour activity, is basically Government funded, or driven, in that they are highly dependent on capital projects funded by the Government for their very financial survival. I believe that this could be the beginning of a good thing for those Islands, because if you can encourage cruise ships to call in Cayman Brac, what you will find is that they will spring up and create industry in the area to service the need of the cruise ship passengers, which would put the Island in a position where it would not have to depend so heavily on Government's funding.

I have found the Cayman Brac people to be an independent group of people. They are very industrious, very ambitious, and they have a lot of pride and I believe they will welcome any opportunity of earning their own keep as far as employment is concerned. I think this is an alternative that maybe Government should pursue, because it will only be positive as far as contribution to the economy of Cayman Brac.

Despite all the rumours, the reason why that happened is because the Minister for Tourism and his department were instrumental in convincing the cruise ship to make that call in the Brac.

Madam Speaker, I am very pleased to see the result of the investment in the Law School, which has been going for a number of years now. I am proud to see the calibre of Caymanian lawyers being produced by the school. At the last count there were approximately 50 Caymanian lawyers trained by the school, and this speaks well for the foresight of previous governments. Today, Caymanians have the opportunity to earn a living by being trained locally in the Law profession, earning qualifications that are recognised, and not having to travel overseas away from family, friends and the other things that go along with going overseas to school.

I believe the same approach can be taken with regard to education as far as training of Caymanian teachers and other areas that we find we have a need for. I believe that if Caymanians have the opportunity to be trained locally, that it will first of all increase the number of Caymanians who would have an interest in earning a qualification in this area. Many of them are responsible parents—perhaps a wife with a family to care for, who would have a desire to further her education but does not have the luxury of leaving her family for three or four years in order to travel overseas to earn a qualification as, maybe, a teacher, or in some other profession. So, I congratulate the Law School and its accomplishments.

One area that I am not so pleased with—and I think that to a certain extent even though we are not responsible it reflects very poorly on us as Elected Members in attempting to get something done—is that of legal drafting. One of the key issues right now is the new Traffic Law that was passed back in 1990 or 1991, and we are still not in a position to implement that Law because we are still waiting on the Regulations.

My attitude is that if the Attorney General's Office needs more personnel in order to keep up with the work load, then request it and let us get on with the job. But I believe it is totally unacceptable to wait three or four years in order to be in a position to implement a piece of legislation because there is an insufficient number of persons responsible for drafting that legislation.

I trust that the Attorney General will take note of that and also recognise that he has my support if he needs additional personnel to keep up with the rate of passing of legislation in this House—the drafting side of it.

Madam Speaker, I want to congratulate the Honourable Financial Secretary and his portfolio for the many accomplishments in the areas that he is responsible for. I was very pleased (and this was something we had harped on) to see that some reduction in insurance premiums has been recognised locally this time around. Not only reductions, but considerable reductions. For I recall last year hearing from a number of home owners who had made the decision not to insure their homes because they could not afford to pay the insurance premium. I am talking about ordinary Caymanians being called upon to pay $3,000 or $4,000 in way of premium. This year I have personally seen a reduction in my own home owner's premium, which I welcome. This happened through negotiations spearheaded by the Honourable Financial Secretary. I also congratulate him on the recent promotion that he put in place on visits to New York, London and Hong Kong which are the main financial centres, to further promote the Cayman Islands as a first class financial entity.

Madam Speaker, from talking with persons who attended those conferences, there is already evidence that it was a very successful promotion because business is already headed in this direction as a result of those promotions. And despite the claims and questions of the Opposition (the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town), it was necessary for the Honourable Ministers of Government who travelled with that party to have been there. You can go out there and talk as much as you want about any type of promotion, but the one concern that most investors have is how politically stable is that country. Having the Ministers present to answer any political concerns that the audience may have had was a very positive advantage as far as that promotion was concerned. I believe that even though it cost approximately $257,000, that was money well spent, as far as our future is concerned.

We can no longer take a position of just sitting back expecting business to come in our direction. We have to go out there and be aggressive like all the other destinations are doing; spend money in order to attract the right calibre of business to these Islands.

I am also very pleased to see that the Mutual Funds

Legislation has been so successful in that at the present time there are a number of mutual funds that have been licensed here and that number is increasing on a daily basis. These are huge pools of funds that can only be positive as far as spin-offs in benefits to the Cayman Islands.

I also congratulate the Honourable Financial Secretary for his foresight in this area. Not only him, Madam Speaker, but his predecessor because I recall having an opportunity to travel with the former Financial Secretary (who is now the Minister for Tourism) on one of his promotions to New York and that was one of the issues that was discussed—mutual funds. So, I believe it speaks well for the leadership of this country.

I must also offer my congratulations to the Collector of Customs and his Department for the excellent revenue record that they have established in 1994, having collected in excess of $61 million in import duties. The whole budget of Government depends very heavily on import duties that are collected in this country and the Collector and his staff are doing a good job in this area.

I am pleased to see that plans are in place to increase the examination of loose and containerised cargo in 1995 to ensure that people are only bringing in what should be, and to restrict such things as narcotics and firearms which this country now has a problem with. I am also pleased to see that the Department plans to develop a Commercial Fraud Unit. That has become big business, and we must do everything that we can to discourage any criminal activity in this area. So, the Collector of Customs and his staff are doing a good job.

I am also pleased to see that 37 new banks were licensed in 1994, and that at the present time there are about 560 banks which are licensed to operate in the Cayman Islands. This speaks well for us in that these entities have confidence in our political and economic stability to choose to license their branches here, rather than in one of the other offshore financial destinations.

At the end of 1994, there were also 361 insurance companies that were licensed here in the Cayman Islands, and this also speaks well for us as a financial centre because it is evident that we have the confidence of the financial industry.

I believe that as a result of the recent promotion, as I have mentioned spearheaded by the Honourable Financial Secretary, that we will see an increase in the requests for a number of private banks. And I think that the Government has to be attentive to these requests just to ensure that those entities to whom licences are issued are of the right calibre. But, I believe that with the volume of big business that is coming here from areas like Hong Kong, that we have to be in a position where we can compete for such business. Madam Speaker, we need to do whatever we need to do to ensure that we have our fair share.

Tourism. There has been a lot of excitement recently as a result of the recent Chamber of Commerce survey. I also received one of those questionnaires in my mail and I put it in the garbage; I did not fill it out. But, for Ministers like the Honourable Minister for Tourism, the Minister for Communications and Works, the Minister for Community Development, to be given the type of ratings that they received in that survey leads me to believe that there was something mischievous that went on in the entire process. Because in the area of tourism, for example (and I am going to touch on the other Portfolios as well), last year, 1994, we had a record number of air arrival visitors to this country. What is the basis on which the Minister was judged? You are judged based on performance, you are judged based on results. For the first time in our history we had direct flights from Europe. That is something that we have been talking about for the last 15 to 20 years, I would say. But it only happened last year.

Why did it happen? Because you have a progressive government in place, and you have a Minister for Tourism who is able to get out there and negotiate deals of this nature and it provides this country for the first time, with some degree of diversity as far as the tourist-base is concerned. It allows us an opportunity to reach more wealthy visitors because there are many wealthy persons in Europe who would like to visit the Cayman Islands, but were discouraged by having to fly through Miami or New York in order to get here. Now, all they have to do is get to London and take a direct flight to the Cayman Islands. I understand that it is sometime next month—the 28th of this month I am told—that British Airways will introduce a weekly scheduled flight direct from London.

Madam Speaker, that has done a lot of things because the calibre of persons that you are now catering to, it immediately created a need for additional first class hotel accommodation. I have heard people ask why we agreed to build the new hotel along the Seven Mile Beach. You cannot bring these people here who are used to a first class service and stick them in your Sleep Inns and the Islander Hotel or the Holiday Inn. They are used to a certain calibre of services. Do not get me wrong, Madam Speaker, those entities provide a very valuable service to some visitors to this country. Otherwise, those visitors would not be in a position to visit because they cannot afford to pay $400 or $500 per night for hotel accommodation. But, we need additional first class tourist accommodations in this country. If you take a survey of the occupancy rate, at for example the Hyatt Hotel; it probably runs in the region of 85% to 95% all year round. So, that does not give you much opportunity to offer that calibre of services to too many additional visitors.

As a result of that the new Westin Hotel is under construction and I understand that there is another hotel planned for the Pease Bay area and another one along the Queen's Highway area. I welcome that. I prefer to see new hotels rather than additional condominiums, because the only thing you get from the condominiums is the little material during construction and basically after that the Government collects its accommodation tax. But employment requirements are minimal, they only need a couple of people, and it does not provide an opportunity for additional Caymanians who may be desirous of pursuing employment in that area.

So, all of the comments with regard to a new hotel, as to whom we are building it for—we are building it for the calibre of tourist that we are catering for, that is, those persons who can come in here and spend $200 to $250 per night and up for a hotel room, with the services that are expected to go along with that type of price tag.

The Speaker: At this time proceedings will be suspended until 2.30 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.53 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Third Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Madam Speaker, when we took the lunch break I was dealing with tourism and the accomplishments of the Honourable Minister in this area. I was also dealing with the issue of the need for new hotels. I must add Madam Speaker that I am aware that one of the conditions that was agreed upon between the Minister and the parties involved in building the new hotel on the old Galleon Beach site, is that every available Caymanian who is interested in finding a job had to be employed before any work permits would be entertained for foreign personnel.

I must say that it is obvious that the developers are adhering to that agreement because as I drive by there on my way, to or from town, I am very pleased to see the number of Caymanians who are employed on that site. They have not been able to employ every Caymanian who has been interested in a job so far, because of the stage of the construction. But as they progress, it will provide an opportunity to employ the additional Caymanians who are looking for jobs on that site. They are being paid a very decent wage, and some have offered to work six days a week in order to keep on schedule and are being paid very well indeed for their services.

Madam Speaker, I believe that in the area of tourism which is the other major pillar of employment for our people, more has to be done in this area to first of all encourage Caymanians to look at the tourist industry as a career opportunity and steps must be taken to ensure that a proper Hotel Training School is established where our Caymanian students, especially the ones coming out of High School, can be encouraged to enroll and to learn as much as they can about the hotel industry. I believe it should be along the same lines as the policies that were established with respect to the former Hotel Training School, whereby students enrolled in the programme, while they are in training, are offered some type of stipend while they are in training. In order to accomplish this I believe that there must be a very close working relationship between the Department of Tourism and the Cayman Islands Hotel and Condominiums Association, because the people involved in the industry are aware of what the needs are and they will be able to not only provide some of the training, but to address with the Government those areas that the training should cover.

Madam Speaker, I believe that opportunities must be created in the hotel industry for Caymanians to be able to move up. In other words, be in a position where they can make a decent salary at a senior level in the industry. With the type of hotels that we have in the country at the present time, more properties should come forward on a voluntary basis and say because of their interest in training Caymanians they will offer a scholarship to one or two Caymanians to be fully exposed and trained at all levels in the hotel industry, so, that over a period of time, those persons have an opportunity to occupy a senior post. We have a few Caymanians who are doing well in the hotel industry, but I believe there is room for a lot more to be done in this area.

I must also congratulate the Honourable Minister for the Department of Tourism and the Cayman Island Hotel and Condominium Association for awarding their first scholarship to a young Caymanian to attend university to receive training in Hotel Management. This is very positive, and I believe that with the type of joint co-operation between Government and the private sector much can be accomplished.

The one thing that I always keep in the back of my mind is that the reason why we enjoy the type of environment that we have here in this country is because Caymanians have always been in a position where they have benefited from the development that we enjoyed in this country. That is at all levels in all walks of life, and it is to our best interest to ensure that these types of opportunities and harmony continue to exist in this country. But that can only be ensured if we continue to see to it that Caymanians have their fair share of opportunities.

Madam Speaker, I was also very pleased to see (about a year ago now) where the Department of Environment had started its recycling programme. I assume it is going very well, but as an incentive in this area, it would be good if the Department came up with some kind of competition, especially among the schools, whereby over a period of time, depending on the number of cans that are collected, the winner receives some type of reward. I recall the recycling programme that was put in place by a private individual. That was very successful, indeed, from that standpoint because the schools who collected the most cans received the PS/1-IBM Computer as a reward. This is a good investment because a lot of our success here in the Cayman Islands depends on maintaining a clean environment. So, I believe that this is something that would enhance that process and at the same time give greater consciousness among our school children with regard to the necessity of keeping the environment clean.

I also believe, even though we can still boast of having one of the cleanest environments of any place in the world, that we have to continue our efforts to ensure that remains the case. I believe that the Department of Environment has to see to it, through some type of legislation which is actually implemented and carried out, that culprits who have no social consciousness whatsoever with respect to maintaining a clean environment are properly punished through fines, or whatever. But we must create a consciousness among our people of the importance of keeping our districts clean, our marine environment clean, because of the role that that plays with regards to our success. I believe that consciousness is being emphasised in our schools, but you have many adults who have no regard whatsoever in that area—they think nothing of using a bottle and throwing it along the streets, rather than looking for the nearest container to put the can in and dispose of it properly. So, there is a lot of educational work that has to be done in that area, but we must keep this in the forefront of our people as to the importance of maintaining a clean environment.

With respect to the Planning Department, I must congratulate the Director and the Central Planning Authority for their success in 1994 in having processed 585 applications valued at $137 million. That is a lot of applications, Madam Speaker. I think it reflects two things: It reflects that the decision of the National Team after the Election of reducing the stamp duty on land transfers from 10 to 7.5% has been a very positive move in that people are now investing in the purchase of land and building. This is very positive. The other thing it reflects is that there is confidence in the present Government, so the foreign investors are no longer sitting on the side line but are getting actively involved in wholesome investment in the country, be it hotels, private homes, or otherwise.

I must also remind the House of some of the measures taken by the present Minister for planning. I recall that he brought legislation here to improve the administrative process at the Planning Department for dealing with routine requests, such as signs, satellite dishes, minor renovations, houses and small apartments, etcetera. Those applications can now be dealt with by the Director and the Chairman of the Central Planning Authority, and that has immensely improved the processing time for applications of this nature.

Madam Speaker, I know that there has been some criticism with regard to the length of time for certain applications to go through the Board for approval, but on a lot of occasions what has happened is that someone may come in for a change of use and that triggers an appeal process or a polling process, whereby it is then the responsibility of the Planning Department to receive whatever objections to that particular change of use. It takes time.

So, I believe that we have come a long way as far as the planning process is concerned. There is still room for improvement. I doubt that we will ever get to the stage where someone will not be finding fault with the process. I think that, as a general rule, the process is working fairly well.

I am also aware that at the present time, in order to avoid any unnecessary delays, there are certain time periods established with regard to responses from certain sectors, such as the Fire Department, the Department of Environment or some of the other bodies involved in the process; and if they do not respond as they should, then the application moves forward to the next stage. So, I believe that it is working, as far as the planning process is concerned, and I believe that in order to improve the process further we might need to have a serious look at the conditions and requirements of the Planning Law which the Department of Planning is guided by with respect to approving applications.

Madam Speaker, there was mention in the Throne Speech with regard to permanent moorings for the Port of George Town. I support that idea. I think that the permanent moorings are a little late in coming because the last time I had an opportunity to accompany a number of other Members of the Legislative Assembly (at the invitation of the now Minister for Tourism) considerable damage had been done to the Port area of George Town by cruise ships.

I am not a marine biologist, but I was told that in order to reverse that process it will take many, many years. I have also been pushing for the idea of permanent moorings for cruise ships, maybe in the Spotts area where cruise ships are on occasions required to anchor because of weather and other reasons. I would like to see Government move ahead in these areas as well. But I do support the idea of cruise ships moorings, and I also appreciate the approach that the present Minister has taken in that he has involved, and welcomed, the participation of the cruise lines themselves in making this decision and also assisting maybe with the installation of these permanent moorings. By having them involved eliminates to a large extent the potential liability that goes along with that type of decision.

I also mentioned earlier that I welcome the idea of cruise ships stopping in Cayman Brac. I also support the idea of the Port Authority Board studying the possibility of extending the dock facilities in Cayman Brac to accommodate cruise ships to enable them to actually tie up during their visits to Cayman Brac. The difficulty, as I understand, is that because of the weather pattern and the wind directions it is almost impossible to find safe moorings offshore that will allow the visitors to be ferried back and forth by tenders as it is done here in Grand Cayman. I believe that decision would be a very positive one and it would bring some degree of economic stimulus as far as the Brac is concerned, and the economy. I believe that the people of Cayman Brac would welcome Government in pursuing such a policy in that island.

Madam Speaker, I am going to speak on a subject that is of great interest to me: it is the area of the Cayman Turtle Farm. For the last three years I have been a member of the Turtle Farm Board. As you are all aware, the Minister for Tourism is the Chairman of that Board. What gets to me is that you get the opposition like the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and also the Fourth Elected Member for George Town—even though his colleague, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman does not give him credit for being a part of the opposition—actually calling for Caymanianisation. In other words, give Caymanians a chance to fill some of these senior positions. Then the minute you take a decision to provide that kind of opportunity to a qualified Caymanian, you have to answer all kinds of questions. Why?

Madam Speaker, I personally have no apologies to the Chamber of Commerce, to the Members of the Opposition, or to anyone with regard to the decision of the Turtle Farm Board in replacing Dr. Jim Wood as the Managing Director of the Turtle Farm. As I said earlier, I worked with that gentleman for the last three years: a very difficult man indeed. He did not want to follow directions. He is a person who wants to have his own way and when he does not, then he acts like a spoiled child. The mistake that he made, Madam Speaker, was that he tendered his resignation and thought that the members of the Board were going to run to him and ask him to take it back, as had happened on a previous occasion, I learned.

What I was also surprised to learn when I became a member of the Board was that that gentleman has no special qualifications in that area—none, whatsoever. He was strictly acting as the Farm's manager in providing budgets, watching the expenses and paying bills. It was his wife who was in the position to provide the scientific experience or background and support for the Farm.

But the decision to replace him as a managing director with a qualified Caymanian—that qualified Caymanian being none other than Mr. Atlee Ebanks . . . Let me remind the Members of this House as to that gentleman's qualifications: First of all he is a qualified Caymanian with many years of managerial as well as banking experience. So it is natural that somebody of his calibre would have been chosen to replace Dr. Wood in this case.

Because of our concern and interest to ensure that the scientific support continued, all the Board had to do, through the leadership of the Minister, was to utilise the qualified Caymanians that we have as members of staff at the MRCU. There are three or four of them there who have the necessary qualifications. I understand when Dr. Wood had a problem at the Farm there was a laboratory where he sent samples. That laboratory would send instructions telling him what to do. We can do the same thing here through our qualified Caymanians.

I have said many times, that our Caymanians are our worst enemies. We feel hard when we see a Caymanian climbing to the top; we want to know how he got there; it must be through pushing drugs or something else, right? I, for one, am a Caymanian and I feel proud when I see Caymanians getting an opportunity and taking advantage of it. I really do, Madam Speaker.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: I believe that this attitude of talking out of both sides of the mouth at the same time has to stop. If you have a genuine interest in Caymanians, you must push for their welfare: that is what we did in this case.

And we are not talking about any small pittance: between him [Dr. Jim Wood] and his wife they were probably earning in excess of CI$100,000 per annum, plus we were providing them with free housing, free transportation, and we took care of all their utility bills. He had a very good thing going, indeed. I do not find it hard to provide those benefits and opportunities to a Caymanian, especially someone from West Bay.

I recall on one occasion when the ex-politician (now have in mothballs in West Bay), who was Chairman of the Turtle Farm Board, approached me personally and said: "John, would you consider coming on as a member of the Turtle Farm Board because I am going to replace McKeeva." I asked him why. And he said because McKeeva did exactly what we are doing right now—questioned this man. He wanted him to be accountable for some things that went on in the organisation. Do you know what happened? The former Member/Chairman went as far as changing the Laws that required a member from West Bay to be a part of that Board in order to eliminate my colleague from West Bay. So, in the past 20 years he has had full sway with regard to the running of that Farm.

What has happened since he has been replaced? There is a totally different atmosphere among the staff. I doubt that in the 20 years that he was the Managing Director he had more than one or two staff meetings. He never gave the staff an opportunity to air how they felt about anything. One of the first things the new Managing Director did was to have a staff meeting. During Christmas time he took the staff on an outing, and expressed to them how much he appreciated their efforts with regard to their work at the Turtle Farm. The atmosphere has totally changed.

The other thing that has happened is that for the first time in this country there is a possibility of getting a couple of pounds of turtle meat—that was not possible before—delivered to your district. The Managing Director told me the other day that when the Honourable Minister recommended that some district policy be implemented with regard to the distribution of turtle meat, I think, North Side, East End, and Bodden Town, their particular allotments were taken out and members of the public were told when it would be distributed. When they got there, there were lines in place with people waiting on an opportunity to buy some turtle meat and within a matter of minutes those portions were all gobbled up by Caymanians.

Madam Speaker, I believe that the changes that have taken place at the Cayman Turtle Farm have been very positive; they have been in the best interest of Caymanians. I have no apologies to Dr. Wood, the Chamber of Commerce or anyone else, including the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, who seems to be the voice in here now for all these different special interest groups.

Madam Speaker, I am going to do my poll on my ratings of the performance of Ministers of Executive Council. I believe that my poll will be more objective than the one conducted by the Chamber because I am still of the opinion that when the National Team supporters received it in their mailboxes maybe they are put in the garbage and the responses were from supporters of the Opposition.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: How come they made you number one then, John?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: So, Madam Speaker, as far as the Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning is concerned, I believe that he should be given an "A+" rating for his performance over the last three years. He is on the right track, and I believe that between now and 1996, a lot of people are going to be disappointed that their plan with regard to his re-election and the re-election of the Members of the National Team is not going to come about. We will win at the polls in 1996. I have no question about that.

What is important to me as a Member is not any popularity contest, I am not in here for that reason, Madam speaker. So, it does not matter to me what kind of rating I received as far as the Chamber of Commerce is concerned. What concerns me is that I have the support and confidence of my people, especially the people of West Bay.

If with that information the Chamber of Commerce arrived at its polling, as far as my rating is concerned, then I welcome that, but that is what is important to me. Come 1996 when the four Members of West Bay, along with the other Members of the National Team in the other districts, are returned then that will be gratifying as far as I am concerned. That is the real creme of the pudding. That is where it counts. The Chamber of Commerce does not vote for me in West Bay, Madam Speaker.

So, as I said, I believe the Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning has done a good job with regard to his responsibilities over the last three years and much has been done for the improvement of tourism since he has been the new Minister.

The Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. Madam Speaker, I must also congratulate the new Minister for his revolutionary approach to his responsibilities. I am very pleased to see that he is moving ahead with plans to provide our people in this country, as we, the National Team promised, with a first-class health facility in George Town. Construction will be done in phases in order to continue the operations of the Hospital. I understand that we are supposed to break ground later this month.

I was very pleased to see the number of services that will be included in this new facility. Not being a medical man myself, some of these things do not mean anything to me, but I got the impression that all these areas of service will be adequately addressed by the Minister with regard to this new facility.

Madam Speaker, I believe that time will prove this to be a very valuable and prudent decision, first of all, to stop the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital, where the contract was signed on the eve of the Election, in order to attempt to put us into a position where we could not do anything about stopping the construction. But, we were true to our words, we stopped it; and we are now in a position where we are going to provide the people of this country with a first class health facility.

I am also pleased to see that the Drug Counselling Programmes are moving ahead and are being expanded. I believe that it is important for the Minister, and us, to work toward. I know that part of his overall plan for our people who are hooked on drugs is for counselling sessions to be offered on the district levels. I recall many persons from my own district who have a genuine interest in taking advantage of those services; persons who are not in a position to do so because transportation is lacking and there is no sure way of getting back and forth to the sessions. If the sessions are offered at the district level it would be much more convenient for them to attend.

I am also pleased to see that the Honourable Minister is moving ahead with the National Health Insurance Scheme, and it is hoped that by the end of November we will have our health insurance plan in place.

So, Madam Speaker, I believe that during the short period of time that the new Minister has been responsible for Health he has done a good job, and I would like to congratulate him and encourage him to keep up the good work; keep the focus on the objectives and do not get side-lined between now and 1996. So far, Madam Speaker, his performance also warrants an "A+" rating.

Madam Speaker, my colleague the Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture, has come under a lot of criticism for his plans and programmes. Now, I believe that the Minister is on the right track, in that one of the first things that he had to address was the issue of providing our young people in this country with wholesome alternatives. The best way of doing that is through the area or venue of sports. The only way he and the Government were in a position to do that was to spend some money on sports. On occasion I attend a game at the Ed Bush Playing Field and I feel justly proud of the facility that we have in our district.

Just last week I was in George Town near the Community College and I was amazed to see the progress that has been made in regard to the new sports complex for the George Town District. Madam Speaker, these are facilities that are badly needed and should have been done 20 years ago. I believe that any criticism with regard to these facilities by the Opposition is totally unwarranted.

Because we had the proper facility in place last year, and because there was a commitment in place from the Ministry with regard to sports, the Cayman Islands defeated the Jamaican soccer team. We have had some very exciting matches at the Ed Bush playing field.

One of the things that we have pushed for, and the new Minister approved, is to ensure that Government will now make an investment with regard to the employment of proper coaches for all the major sports in the country, that is: football, basket ball, netball and all the other sports that so many of our young people involve themselves in.

I was also very pleased to attend the recent game between the Cayman Islands National Team, the Under-19 Boys Team, and the visiting Jamaican National Team of the same age-bracket, to see that for the first time—because the Minister had the foresight to invest money in sports facilities and recruited a qualified coach for basket ball—to see that we were successful in winning the match; not once, not twice, but three times we won the match, beating the Jamaican team in basketball. That was very gratifying, indeed.

So, my advice to the new Minister for sports is to forget about what the critics are saying and move on with his programmes in that area because the young people of this country enjoy and appreciate the new facilities which are being made available to them. Prior to now, for a country that boasts of so much economic success to have been in a position where we had the kind of sporting facilities which existed prior to now, was totally unacceptable. We were not in a position to invite any teams from any area, be it soccer, be it basketball, whatever, to the Cayman Islands because we did not have any adequate facilities.

So, Madam Speaker, this Government is committed to an investment in our young people, and I say to the Honourable Minister, who is my colleague, keep up the good work and I guarantee that at the end of this term we will have no problem in West Bay being re-elected as a team.

I am also pleased to see that plans are well in hand to recruit another qualified person who will be working with the Labour Department. I think this person should have an accounting and/or auditing background to enable him along with other members of staff to go into the respective properties to ensure first of all that our tourist accommodation tax is being properly calculated and collected.

Also, to ensure that the provisions of the Labour Law are being carried out, especially with regard to the distribution of gratuities among our people, because at the present time there is much abuse in this area. What happens? Prior to now, basically all you could do was talk about it and as a result our people suffered from the lack of payment of these funds which rightly belonged to the ordinary members of staff that were being paid to management.

So, I believe that this will improve and strengthen the services of the Department of Labour. All that has to take place is that they go in and do an inspection of some of the properties, and if there are violations see to it that those violations are corrected, management is penalised for their behaviour, and believe you me, the message will be spread that the Government is serious about insisting and ensuring that we get for our people what they have so rightly earned, that is, their wages and their gratuities.

I was also pleased to see that plans are in place to look at the minimum wage legislation. I think we have to be very careful with this, but I believe that something has to be done because of the ridiculous wages that I see being offered, especially in the hotel industry for maid services. A lot of times that is an attempt to discourage Caymanians from applying because one thing about a Caymanian, he does not mind working but he wants to see what he is working for by way of salary. I believe that it is time to pay some attention to a minimum wage in this country.

One of the things that I have pushed for since being elected in 1988, is for district libraries. I think public libraries play a very important role in any society. A library encourages young people to visit its facilities to do home work, to do whatever research they may need done, and it provides a studious environment for those persons who are interested in academic accomplishments. It also offers a place where members of the district can visit just for relaxed reading. I welcome the plan of converting the district town halls into district libraries once civic centres are available in all districts. So, I look forward to seeing a proper public library in the district of West Bay.

With regard to sports, I would just like to add my vote of thanks not only to the Minister, but to congratulate Mr. Tony Scott, the president of the Basketball Association to coach Victor (Voot) O'Garro and members of the Under-19 National Team for their recent success against Jamaica.

Madam Speaker, it does not stop there, because next month the Cayman Islands will be hosting the CARIFTA Games and the CARICOM Under-17 Basketball Championships right here in Grand Cayman. That speaks well for this Government. I am also pleased to see in West Bay the Scholars Community Park, the facility for the West Bay Heritage Day Committee, and the Softball field and the cricket pitch will be completed shortly, as well as there will be additional toilet facilities and upgrading at the Ed Bush playing field in West Bay. So, Madam Speaker we have much to be proud of in the area of sports and the other areas that my colleague is responsible for. I feel as well that he must be given an "A+" for his performance as a new Minister.

I recall before he took a position on the Executive Council that there were many who said that he could not handle it, that he did not have the educational background, he did not have this and that. I think that the Minister has done well in carrying out his responsibilities, despite all the opposition and criticism that has been levied against him.

Next, I congratulate the Minister for Education for his revolutionary approach to education, which offered the widest possible public input. It took a little time, but I must say that what has been accomplished, relatively speaking, has also been accomplished in a short period of time. At the end of the day—whenever those new plans are implemented—one thing the Minister should not be accused of is preventing anyone with an opportunity to offer input. I think that because of that approach the Education Plan has the support of the general public. For the Minister to get the kind of marks that I saw the Chamber of Commerce reflect in its poll, was totally unrealistic and biased because he has done a good job.

His accomplishment at Cayman Airways stands on its own. It does not need any comment from me. Basically what he has done with Cayman Airways is exactly what I contended since 1986 when I was an employee with the company—that with a fairly substantial Government subsidy—and I look at an investment in Cayman Airways the same way I look at investment in tourism—it is money well spent. But, because of the measures that have been taken since he took office as the Minister responsible for Cayman Airways, that airline is now in a viable position where it can compete and it is able to carry itself financially. That is all the people of this country were asking with regard to Cayman Airways, and it has been accomplished by the Minister of Aviation with the support of the Members of the National Team.

I was somewhat flattered by the recent rumours that were propagated by The New Caymanian, entitled "Will Johnny be the New Managing Director?" or something to that effect. But what concerns me is that there were no attempts from any journalists from the publication to reach me to say: 'John, I want you to confirm whether or not it is a fact that you are being considered for the new Managing Director's post at Cayman Airways.' No attempt was made, Madam Speaker. To tell the truth, I have a good mind to sue them, because I believe this was mischief on the part of the Opposition in trying to make the people of West Bay believe that one of their representatives, who they elected in 1992, was now suddenly considering giving up that responsibility to go run Cayman Airways. Nothing could be further from the truth. One thing I did feel proud about was the fact that they considered that I was qualified for the position. But I have no intention, whatsoever, of giving up my position as an Elected Member for the district of West Bay until the people say it is time for me to step down and give maybe some younger blood a chance. From all indications that will not be any time soon.

I must also congratulate the Minister who sits as Chairman of the Civil Aviation Authority for his role and the Authority's role in regard to the new extension at the airport. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, and Works under whose responsibility the Public Works Department falls, has come in for a lot of criticisms. A lot of it was probably warranted, a lot of it is unwarranted, but I must truthfully say that the only compliments that I have received with regard to that new extension have been very positive. It accomplished and addressed the concerns and the needs of both the public and the Civil Aviation Authority.

The Civil Aviation Authority was concerned from the standpoint of public safety as far as the aircraft was concerned; the public was concerned, and rightfully so, the merchants in the area that maybe they would lose business if the road was shut off. But a happy medium has been found. What has been done in that area was a face lift, and it is something that we can all be proud of.

So, Madam Speaker, I would rate the Minister for Education and Aviation at the "A+" level as well. He has done a good job, and I say to him continue to do what he feels is in the best interest of this country. Like the rest of the National Team Members he will have no problem at the polls in 1996 with respect to re-election.

The Ministry for Agriculture, Communications, and Works, Madam Speaker, covers a number of areas. The one area that I would like to offer my congratulations to the new Minister on, is the Postal Department. I believe the appointment of the new postmistress was a very wise one and with the support of the Ministry no one can say that there has not been a substantial improvement regarding the postal services.

Now, when I walk into the post office, especially the George Town Post Office, I feel proud. It is a modern facility that serves the public well, and the public have only positive comments about the improvements.

He continues to do a good job especially in the area of agriculture, which is his first love, like myself. If I had my way, Madam Speaker, that is what I would have done as a career. I love farming, I love to see things grow, and I love to plant things. It is very rewarding come harvest time when you can say you grew a particular pumpkin, or whatever it was.

I must say that we have come a long way in this country in regard to agriculture. I had the opportunity along with my wife to attend the Agricultural Fair. I was very pleased to see the quality of products on display—first class. It was better than any that I have seen in any grocery store in this country as far as imported products are concerned. I believe that is one area that we can probably work towards being self-sufficient in—the area of agriculture.

I am aware that the Department of Agriculture is doing much to assist farmers by way of new methods of growing, as well as providing feed and other support for the farmers.

Madam Speaker, I also believe that the Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works is doing a good job. He is an old veteran at the job, and with all those years experience he has to know what he is doing. So I believe that the people of the district of East End can be rightfully proud of their representative, and I think that the country as a whole can be proud to have a man of that calibre in charge of this very important area.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.43 PM
PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.08 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay, continuing.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break I was dealing with the Ministry for Agriculture, Communications and Works. I would just like to add a couple of additional comments in this area.

On telecommunications there are plans in place to establish a 911 emergency system, whereby if there is an emergency of any nature all someone has to do is remember one number. At the present time there is a degree of confusion because there is one number for the Fire Station, one number for the Hospital, and probably another for some other emergency unit. But, when there is one central number that you can dial and the call is relayed to the respective department, I think that it better serves the public and it makes it easy for them to remember the one emergency number. So, I congratulate the Minister for his foresight in this area, and I believe it is a very positive development.

I would also like to add that with regard to the Public Works Department which as I mentioned before is so highly criticised by all, that during the last year the Department more than pulled its weight in the area of road works. I recall that we had something in the region of $5 million in the Budget for road works in the respective districts. They were called upon to do the new diversion to the Airport, and they were called upon to carry out a very extensive maintenance programme with respect to schools.

So, the Public Works Department, as I said, did an excellent job in carrying out its responsibilities. I believe that the Minister and his staff have to be congratulated on their high level of performance.

The only thing that I would like to add with regard to road works, Madam Speaker—and I touched on it a bit this morning—is the nonsense that was raised in regard to private roads by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I recall that in the last Session there was a motion attempting to censure the Government...

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I am going to ask you to refrain from continuing any further debate on that issue, because this is the second time during this debate you have raised it, and it will be coming up later for discussion. Thank you, very much.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Madam Speaker, I will wait until that Motion is filed to offer my additional comments in that area.

As I said, I think the Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works should be congratulated on the level of performances by his Ministry. I would also give him an "A+" rating on his performance for carrying out his responsibilities.

Madam Speaker, in conclusion, the Governor touched on the issue of the Civil Service and some of the rumours brought about from the misconceptions of certain members of the public, including the Opposition, regarding political influence on the running of the Civil Service. He set the record straight in saying that the changes that have taken place in the Civil Service were his doings, because he was responsible.

I would like to add that we do have a good civil service. We have some very dedicated, very loyal and some very qualified people in the Service. Many of them are Caymanians and we can be proud of them. But I believe it is time for us to look at the Civil Service as a unit with regard to further upgrading the quality of service that civil servants offer to the public.

I was personally pleased with the exercise that was commenced by the Governor shortly after the 1992 Elections in trimming the Civil Service, and the consolidation of certain comparable departments in order to reduce costs and to reduce the size of the Service. I recall that the savings as a result of that exercise, which was not completed, was in the region of about $3 million a year. But, I believe that the exercise did fall short of where it should have stopped, and it is an exercise that I believe should continue.

I, for one, as a representative, would like to be in a position where I can adequately reward those civil servants who are doing a good job and who should be recognised for their performance. But it is impossible to do that to the extent that we would like to as legislators because of the mere numbers involved. We are talking about three percent or five percent increase in salaries, for example, amounts to millions of dollars. What I would recommend is a Civil Service that is relatively small, highly qualified, well paid, and one that is capable of providing a first class service to the public.

Madam Speaker, I believe that it is time for us to look at the levels at which returning graduates come into the Service because at the present time it is too low. Most of them go in at the clerical officer level and after spending four or five years at University to start at the same level of some colleagues who did not take advantage of the opportunity is pretty discouraging, indeed. It discourages the qualified Caymanians from looking at the Civil Service for a career, and then you find that the Service is in a position where it only attracts persons who are unable to find suitable employment in the private sector. So you end up employing three people to do what one qualified person could do if he were in a position to be attracted by the Civil Service and could look at the Civil Service as a career.

It is time for Government to look at the Civil Service from the standpoint of decentralisation. When you look at the Budget, for example, you have no idea what a department costs Government to run because there are certain expenses that are consolidated under respective portfolios, rather than looking at the costs for the Tourism Department, not only in salaries but in rent, utilities and all the other expenses in operating the service. I believe that if you put civil servants in the position where they are responsible for their budgets, we would develop the management skills and end up with a much better civil servant.

Also, there is a need for definite career paths in the Civil Service for new employees, especially your bright, young Caymanians who may be interested in a career in the Service. There should be a route they will take that will also show where they are intended to end up, as far as a senior office is concerned.

I believe that a lot can be done to improve the Civil Service as far as the numbers and the quality are concerned. And it should always be our objective to work as a unit towards providing a Civil Service that we can continue to be justly proud of.

Madam Speaker, the last issue I would like to deal with in my debate is culture—or maybe it could be called art. Basically, what I will address is the issue of foreign artists visiting this country. We still have a lot of decent residents in these Islands who continue to feel very strongly about our conservative way of life, and people who continue to support the basic principle of honesty, decency, respect for one's elders and emphasising the idea of hard work in order to achieve what one wants in life.

I believe in this country—and I think it was shortly after we allowed Maxi Priest to perform here—prior to that anyone wanting to visit the Cayman Islands, if he was a dreadlocks he had to conceal his hair by putting it under a cap or something. I remember that for many years the policy was in place of not allowing artists of that calibre to this country. But because of political pressure, and all the other reasons (I guess), we decided that it could not be that bad so we allowed him to perform here.

Then I remember an act at the Treasure Island Resort where this gentleman named 'Savage' came in, and his act consisted of a chain saw and a snake—all in the name of entertainment. And I think it has been culminated, this past week, with the visit of an artist by the name of Patra.

Madam Speaker, there are two things that I would like to mention. The first is that if the Caymanian Compass does not have any more responsibility on any other issues of more public interest than going up to the concert and interviewing someone of that calibre, and taking photographs for public viewing of an artist like that, then I say, 'shame on them!' Shame on them, Madam Speaker. I say shame on any government that continues to tolerate that type of person in this country under the pretence of entertainment.

It was quick to be pointed out that this is not a responsibility of an elected Member of this Government. I do not care if it is or not. The elected Members of Government, including the Members of the Backbench, the National Team Government, got the blame for allowing that thing into the country—even though I understand that the responsibility falls under the Chief Secretary, and he is required to issue approvals for artists of that nature. In all fairness to the Chief Secretary, I understand that he also had a commitment from the By-Rite Cricket Team, who, I understand, was responsible for bringing her in, that she would tone down her act while she was performing here in the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, if what I saw was toned-down, then God help us, because we do not need that kind of thing in this country. There are enough wholesome activities to amuse us, rather than resorting to that kind of activity—all in the name of money.

I might not be a very popular person for saying this, Madam Speaker, but I am calling on the Elected Executive Ministers of Government to see to it that some type of board or committee is established consisting of persons who are appointed by Elected Members of this House. The purpose of this is to see that any applications of this nature in the future are vetted by this Committee and approved only when the Members are satisfied that the performer coming falls within those specifications that we regard in this country.

I believe that the committee should consist of members of the clergy, it should have an elected Minister also as a member of the committee, along with a number of other conservative, responsible people of our community.

What really concerns me is—and I was not aware of this because I do not go to nightclubs or those kinds of places—for our juveniles to be exposed to that type of performance. Then people ask why we have problems with our juveniles. No, Madam Speaker. It is time for us as Government to put our feet down. We have become much, and I emphasise, much too tolerant in regard to foreign influences in this country. Much too tolerant!

We also have on our books Decency Laws where, for example, persons going into certain public places must be dressed a certain way. Those laws are not enforced. How many tickets have we seen written for people who are indecently exposed? None! The Police, rather than stopping persons on the street who are sparsely clad and notifying them that they are indecently dressed, they gape at them like everybody else.

The Speaker: Honourable Member it is now 4.30 PM. I assume you will be finished shortly. You have about 12 minutes before the expiration of your four hours.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Madam Speaker, I would like an opportunity to finish this afternoon, if possible.

The Speaker: I have no objection. Would Honourable Members allow the Member to finish?

The Speaker: I think there is a consensus that you may finish. Please proceed, Third Elected Member for West Bay. You have 12 minutes, would you like to complete your contribution?

Thank you.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Madam Speaker, I am sorry that I have so little time, but I think it is time for us to put our feet down. I really do. Believe you me, I do not support or admire people like the former Ayatollah Khomeini. I think the Third Elected Member for George Town was telling me that on a visit to Mexico they were told before they arrived what was expected of them as far as dress code was concerned.

In the name of tourism here in the Cayman Islands, we accept anything. A lot of decent people are concerned, and they are mad, Madam Speaker. They have a right to be and I share those concerns. It makes me angry as well. I believe that as the elected representatives of the people, we must say enough is enough. Continue to welcome people here to this country who have a genuine interest in coming here to enjoy their vacation or to do business while they are here, and even continue to welcome entertainers who are prepared to comply with our way of life here. Or, we say: 'You are not welcome.' I have no problem with that at all, Madam Speaker. But I believe this is an issue that has to be addressed.

One of the comments made to me was that we have provisions in place with regard to planning as to how a house should be built and how far from the fence it should be. We have legislation in other areas to make sure that things are done according to the way we want it, but in the area of performers and advertisements there are no restrictions because we are scared to be accused of depriving someone of their freedom of expression. Total nonsense, Madam Speaker! Total nonsense!

We have to get on with addressing this issue, and put in place legislation to say how things are supposed to be done. Madam Speaker, if you look in the newspapers, on a weekly basis, there are advertisements from Sharkeys, Rumheads, and other establishments in this country that have such sexual connotations totally unnecessary in order to attract people to their place of business.

I say, once again, we must say enough is enough, and let us see to it that these genuine concerns of our people are addressed.

In closing, I want to congratulate His Excellency the Governor on the positive contribution as far as the Throne Speech is concerned. And I look forward over the next year-and-a-half that the National Team has in the Legislature, to continue working with them to foster and promote the interest of all residents in this country and, especially, looking out for the interest of our Caymanian people.

Thank you, Madam speaker.

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Planning, Leader of Government Business, to move a motion for the adjournment of the House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this House until 10 o'clock, Wednesday morning.

The Speaker: The question is that the House do now adjourn until 10 o'clock on Wednesday morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until 10 o'clock, Wednesday morning.

AT 4.34 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 15 MARCH 1995.

WEDNESDAY
15 MARCH, 1995
10.03 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Fourth Elected Member for George Town to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Order. Proceedings are resumed.

ANNOUNCEMENT BY

POLICE CONSTABLE MARK SCHOFIELD

The Speaker: I would like to take this opportunity to welcome Police Constable Mark Schofield, who is filling in for the Serjeant-at-arms, Mr. Glidden, on the occasion of the death of his brother. I am sure that Mr. Schofield will do a good job, although, perhaps, it is natural that he is a bit nervous, but he will soon overcome that.

Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question No. 40, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 40

No. 40: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs what is the financial arrangement between the Cayman Islands Government and the United States of America with regards to the Cuban asylum seekers being relocated to Guantanamo Bay.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the financial arrangement between the United Kingdom Government on behalf of the Cayman Islands' Government and the United States of America with regard to the Cuban asylum seekers being relocated to Guantanamo Bay, is that the United States Government will be paid US$10.00 per person per day as a subsistence payment while these persons are accommodated at Guantanamo Bay facility.

The precise details of the agreement and the method of payment are still being worked out. No requests for payment have yet been submitted and no payments have been made.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Member say, according to the numbers that have been sent so far, what sort of figure would be presently payable?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, there are currently 573 Cuban nationals at Guantanamo Bay as a result of this arrangement. Technically, we are accumulating charges at the rate of $5,730 per day. Unfortunately, how long they will remain there is a question that I am not able to answer, and in turn it is difficult to give a numeral projection of what the total cost will be.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Member say if Government has been, or will be, pursuing discussions with the United States in an attempt to have the Cubans who do leave the Cayman Islands to go to Guantanamo Bay eventually entered into the United States, and as early as is reasonably possible?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Certainly every effort will be made to ensure that those persons are moved on as quickly as possible.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Member give an undertaking that in discussions held by whomever on behalf of the Cayman Islands Government that we make some attempt to see that this figure of $10 per day could be reduced, or, for that matter, that we would not have to pay this, if at all possible?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Certainly, every effort will be made to minimise the costs, whether by virtue of reducing the unit cost or reducing the duration for which it is payable.

QUESTION NO. 41

No. 41: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member what is the total cost to Government, to date, for the maintenance of the Cuban nationals.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: The total expenditure for the maintenance of the Cuban nationals from 1st January, 1994, to 23rd February, 1995, was $2,115,190. There are commitments locally of approximately $450,000 which are currently being processed which will bring the total to just over $2,500,000.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Member say if these costs include identified cost elements among the various departments, such as Immigration, the Prison Services, the Police and Medical Services and so on, which would not have normally been there, or is this cost purely reflective of food and shelter and the likes for the Cuban nationals.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: These costs include some elements of expenditure which were incurred for which additional payments had to be made, such as overtime.

Costs, such as the Member referred to in respects of Health Care, which were provided from existing resources and without incurring any additional labour costs, for example, are not reflected in this amount.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Following on the reply of the Honourable Member, would it then be safe to say that the cost is definitely over $2.5 million if all of the various factors were factored in?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Madam Speaker, there would obviously be some additional costs if allowance were made for those services which were provided from existing resources.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Seeing that it is only about $150,000 provided in the estimates for this particular cost, if Government is indeed paying these bills, is it the case that bills are being paid from a suspense account or advance account from the revenue?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Madam Speaker, a facility referred to as a 'contingency warrant', in fact, two contingency warrants have been issued to date, and it is anticipated that the Finance Committee of this Honourable House will be requested in the very near future to consider appropriating additional money specifically for this purpose.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Temporary First Official Member could tell us if the Governor has full responsibility for these Cuban nationals, or does it fall under him and Executive Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the matter of the Cuban nationals is obviously one that relates to Internal and External Affairs, for which the Governor, under the Constitution, is responsible. Their care while here has been managed by Social Services, but he is ultimately, and in this case primarily, responsible for matters relating to the Cuban nationals.

The Speaker: The Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable Member would say if in this figure is included any financial assistance, say, from the United Kingdom.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, is the question whether the expenditure includes any expenditure which was met by funds provided by the United Kingdom Government?

Madam Speaker, I understand that the United Kingdom Government has not provided any direct financial assistance, they have provided assistance in the form of a staff member and there was some assistance provided earlier in the form of facilities for the establishment of Tent City. But there has been no recent direct financial assistance from the United Kingdom Government.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, as a matter of clarification regarding the answer prior to the last given by the Member, could the Member say if the Governor, in his sole right, has been making all the decisions relating to the Cuban nationals being here without the involvement of the rest of the Executive Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker, I do not think I said that he was making the decisions without any involvement of other Members of the Executive Council; I said he was ultimately, and in this case primarily, responsible for those decisions which were made.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 42, standing in the name of The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 42

No. 42: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member how many Cuban nationals are presently in the Cayman Islands as non-landed immigrants.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: There are currently 451 Cuban nationals in the Cayman Islands as non-landed immigrants.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Member say if, indeed, this figure is absolutely accurate in that various official announcements have indicated figures using the word "about" a certain number, rather than a specific figure. Can this be taken as the known exact figure of the number of non-landed Cuban immigrants in the country?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I did not do a count this morning, and I do not think anyone else did. But this is the current figure based on the number which arrived and the numbers which are known to have departed.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Only this morning I heard, quite reliably, that at least 10 more Cubans have landed in Cayman Brac, it could well be more. Would these be temporarily added to the numbers at Tent City, or the prison, or wherever and would these persons be repatriated, as can be done, straightaway?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I gather that there was a landing this morning, what the number is I am not certain. The policy currently in place is that those persons who land now are not in anyway eligible to be incorporated into the numbers at the tented facility. It is more likely that they would be temporarily housed at Northward; and, with respect to repatriation, that facility has always been considered, and it is one which will no doubt be considered again in respect to these latest arrivals.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Member could say when the firm approach, as mentioned in the Throne Speech, will be taken—to wilfully send the Cubans back? When will that be enacted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I am not aware of any timetable or schedule having been affixed to that approach over the last 10 to 12 days since the Throne Speech was delivered.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Member could make an undertaking to please express that I, personally, would like to see this put into effect as soon as possible?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Certainly, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Temporary First Official Member will give this House an undertaking that efforts will be made to transfer the recently arrived Cubans in Cayman Brac to a more secure facility in Grand Cay-man, as the last bunch that we had there created quite a problem.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Madam Speaker. Certainly, those who have landed in the Brac have always been moved on as expeditiously as possible. The last groups were of a new characteristic in that they were post September 1994 arrivals, and there was some considerable confrontation that went on as to what would be done with them.

These latest arrivals, obviously, are similar to the last and I do not expect that a decision on moving them will take as long as it took in respect to that last group of 34.

QUESTION NO. 43

No. 43: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works to provide a breakdown on material purchased (including supplier, quantity and price) for road construction since January 1993.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Since January 1993, to December 1994, material purchased for road construction included marl, crusher rock, chips, asphalt and hot mix. The supplier, quantity and price are listed as follows: (see Appendix)

These are based upon a hand-compiled summary based upon invoices from 1993 and 1994 and are the best numbers possible in the short time allowed to respond. Note that in some cases, the price includes hauling and/or placement of material. The foregoing list is for Grand Cayman only.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say on what basis local materials are procured?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communication and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, this is all done by competitive bidding, as I understand it.

QUESTION NO. 44

No. 44: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works to provide details of the arrangements between the Public Works Department and Quarry Products Limited regarding the design and construction of the realignment to Crewe Road and the Airport Road.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, due to the short time-frame given for the design and construction of the Crewe Road realignment, it was necessary to seek engineering and construction services in the private sector, and Quarry Products Ltd. as a supplier, assisted Public Works Department by providing some engineering services, aggregate and equipment.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
Can the Honourable Minister explain what is meant by "some engineering service"?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
A Quarry Products employee carried out the road design as directed by Public Works Department's officials and the decision on the choice of materials was finalised by Senior Officers.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister can explain to this honourable House why there was such a short time-frame given for the design and construction of this realignment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, I have been blamed in the past for not defending this road. I can defend the construction of the road, but as far as the decision as to when it was going to be built, Public Works has to be left out of that.

The decision was taken, and as everyone knows, the main thing with that road was the safety factor of aircraft coming into Cayman and especially knowing that one of the larger aircraft that has ever been to the Islands, Caledonian Air, was going to make its first trip on a set date (I cannot remember the date now) gave us very little time to play with. So this is the reason why it was necessary to do what was done.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

For the sake of clarity, I want to make sure the Minister is saying that the date of arrival of the Caledonian Airline was made prior to any time-frame received for construction of the road.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, I understand that a date was set for the plane to come in, yes, before the road was started. But as I pointed out earlier, the construction of that road is not only for Caledonian Airline, it is for the safety of all aircraft. It is a known fact that that type of aircraft comes to this country on a yearly basis for the air show, so it was not that the plane could not land. It was a safety factor, more than anything else, why that road was constructed.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say if the present design for the flow of traffic was designed by the Public Works Department or by Quarry Products?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
The Public Works Department.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say whether Quarry Products denied any responsibility for the design of the road on the basis that they claimed the road was designed by persons other than qualified engineers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would have to say that the Member will have to direct that question to Quarry Products. The Public Works Department, as I stated earlier, was the body that designed the road.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 45, standing in the name of The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 45

No. 45: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works to provide a list of the outstanding requests for street lights and road works in the Bodden Town constituency.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Regarding outstanding requests for street lights there are currently eight uncompleted requests.

1. Block 37E Parcel 28
2. Block 32E Parcel 61
3. Block 28E Parcel 134
4. Block 27D Parcel 346
5. Block 37A Parcel 88
6. Block 37A Parcel 104
7. Block 44B Parcel 123
8. Block 28D Parcel 192

However, in keeping with Government's street-lighting programme, Bodden Town proper was the first area outside George Town to be lit with high intensity 400 watt street lights late last year.

As to outstanding requests for road works, 12 projects have been identified for completion during 1995. These are:

1. Roy Bodden/Harvey Stephenson Farm Road (survey and clear) $70,000 (construction costs for this road were not budgeted for 1995, but would be approximately $691,330)
2. Bob Watler Road (relay and reseal) $31,000
3. Northward Junction realignment $39,000
4. Road off Cumber Avenue $2,900
5. Road off Northward Road (spray and chip) $16,900
6. Eden Crescent (relay and seal) $8,200
7. Farrell Road (Newlands) (relay and reseal) $18,000
8. Rackley Canal Road (spray and chip) $21,700
9. Arlene Avenue (relay and reseal) $22,000
10. Bodden Town Road (level and seal shoulders) $31,000

11. Belford Estates (marl patching) $2,000
12. Main road in vicinity of old Everglo Theatre (reseal and patch) $45,000

Total: $307,700

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Will the Honourable Member make an undertaking that the road off of Cumber Avenue receive early attention when this road work in the District of Bodden Town is being done, as the residents of this area suffer an acute problem, particularly in the dry times of the year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I can give that undertaking. I would just like to point out that this little road is one of the so-called private roads that we will be dealing with in that district.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister can confirm how many of these requests consist of private roads, and who initiated the request?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I listed 12 roads a few minutes ago which form a part of a list that was compiled after a visit in December by the Member posing the question, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, and Mr. Eden, my colleague on this side. From among those, there are several considered as private roads, including the one I just mentioned off Cumber Avenue and Belford Estates. There are another five or six, at least, that form a part of the actual list.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister can inform us as to whether it is going to be a policy of the Ministry, or of the Public Works Department, to gazette roads that are going to be maintained by Government in the future, including those that are being done now—those so-called private roads.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Yes, Madam Speaker, when a request is made, we will happily have it gazetted as was in the case of the Bob Watler Road. I understand that that was requested to be gazetted a couple of years ago, and the Roy Bodden Road was also requested.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Minister just mentioned 'by request.' I wonder if requests are made for roads to be fixed which are private and someone does not include in the request that the road be gazetted, is that something which Government takes on itself since it is, by way of repairs to the road, taking on the maintenance of that road?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: That is the process. If the road is brought up to standard by Government and funds are available it would be gazetted.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Minister say if requests for work on roads which he termed private roads are simply done by the Public Works Department without gazettal, and is it the ultimate intention of Government to take those roads over as public roads?

The Speaker: This will be the last supplementary, because I think we are going into the matter of policy and not talking about the Bodden Town roads. If the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works would like to reply to the last one, he may do so.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, let me point out that the roads which have come under heavy criticism recently, and referred to as private roads, Government sometimes has to fix roads as was the case of the ones I am mentioning. It was not that Government just went out and looked for roads to fix; it was because representatives of various districts have always made requests in areas where they see it as necessary, and poor people are suffering as a result of bad roads, to endeavour for Government to have roads brought up to standard. It is the same thing in the case of the list I just read in Bodden Town. Once the roads are brought up to standard by Government, and the funds are available which will be needed to have them gazetted, it will be done.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Statements by Members of the Government. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Development and Planning, Leader of Government Business.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

THE LOCAL CONTRACTORS' BILL

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The statement which I am about to read is titled "The Local Contractor's Bill."

Madam Speaker, Honourable Ministers and Members, it is important that I inform you that the Local Contractor's Bill which was drafted from suggestions which came to the Ministry from representatives of the Cayman Contractors Association, and which draft was discussed with Members of both the Caymanian Contractors Association, and Society of Caymanian Builders and Contractors, is only a draft.

The decision was taken weeks ago to put the Bill out for public input. That is, it will not be presented at this meeting of this Honourable House, but will come at a later meeting when all input from the public has been received and considered. In addition, regulations will be drafted which will indicate the mechanics of operating the provisions of the law. Both documents will need to be studied by the public in order to reach a reasonable decision regarding their contents.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Continuation of the debate on the 1995 Throne Speech.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker...

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE Standing Order 38

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I beg to move, under Standing Order 38, that the question now be put.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder for that?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I beg to second that Motion.

The Speaker: The question before the House is that the question be now put, and if so I shall put the question because we have been waiting for people to debate the Throne Speech. I think every opportunity has been given for people to do that.

[pause]

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour, please say Aye... Those against, No.

AYES AND NOES.

The Speaker: The "Noes" have it.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, could we have a division please?

The Speaker: Certainly, you may.
Division, Madam Clerk.

DIVISION NO. 1/95

AYES: 3

Mr. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. Gilbert McLean
Mr. Roy Bodden

NOES: 12

Hon. Richard Coles
Hon. George McCarthy
Hon. McKeever Bush
Hon. Thomas Jefferson
Hon. Truman Bodden
Hon. Anthony Eden
Mr. John Jefferson
Mr. Dalmain Ebanks
Mrs. Berna Murphy
Capt. Mabry Kirkconnell
Mr. G. Haig Bodden
Mrs. Edna Moyle

ABSENT:

Hon. Donovan Ebanks
Hon. John B. McLean
Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson

The Speaker: The result of the Division is 12 Noes, 3 Ayes. The Motion has, therefore, failed.

MOTION TO CLOSE DEBATE UPON THE THRONE SPEECH NEGATIVED BY MAJORITY.

The Speaker: I will now call upon a Member to continue the debate on the Throne Speech. Before I do that, I wish to recognise Students from the St. Ignatius School who are here to observe the proceedings of this House.

I hope that when they go away they will have a good impression.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I am glad to be able, since this honourable House has voted against the closure of the debate, to speak on a very positive Throne Speech. I am made to understand that this is the penalty that I have to pay for being a freshman on Executive Council; but I do it with great pride, as one year ago I was on the Backbench and this year I am on the Government side looking at many, many positive things that have transpired in the first two years of the National Team Government. I am very proud to be associated with this team, and I look forward to continuing to serve this country to the best of my ability.

As was mentioned in the Throne Speech by His Excellency the Governor, we have come a long way. No other Government in history has had to face the crises that our Government has with the influx of Cuban immigrants. I must say that we have come a long way.

There has been a major strain placed on the economy of this country. But, thanks to prudence under the leadership of our able Financial Secretary for the past two years we have been able to stabilise what was going on here and withstand this storm. I know that it will be with us for a while, but we will not give up.

I was made to understand this morning that more immigrants have landed on Cayman Brac. It is my understanding that with the agreement reached with Cuba, that those who left after a certain date in September can be returned by us to Cuba, whether they want to go or not. I feel sure that if they do not return as requested, we will be able to send them on shortly.

I am proud to read where His Excellency has said that Cayman is one of the more fortunate countries in the world with a standard of living and, perhaps even more important, a quality of life second to none. I am very proud of this and I must say that this Government has contributed quite heavily towards that stability which has come about in our islands.

I would like to take this opportunity to welcome our new Chief Secretary, although he is not in the Chamber at this time, and also his Deputy. I think they are very capable and I have had an excellent working relationship with both of them. They have assisted me through my first year in Executive Council with some very wise guidance.

I would also like to pay tribute to the departing Chief Secretary, Mr. Hurlston. I have a lot of respect for him and I wish him well in his endeavours.

His Excellency mentioned that an amendment was moved to the General Orders where the discrimination against female officers was removed. As this honourable House knows, one of the prime movers of this was the Elected Member for North Side, who continues to put forward her views without fear or favour. She does not have to depend on anyone to tell her what to do. She has been on conferences overseas for this Government and she has made observations that I feel will go a long way toward helping women's causes in this country. I think this country should be proud of her.

I must add, on another note in this same regard, that this change of including spouses has affected the planning for our overseas medical referrals, it has increased some. I know that in the last Budget [Session] questions were asked. But this is a small penalty to pay for equality for the women in our civil service.

In recent weeks we have had the addition of a new Police Commissioner. I am very impressed by this gentleman and I feel very optimistic for the future of this country under his leadership. I think he is taking the bull by the horns, and the process and procedure that he is using to get familiar with these islands is a very professional and competent one. I must also add that in recent times we have added a new head of the Drug Squad. A very impressive gentleman, he is a no nonsense man and since drug prevention is part of my Ministry, I look forward to a long relationship with Mr. Haines.

I know that it has been alluded to in the public that his predecessor may have been coerced into leaving from pressure within Government. This, Madam Speaker, is utter nonsense. This gentleman will tell the country that it was because of problems within his family, something beyond his control, and I would like to pay credit to the efforts and the reduction [in drugs] that Mr. Cutts brought about during his short tenure with this Government. I hope that if the opportunity ever arises, and he is able to get his situation sorted out back home, that we would be able to have him back at some level in the Cayman Islands, as he has proven to be a very capable and fine leader.

We keep hearing about crime being on the uprise. From reliable sources I have been made to understand that in the most recent survey done there has been a significant decrease in this area. With the addition of the many police that were added to the force just after this Government took over, I know that this will continue to decrease.

I remember just a few weeks after taking over the Ministry representations were made to Government in regard to increasing the number of police on the Drugs Task Force. I sat down and discussed this with other Members of Executive Council and without batting an eyelash we agreed to add six more to that. This is what this Government is about—dedicating ourselves to improving the Cayman Islands.

We constantly hear the crying of our police force. With your permission, Madam Speaker, I would like to briefly touch on an article which recently appeared in the Off-shore Financial Review, published by The London Financial Times, by a Mr. Tony Heatherington, headed "Cayman cops clean-up". As I relate this, it certainly does not sound like the Cayman Islands that I have constantly heard of in recent weeks being referred to by the Chamber of Commerce. I am wondering if they are living in the same three islands that I am.

"Something rather nice is happening in the Cayman Islands,... [and it goes on to say] On November 8, Cayman Police Officers led by Inspector Joseph Wood arrested York and two Amalgamated salesmen, Mr. Terrace Tater and Mr. Darius Dubash, as they prepared to leave the country. They were carrying well over $30,000 in cash.

"It would have been easy for a small jurisdiction to turn a blind eye to a fraud with no local victims. It happens regularly. But the Cayman Islands accepted the burden of investigating, arresting, prosecuting and finally jailing the three Canadians—much to their shock."

It goes on to conclude; "Two swallows may not make a summer, but I for one am happy to believe that the Cayman Islands has woken up to the damage that international fraud can do to the reputation of an Island which sees an awful lot of financial business." And they urged other jurisdictions to "please copy."

Is this the same Police Force that has received such poor ratings in recent surveys? Not to me, Madam Speaker. I remember in an interview with the past Commissioner of Police by CITN, when he was asked about the Cayman Islands, and he said that if he had a choice of living anywhere in the world without having to worry about crime, the Cayman Islands would be that country.

About two weeks ago our new Honourable Chief Secretary took the time to go with me, my colleagues, and other colleagues from the Eastern Districts, to visit the Police Station. This made me feel good, because even at this level concern is shown by the official Members of this Government. We visited and observed what was there, and I am firmly convinced that the commitment will now be there so that the Bodden Town Police Station will be manned 24-hours a day. I look forward to that for the people of Bodden Town and the other districts.

As was mentioned recently about the major problems which have developed in East End, I honestly feel that if this had been addressed earlier by the constant presence of the police in the area, the situation would have been dramatically reduced.

The Prison. As we saw on the report by Judge Tumin, quite a bit of credit was given to our Prison System. We know that there is still much improvement to be made. But we are committed to doing what is necessary to improving it.

I would like to pay tribute to Mr. McIntyre, who is one of the able gentlemen there working with our inmates, trying to help them improve. Until we can educate these people and show them the difference, prepare them to face the world when they are released, and show them the right direction, we cannot be successful in rehabilitating them.

About one month ago, I had the opportunity to sit down with the Director of Prisons and the Deputy Chief Secretary. There have been a number of people from Public Works, and I will call a name—Mr. Allan Moore—who have been spending time up there with these inmates trying to help them, teaching them about electricity, plumbing and mechanics. This is very admirable. I ask the Director and the Deputy Chief Secretary to continue this programme and to expand on it toward helping to prepare these prisoners to face reality when they get out and to find a better way of life.

I am proud to let the Honourable Third Elected Member for George Town know that the counselling that she touched on in her debate is now under way. The foundation is being laid and the counsellors are there gathering information, finding out what needs to be put together. I have been made to understand by the Director that a room will be provided where for five days a week, and more if necessary, Cayman Counselling Centre is willing to put people there. We will increase from one to two counsellors as soon as possible. We are dedicated.

We know that over 80% of the inmates are at Northward Prison because of drug-related problems; we must educate them. They have no choice once they have gone astray. It should be somewhere in the regulations that mandatory counselling be there. I know that if we can get to many of these young people and show them the difference and help them to prepare we can get rid of many of our drug problems and keep them from going back into surroundings where they have come from.

I look forward to the day when we can feel comfortable with those people who come out of there. The community must also give these people a chance and not look down on them; work with them and try to cheer them up and support them wherever possible.

I must give special credit to the Immigration Department as we all know the extremely heavy burden that they have undergone in recent months with the Cuban situation. I know that they receive a lot of criticism, specifically the Immigration Board. I do not know about the rest of the Members of this House, but I am proud of the representatives that we have there now. They are doing a fine job. They are not victimising people. I have had members from a prominent business institution who said to me that for the first time in recent history the Immigration Board is working along the lines where, when expatriates come in, a Caymanian must be identified to work along with them. Is this why they get so much criticism—because they take the time and effort to help Caymanise our work force?

It is good to note that in the near future Government plans to dedicate much effort towards helping Cayman Brac and little Cayman. We cannot and must not leave Cayman Brac out while we here in Grand Cayman forge ahead. They are part of us, we must assist them wherever possible.

I know that there are plans to fix up the Dock and to extend another dock out so that it will be possible for tourist ships to come in. I know that this will be welcomed by the people of Cayman Brac.

Moving on to Legislative Drafting: I would like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to our present legal draftsman for the mounds and mounds of work that he has churned out in recent times. Almost overnight he has been called on to produce many laws. I certainly hope he will get some relief with the recruitment of another member of staff soon. I have found him to be a very dedicated individual.

In regards to the Law Revision, it certainly simplifies, through consolidation efforts, to read these laws in their entirety. This is an admirable job put in place by the Honourable Attorney General's Office. We look forward to many more of our laws being put together in such an easy-to-handle fashion, rather than oodles and oodles of little pamphlets all over the place. I must pay tribute to them.

The Legal Department, as noted in the Throne Speech, was successful in the prosecution of the persons involved in the robbery of Cayman National Bank. Once again, positive results. For the first time in many years we have seen sentences appropriate to the crime.

The Portfolio of Finance and Development: There are not adequate words to give praise to this Portfolio of Government under the leadership of the Honourable Financial Secretary. He is extremely capable, but he does not sit on his laurels. He is always trying to improve things for our Cayman Islands to make it easier for us as citizens to live here, creating an atmosphere conducive for overseas conglomerates to want to come in here and do business.

Since I have been here there have been so many efforts put forward by him and these have not been toward directly taxing our Caymanians. These are ways that he has been able to formulate and put forward where the burden of having to fund recurrent revenue can be brought in from outside sources.

In 1994 the Portfolio of Finance and Development amended key financial services legislation, revised company fees and produced the Medium Term Financial Strategy and Public Sector Investment Document. A study of factors affecting global insurance rates and the Government's own insurance programme was also completed, and I look forward to the people receiving some benefits as we continue to work towards getting a reduction in the premiums which were placed upon us in recent times. It was a situation that was beyond his control, as it was said that the surrounding territories brought this on us and we had to share in their difficulties. But I know that he will not rest until these islands get some relief.

I remember when he introduced the idea of Mutual Funds last year. Once again, he demonstrated beyond the shadow of a doubt his ability to look into the future. There is now talk also—plans, not talk—for the development of a Cayman Islands Stock Exchange and further amendments to the Mutual Funds Insurance and Companies Law.

These Cayman Islands are looked upon as a leader in areas of regulations. We are no longer looked down on as a secondary place. We have put that behind us under his leadership and we are now within the top five financial centres in the world. Is this the same place that people are saying is not going in the right direction—according to some surveys? Shame on them!

I was pleased to note that in 1994 the Customs Department collected over $61.6 million. It is also good to note that they have brought in a consultant to further develop the manner in which customs duties are collected and to plug many loopholes which may have existed. This is the dedication of a good government.

Before leaving the Financial Portfolio, through you, Madam Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to give much credit to the Director of the Budget and Management Unit. It is in extremely capable hands. This gentleman worked in a team that did an inspection on the Health Services, and I must say that it was an excellent job that was done by all of those involved in that.

Continuing in the Financial Services Supervision, as I mentioned earlier about Mutual Funds, it says that their registration surpassed the 1994 Budget figures by 57%. This is not a small figure. "A total of 37 new Bank and Trust licenses were issued which after allowing for 14 cancellations 23 resulted in being added. This is the largest net increase in the past decade bringing the total to 560 banks at the end of the year [1994]." Does this sound like a country that the investor no longer has confidence in? Let us go back and compare this with previous administrations.

It makes me feel good to know and to see that that confidence is back. It is also good to note that within our list of banks, the sad fate of Barrons did not affect us, thank heaven.

Once again, more credit must go to the Treasury Department. We know, by looking at the Auditor General's Report, of the problems that have existed in collecting of Tourism Accommodation tax. That is being addressed. Over 54% of the 1993 figure substantially exceeded the Treasury target of 30%. Well done! It is amazing that a little government of this size achieved the target of paying all invoices one week after receipt. Madam Speaker, it is good to know that the funds were there, that we did not have to wait. I remember years ago when I was in the water business, when things were slow in this country (and I am not crying it down, it happens to all of us) sometimes we had to wait two or three months to get a check. I know that the people who do business with the Government must be very happy to see such a thing instituted.

I would like to touch on the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Planning. We must give great credit to the leader of this Ministry. We see poor marks for him in the Chamber of Commerce survey. But this does not make sense, as the figures and the facts are there—1994 was a record year for visitors to these islands. This just does not add up.

Once again, like other Members of this Government, he is not sitting there wondering what is going to happen next. He is out there selling the Cayman Islands, promoting the Cayman Islands, not just limiting it to North America and Canada and the region, but throughout the European and the Asian markets. The more tourists that come here to pay and assist us, the less taxation and burden we will have to put on our people because these are funds coming into our revenue that do not put a burden on our people of the Cayman Islands.

There is continued further strengthening of the property inspection programme to seek to ensure high standards for all visitor accommodation. This is very important because, as has been said, the Cayman Islands may be one of the higher-priced destinations. That is why it is important to ensure that everything is in place so that when the visitors come here the facilities are proper, that they are welcomed and comfortable. We must go that extra mile for them so that in another year or two they will return and also tell their friends about it. This is what the Cayman Islands has always been about—friendliness. We must continue on this road.

In addition will be the upgrading of rating and inspection procedures of the Hotel Licensing Board to attempt to improve on the product that we offer to our visitors.

I note that within the Department of the Environment a recycling programme is being developed with the introduction of recycling of cardboard and office paper. This, together with the mulching of yard waste will divert 32% of the main stream waste from the landfill. Once again, the Government leads the way in innovative ways to improve things in Cayman by reducing the size of our landfill which has, on occasion, caused problems because of the odour.

I must say that the young gentleman who is in charge of the department of the Environment is making every attempt to alleviate this problem. I know that there are plans to find materials to put over the landfill to reduce the odour. This will be welcome.

It is good to see the re-establishment of the Rodent Control Programme as we cannot sit and wait until that problem gets out of hand. The Government has gone forward to tackle this before it becomes a major problem again.

The Department of Environment plans to complete construction of its new office building and ancillary structures by December 1995. I welcome this, as the country knows that this part of the MRCU building which is being moved out will form part of the new hospital system. We welcome this additional space which will provide these Cayman Islands with adequate space for expansion into the 21st century.

The Planning Department approved a total of 585 applications valued at $137.2 million. This is no small figure for a small population of 30,000 people. I can remember in 1992 when we looked at planning approvals and they were down because there was nothing going on. People were all over the place looking for jobs. It is good to see that our Caymanians can once again get back to work and earn a good honest dollar. As a matter of fact, that increase was 24% over the 1993 value.

Much criticism was in place on the Development Plan Review. I remember the many meetings that were held in the districts and those that did not make their objections known cannot say that they did not have time. Once again, because this Government is in touch with the public, an extension was given for one more month and if they wanted to make objections, we would give them that opportunity. We are not here to ram things down the [throats] of the public, we are here to work with them and do what is good for this country.

It says that "The Central Planning Authority intends to undertake a number of electoral districts re-familiarization visits, with a view to producing area plans for each of the electoral districts." I know that this will be welcomed by everybody.

The Ministry for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture: Under the very able leadership of the Honourable Minister from West Bay, Hon. McKeeva Bush, we have seen great strides in every aspect of this Ministry. Just this morning someone was telling me that a few years ago, before he took over the Ministry, they were getting assistance from Social Services in the amount of $50 per month—a mere pittance. I think this is one of the first things he told the Executive Council that needed to be improved. It was brought up to $75, and in recent months it has gone up to $125 for the elderly. Is this the kind of government that people are saying is not in contact with the people? It is ridiculous!

I had the opportunity two evenings ago to attend the opening of his Young Parents Programme. I was very touched. We see the perception of this Honourable Minister in preparing a place for those very, very young teenagers, 12, 13, 14 [years old]. That was not accomplished by previous administrations. We know that anybody can make a mistake; we must be able to help them, not look down and shun these people and hope that the situation will go away. We must help them. And this is what has been done.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, will you take a suspension?

Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.33 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.55 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, continuing.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break I was looking at the many positive improvements in the Ministry of Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

The Crime Survey: It is pleasing to know that it is now brought back. It has been a very controversial subject and, for some unknown reason, when this should have been put into force sometime last year, there were some hiccoughs that developed. We have now been in touch with the person who is supposed to do this and, with the support of this Government, it should go on to completion. Through this we are hoping to find out many of the underlying factors which seem to contribute to the development of certain areas of crime within the Islands.

Trade and Labour: I will venture to say that never before in our history has a Minister responsible for this area paid such close attention to our labourers and attempted to try to improve their standards. I know that underway within his Ministry is the Minimum Wage Advisory Committee which has been appointed. Without a doubt, this will be very welcome by many of our underpaid Caymanian labourers out there. A number of people from within my constituency have come to me saying that on occasions they have been denied payment for public holidays, like Christmas and Easter, which most people, for instance in the banking industry, take for granted. Yet those who work so hard out in the hot sun mixing cement and laying steel are not given the benefit of these days. I certainly hope that this will be addressed in this Minimum Wage Advisory Committee.

The Housing Development Corporation: I remember when this was brought to the House last year, the doomsday sayers said it could not work. But, as we have been told, right now over 30 of our own less fortunate Caymanians who did not have that necessary down-payment of up to 35% were able to take advantage of this scheme that has been put in force by this Government. Over the next few years there will be over $20 million available for our Caymanians to take advantage of; whereas before they had no chance to qualify at any of the big commercial banks. If they did not have that big deposit to put down, they would not be looked at.

This has been addressed under the leadership of this Minister. Many Caymanians have gotten relief and I feel sure that in the very near future this will be addressed in even more detail where even lower schemes can be put together for those that cannot afford any major repayments on their mortgages. This is what a good government is all about—looking toward helping our people, making things better for them.

Sports is probably one of the most controversial areas in government, an area that receives more criticism than anything else. It is very hard to believe that people will try to put down what is being attempted in the area of sports. I know that it can be revealed that over the past few decades the multiple millions of dollars which have been spent on the provision of police, prisons and other facilities to put away the hardened criminal, whereas, if a foundation had been laid back then, we would not now be experiencing many of the problems that we are now experiencing.

It was good to see that for the first time in the history of these islands indoor basketball, and other sports, can be played because the base for the new basketball court was laid at the Lion's Centre. I remember just a few short years ago (four or five years ago) that there was a team that came from Belize, or one of the other South American Countries. They came during the rainy season and they could not hold their tournament because the Cayman Islands had nowhere for their young people to play inside. This made me feel bad to know the affluence that we experience in this country and yet we had no provision for our young athletes until this Government took over and provided us with an indoor arena. This is what it is all about, Madam Speaker—trying to help our young Caymanians.

Just a short time ago we hosted the Shell Cup and for the multiple thousands who attended that function, the electric feeling in the air, cheering for their Caymanian team which eventually beat the Jamaican team, for the first time in our history. Can you imagine where our athletes would be if we had taken the time years ago to provide facilities for them in which they could train, practise and prepare for competition? I say shame on those who would say that we are spending too much on sports. There can be no better investment than on our young people. They are the future of this country, and if we do not take care of them, and provide them with alternatives, they will continue to end up at Northward Prison.

For the first time in history the Cayman Islands will host the CARIFTA games. I have not been to the new facility at the George Town Sports Centre since its completion, but I am told that it is one of the finest sports centres, certainly in the Caribbean, and probably throughout the world. The base of the running track is similar to that used in the last Olympics. This is what this Government has provided for our young people.

We will also be hosting the CARICOM Under-17 basketball championships at the Lion's Centre in April. Once again, we will feel very proud of our young athletes.

With the acquisition of an excellent coach, in recent times the Cayman Islands was able to sweep a three game series from the Jamaican National Team. Does this not make us feel good, Madam Speaker?

Much has been said about the National Sports and Recreation Centre in Spotts. But I know that this is not something that will be done overnight—one year, two years; this is a master plan preparing for the future of these Cayman Islands—up to 10 years into the future.

Funding for this can be spread over a period of time. It will all be to the benefit of these islands.

I know that there is a prominent company willing to sponsor the development of an area for a park. I would urge other members of the community to get involved, to spend some of their vast sums to make things nicer and easier for people in our community. This is what working together in a community is all about.

Since this Government took over, specifically in my district of Bodden Town, under the guidance of the Minister and with the assistance and insistence of Mrs. Gore—a very special lady—through one of the service clubs, we have been able to have lights at the Bodden Town playing field. It made me proud to see how the field had been reconditioned, re-grassed. It is very attractive. Many of our young people go there and practise football. We are not finished. We will continue to provide facilities for the District of Bodden Town.

I know that there is a master plan for the playing field up by the civic centre. We have purchased land for that. We have started to fill it. The layout of the football field is a bit tight against one of the boundaries. So, with the support of my colleagues on Executive Council, we are looking toward purchasing another piece of land so that it can adequately fit in where we can have bleachers similar to the facility in West Bay. This is being done through a master plan and will not all be done at one time. But I can tell you that in the Budget this year there is over $100,000 to continue in this area in Bodden Town.

We are looking at continuing development of the Breakers Sports Field, and I must thank the Breakers Community Club for their time and efforts in doing a survey and an assessment to determine what is needed there. This will be presented to the Minister at which time action will be taken to improve this for the children of Breakers.

In reference to culture in the Cayman Islands, once again, under this Government, and for the first time in history, the Cultural Foundation hosted the Carib Art Exhibition—the largest travelling exhibition of Caribbean contemporary art—in January—February 1995. Some of the exhibits were those of our own Caymanian artist, Miss Lassie Bush from South Sound. I am glad that at her age she is being recognised, and I pay tribute to her.

I will now move on to Education and Aviation. As we all know this Ministry, like my Ministry, undertook a strategic planning approach for the development of education in this country. Representatives of this country in this honourable Chamber, along with all the teachers of the Cayman Islands attended the second annual National Education Conference which took place in November last year. The theme was Partnership—Education's Vital Link. We experienced the feeling of excitement and enthusiasm put forward by those teachers. I wonder if any of the members of the Chamber of Commerce took the opportunity to go there and witness firsthand what was going on, instead of writing absolute rubbish about being below average, et cetera, in regard to the Minister's efforts in regard to education.

Under the United Nations Development Programme the Cayman Islands will receive over US$400,000 towards the development of education over the next five years. As we know, this is the time period of the Strategic Planning. By putting this vehicle for assistance from outside entities in place, our Caymanians will not have to be taxed for education. This is what good government is about—not taxing our people. Some are complaining about the 25 cent tax on diesel. These are the same people that put it on. Oh, my goodness!

The results of our first attempt at the CXC examinations was historic. I must give credit to all of the teachers for the dedication that was put in. The results are evidence—one of the best in our history.

The Capital Works programme continues. In 1994 it included the laboratories and class rooms at the George Hicks High School, completed in the record time of 19 weeks at a cost of $1.78 million. The Community College new general studies block, which is being built to accommodate the Sixth Form group transferred from the John Gray High School was completed at an approximate cost of $1.2 million. Is this a weak attempt at improving the education in these islands? Providing the facilities and infrastructure? It does not make sense.

Construction has begun on two other projects: the hall, administration block and library for the John Cumber Primary School, in West Bay; four classrooms for the Red Bay Primary School; and an extensive maintenance programme was carried out in all the schools during 1994. The same is planned for 1995.

I know, specifically to my constituency, the Primary Schools at Savannah and at Bodden Town will receive over $154,000 in planned improvements. One of these very special areas that will be improved for the comfort of our children and their parents, specifically when they have their Christmas programmes, will be the air-conditioning of the two halls.

When it comes to scholarships the records show what this Government has done, and continues to do, about scholarships. I feel that I can safely say that there is not one child, not one student out there who wants to continue his education who will not receive assistance from this Government. This assistance will not come because of who one is related to, but because one deserves it. There can be no better criteria for helping our people than that.

Cayman Airways: For the first time in decades it has not been termed the political football. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman referred to the disaster that has been caused by giving away our 727s. That did not happen during our administration—that happened during the past administration. It has been noted that for the first time in a long time Cayman Airways now has a fighting chance to survive. I think it has been projected that, after the subsidies this year, a small profit will be realised.

By the acquisition of another plane to replace the one that was returned to ILFC, this country has been saved approximately $300,000. This is no small amount of money. This is money that can be spent on our Caymanians and our children. It is not like that 'sweetheart' deal that was put together by the last Government, which if it had been extended to the length of its contract, would have cost this country over $50 million. Thank God, that under the able guidance of a different managing director and the Minister, we were able to get out of that lease.

I know that the public will not easily forget how they talked about the billions that the 737-400s are going to realise for these islands.

I would like to look at the Ministry for Agriculture, Communications and Works. It is in order that the Minister be congratulated on another very successful Agricultural Fair. Up until this National Team Government took over two years ago, they were not having the Agricultural shows anymore. Within a short period of weeks after we took over, in 1993, the one that was held at the Lion's Centre was something to behold. The multiple thousands of people who attended were glad to see it return, and our Caymanians could once again enjoy the time spent there with their families looking at the heritage upon which these islands have been built. It was good to see the encouragement that was given to the farmers, the provisions that have been put in place to help them through difficult times. All I can say is, 'Keep up the good work.'

In regards to telecommunications there are plans to establish the E-911 system. This will be a far-reaching occasion for these islands when we will be brought up to par with countries like the United States where in a case of emergency one number can be dialled, and even if the person passes out the number can be traced and the ambulance service will be able to find them.

It is good to see that they are also planning to install a 200 foot tower in Cayman Brac to improve the service to both Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in the 800 Mega-hertz FM stations. We must not forget Cayman Brac, because in the long run no matter what happens we are all one people. If they have difficult times which are not addressed, Grand Cayman will eventually suffer. So, let us work together to improve Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

We have all seen the dramatic changes at the General Post Office in George Town. It is incredible what a few improvements in certain areas can do for a building like that. I know that the public welcomes it.

Probably the most criticised department in Government is the Public Works Department. But I must pay tribute to these very hard-working people. They have done very well under extremely difficult and trying circumstances, especially with the recent arrival of the Cubans. I specifically remember when a hurricane was coming and they had to move almost 1,000 Cubans from one location to another. We do not hear about them getting credit for this kind of thing. Let us be fair and stop putting them down.

I would now like to look at the last part where the Governor addressed the situation of the civil servants. And for the benefit of the public, I will quote: "I am, of course, aware of a rumour of outside interference, particularly in connection with the announced early retirement of two senior officers. This rumour has been conveyed to London recently. I think it appropriate to make the point that these retirements were the subject of discussions solely between myself and the officers concerned and that no-one else was involved or even aware that they were taking place." I, personally, can assure this Honourable House that I knew nothing about it.

As a follow-up to this, I would like to share with this Honourable House a few observations made by none other than Mr. John Redman of the Caymanian Compass, made in his article in the February 1995 Newstar. And I quote: "Civil servants are muffled by the Public Service General Orders which says that a Civil Servant cannot write, speak or broadcast anything which may reasonably be regarded as of a political nature or be interviewed on questions of public policy or on any matter of a political or administrative nature.

"This is not totally unreasonable, after all, civil servants are there to carry out the policies set by their political masters. They are supposed to be politically neutral, carrying out the policies of whom-ever is in power. If through their work they have knowledge which they feel suggests that a policy has weaknesses, they should approach the policy makers with their concerns, either directly or through their superiors. They should not air their views in public and undermine the credibility of the politicians. It does not look too wonderful to have civil servants criticising the policies they are supposed to be carrying out.

"This applies to the private sector as well. My publisher and editor would not be too pleased if I criticised editorial policy at the [Caymanian] Compass through a letter to The New Caymanian." I think this was a very well-written article.

I would now like to look at things within my Ministry, the Ministry of Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. It came into force about one year ago, and in just 10 months has laid the foundation for the achievement of major objectives in 1995, with the decision to undertake Strategic Planning for the Health Service, as well as the Drug Prevention and Rehabilitation Programme. This Ministry has detailed and costed plans for approval and implementation during 1995.

During this exercise, similar to the one in Education, we went into the districts and shared our views with the people on how we feel, that through Strategic Planning and the involvement of community members is the only approach for a plan to be successful.

We recognised that the Health Practitioners Law of 1974 is in need of considerable review and with input from professionals and the CIMDS we will be addressing that this year. As a matter of fact, the Legal Draftsman now has this in his possession, and I hope that later this year it can be brought to this Honourable House.

One of a number of things being put forward is the creation of three counsels—one for Doctors and Dentists, one for nurses and one for ancillary services. These are ideas being put forward by the professionals themselves. They feel that it is very important that this be regulated and that only people practising specifically within the Health Services field should be in control of such situations.

As the country now knows, we are in the process of putting together all of the details for the construction of the new hospital. A Master Planning Study Development was undertaken last year. It has been a very detailed master planning study. It was not a 'guesstimate', as was put forward by Mr. Ezzard Miller. When we shared some of these details with some of the architects, they said that the detailed work and the professional effort that was put forward in this was exceptional and extremely well done.

We have heard that we should not be going ahead with this in this area, but I feel that the mandate was given to us in the last election to go ahead at this time. This new facility will provide Paediatric, Physiotherapy, Maternity, Neonatal and Mental Health units as well as a Surgical Ward, Operating Theatres and a Maternity Operating Room. A Forensic Laboratory, Materials Management Building, Hospice/Geriatric Unit and Chapel. These will be among the new features.

In recent weeks the dialysis unit was becoming very crowded, so we had to find more space for that. Thanks to the Department of the Environment we have been able to utilise the facility in which they house their lab. I am hoping that on Friday afternoon they will be able to move in where much more space will be provided.

After speaking with the Chief Nursing Officer this morning I was informed that the space that was occupied in the present site by the Dialysis Unit can now be utilised for psychiatric patients. I must thank the Permanent Secretaries from the Ministry of Environment, Tourism and also the Ministry of Communications, and the quick work that was done by Public Works in getting the other site ready so that the Department of the Environment could move in their laboratory facilities. Once again teamwork taking place.

The Third Elected Member for George Town mentioned in her debate wondered if there was any opposition within the Hospital to the construction of a new hospital. I can assure her that to the best of my knowledge, and knowing the long hours that the doctors and nurses and other people working at that facility put in, they support what we are doing. They long for the day when they can be operating in proper facilities.

The selection of the architect was also questioned. I would like to say that when I took over the ministry a year ago I found them there, they were already in place; I inherited them. But I can see the reasoning and the logic for using them because there is no other firm on the Island more familiar with the hospital site than the firm chosen to do it. They have been over it many times. As a matter of fact, if we had to put someone else in there it would probably have cost this Government another $100,000 to get the background that this firm already has. I was not prepared to incur that expense for the Government. I can assure you that these very same people have assured me that the site that we are now building on is very adequate, and will take us well into the 21st century.

I will also say that the study done by these people cost less than $50,000; not $1.4 million as purported by Mr. Miller in one of his political meetings. This can be substantiated if anyone doubts me, Madam Speaker, through the engineering department at Public Works.

I fully agree with the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman that we need better facilities and as quickly as possible. We do not need a split-site facility, with the major part of that facility going into the swamp. Does he forget the thousands of Caymanians who paraded in front of this House in opposition to that move? We respected their wishes. As a matter of fact, in our National Team Manifesto our intention in regard to the Hospital is mentioned no less than three times. On the very last page in bold letters it says "We are against the building of the new hospital in the swamp and we will review the hospital plans and documents and accordingly take any necessary action which is legal and prudent."

We were elected on this precept, with the knowledge that if we did not do that we would be letting our supporters down.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: We would not have been doing our job.

I note that in his contribution to a debate on the Loan George Town Hospital Amendment Bill, 1992, on the 11th March (just three short years ago), the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said: "I have believed for a long time that the present Hospital can serve us for some time yet and that steps should be taken to improve certain areas of it to a certain standard so that the physical plant can be in a position to better do the job for which it was intended."

"Certainly the idea or suggestion that the present Hospital is to become a place, a very seconddary place, to what is envisaged as a new hospital, I do not agree with."

"In recent times the press and the local television programme have been carrying stories about the situation with the particular land in that area and various people are saying that the costs will be very high to develop that ... from what I can understand the fill alone will go into exceedingly large amounts of fill and money."

He was right because about a year later the estimate to put the fill in that area was over C1$1.3 million. That could have built several new buildings at the present site on a very firm foundation that would not be sinking down into the South Sound swamps.

Continuing, he said: "Madam Speaker, this situation is one where I think the Government has failed and the Member has failed..." That Member was none other than Mr. Ezzard Miller.

"When we reach the future and we are more clear of our present financial position in this country, then let us look at the situation of a new hospital." [Hansard 11 March, 1992]

I am glad to say that the future is now here and later on this year, within a few months, we will commence construction on this hospital site.

He also queried the dissolution of the Health Services Authority by this Government. As we all know, this wise decision has subsequently been substantiated by findings and reports shown in the Auditor General's report that was presented in this House a short time ago. For the clarification of the House and for the knowledge of the public, I will just briefly touch on some of these areas which have been the reason why this Government saw fit to stop the Health Services Authority.

The true value of pre 1992 Medical Fees receivables cannot be determined, estimated to be in the region of $4.5 million. "These debts are not being pursued by management and appear to be irrecoverable."

The authorised computerisation budget was overspent by a large amount, approximately $266,000 on computers for the Health Services Authority. These are some of the reasons why we had to do something about this.

Seven constituencies employed at a humongous cost of over $.5 million. The hurtful part of that, and it is recorded in the Auditor General's Report, is that six out of seven of those consultants resulted in literal total failure. To have left this monstrosity in place would have been the abnegation of our responsibilities to our Caymanian people. This cancer had to be removed, and removed quickly. That we did.

It was noted that during the Health Services Authority two-year existence, that it did not institute any formal financial regulation to ensure the regular and proper conduct of its business by management and employees. "So far as can be established, none of the consultants examined were advertised or tendered either in Cayman or overseas." As a matter of fact, one consultant was said to have been hired in contravention of General Orders. This is why we had to stop the Health Services Authority. This is what we found, and we had already stopped that when this had been subsequently revealed by the independent Auditor General of these Cayman Islands.

Consultants were paid expense allowances between $200 to $500 per day. This was more generous than the scheme for senior civil servants. A car allowance of over $250 per month was double that allowed for Heads and Deputy Heads of Departments. This is not me putting this forward, I must say. This is what was found by the Auditor General.

"Numerous other benefits provided in cash and/or services", which meant that some of these people were receiving over $120,000 per year. I am not sure, but I do not even think His Excellency the Governor makes that kind of money. Yet, we must leave in place something like this that was robbing this country blind? No way!

How long could this country have survived with this exorbitant spending? I suggest that if Mr. D. Ezzard Miller, had been left in charge and allowed the Health Services Authority to continue, the job of my very good friend, the Financial Secretary, would probably have been redundant by now. We would probably be under the International Monetary Fund or someone else; probably someone worse.

To think that we have people out there advocating Mr. Miller's return to politics in 1996, with some of his colleagues who, after four years of mismanagement had accumulated over $55 million in deficit spending before funding.

How long could this country have survived? I will say here that I saw an ad in the paper this morning. I see that my colleague from Bodden Town is having a meeting with Mr. Miller tomorrow night. It pains me—I will say that.

This is what the silent majority will remember in 1996—where we were when we took over, over $7.5 million deficit. They are now going to come back and say that they are going to be better than they were before? Rubbish!

I trust that with these few brief highlights as shown in the Auditor General's report the public will understand the reasoning behind the Government's closing the Health Services Authority. If we had not closed it, we would have no government to administrate. It could not continue the way it was going. Do not take it from me; anyone can pick up the Auditor General's Report and read these things.

I think that it is my duty as an Elected Member not only for the district of Bodden Town, but for these Islands, to warn the public about a person like Mr. D. Ezzard Miller. I attended a funeral Saturday evening, along with my colleagues. Of the hundreds of funerals that I have attended in this island, I was never so stunned in my life as when this gentleman made a tribute with political connotations. The people were stunned. I spoke to many of the attendees, and they said that they had never seen this kind of political chicanery at a funeral. Should we get ready to welcome this type of person back in 1996, to these hallowed Chambers? That is for the public to decide, but I feel that they will know what to do. So much for the Health Services Authority.

I would now like to go on to another area that is being developed by the Ministry, that of the Cayman Counselling Centre which, without a doubt, is desperately needed. Almost in every paper we read of judges and attorneys saying that the only way to help our young Caymanians who have been touched by the scourge of drugs is to provide a facility for them.

In July 1994 a diverse planning team of 29 persons representative of a broad cross-section of the three islands recommended that we strive to have 100% of the resident population free from drug and alcohol abuse and its ill effects with implementation of the Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation Strategic Plan.

One of the people serving on that planning team was the Elected Member from North Side. As a Minister I did not serve on that. I could not be there because the first thing we would have heard was that I, as the politician, was putting forward these ideas. For strategic planning to be successful it has to be coming from the people, with their input as to what they see and experience. They are the ones with the children. They want to make life better in these islands for them. This is what strategic planning is all about.

One of the nine strategies that came up was, and I will read it: "We will guarantee treatment and rehabilitation services and facilities to meet the diverse needs of individuals." That action team submitted 10 specific results which were accepted by the original planning team; 10 different diverse areas in which they felt anew by working along with a cross-section of people in the country. One of those is to "provide residential facilities for treatment and rehabilitation of substance abuse clients by, amongst other things, modifying the proposal for the residential treatment centre in Breakers to accommodate a primary and a half-way house programme. To renovate the main building according to the proposed plan." I think a lot of this has been done by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture. This will be implemented in the first year of the plan. With the approval of the Executive Council I have asked that this strategy be brought forward so that we can work on it as quickly as possible.

A brief overview of what we look forward to at the rehabilitation centre is that it will be instituted on the conviction that chemical dependency is a treatable illness with a good rate of recovery. The clients will receive a low cost, high quality programme based on the 12 steps of Alcoholics Anonymous, which combines a multi-disciplinary approach designed to ease the transition from primary treatment to community life.

The second phase of the facility will provide a half-way house designed to provide individuals with a supportive environment and a structured programme to bridge the gap between inpatient treatment and a return to everyday living.

I know that there is concern in the community about this being there. But the way it is envisaged is that it will be in a university dormitory setting with a combination of home and clinical assistance which meets the clients' needs of nurturing and professional help. These will be people who have made a determined effort to help themselves with assistance from professional counsellors. Residents will develop the self discipline and responsibility necessary to gain self acceptance and to strengthen their recovery.

Emphasis will be placed on five areas of their lives: Physical, Spiritual, Psychological, Social and Financial. It is felt that these are the guidelines considered for the prescription for wellness.

It is important to note that each year we lose someone to this dreaded disease of Chemical Dependency through drunk driving, domestic violence, birth of crack babies, and over 80% of prison populations are there from direct or indirect involvement with drugs.

Looking at placing a treatment centre in any neighbourhood may seem threatening, however, there are people actively using drugs in most of our neighbourhoods. Seeing that this particular disease does not discriminate, the rehabilitation centre would provide 24 hour care, random drug screening with a clientele that is not doing drugs. We cannot say that about some of the people in our neighbourhoods.

Treatment gives people hope where there was desperation, new direction and a reason for living. We can compare this disease with cancer, diabetes, tuberculosis, with an understanding that with these illnesses we do not put these patients out on a farm somewhere, secluded from everybody. We try to treat them and help them. This is what we are trying to do through our rehabilitation facilities.

These are not dangerous people, they could be our own sons and daughters looking and begging for help and guidance. It does not matter how much money we have, this problem can touch us all.

I will list a few of the benefits from a programme such as this: Reduction in crime, development of productive people, a decrease in the number of crack babies, decrease in jail population, decrease in death from the many accidents. This is just a brief outline of what we have planned for the next few months with the development of the counselling centre.

The Cayman Counselling Centre has reinstated the counselling programme for inmates at Northward Prison and we plan to add one more person.

I would like to briefly touch on the Health Insurance Programme. The Third Elected Member for George Town asked some questions about that. We are actively working on that and as recently as yesterday afternoon a meeting was held. Many good ideas are being put forward and I look forward to bringing to this Honourable House, and to having in place, a sensible insurance programme for these islands.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, may I interrupt at this time?

It has been the consensus of members that we should adjourn for the day at 1 o'clock, to enable those who wish to attend the funeral to do so.

At this time I will ask for the motion for the adjournment. Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Planning, Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this House until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 12.57 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 16 MARCH 1995.

THURSDAY
16 MARCH, 1995
10.08 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

Questions to Honourable Members/Minister. Question No. 46, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 46

No. 46: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs how much money has been collected since the recent amendment to the Marriage Law and how many marriages of cruise ship passengers have taken place.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the Amendment to the Marriage Law was with effect from 18 November 1994. From that date to 28 February 1995, revenues collected for the grant of Marriage Licences amounted to $14,850. The number of Marriage Licences issued to cruise ship passengers was 12.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When the amendment was passed there was a clear indication that there was a large demand for licenses for marriages of cruise ship passengers. Is the Member in a position to say why there have only been 12 applications made?

The Speaker: Honourable Member, that is asking for an expression of opinion and it is not allowed.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Member say if, under the new amendment to the Marriage Law, government has taken any steps to direct persons interested in being married who are passengers on cruise ships to any marriage officers in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Member say if he is aware of any advertisements of this new change?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker, there has been no promotion of the facility, but consideration will be given to this in consultation with the Department of Tourism.

The Speaker: The next question is No 47, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 47

No. 47: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs if there are plans to downgrade the post of District Commissioner in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, there are no plans to downgrade the post District Commissioner.

QUESTION NO. 48

No. 48: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs what are the plans for the permanent appointment of an officer as District Commissioner on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, an announcement was made recently regarding a substantive appointment to the post of District Commissioner. While I am not certain what meaning the Member is assigning to 'Permanent' in this context, I can say that the officer who has been appointed is currently serving on permanent and pensionable terms. It is unlikely that a long-term appointment will take place until such time as an officer resident in Cayman Brac is appointed.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Member say if the person who will be appointed as District Commissioner in Cayman Brac will be given any specific term of service?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the appointment is initially for one year.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
I wonder if the Member could say if any individual who is resident in Cayman Brac has been identified for any further training to bring that person in line to be able to take over permanently?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, no individual has been identified at this time. There is one officer in the Sister Islands who is currently pursuing studies and a diploma in public administration who would perhaps be a potential candidate somewhere down the line. There were recent attempts to fill the post of Deputy District Commissioner and, subject to the type of candidate who comes forward for that post, it may be possible in the near future to identify a number of potential candidates who could be developed to the level of District Commissioner.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Based on the movement of bodies in this post, will the Honourable Member say if this may be of some importance to the civil service and if any serious attempts would be made in this direction to identify an individual so that continuity can take place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Madam Speaker, efforts will be made in the not-too-distant future to better identify potential replacement candidates for all senior posts in the service and, certainly, that post will be one of those posts to consider.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 49, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 49

No. 49: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works what was the purpose of the most recent visit to Bodden Town by himself and other officials.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: The most recent visit to Bodden Town by other officials and me was on 9 February 1995, which was to the Bodden Town Post Office where I was accompanied by Ministry and Postal personnel. The purpose of the visit was to carry out a postal services infrastructural evaluation exercise in keeping with the long range Postal Services Development Plan.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say what plans or suggestions emanated from this with regard to the Post Office in Bodden Town?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Presently, we are looking not only at the Bodden Town Post Office but we are looking throughout the districts with the exception of North Side as they have a fairly new Post Office. We are trying to improve the facilities and plan for the future of Postal Services throughout the Cayman Islands. At this present time we are still evaluating what we saw in the various districts.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Minister say if any of the elected representatives of Bodden Town were invited on this particular visit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

It was not felt necessary at that time to invite the members from that district. It was just more or less looking at the facilities that were there, and I am sure each member is familiar with what is in his/her respective district. We were just looking it over and if at a later date we see something that can be done I will be more than happy to invite the representatives.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, may I ask the Honourable Minister if, in carrying out the postal services infrastructural evaluation for the Post Officers outside of George Town, he will be considering putting in postal boxes and letter drops in small areas, like Pedro and Breakers and Gun Bay, rather than trying to establish a new building?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

There are certain areas such as Old Man Bay, Gun Bay, and Breakers that have never had a full-fledged Post Office, it has always operated from somebody's home. Yes, we will be looking at the drop boxes and post boxes within those areas.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 50, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 50

No. 50: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works to state Government's policy regarding the production of the capital expenditure programmes by Caribbean Utilities Company Ltd. and Cable and Wireless (West Indies) Ltd.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Government's policy regarding capital expenditure programmes by the said companies is as outlined in each license agreement. In addition to what is contained therein, the Ministry has initiated regular meetings to ensure that all parties are kept current on all matters affecting their respective spheres of operation. A copy of the relevant section of each licence, which provides for capital expenditure programmes accompanies my answer for Members' enlightenment (see Appendix I).

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say if the Government has any facilities available to ensure that the capital expenditure as outlined by these companies is carried out, and also if any raises in rates applied for are dependent on capital expended?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As I just pointed out, we hold regular meetings. The companies are quite open as far as their capital projects are concerned. Indeed, should we feel that they are not being fair with us, I guess we would just have to have an audit into the company.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, can the Honourable Minister say if a large capital expenditure, say, like the construction of a new building by Caribbean Utilities or any of the other utilities, would result in direct rate increases of the services provided?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The rate of an increase to CUC, for example, is laid down within the franchise.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Minister say if there is anyone in Government, any officer or office that is specifically assigned duties or responsibilities for the coordination or liaison with these utility companies, that has sufficient technical knowledge to make true assessments which are then passed on to the Ministry for its decision?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The answer is yes. Whatever to do with finance is dealt with on a monthly basis through the Finance Department, and whatever else needs to be done we have that through the Ministry and through the Public Works Department.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 51, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 51

No. 51: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works what is the current status of the long requested "Bodden Town back road."

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: There is currently no design work underway and no funding identified for the Bodden Town "back road." Over the past years there have been several proposals for different connecting roads between Bodden Town and North Side. In 1989 several alternatives were considered, most utilising the Master Ground Transportation Plan (MGTP) east-west arterial. In 1990 this east-west arterial was deleted along with the rest of the MGTP and no further design has been done on this road since that time.

The current development plan now under review shows an east-west road to connect the Pease Bay area to the Newlands area. This road would serve the same traffic demand as the "back road." It appears to be about four miles long and would cost between $3.5 million and $4.0 million for construction only. No design work has been done on this proposal.

Any other connector road between central Bodden Town and the North Sound will require construction across the deeper swamp to Little Sound. This road, while only about three miles long, would cost $5.0 million to $5.5 million to build due to the swamp.

It should be noted that clearing and some marl work for the realignment of the Roy Bodden/Stevenson Farm Road has been requested for 1995 work. This road would be part of any connecting "back road" network.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Is the Minister in a position to say, with regard to the design work on the Pease Bay to Newlands area, how much this design work will cost and approximately how long will it take to complete?

The Speaker: I think the Honourable Minister answered that because the cost is there—four miles cost $3.5 million—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I beg your pardon, Ma'am, he said no design work has been done.

The Speaker: Can you answer the question Honourable Minister?

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, it is impossible for me to answer that question because no design work has been started. I have no idea what it would cost under the circumstances and the location of the road.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Minister say if there are any maps currently available showing this particular area as regards to aerial surveys?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Yes, through the Lands and Survey Department there are maps of the whole island.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Continuation of the debate on the Throne Speech. The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, continuing.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we paused for the break yesterday afternoon, I was talking about the development of the new hospital and other items within the Ministry. I would like to share with the Honourable House that yesterday evening Government signed a contract with the firm of JEC Building Consultants to provide the quantity surveying services for the main consultant on the new hospital.

All of us would like our new Cayman Islands Health Care Complex to start construction today and be built within weeks. But a major project such as this takes time, particularly when Government procedures are followed as strictly as we are doing. So I would say to the public at large, and to the dedicated health care providers at the hospital, bear with us. The project is underway and for the next few weeks and months we will see other contracts being signed bringing this project to a reality.

Tomorrow will be the deadline for the eight consultants who have been short-listed to submit their proposals to the Central Tenders Committee. I am told that early next week one of these consultants will be selected to do the final detailed drawings sitting down with the technicians at the hospital to finalise the complete layout of all of the compartments in the new hospital. I can tell this Honourable House that the budget for that area of the development of the new hospital was estimated at $160,000, and we have been able to come in $14,000 under budget (on the first contract that we have signed) at $146,000.

As we know, the present hospital consists of approximately 56,815 square feet. When our project is completed we will have demolished 10,170 square feet of this and remodeled 28,215 square feet. The remaining 18,430 square feet are in very good condition and, as we know, it consists of the Dental Clinic and the facility provided by the Lions Club for the Eye Clinic.

In addition to this we will have 105,007 square feet of nine new—and I must repeat, new—buildings making a total of 152,652 square feet which will be almost three times the size of the present hospital—all on one easily accessible site. As a matter of fact, I have been reliably informed that with the provision being designed by the contractors for the future, we can go as much as five times the size of the present site in the future. So I feel confident that the site we have selected will be adequate to do what is planned.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the staff and the dedicated workers at the George Town Hospital. They have survived under extremely difficult circumstances and I appreciate their efforts and the amount of time they have put in on this new plan.

I would like to share with the public that we are now, with the recent purchase of instruments that I think was initiated by the last Minister, able to perform laparoscopy surgery at our hospital. I know, from a number of people that have undergone this procedure, that this has been very successful. It will save our Caymanian citizens many thousands of dollars by not having to go overseas to have this procedure done. Literally, you can go in one day, specifically in the case of gallbladder surgery, and go home the next day with a minimum of difficulties or major pain and suffering.

In recent times we have seen the accomplishment of some of our doctors, led by Dr. McIntyre, where a neonatal operation was performed and, thank goodness, that young infant was able to survive.

It is with much satisfaction that I can also tell this Honourable House that a new post of Chief Medical Officer has been created and will be filled no later than July of this year.

An inspection of the Health Services commenced last year. It has been finalised and passed on to Executive Council where over 104 recommendations were made. I would like to take this opportunity to thank those who were involved in that inspection: The Deputy Chief Secretary, my Permanent Secretary and the Director of Budget and Management. They did a very thorough and professional job. I feel that this report will assist me in dramatically improving the services at the hospital.

I would now like to touch on the development of the Health Centres. As we all know, the one in Bodden Town is well underway; as mentioned in the Throne Speech it will be finished in September, but with the progress that I see there it should be very well ahead of that deadline. I must give credit to the construction team, they are really doing a good job and it is quite an impressive building for the district of Bodden Town.

There is provision in the Budget for the commencement of the building of the West Bay Health Centre. Also, plans for the North Side and East End Health Centres will be commenced later this year with construction starting, hopefully, in 1996.

There has also been a study in Little Cayman. As many people are going there we feel that the Government should now provide a facility for the people of Little Cayman. Cayman Brac is in relatively good shape, they have a very nice hospital. I am pleased to see what is there; they have a very dedicated doctor and staff. We look forward to assisting and putting in place whatever is necessary to ensure that Cayman Brac has the highest calibre of service available.

I would now like to address the concerns of some of the public regarding the registration of Cuban doctors who have been granted refugee status in the Cayman Islands. There are six doctors who have been granted this status. Some of them have expressed interest in working in the Cayman Islands Health Care industry.

With input from the Healthcare Practitioners Board, the Health Services Department and the CIMDS, the Board has decided that the Cuban doctors should meet the same requirements applicable to other doctors. Noting that it would be logistically difficult for the Cuban doctors to get licensing in the United Kingdom, the United States or Canada, the Board expressed the opinion that it might be better for these doctors to be processed through the Jamaican system. A prerequisite for their working would be to get registration from the Jamaican Medical Council and letters of competency. To meet this goal the Board decided that these doctors would need to do one year rotating internship prior to registration, and another year of residency in the speciality of interest to the doctor, which would enable the consultants to certify if the doctor is competent to work independently.

The Cuban doctors would also need to have proficiency in the English language. These decisions were made in order to ensure the safety of the public. As a follow up, the board has also written to the Pan American Health Organisation (PAHO) seeking advice on the proposed plan of action. It will, however, be the individual responsibility of any health practitioner to provide satisfactory documentation required by the board to get licensed, including the responsibility to finance their own costs—Government does not pay for their accreditation.

Our incidence of communicable disease is very low. We are very fortunate not to have polio, diphtheria, whooping cough, tetanus, measles, and so forth, in the Cayman Islands. Our success in this area is due to our (high) immunisation coverage (being around 95%), exceeding the target set by the World Health Organisation which is in the area of 80%. As a matter of fact, an immunisation campaign will be mounted during the week of the 3rd through 7th April to ensure that all children are immunised.

I know in recent times there has been concern about the vacant post of Genetics Counsellor. I am pleased to say that this post is now filled, and it is filled by a Caymanian. Her title is Genetics Coordinator. She is a trained nurse and will be able to offer counselling on genetic diseases, follow up care and educational programmes. She was sent to Jamaica for training in Sickle-Cell diseases. She will be visiting Mailmen's Centre at Jackson Memorial Hospital and Miami Children's Hospital for an observational visit to their genetics programme.

We are planning to have Dr. Banky, the genetics specialist at Mailmen's Centre, in the Cayman Islands to review our cases of neurological disorders and advise on any action required.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the Lion's Club for recently sponsoring a social for the elderly residents of East End and also in Bodden Town. They were assisted by the Public Health Department under the leadership of the Medical Officer of Health.

I would also like to thank the Lion's for providing their centre at Red Bay to house the new basketball flooring which had been provided from the Ministry of Sports. I apologise for not mentioning them yesterday, but we all know of the valiant efforts being put forward by the Lion's Club of Grand Cayman.

As I wind down my contribution, I could not close without addressing the Chamber of Commerce survey. As this Honourable House knows, no one has supported or defended the Chamber of Commerce more than I have, and the Hansards of this House will reflect that.

I took the opportunity to look up the definition of Chamber of Commerce. The New Standard Encyclopedia says it is: "an organisation of business professionals, men and women working together to stimulate and improve business conditions and to build a better community." I fail to see how this vicious attack on this Government can fulfill any of these expectations.

I would like to briefly touch on how they spoke on each of the separate Ministries, starting with the Ministry of Education and Aviation, where the Chamber specifically rated this below average.

We all know the millions of dollars that have been saved since this Ministry came under new management—probably $70 million alone from the Guinness Peat Aviation (GPA) deal. As a matter of fact, it is expected that this year we will be making an operating profit after subsidy.

The Chamber of Commerce rated Education below average. This is a joke. Did any of them attend that education conference held last year? I think if just one or two of them had gone and witnessed the great concern by the people, by the Members of this House and, specifically, the teachers, the enthusiasm that was shown there, they could not possibly be writing this nonsense.

We know about the new classrooms that are being built at the primary school in West Bay and the George Hicks High School. Scholarship programmes—how many scholarships have been offered by this organisation? I can assure them that there is no child in our school system that is not given financial assistance for the furtherance of their education, if they so desire.

We were recently able to deal with a child who needed financial assistance very quickly. Thanks to one of the Assistant Secretaries in the Ministry of Education, we were able to deal with that child right away. Yesterday afternoon she confirmed to me that after taking this problem to the Education Council this very deserving Caymanian now has a full scholarship. This is what the Ministry of Education does.

The Ministry for Agriculture, Communications and Works is soon to implement the Emergency 9-1-1 system, which will certainly improve our emergency situation in the Cayman Islands.

Works was rated below average. I would venture to say that there is no organisation anywhere as small as our Public Works Department, that is called on to do so many diverse things and to also supervise so many multi-million dollar projects as the Public Works Department. I know firsthand of the amount of time that the Acting Chief Engineer has recently spent with our Hospital Steering Committee and the Master Planning Study. Has the Chamber of Commerce taken the time to step down and talk with this gentleman? I say: 'shame on them' for leveling this unworthy criticism.

All we need to look at is the strain that has been put on that department by the Cuban crises. I say: Well Done. Just trying to satisfy the diverse needs of Elected Members is quite an accomplishment.

Look at the streetlights. Never before in history have more streetlights been put in these islands. When we look at the Queens Highway, where it was reported that many drug drops had taken place, it is pleasing to see that this is now fully lighted to reduce the risk of drugs entering our island.

Surprisingly, they said that Agriculture was satisfactory.

I would like to see what they said about my Ministry—they are still not sure what the title of that is, they have it listed as the 'Ministry for Health and Human Services.' For their information it is the 'Ministry for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.'

I wonder if they took into consideration the length of time it has been in existence. I ask for no special consideration, but in all fairness I feel that when this was put to the public my Ministry was probably in operation for less than nine or ten months. I do not think our best farmers can grow a good banana sucker in that amount of time.

Did they take the time to come and find out what was going on within the Ministry with our plans for Strategic Planning, or try to get involved? No, Madam Speaker. They preferred to sit down and criticise without putting forward alternative solutions.

In recent months we have been operating two Strategic Plans—one for Health and one for Drugs—involving several hundred dedicated Caymanians. I feel we have established the groundwork through this and the foundation for future development in these two very important areas. Would this not be fulfilling part of their overall objective (which I quoted earlier), to build a better community—to have come and joined hands with us and worked toward this very special project of helping the Cayman Islands to get rid of the drug scourge?

I can say that my Ministry has had three independent observations as to the process that we are now using through community involvement, and from all three we have received high praise. As a matter of fact, just about a week or two ago Mr. Jean Lug Lemahieu from the United Nations Drug Control Program visited our islands and after studying our documentation in preparation for an overall Master Drug Plan, he said that, with some refining, what we had developed in just seven short months was much more advanced than most of the other 27 Territories in the Caribbean basin. Yet, these people say that this Ministry is below average. That amazes me.

They said that "the decision to remodel the George Town Hospital was a hasty one and could backfire." I say that they are not acting responsibly. We are not remodeling the George Town Hospital. The majority of the work there will be new buildings. I note in the Caymanian Compass issue of Tuesday, 3rd January, 1995, it was stated that "this government is not spending $21 million to repair the old hospital. The facts of the matter are that there will be over 106,000 square feet of new building." Yet they could not even take the time to put that in an accurate manner to the public. How can the public give an opinion on something that is inaccurate? Incredible!

"Whose hospital is best? Ezzard's or the National Teams'? Confused I bet." No, Madam Speaker, I am not confused. There is no comparison, especially when we look at it from the split-site perspective. It does not require a nuclear physicist to tell us that when we add Mr. Miller's two split-site facilities, which would have been required to have a complete hospital, not just the inpatient facility in the swamp but also the improvement of the present site. And once again, Madam Speaker, what is listed in the Caymanian Compass is their figures—not my figures!—that it was over $27 million. Let us be fair.

Community Development—below average. I just wonder if any of these people in the hierarchy of the Chamber of Commerce took the time to go out and visit when the Young Parents Programme was opened up. They could not have possibly come to this conclusion if they saw what was provided there. Youth Affairs—below average; Sports—they gave that satisfactory; Culture—below average. It says, "He has a misguided conception that sports, and not culture and education, is the priority in stabilising the community." When we see the exhibit that was brought in of the Caribbean, these are positive ways of encouraging culture in the Cayman Islands.

Tourism—how warped and twisted can they get? After a record year of arrivals they said that the Honourable Minister's performance in the Ministry is below average. This is very unfair.

The Environment. Just in the last year of this House, this Honourable Minister pioneered legislation where a fine of over $500,000 was put into place for ships polluting our waters. Have they not seen the Queen Elizabeth II Botanic Park up in the Frank Sound Area? The efforts made for recycling garbage? I must say that the garbage collection service that we have here is second to none in the world: Yet, they talk nonsense about poor.

Have they been to some of the other islands in the Caribbean and seen the problems that exist with garbage and other major problems in the environment? This is sad.

We know that there are problems out there—we inherited many of these. But in our very two short years many of these problems have been addressed. We could have been a lot more successful if they had participated in this community effort instead of expecting Government to do everything as it would be in a socialist state.

I wonder if the Chamber of Commerce wants us to go back to the time when this Government took over in 1992—when tourism arrivals were plummeting, there was no development going on, absolutely no construction, unemployment was at the highest level in the history of these islands. Is that what the Chamber of Commerce wants our native Caymanians to go back to? They ought to be ashamed to publish such nonsense.

Not even in the Banana Republics, that they so like to talk about, could such nonsense be published against the duly elected government. I know, from when I used to go to sea, in Venezuela and some of these other places, they would probably have been machine-gunned down if they had said this about the government.

Trade and Commerce—below average. This is a disgrace to these islands, when we know where we have come from, the incentives that have been put in place by the Financial Secretary, the many, many opportunities that have come to these islands to create more revenue for us. Just to name a few, there are Mutual Funds, many Insurance Companies. They said license fees for companies were too high. Did they not see where legislation was brought to this Honourable House to reduce most of these fees? But are their members implementing the reduction of these fees? There is no use in Government putting forward the incentives asking for the reduction if the companies that form part of their huge following do not take action and reduce their fees.

Crime. In the two years that this Government has been in place, the police force has been increased by several people, yet they say that our concern in this area is below average. I am made to understand that when you compare the 1994 statistics with 1993, there is close to a 20% reduction in crime in most areas. Yet, they say that nothing is being done about crime.

We have strengthened the Drug Task Force and we have seen the results that have come out of that. More people are being picked up, but many of us feel that what needs to be done is that the big boys need to be put away—and put away for a long time. But this Government will continue to go after them. We will not stop until this entire country knows that it is socially unacceptable—we will not accept or tolerate any kind of drug dealings in our midst.

Reduction of Government Expenditure—below average. How did they possibly arrive at this? This is a deliberate attempt to twist the facts. We know what we took over here. I have seen the figures from the Financial Secretary's Office where, in the four years prior, there was an accumulated deficit of over $55 million and in the year that we took over there was over $7 million in debt. In two short years we have been able to turn that around. Yet, they rate us below average in what we are doing with the finances of this country.

They try to poke fun at us; “They've saved some just to turn around and waste it somewhere else.” When we put money on our people we are not wasting it—it is being invested.

Road Improvements. Where we are today did not spring up over night. Many of these problems we inherited, but we are working on them. We will continue to work on them. I see the work that is being done in my constituency in Bodden Town and there will be much more of it to come.

The Development Plan is not something that is carved in stone, Madam Speaker. The public still has the chance and the opportunity to have input. How can they knock us on this until it is finalised? This is a deliberate attempt to try to make this Government look bad.

Immigration. The public said below average and the Chamber of Commerce decided to go lower and they said “poor.” They said we should put persons of only the highest calibre on the Immigration Board. I am very satisfied with the people who I see on there. Is it because this Board is seeing that our Caymanians are now being trained and put in place so that down the line they can take over many of these high positions?

They said; “I've never seen so many cases of victimisation.” I would like to share with this Honourable House what I personally know as victimisation in regard to the Immigration Board. That victimisation did not come from members of the Immigration Board. The victimisation that I am familiar with came from members of the Chamber of Commerce when one or two of our duly appointed Members were being castigated. They even went so far as His Excellency the Governor to try to have some of these people removed. That is victimisation.

When I checked into this I did not stop until I got to the top. There were unfounded allegations against one specific person—and they are going to put in this survey that our Immigration Board is victimising people? Tell the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth.

Public Consultation. One of the main things that we have been castigated for was when a foreign entity was running a muck over some of our Caymanian people a little over a year ago. We decided as a Government that it was not fair to our Caymanian people so we brought in temporary legislation in regard to the buses and other heavy equipment. This is what we did for our Caymanian people.

They said that I am out of my league. I am man enough to say that I know I have no formal training or expertise in Health or medicine. But on my first trip to sea at age 17—and I am not bragging, I am just stating what happened—I was chosen as ship's delegate by all of my shipmates. I entered the United States Army and on my first assignment in Korea, I was selected as a team chief to head one of their finance departments. There were many, many more qualified soldiers who were citizens of the United States, but they appointed me to fill that position.

Upon my return to the United States I, as a foreigner, was assigned to the First Armored Division in Fort Hood Texas, the largest armored division in the free world. There were hundreds of other soldiers, but I was assigned as a Finance Liaison Officer between the First Armored Division and the Finance Centre in Indianapolis, Indiana.

I am not bragging, but when I left there, the First Armored Division was the highest rated division in the Department of the Finance of Defence with the lowest error rate in their division. Yet, these people say that I am out of my league.

Madam Speaker, working with the team that I have in the Ministry and on Executive Council and within this Legislative Assembly is how we can succeed. I may be out of my league, but I promise the Chamber of Commerce and the public of these Cayman Islands that I will not waste millions of dollars on failed consultants. I can assure the Chamber of Commerce and the public that anything that I do will be done by established government guidelines, and that no system will be circumvented.

I may be out of my league, but I promise not to pay almost $2 million for a building that was valued at $1.175. I promise not to squander and waste the public's money like giving away government land, manipulating water meters and authorising connections of over $900,000 when less than 13% of them are bringing back revenue to this government.

What really disturbs me about this survey is that just three short months ago, towards the end of last year, once a month this Government used to meet with the management of the Chamber of Commerce, sharing with them. On the last page it says: this has met repeatedly with ExCo to offer guidance as to public opinion, in an effort to act as an early warning system...” They did not bring these things to our meetings. We shared with them, if they had concerns we told them what we would do. Now, just three short months later you see this survey come out. This does not add up. What is the real reason behind this?

I hear that there is a possibility that two of the Ministers who have been slandered plan to take action in the area of filing a suit in the area of $10 million against this Chamber of Commerce for these inaccuracies that they have portrayed. As a matter of fact, I would also urge the Attorney General's Office to take a serious look at this smear campaign, as it seems to be a deliberate and calculated attempt to destabilise the Government that was overwhelmingly elected by its supporters.

In contrast, after going through so many very serious allegations and misrepresentations, I would like to share with this Honourable House an article that appeared in The Royal Gazette in Bermuda. It was entitled “Cheering in Cayman.” I will briefly read a few excerpts:

“The Caymans enjoy a growing reputation because it has more regulation than any other offshore centre in the world.... It is impossible to find anyone in the Islands who wants independence. The islanders are not going down some radical Independence route. It is an extremely conservative Island.”

It also says, “Cayman has always been about sensible long term planning.”

“The Cayman Islands are a unique oasis. Here, society offers a reminder of the kind of standards that many Western societies have lost over the past three decades. The God fearing and very religious islanders wish it to remain that way.” [But we need the assistance of the Chamber of Commerce if we are to continue on this route.]

“It is unbelievable that in 20-odd years you can change a country where there weren't many jobs and most of the people were working either in the United States or on a ship sailing around somewhere.”

“You see, there is no magic formula to the Cayman Islands but the difference is we don't have these issues associated with nationalism, colour prejudice and so on.”

“The banks know that in the Caymans they have an almost idyllic situation. A perfect climate, reliable and friendly local people, zero tax regime, low crime rate, British dependency status and close proximity to the United States.”

“With over 300 years of British rule, Caymanians have steadfastly maintained close ties constitutionally with Britain, content with provisions which fall short of full internal self-government. [I think this article was triggered because of talk of independence in Bermuda] The stable political climate has contributed to a peaceful society which enjoys a high standard of living.”

“It is a level playing field with little crime and no corruption, something which is so prevalent in other countries.”

“Cayman is the living example of what can be achieved in a country with good government and management. Consistently good decisions have delivered a high level of prosperity for not just a few but for all its citizens.”

When we compare this—the outside world looking in at the Cayman Islands—I must ask, once again, is this the same Island that I see and that the outside sees, and the perspective given in the Chamber of Commerce survey? It certainly does not sound so to me.

In closing I would like to briefly touch on a few developments in the district of Bodden Town and the constituency.

Allocated this year is the highest amount of Capital Development in the history of Bodden Town—$3.8 million. Some of this money will be spent on very good and worthy causes—improvements to our two primary schools, the one at Bodden Town and the one at Savannah.

Earlier on there was a question about the Post Office. There is allowance in the budget for improvements to the Post Office (and I think in Bodden Town we need a new Post Office) of $160,000. There is about $100,000 to finish developing the Civic Centre play field.

We know of the recent purchase of the O'Connor residence for a retirement home. These are just some of the things that will be happening in Bodden Town.

We continue to work to make things better for our people. And as long as I am here I will be fighting to try to do what is best, not only for Bodden Town but for this country as a whole.

Thank you.

Debate continues on the 1995 Throne Speech. [pause] The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Throne Speech, delivered by His Excellency the Governor, was a very comprehensive and positive one. It carries a lot of encouragement, for it shows what can be done when cooperation is put into an effort to do something that has to be done—anything can be done once we cooperate and try for the same thing. It may be that sometimes one may differ in matters of opinion, but once we are fighting for the same thing the chance is there to win.

I would like to congratulate the Governor and all those who had a part in putting this Throne Speech together. Madam Speaker, this speech shows what strides and progress has been made since 1992. I cannot see where anyone living in these islands cannot say that something has not been done—and well done.

The progress made since 1992 is something unbelievable. Whether it is the Chamber of Commerce and the Opposition or just the lay-abouts, they know that such a change did not just happen, but came about through the good stewardship and management of our Government, the National Team Government.

I am not saying this because I am a member of this Team. I am saying it because it is a fact. It is a known fact that in 1992 the Cayman Islands was on the brink of disaster. There was nothing left to boast about. What we found was a broken country.

At that time business was low and the banks did not want to do any business with us. There was no work here, unemployment was at its highest point; the tourism industry was at its lowest. We were suffering.

Cayman Airways was just about finished. Cayman itself was staggering under the financial burden. There were problems; wherever one turned, one faced the problems.

This was the time when nobody really knew what was going to happen next. The banks refused to do business with us—and I am only touching on some of the problems the new Government inherited in 1992 upon taking office.

When we look back now at 1992 and compare our present condition, I do not see how in the world some people can say that this Government has not done anything, and that it is not any good. I feel that the National Team Government has done more in the past three years than any government has done for this country. We were in a dilemma that no one could see a way out of. The National Team took it on as a challenge and, by God, they won. Now, we have a country that boasts of high prosperity again, it is rated in one of the highest positions in the tourism and financial industries.

We have to feel proud of our government. I am not saying that they are perfect, no one is. They are working hard for the benefit of this country. We have had problems that we have not had at any other time, but with good stewardship and management we pushed forward and ultimately saved the country. I pray to God that we will continue with this.

Regardless of what is said on the outside or by the Opposition, we are progressing very fast. When we look at the problems that we inherited when we came in here in 1992, and see where we are now—Cayman Airways was a failure, it was about finished. But the Minister responsible took up the reins and fought a valiant fight. Almost single-handedly he pushed and worked. With the help and support of his Team Members, today Cayman Airways is flying almost as a free bird in the air again.

That same Minister, who is responsible for Education, has moved that forward. Our Education system is up. We are building new schools. I think that he should be highly congratulated and not discredited.

We also have the Minister of Sports—a striving, fighting, pushing man—who has done for sports in this past three years what no other government has ever done in these islands. What he has done should have been done 25 to 30 years ago.

Although they want to criticise him about spending so much money on sports, I cannot see anything else more important to spend it on than our youth. That is what is needed to save our youth because they are our future, and sports is one big thing in the life of the young ones.

The Minister may have big plans, but we have to realise that those plans are not just for one year—it is a consecutive thing. We will be progressing with that as with everything else. It is needed, and we all should support him and give him the hand that is needed.

I, for one, give him my full support and I am very proud to have him as our Minister of Sports—a man from West Bay.

Plus, we have another thing, and that is agriculture. We had a fair this time that I think we would have to look a long time in a wide margin to find a better one. This was brought back by the National Team Government. The other government stopped it and we brought it back. I am sure that it carries the praise of this island. Although they might not want to praise the Minister they have to if they have any conscience at all—which I believe some of them do not have. They have to admit it was a job well done.

It goes to show what can be done in our little island. All we need is somebody to lead and we can produce, as any country. While at the fair I overheard people speaking of the beautiful things, but mostly the cattle. Now, I am a guy who has seen cattle from different countries; I run cattle. But I have never seen any to beat what we had at that fair. I say, again, to that Minister: Well Done! Continue the hard work.

Madam Speaker, we have the Minister of Health. He is a new rookie on the team, but he has the respect of the people. He is doing a job that is needed in this island and he is not rushing blindly into it. He takes his time, takes the advice of those who can give it to him, and he moves forward. Our health plan covers a lot of ground.

I am proud to know that the facilities of the hospital will soon be started. We have the rehabilitation centre that will soon be going and we have health care in the districts which is needed very badly, all under this Minister's Portfolio. He, too, needs to be congratulated and supported.

The tourist industry, or hospitality industry, is one of the mainstays of our economy. If we do not try to improve on that we are lost. Competitors that will take over.

The Minister for Tourism has come under a lot of fire. I cannot see how the people can say that he is not going a good job. We have an industry here that surpasses all others, but to keep this industry going, we have to meet the demands of that industry. We cannot stop half way. This means that we have to keep progressing, and to progress means development.

I know that the critics are criticising the development of the tourist industry. I have heard it, 'Who are they progressing for?' The thing is, we are improving for the Cayman Islands. We have to have a hand on this, I do agree. We have to put our efforts together. We have to see that development is there. But most of all, we, as Caymanians, have to have a hand in the tourist industry. I know that the jobs are there, but the saying is that we cannot get work out there. I do not know about that. I have looked around and I have seen where there are a lot of Caymanians working and I am proud to see them there on the job.

The thing about it is that we have some Caymanians that will not push very hard, that will not stay on jobs. What I beg these people to do is get in there and hang in there with it. There is no job that will be totally pleasing to you, but you have to be man or woman enough to stick with it.

We talk about having to bring in so many people to do the work. What I would like to let this Honourable House know is that I do not know of any country in the world that was developed by its own manpower—it never happened. The United States, Australia, New Zealand, Africa—you name it—every one of them was developed with outside help.

The same thing here—we can train our people, but we cannot train enough. Some of them will still not stay on the job, and the work has to be carried on. Therefore, this is where the gates are open for the immigrants to come in and get work.

I want to bring up something about labour. In the early 1930s, little Aruba (which is no bigger than Little Cayman, and the population was similar at that time), underwent a development scheme. It started in 1939, I believe. When I went there to work in 1946, the population of Aruba was 1,600 people—a little island the size of Cayman Brac. That work went on, as far as I know, without any problems; everybody jumped in and did their work. They were all friends (I know we were), and we were like a big family. So I cannot see where a little country island like Aruba, with 1,600 people for its population... and mind you, they were not all the Dutch people, they were from all over the Caribbean and central and South America. But they worked together and did their job.

That is the same thing that we have to do here. We have to learn to cooperate and work with one another. There is no job where everybody will tap you on the shoulder and say you are a good fellow, or where somebody is not going to say a harsh word to you—that is not human nature. Someone will speak harsh to you. You have to have the knowledge of how to reply—if you are going to reply, if not walk away. I have done that myself many times.

Madam Speaker, I want to say this: I am proud to be with this Government and all the departments that have done their job. Somebody there has done it well for this little island to progress the way it has. We are now climbing the ladder, and one of these days, with the National Team Government, I am hoping that we reach the top. And when we reach there, I feel that then the Opposition and the critics on the outside may say; “Well, you know, they have done a good job. The job is well done.”

Thank you.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.31 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Throne Speech. [pause]
The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would like to congratulate His Excellency the Governor on a very progressive, very detailed Throne Speech, and for the presentation of that Speech in his usual able and dignified way.

This Throne Speech has set out very clearly the policies of the Government, both new and continuing. It has dealt with aspects of the country's policies that are very important to the country.

On the first page it deals with one of the main problems that we have at present, that of the Cuban migrants who came mainly last year, who are costing this country a lot of money. And, while I am sympathetic to children, women, and elderly people, we have to make decisions that are good for this country on a whole, with the interests of our people taking priority over those of the migrants. I believe that while a solution may be difficult to find, the way that Government has approached it—unusually endorsed by the Opposition Members—is the best way in the interests of the people of the Cayman Islands.

It is unfortunate that the majority of those who arrived here came as a result of the policies of the United States of America. And, while they have been helpful in many ways, I believe that far more assistance could have been given. We are also grateful to the United Kingdom and the European Community for their assistance, but I think it could also have been more, and quicker.

The Judiciary is one of the most important elements of democracy and justice in this country; it is an independent and very capable judiciary. It is crucial to democracy and the stability of the Cayman Islands when viewed both internally and externally.

That is why it is very important that at a very early stage this year there must begin the new extension to the Courts Building which presently houses possibly five times more people and courts and officers than it should. It must affect the persons who work there, as the building and the conditions there are not sufficient or up to standard.

I would like to specifically thank and congratulate the Grand Court Rules Committee for producing the Draft Grand Court Rules which are so badly needed in the legal practice of the Courts within the country.

On the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, I would like to welcome the Deputy Chief Secretary, the Temporary First Official Member, and to ensure him that wherever possible in the many difficult areas of his Portfolio I will assist.

It was good to see the efforts of the Lady Members in here. Perhaps the most vocal at this point is the Elected Lady from North Side in relation to getting the General Orders amended to remove the discrimination against female officers. I think that was quite a milestone, as well as the move to establish the Women's Desk within the Government. I believe the review of the General Orders is very important and this should be carried out as soon as possible and as comprehensively as possible.

The new Police Commissioner, whom I had the privilege to meet recently, said that the Police Force is a Police Service, not a Police Force. Well, the Civil Service is a service that is paid by the public and has its overriding duty to give service to the public. To that effect, I believe that a small, professional, well-equipped, efficient civil service is better than a very large civil service that has excess bureaucracy built into it and the inefficiencies that go with that.

The most controversial topic in this debate has been in the area of the public dissemination of information and what has come out—in what must be the most unusual course for a Chamber of Commerce to take—in the report that it has given on Government.

One of the criticisms within this report is that proper notice of three months on all bills... And let me say in relation to that, as I told them, there are some bills that require three months' notice and, for example, the Constitution required a six month notice; but there are others that do not require three months' notice. However, they breached that rule that they have set as one of the principles and ideals of the Chamber of Commerce.

On Thursday, when the letter came out on the survey in the Caymanian Compass, I spoke to the president of the Chamber, Mr. McTaggart, and asked him why he would put a letter in the newspaper without giving us the courtesy of even one day's notice of the survey. He expressed some surprise that we did not have the survey and said that we would have it. However, that following Monday he went on television and dealt with the survey, and up to that stage we had no copies of that survey.

Now, what I am coming to is this: The Chamber of Commerce cannot set standards that it is not prepared to abide by. No notification of this very important survey was given to the Government. I do not believe that the problem arose because the directors did not want to give it to us, it arose because Mr. Wil Pineau, the new managing director, who has suddenly changed the relationship between the Government and the Chamber, has now taken control of the Chamber of Commerce.

So, where they are asking for a three month notice, they do not even have the courtesy to give us even three minutes' notice because the survey appeared on my desk the following Tuesday—some six days after the press had it and so did other Members of the Opposition of this House, as I understand it. I am very surprised that the Chamber would go this stage.

I have been one of the strongest supporters of the Chamber of Commerce, but the relationship that has been brought in by the new manager is going to be the same as it has been in the cheap little newspaper The New Caymanian that he and Mr. Jackson have financially bankrupted over the past few years.

I would like to believe that the Chamber of Commerce is in a situation now where the tail is wagging the dog. The new manager has come in and he is carrying out dirty newspaper tactics within the Chamber. That may hurt the Government, but members of the Chamber have to realise that it is also going to hurt members of the Chamber of Commerce. This is where I think they need to intervene.

I would just like to set something clear for the record. There was a lot of talk about immigration and appeals, and this sort of thing, but this Government allowed the appeal in relation to Mr. Pineau to allow him to work for the Chamber of Commerce. And what we have seen from the very start is a change from a manager (Mr. Phil Hinds) who was a very fair, intelligent person whom, we were able to work with over the past two years, which enhanced the Chamber as well as enhancing the Government, for us to get into a stage where there is nearly a war between the Government and the Chamber of Commerce. This is bad for this country. The people who are going to suffer as a result of it are going to be the members of the Chamber of Commerce and the people of this country. That is why I believe that after this round the Chamber has to get back to reality and realise where its role is.

Let me show you why the manager, Mr. Pineau, was able to take and manipulate the Chamber of Commerce to get the results they wanted, because we know they have pledged to bring down this Government. I think he is going to now begin to realise that that is not going to be allowed by the people of this country. He should try to be within this country long enough to understand it—he is a newcomer here—he should try to understand it before he takes the steps that he has now, unfortunately, led the Chamber into.

The first survey by the Chamber of Commerce was a survey of its members. What he has done is widen that into a survey of members and persons of the public. What is happening now is that members of the Chamber of Commerce are being hurt by the views taken by a selected few that we understand took these survey reports... and to call it scientific is being very polite, it was really a disaster.

The editorial in the Caymanian Compass bears that out. He has widened it out from the Chamber of Commerce to members of the public. That is wrong. The Chamber of Commerce crossed over the border between dealing with its members to dealing with a selected few in the public.

The questionnaire was not numbered. We understand that one person (a member of the public) filled in about 15 and got them signed and sent in. But the deviousness of this was the way in which the questions were put to the public. I am a lawyer, Madam Speaker, and after 25 years I know that if a question is put a certain way it can only extract a certain answer. Journalists use the same tactics—not professionally, unfortunately, because we are within the conduct and etiquette and Rules of Evidence of a Court. They are not. The questions that were put, and the persons it was circulated to is what has brought back a very damaging and unfair report.

I only want to give a few examples of this to show that how you do it and how you deal with the results is the report that you will get.

Just a year ago a questionnaire went out under Mr. Phil Hinds. In relation to Cayman Airways—at a time when we had estimated a $6 million loss—and this is very important, when this went out we estimated a $6 million loss, which is about what we made when you remove the subsidy from it—they came back on Cayman Airways saying: “29% excellent, 46% good, 17% satisfactory, and 8% poor.”

What Mr. Pineau has concocted is that that situation, where we were in a loss, and the public now knows that we are in a profit after subsidy and much better off, he has come back saying that the public finds Cayman Airways satisfactory and the Chamber finds it below average. So the Chamber has gone from having 92% (of which 29% is excellent and 46% is good) the 8% poor that they had has now turned into 100% below average. This is the most stupid thing that I have ever seen and the directors of the Chamber of Commerce had better come to grips with the Chamber of Commerce, or they are going to be led into the same disaster that Pineau has led The New Caymanian because it is now in serious financial trouble.

The Chamber of Commerce will be in the same situation. He has no managerial capabilities, but very mischievous writing abilities.

It is like everything else—if you pay cheaply for something you get a cheap product. They should have paid more money and hired the two Caymanians who applied to them, rather than paying cheaply and getting a cheap product who, believe me, is going to waste a lot of time of the directors by the time that this is all over.

I cannot believe that a company that has gone from a loss and was rated as excellent, is now making a profit and rated as poor. That is the most stupid thing that I have ever seen.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I took a long time thinking about this before I got up, but what I am trying to stress to the directors of the Chamber of Commerce is that they have to take control of it. If they could not get someone the calibre of Mr. Phil Hinds, who was a capable, fair gentleman who got a better job... and that is the difference. Here we have a man (Pineau) who was in a job at The New Caymanian—which they had bankrupted—and he left just in time and went into this job. He could not have gone anywhere else.

The Caymanian Compass stated that, “the Chamber [of Commerce] will readily admit that the survey results are not based on scientific procedure and is not representative of the population as a whole.” And that, “the survey form was distributed to members of the Chamber as well as to the general population through Post Office boxes.”

All I can say is that having taken Cayman Airways from a situation of massive debts and losses, and having been told that 75% of the people felt it was excellent and good when I was taking a loss, and now I turn it to a profit and the Chamber finds it poor—I mean, it is really ridiculous that people of the calibre and professional ability of the directors of the Chamber of Commerce would let this nonsense go out to the public.

I would tell the public to reject this. This is what Mr. Pineau thinks. It is not what the public thinks. I have had so many people call me up and say to me what a ridiculous thing. I say to them (and I am saying to them now) call the directors up and tell them this, because they may believe that they are being led in the right way. Those directors are: Chairman, Mr. Roy McTaggart; Mr. Adrian Briggs; Mr. Robert Wood; Mr. Steve Hawley; and Mr. Sydney Coleman. I suggest that instead of calling me they start calling them and tell them to get their manager back on the right track, or see if they can sufficiently tie his hands so that he carries out the wishes of the directors.

I do not believe that these fine gentlemen would have produced this sort of thing. I believe they trusted him; I believe they trusted Wil Pineau and have found out what The New Caymanian found out—you cannot trust him. They are now the people who are suffering as a result of it.

I could go on and on. It is the same thing in agriculture. Only 12% said that was poor, which means that 88% said it was excellent, good and satisfactory. Yet, the most that it got was satisfactory. So, I would ask them to reject this.

Quite frankly, if the Chamber of Commerce is not more competent to deal with Mr. Pineau, they had better see if they can get a Caymanian who understands Cayman, and understands that islands here have a very difficult economy to deal with and that this sort of thing is damaging. But it was interesting to see that even the Caymanian Compass, one of his fellow journalists, felt that he had also messed it up and that you could not rely on it. I submit that he has concocted what is in there and what has come out is not the Chamber's view, it is the view of Wil Pineau and his frustrations with The New Caymanian.

The Cayman Islands Police Force, despite it being questioned at nearly every sitting of this House by the First Elected Member for Boddén Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the battering that the Police and the Prison have taken at their hands, is a good Police Force. Not everyone and everything is good, but what has been achieved (and I commend the Chief Secretary for this) is that for the first time in many years, as reported in page 2 of the report, and I quote from that report: “With the exception of drug offences, it is gratifying to report a reduction in almost every category of crime; of particular significance is the drop in reported burglaries from 765 in 1993 to 595 in 1994.” [Royal Cayman Islands Police Annual Report for 1994]

“Drug offences are known in police parlance as

'victimless crimes'." What is meant by this terminology is that the victims are the persons who consume, so it is a different category of offence from burglary, where one goes into a person's house and attacks a person.

So in all areas of crime, except in relation to drugs, there was a decrease. I believe that if the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman would stop constantly criticising the police and the prison officers they would be able to get on with their jobs and try to do something constructive, rather than having to listen and worry about the way that they are being attacked here from time to time. So I call on those two Members to try to get positive in relation to the police and to leave the negative side of things to other areas where it matters not as much.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [interjecting] ...better stop attacking Wil Pineau!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: They know, the questions are there. They are asked time and again. A lot of the problems that have arisen, have arisen because of the constant exposure that they have tried to direct against the police. So I call on them to be positive—support them. The police have a very difficult job to do...

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, on a Point of Order.

The Speaker: May I hear the Point of Order, Honourable Member?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: It seems as if the Minister for Education and Aviation is saying that I, as a Member of this House, am creating problems for the police.

Madam Speaker, what he has said is a falsehood, and I think that such allegations should not be made against me, or my colleague, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister I am not certain what you actually said, but if you did make an indication that the two Members are responsible for making trouble, that would be out of order. If you are referring to the number of questions that they ask on the police—

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, the questions are not trouble—

The Speaker: I do not think we have had any questions this time concerning police.

Would you please just go on with your debate, and avoid any inferences of mischievousness unless it can be proven?

Thank you.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

This is, however, one of the few sessions that questions were not put in relation to prisoners or the police.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [interjecting] ...I told you it is to see if you understand Question Time in the House.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am only talking about questions because those questions can put questions in the form of attacks in relation to a person, and the area that you are asking the question.

I am calling for something positive because we get a lot of negatives out of those two Opposition Backbenchers but very little positive. Very little at all in the way of solutions.

Madam Speaker, a lot within society depends upon the attitude of people toward the police and the prison. When that attitude is negative it obviously produces negative results. Maybe there are people who wish to see negative results coming out of the police and the prison, but while it may suit those person's own personal views in relation to those people, it will hurt the country.

I believe that the new Commissioner's approach is going to be new and I believe that this House should give its support—as the National Team Members have always done—to law and order, rather than having him waste time answering stupid questions or otherwise from the public.

The area of Immigration is very controversial. A lot of the ground that has been achieved during the time that we have been in the Government has been lost during the stage when there had to be large deployments of staff in relation to the Cuban migrants. I believe that the Honourable Chief Secretary and his Deputy are going to come to grips with this because many of the staff deployed either need to be replaced or brought back into the Immigration Department.

I know the Board itself is quite up to date on matters, but the impact of the Cuban migrants and the deployment of staff did not hit there the way that it hit the department itself. It is important that this be corrected as early as possible to get the Immigration Department back on an efficient track, so that when the Board makes decisions the time to process the applications can be brought back within the three week period that we sought.

On the question of the Civil Service and what has been said about their right to say whatever they wish in public, whenever they wish to say it, I would like to draw Members' attention to the fact that if you work in a bank, or a construction company . . . or better yet, suppose you work in the television company. You never see their employees going on television or writing to the press saying that the television company is no good, or saying that the bank is no good, and that sort of thing. There has to be support for the organisation that one works for, otherwise the organisation will come under what mighty Rome came under after 1,00 years—it will fall from within.

There must be a balance of freedom of speech and of the civic rights of the civil service; but that has to be tempered by a commonsense approach. If people who are in a public organisation continuously undermine it publicly it will finally fall. I do not think that is what a democracy is all about when it talks about freedom of speech.

In fact, anyone who knows the Bill of Rights knows that freedom of speech is subject to many exceptions. Not only does a person not have the right to slander or defame another, but he has to respect his neighbour and other members of the public, otherwise the law will impose heavy damages on him.

The letters that we see in the newspapers are many times written by frustrated, unemployed people. In fact, some that are writing some of these letters are unemployed. In fact, some of them who are writing columns, for example in The New Caymanian, talking about their unlimited right to go out there and destroy the business they work for, or the Government they work for, we have to look at as an extreme. Common sense tells us that there must be freedom of speech within boundaries that make sense and that we cannot have rights that are going to infringe on others, especially where they infringe on the company that employs them and they finally destroy it.

We have recently had some controversy being stirred in relation to District Administration. I believe the Governor (and I will come to that later on) made it very clear in the Throne Speech that the decision to hire, fire and discipline Civil Servants is his, and it is exercised by him along with the Public Service Commission—it has nothing to do with the politicians.

I know it sometimes upsets people when their favourite person employed anywhere (not just in Government) is transferred, retires, or is fired. But they are being very mischievous when the Constitution is very clear as to who has responsibility for the civil service.

I believe that Mr. Joel Walton, a Cayman Bracker, is a very capable person to be in the position of District Commissioner. I have the highest respect for that man who is now in a position to look at the District Administration from a different perspective, and I believe that what he will do there will be good for those two islands.

I would have thought that after the Minister for Tourism arranged for a cruise ship to call there that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman would have bowed down and said 'thank you very much for getting the first cruise ship to go around there.'

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: That is what is wrong with them, they expect people to bow down!

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Instead, what we have is the negative side of things again, where they say it went there, but possibly for the wrong purpose. If the cruise ship is there . . . and he got it there, give him credit for it. This is the difference between finding solutions and being negative. He found a solution to the problem and I believe that the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman appreciated it. That is why he is the First Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—because he has the good business sense to see when things are to their advantage in those two islands and when they are not.

Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have very good infrastructure government after government, not just with this one. There were days when the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had that all-powerful single vote, and he got just about everything he asked for up there. But we have the infrastructure up there and I think there has to be a solution as to how we can build on that, always having regard to the wishes of the majority of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman when doing so. I am prepared to assist in any way that I can in that respect.

The Honourable Attorney General, the Second Official Member, has had his hands more than full with legislative drafting, dealing with advising and generally dealing with the legal aspect of the Cayman Islands which has now come to be a highly sophisticated Government that is dealing with very complex legal problems. I believe that his decision to strengthen the Legal Drafting Department and to bring in and institute the revising of laws that is being carried out under him by Mr. Michael Bradley, QC, is one that is much needed and one which will help.

I am very pleased to know that we have also had within the Legal Department and the Courts Office the young Caymanian attorneys who are coming up who will one day, as senior attorneys, take their place within Government and the private sector. The Attorney General's support and guidance, also that of the Council on the Law School, is something that I very much appreciate.

It was good to hear professors (who are international in their scope and internationally acclaimed) at the University of Cambridge External Examination Syndicate saying what an achievement it is to produce a law school within such a tiny island which has the standard of acceptance of Honours Degree by the University of Liverpool. That achievement stands out. We are the only West Indian country, other than the University of the West Indies Law School, . . . in fact, there is no other small territory or island that has achieved those high standards in education. I fully support it and I urge the law firms and practising attorneys here to assure that young Caymanian lawyers get fair treatment in relation to employment, and that they assist them in their early stages in legal practise.

The Portfolio of Finance and Development is in very capable hands. In fact, the country is in such a good state that a majority of the Government can actually leave it to go on short trips promoting the country knowing full well that it is so properly run that they will come back and find it continuing.

I fully support the Third Official Member in his promotion of the offshore industry, because it is one of the two main economic lifelines of this country—either we promote it, or it will stagnate. There are too many other jurisdictions out there that would be prepared to take the business for us to let it stagnate.

I believe that we will see, in fact we have already seen the results from that trip. A substantial amount of applications have been made in the banking and trust category as a result of it and, like everyone else, I believe that we must promote it if we are going to move on.

There has been criticism by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, about the reason why two-thirds of the Government Members went on this trip. One of the main things that we were promoting was a stable government. That is what brings business here, not the fact that we have beaches—there are 50 other islands out there with beaches that are very good—it is the fact that we are a stable government, and the best way to promote a stable government is to show it. The Members of the team who went there are capable of holding their ground in an international setting.

What I found very amusing is that while only a part of the Government went off, leaving very capable members behind... in fact, despite what the Caymanian Compass said, I was at an Executive Council meeting that they claim I was not at because I went mid-stream. But, be that as it may, let us look at the other situation. All of the Opposition got on a plane and went to the United Kingdom. They did not even leave one-third back. The leader and his follower jumped on a plane and they all went.

Looking at it another way, they must believe that the Opposition is running good too, because they can leave the country and not have to worry about it.

A question came up (and I will deal with his a little bit later on) as to how we could do it. The answer is very simple—the Government, as everyone knows other than the two Opposition Members and Mr. Pineau, is in a very stable and good position. The members of the Chamber of Commerce are the happiest they have ever been. They call me up time and again to say how good it is—the economy is booming, there is increased tourism, thanks to the Minister for Tourism, everything is going well. We always tell them that most of those who are saying [negative things] are unemployed and unemployable, they have nothing to lose so they can say anything. Sensible people do not make erratic and extreme statements like that.

The New Caymanian, Madam Speaker, in its 24th February to 2nd March 1995, newspaper... and you know that The New Caymanian has a way of attracting losers. If you look at people writing in its columns (not all of them, but some of them—I am just limiting this to some of them) you will realise that they normally do not have a job so they go and write for The New Caymanian.

Mrs. Bridget McPartland wrote a very critical article under “My View”, as to why there was such a large Government delegation. As I mentioned earlier, the Government went to show the world that we had a stable Government, and that the Cayman Islands would continue whether or not people were sitting there with their ears to the telephones. This is not the way something that is properly run operates—you can leave it. If your business is running good, you can go off on vacation. It is when you cannot go off that the country has to worry.

In it, she stated: “Justifiable participation for the Minister of Education is amiss in regards to his portfolio, and the same can be said for the Member from Cayman Brac.”

Madam Speaker, this promotion was on the offshore business. I have been in the offshore business. I have been a professional lawyer for 25 years. I have put in more time out there than she has spent in these Islands, because she spent most of her life up in the United States. I have nine qualifications ranging through banking, law, arbitration, commerce and credit management—and they are senior qualifications. But, Madam Speaker, if I had been the operator of a liquor store, then I quite agree, I should not have gone. I will agree with her that she could definitely contribute nothing to that type of delegation—absolutely nothing.

She attacked the Honourable Minister for Youth, Sports and Social Services by referring to Hong Kong’s national sport as “horse racing (gambling)”, and said that there is concern because he went there. But, Madam Speaker, if we put horse racing against selling liquor... you tell me what has ruined more people.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman was there, and he contributed. We are trying to get business into Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the best way of doing that is by taking somebody who understands those two Islands. I was very proud that he was with us. I was proud of the discussions; we had round-the-table luncheon discussions at times and I believe that we will see a lot of benefit from it.

A very funny thing happened. We had a politician who declared that he was running, and do you know where he ran? To Hong Kong. And he is still there. He is her contemporary. He is possibly her running partner. Mr. Linford Pierson is up in Hong Kong. At least I went there for a few days and left it and came back to my people and my Government. That is what she should be writing about.

Madam Speaker, the situation is such that it is all well to try and be negative and destroy. The country does not need that; it does not need people with negative views in here because there is too much positive in life that can be done.

I think what Bridget [Mrs. McPartland] really needs to do is to go and try to write for a successful company or newspaper (if she is going to write at all in her spare time), and get rid of the nasty critical articles that have become the trademark of the financially troubled The New Caymanian.

We know that Mr. Linford [Pierson] has a way of writing letters and articles and getting other people to sign them. I really wonder sometimes... You know after a while you can see or learn the way in which people write when you know them good enough over the years in politics, and many times the articles that come out are obviously not articles of the writers themselves.

Speaker: Would the Honourable Minister wish to take the suspension?

Mr. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.33 PMPROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.54 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation, continuing.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Next in the Throne Speech is the Ministry of Tourism, Environment and Planning.

The Minister for Tourism has received very positive results in the area of tourism. I do not think there is anyone else who, year after year, could have shown the increases he has shown in this area, while keeping the quality of tourism within the economic bracket which benefits the Islands. I know that he has put in many, many long hours.

The Ministry of Tourism requires much traveling, as the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman (who was in the Ministry for Tourism many years ago) knows. He has put his full effort into seeing that this most important part—and it is the most important part—of our economy continues to function well.

The newspapers get so desperate for news that they make things up and publish it, as we saw them do about the Minister for Tourism by saying that Tourism was down. Sometimes some of the papers get confused between up and down so it is not unusual.

The policies that he has put in place in relation to tourism are sensible; they are reasonable growth policies, well thought out and they are long term. I am satisfied that we will see a continuation of beneficial increases in tourism.

I believe that his move to promote and to spread the basis of tourism into Europe is a good one, and to reduce the dependency on North American Tourists, which has been the situation in the past. I think we must continue to concentrate there, but spreading into Europe and the Far East is in the best interest of Tourism.

To be very frank—and I will refer to it after this as the 'Pineau Poll'—the lack of understanding that that poll showed for this important area of the economy is of the same low calibre as its author.

The Department of the Environment is obviously a very difficult department. Balances have to be struck between preservation and continuation of the human race in a manner in which they are entitled to continue in. What I think is important is to ensure that the policies that are in place here are not extreme one way or the other, but balanced; and that they reflect a sensible and practical approach to preservation. An extreme view of letting the human race suffer because of trees is one extreme approach; another is to destroy everything. So a balance has to be struck.

I know from talking to Mr. Cousteau that he feels that important dive sites should be left fallow, so to speak, for a period of time. It would be good to get the reaction of the divers in that area. Also, in the report from Madigan and Pratt done for the dive industry recently, it was pointed out that in Curacao they only allowed 5,000 dives per site. The reason I am saying this is not to say that it is right or wrong, but I believe that the Department of the Environment and the Diving Industry should focus more on dive sites that are in use—for example 17,000 plus people will visit some of them—focus on those, rather than spending all of their time out in the Harbour looking at anchors of cruise ships that are anchored out there.

That area, the Harbour area, has been an anchorage for probably the last 150 years. There are areas there that are, unfortunately, gone. But what we still have are other very good dive sites, and I think that 90% of the monitoring and the time of those within the departments who deal with it should be spent seeing if the dive boats and the highly used dive sites are monitored so that we can see what the effects are on them.

The reason I am saying this is that sometime back we were taken by boat into the harbour and shown the way the anchors had torn up parts of that. It struck me that there are no dive boats in this area anyhow, and that there are another 160, or 170 dive sites that are very important to the island. What is happening with those? Who is monitoring those? We know that some monitoring is going on, but I would say get off the cruise ships because they are an important part of the economy, and get off their anchors and the harbour areas that are, as I said, unfortunately gone, and start monitoring areas where we find 15,000 and 17,000 dives per annum.

I believe that the dive industry has to have self-discipline within it. It may have to take decisions as to striking a balance. Those sites are far more damaged by large numbers of humans diving there than they are by a few fish that may not have a bit of mangrove swamp (a few feet of it) in certain areas.

I am saying that I believe that we have to be sensible in our approach—instead of wasting a lot of time in the harbour or looking at someone up in the North Sound, for example, they should be up here on the dive sites themselves, in the deep water, monitoring that so that we can see what the effect is.

I take my children out to the [wreck of the] Cali. I have seen dive boats out there that are permanently tied on to one of the Cali's tanks. The rope runs down and it is tied on. What I am saying is that there is damage in these areas. There are a lot of snorkelers in these areas who go down... and when you get a boat with 150... and it was good to see that in some respects there may be some limitation because we do not want to have these restrictions just applying to one island, I think that they have to apply across the board.

Obviously the areas we have to worry most about and monitor most are the sites that are being used; other areas away from there do not affect the industry as much as damage to the sites that they dive on. I have seen debris out there and I only go to the shallow sites normally.

I think that the dive industry must discipline itself. Rather than deflecting on the few fishermen who put down fish pots, they should be spending their time monitoring sites that may one day be lost forever if they are not careful. No fish pot or removing of mangrove or something that is many miles away is going to be what does it—it will be the people themselves.

The Planning Department, like the Immigration Department, is always in the public's eye. The Minister for Tourism, along with the Department, has put out the Development Plan. There has been a lot of positive feedback on that, along with some negative feedback. There has been some extremist negative feedback on it. That is what will have to be sorted out because if there are people and organisations that attack everything within that plan and try to get everything they want in it, they may destroy it in the end, as they have done so many times over the past 20 years. We cannot always get everything we want. Once we get a reasonable amount we have to be satisfied with it.

I will ask the public to take a positive look at it. There are obviously problems. It is the most controversial document this country has ever seen from a political point of view and we have to go carefully with it. But the organisations that are now attacking it have to be careful that in their efforts to get too much, that they get nothing at all.

What I will say is that I intend to look at it very carefully, especially in relation to the George Town area and will form my view based on the feedback that I get in a balanced way.

The Fire Service under Mr. Kirkland Nixon continues to be one of the best-run departments, highly Caymanianised, very efficient. It is an asset to this country.

The Cayman Turtle Farm, a very popular tourist attraction, has over the past and up to the present done well. It has assisted Cayman in many ways. One day, as the turtle population increases, we will find that the meat side of the farm will contribute heavily to the financial side. I know many of us feel that the turtle takes a lot of time. We always have a wish for more.

This goes on next to the Ministry for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. I take my hat off to the Minister of Health. He came in part way through the Government's term and has taken on his shoulders the most difficult Ministry and most important Ministry from a national point of view. Success in drug abuse prevention and rehabilitation is going to impact directly on the success and continuation of the Cayman Islands as a stable and healthy country.

I will deal with the misguided present leader, and defunct Minister of Health who has joined the negative team, tomorrow. So, I will move over that area for the time being.

I am satisfied, having worked with the Minister of Health over the past year or so, that he is very capable of dealing with this Ministry. I think he knows, as well as we all do, that it is going to be a difficult and uphill task. But, I assure him that he has the National Team behind him—and that strength of teamwork is something that has always baffled the Opposition who cannot get their act together in doing and saying the same thing. We have stayed together and that strength is behind that Minister. He is a hard worker, he is capable and his approach with Strategic Planning with the Education Strategic Planning is the right approach.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town should be so proud of this Minister, and he should be supporting him every time he can, rather than asking all of these little twisted questions from time to time. They both represent the Bodden Town, Breakers, Lower Valley, Savannah districts. His positive approach to this is something that one would have expected to be forthcoming. Unfortunately, it has not been. However, the Minister for Health does not really need that type of support when he has the whole Team behind him.

The Throne Speech next goes on to the Ministry responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture. I had Social Services under my Ministry for eight years, and with that, areas such as what are now in this Ministry. I will be the first to admit that in the last two years the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture has done more than, perhaps, myself and the previous Ministers who had this Ministry. I think he has come to grips with what I found to be the most diverse and difficult area to deal with—trying to find solutions within areas of Social Services and the complexity of the problems of the youth.

Despite a bit of criticism by some misguided letters written by Mr. Linford and signed by one of the Wight boys who tried to criticise areas of this, I was extremely proud when I went to the Red Bay Primary School and George Town Primary school, to see that those children were able to perform on a proper sports track and field. I do not know if anyone here has ever seen what a young child's knees and legs look like when they fall down while running on the asphalt which the last Member left there, but parents of this country should say a very hardy thank you to the Minister for Sports for what he has done there. I can assure him that the people of George Town very much appreciate what has been done. I think his approach, being a very forthright one, is the only way to deal with some of these projects to get them through because it is so easy to sit and procrastinate over whether something is right or wrong; but until one finally takes a decision and gets on with it—which is the ability he has—one cannot get the results that he has.

I know that his heart is fully in his Ministry, and I know that whenever he does anything that it is for the advancement and the betterment of the Cayman Islands as a whole. I will never forget his closeness to the vast majority of the electorate and his sensitivity to their views.

The Third Elected Member for George Town has done wonders with the National Museum. She has continued to mold that over the last two years into what is a very important and good National Museum, both from a local and tourism point of view. The preservation of our past, the displaying of it and, most important, the accessibility of the National Museum to the children of this country is something that is most important to our culture. I am very happy to know that she chairs that important Board as well as the Community College Board.

I would like to commend the National Trust for the plaques that they put on the Town Hall, the Library and the Post Office in George Town. It is the beginning of what will be important to identify the old buildings and the important ones within the Cayman Islands.

I would like to come back to the question of Culture and areas of this Ministry when I am dealing with schools, to link it for the sake of brevity.

The schools and education have just come out of an Education Strategic Planning Exercise that has involved 353 people ranging through all of the strata of the Cayman Islands society. A lot of work and effort has been put in by members of the Planning Team and members of the Action Teams. For the first time, and I will hopefully be able to lay it on the Table of this Honourable House later on in this sitting, we will have a well thought out and balanced Education Plan.

I was no part of these teams at all. I think that is important for the public to understand. The results of this are from the 353 people who were involved in this exercise.

Many good things have arisen from it. The weaknesses within the system have been looked at and solutions to the problems have been put forward. The Action Plans, which comprise about 106, were drawn up, costed, and at the end they will show who is responsible and accountable for carrying out the specific work that will arise from those strategies.

I am satisfied that the work that they did has to be about as near to being correct in all respects as any other education plan that has been produced—I think I produced the only other one in the past—or that will be produced in the future in relation to these islands.

What I always find amusing is the fact that when things work good the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town give someone else the credit for it, and when they go bad they want to blame a member of Government.

The dilemma that they had was in the excellent results of the Caribbean Examinations Council, which were the best in the Caribbean and the best in the history of this school. They said that the teachers did that. But when there are problems in the school, then it is the Minister of Education who has to be responsible for the problems. I find that very amusing because if everything is coming out right, I cannot be doing it all wrong. I am going to label that as the 'Opposition and Pineau Syndrome' because when things are working well, it has to be naive to try to tell people that we are not doing things right. I would like to develop that further in some specific areas later on.

The dilemma that the two Opposition Members and their wayward follower (I do not know if he is the leader), Mr. Ezzard Miller, now have is that they try to tear down as much as they can of what has been going on. But the results in most areas are so good... and I will give The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman credit for that, at least I know he supports Cay-man Airways and he made some very well thought out suggestions in relation to it. When I was Opposition we had a Government that could not perform and did not even have a majority in the House, but it has to be very frustrating when they are such a small minority out of such a large majority of a well-cemented and capable National Team as they are up against. Trying to find areas to hurt such a strong team is not something that Ezzard and the two Members can even think about...

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [interjecting] The Chamber of Commerce took care of that.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: ...much less appear to be capable of doing.

Am I hearing from the Member that it is 4.30?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The Chamber of Commerce took care of the cementing...

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: From what I can understand the time is now by the Chamber's watch.

But, the Strategic Planning Exercise that was carried out, as I think the public will see, is one that will be good for the children of this country because it is totally built around what is good for the children and not involved in political ideas or political maneuvering or anything else.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: The timepiece in this Legislature says 4.30, Honourable Member.

May I ask for the Motion for the adjournment? The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Development and Planning, Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, we are happy to go by your timepiece because you are the person in charge of this House, as I understand it.

I have pleasure in moving the adjournment of this House until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. I see everybody is anxious to go. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 17 MARCH 1995.

FRIDAY
17 MARCH, 1995
10.08 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the First Elected Member for Bodden Town to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. Roy Bodden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, for ever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers.
Question No. 52, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 52

No. 52: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs how many Liquor and Music and Dancing Licences have been extended to 3:00 AM from 1988 to date.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: There has been only one occasion since 1988 where a Liquor Licence and a Music and Dancing Licence were extended to 3.00 AM.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Member say when in this period of time was this done and what was the occasion?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: The extension was granted in relation to a function on the 20th January, 1995. The function was to celebrate the birthday of some citizens of West Bay.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Member say which citizens of West Bay this extension was granted for?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: It is my understanding that one of the citizens was Mr. McKeeva Bush, and I am not certain who the other citizens were.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Honourable Temporary First Official Member say if other applications have been brought to his attention, not to 3.00 AM, but say, to 2.00 AM?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member, if you can answer that you may.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I expect there may have been other applications for extensions until 2.00 AM, but I am not in a position to say how many or when they were submitted.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Temporary First Official Member say if he is aware of any special conditions which were related to this occasion which may have led the Liquor Licensing Board to its decision to grant this licence?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker, I am not aware of any special conditions.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 53, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 53

No. 53: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture if employees of the Water Authority are paid overtime.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Yes, some employees of the Water Authority are paid overtime.

The Authority pays overtime to all weekly paid staff. Some salaried staff who are on emergency call are paid a duty allowance which covers emergency work performed outside normal working hours. There is an arrangement between the Authority and its employees where all salaried staff below managerial level who are required to work overtime take the overtime hours as additional vacation leave in lieu of payment. Staff at the managerial level are not eligible for overtime compensation.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: As a matter of clarification in regard to the payment of staff, would it be correct to understand that there are some staff who are not paid overtime and are specifically granted leave in place of the overtime they would normally be expected to have?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: That is correct.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Could the Minister say if there has been any representation from staff in regard to overtime payments where there may be an indication that the present arrangement might need adjustment for actual cash payments?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The answer is no.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 54, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman

QUESTION NO. 54

No. 54: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture what amounts have been earned by the Water Authority and paid into General Revenue since November, 1992.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the leave of the House to bring the answer to this question on Monday, as the answer is not ready.

DEFERMENT OF QUESTION NO. 54 Standing Order 23(5)

The Speaker: The question is that the answer to the question be deferred until Monday. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The question is accordingly deferred until Monday's sitting.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 54 DEFERRED UNTIL MONDAY, 20 MARCH 1995.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 55, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 55

No. 55: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs what counselling services are available at Northward Prison.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: The following counselling services are currently available at Northward Prison:

Alcohol and Drug: A limited number of inmates are escorted from the Prison to Cayman Counselling Centre. Staff from the Centre are currently screening candidates for individual and group therapy as a prelude to expanding services upon the completion of a room for this purpose. The room is scheduled to be completed at the end of April, 1995.

Religious: Available on a daily basis to all inmates through the Prison Chaplain and volunteers under his direction, such as members of the Prison Ministry Fellowship.

Educational: Provided on a daily basis by two members of the Prison staff who are trained teachers. Assistance in special courses is also provided by volunteers.

Psychiatric: Provided by the psychiatrist and a psychiatric nurse from the George Town Hospital.

Medical: Provided on a daily basis by staff health nurse, who draws on and coordinates assistance from the George Town Hospital as necessary.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Regarding the alcohol and drug counselling, can the Honourable Member say whether this counselling is mandatory or whether it is voluntary?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, those inmates who are now provided counselling at the counselling centre are normally inmates in respect of whom the court has ordered that they receive counselling. Once the room referred to in the substantive answer is available, then counselling will be available to all inmates who seek it. It remains for the court, and not for the prison, to order counselling.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Member could say if when the room is ready in April if the counselling at the prison will be conducted by the Cayman Counselling Centre, or will it be a separate agency performing this task?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the counselling will be conducted by the Cayman Counselling Centre which has a staff member ready and available for full time involvement in this activity.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Due to the fact that there is only one psychiatrist, and he carries a heavy workload, is there any consideration being given to hiring a psychiatrist at Northward Prison?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker, I am not aware of any consideration being given to that at the moment. I suspect that if the current psychiatrist and his superiors make representation as to the need for additional psychiatric skills that representation would be considered.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wish to ask the Honourable Member if he is in a position to state the number of those prisoners at Northward who undergo psychiatric counselling?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker, I am unable to give that number; but, if the Member wishes, I can provide it to him.

The Speaker: That would be good. Thank you.
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, will the Honourable Member say if in the new programme outlined in the Throne Speech, that is, the programme with regards to additional job training and work placement, is any additional counselling included in this new programme?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I am not aware of any particular additional counselling in relation to job skills. However, there are efforts being made as part of the programme that the Member is referring to, to better facilitate the transition of inmates back into society in terms of providing mechanisms whereby they can find appropriate gainful employment. But I am not aware of any particular counselling skills related to that.

The Speaker: The next question is No 56, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 56

No. 56: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member what is the current balance in the Priscraft Account.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the balance in the Priscraft Account as of 27th February, 1995, was $11,992.54.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Member say how these funds are disbursed or utilised, and for what purposes?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the account was established under guidelines and those guidelines provide that the funds are to be disbursed for the official use of the Prison Service and in particular for improvement and expansion of training and vocational facilities for prisoners with a view to increasing the quantity and quality of work produced.

Typically they are used for the purchase of materials which prisoners use for their crafts and other work. They use it for the purchase of items, such as exercise equipment or educational materials, and other things related to the welfare of prisoners.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Member say who holds responsibility for this account?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: The Prison Director is authorised to expend monies from the account. He is required to provide the Accountant General with records of transactions on the account quarterly, and to annually submit a record of the entire transaction of the account for the previous year.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Would the Honourable Member give an undertaking to see that this account is strictly monitored, since during the period of 1988 to 1992, when I was Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee I remember reading in the Auditor General's Report where the Auditor General expressed concern that this practice was unusual and that such funds should be handled by the Treasury. The Public Accounts Committee supported this.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I will certainly give the undertaking to review the previous consideration the Member has referred to and to reconsider whether the existing arrangement, or that suggested, would seem more appropriate.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 57, standing in the name of The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 57

No. 57: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member to provide a list of non-Caymanians serving time at Northward Prison by nationality, offence, length of sentence and time remaining to be served.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, there are 29 non-Caymanians serving at Northward Prison. The information requested is provided in the attached list (see Appendix I).

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Member say whether it is the practice that any of these prisoners serving long sentences are repatriated to their country of origin to complete any part of their sentence, or is it the practice that these prisoners serve the entire sentence in the jurisdiction of the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, the preference would be that all foreign prisoners be repatriated to serve their sentences in their country of origin. Those countries of origin, however, are not eager to receive prisoners, any more than we would be. Repatriation can only take place when the prisoner requests it, and there are few countries (even in instances where they do request) who are willing to take prisoners and accommodate them.

I think the most prevalent practice at the moment is for prisoners to serve a minimum of one-half of their sentence and then be referred to the Parole Board for consideration of the remission of the remainder of their sentence and their deportation. If the Parole Board favours that, it would make a recommendation to that effect to the Governor who has the final authority to decide on remission and deportation.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker, just a point of clarification. Are we to understand that upon completion of sentence or parole, whichever comes quicker, these prisoners are subject to a deportation order?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, certainly where there is remission of outstanding sentence, deportation is the norm. I am unable to say whether in instances where prisoners have served the full sentence, but my belief is that it is also the norm. But I am not positive and I do not wish the Member to feel that it is. I can clarify it and supply him with information.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Just to make the request that the Honourable Member find out if it is the normal practice that these prisoners, upon conviction for a criminal offence and serving their time or remission, are subject to deportation at the end.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Madam Speaker, I will give that undertaking to make that enquiry and let the Member know.

The Speaker: Thank you. That concludes Question Time for this morning.

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY THE SPEAKER

The Speaker: Before I call on the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation to continue his debate on the Throne Speech, I feel constrained to make a few remarks. These remarks will cover contents of debate on the Throne Speech which have so far taken place.

First of all, there have been many repetitions of a particular Member's arguments, or arguments of other Members in their speeches. As you know this is not countenanced.

Secondly, there have been accusations and imputations against persons outside of this Chamber. As Members are aware, there is immunity against statements in this House—Members have full immunity. If such statements were made outside the Chamber there is, naturally, recourse to the Courts. Members, therefore, in their speeches have a duty to use this freedom of speech within the Chamber with responsibility.

The Bible says, "Judge not and ye shall not be judged." If a Member can substantiate any statement of wrongdoing made against any Member in this Chamber, or against any member of the public against whom these accusations or imputations have been made, it is the responsibility of the Member to give this evidence, and if there are papers in connection with this, to lay them on the Table of the House.

I would therefore ask all Members in future debate to do so with responsibility in spite of the immunity which Members have in the Chamber. Therefore, this is addressed to all Members, and I hope that in the future this will be borne in mind.

The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation continuing the debate on the Throne Speech.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The schools have come under criticism and what I find is that many times it is through a lack of understanding on the part of Elected Members of the Opposition who are levelling that criticism. The Strategic Planning Process that has been carried out is one which has been endorsed indirectly by some of the Members who are levelling that criticism.

Some time ago, 22 February 1991, the Hansards show that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town said: "I would like to see more dialogue, more com- munication and a clearer sense of direction between the education authorities and the public." That, I submit, fully endorses what has been carried out, which is the Strategic Planning.

The process that seems to be totally misunderstood by Mr. Ezzard Miller who, in his futile efforts has levelled criticism at both myself and the Minister of Health Services, realises that if he is able to destroy such a democratic and very effective planning process that he can put the Health Services, the Drug Rehabilitation and Prevention, and the Schools back into the chaos that existed when it was under that government for the previous eight years to the 1992 election.

We know that the importance of having in place the proper plan is very important to the success of the education system. But, what is most important is that it has involved 353 people directly, and the whole public indirectly, because the way that the Planning Team was drawn from members of the public cut clearly across the whole strata of the society and brought out the best representation that is, in my view, possible. So when Members of this House, or the public level criticism at the plan they are levelling it at the population of this country because I took no part personally in any of the teams, either the Planning or the Action Teams, that put together the strategies and the action plans that we will ultimately have. It is purely the work of the people and it is what they want.

I had instances where people said to me, "You are giving up your power within the Ministry because the people are going to do the Education Plan for you." I told them that was what was necessary to ensure that this plan will be successful and that it will be long term. I pointed out to them that I am not power-crazy, power-stricken, like some of the other politicians whom we find, especially those in, and those related to, the last government who lost their election mainly on the basis of wanting a chief ministerial government. They wanted a Chief Minister.

Perhaps the most amusing instance of this is that we are now finding that those same people who wanted to push this country into full internal self-government and independence are beginning to get together on one platform. Their dilemma now is that there are two leaders and, unfortunately, only one follower. That has to be very frustrating, I know, for the follower.

I commend the plan to the public and hopefully it will be laid on the Table at this meeting, and I will elaborate further on it. But, we have seen the school system go from a situation where there had been decisions made by the last government, with the endorsement of the Governor at that time, of changing for the sake of change. I have been able to carry on with many of these changes—many times I had no choice but to carry on with these changes—but no thought had been put into it.

We had instances of adding a year to the high school but not knowing where it went. We had instances where 205 children were put out of pre-schools onto the streets because the class was needed to add a sixth [year] to the primary school. I agree with adding the extra year to the primary school, but it shows the damage that can be done when you have an inconsiderate government that was reaching an election which it knew it would lose, and overnight they tried to implement everything.

I am happy to say that the many problems that we inherited with discipline within the school system, a lot of the uncertainty that existed, we have been very lucky, thank God, that discipline within the schools has reached a much more acceptable stage. That, in itself, goes for having a stabilisation of the system by having certainty and teachers now realising that a system is coming in where there will be accountability and the system can develop.

The results of the school speak for themselves. There is no good for the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to get up and say that the system is not being properly run, attacking the system, because the results speak for themselves. The CXC exams and the GCSE results were the best that this country has ever seen and when you have good results, then the persons who run that system have to be doing the right thing. The dilemma that the Opposition, and now their other leader, Mr. Ezzard Miller, have to face is that we have been successful. If we are successful it means that we are doing the right thing.

I was really amused at the way one of the Opposition Members tried to explain why the results were so good, but why I was doing the wrong thing. That Opposition Member must know that just will not go down with the public, that is why the previous government, which he is now linked with, lost the elections—every member of it.

The Strategic Planning process that the Minister of Health has gone through is, in my view, something which should have been done years ago. The amount of money that was wasted on reports of experts... and I will give what the opinion of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is of Mr. Miller in a short while.

The National Team, in its Manifesto, which the First Elected Member for Bodden Town endorsed, has substantially fulfilled all of its objectives. We stated, and I will just read this under 'Our Policy': "The Education Review and Plan must be further studied and caution exercised where radical change has been recommended. We will also give special emphasis to encouraging, training and motivating our Caymanian people for better paying jobs."

Our Objectives... and as I said this has the smiling face of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, so these are his policies as well as the National Team's policies: "1) Solicit further public input on all major changes under the Education Plan and Review." That has been carried out, and that is the Planning Review that has just recently taken place; "2) Slowly phasing in any such changes for teachers and pupils." The action plans under the review have ensured that this is the case. We are not having decisions made overnight, attempted to be implemented the next day. "3) Keep an open line of communication between the Education Portfolio, departments, teaching staff, parents and students and work closely with sports and community affairs." That communication line has been opened up and it is one that must be constantly kept open to ensure that there is a smooth operation. I go into the schools along with the Permanent Secretary and Chief Education Officer and actually sit down with staff and discuss the problems which relate to the areas of the Constitution that I can deal with—the policy areas. I believe that they appreciate this and there are also meetings that are compulsory between Heads of schools, the Principals and their staff once per month. The Heads of each school also meet once per month. There are meetings with the Education Department and also with the Ministry. We work closely with Sports and Community Affairs.

The fourth objective was: "Increase, where necessary, financial assistance to private schools and colleges including the International College of the Cayman Islands (ICCI)." For eight years the last two governments deprived ICCI of their recurrent grant every year. I think that was an utter disgrace—to have taken away the grant from a private institution of higher learning. We have to remember that the person involved in that government for eight years was Mr. Ezzard Miller, who was on a platform with the two Opposition Backbenchers of this House. I submit that they will do it again if they are put in, because eight years of a policy, in my view, will be repeated the next time that they are in the House. But we intend to keep them out, God willing, these next four years that are coming up.

So, it was the last government and the one before it who ostracised the funds for ICCI. In any way that this Government can assist, we will assist.

I have always held that it is good value for money to put, as we did, $450,000 into the high school for the Catholic School. It will save the Government $1.5 million in recurrent revenue every year. Over 10 years that is $15 million that will be saved, for spending $.5 million. The private schools now have one-third of the students, therefore that cost to Government would be an extra $9 million to $11 million per annum if those students were in public schools. So I will continue to assist private schools and I believe that assisting private schools to get high schools, Junior and Senior, will avoid our having to split the George Hicks School which now has a very heavy population of students. It will perhaps avoid a capital outlay of $10 million to $12 million.

Objective number five was to, "Increase government scholarships and courses and reduce the bureaucracy for applicants." This has been done. Madam Speaker, anyone who qualifies under the guidelines of the Education Council gets a scholarship without exception; only part scholarship and a small amount loan because we believe, as did the last government (in fairness), that students should put something into their education. They should not feel like it is totally given to them. The amount of loan varies, it may be one-fifth, it may be a quarter, depending upon the ability of the parent to pay.

Objective six was to "Introduce a National Teachers Appreciation Day, encourage an Education Week and launch an annual Child Month for youth, sports and community development." As we know, Sports, Community Development and Youth has gone elsewhere but that Member has done this. The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs has put out an extremely large amount of effort and has very capably dealt with this area.

We know that we have the Education Week. We have something that is not even here, we have the Education Conference that I know the Backbench Opposition Members fully agree with. We have substantially fulfilled many of these areas.

Objective seven was to "Further develop technical and vocational education and programmes." I would just like to remind Members of what is now offered in this area: —

At the Cayman Brac High School we have Technical, Woodwork and Technical Drawing taken to CXC and Certificate of Education level.

At the George Hicks School, all students in years 7 and 8 study Woodwork or Home Economics, Technical Drawing and Jewellery Making.

In the High School we have: Building; Electrical Engineering, Technical Drawing, Woodwork, Information technology, Bookkeeping, Office Procedures, Typing, Work Experience, Food and Nutrition, Clothing and Textiles, Home Management, Child Care, Commercial Studies, Food Studies, Graphical and Material Studies, Motor Vehicle Studies, Needle Craft, Rural Science, Textiles, and Art.

At the Community College level it is even more extensive. I have that somewhere and I will have to read that when I locate it at a later stage. But that has gone into the areas of hotel training and building mechanics.

Number eight of our objectives said that, "Special emphasis will be put on the basic subjects of Reading, Writing and Arithmetic, especially in the students early years." That is going on now, but will become far more pronounced when the National Curriculum is put in place. I think it is widely accepted by everyone that without the three basic subjects a student's ability to learn has to be hampered.

Number nine: "Within the frame work of the Community College..." and I would like to come back to this area because this is where I would like to read my notes about what is being done in the hotel training area.

Number 10, "In conjunction with the private sector, to encourage an effective apprenticeship and work study programme." We have done a substantial amount in this area. More needs to be done on number 10, however. The work-study programme and the apprenticeship area are now partly carried out by the releases from the College for work experience where the students actually go in, and from the high schools also, to the work areas and get the actual experience.

So, we (the National Team) have been able to—despite what the dislodged politicians out there want to say—stay fully together. We stand on platforms together; we have our meetings every Tuesday and we are a full team, as effective now as we were in the beginning. It is this team work that has strengthened us and with God's help, has put this country back into the good position that it is now in.

I will now deal with what has been a topic for some time—the question of the Medical Services and the Hospital.

There is no doubt that as Backbenchers, some years ago, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman... I guess I will have to start referring to the First Elected Member for Bodden Town before I refer to the other two Members because at present he seems to be the one cementing the factor between the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and Mr. Ezzard Miller. This is what we had agreed and which had been the Backbenchers position throughout the four years that we dealt with this when the last government was in. I would like to read from the Manifesto in relation to our position. This Manifesto does not include the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, but it does include the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

"We are against the building of the new hospital in the swamp, and will review the hospital plans and documents and accordingly take any necessary action which is legal and prudent." We have done that. This is a mandate that was given to us by the people of this country and it is also the position that was taken by the seven of us Backbenchers when this arose. It is only now that I am hearing favour, especially pushed by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, about putting this hospital up in the swamp.

On the 29th of November, 1991, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said, as recorded in the Hansard at page 16: "I personally believe that the MRCU should be ideally moved from there. Take that to the area of land that the Government owns in the swamp on the dike road. Ideally that is the business it is in—Mosquito Research and Control. Knock it down and use that large area there that the people of this country have known forever as the Hospital and build a new Hospital there in phases."

[Voice from across the floor] Who said that?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

What are we doing? Exactly that. I do not understand how they can continuously attempt to jump the fence. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town has hopped over the fence so many times it must be difficult to realise what is a fence anymore. But this is the position that those two Opposition Members and we, ourselves, as Opposition took. We took it to such an extent that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, along with a colleague of his, proposed a hospital that would be built on the present hospital site.

You know, politics produces strange bedfellows.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] You should know that.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: But the one thing I have never done is to hop over the fence. I have always known which side of the fence I am on and remained there—I have been consistent. I opposed the hospital in the swamp then; I oppose it now. What I am going to find somewhat amusing is to see how the single follower of this team makes a decision between who to follow—one saying that the hospital should be built where it now is, and the other one saying that it must go in the swamp. In the end he may be the leader and the other two the followers.

I do not believe that there is any way the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman can deny the fact that we, as Opposition Members back in 1991, opposed putting the hospital in the swamp and leaving it where it is. I could go on to read areas of this because very cogent reasons were put forward that the Minister for Health has very ably already dealt with. He was so good at that that I do not need to repeat the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

What I read from the Hansard was different from what the Minister for Health read from, but he endorsed it and showed where the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had very clearly stated about not building the hospital down in the swamp. The public needs to be reminded that where you get views that are put forward so strongly a few years ago now being revered for the sake of politics, they have to look very carefully. In fact, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman put forward very cogent reasons that we all agreed with. But I have also found in looking at the Hansard, at page 27 of the 11th March, 1992 that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had this to say in relation to the hospital: "Madam Speaker, this situation is one where I think the Government has failed and the Member has failed to do what they should have done in the time since this was first given until now." That statement says that Mr. Ezzard Miller had failed and his government had failed. Therefore, I do find it strange as to how there could be a reconciliation of the views of Mr. Miller and the views of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman in this situation.

I think that when you find such strange bedfellows together in politics you will find the addition of some of the other remnants of the other government, some of those who failed to get in at the last election, such as, Mr. Linford Pierson and, perhaps, Mr. John Hurlston, Mr.

Brian Wight, they are all going to be pulling together now.

But the dilemma that faces people who jump the fence is explaining to the public why you are on that side of the fence; normally it is one that they move from—jumped over, jumped back again, we have even had some hopping over again. It is like 'hippity-hop' politics.

The views of Mr. Miller, who was the Member for Health at the time, that he would write off a generation of Caymanians has got to be one of the cruellest statements that I have ever heard. The Minister for Health has taken a different approach. He has said that he is going to positively go out there and try to help those young people who for reasons many times not totally of their own, but from external and intrinsic factors, have gotten into a situation which they cannot deal with.

I would now like to touch on areas relating to education in Cayman Brac. There are many projects that have been planned with the help of the new Head of the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Education Board—the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I am very happy to have him heading the Education Board and education in that country because he is resident in Cayman Brac and he knows of the problems there. I think he is far better equipped to know what his people want than the other non-resident Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I must say that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, while talking about part of the Government leaving the island to go and promote it for a few days, must have had his tongue in his cheek because his visits to Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are only that—visits. He spends more time out of his constituency, far more time... and my question is, if it was wrong for us to leave for five days, how can he leave Cayman Brac and Little Cayman for the vast majority of the four years that he is in this House?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] You see, you do not have the sense to understand the difference between the Government's Executive and me, an ordinary Member visiting the Brac when I choose. I tell you...

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This whole question, I can see, is creating a lot of concern. But it is a fact; if you are living 70 miles away from your constituents how can you be close to them? Your duty is to live close to your constituents, that is what you were elected for.

But the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman resides there and these are some of the solutions in relation to schools that he has put up.

I know that this obviously bothers the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, but facts are facts.

One of the things that we see and that is...

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] ...send in fire trucks and take them off the plane and what not....

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: ... in progress...

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] ...off Cayman Airways...deal with that...

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: ... we are looking at is purchasing additional land at the primary school for expansion and play area in relation to several of the schools...

I am going to have to start this over because it seems like these members are trying to break my train of thought.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: You have a train of thought?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Back to the resident Member who now heads the Education Team in Cayman Brac, having taken over from the now defunct Head that was the colleague of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] ...you are talking about Oswald Rankine who you chased out of Office.

[Members talking and laughing]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am wondering whether Madam Speaker does not perhaps hear the last seven minutes of dialogue to me?

Plans are in progress to purchase additional land at the primary schools for expansion and play areas. We are also looking at air-conditioning the High School Multipurpose Hall for more comfort for the students and for taking their external exams. I think this is important, and I commend the First Elected Member [for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] who is a resident of Cayman Brac.

The Teachers' Centre is now under consideration for purchase and remodelling to suit the need of Mrs. Georgene and her staff.

As Members know they recently appropriated money and we purchased a swimming pool and now we are looking at the surrounding area, upgrading it and in due course will come for money in relation to hard courts. It is good to see the interest that the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman is taking in this area, and I very much appreciate his help within the area of my Ministry and the school system.

I am very happy that the Brac schools and the system there will now get the attention paid to it that it should get from having a true resident Cayman Bracker as Head of the Education Board.

Going back to areas of the schools, one of the things that does bother me, and into this I would include the National Cultural Foundation, is that we find that in many instances the true culture of Cayman is not being taught. We find the injection of culture from other Caribbean Islands. With rare exceptions, what has been put on at the Harquail Theatre by the National Cultural Foundation has always been of east Caribbean extract.

Their culture in many ways is different from the culture of Caymanians.

I think it is important that within the schools and the Cultural Foundation itself, we get back to what is true Caymanian culture. I listened to some of the plays... and to be frank, I cannot understand half of what is being said because there is an attempt to follow some of the patois of some of the other islands. I am not saying that some exposure is not good. But I think the emphasis that will be coming out of the exercise of planning that we have done, will be to ensure that within our schools true Caymanian culture is going to prevail.

I was very shocked to see on page 10 of Friday's Caymanian Compass the vulgar pictures that were there of Patra's exhibition at the Lions' Centre. Personally I do not feel that the Caymanian Compass should have shown that. That is not culture. They were really postures and poses that I do not think helped this country. I would call on the press to be more responsible in this area. It is also the duty of the police—and maybe no law was broken—to police things because their presence many times will reduce this.

I am also concerned in parades, say, the Batabano, where we see fairly young children who are having dances that are too explicit. I know this is a touchy area, but certain things have to be said and I know that I have a very heavy duty from the school's point of view to ensure that Culture within the schools is Caymanian, but also wholesome. I call on organisations, such as The Cultural Foundation, and those who organise some of these things to try to keep the displays clean and within reasonable bounds. I would like to see more culture and plays from countries other than the Caribbean. If we are going to have exposure, then get exposure from North America or Europe and occasionally put in plays from these areas.

I think the Carib Arts exhibition was very interesting. We have some good culture in the Caribbean, but I think it has been over done from the use of patios from some of the other islands.

I was criticised, and I do not mind repeating this, for saying that the type of talk that, for example, Aunt Sookie and Zekiel were going on with, should not be taught and brought into the schools, I take that stand. We teach English in the schools, and if it is confused with a type of language that is alien to us, it cannot help the children. I know that it has been looked at in depth by the Strategic Planning Exercise and I believe that positive results will come in that area.

We have seen that there have been questions asked about the cost of the trip that we went on to New York, London and Hong Kong. I would like to show that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman (who levelled a lot of criticism in this area) have been getting their share of spending Government's money on rides that, I submit, have produced no benefits.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town attended a United Kingdom Commonwealth Parliamentary Association seminar from the 2nd—14th March, 1992, in London. The cost to us here, excluding the cost of what the United Kingdom would have paid for (hotels, et cetera) was $4,056.35. The airfare was $3,736.35. That is more than the round-the-world ticket that members of this delegation had travelling to New York, London and Hong Kong. That is the truth; and if necessary I can get the exact amount. It was in the area of US$3,600, about C$3,300. But we went there to promote the Cayman Islands. This money was spent going over there to have a visit on the parliamentary side.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town also, on the 6th to the 19th May, 1993, went to Perth, Australia. His airfare was $5,155. That is one of the largest costs for airfare that I have ever seen. It must have been first class from here to there and back. It is twice the amount that we paid to go and promote the Cayman Islands. What did the Cayman Islands get from that? Nothing. There was no promotion of the Cayman Islands—you go to the seminar, you speak, you are involved in it...intellectually, we were represented, but the point I am making is that, as they say, 'People in glass houses should not throw stones.'

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town also went in May 1991 to Trinidad. The airfare was $1,028. He attended the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Conference in Barbados in 1992: subsistence and airfare $1,812. This is money that is coming out of funds where Government grants substantial subsidies to. It is, therefore, indirectly the public's money. So, it is not just the Government that has airfares and goes around the place. At least from our point of view we have seen the results—we have drummed up some business, we held the flag up and the public will get a substantial part back than what was spent on these promotions, if not more.

I would like the First Elected Member for Bodden Town to stand up when he speaks at a later stage and admit this—if necessary I will lay it on the Table—and tell the public for the airfare of $5,155, a subsistence of $520, what has the public received for it? What has the public received in return for that money?

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, on a Point of Order.

The Speaker: May I hear the Point of Order Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The Minister for Education is attempting to mislead the House, or at least persons who might hear what he is saying who do not know that the First Elected Member in those instances went as a delegate to Commonwealth Parliamentary Association Conferences, which were approved by the relevant authority of this Legislative Assembly, and those funds were expended as they had to be, if even anyone else went to those. He is giving a direct impression that this was a gallivanting exercise for his pleasure.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, that is not a Point of Order. It will be left to the First Elected Member for Bodden Town to set forth a reply to these remarks made by the Honourable Minister in his debate.

Will you continue please, Honourable Minister?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, in May 1989, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman attended London on a visit, a Commonwealth Parliamentary Association, United Kingdom visit. Subsistence—$750; airfare $2,930.30. That is about what we paid to go to the three places to try to promote the Cayman Islands. He also attended one in Belize in 1990 and the total there was $1,113.20.

I agree, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman did not drum up the massive airfares that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town did, but the bottom line is that it is the public's money that was spent for them to go abroad. So they should not come to this House and try to let the public believe that it is only the Government that takes trips on the public's money. At least when we go you know what it is for.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] Everyone knows what it was for.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understood that the trip of the two Opposition Members to the United Kingdom was partly financed through friends. I understand that was the statement that was made. At least we know where our financing came from.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] The only financing you know is the Government.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Any time that I have to travel abroad in the interest of the Government then I make sure that the Government gets value for money.

I am possibly...I know I am the only Member of Executive Council who has held the position for Aviation who does not take free trips on Cayman Airways. On principle, personal trips I do not take—I am entitled to them, but I can afford it. I pay for myself, when I go personally and I pay for my children. In fact, I have gotten to the stage that when I personally pay I do not even put in for the mileage that I do on other airlines.

I have always tried to be fair. No Member of this Government just runs off, the way they have tried to allege in their public meetings, to spend money unnecessarily. Really, when you look at the record of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, not too much the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, he remains here (leaders do not get as many trips as followers) but...

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] That's why you go on to Hong Kong, London and so on because there are no leaders.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There has been a lot of money spent, and I would say to you the public (when they question us) to question them and let us hear what was done for the government of this country when all this money was spent.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister would this be a convenient time?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.36 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.02 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation continuing the debate.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The area of expenditure in the Throne Speech, and parts in relation to it, show that this Government has been very prudent... and we have, for the first time that I can remember, fully balanced the budget in that we are not balancing it with loans.

We do have a problem with expenditure in relation to the Cuban migrants, which is extra. But it is a far cry from the days when the country (as they did in the three years prior to the 1992 election, under the last government) had to actually borrow, for the full amount of its Capital Expenditure, $15 million. We are actually paying for capital expenditure out of our recurrent expenditure, and it is like buying your house out of the income that you get rather than going to the bank and borrowing it.

Long gone are the days where we had nearly absolute power on the separate Authorities. We know that the Auditor General, in his report of 1993, stated that, and I am reading this: "The results of this exercise [which was checking into customers' accounts] was confirmed under billings of $2,634 on two accounts plus an underbilling of $818 on one other account." We know that underbilling was the then Chairman of the Water Authority, Mr. Pierson.

The loopholes that existed before where you had the situations of contracts for $2.5 million being signed before the Public Tenders Committee had even finished deliberating on it, as Mr. Linford did with the Communications contract; or the granting of contracts that were not in accordance with the Finance and Stores Regulations by Statutory Authorities, as was extensively done by Mr. Ezzard Miller in his time in here as Minister for Health. It goes to show where money was squandered and wasted by the previous government.

Perhaps the most striking statement was where the Auditor General (at page 48) stated in relation to the seven consultants by the Health Services Authority, of which Mr. Ezzard Miller was the Chairman, he said: "No information concerning the terms of engagement of any of these six consultants appears to have been provided to the Board." That adds up to one simple thing, the Board was operated in a way that was exclusive to the Chairman, Mr. Ezzard Miller, who managed to force heavy contracts ($.5 million) through the Board without going to the Tenders Committee; but worse than that, without even giving the information to the Authority. Such was the lack of accountability, the disregard and the excessive squandering of Mr. Ezzard Miller.

While we have applied the Financial and Stores Regulations to the Statutory Corporations, when this was going through in the same meeting in 1991 (which I read earlier) where the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman stated that the hospital was being put wrongly in the swamp, I said that the bill that was then being passed in that session was a blank cheque for Mr. Ezzard Miller to fill in as he wished. How right I was, because he wrote it, so to speak, by giving the contracts to Health Care and Mr. Conti.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman mentioned the Spotts land that he said was bought one day and sold another, when he knows that information in this House shows that property had been purchased some six or seven years before. What had happened in instances here, contracts were signed and transfers were not taken, so it is misleading to the public to let them believe that in the instance on the land at Spotts that the person who sold it had bought it the day before. That is not correct. It was contractually bound some seven years before, thus the variation in price.

But that is miles apart from taking 250 acres of land and extending the lease for another 40-odd years and getting $1 million down and $1 million over 10 years without interest. One million dollars over 10 years without interest. That, in my view, borders on what may be termed financial rape of the country.

We see a disregard for the process of Government. I understand that the two Opposition Members who went to the United Kingdom to discuss certain other secret or confidential matters that they did not reveal in their public meetings or press reports—I wonder if on that agenda was the question of Constitutional Advancement...

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] No, but it was official corruption.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: ...the Members of the last Government lost their seats because they tried to advance the constitution of the Cayman Islands against the wishes of the people. They told them loud and clear that they could not do it. That was one of the things that brought them down.

What we do know...and in the area that deals with the Governor's Constitutional powers right at the end... is that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, at least when he was with us as Opposition, always thought of himself as one day being a leader and a Chief Minister. Actually, this is where a lot of other friction came.

I understand that in the meeting last night that Mr. Miller and one of the backbenchers took me to task on a lot of things. But the public knows that I have been the one single, stalwart Member—along with many others, do not get me wrong—who has always been the obstacle in the way of that Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and Mr. Miller and Mr. Linford Pierson getting this country advanced into full internal self-government and independence. I have stood against it, and throughout the governments I have been the one to say leave the Constitution the way it is because it works.

Because if you get...

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] Wil Pineau...

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: ...power-hungry people...

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting]...and threatening the Board of the Chamber of Commerce...

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: ... as Chief Minister—and if you get people as Chief Minister of a country who, especially if they are unemployed or unemployable, it makes it worse, then (and I am speaking generally) you really have a country that is headed for disaster. Look at what Bermuda is facing at this time.

So, I think the Governor was very right and he very carefully pointed out in the Throne Speech that he is responsible, as he said here, "It is perhaps timely to emphasise that the Civil Service comes directly under my command and I take full responsibility for all decisions regarding the Civil Service." That is the position.

But what has obviously happened is that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have questioned that area of the Constitution. We know that under the Constitution that was being put forward by the last Government, he would not have it directly under him.

We know about the wish for the removal of the Governor that came up during those Constitutional times—removal of the office of Governor. That really means that the country is then headed for independence.

Maybe we should learn if the question of Constitutional Advancement was on the agenda of the two Opposition Members, that is very important to the people.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: [Interjecting] Official Corruption...

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What has been very clearly brought out is that the people of this country, whom I absolutely support... And, as I said, the reason why there is this fanatic attempt to attack me in public meetings is because I have always been the block in the way of these people who see themselves as future leaders and future Chief Ministers of this country. I will do everything within my legal power to ensure that this country is not taken over and destroyed by power-hungry people.

I would like to go to the last main area of what I have to say, and this is to lead up to Cayman Airways, to turn to the Portfolio that I did not touch on yesterday, and that is the Ministry for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

The Minister has very ably dealt with agriculture. We have seen it go from strength to strength. We know that the last Government under Mr. Linford Pierson abolished the agricultural show, which I think was one of the worst things done to agriculture because it broke the backbone of people who were interested in, and promoting, agriculture.

Everyone knows that his interest was in the big contracts not in the little man and things such as agriculture. I was very distressed to see that while the Chamber of Commerce gave that Ministry in its survey last year 12% excellent; 40% good and 36% satisfactory, this time that Ministry, which has advanced so much, has now fallen back to where they have rated agriculture unsatisfactory.

Obviously, the Chamber has been misled by Mr. Pineau. I believe that within themselves they cannot believe that this has gone downwards to that extent. There is no way that could happen—which well over 50% of it was well and good, to all of it being merely satisfactory—because the Minister for Agriculture has given his whole life to this country and to the Government and the people of these Cayman Islands and he has always advanced the good of the country.

In Public Works, despite the fact that we might say that they are not getting things done quickly enough, within the last few months I have seen a speeding up and they are getting on with projects within areas of my district and I would specifically like to thank the Minister on behalf of the constituents in George Town, I know I speak for the other three Elected Members for George Town, in the light programme that he has had. Some 400 lights have been put in and that has to help in reducing crime.

Perhaps one of the most significant things was what we promised we would do. We promised to get a reduction in the cost of electricity in relation to the private consumer; in other words, people who are using electricity—households. And there has been an increase on the commercial side. But that Minister stated when we were campaigning (and I think it is in our Manifesto, that we would see that the cost of electricity was reduced) and I think that this has been ably dealt with. Electricity has been reduced and I give the Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works full credit for the way that was done.

We have to remember that CUC had an ongoing contract—and to negotiate within an ongoing contract is never an easy matter. But he succeeded and as a result households now have much lower electricity rates.

The Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation has once again suffered in the Chamber of Commerce poll. If ever there was one fine gentleman who has done his utmost, and given of his best... and for the first time we are seeing the light with health and drug abuse prevention. And this survey has tried to detract from him.

The thing that hurts the, speaking generally now, pitiful Opposition who hit us in public meetings, is the many successes that we have had. They always try to explain that when things work right we are not doing it—only when they work badly. So, I would hope that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town will support the Minister for Health, rather than bombarding him with a lot of questions some of which waste a lot of his, and the Department's time.

The Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture has also been caught under the Pineau Poll. Yesterday I only touched on areas of my Ministry, but he has done more for sports which here is only put as satisfactory, than I did in my eight years. I think Mr. Benson had 12 years. For the first time we have actually seen Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture move forward. He is a Minister who gets things done and he stays close to his people. This is the reason why he too was so heavily targeted by the two Opposition Members and Mr. Ezzard Miller in their meeting last night.

Throughout this the below average and that sort of thing given, the Chamber within itself has to say that this is not right. They have good directors, and I have always been a main supporter of the Chamber throughout and things have worked well until recently. But they must know within themselves that this poll is wrong and they should say so and say where the defects are.

When the Minister for Tourism increases tourism by 20% and he is given a below average rating, you wonder what in the world would one have to do to get into a stage of good. Remember that nothing here even comes into the stage of good.

The Chamber has been misled. It is a good body, but going outside and bringing in all of these extra polls has obviously corrupted the poll. There is no way that matters which have improved so well can, while they are improving, be given such low rating.

Cayman Airways Limited: I know that my Ministry has somewhat differing responsibility. I have Schools, Education and Aviation of which Cayman Airways takes most of my time. I would like to remind the public and just read to them what we said... and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town who, I must say, in spite of some questions in here, like how many passengers have flown in 10 years (I am still waiting to see the relevance of that), supported our policy: "We support Cayman Airways and regard it as valuable to the Cayman Is- lands' economy and to our people." Our objectives: "1) We believe that in accordance with paragraph 3.1—Main Conclusion and Recommendation' of the report of consultants Airline Services Ireland ('ASI'), Cayman Airways Limited should `consolidate and optimise its present position in terms of market share, load factor, revenues and cost. In pursuance of this strategy every effort should be made to contain major financial marketing exposure such as would be created by further fleet expansion." That, we have done.

We have consolidated and we are trying to ensure that the structure of Cayman Airways is more in line with the orthodox structure of operating organisations.

I will go on to read two: "2) Cayman Airways should have followed ASI's recommendation and should now, by legal means, reduce its fleet back to three suitable jets at reasonable lease rates." We said three there, but when we got in we looked at a study of it and when we could get all of the details we saw that it was best to reduce to two.

I must commend the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman; he did state things fairly and reasonably in relation to Cayman Airways. But that is not because he is trying to be nice to me or Cayman Airways, but because it has improved so well that there is no flexibility for opposition.

"3) "Review CALs routes where serious losses are made." We have done that, we cut New York/Baltimore; we cut back Turks and Caicos. "4) Strengthen CAL's Board of Directors and set guidelines with accountability to the Member for Tourism who must account to the public for expenditure of public funds on CAL." This has been done. We kept the same Board and, basically, the only changes were the Minister and the Managing Director and there will be one or two minor changes. But what we did over and above this was to invite the Attorney General and the Financial Secretary. We had the Financial Secretary nominate a person, who at present is the Accountant General, to be on the Board. I sit in at times. This is how we have strengthened it and we have set clear guidelines as to what the Government can do and what the Board and Managing Director can do. So no longer must we call Finance Committee four and five times in the first quarter, sometimes at short notice, to try to ratify or find the money for something that has been done by one or two people who should not have had the authority.

"5) Abolish the Executive Committee as recommended by the consultants and reduce the Managing Director's powers and review this position." We have done that. We have abolished the Executive Committee, we reduced the Managing Director's powers and we have reviewed the position fully and set guidelines.

"7) Seek a legal solution in relation to the two 737-400s which Guinness Peat Aviation ('GPA') has a right to return in 1994 for three years at a total lease cost of approximately US$20 million." As the House remembers, after considerable negotiations there was a judgment in the united Kingdom against Cayman

Airways in the area of US$6 million, we had to settle that. But we got out of paying this $20 million by paying $1.25 million (US) to Guinness Peat Aviation. We got rid of the 737-400s that had just about destroyed Cayman Airways.

"8) In light of CALs serious losses of US$20.4 million for the two financial years, 1990 and 1991 to 30th June, 1991, and US$4.8 million for six months ending 31st December, 1991, immediate action will be taken to reduce future losses." That was carried out. Last year we had a loss in the area of $6 million and at that time the Chamber of Commerce felt that 29% of the people found Cayman Airways excellent; 46% found that they were good and this year when we have actually made a profit and taken Cayman Airways out of the loss position they say that their Members find it less than satisfactory—below average. What a joke!

It is very disheartening and very ungrateful for such a public statement to come out of such an august body that is so obviously wrong. The losses at Cayman Airways at one stage per annum hit $14-plus million. When you add up $34.6 million (US) for these three years it is about $3,000 for each working Caymanian and resident in the population. They had to take $3,000 out of their pockets and put it into Cayman Airways. When they were still putting in to pay for losses from the previous Government, you want to tell me that the population of this country felt that it was excellent and good to the extent of 75% and now 100% of them feel that it is below average? I think if the Good Lord himself came down He would not be able to satisfy some people. It is unfortunate when people get misled into such a very stupid public statement like that.

"9) Ensure that there are regular, practical flights to, from and between Cayman Brac and Little Cayman which are convenient." Cayman Airways increased its flights, but more than that, we have to remember that the last government kept Island Air from flying into Cayman Brac because they felt that Cayman Airways should monopolise the route and when I got in I eased up considerably on the strings that were attached there so that the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman could benefit more from it.

So I submit that we have fully fulfilled, in relation to Cayman Airways, all that we promised, and much more. I told the public that if within four years we even came near to coming to a profit after subsidy, I would be satisfied if the National Team could have stopped and reduced the escalating losses. Remember these were not losses that were coming down, these were escalating losses.

I know that the airline business is volatile. We have a difficult year this year and when you change jets, as we have had to do, then it is going to cost a fair amount of money to do the change over. So the public should not expect the type of performance that we had last year this year. But I am happy to say that literally every month, I think with the exception of two months last year, we made an operating profit. That is something that in the last four or five years before this Government took over had never happened. They last made a net profit in 1989, six months before they sold the 727-200s.

I agree with the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who signed the minority statement in the Finance Committee against selling those jets, the same as we stood together against Ezard putting the hospital in the swamp. We should not have sold them, the county would have owned two jets that would have had a capacity of 165 passengers; would have had the capability to fly further than the present planes; carry about 10,000 pounds more freight, and we would not have had to pay any rent on them.

Quite frankly, the public should never forgive the Government that took such a disastrous step which cost this country $35 million. Worse than that, they were not even able to raise the $20 million that we passed because the public and the banks had lost confidence in the Government and they had cut off their credit. It took us six months after we got in to convince the banks that we were going to put forward a sensible budget.

That we did and we were able to borrow the money that they had spent and the $20 million went to pay past debts; it did not come into the operating side of Cayman Airways. If I had $20 million in the operational side, I could have done wonders, but I had nothing in the last two years that helped me with the recurrent expenditure with the exception of the subsidy that the National Team, and the Opposition supported for Cayman Airways.

What is important is that communication is coming back to Cayman Airways. The staff has for the first time seen raises, but I want to caution them here because when they believe an organisation is getting back on its feet, we find that the quality of service to the public drops. There has been some slipping in areas of service to the public in Cayman Airways, we know about it and we have taken steps to correct it. If the new Commissioner of Police could refer to the police as a police service, how much more should Cayman Airways give service to the public who are paying and directly affected by it.

I have pride in Cayman Airways. I have spent more time of my life on Cayman Airways from a government point of view. I believe that it has a good future. But it has to be carefully watched. That is why whoever ultimately sits in the Managing Director's seat has to be competent. The price of incompetency in the Managing Director's seat is something that the Cayman Islands cannot afford to pay for again. It was a national disaster to have lost the amount of money and to have had the staff treated as badly as they were treated in the years of 1989, 1990 and 1991—1992.

Where we have triumphed most in relation to this has been the fact that the approach taken in regard to Cayman Airways has been a conservative approach. We look carefully and in depth at recommendations that the staff make because they take part in their staff meetings (at least quarterly) and we listen to their input. We look at things carefully and whenever we refuse something that they suggest, we try to give sensible and practical reasons for it.

I think that to keep Cayman Airways vibrant we have to have the diverging views, but at the end of the day, when the pilot goes into the cockpit, he goes alone—neither the Board nor the Managing Director nor anyone else, has control over the areas of safety in his discretion. I believe that staff must also accept that the decisions made by the Board will sometimes conflict with what they think. But the bottom line is that the results in Cayman Airways have been good.

Forget about the nonsense put out by the Chamber of Commerce. There is not one man in the street who believes Cayman Airways has not improved. In fact, people in total opposition to me have rang me up many times and say they do not like me, but they admit that I have done wonders with Cayman Airways. One of them said that it had gone from a national disaster to a miracle.

I have made my mistakes. I believe the Government, as other governments, has made some mistakes. But when the results are there, the least that we can expect from the public is that they will acknowledge those successes.

We have a country that is in the middle of a boom. There is construction out there bursting at the seams. The Government has to be sensible and keep a balance. We have put forward a balanced budget; the loans are from last year when the amount was small. We have taken the country from where all money was borrowed for Capital Expenditure—in fact, close to $60 million was lost.

When I say that, recurrent revenue could not cover $60 million of expenditure that the last government did in their time in here. We know of the massive losses in Cayman Airways. We have seen that the Minister responsible for Community Development, and Sports has done wonders in that area. When we look at the improvements and the sensible approach that the Minister for Health has taken; when you add up the 20% increase that the Minister for Tourism has brought in; when you look at the advances in agriculture, the pavilion; when you look within the districts at what has been achieved—the improvements in all areas—the public has to remember that when we took over the roads of this country had been estimated by the Director of Public Works at costing $10 million to repair. We have repaired as many as we can, we have added to them. We gave the opposition their private roads, as best we could when they asked for them.

By and large, I think that the man in the street knows that the National Team, and I am being very blunt here, it is not the Government that has produced this. If there was fighting among us as it was with previous governments we could not have succeeded the way we have, but we are a team. We are together (with the exception of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, who chose to go elsewhere). The slate of candidates put in by the electorate of this country two years ago are as staunchly together now. We have a very good working relationship with the Official Members and the Governor. We pull together as a National Team and decisions are being made by a group of people, whether it is Executive Council or the Members of the Legislative Assembly as a whole, which has got to be a lot better than single Members making decisions that have been so disastrous for this country over the years.

I am happy that the success of the National Team has been good for this country. We pledge to continue with God's help to carry on the struggle and to take a positive approach to the development of this country to see that it moves forward to the benefit of our people and their children. With God's help I believe that He will continue to assist us and bless this country.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.51 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.36 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Throne Speech. The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I am rising to say that I am deputed by Government to close on their behalf.

The Speaker: I have not called for that yet, sir. The debate will continue on the Throne Speech.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In reading over the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor, many things come to mind. While goals are achieved on a national level, I am minded of the fact that problems continue to pop out of the woodwork on a daily basis and our growing pains seem never-ending.

As I have listened to the debate from both sides of the floor it comes to mind that maybe the Government expects some accolades for their stewardship, but at this point in time that is not my job. The truth is, in my opinion, that none of us in this Honourable House has the time for all of that praise because there is simply too much to do. If we are doing our jobs as representatives and as the Government, I am sure that this will speak for itself. A man or woman in here who genuinely believes that all is well is, in my view, living in another world. As right as so many things are in these islands, so many other things are wrong.

Before I go on to address the various areas of the Throne Speech I would like to make the point that I do not view my responsibility here on the Backbench as to continually talk about all of the good things. My job, along with others, is to continue to point out the problems and the inadequacies simply to ensure that these things are foremost in the minds of the Members of the Government. They, in turn, as the decision-makers, decide what is done, when it is done and how it is done.

I hope that all of us on the Backbench, whether we are government supporters or not, feel the same way, as I believe that is the route whereby we will get the best results for the country.

We as legislators, both as elected representatives and leaders, should never take that responsibility as anything but sacred. To me that is why it is so important—while no one in here, including myself, is perfect—that we try to display the right attitude in our efforts and in our role as legislators.

We are the people who will play a major role in the way the majority of the electorate of this country thinks. What seems to be normal to us will certainly become normal to them—both in thoughts and deeds. We are the people they will emulate. While this discourse may not be on a specific part of the Throne Speech, I find it to be a very important area and I really do trust that all of us understand and accept the seriousness of this responsibility.

As far as I am concerned, our responsibility as legislators extends far beyond an election campaign. I know we must strive to win, but I would like to believe that we strive to win not only for the right reasons but in the right way. I hope that we do not allow our quest for power to over-ride the good principles that brought us the success that we are all very quick to talk about today.

The intangibles are also very important and we must seriously think about these things. How we do what we do will most certainly decide our fate. Because others do it elsewhere does not necessarily mean that it is good medicine for our headache.

Having said all of this, the message is that we must be strong, yet flexible; wise, yet always learning; we must be leaders, yet serve others. Madam Speaker, the steps of all good men and women are ordered by the Lord—a force much greater than ourselves.

To begin my contribution on the Throne Speech, let me just say a quick quote which I think is very relevant to the big picture. It goes like this: "All human beings irrespective of race, creed or sex, have the right to pursue both their material well-being and their spiritual development in conditions of freedom and dignity, of economic security and equal opportunity."

As the introduction of the Throne Speech was taking its course and I was listening to His Excellency the Governor, he mentioned the Cubans. He mentioned that the financial resources of the Government, which means the country, have been stretched to the point where Capital Projects may have to be reduced. Then he went on to say not very long after that, "Cayman is one of the more fortunate countries in the world with a standard of living and, perhaps even more important, a quality of life second to none."

When you are on the top that is when the fall is the hardest, if it comes. That is why it is so important for us to be almost introspective at times in our considerations, both within specific areas and at a national level.

While I try to steer clear to some extent of going into depth on certain issues, the situation regarding the Cubans is one which I have not spoken publicly on to any large degree. The one thing that is resting on my mind constantly in my travels, is a comparison that I cannot avoid making. First of all, I am truthfully sympathetic to the plight of these people. I certainly would like to see them in a normal state of life as the majority of us enjoy here. The Governor has congratulated churches and others for the role they play, and I too am grateful for their existence. There are many individuals in our community who have gone far beyond the call of duty to assist these people and to basically allow for their time here to be spent in a half-way decent fashion, to say the least. But the comparison that I continually have to make, and that I find great difficulty in accepting, is just about every day of my life I see people who are my own who need the same type of help, albeit on a continual basis. Without being too harsh on myself and others, the truth is we tend to ignore their very existence.

The point I wish to make about this is that if in the sight of God we are compelled to assist people who come from abroad who are in a certain dilemma, how can we justify ignoring our own? I wish not to castigate anyone, I just wish to bring the point into full focus. The truth is, if we are honest with ourselves, we are ignoring our own.

We can make lame excuses and say that John Brown always needs help because he does not want to help himself. We can say things like that. But there are many off-shoot situations where eight or ten people physically suffer daily as a direct result of the actions of one individual. While we may wish to punish that one individual, the truth is, those others are still suffering.

My message is: Let us all try to be more cognisant of the fact and let us live within our community in a way that we are of more assistance to those people who daily face physical needs that the majority of us, without interfering with our own life-styles, either by time spent, or by a helping hand in some other way, could make a vast difference in the quality of their lives.

So when I hear about a quality of life second to none, I am simply saying, while that is all well and good, that only applies to some of us. There are those of us who do not enjoy that quality of life and we must forever be mindful of that.

There are many other things which I will go on to discuss, hopefully to show what will cause those numbers to multiply if we are not careful. But that is another moot point to talk about.

The first specific area that the Throne Speech dealt with was the Judiciary. I am very pleased to know that the upgrading of the Courts Building to allow for more space is one of the Government's goals for 1995. I think it is a known fact that while we wish that we did not have to provide more space for the courts, the sad fact is that the demand is there. I think that as the old saying goes,

"justice must not only be done, but it must appear to be done", it is important to have those quarters in such a way that it is conducive for that to happen. The courts being continually cramped and court dates being a problem because of lack of space can inhibit due process.

Also, the Legal Aid system will be reviewed. I am happy to know this, but not 100% sure of the exact method that is to be employed which allows people to qualify. I have heard of several reports where people who appear to be eligible for Legal Aid are not receiving it and people who might well not have the need for it are qualifying for it. Personally, I welcome that review.

The next pertinent area which warrants some debate is the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs. Let me first of all say that it was a very sad day when I learned of the retirement of the former Chief Secretary, Mr. Lemuel Hurlston. But, having said that, life must go on, and so too must the service.

His Excellency the Governor said in his Throne Speech that a committee would shortly be appointed "to carry out a comprehensive review of the General Orders and the Public Service Commission Regulations. This review is intended to bring these regulations in line with the needs of a professional civil service in the nineties and beyond." My most serious consideration in the civil service has always been the upward mobility of the individuals in the service.

It is my view that there are certain areas which fall short of what I would like to see and it has no bearing on any one person, I simply think the system is not conducive to enough of this happening. If we are going to Caymanianise the Civil Service and at the same time enhance its efficiency, we must identify individuals and let them know that these are the positions that we wish for them to achieve: Set schedules for them, train them, give them every opportunity to realise their potential in line with these goals. It is my view that if this is done on an ongoing basis, we will have a more efficient service and at the same time we will have our own Caymanians well-placed in the service from bottom to top and from top to bottom. The thought behind this is not to displace anyone. It is simply that I believe in the long term that this is the only sensible route to take.

I have been told that this was being done in the past. I wish not to say that none of it is being done, but it is my view that no one to this point has latched on to this type of development within the service or has given it the impetus and the forward thrust that it needs. I do not believe that those within the service, and those who might aspire to join the service are clear that this is a given position, and I believe that is why we might not be satisfied with where we are.

I believe that a lot of the people there who have had the opportunity for tertiary education are capable of absorbing such if given the opportunity. I believe that if individuals know that training will come about if they fall in line and dedicate themselves, it will happen. I firmly believe that if we make a very strong effort in this area we will see better results.

The point was made just a few days ago. If we look at Cayman Brac we see that they have had problems for some time now. When the present Chief Secretary, who was the District Commissioner of Cayman Brac, was transferred over to Grand Cayman there was no one in line ready, willing and able to fill his position. Before him, and since him, we have had to put people in there on what I would have to call a temporary basis to fill the post. I only use that as an example and I think it bears the point out that if we were to move with a stronger force within our own Caymanians to identify them and the jobs that they could potentially hold, we might not find ourselves in those problems. I feel very strongly about that and hope that those who deal with it will find some merit in my line of argument and do something about it.

The new Commissioner of Police pointed out in one of his first interviews about the Police Force... and I do not know if he was using this opportunity to make known his wishlist and how much of it can be achieved in the short term, but I think his line of argument bears some merit and we should be looking into seeing what might enhance the force—the fact that there is a claim that they are very lacking in the numbers and quality of their vehicles.

I have heard several people ask why we should be thinking about giving the police more vehicles and better vehicles when half of the time the vehicles are used for personal purposes. I cannot stand here and say if that is true or not. But let us assume the worst—that it is true. If this is true this is something that needs to be sorted out internally. The point that I am making is let us not make that the reason for not trying our best to enhance the force with what they deem to be necessary equipment, namely, better vehicles. If other problems exist they should be dealt with but not necessarily in restrictions on vehicles.

I think the good gentleman who faces me this afternoon might be thinking that I am speaking directly to him—not quite, but almost.

It is very important that we try our best to get as many Caymanians as possible to join the Police Force. I do not wish to get into a line of discussion that I do not know too much about, but I will just run on the surface of the argument.

In a newspaper article, the new Commissioner discussed personnel and he talked about the fact that he believes that the police, because they do not get overtime and because of other peculiarities that no other departments face, should be paid more. He also mentioned that qualified Caymanians are not interested in joining the force because of the disparity between the salaries in the private sector and the police. I would almost venture to say that it might well be impossible to solve that problem in its entirety, but one of the things that I think we need to seriously consider, because of the nature of the job, is bringing it more in line with the various aspects of the job as compared to other jobs.

I know several individuals who are not telling me untruths when they say to me that they have hundreds of days of leave in lieu of overtime, and some of them if they were to get time off would have time off in excess of a year. That does not make a lot of sense to me. I do not suspect that the answer is very easy, but I think it would be in our best interest if we would not simply just leave it alone, but get all parties involved to sit down and find a more palatable situation for those who are in the force.

I am not very proud of the fact that as the numbers in our Police Force increases the percentage of Caymanians decreases. That is a bad sign in my mind. I am not suggesting that there is anyone to blame for that, but something has to be wrong for that to be continually happening. There may well be other reasonings that have more bearing than the ones that I am bringing up, but, certainly, those who are responsible need to address the situation.

There is also the continuing question of morale within the force and I would sincerely hope that each and every one of us in this Legislative Assembly would vouch support for the Force and its new leader in whatever assistance we can render towards boosting that morale. Certainly we should do our best in that vein.

Next to the Police comes the Prison. Again, in this sitting there have been some questions raised and answers given about certain aspects of the operation of the prison. One of the areas that I have always felt was most important is education while the prisoners are incarcerated. The Governor said: "Job training and interviews to secure employment on release, with a follow up programme will be put in place this year." This is one sentence—Job training and interviews to secure employment on release, with a follow up programme will be put in place this year. Although it is just one sentence, this is one of the most important sentences in the entire Throne Speech.

I do not have all the numbers available with me right now, but we continually chime about the many wasted lives that are within our prison system. We know that in excess of 90% of the inmates are there for drugs. The next sentence: "Drug counselling, in conjunction with the counselling centre will be given high priority." Those two sentences, lack of those two areas is costing this country close to $15 million a year. Somebody is immediately going to say, "I wonder what he is talking about now." I see the Honourable Financial Secretary looking up with a funny look in his eyes. Let me explain myself.

If we check the Police, the Judiciary and the Prison, it is costing this country in excess of $15 million per year. I am very sure that the Financial Secretary would love to be able to allocate that elsewhere. I am not suggesting that we will ever be in a position to not have a police force, judicial system or prison, but for as long as I can remember, notwithstanding who is the government of the day, every year we have to spend more in all three areas. If more was not spent—it is not that it was not asked for—it was simply not given priority.

I remember the very first sitting where there were several hundred thousand dollars to build 65 more cells for the prison. I think it was denied. So, the point that I am making is that if we can achieve less repeat offenders and those who find themselves in the clutches are able to use what is available to them to get back into our society as normal, active members of that society, certainly the demand will be less, the court appearances will be less and the interdiction process will not be one that we will have to be adding more personnel to on a daily basis. That may have been done in a round-about fashion, but I think I made the point.

While they are only two sentences in this Throne Speech, as far as I am concerned, they are more important than just about anything else that we will talk about in the Throne Speech. I know that there are other factors and areas which hinge on operation of drug counselling and other attachments for the job training, but all of those areas combined are certainly one of the most important areas that we need to concentrate on. I trust that while they were only two of the sentences in the Throne Speech justice will be given to the consideration.

The Prison is always a place that one wishes was not filled at all times. But it must be a signal to us, if we have to be continually enlarging it, that something is not right within us. I think that it is very important that we pull out all the stops to address these areas.

The Department of Immigration, because of its very nature, comes under fire at all times. For various reasons there will always be individuals, including myself, who are dissatisfied with either the service or the end results of any interaction with that department.

One of the ongoing criticisms has been the length of time that people have to wait for replies to applications: whatever type of application it is, work permit, et cetera. Because of the integration which has continually taken place, every one of us has to deal at some point in time with this department. I believe that there have been serious attempts to address some of the inadequacies and I am not so sure that all of the criticism is warranted or whether it is always a game of catch up. Every time we check the statistics we find that over any given period of time there are more work permits that have been granted, which means that there are more work permits that have been dealt with. I think if we assume that everything is true to form, it would also mean that there are more that have been dealt with that have been refused. So, all-in-all, there has to be more work.

Having said that, it is my belief that we might need to look at the whole operation of the department with a view to properly determining whether it can properly service the needs, functioning the way it is at present. It is a difficult one. There are some of us who feel that work permits are taboo. There are others who look at it a bit differently. Nevertheless, it is a given in this society that there is a continual need for that service.

I do not know the entire operation, but notwithstanding the Cuban asylum seekers and the strain that has been put on the personnel, I think that it is fair to say that someone always has a gripe about the Immigration Department. Let me leave it at that. It is very possible that because of the way the system is set up it cannot cope with the demand. I think it needs to be examined.

I will move from the physical aspects to make one suggestion and it may be that every Member in here will disagree with me—it has happened before and if I am here long enough I am sure it will happen again. I feel that a system of natural justice needs to be applied within that department more firmly, and I will explain. When someone makes an application—any application for work permit, permanent residence, status, whatever—either to the Department or the Immigration Board, if that application is refused, the norm as I understand it, is that the only recourse is an appeal of that decision to Executive Council.

If the truth is known, Executive Council in this day and age meets on a weekly basis and more often as necessary. While not having any access to the agenda of Executive Council, I am totally confident in the statement that I am going to make. I am sure that every agenda for their normal meetings has something left off because they simply cannot deal with anymore business on that given date—similar to the Immigration Board when they meet. I am certain that there is never a meeting where something is not carried over from the last meeting because they were sure they could not deal with it.

The point is that there is always too much to do. It is continually a matter that has to be coped with. I know for a fact that there have been applications to Executive Council asking them to review a decision made by the Immigration Board where people have waited a year and eight months without a reply. I am told that is a conservative time frame. I know what I am talking about. I know of many that have taken in excess of six months. I am not standing here to say that there is anyone to blame for this because the truth of the matter is that there are many other urgent matters that Executive Council has to deal with on a daily basis. I am told that whenever...

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: [Interjecting]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, I respect that, I am just...

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: [Interjecting]

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Sorry, Madam Speaker, if I am allowed to continue I will explain myself properly.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: All right.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Madam Speaker, the point that I am coming to is that I do not believe that appeals for decisions made by the Immigration Board or Department should have to go to Executive Council to get into a system where there is no given time-frame because of other matters of urgency on the agenda, which are decided by the Clerk of Executive Council.

So the point that I wish to make is that I believe the Government should be considering an Appellant Board, similar to other appellant boards that exist, in order to deal with these matters, simply because Executive Council has much more to do with many more important matters than the likes of these.

Because of that, it seems that no one pays any attention to the appeal. It is my view that the Government should consider setting up a tribunal which could hear matters such as these on a regular basis and process the situation speedily. The Appellant Tribunal would simply deal with what is before them by way of the Law and all of the parameters they are allowed to consider the matter under and the appeal should be upheld, and if it is overturned, then it is overturned.

I see no difficulty in operating like that. I am making this suggestion because as more applications come in, there will be more people who are dissatisfied with the end results, and more appeals, and they will get bogged down. That is a view that I hold and I would trust that someone might consider it.

The other very delicate topic on Immigration that I cannot go on without mentioning, pertains to those same people that I have been talking about for many years—those who have resided continuously in this country in excess of 20 years. They have been accepted by all and sundry. They rub shoulders with us daily but every year at a certain time they are shaking like leaves because they do not know if their work permits will be renewed. What a shame!

This is not a 'today' situation. The only thing that is happening to this situation is that as the days go on more people fall into the category. We have talked about permanent residence and recently there has been an increase in the number of people making inquiries about it to me as a representative. In talking about it I do not wish to give the impression that I hold a view that we should simply open up the flood gates and let whatever is to happen, happen. My view is that we should close the shop and put all that is within us in order, then we will know how to open it back up.

I do not know of any policy, directive, law, rule or regulation which gives a clear and concise way to deal with this very sensitive issue.

Let me show you what happens that we politicians probably would not know about unless someone told us. There are two brothers, both of them living in the Cayman Islands since 1969. Both of them are decent people. One of them has been working here for the past 22 years. He has built his home here, is married to a Caymanian and has three children. For all purposes and intentions he is doing all right. He is a good family man, his earning power is not great, but he takes care of his family and his home. His wife works and they are all right.

The other brother is all right too; he used to work for the Government. He has been here since 1969. He has no other attachments here and he no longer works for the Government. He is employed by the private sector. He rents a room, but he is happy also.

Here is the shocker, and I am not afraid to talk about it and I will tell exactly what happened. Both of these brothers applied for permanent residence. I know both of them, and they both asked me for a reference. I gave them both a reference as truthfully as I knew them to be and the single one, who does not have a home here, was granted permanent residence and the guy with the family was refused on the grounds that he did not have a substantial investment in the islands. That happened. What must I think? I am not saying this happens every day, I am saying that this happens.

It is my view, not based on pure fact, because I have seen some of these files—not by prying, but by walking across a room seeing a desk with seven rows (and there is someone else in here who saw them with me) of files at least four feet high to be dealt with. Whenever they are dealt with it is physically impossible for all of them to be given proper consideration. It is like everything else, and we all know this: If you are overloaded with what you are doing, you are not going to take care of anything properly. That is my view.

Now that view was from the people on the outside. The people on the inside may know it to be different but that is what comes across to me. I believe that something should be done if we are going to deal with these applications with a view to doing justice and allowing justice to prevail. I do not know how Government wishes to deal with it, but I believe that something should be done to deal with these applications in an expeditious fashion, whether it means another body to deal with them or some other method be employed to deal with them. I believe that it is asking too much for one board to deal with all of these matters and do justice to these applications.

Let us say that I am the board and there are 500 applications in and I spend to the next morning dealing with them and I get to deal with 60. I am whittling away at the pile hoping to get it down. Is justice being done to these applications?

I just quoted that incident. I cannot say that it is an isolated one; I just know that it happened. I saw the paper work on it when the applications had been dealt with and the letters were sent out. That is how I know about it. But, if matters like this happen once, it can happen again, and I believe it is happening because justice cannot be done to these applications.

I know it is difficult and the point I am making is not to say who is wrong. It is simply to say what I believe is wrong and that hopefully somebody will do something about it. That is all I wish to say.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.06 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break I was winding up my contribution on the area of Immigration. There are one or two more points that I wish to comment on.

During the break I was given a quick briefing on the method in which the appeals that I was talking about are dealt with. It is my understanding now that one of the larger problems with those appeals is the length of time it takes for them to reach the office of the Clerk of the Executive Council, although I understood that the appeals were made to the Executive Council. I think what happens then is that the Clerk seeks information from the Immigration Department in order to prepare a paper for Council. If this is the case, it does not change my view.

If there were an appellant board to deal with this and whenever matters were appealed they were streamlined and dealt with expeditiously, certain other problems would not occur and I will draw a reference again to make the point.

I have known of appeals that were pending where individuals have gone into the department to seek extensions to remain on the island until the appeal is heard. They have had to do so on several occasions before the appeal was dealt with. All this does is increase the work-load for the department. So if there was a method whereby this could be done more speedily, certainly a decision would be made—the person would either be here or not be here—and Immigration would not have to deal with it on a continual basis. I am just making that point.

All in all, with the Department of Immigration and the Immigration Board, my view is that the Government—and if it is the Governor who faces sole responsibility for that area, then let the Governor consult with whomever he needs to consult with, and deal with the department and address these areas in order to bring about more speedy transactions so that people know where they are and what they are doing without being in limbo for such long periods of time.

The Department of Broadcasting and Information is providing a service to these islands. I do not know of any specific problems that department faces at present. I can only say that while competition is always good to bring about the best in us, I fully support Radio Cayman.

I have noticed from time to time that there are attempts at innovation to try to enhance the programming and to bring about a wider range of news information to the public. So I wish, in short order, to lend my support to that department and I trust that the powers that be will assist them to the best of their abilities in performing their duties.

District Administration: The first line in the Throne Speech says, "The economic growth and development of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman remains dependent on Grand Cayman." I guess that statement need not be refuted, but I can assure this Honourable House that the people of these two islands certainly wish to be able to fend for themselves. They have certain inherent drawbacks, but slowly but surely they are coming into their own. I think one of the pleasing factors, especially in Cayman Brac, is that infrastructure, because of the nature of employment on the islands, has been brought in line from quite early on in its development. This may sound very funny, but I think that we here in Grand Cayman should look to the Brac to see what we should have done from many years ago, regardless of where the funding was coming from. But Cayman Brac and Little Cayman are certainly as much of a treasure as Grand Cayman has been, maybe Grand Cayman has provided resources at a much more advanced level, but nevertheless, I am sure that down the line—certainly in our lifetime—we will be able to see the value of these two islands in many, many areas.

I believe that the indigenous population there continually prove that they are very industrious and given the right opportunities they make their contribution within our society. I am quite confident that this will continue to be the case.

Under Personnel, Training, Management and Computer Services, earlier on I spoke of the upward mobility within the civil service and my only comments within this area are simply to reiterate the strong views that I have regarding the upward mobility and Caymanianisation of the service.

To sum it up in different words, I would love to see my people in command totally. I think it behoves us all to strive for that to become a reality.

The Legislative Assembly: His Excellency mentioned several select committees being established and I dare say that while everyone is very busy and while some of the areas that have to be considered by these select committees are sensitive, the truth of the matter is that as elected representatives we all hold a responsibility to the people of this country to deal with these matters. I would like to see us get on with these committees as quickly as we possibly can, so that what has happened in the past does not happen to us—before concluding these committees we find that they are disbanded and the process has to begin again.

There is the Select Committee to Consider A Register of Interests and the Select Committee to Consider a Code of Ethics and Conduct for Legislators which is looked at as companion legislation. There is the Select Committee to Review The Gambling Law. There is also the Standing Select Committee to Review the Sunday Trading Law, another sensitive issue, and I understand there has been a lot of representation from the public about that. There is also the Select Committee to consider the Bill of Rights. Each and every one of these Committees is very important. While I do not control the situation, I am suggesting that we deal with these as quickly as possible so that if there is any new legislation or amending legislation found to be beneficial that we can deal with it as quickly as possible so that the country as a whole can get on with the show.

The Law School is certainly worth mentioning in this debate. Someone else might have mentioned it before, but I would certainly like to pay homage to that institution as I personally know several Caymanian graduates who are now in the profession in the private sector and certainly they are the results of this programme and we should be proud of them.

There are more individuals going through the Law School now. The one point I would like to make is that whatever the groups are within the legal profession, I do trust that they are cognisant of the fact that we do have Caymanians who are coming on stream who are qualified and I trust that they are making room for these Caymanians in the profession locally. Certainly, the need for people in that profession well exceeds the number of locally qualified people that we have, but as we find our own coming on stream I would not like to hear of local graduates not being able to find decent employment. I am not suggesting that this is the case, I am just making the point because we seem to have a knack for dealing with situations after a crisis point. There are not too many of them to cause a problem where people within the profession feel threatened, so I trust that they will be looked after.

There is one point which I wish to make regarding the drafting of legislation with regards to the traffic regulations and the new Traffic Law. The new Traffic Law which was passed, gazetted and is a Law that exists in our statutes, has not been brought into force because of regulations which have not been prepared. This has gone on for several years, and while other legislation keeps becoming more important, the problem that this is causing is that in their line of duty the police have seen it fit to apply new sections of the law, which in truth and in fact, are not wrong in principle, because once the law comes into effect that is the way it should be. But in effect, anyone who tests their authority in the matter always wins. So it is causing a problem. The truth is that they are trying to apply the new law because that is the way it should be, but they are being hamstrung because it is not in force.

The point with that is that whatever has to be done, however late the candle needs to be burnt, let us get it done. With the greatest of respect, I think that I am correct in saying that it is going on four years. While this may be the exception and not the rule it is not something that we need to be proud of. It is not something that only the Second Official Member should bow his head about, it reflects on all of us. We need to get it taken care of. So I do trust that this will be done in short order.

The Legal Department: His Excellency mentioned that "The department continues to embrace specialization through local recruitment and training. A Caymanian Crown Counsel is presently studying in Rome at the International Development Law Institute. The Attorney General is also hoping to recruit in 1995 an Attorney with particular expertise in prosecuting Commercial or White Collar Crime."

Here we go again with specific training of our Caymanians. We have had Caymanians on stream in this department and I believe it is fair comment to say that the trend after a few years is to move on into private practice. We are continually ending up using the Legal Department as a training ground. Each individual who has passed through this training ground can always justify his or her actions by going into the private sector by way of some dissatisfaction, whether it is salary, or not seeing any light at the end of the tunnel, or whatever. We need to have a look at this in order to identify individuals and find the situation conducive for them to stay in the system so that in years to come our Solicitor General or, for that matter, our Attorney General (with the greatest of respect to our existing Attorney General) is a Caymanian.

If we do not diligently seek for this to become a reality we are doing a disservice to the youth that we continue to talk about. Much of it depends on them, but I believe that we have to set the stage properly. That is my view.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: It is now 4.30 PM, Honourable Member. I do not think you would be finished this evening. May I ask for the motion for the adjournment?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Planning, Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10 o'clock on Monday morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 20 MARCH 1995.

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation to say Prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

Presentation of papers and reports, Report of the Housing Development Corporation for the year ended the 30 June 1994. The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT OF THE HOUSING DEVELOPMENT CORPORATION FOR THE YEAR ENDED 30 JUNE 1994

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Report of the Housing Development Corporation for the year ending the 30th June, 1994.

The Speaker: So ordered.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, and Honourable Members, I am pleased to be presenting the Annual Report of the Housing Development Corporation for the year ended the 30 June, 1994.

The year 1994 was a year of transition for the Housing Development Corporation. It marked the beginning of the suspension of direct mortgage lending by the Corporation. This suspension was ordered by the Board of the Corporation in December 1993, in the light of the new guaranteed home mortgage scheme that had been initiated by Government.

The role of the Corporation during the year was therefore limited to seeing ongoing projects through to completion and servicing existing clients. As a result of the amendment to the Housing Development Corporation Law, which was passed at the September 1994 meeting of the Legislative Assembly, the Corporation is now in empowered to dispose of its loan portfolio. I confidently expect that the Corporation will dispose of its loan portfolio during 1995, and that it will assume different role in the home mortgage sector.

The Management of the Housing Development Corporation and the Government Statistics Office are now engaged in discussions aimed at finalising details of a new housing demand survey which will inform the future housing development policy of the Ministry on strategy of the Corporation. It is envisaged that the Corporation's new role will be to assist borrowers in the lower income bracket who may need to have assistance with housing which cannot be factored into the guaranteed Home Mortgaged Scheme.

I confidently expect the proposed amalgamation of the Agricultural and Industrial Development Board and the Housing Development Corporation to be effected in 1995. This should serve to further streamline the operation of both institutions.

Madam Speaker, let me close by expressing my thanks to the management and staff of the Corporation for their hard work during the year and to the Board of the Corporation for their dedication and leadership.

The Speaker: Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question No. 58, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 58

No. 58: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education and Aviation what is: (a) the total number of Flight Attendants employed by Cayman Airways Limited with a breakdown by nationalities and years of service; and (b) the average monthly salary of the Flight Attendants.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, this question was answered on November 11 1994. I will repeat what I said then, there are 34 flight attendants employed by Cayman Airways.

TOTAL	NATIONALITY	SINCE
16	Caymanian	1981 (1)
		1983 (1)
		1985 (1)
		1986 (4)
		1987 (2)
		1988 (2)
		1990 (3)
12	Jamaican	1992 (2)
		1985 (1)
		1986 (1)
		1987 (3)
		1988 (3)
		1989 (1)
7	American	1992 (3)
		1983 (1)
		1990 (1)
		1992 (5)
1	Nicaraguan	1986
1	Canadian	1992
1	South African	1992
1	Honduran	1992
1	Bermudian	1992

(b) Average salaries of flight attendants. In-flight operations is divided into two main categories, junior flight attendants and senior flight attendants. The average salary for a junior flight attendant is CI$1,551.50. The average salary for a senior flight attendant is CI$2,204.20.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Minister say if there has been an increase in the hours worked by the flight attendants in recent time, and if the same salary has remained in place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I fail to see how that arises out of this question, but in any event I do not have [the information].

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Honourable Minister say if there has been any representation from flight attendants regarding their salaries, and if there is any effort being undertaken for enhancement of salaries for this category of workers in the airline?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, the last Government so reduced the salaries of the flight attendants and Cayman Airways' staff, and/or failed to give any pay increases (some of them over a period of four years) that they eroded, and I would say depressed the staff of Cayman Airways that they automatically now ask for raises.

We have given, as the Member knows, two sets of pay raises. To the best of my knowledge, some of the flight attendants must have gotten raises. We recently did a job evaluation, and, subject to funds, we hope that in the not too distant future we should be able, once again, to look at pay raises. The last Government for four years totally depressed the staff and what I am trying to do now is to pull them back together as a team. When you work people without pay increase for four years, it is quite frankly a disgraceful thing, and it was unfortunately because of the bad financial status of the airline caused by the last Government.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Minister say if there are any indications that there might be Caymanians interested in the work of flight attendants seeing that over 50% of the persons employed by the airline are non-Caymanians?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, we are always attempting to get Caymanians in all areas of Cayman Airways. The Caymanianisation of Cayman Airways is one that is always uppermost in our minds. But as the Honourable Elected Member can see, 90% of the foreigners in these positions were put in by the last Government and the one before. The majority of them were put in by the last Government.

If you look at the staff who came to Cayman Airways, you will see that most of them came in from the last Government and he perhaps should ask some of the former members of that Government (who are not in this House) why they employed so many foreigners instead of trying to Caymanianise Cayman Airways.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell us the average hours worked by the flight attendants.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I do not have that information and I am happy to supply it in writing.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, having noted the reply of the Honourable Minister regarding the time the flight attendants were employed, I do notice that in 1992 five American flight attendants were employed. I am not sure what part of 1992. However, the question I asked to try and illicit the information was whether two years—now under a new Government and indeed, under his management . . . what attempts have been made to change the situation with non-Caymanians working in the airlines?

The Speaker: I think the Honourable Minister has already answered that supplementary.

If there are no further supplementaries, the next question is number 59, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 59

No. 59. Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education and Aviation if Island Air has been granted exclusive rights to fly the Inter-Island service other than Cayman Airways Limited.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No. Island Air has not been granted exclusive rights to fly the inter-island service other than Cayman Airways Limited.

I did answer that last year as well, Madam Speaker.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Honourable Minister say what is the relationship between Island Air and Cayman Airways Limited, and if Cayman Airways Limited serves as an agent for Island Air or do they operate in any way together?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I do not have the answer to it and I did not think this supplementary would come up. All I can say is that Island Air is an independent private company and I believe Cayman Airways used to do handling for them. That may not be so now, but I am not certain Ma'am.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say if any efforts have been made regarding the cost of travel on Island Air.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I do not think that is a part of the original question. If the Honourable Minister could give an undertaking, but really it is not a part of the original question.

The next question is number 60, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 60

No. 60: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation if the replacement for the Managing Director of Cayman Airways Limited has been identified.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: To date a replacement for the Managing Director of Cayman Airways has not been identified.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, could the Honourable Minister say if there have been any applications for the post and if there is anyone identified as an under-study?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I understand that there have been six applications, as I told the Honourable Elected Member last year.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say if any Member of this Legislative Assembly has applied for the position?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, Ma'am. No one from the Legislative Assembly has applied. I would hope that the press having been told by the Chairman, the Managing Director, the Press Officer and our Public Relations Officer, by the Member of the Legislative Assembly, himself, and by me several times, that no Member of the Legislative Assembly has applied for the post will finally stop printing it the newspapers.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Minister say if any of the six applications have been from persons within the airline, and if any thoughts have been given to the suitability of such persons?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I do not think it would be right for me to try and get into those details, but there was an application from someone within the airline. I would like to point out to the Honourable Elected Member that the position of Managing Director of Cayman Airways is one that if the Board makes a mistake [in its selection] it is going to be a $35 million disaster like it was before. While the Board will do everything possible to try to get a Caymanian in the position, in the final analysis it has to be a decision in the best interest of the Cayman Islands because if Cayman Airways go bankrupt, the Cayman Islands is going to be hit extremely heavily.

We have just gotten Cayman Airways into a profitable position after subsidy, and I do not intend to be pressured by anyone—and I mean anyone, not just the Elected Member—into the choosing of someone to fill the position who is incompetent. That, in my view, would be a national disaster.

Further, I would like to say that I am not a magician. I can only look at people who apply. I cannot produce a Caymanian out of a hat to put in the post. But the person must be qualified to be able to carry on what is a $35 million per year business. I will endeavour as best I can . . . and I give the Honourable Elected Member the undertaking to try to find somebody to put in the post and I am doing all that I can. But I think the decision is too important and that it has to be one taken free of pressure.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The next question is number 61, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 61

No. 61: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs what is Government's policy regarding the grant of student visas to persons wishing to attend schools in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Non-Caymanian persons who are not legally resident in the Cayman Islands are required to seek the permission of the Immigration Department if they wish to enter and remain in the Cayman Islands to study.

Applicants are required to have a valid passport and must submit a satisfactory police record, a medical certificate, a prospective letter of admission from the school and documentary evidence of their ability to meet the costs of tuition, accommodation and maintenance. Prospective students are advised not to commence study until they are notified of approval of their application.

Successful applicants are required to furnish a deposit to cover any cost of possible repatriation. Approvals are valid for six months and require proof of continuation of the studies in order to be extended.

In those instances where the sponsor of an applicant is the holder of a work permit, it is normally suggested that the sponsor apply to the Immigration Board for the permit to be varied by adding the applicant as a dependent.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Member say if this is an open policy applicable regardless of geographical jurisdiction, or does this policy vary according to geographical jurisdiction from which the students apply?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I know of no geographical limitations in respect of the granting of these student visas. In fact, current holders range in nationality from as far away as Sweden or as near as Jamaica.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Would the Honourable Member give an undertaking to investigate this matter? It has come to my attention that certain applicants from certain territories, namely the Caribbean, have experienced difficulties not reported to be experienced by applicants coming from North America (Canada and the United States) to certain institutions.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I certainly will.

The Speaker: The next question is number 62, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 62

No. 62: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs to state the number of work permits (other than temporary) issued from January 1993 to December 1994 by nationality and category (e.g. managerial).

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Statistical information from the Immigration Department denotes the number of work permits issued and in force at a particular time. For the period in question, by nationality, labour category, and skill level, these are provided in the three tables that follow: (See Appendix I)

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Is the Honourable Member in a position to say if the work permits covered during this period represent an increase over those granted for a year prior?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, I am unable to say whether the actual work permits issued during the period represent an increase relative to work permits issued for prior periods. Certainly, the cumulative effect of issues versus terminations has always been a net increase.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Member say whether the figures given would include renewal of work permits or whether these are strictly new permits that have been granted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, these figures would include renewals. They represent work permits in force as of the dates given.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Madam Speaker, in looking at the chart, the total listed for January 1993 says 10,885. On the other two charts it says 10,898. There seems to be a slight error in the two amounts because it also listed the same figure in the skilled level. There is only a difference of about 13. Does it mean that the first page should read 10,898 although those figures do not tally up to that amount?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Madam Speaker, obviously there is a math error of 13 in the first Table. I will look to identify where it is and provide Members with the correct figure. It would however seem to represent no more than .1%.

The Speaker: The next question is number 63, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 63

No. 63: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Temporary First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs to state the number of disturbances at Tent City involving the Police, Immigration and private security agencies.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: There have been seven disturbances at Tent City which involved the Immigration, Police and the private security agency which provides security at Tent City.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Member say if any of these incidents emanated in anyone being charged? What was the nature of the charge, if so, and have any sentences been meted out to date?

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: No, Madam Speaker. I am unable to give any details of the particular incidents and I would be happy to provide information if the Member so request.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Member, in providing that information could provide additional information to say if the individuals who caused the disturbances are still at Tent City or if they have moved on.

The Speaker: The Honourable Temporary First Official Member for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Certainly, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

Continuation of the debate of the 1995 Throne Speech. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. At close of play on Friday, I had briefly made some comments on the Legal Department and the need to try to identify Caymanians to fill specific positions in that department. I am happy to say that the few comments I received were certainly in agreement and I trust that having established that agreement we may be seeing something positive in that regard in the near future.

The next item in the Throne Speech is under the Portfolio of Finance and Development. I would just like to quickly comment that I too recognise the important role the Portfolio plays in the success story of the Cayman Islands. I know that the staff, under the able leadership of the Honourable Financial Secretary, have very demanding jobs and I am happy to hear that to this point they are coping very well with the increasing demand. I am also pleased to know that in the financial industry the private sector is working very closely with Government. The goals are similar and I believe that this will go a very long way to the continuing success story of the Cayman Islands in this vein.

Having said all of that, I think we should note that there is certainly no time to rest on our laurels as competition is fierce. So, while I am very confident of this I just make mention that we should be on guard for the other territories who try to emulate our success and also use us as examples to try to improve on the services that we provide, not having to go through the growing pains that we have gone through. Nevertheless, the fact that we are setting the example as we go along does well for those people who are in the industry and I am sure they recognise these efforts.

Madam Speaker, the Customs Department exceeded its revenue expectations again, and I must say, having to deal with them on a regular basis, I have found that there is a continual effort to improve their services. There has been a fair amount of capital investment in providing facilities so that these Officers may perform their duties.

I must note that the new facility at the airport is computerised and I have taken time out to try to understand exactly what the new system is all about, and where it helps and where it saves time behind the scenes. But, I think we need to also pay attention to the fact that at certain peak periods when people are clearing their goods there is a backlog. It is not necessarily because of inefficiency on the part of the officers (and I will not venture to say that I know what the cause is) but there exists the possibility that deployment might need to be looked at regarding the number of Officers manning the counter, and also consideration needs to be made for staff to be added at certain times. Maybe they can be taken from certain areas that are not busy during the peak time. But it does get a bit frustrating at times and people who are very busy are not concerned with what internal problems there may be, they simply want results. That is a criticism based with the hope that they may see some enhanced results.

I have another concern which is one that I believe needs noting. I remember awhile back there was a private member's motion that came before the House regarding the Customs Department. It had to do with goods being exported from the various points in these Islands and the fact that there were no concerted efforts to make sure that all goods exported had accompanying bona fide invoices. I may be guessing here to a certain extent, but I still believe that a fair amount of the goods that are stolen within these Islands leave the territory.

I believe this because I find it difficult for it not to be known within our community (at least some of the times), when any fencing operation takes place, that is, people are purchasing stolen goods and reselling them. I am confident that within the business community there would be hardly if any at all, of those people who would knowingly involve themselves in dealing with stolen goods. I do not believe that there is any great underground network that handles these goods simply because it is very difficult in a society such as ours. Therefore, I am led to believe that many of these goods are leaving the territory under some guise and they are not being caught.

Madam Speaker, if we were to check the lists of items reported stolen and have never been recovered it would also enhance the point that I made. Because many of these items are not items that it makes sense to take apart and sell portions of them. So it is obvious that the perpetrators would simply sell the items they have stolen in order to make the best return. At this point in time, I still believe that they are leaving the territory in their natural state illegally.

The Government's position at the time when the motion was brought was while the problem is accepted as a real situation it was covered under the Customs Law. I am not disputing that, but being able to hold up a piece of paper that says "LAW" and enforcing it are two different matters. I contend that at this point in time there is still some loopholes somewhere. I would ask the Honourable Third Official Member if he would take it on his own to examine that situation. Again, my statement is not based on all facts, Madam Speaker, but I think that some of the conclusions are reasonable, given the circumstances that we know surround them.

Madam Speaker, of note also as we move on through the Throne Speech under the Currency Board and the Pensions Board, is the fact that there was an actuarial assessment of the Government's Pension Fund and it was used to assist the Government in reassessing the pension contribution. While we have never been put to task at a national level those of us who take the time out understand the heavy burden that the Government, meaning the country, is faced with regarding the liability of the Pension.

I am happy to see that there are moves afoot to place the fund with competent investment managers with a view of increasing returns, if we recollect. Not very long ago Government added one point to their percentage of contribution to the Pension Fund and at the same point in time they increased the contribution to the Pension Fund by members of the Civil Service by the same one point. This is not going to bring it in line immediately, but at least it shows that the huge sums that can be called upon are recognised if there were to be a disaster, for instance where many people lost their lives. That is something that is probably not thought about very often and it is very unlikely. We hope it will not happen, but in instances like that we can be faced with a serious national crisis. So I am pleased to know that there is a move afoot and simply suggest that it is something that is looked at carefully. So it is not every five or ten years that what has to be done to keep it in reasonable line is done (as is the case) in many other instances.

Madam Speaker, the Treasury Department increased its collection of Tourist Accommodation Tax in 1994, by 54% and that again, is pleasing. If we pose the question again, the Honourable Financial Secretary may still have a list of uncollected fund, but I am happy to know that it is not left alone. I would encourage, through the Honourable Member, that the department keeps up the pressure in order to keep collections in line as there is much demand from all areas for funds to be spent in order for various services to be provided by the Government.

Madam Speaker, the Ministry for Tourism, Environment and Planning is naturally very active. I dare say that there will always be opinions formed on what is right and what is wrong, what is going well and what is not going well. The first thing that I have to speak about under this Ministry is the proposed increase to ten percent in the accommodation tax as of June 1 this year.

When the Bill was brought to the House there were lists of arguments for and arguments against the wisdom of this move. It was initially to commence January 1 1995, but it has now been delayed until June 1 1995.

Madam Speaker, I still have questions in my mind as to the wisdom of this move. Now, on one hand I am sure that in order for the Government to provide the services that are continually requested of them, there needs to be sufficient revenue coming in. I dare say, that is the position any Government will find itself in and it is one which the Honourable Financial Secretary lives with on a daily basis. I guess simply put, that is the price that they pay for the job that they hold. Having established the continuing need for funds, I still believe that we have to be careful in what areas we choose to increase revenue measures. Most of the schools of thought over the years from a political standpoint is that the least you tax your constituents directly the happier they are. That is a fair comment but it also makes good sense.

Madam Speaker, the country's success in many areas is also very dependent on the tourist trade, not only the numbers that pass through the territory, but the amount of money pumped into the economy by spending directly or indirectly. I hold the view that while projections may be some estimated $4.6 million, if it were to be from January 1 1995, but in order to satisfy the need for capital projects or ongoing services provided by the Government, we need to pay attention to the possible negative impact that this might have.

There have been articles published in the newspaper and from a dollar point of view this may not seem to be adding a great amount of money to the cost of a Cayman Islands vacation, but people have a tendency, especially the repeat customer, to notice any changes in the way and the amounts they have to pay for the goods and services provided. While I cannot stand here and honestly say that we should not do anything about the accommodation tax, because it has been a while since it was reviewed, I hold the view that we may be wiser to deal with it on a timely basis. My suggestion, it being one that is contemplated on (and it may not be the perfect answer) is possibly to deal with it on a point per year basis until we achieve what we think is the right level. The truth is that if you move from 6 to 7 percent, people do not really feel that there is a huge difference, but if you move from 6 percent to 10 percent it is going to be noticed. While it is actual dollars and cents you may be speaking about a reasonable amount of money in return in the short term. I am not so sure whether we are better off from a broader perspective in dealing with it in that fashion.

Political will is what it will be and maybe the suggestion comes from the wrong corner, but nevertheless I make it, for I believe that if the truth be known many of the individuals who are in the industry would be much happier and more amenable to the situation if it was dealt with in this fashion. So that is a suggestion I make to the Government and while I heard of the wide consultation that took place with those involved in the tourism industry and the satisfaction with the move, I have heard several individuals who are directly involved and who are well-meaning members of our society voice concerns.

The recent newspaper article which puts the Cayman Islands as the most expensive vacation destination for the Western Caribbean certainly does not help in this vein. The Director of Tourism noted in an interview recently that she thought we should be paying more attention to the fact that what our vacation cost once we ensure that people are getting value for their money that is the major train of thought that should be going on within the industry.

Madam Speaker, that is certainly correct, and I agree with it but it goes beyond that. Beyond a certain point no matter how beautiful the beaches are, how friendly the people are, once there is competition in the market and it is growing, (we all know about it), certainly we have to pay very close attention to the way we handle our affairs and market our product. Enough said on that issue.

I also note under the Department of Tourism, that new career development initiative is also planned—a joint effort between the hospitality sector and the Department of Tourism. This programme is aimed at providing support, guidance and work programme opportunities for Caymanians who may be considering work in the tourism industry or those who may wish to further their career in the industry but unsure how to go about this. The Honourable Minister has not spoken yet and I would be very pleased to get more details on this, because it is something that is very dear to me and it is something I believe we sadly lack in the Cayman Islands.

The hospitality industry is one which many more of our local Caymanians can get involved with and we need to tie down specific ways and means to train and motivate them in order to get them involved and desirous of being involved in the industry. It is something we have spoken about for many years and it is something we keep saying our local people do not want to get involved with, because it seems to be demeaning. I do not accept that anymore. I think we need to provide the ways and means to get them involved and they will be involved.

Madam Speaker, I can only say to the people in the industry that while we know that costs continue to rise in various forms and while ensuring the quality of the product, we need to do our very best to keep our prices as low as possible, simply because of competition. One of the problems we can find ourselves in by relaxing, because numbers are good, is with a large gap between our prices and others. When our numbers fall then a whole lifestyle has to be changed in order to bring them in line. I say this because we have to always think and have our lives planned for when it is not as booming as it is now. If we have ourselves slated in certain areas and are not prepared for downturns, it can affect the workers and it can affect the whole industry in a negative fashion. So we have to be careful. The time that we hate to hear about always creep upon us when we least expect it.

Under this same Ministry is the Department of Environment and the Department of Planning. Before going into each of these departments, I would like to draw a few excerpts from a recent article in the Newstar Magazine. It was the cover story, the title of it was "The Development Dilemma."

It started off by saying: "Cayman seems poised for another economic boom, raising fears about runaway development and how that could affect the country in the long term. In this series of articles, Newstar tackles the question of how much development is enough or, indeed, needed."

This discussion was done via a roundtable discussion with some of the younger professionals in these islands.

Here are a few excerpts, Madam Speaker, from those individuals who are not only conscious but conscientious. I think they have a great deal to offer this country by way of their thoughts.

"We need to be looking at the long term picture. There are key questions that are not being asked by our politicians, our decision-makers and even by the public. Questions such as: What is our carrying capacity, not just in environment, but in our infrastructure, in our social systems?"

"It was pointed out that the politician concerned with re-election every four years, is not likely to raise these concerns and since regulations prohibit the civil servants' input, the questions will have to be asked by individual citizens. Given the conservative nature of Caymanians, this dialogue is probably unlikely."

It gives me great concern to think that we are not thought of as having the courage to raise these concerns. While opinions will remain opinions and they are not necessarily equated to total factual language, I think that when opinions come from certain quarters, we should certainly pay some credence to them. Those opinions may be formed by experience over the years, and there may be some of us who feel that we are judged by the actions of others, but nevertheless, that is the way the cycles run.

The article goes on to say: "If people do not make connection between environmental quality and the quality of their life, it will be made for them. But in reality that catastrophe has to occur before people take action. Simply meaning—it takes something bad to happen before we do anything about the problem."

One of the young people noted that: "the rush to development which includes in our small island 50 plus real estate companies as an example of a feeding frenzy with Caymanians themselves apparently bent on consuming the very things that make Cayman unique. We are involved with satisfying the short-term appetite without due regard for the future. Naturally, the first question asked is how do we restrain that impulse? So far it seems no one has been able to do that."

So I guess some of us might say that no one else has been able to do it, so we may as well fall in line.

Someone said that: "No community is going to fare well in the long term if the majority of it is a transient group. Our Immigration Policies do not encourage people who come here to make this their home. We say that we have things under control, and we are showing them who is the boss, but those people do not have any security here at all. They are not becoming stake holders in the long term future of this country."

Those excerpts simply display a train of thought that many of the people in this country have. These are all (I hate to be saying it nowadays) people a decade younger than myself. It is my view that we should be paying a lot of attention to what these people have to say. The majority of them have not yet found themselves in the crossfire dealing with what we know should be right, but having to deal with individuals and having to satisfy the whims and fancies and desires of those individuals because those individuals carry some clout. That is what is happening to us in my opinion.

I know that the balancing act is very difficult. I know that it is hard to say that we are going to satisfy one end of the story by allowing, within reason, the amount and type of development that people desire, while, at the same time, if we are truthful to ourselves, there is always a cost equated to the development. Because the bottom has not yet fallen out, I hold the view that none of us are paying enough attention to what is happening on a daily basis in these islands.

It is not just the Minister's responsibility. It is natural that he and his departments, as the representatives of the Government arm, will face the fire. But all of us, on both sides of the fence, have the responsibility to deal with it. As an ever-growing society we need to be thinking what Cayman will look like and be like, and be made up of, in the future, and what is best for those who come after us.

We keep loosely saying that we want it better for our children and our grandchildren. I wonder how many of us fully realise the meaning of that statement.

The opinions that these people have stated go on. They come back at us politicians and say: "To be fair to the politicians, they are elected by popular vote and the majority of the voters are happy with the way Cayman is. There has been very little difference in policy over the years, so it does not matter much who gets in. The politicians will only change when people's attitudes change."

I would hate to know (maybe I am putting my foot in my mouth here) that when I look back at my time spent in this Honourable House that I have to say the same thing about myself.

A young lady says: "We can have a say in how fast this boom runs, but to do that we need leadership at all levels and the public has to be educated. Choices have to be presented to the voters in a simplified matter. We cannot wait until things start crashing economically, by then the environment, along with our social systems, will be destroyed." So true!

There is another young lady who was kind of on our side. She said: "It was unreasonable to expect the politicians to change if the people did not." But also that: "Government was a case of too many separate priorities without a big picture." I wish to repeat that last sentence: "Government was a case of too many separate priorities without a big picture."

I wish I were very eloquent to say all the things that are running in my mind regarding this statement. But let me just say that I will risk the effort.

In my view, one of the problems that we face is the system of government, involving the various Ministries and Portfolios, which are from the civil service side of Government and the head of each of the Ministries and the Portfolios, represent Executive Council. Criticism that I may level I trust will not be misinterpreted, but that is the risk I will have to take as I find it in here continually.

It is my belief that at certain points in time each individual government of the day, hopefully not government of the future, will find itself entrenched in ensuring that their Ministry performs over and above what is expected or hoped for individually so that they can report back to the people that they have done an excellent job in this or that area. In each of them doing that, while taken singly and receiving all of the pluses, on many occasions they cannot put it altogether to make a good picture when you try to associate what each of them did as compared to the other because there is an overlap in just about everything that one does in conjunction with something else that is involved in another Ministry.

While I may not be painting the picture as well as some others may be able to, I sincerely hope that the thought is understood.

The development dilemma, along with the Planning Department, along with the Environment, along with the Tourists, that is probably the one that easily comes to mind and they are all within one Ministry in this point in time. But after trying to work all of these in sync, they extend to the Portfolio of Finance and Development and other areas. We need good hospital care from the Ministry of Health to ensure that our tourists are not adverse in visiting our Islands if we cannot take care of them, if something goes wrong. I am just using those little examples.

Then, we come to another most serious dilemma that involves all of what we have been talking about so far and that is, infrastructure.

As long as I can remember, we have tried to play catch-up, and we have never, ever caught up. We cannot look to say that when things slow down is when we are going to take a back seat, sit down and examine our situation, then try to put in infrastructure. How can we do that when we are going to be complaining that we do not have the money to do it? It makes no sense in the world to me. I will reiterate that this is not a 'today' problem.

We have the Planning Department, the Central Planning Authority and the Ministry trying to conclude the Development Plan Review—after many attempts. I trust that this one will come to a conclusion very shortly. This will be (I am not 100% sure) either the third, fourth or fifth attempt from 1977 to have a review of the Development Plan. Every time the Review was posted on shelf 13 before its conclusion was because of politics—the same politics that we involve ourselves with right here in this honourable Legislative Assembly.

There was a Master Ground Transportation Plan that was made up. It was done by professionals. I remember being on the Central Planning Authority when it was presented to us. Madam Speaker, that was a plan. I bear no false witness. In my view, from my prospective—which was totally objective—the Plan was a very good plan. The Plan was a good plan simply because it had an end result where all the networks joined together. Whether it was the year 2050 or 2100 (when certainly all of us who are here will not be around) at least whenever it was completed it would have been completed in a uniformed fashion.

We now decide that this is the right thing to get the politics going and we determine that the cost is $200 million and we cannot afford that. So we must throw the MGTP completely through the window because we are going to run this country into bankruptcy. The proponents of the plan run scared and say 'Oh Lord, have mercy. What a boo-boo. The best thing is to back off of this before we get killed any further.' So the Plan is dead. The proponents and opponents of that Plan, if they had known all the facts and were truthful to this country, was the best thing that could have ever happened to this country.

The Plan, not its implementation, is being used as an example to show how seriously our responsibility should be taken in here—over and above the fact of how I am going to look after it is all over.

Madam Speaker, since the Plan we now have been dealing with the Harquail Bypass, which is to alleviate the traffic going to the western district. Four or five years from now when we want to do something else, if we had established the future road corridors—which was the first and most important thing with the plan, we would have saved millions of dollars because people would have developed around those established corridors.

I can be taken to task by anyone who thinks I am supporting Mr. Linford Pierson for the MGTP. Privately they know what I would tell them, but that is another story. The fact of the matter is that when it comes to the future well-being of this country, the proper development of our infrastructure, if we do not look at it from the long term basis, it is going to cost this country millions of dollars more than it should cost in the long run. I do not care who disputes what I am saying, I know that they know deep in their hearts that what I am speaking is the truth.

Politics, being what it is, will never not exist. And there is a lot of room for us to play it. But there are certain things that I believe we should all come to grips with which politics should not involve itself with because we are playing with the future of this country.

Every day those of us who live in the outer districts are crying if we do not leave home by a certain time in the morning that we are in trouble. It seems like a whole day before we get to work. The same for those from the eastern districts. Families have three or four cars. None of us have the nerve to stand up here and say that we are going to restrict families as to how many cars they can have—none of us, including myself, because that is not the life-style we are used to. So what are we going to do about it?

I guess some of us figure that we can bide our time and bob and weave, as some of us say, and at the end of the day it will be someone else's problem. It is very unfair for those of us who think like that. Too many people have thought like that before and we need to stop thinking like that.

Whenever that review of the Development Plan is completed, and after all the problems have been ironed out, after all of the concerns have been aired, after the process of the appellate tribunal, after we harangue and go back and forth with it when it comes to this Legislative Assembly and everybody will be expected to state their view, and after the forces have been rallied, and after it is passed . . . at the end of the day, the first step in my view is to pursue acquiring the road corridors on a timely basis. I accept and understand that you cannot stop everything in the country and deal with that. I understand that. But if we had been dealing with it on a well planned, timely basis, from years ago, we would not have the problem that we are faced with now, even though we try to believe or pretend that the problem does not exist—it certainly does. As it is it is going to cost us millions more than it should have.

But if we wish to leave it alone (and I certainly do not have the power to carve the minds of all of us here, but I am saying my piece at least) what will happen to us is that years down the line when someone else has to deal with it and we talk about having to acquire this five storey building, and that $3 million house to mash down, we will see the waste that it really is.

When I speak of putting the politics aside at certain times, I say that in all sincerity to all of us—and when I say all of us, I mean ALL of us. There will be times as we go along when we see advantages that we can get, those of us who find ourselves on one side or the other, by dealing with issues in a certain way. That is practically what happens to us at all times, or who looks the best when it is all over. But we have to find the thin line where what is of national concern and at a certain level we need to be able to come together. Because one set dealt with it in a certain way it does not mean that it is right for the other set to deal with it in that way because it is their turn now, because the country is right in the middle of it. Inasmuch as we stand up and holler and ask them to vote for us and say 'Oh, I am a good man, deal me in,' it is wrong for us to deal with it in that fashion.

I hope that when it comes to a lot of our basic infrastructure, which is more than needed, that we will find the courage and the political will—not politically correct, but the political will—to do what is right for this country in the long term. Let us not show short-sightedness by fantasising what could well be made to be something that is not right, when deep down inside you know it is right.

Another example is the hospital. This is just a dream, this is not fact, but it is a parallel. The Ministry now has a course of action and, like everything else, I do not suspect that that plan equates to perfection. I am confident that if we go back to the aborted hospital we would find that maybe that one did not equate to perfection either. If I stand here today, tomorrow, and the next day and find the good words, the right things to say to let the new plan get half way, and then show all the things that were wrong with it, and stop it, if given the opportunity, am I doing the right thing for this country?

I really wonder sometimes, when we look at all the actions in the past, through all the inadequacies of plans that existed, is it that this country has to accept in perpetuity that as we fight each other politically a few million dollars more each year to satisfy the way we want to deal with things does not matter? I wonder.

The Speaker: Would this be an opportunity to take the suspension?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.39 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.04 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, just to sum up the point I was making before we took the short break is to say that I hold the view that when we are dealing with situations of national concern, while at all times the voting public will form their opinions and some will be vociferous about those opinions and at the end of the day during any political campaign for one's own self preservation it is going to be most likely said what is most popular. At the same point in time when the actual working of Government takes place (which basically occur in between elections), I simply say that we need to find the ways to deal with the various serious issues that continually faces us in such a manner that we are able to draw the good points out of the conclusions that have been drawn of what may be bad about something and use those good points so that at the end of the day we do not have to be starting over and the costs end up to be more than they need to be.

It might be said that the picture I paint in drawing comparison might be an incomplete one, but the point that I wish to make has no bearing on who, it is a concept that I am trying to put forward. I firmly believe that we [the Elected Members] and the people will be better off if we are able to find ourselves with the ability to deal with it in this fashion.

I wish to make a short comment regarding the Port Authority. The Master Port Development Plan was completed in 1994, and the Report has been accepted by the Authority and had been tabled. So it seems that the Report is well equipped to deal with future needs.

I understand that there is also consideration being given to the extension of the dock in Cayman Brac to attract a weekly visit by cruise ship. I certainly believe that this will also enhance the transportation of cargo to Cayman Brac.

But I wish to make mention of the Spotts Jetty, which I have heard on many occasions that the location is a poor one because of almost continual inclement weather.

Madam Speaker, I have said before and I will say again, I travel that road almost on a daily basis and I do not subscribe to the view that the weather is more bad there than it is good. With the acquisition of the property which is close to four acres adjacent to the Jetty, I believe that the Authority should be looking down the line to creating proper facilities especially for the cruise ships.

It is my view that spreading the landing over to that location could well assist with the problems we are faced with down at the waterfront in George Town at the dock. I think that it is possible to have some ships landing in George Town and some landing in Spotts at the same time. This would spread the need for the taxi services and matters such as that once proper facilities are in place.

I take this opportunity also to say that I think as soon as the Port Authority is able to deal with providing the proper facilities at Spotts we should look forward to the use of some of that property to create another type of national recreational centre meaning, beach facilities and cabanas because the initial Plan includes this. I do not think that the Port's facilities need to use up the entire property. Many of the residents in that area would be quite happy to involve themselves in such a project and look forward to it.

Under the Ministry for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, I am very pleased to have heard recently that plans are afoot to commence the reconstruction of the Drug Rehabilitation Centre in Breakers. I think that having overcome the drawbacks of the location it is certainly something that is needed. While there may be problems that will ensue, again like everything else, it is something we will continually have to work on and make improvements once we can get it going. It was also a wise decision to relocate the Cayman Counselling Centre and I trust that they have every assistance needed to get going in full order.

Madam Speaker, of note I think that we must be very clear in making sure that proper counselling facilities are located in Northward. I have seen on many occasions when the Courts have had much difficulty dealing with offenders who are addicts, not necessarily pushers, to strike the balance between incarceration and making sure that they have access in getting help. So, I do trust that the Cayman Counselling Centre at the Northward Prison is given full assistance and is equipped with qualified people.

I would also like to say that I have come across a few individuals who are Caymanian and are very interested in this area and all opportunity should be given to them to further enhance their education and qualifications so that they may be able to take up the helm down line.

Madam Speaker, it is difficult at this point in time to speak about our existing Health Services. At present we have a lot of problems in this area that stems from the lack of health facilities. The Honourable Minister has announced that the steam engines are full ahead to start the physical structures that are needed and the accompanying programmes and services will be provided once the facilities are in place. I can only say at this point in time that the country needs these facilities and whether the location is a moot point to debate, it is the will of the Government that the present site be upgraded and new construction takes place. So, with that in mind for the sake of this country I can only wish it well.

I do trust and hope that [Government] will be open to suggestions because the existing site within itself lends to certain problems and as they move on with the new Health Services programmes and in providing new facilities there are certain inherent problems that will have to be addressed. The facilities will make for a better quality of life for the indigenous population and others who reside here and the visitors. It is something that we have to deal with. Whatever may be said of me, I am not one to continually gripe about what is being done wrong especially if I know that it will be done in a certain way. I much rather take the position of assessing what may not be so right and try to point out areas that could be helpful.

Madam Speaker, there are existing problems which I think during the interim needs to be looked at. While the question has been asked in the House during Question Time, I still believe that more attention needs to be paid to try and streamline the length of time out-patient visits take in order to get assistance.

There is also a problem that has been brought to my attention and I have mentioned it to the Permanent Secretary [for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation]. I would like to take this opportunity to publicly state that the method in which people with appointment waiting for medical attention is called on is one that leaves much to be desired. I understand that people are there and are called, but because either the television is on or there is a lot of talking between visiting patients they do not hear and as a result they are passed over. They are there waiting sometimes from morning until afternoon. This may well not be the rule and there may be the exceptions but nevertheless, I think close attention should be paid to this situation.

Madam Speaker, the question of the National Health Insurance has arisen and the Honourable Minister has given a time-frame for bringing a palatable proposition to the Legislative Assembly by November, and I can only stress the importance of this National Health Insurance Plan to the best of my ability to ensure that while I know that it takes some time to put these things together, my view is that sufficient time has passed. I am very anxious to see and hear that something is being done. It is obvious that this is one of the few areas where the collective responsibility of the nation as a whole is best used. I think it will certainly be a minority who do not accept the need for a National Health Insurance and certainly the majority look forward to it.

None of us know when we will be stricken with a major illness and while most of us do not have to face that during our lifetime those of us who do rarely find ourselves in the position to take care of expenses. If we all pay into an insurance scheme then we can have the assurance that when this happens we will be able to receive the proper care and the Government will not be saddled with all the expenses. Certainly while the Utopia situation would be that the Government is in a position to provide all these services free, the truth is if we look at it from that point of view, it would certainly cost us more in various areas as citizens of the country. So I look forward to hearing more about the National Health Insurance and I would hope that the timeframe of November is a realistic one.

The difficulty that I find with that is that if it extends beyond the period I have talked about earlier, we might end up starting a scheme over again and three or four years from now we will still be talking about it and not have the scheme.

The next area which His Excellency the Governor covered in his Throne Speech is the Ministry for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture. The first thing that I wish to make mention of is the Young Parents Programme. I think it is a very needed one and it certainly will serve a good purpose. I have spoken to two or three of the ladies who are participating in the programme and, knowing them before this, I can certainly see much improvement in their very thought process. So certainly this programme will do well in this area.

The Department of Social Services along with the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), will conduct a study that will be developed during 1995 on "The Status of the Family in the Caymanian Society." The terms of reference of such a study need to be looked at very carefully and once the study is done with proper terms of reference, certainly the information gleaned from it will arm the powers that be and the relevant departments with the proper ammunition as to where to spearhead their efforts.

We have been talking about the changes that have taken place socially and economically over the many years that we have experienced tremendous development and we need to identify specific reasons for the underlying problems which we know prevail in the family unit that bear a negative impact in various areas. I am sure if we are able to pinpoint some of the problems, we will be better equipped to deal with them.

I mentioned the terms of reference because while I am not suggesting that I am equipped to outlay those terms of reference, I think we might not have another opportunity as golden as this one. So I trust that the powers that be carefully examine what they wish to achieve so that the study may be completed properly.

There was also mention of a Crime Study that should be completed by June 1995. I would also like to hear some more about it regarding its terms of reference. Just as I have said earlier on about the study of the family, if we are able to get the right information we should be able to deal with certain matters that we have been up in arms about for quite some time.

The Department of Trade and Labour. Madam

Speaker, labour is not a commodity. Poverty anywhere constitutes a danger to prosperity everywhere. That is something that we need to bear in mind at all times and I need to mention here that when we do our statistics for unemployment I always hold a reserve opinion about the end results.

At the end of 1994 there were 1,024 persons that noted as unemployed. Of this sum, 623 were Caymanians. So 401 were either people who had been working on work permits and at that point were unemployed or the spouses of people who were employed on work permits and who expressed the desired to work but could not find jobs.

In quoting these statistics we must bear in mind that there are quite likely several hundred more persons out there who, for one reason or the other, did not become a part of those statistics. It is very important that we look at these individuals, we identify these individuals and find the ways and means to make them productive. For I am certain in my own mind that many of the unemployed are individuals who are causing the Honourable Third Official Member to lose the $15 million each year on interdiction when he would like to spend it elsewhere. I believe that if we can identify more of our problems and our individuals and find ways and means to make them productive it would enable us to spend less than $15 million per year between the Police, the Prison and the Courts.

"A Minimum Wage Advisory Committee has been appointed, to advise on the need for minimum wage." Madam Speaker, I welcome this because I remember a Private Member's Motion coming before this House about establishing a minimum wage. It was rejected for whatever reasons at the time, but I believe then as I believe now that we need to talk about establishing some type of minimum wage. At least this is a move towards the direction of establishing whether there is a need or not. It appears that the opinion is simply not cut and dried, that there is no need.

"The Department also plans to explore suitable apprenticeship schemes for implementation on a pilot basis; enhancement of the job placement system and extension of technical assistance to help the unskilled secure and retain suitable employment." Madam Speaker, like some of the other areas in the Throne Speech, these words are nice words but I would like very much to know exactly how this is planned because it is something that is very important. It is an extension to the thought I expressed earlier and I would like to know exactly how this is planned to be done.

I am not suggesting that the Department of Labour is not capable of dealing with it but it is something that we cannot simply pay lip service to and put pen to paper and talk about it. It needs to be done and done should I say, right now. "The additional Labour Inspector will be hired to enable the department to increase the frequency and scope of workplace inspections...", is all well and good but there is going to be a need for expertise in the area above for the apprenticeship scheme and the enhancement of the job placement system. It is something that is always going to be a problem because I know from experience, that many of the individuals who wish to get a job, and if genuinely given the opportunity to work find, themselves ill-equipped for any of the jobs registered at the Labour Office and this is where the problem comes in. So I trust that identifying the problem will lead to some type of solution.

Madam Speaker, under the Public Libraries I see where there are plans in place to turn district Town Halls into district Libraries once civic centres are available for all. While I may be making the wrong assumption, what I read does not tell me whether the same plan is for the George Town, Town Hall because I know we have a Library. I just wish to say that I hope this is not the case because the Town Hall in George Town certainly serves a very well needed purpose in the community. I am not suggesting that this is the case, I just wish to make sure it is not the case. Madam Speaker, to reiterate the point from where I sit, I do not know what the plan is and what I have just read does not tell me anything regarding the George Town, Town Hall. So I wish to state my position that it should remain for the purposes that it now serves.

Under Sports, I noticed where His Excellency the Governor in his Throne Speech mentioned the hosting of three regional games. "The hiring of technical directors for football and basketball, and coaches for netball and cricket, and the ongoing involvement of sports office employees in the "Time Release Scheme" to supplement the after-school programme." Madam Speaker, I am not sure at this point in time regarding the hiring of technical director and coaches, but I am just passing on my views here.

I believe that there are several local individuals who might not be formally equipped for doing some of the jobs but who have all the right attitudes, will and intention and this energy continually needs to be harnessed and proper training provided for these individuals. If they are committed in these areas there is no one from another shore who can do better than our own. There are individuals that I know, people like Andy Myles who is in the Sports Office, whom I used to play cricket with many years ago but I trust that whatever he is able to achieve he is allowed to achieve in this area. There is another gentleman by the name of J.C. Connor whom I remember used to coach the National Football team, but certainly people like him could well be harnessed.

Madam Speaker, there is a lot of thought being expressed on money being spent in the direction of sports and I am one who believe that for many years there was a neglect in providing facilities and programmes for the various types of sporting activities in the Island. A few days ago when I visited the new Truman Bodden Sports Complex with other Members of the Legislative Assembly (although it is not quite completed), I have to be truthful in saying that I am very proud of the facility. A facility of that nature has been well needed for these Islands for many years. Thank God it is in the district of George Town. I do not know if that was by design or it could not be avoided.

I am really glad to see that this has become a reality. What I see as a need for the immediate future in the area of sports is to enhance the district facilities as the plan indicates. But also especially for the district of George Town, I would like, wherever possible, to see a few more playing fields. Both fields are presently used almost to a maximum namely, the Annex playing field and the John Gray High School playing field and it causes a problem with their initial purpose to be used by the schools. I know that we cannot do everything we desire to do overnight. For instance, if we look at the teams in the Football League, there are probably six teams that are in George Town and would train in George Town, but continually they have problems with finding a playing field available within their schedule to train properly. I know this probably will not be achieved immediately but I bring it to the attention with the hope that in a year or two we may have other fields. I do not believe that it takes a huge amount of capital expenditure to my mind. There is a sports club called Naya that is developing a playing field. I think if properties are identified other clubs will not only be quite willing to assist with the preparation but also with the maintenance once they can have the use of it.

Madam Speaker, I have mentioned several other areas which are important to enhancing the wellbeing of the Caymanian society. I have mentioned several areas that are going to take real money to deal with down line and while I pay credence to the sports programmes I also have to say, that at this point in time we need to be looking to balance the act and ensure that while we all want to see some things occur we have to make sure we prioritise the needs of the country the best way possible. I would be happy if all of the wishes and requests were met, but we all know that is not physically possible.

We have to deal with it as best we can with the available funds to provide the best value for money. I make that general statement because we hear comments regarding the National Sports and Recreational Centre that the Cayman Islands do not need such a facility at this point in time. There are others who are very sports minded and have said that we are behind the times when we compare ourselves with other territories and for such an affluent society we should have such facility.

I am not the one who has to make the decisions in that area, Madam Speaker, but we need to ensure that we move along based on long term planning but at the same time we have to also remember the other areas which are needed as well, like infrastructure as I mentioned before.

There is the CARIFTA Games that we will be hosting. I know that there are some people who are jittery about our ability to successfully host such a game. Madam Speaker, I hold the view that we should simply all try to assist to the best of our ability by providing our services in regards to manpower and whatever else is required to ensure that it is a success.

The Government and the Cayman Islands Amateur Athletic Association have been working hand in hand in this area and once this is achieved it will not only be a milestone, but we will naturally find ourselves being involved regionally in other sporting activities. While we will not be hosting all the time it certainly will give rise to more exposure to our athletes. I think that is a large part of nurturing the quality of our competitiveness.

So I would urge the entire community to give their support not only to the CARIFTA Games, but to other sporting activities that will be coming up. To sum up the area of sports, I think that we should retain an ongoing plan but ensure that it does not weigh too heavily and inhibit progress in other areas.

The Cayman National Cultural Foundation is a very important part of the awareness of this community, Madam Speaker, and it gives rise to the opportunity for both children and adults to participate both as players and as members of the audience in good wholesome entertainment. I am sure it is a learning process for us all. The Harquail Theatre is growing from strength to strength and we have productions of locally written plays which is good for us. We have the Festival of the Arts for the local school children which also brings about the enhancement of the natural talent that we find in the schools. So, I certainly give every support to the CNCF and their goals.

Madam Speaker, under the Ministry for Education and Aviation, it is notable and I am very proud to see the results. There have been talks before about the first CXC Examination sat by our local students both at the John Gray and the Cayman Brac High School. As His Excellency the Governor said in his Throne Speech "...in terms numbers of good passes and quality of passes there were the best results in the history of Secondary Education in the Cayman Islands."

I remember when there was much ado about the CXC Examination. I took the time to find out as much as I could about them, the history of the examinations, their make up and what they were geared for and I was totally convinced then as I am now, that they were the right examinations for our curriculum to cater to. I am pleased to know that our local students have risen to the challenges on the first occasion which I am sure paved the way for those to follow to do the same. So there is no question of whether our students can cope with these examinations or not. I trust that the National Curriculum being developed will certainly have what these results have shown in mind with its development.

There is a question in my mind about a long-term initiative in the field of education. I must admit that I have not totally come to grips with it but is it one that I will pose here. Previously, there was some thought that down line there would be an institution for secondary education located somewhere in the outer districts.

Madam Speaker, I do not know what the thought is within the Ministry and in terms of the Strategic Planning regarding any goals along those lines, but it is fair comment that especially Bodden Town, which is probably the fastest growing district in these Islands, and while most of us hear mention of the district of Bodden Town we think of Bodden Town proper in realising where its boundaries are we will understand why I make the statement, bearing in mind that it goes from the entrance of Frank Sound to the Spotts Newlands Road just outside of Savannah which encompasses a fairly large area. Many people are relocating to the area and it is my view that unless something terrible happens within these Cayman Islands each year we will be needing space for more students, simply because of the geography of the Islands. I wonder if it would not be well placed in thinking about providing such an institution down line.

I have always had the thought in my mind regarding more than one facility simply because of the geographic. There is always the spirit of competition and that area could well be enhanced throughout the age groups if there were another school. I quite accept and understand that this is not something for today, but if we plan for the long-term we will be able to cope with it better. So I make that suggestion in wondering if it could be looked at some time in the future.

The Pre-school Programme is another area where I have questions and I will try to be careful in my comments. I still have a certain amount of reservation in regards to the transition period between pre-school and the beginning of the primary level. I am not sure whether the separation of the two has been in the best interest of the children. I do not have a firm stand on the topic, but I recognise certain disadvantages and advantages and I do trust that in their deliberations the experts have looked at what is best for the children.

In His Excellency's Address he made mention of the very important role that the private school system continues to provide at a national level. I can only say that on a whole it is very important that those schools are able to function properly because within them they provide the spirit of competition in certain areas that I think are very important. So much so, that because it has always existed in certain areas we take it for granted.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member take the luncheon suspension now?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Ma'am.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.56 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.31 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town, continuing.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Time is running out and there are a few more points that I wish to raise.

One of the points that I would like to speak about regarding Cayman Airways is the cargo service. I understand the physical problems that the airline has experienced recently with handling capacity. I do not have the answers but I think there are many people like myself who desire to support the airline. But in dealing with cargo service, time is always of the essence and because of the lack of space in the aircraft that has been leased there are some problems with getting freight on time.

While it leads to frustration, there is no doubt in my mind that the staff are doing all that they can. I do not know exactly what the plans are, but I would like to suggest that the Honourable Minister and the Board look seriously into trying to provide an ongoing freight service in order to capitalise on the income from that area.

Under the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications and Works, I see where "it is proposed to also complete the much delayed street naming and numbering project." And I see where "Considerable emphasis is to be placed on finalizing road corridors in George Town and other districts in order to maintain adequate traffic flows."

I touched on the road corridors already. But one of the things that I would like to point out is that for the district of George Town (because most of the activity with commerce, and most of the people from the outlying districts are employed in George Town), and with the high school and several other schools located there also the traffic bottlenecks are in this district. I hope that whatever immediate and future plans there are for establishing the corridors that emphasis will be placed in making sure that once vehicles enter into this district that they are able to reach their destinations as quickly as possible. This means that connecting roads will have to be thought out and actually built.

There is one area that I wish to speak on also with regards to the point raised about the rate increase by Caribbean Utilities in commercial establishments and the decrease to the homeowner.

At first sight, this may appear to be one of the best things that could have happened to the consumer. But I draw a comparison to when we had the increase on the diesel tax. The truth is that the increase on the diesel tax, while it appeared to only directly affect the larger consumers of diesel, at the end of the day the consumer paid more than that actual tax because when the increase costs are passed on from the utilities companies to the commercial establishments, the commercial establishments, in turn, naturally do the same to the consumer. At the end of the day the multiplier effect kicks in and the consumer ends up paying more. I believe this will be the same end result in the increase in the rates to the commercial establishments and what is termed a decrease to the homeowner.

The point that I am making is that if we are really going to try to alleviate costs to home owners—who are the majority of the consumers—I think we have to be looking at it from a broader perspective if we intend to achieve what we are saying that we intend to.

I am not satisfied that the net end result will be one that will assist home owners in any way and I would think that it is incumbent on the powers that be to physically find the method to determine what the exact net result of these actions will be with a view to rethinking the utilities companies guaranteed income to continue providing the service. But at the same time I think we should determine what is the best way to deal with the cost of the service and I wish to say that I am not totally satisfied that the net result will be a decrease in cost to the consumer directly or indirectly.

The Public Works Department "will continue its role of maintaining public buildings, roads and planning and implementation of the necessary expansions and improvement to these vital elements of Government's infrastructure." On that note I would like to say that it is my belief that if it is the policy of the government to allocate a certain amount of funds on a regular basis throughout the districts for road repairs and construction, I would like to see a comprehensive long range plan so that we know when certain works will take place. While I am a representative, I will continue to make requests about certain roads within my district to the department through the Minister. I think in the long run we will get much better results if we have a planned effort which will enable proper mobilisation of equipment and manpower and we might not see as much time being wasted waiting on directives as to which roads to deal with and when to deal with them.

The way it works now, if we as representatives identify various roads at the beginning of the year and we have to wait until the costs are established to decide which of these roads we will do based on the funds available, we are in to the end of the first quarter, going into the second quarter of the calendar year before action can be implemented.

Some may say that does not matter, but in thinking about it, if there were an ongoing plan re-examined on an annual basis, we might possibly get more done for the same amount of money.

There is always the latitude that we representatives wish to have if specific requests pop up in order to be able to deal with them, but in the long run if there is an identified programme I think we might get more done.

For my district, I am especially concerned in certain areas. I am concerned about many of the social problems and, while they exist nationwide, I think that simply by population distribution we will find some of those social problems more acute in the district. There are still many good people who have to face the problems of drugs and other social problems within their immediate or extended families. I hope that we are seriously looking into trying to assist in these areas meaningfully. There are organisations that try their best to play their part but their concerted effort to bring about the best results will have to come with plans at a national level. Some of those plans are being implemented at this time and I hope that they will continue and not be put by the wayside.

There is much for all of us to do and while there is only a certain amount we can do as individuals, I think that together we can make positive inroads to bring about some better results.

Universal and lasting peace can be established only if it is based on social justice. I firmly believe that the many problems that beset us need to be looked at in depth, not for what it is going to make us look like as leaders of the country, but for what we know will bring about the best end results—even if some of those end results are not immediately forthcoming.

I trust that the comments that I have made based on my beliefs regarding the Throne Speech have been accepted in the true intent in which they have been made. I will look forward, as we go about doing our jobs as representatives, to working along with each and everyone and trying to make our islands better for all of us.

In closing, I would like to say that even as we stand and differ sometimes, it is my hope that within us we can find the strength to accept those differences without making them personal because at that point in time it is when we all become counter-productive to ourselves. So I hope that we will be able to deal with our differences and still make positive decisions and create positive results for the betterment of our future and for those to come after us.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac.

Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I rise to offer my contribution on the Throne Speech, which was ably delivered by His Excellency the Governor to this honourable House and the country on the 3rd of March, 1995.

I consider this a very comprehensive Throne Speech and much information has been disseminated to us as Members and to the public. I remember the honour we had last year when Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II delivered the Throne Speech here in person. I have had the honour of sitting in this Chamber as a Member and have heard Her Majesty read the Speech from the Throne on two occasions. I think it has been such a great honour to this country to have such privilege and at this time I would like to convey my appreciation to the registered voters of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, the constituency which I represent and have represented since 1980. They have had the confidence in me to return me in each General Elections since that time. It has been an honour to serve them and I shall continue to do that to the best of my ability.

I have often said on the floor of this honourable House that being the only representative here who does not live on Grand Cayman, I see things often in a different perspective. It is more difficult for me to get to meetings, and I am further removed from central Government and so are my people. So sometimes if my wish list seems to be extra long, geographically the way the Lord made us separate Islands necessitates that extra attention. I am grateful that the Government accepts the needs of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as two individual Islands. Together we have been able to accomplish much since I came to this House in 1980. Some people may say there have not been many accomplishments but the records will show substantial expenditures and certainly, anyone with a memory can see where the money have gone.

Madam Speaker, we have much need for our revenue but during this year with the influx of Cuban migrants to our shores it has certainly created a very heavy burden on the treasury, the social structure, and the law enforcement units of this country namely the Police Force and the Immigration Department. During my sea-going career I have had many dealings with the country of Cuba in its days of freedom and even for a period after the revolutionary government took control and I realised what a bad government can do for a country.

Cuba has all the natural resources in the world necessary to have a successful country. It is 700-odd miles long, it had a great tourism industry but because it chose the wrong system of government it became a very poor economic system and that is the reason why today, a little nation like the Cayman Islands seems like heaven to those Cubans who have to flee their shores. So, I just say this as a word of caution to all sitting as Honourable Members of this House: We have a great responsibility on our shoulders to lead and direct the affairs of this country so that nothing like that happens to our beloved Cayman Islands.

We have a lovely little country although small in land area and I must remind you it is divided into three Islands—we are blessed. We have had great economic success, we are a Christian nation of God-fearing people and if we continue on this path we will remain a successful country.

Here, I would like to read, Madam Speaker, just one paragraph from the Throne Speech when His Excellency said, and I quote: "Cayman is one of the more fortunate countries in the world with a standard of living and, perhaps even more important, a quality of life second to none. I should like to take this opportunity to pay tribute to churches of all denominations who look after our spiritual well-being and who serve the community in so many ways, as well as to the voluntary organisations who look after those less able to look after themselves or concern themselves in areas which are outside the scope of Government, and to all residents who contribute to make the Cayman Islands such a wonderful place in which to live."

Madam Speaker, I spoke earlier of the honour we had being visited by Her Majesty the Queen. Before I leave that subject, long may she reign over us.

I turn now to the Judiciary. I am very happy to see that there will be upgrading of the Court building. This is very necessary in order to cope with the needs of our judiciary. It is very overcrowded and I do not think there is any argument that this absolutely needs to be expanded and improved upon. I am also glad to hear that there will be more extensive use of computers as was listed as a goal for 1995, also that the difficulties of enforcing Court Orders is being addressed by appropriate amendments to the Judicature Law which will be dealt with in this Meeting of the House. We will also be looking at a simplified method of collecting court fees and a review of the Legal Aid system. This Madam Speaker, I think is very necessary. Those who need legal aid must be afforded it, but it must be that they absolutely need it.

I would like to express my gratitude to the Chief Justice and all the Justices of the Grand Court and the Magistrates of the Lower Court for the able way in which they perform their duties. Also to Mr. Michael Bradley, the former Attorney General, who is doing a review of our Laws.

I turn now to the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs. Madam Speaker, we have seen new faces in this Honourable House and I would like to pay my respect to the Mr. J. Lemuel Hurlston, who retired recently and who has been replaced by the Honourable James M. Ryan as Chief Secretary. I congratulate the Honourable Member on his appointment and I wish for him a very long and successful tour of duty here in this high position. Also to the Honourable Donovan Ebanks, the Deputy Chief Secretary. I welcome both of them here and may their stay be long.

The civil service reached another milestone during 1994 with the amendment of the General Orders. Before even coming to this House, I think we all realised that the female officers were not being given fair treatment in the civil service as far as medical expenses for their children and other [spouses] were concerned. I am very happy to know that today a single parent, who is a civil servant can get free medical, which she deserved right along, for her children and her spouse. For the couples where the female is the civil servant that her spouse is also covered. This is an improvement Madam Speaker, and one that should have been done a long time ago.

I could not pass over this subject without thanking the two Lady Members for the active role they have played, especially Mrs. Edna Moyle, for making sure that this has taken place and I assure you, they keep us in order.

Madam Speaker, I am also made to understand that the General Orders will be further reviewed and upgraded. This I think is necessary. I am very encouraged. I also feel that it will be a forward step if we look very carefully at the Election Law. All of us who have gone through previous General Elections realised that our system needs improving. A permanent register of voters will certainly improve the situation, and above all, I hope that some modern method will be employed for the casting of votes and the counting of ballots at the end of the Election. In the larger districts, this has been a long process and with modern equipment that is now available it can be done instantaneously as the election is completed. So, I do look forward to seeing different amendments made to the Election Law and certainly that they will improve by modernising the equipment used in the election itself.

The Royal Cayman Islands Police Force is a very important organisation in this country. The department comes in for much criticism at times but what would we do without them? I am glad to know that a new Commissioner of Police has arrived and taken charge. I thank the former Commissioner of Police for his tour of duty here in these Islands and wish for the new Commissioner, Mr. Anthony Gray, a very good term in office. I look forward to him looking very closely at Little Cayman as I have advocated for many years that there needs to be police presence on Little Cayman. It is not fair to have just a district officer who is deputised to act as a Police act as Immigration Officer and Customs Officer. In this modern era one person certainly cannot be in two places at the same time and I believe the time has come when we need at least one police officer in Little Cayman at all times. I certainly hope that this will be looked at. Little Cayman being an Island with a lot of coastline, offers a lot of opportunities for the wrong things to be landed illegally into the Island and then moved out [without detection].

Madam Speaker, I think that in order to protect our integrity, our safety and our welfare and that of Grand Cayman as well, we need to make sure that we have better police surveillance in Little Cayman. There are many improvements that I could name here in Grand Cayman, but I think the other Members resident on the Island have pretty well covered them and others to come will probably go into more detail.

I note with concern the high incidence of burglaries. This Madam Speaker, gives us a bad reputation and I think there needs to be more foot patrol. A police car crossing at 40 mile per hour with the windows up there is not much that the officers can hear and very little they can see cruising at such speed. But if they are walking on a beat patrol they can certainly demand and command respect.

I note that the Governor has said, and I agree with him, that the Cayman Islands remains one of the safest countries in the world in which to live or visit. The Royal Cayman Islands Police Force is committed to Government's policy to ensure that they remain so. I support the Royal Cayman Islands Police, and I am saying that we need more officers. I realise that there is an expense attached to that but I do not think that we cannot actually provide the service because of the costs. We must preserve the safety and the integrity of our country by having proper police protection in all areas.

Northward Prison continues to be fully occupied at most times. Madam Speaker, every time I visit the Prison, it gives me great concern when I see the number of young men and women who have been incarcerated. I realised that they are there because of something they did wrong. Some of them, I am afraid, are there for minor crimes and are incarcerated with criminals more experienced than they are and they have become more educated during the time they are with the more seasoned criminals. When they leave the Prison to return to society, the purpose for which they were sent to Northward (to be rehabilitated and return to be a part of the society) has not been achieved. Within a short period they are back in the Court again and filling up space at the Prison.

I am very pleased to see that much emphasis is being placed on an educational programme for the inmates and I feel they should be forced to do. It should include the responsibility to attend these educational programmes and in particular, drug counselling. I do not feel that it should be voluntary. I feel that drug counselling is just as much a part of their sentence and they should attend so many sessions before they are released.

It may have been the first time for many of those young individuals to get involved with illegal drugs, but if they return after having been with the seasoned criminals and have not been counselled as to the right way to go, then we face other problems. I am also glad to know that consideration is being given to improving the areas of exercise and different things around the Prison, also the Visitors' block.

Madam Speaker, although they the are incarcerated because of a crime, we still have a responsibility for their rehabilitation. I want to congratulate the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation for the efforts he has made in regard to the drug counselling and rehabilitation. I do believe this will be very beneficial to the Cayman Islands and help us to eliminate the heavy occupancy at the Northward Prison.

The Department of Immigration. Much has already been said about the Immigration Department. It is a very vital department to control migration to this country. The Immigration Board is heavily worked. I do not believe that the Board is supported by sufficient clerical staff because with work permits that I from time to time put in, the decision of the Board is a certain date but the postmark on the letter is sometimes months later. So, it seems to me that one of the breakdowns of the Board is in getting the decision out to members of the public.

Madam Speaker, it is said here that "a further implementation of the shift system will be enacted this year." I still have a question and I asked the Chief Immigration Officer on occasion here, how this shift system would work and, how many hours would a shift be? With it not being a 24-hour a day service it is difficult for me to understand how they are going to double-up the shifts and whether the ultimate result will be less or more costly. If there are more shifts and full shifts are being paid from midnight to seven o'clock, I believe that will cost more money than having one or two Immigration Officers attending to a flight. But I wait to see just how this will be determined and what the Budget will show.

I would like on behalf of the people of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to thank Radio Cayman and the Department of Broadcasting for keeping us in touch with central Government. It is a vital link for keeping us informed of what goes on here in Grand Cayman, and also the meetings of the Legislative Assembly because they are broadcast. People who want to know what goes on just have to turn on their radios and tune in on the FM frequency. We do have some problems because some areas are not able to receive the transmission and I hope that that will be improved. Broadcasting is a vital link and we have need for regular information. It is greatly needed in time of disasters, etcetera.

I understand that funds are in the Budget for a 200-foot tower to be installed on the Bluff to improve the inter-island communications. I would like to recommend that when the 100-foot tower is removed from Cayman Brac, that that be installed on Little Cayman in order that we can upgrade the facility there as well. That will then put the three Islands communication system in good working order.

Madam Speaker, I shall leave District Administration until the last. I would like at this time to thank you for the able leadership and guidance you have given to this honourable House, and to me in particular. I was privileged when I came to the House as a freshman to have you as the Clerk and I owe what I know of Parliamentary procedures to you, for which I am very grateful. I would also like to thank the Clerk and her staff for all the services they have rendered to us and the proper way in which this Legislature is conducted. Special thanks to Mr. Cline and Mrs. Mary.

Madam Speaker, we have in this Legislative Assembly many Select Committees that have work to be completed and they are all very important Committees. I hope that we can get on with this work in the not too distant future. I would like to just mention a few of the Select Committees. We are now considering a Register of Interest, and I feel that is important. There are Committees considering a Code of Ethics and Conduct of Legislators, a Review of the Gambling Law, and the Sunday Trading Law, and we will also be looking at the Legislative Assembly Standing Orders. So, a lot of work has been accomplished here and the actual Legislature itself has been sitting for quite some time and each meeting seems to be getting longer and longer. A Select Committee to consider the Bill of Rights will continue to meet during 1995, and recommendations will then be made. So, all and all, I think it is very important that the Legislative Assembly be functional and it preserves our democratic principles. I am proud to be a Member of the Legislative Assembly.

Madam Speaker, I could not pass the Legislative Assembly without paying my respects to the late Mr. Radley Gourzong who was a former Serjeant-at-Arms, and who passed away a few months ago. We will long remember him for his many talents as a police officer, a musician and as Serjeant-at-Arms in this Honourable House.

The establishment of the Cayman Islands' Government Office in the United Kingdom I think is one of the wisest moves this country has made. I have had the opportunity of visiting the office on many occasions since it was established and it is always a pleasure to meet with Mr. Russell, our former Governor, and Mrs. Mary Chandler-Allen and receive the capable assistance they rendered to us. They are always very friendly and never too busy to take the time out to help us locate what we need. So, I would like to place special thanks to the staff of the London Office.

Our Law School. I think it is indeed a credit to a country the size of the Cayman Islands to have a Law School that is able to issue in conjunction with the University of Liverpool a Bachelor of Law Honours Degree. That is indeed an honour for such a small country. We have produced many lawyers and I look forward to the day when the Community College will be in a position that it too can issue degrees.

Madam Speaker, the ability to get a degree in Cayman and not have to go overseas will be a substantial saving to the country and the individual student and it will assist older people who already have family responsibilities and cannot leave the Islands to further their education. I look forward to a continuation of the development of higher education in the Cayman Island.

I also note that it is the intention to secure the services of a second Legal Draftsman. Throughout the years, the Legal Draftsman has always been a very busy person but it seems that we constantly need more laws drafted and amended. So in order that this may work more smoothly and rapidly I think it is wise that we have a second Draftsman on staff.

I am very grateful to see that we are now able to have some of the laws revised. I see that 18 have so far been approved by the Executive Council and this makes it so much easier to really understand the Law when they are revised; and not having to go through all the amendments. So I am very happy that this is on the way.

I would like to congratulate the Honourable Attorney General for the able way in which he handles his department and also his services here in the Legislative Assembly. I note with interest that during 1995, he will recruit an attorney with particular expertise in prosecuting commercial or "white-collar" crime.

Madam Speaker, for a financial community such as ours it is important that we are prepared to deal with white-collar crime. I think it is a step in the right direction that we will have a capable, specially trained attorney on staff.

I now turn to the Portfolio of Finance and Development. This is a very busy department and without it, we would have no money. Madam Speaker, I would like briefly to speak on a topic that has been much thought of in the press; the recent conferences that were held in New York, London, and Hong Kong. I was honoured by the Governor to be included to participate at those conferences. I have come under some criticism by the press but I would like to quote from Proverbs 29:18, which says: "Where there is no vision the people perish, but he that keepeth the law, happy is he." I think we owe a lot to our Financial Secretary, the Honourable Third Official Member, for his vision that was necessary for us to get out and tell the people how stable the Cayman Islands are, how tight our controls are of the regulatory body, our regulations and how it is in place. It would have been good if everyone in the Cayman Islands could have had the opportunity to attend these conferences because every speaker made me proud as I sat there and listened to what was going on in the Cayman Islands.

I was very pleased to hear the Minister for the Foreign and Commonwealth Office speak of how the United Kingdom rated the Cayman Islands as a financial centre and a British Crown Colony.

I was proud of the speech given by the Attorney General when he put out exactly what we are doing and how we keep our regulatory body in shape. Mrs. Jennifer Dilbert eloquently explained in great detail the functions of her department and why we have the type of Register that we have; because it is properly regulated. I would like to go further and say that my mission was not only to listen at the conferences, I had the opportunity of talking to literally dozens of high potential investors and the first questions they asked were: "What about the stability in the Cayman Islands? Are you all planning to follow Bermuda?"

The proposed referendum in Bermuda is foremost in the minds of a lot of these investors. They want to know about the stability of the Cayman Islands. They subscribe to the local newspaper and referred to many articles they had read. So, it is very important that the messages that go forward in the press is well founded and certainly portray the proper stature of the Cayman Islands.

During our time in Hong Kong I had the opportunity to try to encourage some of the investors to come to Cayman Brac and invest in that territory. That would have two-fold benefit. Not only will it give the people of Cayman Brac employment but it would help with the financial burden that is now placed on the Government if the Island's economy could be based on the private sector instead of having to be almost totally financed by the Government.

I stand here repeatedly and say: We have people who need employment and the private sector is too small to employ them. I plead with Government to spend money in Cayman Brac. If we can get foreign investors to come in and invest, if we can encourage them in many ways then not only will we help ourselves but we will help the Government as a whole. Again, I would like to say as Proverbs said: "Where there is no vision the people perish." So, I congratulate the Honourable Financial Secretary for his vision. We need vision and above all, we need people who will understand what is being done and write the facts.

I do not need the Government to pay my trip to Hong Kong. If I need to go to Hong Kong, I can go—thank God. I have travelled immensely around the world in my lifetime and at my age I do not particularly care to travel. So, it was not a matter of getting a free trip or a free dinner, I went there like every other Member to serve the Cayman Islands. We did it to the best of our ability with each one performing in areas where they had the expertise.

So, Madam Speaker, I would like to ask the people to criticise me when I deserve to be criticised but also to be honest. I am far from being perfect, I do not think anyone in this world is perfect, but that is one thing you cannot accuse me of; trying to take Government's funds.

I think we all should realise that there is much competition now throughout the world. There are major changes taking place in Hong Kong. There is upgrading of all the other offshore territories. If we do not tell investors why they should come to the Cayman Islands and prove to them that their investment was a great investment, and we are confident that the returns will be not only for one year but it will be a continuous process of helping to develop the Islands. I would encourage the Honourable Financial Secretary to do this again and again.

The Customs Department. Madam Speaker, once again we must congratulate the Customs Department on the revenue that they have collected during 1994, some $61.6 million which is a substantial sum for a population of our size. The Customs Department has a big responsibility and I think they handle it very well.

The Task Force is helping to curb the drug problem we have and the joint drug awareness courses with the Royal Cayman Islands Police is a means of strengthening co-operation between the two organisations. That is very important. There are plans to establish a commercial fraud unit.

The major capital project for 1995 is the Phase II extension of the Customs Office at the Owen Roberts International Airport. When this is completed the staff in the Tower Building will all be housed in that new building.

Madam Speaker, the Registry of Shipping has come in for much criticism over the years. I believe that with amendments to the Law and some changes in the manning clauses that it is now coming into its own right. I have been in contact with many of the owners of large tankers that we are agents for and they indicate to me their interest in registering some of their larger ships here. Their response is encouraging and I shall continue to follow that up as best I can. Many of them own ships of 550,000 tons and up.

We are honoured that we have a number one Registry. That is an exceptional thing that the United Kingdom has bestowed upon us because most of the others do not have a Class I Registry. I hope that the listening public will understand that we have a Registry that is equal to the Board of Trade of London.

Earlier this year when I was in Monaco, I saw two or three yachts there that were registered in George Town, Grand Cayman.

Financial Services Supervision Department. As I was saying earlier, this trip fully explained to me what a good job the Financial Services Supervision Department is doing, the responsible job they have and I think it would be good if all Caymanians paid more attention to what these Island are doing to do things right. It was a pleasure to hear Mrs. Jennifer Dilbert make her speech and answer questions. I wish to congratulate her on how well that was presented.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member take a suspension at this time?

Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.35 P.M.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.00 P.M.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, continuing.

Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break, I had completed speaking on the Financial Services Supervision Department. I now turn to the Treasury Department.

I note from the Throne Speech that the collection of Tourist Accommodation Tax in 1994 increased 54% over the 1993. That is quite an achievement. It exceeded Treasury's budget by 30%. I also note that the target of paying all invoices one week after receipt had been achieved. This is a marvellous accomplishment when you consider the volume of invoices that are received by the Treasury Department and I know it will be greatly appreciated by the number of companies doing business with Government because this has been an area where many people complained in the past, that their cheques were late and caused them to have to pay overdraft interest. So, this will be greatly appreciated by the Caymanian businessmen.

"In 1995 Treasury will manage a phased implementation of the Integrated Financial, Manpower and Project Management Information System which, it is anticipated, will replace three independent systems by mid 1996." This will be a great improvement and will provide us with a more efficient service.

I now turn to the Department of Tourism. I feel that we must all be very proud of the increase in tourist arrivals that has taken place in recent years. Tourism is a very important leg of our economy. Without upward movement in the number of arrivals, we will have a more serious financial problem. I have had many discussions with the present Member for Tourism and I appreciate his openness and his willingness to talk about what is happening, what he plans to do and in this manner we can keep abreast of what is taking place. I complimented him on his achievements and I think his attempts to diversify the areas where most of our tourists are coming from are very important.

For many years we have mostly depended on North America. But now we see more effort being made in Europe, and the United Kingdom and Asia. There is a lot of wealth, and it is my understanding that the Asians take much longer vacations than most other people. So this means that as we encourage that type of tourism we will be getting better occupancy rates in our hotels.

Also, the Department of Tourism has done much to improve the standards of the hotels. I know that in Cayman Brac we have seen an upgrading of the hotels there where they can provide a better tourist product. We all realise because of the standard of living here in the Cayman Islands that our rates are not cheap. We do not have a devalued currency. We are not on par with the United States dollar so we must give value for money.

With the improvement of hotel accommodations and improvement in the attitude of the employees, it all adds up to be beneficial for the government, the hotel owners, and property owners. It also encourages the tourists to return. There is no better advertisement than a satisfied customer. You can spend as much as you want in a magazine, but once someone goes back and says they had a good time, that they did this and that, it is coming from a friend and is worth much more than an advertisement. That is what is beginning to happen in the Cayman Islands—people are getting value for money and are satisfied and returning.

Today the Cayman Islands are known around the world and we no longer depend entirely upon North America. I thought for quite some time that maybe some of our rates were rather high, but on this particular trip that I was on, and in talking to a lot of people, one of the things that they said to me was that we needed more expensive accommodations in the Cayman Islands—they were talking of $1,000 per day rooms—to get a higher clientele. It was foreign to my thinking but it was told to me by several people in Hong Kong, that there are people in this world who want to pay more. That is one of the reasons why we have to constantly upgrade our hotels. We cannot be satisfied with what we have because the people want better and they want more. That is what the Minister for Tourism and the Department of Tourism is working towards. That is why the new hotel is being built—to give yet another first class hotel. I look forward to a first class hotel being built in Cayman Brac in my lifetime.

Earlier this year, on 9 January, history was made by the arrival of the first cruise ship in Cayman Brac. It has certainly cracked the ice. I have written to many companies that we are agents for, and I have always said that we would like them to come, the past several months I have been able to send them pictures and videos of German tourists on the Beach at Cayman Brac and said it has happened. Never before could we use that approach. This has made that possible.

We had an interview with the captain, he was quite satisfied with the safety of the port, as far as the navigational requirements were concerned and that is important. That is one of the first things the owners ask—How safe is the anchorage? What length ship can you handle? These are the question we can now answer, and not only coming from me, but coming from a Ukraine captain who was there and has made many trips to Grand Cayman and who told me that he had traded here on other cruise ships on numerous trips. So he is a well-known captain around the world and having a statement from him is good advertising.

I was quite pleased and very proud that the people of Cayman Brac responded the way that they did. They went all the way. We do not have facilities like you have in Grand Cayman, but all the cruise ship passengers that I spoke to were quite happy because they were on a round-the-world cruise and what they did not see in one destination, they saw in another.

They were not actually interested in seeing big hotels and big Freeport shops. They saw caves, they saw how coconuts grow, and some of them said they did not know that the coconut had anything besides the hard shell. So there are many things that we would not appreciate that somebody who it is completely foreign would. On behalf of the people of Cayman Brac, I would like to thank the Minister for Tourism.

I knew from the inception. He spoke with me and we had liaison with the charters and the owners of the ship for quite some time and we were able to iron out any difficulties that they had. I have had very good response from them since they left that they were very satisfied and they had very good reports from their passengers.

As I said before, it is no longer that we are trying to get a cruise ship, this is a picture of a cruise ship that we had. We do not have to tell them that it was the only one but we can send them the picture of the actual fact. It was because the Minister arranged it that we were able to be more positive in our approach.

I feel that we will get more. It will take some time, but we will continue to pursue it.

We have also noted an increase in advertisement for the Sister Islands since this Minister has taken over. The brochures for the Cayman Islands show the Sister Islands and put emphasis on them. We are now sort of an equal partner in tourism with Grand Cayman. All three islands have distinct different markets so that neither one competes with the other but they can complement each other. I feel that if we get more hotels we can get the people to come [to Cayman Brac].

We have seen a lot of development in Little Cayman and it has moved quite well. We have a lot of infrastructure in place in Little Cayman but more is needed. It is encouraging to see that the need for 18 aircraft to fly into Little Cayman on some days is almost unbelievable. But there are some days when they have over 18 flights a day. So the Islands that time forgot, are at least remembered by the aeroplanes!

Turning to the Environment. Protecting our environment is something that must be done. I noticed that the Department has an aim to finalise the Oil Spill Contingency Plan for the Cayman Islands and to implement a Response Plan for Grand Cayman by the end of the year. This is a very important project. We are located right in the trade routes where most tankers going to the United States and the Gulf pass very close to our shores.

Although there are much more rigid controls on ballast pumping, there is always a chance of an oil spill and a beach like the Seven Mile Beach, although it is pretty well protected by nature, geographically it is located in a bight on the western end of the Island and if it was ever contaminated it would be a very difficult problem to free it completely.

So, I had experience with this Oil Spill Contingency Plan during the time that the M.V. Titus went ashore in Little Cayman. We were her agents and within four hours after the vessel was aground her owner had put $69 million in escrow for a Contingency Cleanup. It was not done by the owners, it was done the P&I Underwriters. I guess if the Cayman Islands was called upon to spend $69 million to clean up the beach it would certainly hurt our treasury. That is the benefit of being a member of this Oil Contingency Plan and having the protection of these P&I clubs.

The protection of the environment is something that each and every one of us should be involved in because once we allow things to deteriorate to the point to where they are contaminated, we are never really able to get them back again. I have seen the results around St. Nicholas in Aruba where the oil there is so impregnated into the soil that it will never, ever be removed.

The Mosquito Research Control Unit continues to function quite well. The Rodent Control Programme is something that I think we need to step up. Rodents carry substantial diseases and are dangerous to the health of our population. I think that programme deserves a lot of attention.

We need to congratulate the Department of the Environment for the garbage collection. I do not think there is any country that has a more efficient garbage collection than we have here.

The Aedes aegypti mosquito control is rigidly enforced and the department is apparently able to keep that under control.

I turn now to the Planning Department. To think that during 1994, 585 applications valued at $137.2 million were approved by the Planning Department here in Grand Cayman and that exceeded 1993 by 24% is quite an achievement. That is a substantial amount of development and a lot of paper work to be handled by the Department. I note with interest that the Planning Department in Cayman Brac which has been under the District Administration is now under the direction of the Planning Department here in Grand Cayman. I think that is a good move. In the past we have had to seek expertise from the Planning Department, but it was really just on a help basis. The Director of Planning did not have to do it, he simply dealt with most of the major problems. He would come and give us assistance. But now there is one Planning Department for all three islands.

The Development Control Board still plays a very important part in handling the development planning process for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, but when we have only one professional on the staff there and when they need additional the director of Planning and his staff here in Grand Cayman are readily available.

The Port Authority continues to be a revenue earner for this government as well. It increased by 8.4% with cargo landed over 1993. The Master Port Development Plan was completed in 1994. That was a substantial improvement over what we now have, but I imagine it will take quite some time for that to be implemented.

I note that the recommendation contained in the Master Port Development Plan that major structural rehabilitation to the Cayman Brac dock will be carried out in 1995. That is very necessary as it is beginning to show wear and the structural integrity of the pre-stress wires in the concrete is becoming exposed. That needs to be repaired.

There is also some need at the Port Authority in Little Cayman. It is hoped that the Port Authority will become active at some time in the not-too-distant future and Little Cayman will have its own equipment. A storage facility is also badly needed.

Of great importance to the future of Cayman Brac is the possibility of an extension to the Cayman Brac dock. This would enable larger ships with deeper draft to dock at the facility and that would include cruise ships and instead of having to tender their passengers ashore, it would be very convenient for the aged or handicapped to come ashore in wheelchairs right onto the dock, instead of having to use a tender. We look forward to developments on that in time to come.

The Cayman Brac Port Authority is well manned, it is unfortunate that we do not have enough cargo to make it profitable, but it is hoped that as we seek further development that there will be sufficient revenue to at least let them break even in the years to come.

We all have great respect for our Fire Chief, Mr. Kirkland Nixon. The job that he has done with the Fire Service is nearly 100% Caymanian operated. I am very proud that they are not only Caymanians but very capable officers, very well trained, well disciplined and if you ever have the unfortunate need for their services, you will see how professional they can really react to whatever situation they are called on. We should all be very proud of them.

Statistics show value of property involved in fires during 1994 to be approximately CI$4,666,000.00. Damage sustained was estimated at $615,950.00 showing that more than $4 million ($4,050,050.00) was saved as a result of the response by the Fire Services. We should all be very proud of these young men. They have all dedicated their lives to their profession because I notice that in Cayman Brac when a fire is reported, it does not matter who is on duty, the entire squad appears at the scene in a matter of a few minutes.

The Cayman Turtle Farm continues to operate as a popular tourist attraction and our only source of domestic turtle meat. It is a great asset to the Cayman Islands. It has terrific potential. I honestly feel that if it is used in continuing its research but putting more emphasis on the product that has been in the past, we will see a terrific change in the actual financial benefits derived.

I remember several years ago, my family and I, had a pilot project of shrimp rearing in Cayman Brac which was very successful. Shortly thereafter, a similar project was implemented at the Turtle Farm. Because it was held strictly for research and not for development of the shrimp, their production rate was so low it did not make it viable as a financial investment. The reason for that was that sand was placed in the tanks so that the shrimp could hibernate. If they did not have sand, they would have eaten more food and grown much faster and it would have been a million dollar a year investment.

So, there is a lot of potential in shrimp rearing, also in different species of fish that can be raised, clams, oysters, escargot. There is so much that can be done provided consideration is taken on product as well as research.

The tourist attraction is also very important to us. It being the only turtle farm in the world, I think just about everybody who comes to Cayman Islands goes there. It is actually being expanded and I feel that it is a good investment. I think the present Minister responsible for the Turtle Farm will see to it that it makes a profit within the not-too-distant future.

I will now go on to the Ministry of Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. I would like to congratulate the Minister on his implementation of the Strategic Plan, the Drug Rehabilitation Programme and also on health. I am a great believer in the Strategic Plan and I think he is going the right way. I think he is going to give us a lot of input from the public. I think it will be the turning point in actually establishing a rehabilitation programme for these islands that will serve our needs. I look forward to their completion and implementation.

If we do not get on top of rehabilitating those unfortunate people who are addicted to drugs, we are going to lose a large portion of our young people, which we cannot afford. I compliment him and the efforts his Ministry is making in this regard.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Honourable Member, it is now 4.30. I do not expect you will finish this evening.

May I ask for the Motion for the adjournment?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning—Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I am pleased to move the adjournment until 10 o'clock, Wednesday morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 o'clock, tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The House is accordingly adjourned until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 22 MARCH 1995.

The Speaker: I will ask the Third Elected Member for George Town to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY THE SPEAKER

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

I would like to welcome the substantive holder of the post of First Official Member after his duty as Acting Governor.

Question to Honourable Members and Minister. Question 64 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 64

No. 64: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education and Aviation what is the total passenger arrival in Cayman to date by British Caledonian Airlines.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: From 5 December 1994 through 24 February 1995, the total passenger arrival on the Caledonian charter was 1,914. The total figure includes 270 travel agents that arrived on the 5 December 1994 flight.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if Cayman Airways derives any benefit in handling whatever areas for this particular flight?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, the answer is that we handle British Caledonian.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Does the Honourable Minister have any idea as to what sort of monetary figure this amounts to, or the percentage of the revenue for the airline?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, without the permission of British Caledonian, I would not really like to reveal that publicly. If I had been forewarned I may have been able to get the information, but it is sort of an internal matter and it would be the standard handling charges.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, can the Honourable Minister say if the nearly 2,000 passengers that arrived on Caledonian Airline have remained on the Island for one or two weeks and as such brought substantial income to the Island?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker. The minimum stay is one week. Some would have been here up to two weeks. As we know that is a much higher average than the North American average, which is about four or five days. So it is very beneficial to Cayman.

Secondly, it spreads the area where tourists are coming from so that we become less dependent on the North American market—if one market goes down, the other market may be up.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister say if, among the tourist arrivals, are residents on the Island here who use this opportunity for the one week travel? And is there any indication that there is a market for this particular flight?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, there would have been some residents on the charter. Perhaps to fully answer the member's question, . . . when the British Airways scheduled flights (which will be two a week) start at the end of this month then obviously, that would benefit very much residents and avoid having to stop in Miami or Jamaica en route to London.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 65, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 65

No. 65: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education and Aviation what progress has been made with the development of a National Curriculum.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The first step in the development of a National Curriculum was the reorganisation of the Education Department to include a Senior Education Officer with responsibility for curriculum and testing. This Officer is now in place.

The next step was to create and fill the necessary subject advisor positions within the unit.

It is anticipated that all these new positions will be filled in 1995. The unit will work toward establishing a general philosophical framework setting out social and national objectives of formal education and a curriculum model for the content, organisation and delivery of instruction. This process is anticipated to take eight months and will include wide input from the community. The unit will be assisted by a curriculum developer and various subject consultants working for a period of approximately 12 months. Arrangements are in hand to have the consultants in place by the middle of the year.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister say in which schools this curriculum will be applicable?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, this would be applicable only to the Government schools. But we would hope that private schools, which will be invited to take part as they took part in the strategic planning earlier, would take part and take advantage of the curriculum when it is in place.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In the answer the Honourable Minister stated that the necessary subject advisor's positions will be filled. Could the Minister kindly say how many positions this involves? Would this involve one advisor for each subject? Or would it be mathematics and science combined?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, it will ultimately be seven. And we now have in place three. I think subjects may be grouped.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker

Can the Honourable Minister say, of those seven subjects, what will be core subjects and what will be foundation subjects?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I would expect that Mathematics, English, Social Studies, and Science, which are the usual core subjects, would be core subjects.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say if in fact at this time and during the past two years there has been no national curriculum developed and that this is envisaged to start about mid-year of this year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, the Year 6 and Year 10 curriculum has been completed. If the member thinks back, the last government added a year to the High School but did not know where the year would go despite making it a mandatory year. They also added a Year 6 to the Primary Schools when they abolished, I think quite wrongly, and removed the pre-schoolers from the schools and put some 205 children out on the street. That policy I did not agree with.

However, we had to decide where the year would go and as the member knows, it went to Year 10. There was already a Year 6, so we had to go ahead and develop those two groups.

I think that developing a national curriculum does take time. We were told that in the Bahamas and Bermuda it took some seven years to develop the full curriculum, because you are dealing with 1 to 12 [years in school]. It is a fairly major task that has been done right, and to do it right we have to have the right people involved and take the right time.

We saw the disaster it caused in the schools from changing so many things—literally everything—by the last government over one year, the damaging effect it had on the children, on the teachers, and on the system as a whole.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Are there any students to whom this curriculum will not apply?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, as usual the national curriculum will apply to all students within their capabilities. If the member is asking whether there may be some that may be outside, then if they are not within the ability range perhaps there will be. I am sure there will be a few outside.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, will the Honourable Minister say if the national curriculum will be introduced to all students in all schools at the same time? Or will they be starting with the lower grades and gradually over the years move upward with it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, at the present time we are not exactly certain where we will start and which of the subjects will be dealt with. This will be better in place once we have the infrastructure in place. I would also like to mention that we have only now received in the last few months the Strategic Plan, and it will be laid on the Table. One of the main things that the Plan deals with is the national curriculum.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House the number of grades from primary up to the secondary level at this time? Approximately at what age does a high schooler now graduate under the national curriculum?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, the grades are now 1 to 12 and graduation is an average of about 17 years old.

QUESTION NO. 66

The Speaker: The next question is No. 66, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

No. 66: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education and Aviation how many persons on Government scholarships are studying medicine and when will they complete their studies.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: As of January 1995, there are five students on Government scholarship studying medicine. Dates of completion range from 1995 to 1999.

All students are at the University of the West Indies: Elizabeth McLaughlin, 1995; Sidney Ebanks, 1996; Matthew Grant, 1998; Elaine Ebanks, 1998; Ruthlyn Pomaes, 1999.

In addition, there are two students presently doing internship: Sonia Kapoor, United Kingdom; Gillian Evans-Belfonte, Trinidad.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister say if there are in place any arrangements for placing these new doctors—Caymanians doctors I imagine—when they return as qualified practitioners?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, that question in substance would have to be answered by the Chief Secretary or the Governor, because as the member knows we do not have the right to hire, fire, or change the conditions of service of civil servants.

However, I would say that during their summer vacations, they have been at the hospital and they are familiar with it. I would urge very strongly the Public Service Commission, the Chief Secretary and the Governor to ensure that they do have place immediately when they come back, satisfactory to them and to the Public Service.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister say if these students, who are almost at the completion of their studies, are being encouraged to specialise or to go on to one or two year specialisation in any particular field which will produce specialists and if any thought is being given to providing financing for such an arrangement?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, as I understand the medical profession, that specialisation comes from the internship onwards. As the member sees, there are two on internship at present. I cannot really answer much beyond that. Really the question that was asked was on scholarships and I am not prepared beyond that Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Will the Honourable Minister say if any of the students who are about to complete their study can be allowed to do their internship here? Or is it compulsory to do the internship in Jamaica?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, it is not possible, as I understand it, for the internship to be done here. If we had perhaps developed the medical system the way the legal system is developed, where we actually established a school that would perhaps not have been practical, then I do know that in other professions, like law and accountancy, the internship can be done locally. As I understand it, this cannot be done locally.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Honourable Minister say if there is any plan for phasing-out contracted doctors once we have our own? If not, would he give what would be his policy position, or pass a request on to the proper authorities within Government to consider this particular aspect?

The Speaker: This is beyond the scope of the question that has been asked—it concerns scholarships. If the Minister is willing to answer . . . but it is not really part of the original question.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I was just going to remind the member that he has made very long dissertations on politicians not being involved with the placing or otherwise of civil servants, constitutionally. That is the prerogative of the Governor.

If he wishes he can probably put the substantive question to the Chief Secretary at a later date. As you have mentioned, Madam Speaker, it is outside the original question.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY THE SPEAKER

CATHOLIC SCHOOL STUDENTS

The Speaker: Before proceeding to Other Business, I would like to take the opportunity of welcoming students from the Catholic School together with their teachers. I am also aware that the son of the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly is also present and we would like to extend our welcome to him.

Statements by Members of the Government. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

RE: LOCAL CONTRACTORS LAW

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Honourable Ministers and Members, Government is expecting to be in a position to have the Local Contractors Law and Regulations tabled in the upcoming June or possibly September Meeting of this Honourable House and is currently having discussions with the representatives of the Cayman Contractors Association and the Society of Caymanian Builders and Contractors on areas of the Draft Bill that still needs amending.

I would, however, like to publicly state that when this Law takes effect, in no way will it mean that persons or companies possessing a Trade and Business Licence to do contracting work before 1 January 1995 will automatically be registered and licensed (or grand-fathered) by the Local Contractors Board. The individual or company will still be subject to the licensing procedures and will have to demonstrate to the Board competence and knowledge of the building industry in respect of the scope of their application.

This statement is being made in an effort to counteract what appears to be the result of a misinterpretation of articles in the media, which have apparently caused a number of applications to the Immigration Board for Trade and Business Licences for construction.

Again, the public should be reminded that under the proposed Bill, all individuals or companies wishing to carry on business in the construction field, regardless of whether they were in business prior to 1 January 1995, will still be required to submit an application and meet certain standards and criteria in order to be licensed by the Local Contractors Board.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

SHORT QUESTIONS (Standing Order 30(2))

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker
Can the Honourable Minister say how such competence will be measured or arrived at?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, it is that area of the Bill that is under discussion with the Cayman Contractors Association and would be wrong of me to give specific answers to that question at the moment as there are amendments pending on that issue.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
Madam Speaker, I just heard the Honourable Minister answer that there were discussions ensuing with the Contractors Association. I wonder if he would be able to say if the Society of Caymanian Builders and Contractors is also part and parcel of these discussions.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister I think stated that. That is stated in the statement, but you perhaps have not yet received it.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Madam Speaker.
As the Honourable Minister is aware, many people in the construction industry are probably unable to pass a written exam. I wonder if the Minister would ensure that consideration would be given to oral examinations in order to determine the qualifications of people who are employed in this area.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I think it is fair to say to the Third Elected Member for West Bay, that the methodology of examining a person's ability is being considered to be done either in writing or orally whichever is appropriate.

The Speaker: Perhaps Honourable Members would be advised to read the contents of Standing Order 32, which says: "No debate may arise on such a statement but the Presiding Officer may, using his discretion, allow short questions to be put to the Member making the statement for the purpose of clarification." That means clarification of the statement—not contents of any Bill or other documents to which the statement refers.

I would like to make an apology, earlier I made the remark that the son of the Clerk of the Legislative Assembly was present. I am told that it is the son of the Lady Member for George Town. I do wish to apologise and to now acknowledge his presence.

Continuation the debate on the 1995 Throne Speech, the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, when we adjourned on Monday afternoon, I was dealing with the Ministry for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. As we all know, this Ministry came into operation just ten months ago. I would like to congratulate the Honourable Minister for what he has achieved during those ten months, he and his Permanent Secretary and all who have been involved in the Ministry. Health to me, Madam Speaker, is a very important aspect in our nation. We must maintain a healthy populace if we are to enjoy the benefits of all that we are trying to provide for.

I spoke on Monday afternoon of his undertaking with the Strategic Plan in the area of health, drug abuse prevention and rehabilitation. I said then that I fully support strategic planning and I would like to re-emphasise that this morning. I have done some research into strategic planning since the Education Strategic Plan was introduced and I had the honour of being a member of the Action Team. It has been educational for me as well as all other members who were involved.

Strategic Planning brings out the very best in the community. All who volunteered to be on the action teams were able to give and share their expertise with the other and, certainly, involving not just a few but involving all that would come forward and give a helping hand. It will certainly make for a policy regardless of what area it is in that will last from administration to administration.

I think this has been one of the weaknesses that we have suffered from within our nation, in that not enough input from the general public was taken and from change of Administration we have seen major changes taken place. This becomes very costly to the nation and sometimes deters the forward motion that we all would like to see taking place. I realise that undertaking two strategic plans within one Ministry at the same time is very taxing, but much has been accomplished and they are both in areas which will be very beneficial to this entire nation.

I note that the Health Practitioners Law is in need of considerable review and with input from the professionals legal drafting has begun with amendments to be brought to the legislation during 1995.

I know that there are areas in the Health Practitioners Law that need to be amended. This Law came on our books in 1974 and much has taken place in this country in regard to availability of health care and much came into the world in the field of medicine since 1974. It is time that the Health Practitioners Law be brought up to 1995 requirements.

Madam Speaker, I note with interest that the Master Planning Study for the development of the present George Town Hospital was completed in 1994 and has been approved by the Executive Council. I note that the design is now being put out to tender.

I will not stand here this morning and say that I was not a supporter of the previous Government for the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital. I studied it very carefully at the time and it made sense that a new hospital should be built. I do have concerns about the construction of the hospital on the site of the present hospital while it still remains the only fully equipped hospital in the Island of Grand Cayman.

With our strategic location we serve the ships that cross by. Grand Cayman has been singled out by the United States Coast Guard as a number one destination for ships with passengers in need of medical services when in the area. We have been chosen over Jamaica, Panama, and the Republic of Honduras, which is a great honour to the Islands that we have such medical facilities. I will not attempt to condemn what is being done. I just hope that we do have adequate space and that the remodelling can be done to provide the facilities that will take us way into the 21st Century.

I have confidence in the Minister and those who are dealing with it, but I note that in order to get sufficient property at the site it has become necessary to demolish the Mosquito Research Unit building and relocate it. I also note that is being relocated to what appears to be a valuable piece of property, which will be at considerable cost. But I say today that what we are all looking for is that we have what we need. We need additions to the Casualty Department and the Emergency Department at the George Town Hospital. I feel confident that the type of input we have been given by the professionals who are involved in the day-to-day care at the hospital will get the development of a proper hospital facility that will take care of our needs. I hope that the cost will not be too great because we [already] face escalation in construction costs on a daily basis; world costs go up every day. So, the longer we delay facing this responsibility the more of a financial burden it will place on each and every one of us Caymanian tax payers.

I look forward to seeing in the not too distant future the design of the new facility and the phased development of how it will be built, what units will come first, and exactly where on the property they will be placed. I have a keen interest in medical development in health. It was my choice for a career that was interrupted by the war. Therefore, I did not fulfill my desire to go forward in that profession but I still have an interest in the area.

I am very grateful for the facilities that we have in Cayman Brac. We have a good facility but we need some additional equipment to make it more functional. I would like to see the Cayman Brac Hospital considered as an annex to the George Town Hospital where facilities can be provided so that the surgeons can do their work and utilise the bed space when there is a shortage prior to the completion of the new facility here in Grand Cayman. If the equipment necessary for surgical procedures is put in place within the facility on Cayman Brac, there would be very little difficulty in transporting the patient to the hospital to have the necessary treatment.

As I have said before, the hospital in Cayman Brac is well outfitted for bed care. It is a great facility and we are very proud of it. But I am just seeking that we utilise its facilities to the best advantage to all the people of the Cayman Islands and continue to upgrade the facilities so that we can be a vital part of the hospital system within the Islands.

I am also very encouraged to see that the Minister has undertaken a plan to establish medical clinics in the districts. This has been long needed. And the hours when a physician will be in the district certainly will alleviate the burden on the Casualty Unit at the main Hospital. It will be much more convenient to those needing clinical outpatient treatment to go to facilities within their districts rather than having to go into George Town.

I would like to congratulate the nurses, the doctors, the physiotherapist, medical technologists, and all the other professionals who work in our medical system. They are very dedicated staff and they work sometimes under adverse conditions but certainly they give their very best. As I have said before, we have established an international reputation of having a first class medical facility available here on Grand Cayman.

I note also Madam Speaker, that the Cayman Counselling Centre will be reverting to its original functions of treating alcohol and drug-addicted clients and family members directly affected by their addiction. This is very much needed and I understand that there is a plan afoot to establish drug-counselling session on a regular basis within Cayman Brac. I am glad that we do not have a problem as great in ratio to our population here in Grand Cayman, but it is important that we address the problem at this time so that it will not get to such proportion. Family members are affected by the addiction and their ability to purchase needed resources for their family is affected. I could go on and on in saying what drug addiction does to the community.

If we can spend money on counselling we can reduce the costs of incarceration and the many other expenses the Government must provide because of the surge of drugs within our community. I do not think that we can overemphasise the need for counselling and it should not only be for those who are directly affected but those within the environment who can be discouraged from getting involved.

I spoke earlier of the drug counselling in the Northward Prison. I am glad that additional counsellors will be recruited to expand the services to a five day intensive group and individual counselling programme to drug addicted inmates or those in prison for drug related offences. This is very necessary.

I am also very grateful that the Honourable Minister is making effort to reintroduce a National Health Insurance Scheme for the Cayman Islands. This is something that I saw a need for long before I came to this House having lived in territories where a national health insurance was popular. I had health insurance from the time I was nine years old, so I know the benefits. It is important that we get coverage that will suit the needs of all the people of our society. We have to be very careful that we do not fall into the hands of some of the companies who cancel coverage at the age of 65.

Because of the low wages they were paid during their productive years and high costs of living, many of our people at the age of 65 have not been fully able to prepare themselves for retirement age. And with medical costs escalating there is no way that they will be able to pay for all their needs. If that is the type of national insurance we have, then the Government will still have to pick up the tab for many of our people. So, it is very important that we have a policy that will cover those who need and will need insurance.

Madam Speaker, it is important that we read the fine lines in all insurance policies. This country has a terrific burden for healthcare when you consider the responsibilities it has for members of the civil services, pensioners and the indigent. Therefore we must have a scheme that will go from the cradle to the grave. Had this been instituted many years ago there would be sufficient revenue to fund the hospital today. We would not be looking for ways and means to build the hospital.

Funds that had been realised would be available because the hospital fees would have been paid for all civil servants, pensioners, and all indigent people by insurance companies. So, as I leave the Ministry of Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, I would like to congratulate the Minister for the job he has done in such a short period of time, and wish for him the very best realising that he has a very heavy load in his Ministry for the rest of the term prior to the General Election.

Madam Speaker, I now go to the Ministry for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

The Social Services Department plays a very important part in our community. Most of the time we do not realise all that is being done for the people. We as Legislators must see that the laws that are put in place will provide them with the tools necessary to perform the services we all need.

I note that the Juvenile Law was reviewed and drafted into two separate Bills—the Children Law and the Youths Justice Law, 1995. The Bill for the Children Law, 1995 reforms the civil law relating to children and seeks to protect them and promote their welfare. This is important, Madam Speaker, because many of our children today are suffering because of the breakdown in the family structure and are victims of circumstances. The Juvenile Law worked but needed upgrading.

I would also like to congratulate the Minister for the Young Parents Programme started in 1994. It is unfortunate that we have young people who are victims of early [teenage] pregnancy and therefore become parents when they are still in their very young years. They need to be trained to assume their responsibilities in life and I am sure that this programme as it continues to expand will do much to solve that need and also to show fathers that they should be responsible.

The Trade and Labour Department also has a heavy load. I note that the Minimum Wage Advisory Committee has been appointed. Minimum wage can be beneficial, but it is something that we will have to look at in every aspect because where you will help some, you will hurt others. So we have to be very careful as we look and study other territories that have dealt with minimum wage. We noticed industrialised countries, such as the United States, are still labouring to get their minimum wage above $5.00 per hour. We have established without law a minimum of at least $5.00 per hour here in most instances. So we have to be careful that we do not upset anything, while at the same time we must have something to protect those who are being underpaid.

The Housing Development Corporation functions have been changed, and I note that they intend to divest themselves of their mortgage portfolio during the year. I hope that they will be able to do this in a way that will not have any adverse effect on the mortgagees who now have loans with the Housing Development Corporation because they have a preferential interest rate. I hope that will be guaranteed.

I am also grateful for the new mortgage scheme now in effect. Madam Speaker, the one problem that I experienced within my district is that so many of the young people who need homes would like to be able to do some of the work themselves with the help of friends. But the present scheme does not permit that. It requires the home to be built by a contractor at their expense. Then the mortgage scheme will pay the contractor when the loan is approved for the individual. That precludes them from being able to put in several thousands of dollars in labour that would make their monthly loan payments less. I do not know what can be done about it, but it would be helpful to those who are ambitious enough to want to help themselves in performing some or most of the labour.

The Water Authority: Madam Speaker, as I think of the Water Authority I wonder what would have happened if the Authority and the Cayman Water Company had not become realities in the Cayman Islands, in particular Grand Cayman. I see where we constantly need additional capacity for reverse osmosis or desalination of water in order to keep potable water supply and demand on par. I fully support the Water Authority. I feel that it is one way of helping to preserve a healthy community by getting proper potable water.

I would also like to say that the idea of refinancing would consolidate two existing loans that were taken by the Caribbean Development Bank in 1986. If this is a mixed currency loan, it will certainly be beneficial when we see today what is happening with the Yen on the Foreign Exchange Market against the United States Dollar. Nobody knows when that will end.

The National Museum: All who have been involved with the National Museum deserve great credit. I get very good results and reports of what is going on, I enjoy visiting the Museums here and in Cayman Brac, and we look forward to the upgrade of the one in Cayman Brac. I have concerns though that neither of the museums is in a fire-proof building and many of our cherished possessions are in those buildings. That is an area that as funds become available I think we should address.

I look forward to some kind of expansion of the Cayman Brac Museum as it is now grossly overcrowded. There is hardly room to walk and it is therefore becoming a place where people do not wish to go because there is literally no walking room. So that is something we are going to have to look at in the not too distant future.

In passing, I would just like to say that the Public Library plays such an important part in our community. I am glad that the Cayman Brac Library is now open and functioning, thanks to the Rotary Club. I would like to see a reader for microfiche put in that library. We have one at the High School, but it inconvenienced the teacher there to ask his permission to use it and if it could be placed at the Public Library, and as microfiche items increase, these would be available to the public.

Much could be said about what is being done with sports. I have always been a supporter of sports. I feel that if we can keep our young people occupied in sports they will become physically fit and it will keep their minds occupied. They will not be bored and have to seek other ways to solve that boredom.

I congratulate the Minister for the progress that has been made in sports, and in bringing the CARIFTA games to Grand Cayman; also the players for the calibre of their performance.

I now go to the Ministry of Education and Aviation. I have already spoken on the Strategic Plan for Education, and I am glad to know that it is now in the process of being implemented. We have seen a lot of development in education in recent times. It is indeed a vital link with society in all respects.

I want to congratulate the Minister for being brave enough to institute these annual conferences in education where the teachers all meet, including all the teachers in Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac, and the private school teachers, where they can formulate their own report. When you can involve the majority and get their views, I think you must get more satisfied parents and teachers.

I would like to congratulate the teachers and the students and the Department of Education on the results of the CXC examinations. I know the students studied hard and I am proud of the results. I certainly wish them all the same high standard and good grades as they take their examinations this year.

In Cayman Brac the Ministry and the Department of Education have looked very closely at the needs of the primary and high school and I am very grateful for the money that is available for the extension and expansion of the primary facility at West End. That has long been needed. Also, the schools have outgrown the land around them, and I am grateful that that is being addressed at this time and when further expansion is necessary property will be available and also there will be play area where the children can exert their energy.

The Teacher's Centre is being addressed and I fully believe that that will be solved during 1995. So, all in all, nothing is more important, and I have always said that my priorities would always be health first and education second, I think that both of them are being well taken care of.

I am happy to hear about the present status of Cayman Airways. I am grateful to see that the losses sustained by the airline have been drastically reduced and I would ask the Honourable Minister, the Board of Directors and the Managing Director to consider very seriously not reducing the schedule of flights from Grand Cayman to Cayman Brac. It is true that we have Island Air as a commuter aircraft. But if Cayman Airways flights are reduced at any time, we have no freight. Island Air can bring very little freight and it is extremely expensive. We need Cayman Airways for groups and I ask that we be given greater consideration before a decision is made to reduce the number of flights into Cayman Brac in any one week.

The Ministry of Agriculture, Communications and Works is under the direction of a man who is truly dedicated to his country and to agriculture. As I attended the agricultural show this year I was very pleased to see what has been accomplished. The products that were displayed were of a wonderful quality. The facility was comfortable. They had so many improvements over the original site and it just shows that where there is a will, there is a way. I congratulate all that were involved in the agricultural show.

While talking about the agricultural show, I am going to attempt to interest the few farmers that we have in Cayman Brac, to establishing a mini-show, or fair, probably on Ash Wednesday in Cayman Brac, which will encourage the farmers, show what they are doing, and create an interest for others to get involved in farming. We are not blessed with a lot of rainfall, or with real fertile soil. But I remember in my earlier days that I used to transport many of the products grown in Cayman Brac to Grand Cayman to supply the needs of Grand Cayman.

So the ability to grow products in Cayman Brac is there if we can encourage the people to do so.

As we look at the Postal Department we see great improvements. As we walk into the General Post Office now we can all be proud. It has been remodelled and it is a credit to the Minister, to the Postmistress and to all involved. The service you get is friendly and there have been great changes in that department. I noticed with interest that there is going to be a sub-Post Office built in West End Cayman Brac during 1995. That will help create some employment and upgrade the facilities as well.

The Lands and Survey Department has made great strides with the reduced index maps. I could go on and on with their improvements. It is an important function and it is great that a country as small as ours has a registry with records and data. As it is now computerised, that will give better service with faster turnaround than we now get. We have seen much improvement in the last ten years within this department as modern, sophisticated equipment is installed.

I am glad to see that emphasis on training of Caymanians in the Public Works Department to fill engineering posts. This is so important because while many of our Caymanians are getting tertiary degrees, unfortunately, other than teachers and nurses, they are not in real great demand. So it is important that we put emphasis in other fields for scholarships and make sure that they can get the positions when they return.

I would now like to turn to my own district and District Administration. It is true, as His Excellency mentioned, economic growth and development has been slow in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, more so in Cayman Brac than Little Cayman, and it gives us all great concern. It is hoped that maybe a nice large hotel can be built which will change the position somewhat for the need for employment, and provide many jobs for our people after it is operational.

I am grateful to report to this Honourable House that every effort has been made to get the Capital Works Programme in gear very early this year in the Public Works Department in Cayman Brac. Much is being accomplished there. During the week of March 13 through 17, a total of 56 persons were employed by Government in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. This total consisted of those working in Vehicle Services, Environment, Education, Road, Building and Stores. I quote that number to say that our workforce is not that large that we need to employ hundreds.

That number working enables our economy to benefit and the rollover effect keeps the economy of that island going. When some of those 56 persons are unemployed it creates hardships. That is why it is so important that we not only get appropriations for capital projects in addition to our recurrent expenses annually, but that it is spent throughout the year, starting very early and hopefully lasting throughout the year.

I want to thank the members of the Finance Committee and the Government for finally bringing to fruition the purchase of the swimming pool adjacent to the High School in Cayman Brac. This has been in the works for some ten or 12 years. It is now owned by Government and we can move forward to utilise the additional property around it with a hard court and a play area. Before, we did not feel we should expend money to improve private property.

One important aspect we need much attention on is the completion of the gazetting of the roads in Cayman Brac. We have been requesting the gazetting of many of our roads for many years. If they have been gazetted the public does not know about it. I speak of the Bluff Road, both east and west, and some of what used to be called feeder roads that need to be gazetted in order to be maintained. I ask those responsible to make every effort to see that these are taken through the final stages and the public made aware when they are completed.

In Cayman Brac, like Grand Cayman, we have sports minded individuals and the same needs that are here in Grand Cayman, as I have heard so many Members rise and speak about. When we talk about not having a practise field in this district or that one, the ability for players to go to another facility is not possible in Cayman Brac. In the opening of my debate, I spoke of the isolation that we feel being separate islands away from Grand Cayman. So this is one of the important points that I want to leave with Honourable Members here today—it is not a matter of wanting everything. We just want the facilities so that our children can develop equally with the children here in Grand Cayman.

Once we have a playing field in Cayman Brac children from one end of the island to the other can use it. It is not that we are asking for them in all our little districts on the islands, we are talking about none existing on the island. The only soccer pitch that we have is at the high school and this is under the direct control of the high school. Much effort has been made to get it up to standard with grass and what have you and if it is used on a daily basis for practise, it will never be suitable for any kind of competition.

A need we also have is that additional piped water be made available by the Water Authority. Only a very small area of Cayman Brac has piped water, and the sale of water could be increased many, many, times if a gradual expansion of the lines were made in Cayman Brac. I do not think we need to go into the millions of dollars on expenditure, but it can be done over a period of time and it will help in more ways than one.

I would also like to thank the Minister for Agriculture and his staff for the efforts they are making to provide water for the cattle and farmers on the bluff at Cayman Brac. But I would like to suggest to him the actual filling of the tanks with water from the Water Authority as opposed to from the well. As we were told you have to have a very limited extraction rate otherwise the quality of the water will deteriorate very quickly.

I look forward to the capital expenditure coming to fruition this year in the Teachers Centre, the addition to the primary school, the improvements to the high school and one important aspect that I look forward to is the air-conditioning of the multi-purpose hall at the high school. This will enable the students to take their external examinations in comfort. As it is now it is very hot at the time of the year they take their external examinations and it is not conducive to their best performance.

Little Cayman: Street lighting improvements are being made there. Of course, they came on line late and there is need for additional street lighting for the safety of the tourists which are more numerous than the local people. I am very glad that Phase I of the hurricane shelter has been completed. In the event people are trapped on Little Cayman during a hurricane or any other type of disaster, there is a place that is capable of withstanding 215 MPH winds (according to its manufacturer) located on high ground.

I have taken a little longer than usual, but I wanted to expand my thoughts. I am extremely grateful for the freedoms that we have in these islands and the stability. I think it is the responsibility of all of us to do all that we can to preserve and protect our stability. I think the future depends on our remaining a British Crown Colony. I am a great advocate of that.

As I come to the close of my debate, I would like to ask Almighty God's blessing on the people of the Cayman Islands, and wisdom on our leaders. Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.28 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.05 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on the Throne Speech.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning . . . are you winding up the debate on this?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, point of clarification, I guess.

I am into some difficulty because I really have to leave here on Friday evening, since we scheduled a promotion in Scotland and England from two months ago. These invitations are at the request of the Minister of Tourism, so if I do not show up it will damage the entire programme. What I am hoping to ask is that I be allowed to make my contribution and some other Member of the Government be allowed to wind up.

The Speaker: Well it is normal for the mover of the motion to wind up, but I assume that in these exceptional circumstances this might be waived. When do you have to leave? Is it Friday, honourable Minister?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yes Madam Speaker, it will be Friday.

The Speaker: May I suggest that on Thursday, if no other Member wishes to continue the debate that you do so when that time comes and we will see what happens?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I will have to abide by your ruling, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to contribute to the debate?

The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Madam Speaker, I wish to contribute to the debate, but my debate will take longer than up to two o'clock. I have to attend a sports function in Bodden Town to present medals at the North Side Sport Day.

The Speaker: At two o'clock? You could not finish by one o'clock?

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: May I suggest that the Member for North Side commence her contribution?

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I guess I will make my contribution very brief.

Madam Speaker, I would like to extend congratulations and thanks to His Excellency the Governor for the well thought out and truthful Throne Speech he delivered. In my contribution to this debate, I will try to offer constructive criticism on areas where I feel there is need, and to make worthwhile suggestions that can assist. I hope that they will be accepted and it not be felt that I am just talking to hear myself speak.

I can assure the environmentalists that they will not have to come to this Parliament to try and save the trees by the speeches that I stand on the floor of this House to make. I do agree with His Excellency the Governor, when he said that Cayman enjoys exceptional growth in the 1980s and it has taken a while for us to realise how necessary it is to keep the Government's spending within the resources available to us. I feel this came about when the National Team Government was elected in 1992 and returned to this House with a majority. At that time we told the people in our Manifesto that it is time to cut the suit according to the cloth—and we have done just that.

The first subject that I would like to touch on in the Throne Speech is the Judiciary. I am well aware of the separation of powers. I would never want this to change, and I will never try to have it changed. But I feel as a representative of the people of this country I have a right to speak on something that I feel can be done to improve whatever department.

His Excellency the Governor has told us of improvements in court administration, upgrading of buildings and more extensive use of computers. I agree with this 100%. But my concern is the inconsistencies that we see every day in the newspapers when it come to sentencing. I did intend to speak on a particular case, but I understand that an appeal has been lodged with the Grand Court, so I will not get into it.

When I look at the sentencing for the defilement of a young girl that was handed down in these Islands, I am concerned. I feel that this sort of behaviour by older men must be treated more severely and they must be treated as they are—criminals. When we see a sentence of six months' imprisonment for a 29-year old man who has defiled a 14-year girl . . . that has changed her entire life in this community! And to be given six months I think is ridiculous.

I cannot tell the judges what to do, but I must say that if it is a matter of amending a law, I would ask the Honourable Attorney General to bring these matters to this honourable House and let us deal with it. This gentleman that was sentenced to six months was in custody awaiting trial on a cocaine charge and spent some six months [in prison] and this has been used as sentence for the defilement for a 14 year old girl. I do not think that this is right, and I would ask that something be done. As I have said, if it is amendments to laws, let us amend the laws.

We cannot name the men who have been taken before the court for these types of crime. I feel that it is time that this sort of thing be stopped. If I had a young girl, I would like to be made aware of any man who has been convicted or charged as a molester so that I could take the necessary precautions to help my child not be caught up in that sort of thing.

Maybe it is time that this honourable House bring in (as I have argued in the Committee on the Penal Code) mandatory minimum sentences for these sort of crimes. I think it is time that these people pay for their acts.

I happened to be listening to the BBC News last week when I heard that there was an MP who stood in Parliament and said that the police and the public are losing faith in the judicial system.

Madam Speaker, we see cases where people are found with large quantities of drugs and they are given community service orders. I do not think this is right and I would implore that those persons with authority have some discussion. I am certain that the Honourable Judges have their reason, but let us put this matter where we can deal with the problem. As I said, if laws need amending, then let us amend them.

I will touch on the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs. I am extremely happy that the Governor has said "The civil service reached another milestone during 1994, as General Orders were amended to remove all discrimination against female officers." I cannot believe that it took this Island until 1994 to realise the amount of discrimination in our General Orders against female officers. Lady members coming into this Parliament are not feminists, and I would like to underline that we are not women liberators. But we must constantly be aware of matters that are affecting women and try and do something about it.

I know for years that the head of the civil service was trying to work out some solution to this matter in dealing with the discrimination against female officers. This was one of the suggestions and requests in my first debate in this Parliament, and he took note. I would like to thank His Excellency the Governor.

He went on to say that he would shortly "be appointing a Committee, which will be chaired by the Chief Secretary, to carry out a comprehensive review of the General Orders and the Public Service Regulations." I would like to offer to the Chief Secretary a suggestion for when this review is being carried out: We have a number of civil servants who have spent quite a number of years in the civil service, they have contributed and they are good workers—never late, never absent. But for many years, they have been at the top of their salary scales. They are not getting any increases in the form of increments, and I feel that this Committee should look at some type of formula that can be arranged to bring about [changes] where these people can get some increase, or their salary scale bracket brought up.

I have noticed over the years personnel in the civil service who have been trained in the medical field, civil engineers, and for them to get a promotion or an increase in salary they have had to ask to be transferred to another department. Madam Speaker, I think this is a waste of professionalism, a waste of the training they have had, and we must do something to assist where they can remain in their professions and give something back to this country.

The other suggestion that I would like to make to the Chief Secretary is that we have a number of young Caymanians who are overseas on scholarships who will be returning to these Islands with a professional qualifications. I do not think they have been placed in the right salary bracket and I would ask that he look at this with a view of putting them . . . I would make the suggestion of the AP Grade. If we do not take care of them they will shortly leave the civil service and look for employment in the private sector. It may be sad to say that money now overrules loyalty, but that is the way it is. For us to continue to keep our young professionals in the service, we are going to have to take care of them financially.

The other suggestion I would like to make is in regard to the interview process for a job within the civil service. As I understand it now when one applies for a position in the civil service, they have to do mathematics and an English test no matter what position they are applying for. If we are running an advertisement for a receptionist, or a post of that nature, I do not see the need for them to be doing a mathematics or and English test. I feel that some system should be set up whereby they have to do a test of telephone operator which can guide them in the right direction, their pleasantness on the telephone and things of that nature.

I will touch on the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force. Madam Speaker, I too would like to join those who have welcomed the new Commissioner of Police, Mr. Anthony Gray, and the Detective Chief Superintendent, Derek Haines, as head of the Drugs Task Force. I would like to wish Mr. Gray good luck. And from the write-up in the newspapers, I feel he has the ability to bring the Police Force up to where all Caymanians can be proud. But I say he has a long hard task ahead of him because this force has been left without proper leadership for some time now.

To the Detective Chief Superintendent Haines, I say you have a hard job in filling the shoes of Mr. Cutts who did a tremendous job in catching the drug dealers as well as the users in this country. But I have every confidence that he will pick up where Superintendent Cutts left off and continue to do good work.

Unless I overlooked it, I saw no mention of the police boat in the Throne Speech. I have heard nothing of how it has assisted since its arrival here in the curbing of drugs around our Islands. I understand that this boat is now damaged and has to have certain repairs.

Madam Speaker, I will also say to the Chief Secretary that it is time we found a Caymanian seaman who is retired and knows the waters, who knows how to captain a boat and put them aboard this police boat and have it fully handled and cared for.

I am not knocking the police who have been put on board. I am sure they are doing their best. But I feel with a proper seaman on board we could do even better, because the police then would be left to do whatever they have to do should they come up on someone dealing illegally in this country.

I will touch briefly on the Prison Department. I am quite pleased to see job training and interview programmes to secure employment on release with a follow-up programme to be put in place this year. I commend the people at the prison, but a decision has got to be made about who is going to employ these people. It is a waste of good time to have them sit examinations and upon leaving prison they go to Government—they will not employ them. They go to the private sector, and they will not employ them. Therefore, they get discouraged and end up right back where they where came from.

I do not know the answer, but I am asking the Deputy Chief Secretary to somehow see that there is a committee within one of the sections of Government set up where these people can be brought back into society and feel that they can once again become worthwhile citizens.

I will now touch on the Department of Immigration. I have heard much said, Madam Speaker, putting blame on the Immigration Board of this country. I personally feel that they are not all to blame when it comes to work permits. I feel that the administration in the department needs to be improved. When work permit applications are made, they have to go through certain channels within the department before they reach the Board. A lot of complaints of political victimisation by the Board is on the street. I, for one, Madam Speaker, must say is it because we finally have in place a Board that is doing what it is supposed to do—protect Caymanians.

I read in the newspaper this morning where the Chamber of Commerce said it is time that political appointees to Boards (civil servants) be removed and persons from the business community be put on Boards. I am sorry that at this time I do not have a list of the boards of this country so that I could show the number of people from the private sector on these boards.

I have come to the conclusion . . . and I will touch briefly on the Chamber of Commerce before I continue with the Immigration Department. It is time that the Chamber of Commerce took a stand in this country as to what their role in the Cayman Islands is supposed to be.

Over the last couple of weeks the opinion that I have gathered is that we now have a political party within the Chamber of Commerce.

If they want to be a political party, I say get out on the road and take the knocks that every Member in his Chamber has taken to hold a seat in the Parliament of the Cayman Islands. I happened to call them because of the motion I will be presenting here next week on women's affairs. I wanted a list of women in employment in the Cayman Islands and the women that are at managerial positions. I was told that they do not so such a survey. If I wanted it done they could do it. Maybe that is a constructive survey for them to carry out, Madam Speaker.

We have heard that people are afraid to do this, and do that in the Cayman Islands. They are afraid of being victimised. But what people are saying it that it is the Government. It is not the Government, Madam Speaker, and the Chamber of Commerce could do a survey of their members to find out how many of them are being victimised and not getting a fair chance at promotions. Untruth is being put in advertisements by their members to fill positions that could easily be filled by Caymanians. But they do not apply because they know they do not have the qualifications being asked for.

I will now go back to the Department of Immigration. I was speaking on the administration. As the other Third Elected Member for George Town said in her debate, we are constantly being told that the Cuban refugee situation is taking up all of their time. Speaking here as Edna Moyle, the representative for North Side, I think it is time that the new Chief Immigration Officer decided to get into the Immigration Department and do what he was brought to this country to do. The morale of the staff in that department is so low at this time that I think someone should go in there and sit with these officers and allow them to talk, not being afraid of any action being taken against them.

We were told that the lines for Caymanians and Caymanian residents at the airport were to assist in the flow of traffic. Madam Speaker, I think the answer to that problem is to have every booth manned when flights arrive two and three at a time. I will personally ask the Chief Secretary to sit with whomever made the decision to remove the line for Caymanians to the extreme left, and put us back where we should be. Give us a little bit of prime space in our own Island. I am certain that tourist arrivals can still follow us through that line and there will be sufficient space.

I understand that there seems to be a hold-up at the airport right now in clearing arriving passengers through Customs and Immigration because there are no Immigration forms or Customs forms on board some of the airlines that are arriving. I know it is the responsibility of the airline agents to see that these forms are put on board. But I feel that if an Immigration Officer or a Customs Officer were given the responsibility to take additional cards, maybe we could process them without any problem.

I also note under the Department of Immigration, that this year a review is expected of the other primary legislation in our main immigration laws, namely, the Local Companies (Control) Law and the Trade and Business (Licence) Law. We have heard much about Caymanians fronting for people coming into this country to set up businesses. Maybe it is time that under our Trade and Business (Licence) Law some provision be put in whereby those Caymanians who are prepared to front businesses be held responsible for any liabilities that these companies may incur. Maybe this will wake them up and let them realise what they are doing and that it should be discontinued.

On the matter of work permits being delayed, both temporary and the full-time work permit, it is probably time that the Immigration Board became a full time Board.

Madam Speaker, I would also like to see some type of protection put in place where our Caymanians who have small boutiques, T-shirt shops, or whatever it is, are protected from persons coming in and getting status and who can afford to put these people out of business because they cannot compete.

I will touch briefly on the Legislative Assembly and in particular on the two Committees that are under my chairmanship, the Select Committee to consider a Register of Interests for the Legislative Assembly, and the Select Committee to consider a Code of Ethics for Legislators. I can assure this honourable House, Madam Speaker, that a report will be laid on the Table for the Committee on the Register of Interests. I cannot say on the Code of Ethics whether the report will be laid in the June meeting.

I would also like to put forward a suggestion here when it comes to Committees. Maybe it is time that, instead of having a Select Committee consisting of the entire House, it be set up with a number of Members. With the entire membership being the whole House, at times it is hard to get a quorum. We have to remember that the Cayman Islands is no longer in the stage where everyone stays on the Island. Ministers have to go overseas. And sometime that is much more important than sitting on a Committee, even though they are committed to those committees, Madam Speaker, they try their best.

The Cayman Islands Government Office in the United Kingdom: I would like to congratulate the Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning, the Minister responsible for Education and Aviation, and the Government that saw where money could be saved by moving these offices to alternative premises and in giving them more office space. I would like to say thanks to Mr. Russell, who I feel is doing a tremendous job for these Islands.

The Portfolio for Legal Administration: In 1995, ten students will graduate from the Law School from the Honours Degree Programme, and one student from the Bachelors of Law Degree Programme. This will make a total of 54 students who graduated since the 1987 ceremony.

Madam Speaker, the concern I have here (because I know when the school was started it was for Caymanians or persons with Caymanian connections) . . . but I think that has changed. I would ask the Honourable Attorney General to make certain . . . but we cannot continue to have our Caymanian students going into the Law School, coming out with degrees and not able to secure a job because this country is overflowing with lawyers. Something must be done to make certain that they are not wasting their time.

Legislative Drafting: I think the recruitment of a second Legal Draftsman is needed. I am hoping that this candidate will somehow be found within the region. We Caymanians tend to believe that we are not West Indians—but we are. I feel that there are qualified persons within the region who could fill this post and do a good job at it, not saying that coming from any other region they could not. But I think it is time that we found people within the region familiar with matters affecting us.

I say to the Honourable Attorney General, let us look within the region to see what we can find before going further afield.

I would like to congratulate the Customs Department on their record [revenue collection] of $61.6 million, Madam Speaker. I would also like to congratulate them on their vigilance. Having seen reports in the newspapers of how they were able to find a lot of ammunition that was coming into this country. Maybe it is time that the Financial Secretary looked into giving them a security system where luggage could go through when it arrives here so we can make certain that [we detect] anything such as ammunition and guns rather than doing spot checks to discover such things.

Maybe it is time the dogs be put on the outside of the arriving terminal to be able to smell and sniff luggage, because we are missing a lot of drugs coming into this country. The customs officers do not have the necessary equipment to assist them.

Under the Economics and Statistics Office, I noticed the office has completed its second year monthly visitors exit survey and has been generating visitor expenditure statistics on a quarterly basis. At this point, Madam Speaker, I would like to suggest to the Statistics Department that they start somewhere to keep statistics on offences against women. When I look in the [newspaper] under the Crime Report and Cleared-up in the Statistics Report, I see other offences against the public: it has a little two, and down next to the two it says including rape and other sexual offences. Madam Speaker, I think that the women of this country are entitled to statistics being kept of these sorts of offences against women.

I would like to congratulate the Treasury Department on the increased collection of tourist accommodation tax in 1994—up 54% over the 1993 figure. I would ask that they continue to keep the collecting of tourist accommodation tax in the forefront. Over the years we have lost a lot of money in non-collection of this tax.

I will touch briefly on the Department of Tourism. First of all, I would like to congratulate the Honourable Minister because I feel that because of his expertise and his dedication we have seen the tremendous increase in tourist arrivals in the Cayman Islands since 1992.

I would like to congratulate him on the joint scholarship between the Cayman Islands Condominium Association and his department to allow young Caymanians to attend university to complete a programme in hospitality management. In the past, scholarships have been offered by the Hotel and Condominium Association to young Caymanians who went off to Canada and have since come back with their bachelor's degree in the hospitality field and have been unable to secure jobs in the industry. I would ask the Honourable Minister to make certain that when these young people come back to these Islands qualified, that every effort is made so they can secure a job.

I see where His Excellency the Governor also mentioned a new career development initiative planned as a joint effort between the hospitality sector and the Department of Tourism. Madam Speaker, I am quite pleased to see all of this happening. But I would suggest to the Honourable Minister [for Tourism, Environment and Planning] and the Minister responsible for Education and Aviation, that in order for these Islands to have its own people in the hospitality fields we have now got to put tourism into the curriculum of the schools. It should be put right up next to mathematics and English.

I have said for a long time, that to ask our children at the age of 12 or 13 years old to make a decision on a career does not make sense. We should have an arm of the hospitality field at the high school where those kids who are not academically inclined to go on to do the GCSE are streamlined into the hospitality field.

Caymanians are very proud people. This may not be possible, but I think if there is cooperation between the Ministry of Tourism and Education this can become a part of the curriculum at the high schools.

The Department of Environment: I will say very little about this department, except that I am happy to see that additional Marine Enforcement Officers will be added in order that the enforcement of the Conservation Laws and Regulations may continue. I am happy to see that the rodent control programme will be established on an island-wide basis. I wonder why it was stopped.

The Planning Department: I would just like to mention briefly that I agree that the authority intends to [increase] enforcement activities to prevent the proliferation of illegal development. This is much needed. I know in my district (North Side), I have seen a number of shacks go up [illegally] and I have called the Planning Department [about them]. The shacks that are being used for rental are not being used [for such purpose]. They are being used for wash sheds. I have had people who are paying rent for those shacks for their helpers come and tell me that they are being used for people to live in.

We have heard much about the proposed Development Plan, Madam Speaker. There is just one brief comment that I would like to make to the persons whom appeared on Issues 27 to discuss this Plan. It is all well and good for the environmentalist to want to protect the mangroves. I am certain that everyone in this honourable House would like to also. But we have to remember that Caymanians spent money at one time to buy this property and we have got to come to a means whereby we can protect the mangroves but at least the people can make some use of their land.

When I heard someone on the programme (Issues 27) make the stupid statement that the mangroves must be preserved and maybe the Government should go out and buy them and that this Island consists of 46% of mangroves . . . What government in the history of . . . and at market value he said! . . . can go out and pay that kind of money to the people?

Madam Speaker, I will touch briefly on the Health Services. There is not much I can say, other than to congratulate the Honourable Minister. In his presentation in this House he made quite clear what he intends to do and what is being done. So it is silly of my to stand here and repeat what he has said. I would just like to congratulate him, after being in the Portfolio for such a short period of time, for achieving the bringing to reality a Health Service that the people of this country deserve and at a price we can afford.

I am happy to see that in the first phase of the improvement at the hospital there is going to be a mental health unit. This is long overdue, because I feel that we cannot allow our mentally ill patients to continue to roam the streets or to be held at the general ward at the hospital, which puts a lot of pressure on our nurses and the other patients on the ward. I congratulate him for making this one of our priorities.

The other thing I am happy to see (and it will be in the first phase) is a maternity operating room. This, Madam Speaker, I feel is very necessary because as the situation at the hospital now exists, the few minutes it takes to carry a patient in an emergency from the delivery room to the theatre could cost a life. If this facility is put next to the delivery room, I am certain that the services would be improved and if an emergency arises, the doctors can deal with it much better.

I would like to thank the Honourable Minister for the planning of the Health Centre for the district of North Side and ask him to make certain that the money that is now in the Budget for these plans be used before the end of the [financial] year and not be put back into the coffers of Government on 31 December without any action being taken.

The other suggestion that I would like to make to the Honourable Minister (maybe this is not for him to deal with), is that unless the staff at the hospital are happy and are prepared to work we will achieve nothing more than we have at present. I believe that the majority of the staff at the hospital are very dedicated. I will speak personally of the nurses with whom I have come in contact with more, being a grandmother with grandchildren staying at the Hospital. I have had more contact with them.

I said many years ago that the underpaid civil servants in this country, in my opinion, are the teachers and the nurses—and they are the two most important sectors. Without health, you cannot have education; without education, you cannot have health.

Maybe it is time that some consideration be given in upgrading them and that they feel that they are more appreciated by being paid a little more. I know I have no right, and I am not committing this Government to expenditure. I am just suggesting things that I feel could help.

The outpatient emergency service leaves much to be desired. I know the Honourable Minister is trying, but when one arrives at the hospital when there has been an accident, the doctor who is on duty has to spend many hours with the accident victim (which is normal) because it is an emergency. But there are a number of patients who have to sit long hours and wait. I have personally spoken to the Minister and he has assured me that they have put in place [a system] whereby another doctor should cover if such a situation arises. I would like to congratulate him on taking that move.

I also think the reason we have quite a backup at the hospital, at nights particularly, is because it is now being used as a clinic. Instead of people going to the clinic during the day, they tend to go at night to be considered as an emergency. I do not think this is fair because those doctors work long hard hours.

I would like to thank the Honourable Minister for the renovation that has been done to the paediatrics ward at the hospital recently. I took a visit there myself. Now I think the children will feel more at home in the way it has been approached in upgrading the facility. It is not money that is being wasted, even though a new paediatrics ward will be built, because whatever furniture is put in there can be moved to the new facility. But the building received a coat of paint and now it looks like a different place.

I am happy to see that the Cayman Counselling Centre has reinstated the counselling programme for inmates of Her Majesty's Prison Northward. I think it is time, Madam Speaker (and I am not certain if this is now under the laws of these Islands), that it be mandatory for drug offenders to attend counselling. Maybe we should look at the laws and make it mandatory that they all attend counselling at some point during their time at Northward Prison.

I know that most counsellors will say that unless someone says he or she wants to attend counselling it is a waste of time. I believe that if they are put into these programmes it may turn them around where they may say, 'Yes, I need help and be prepared to go for counselling.'

I note where the Counselling Centre is developing an intensive outpatient programme for the Sister Islands with an office in Cayman Brac. I would say to the Honourable Minister, do not delay. Let this become a reality very soon because the longer we delay matters of this nature, the worse the problem becomes.

I would also suggest that some arm of the Counselling Centre be taken to the eastern districts. There are a number of people in my constituency, who may be prepared to attend counselling, but they do not drive, they do not have a member of their family who drives in order to take them into George Town. But if the facility were in the district, maybe one or two would make use of it. I am a firm believer that if we save one from drugs we have done a good job.

The National Health Insurance Scheme: I am very happy to see that the Honourable Minister hopes to have this scheme in place by the end of November this year. I would like to make a suggestion here. We have in this country businesses that offer health insurance for their employees. But when an employee leaves one organisation where he is covered by insurance and goes to another organisation, while on probation he is not covered by that company's insurance for the probationary period. I do not know how we can handle it, but I think we need to put something in place. What is it to pay into an insurance scheme for one person who may be on a probationary period for three months and at the end of the period they may not fit in the organisation, they are not what the company is looking for. How much would they have lost and how much that employee on a probationary could lose if they are taken seriously ill or get involved in an accident with no insurance?

The Ministry for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture: I would like to congratulate the Honourable Minister on the new programme that he has just brought into force—the Young Parents Programme. I attended the opening of the Joyce Hylton Crisis Centre and I was quite impressed with the young ladies whom I had conversation with. Every one of us sitting within this building would love to stamp out teenage pregnancy. But we know that we cannot legislate morals for people. So we are going to have to constantly assist those by helping them one way or the other.

The Young Parents Programme will be a big help in putting these young girls, as the Minister has said, hopefully young fathers, on the right road to realising that bringing a child into this world is a huge responsibility. Maybe it is time that sex education became a part of our curriculum.

I would like to congratulate him on his plans for the First Annual Youth Week in 1995. The award for an outstanding youth, I think will be an incentive for our young people to improve their lifestyle and work toward becoming one of the outstanding youths of the Cayman Islands.

I am happy to see that a crime survey will be carried out and the preliminary work for this survey has begun and should be completed by June.

The juveniles who have been giving us a lot of trouble . . . since the Honourable Minister took over the Ministry for Sports and placed a tremendous amount of emphasis on sports in the Cayman Islands these problems are becoming fewer. I think he should be congratulated for his stand on sports because for too long there were no emphasis placed on sports.

I am certain that over the years there were probably a number of young people who could have become competitive in track and field particularly, had they been given the opportunity at a young age to compete with the facilities provided. Maybe some of them today could be like Marlene Ottey who represents Jamaica and is constantly winning gold medals overseas.

I say to this Honourable Minister, even though he is receiving a lot of knocks, that he should continue to run his Ministry as he sees fit. Continue to advance sports in the Cayman Islands.

I will speak briefly on the Department of Trade and Labour. I am pleased to see that this department will be exploring ". . . suitable apprenticeship schemes for implementation on a pilot basis." This I think is much needed. "It will be looking at the job placement system and extension of technical assistance to help the unskilled in our community secure and retain suitable employment. One additional labour inspector will be hired...", which is long overdue in my opinion, Madam Speaker. Amendments to the Labour Law will hopefully be brought into effect.

One suggestion I will make here is that something must be placed in the Law whereby our people who are being constantly forced out . . . Madam Speaker, I am not speaking from hearsay. This has actually happened. Life is made very difficult for them in employment that they get to the point where they leave. This is being done in order to avoid payment of unfair dismissal as allowed under the Labour Law.

We know that our young people can get angry very quickly, and when someone makes life miserable on the job they will walk. But I feel that something should be put in whereby when these people are forced out or walk off the job they are still paid some type of compensation.

Maternity leave, I feel should be increased. We all know that the first six months of any child's life is the most important. Closeness with the mother counts a lot. I feel that some period where it can assist these parents so they know that their job is still secure upon return to work should be put into the Labour Law.

The Ministry for Education and Aviation: Madam Speaker, I do not feel that the people of this country can congratulate the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation enough for what he did with the national carrier (Cayman Airways) of these Islands. To have achieved what he has over such short period of time I think speaks for itself.

I am happy to see that a detailed Five-year Development Plan for Education, to be implemented during the period 1995 to 1999, has been accepted by the Honourable Minister. I see that a school inspectorate will be established this year. I would also like to congratulate the Minister on the result of the CXC examinations taken by the students of the John Gray High School. I am sincerely looking forward to the result of the A Levels and we hope that we will achieve the same type of passes and numbers so it will prove to us how effective the CXC examinations are.

I am happy to see that the Cayman Islands Scholar Award was approved and will be offered for the first time in 1995. The scholarship programme has some 42 students being granted scholarships in a variety of fields. I am happy to see this, Madam Speaker. But I feel that some provision should be made for when these students return on summer holidays. They could be provided with summer jobs in the field they are studying and on completion of their formal education, there should be a post they can come back to and use their professional training.

I congratulate the Minister on getting the United Kingdom's Department of Transportation to work on our behalf in securing protection for Cayman Airways on the Miami/Cayman route. Earlier this year the Minister prepared a position paper on behalf of Government to be submitted to the United States Government. On February 3, only a few days before the talks were scheduled, the United States offered a rollover of the existing agreement for a further twelve months. I am certain that it is because of his constant dedication to all sections of his Ministry.

I will now touch briefly on the Ministry for Agriculture, Communications and Works. I note where His Excellency the Governor said: "[The year] 1995 will see intensive development in capital projects in this department." We all would like to support and buy-Cayman. I do whenever I can. I know that labour in the Cayman Islands is probably higher than anywhere else in the Caribbean. But when I walk into the supermarkets, I see Caymanian produce priced higher than that which is imported. I do not know what can be done, but I feel we need to do something where people will buy the Caymanian produce thereby supporting our local farmers. Telecommunications: Under this section, I have one request of the Honourable Minister responsible for telecommunications. There are many cellular telephone users in this country. It is very expensive. But I think it is time discussions were held with Cable & Wireless giving us a clearer cross-Cayman facility with these telephones. I go out into the district of North Side and I want to make a call or someone calls me. There are certain points along the road where you cannot reach anyone. So I would ask the Honourable Minister to hold discussions to see what can be done to facilitate cellular users in the Cayman Islands.

The Postal Department: I would like to congratulate the Honourable Minister on the renovation and facelift of the George Town Post Office and the outer districts. I would also like to request that somewhere it be found possible to look into setting up some type of building in the Old Man Bay area for the distribution of mail. It is now being handled by a lady in the district of North Side who does a very good job, but I feel it would be much better if there was a particular point and a building where the mail could be dropped and from where people could collect it.

The Public Works Department: Madam Speaker, this department gives me a lot of concern. I know it is not because of the Honourable Minister's efforts. I have had occasions to sit in his Ministry where he has requested certain things for my district (minor things) and they are never done. I have had reason to follow road works in my district for two weeks straight and I think the problem . . . again, Madam Speaker, I do not blame the Honourable Minister. Men are sitting waiting from 7.25 am until 10.00 am before they begin work because they do not know what they have to do.

If we have Caymanians in this country who can supervise road works, let us give them the job and not have to pay so much money to road engineers sitting in air-conditioning offices and not going to see how the money in this country is being spent. The Honourable Minister can request this, but he cannot go out there and see that the road works are being supervised.

I note where His Excellency placed emphasis on the training of Caymanians to fill the engineering posts in the department. I would like to congratulate him on this.

Under the Department of Vehicle and Equipment Services, I would like to make one suggestion. As I have said earlier, I will make suggestions and I will criticise where I feel it is necessary. We noticed where every department of Government uses a different manufacturer for vehicles—some use Nissan, some use Toyota, Cherokee, GM, whatever. I think it is time that this country looked at dealing with one local car dealer, with each one on a five year period (because I think that is the life of a vehicle), and give each one the chance to make some money. Also when the cars are smashed up because they are all the same brand, spare parts can be taken from those to repair the others when necessary.

Madam Speaker, I will finish my debate by thanking His Excellency the Governor for making it clear to the people of this country that he, and he alone, has the sole responsibility for civil servants, and that they are under his command. I am tired of hearing the vicious rumours on the streets that Executive Council and the National Team Government are responsible for the firing of civil servants, and that it is all political.

Madam Speaker, I know my Ministers quite well. I will stand anywhere and defend them to the hilt. They are not of the mentality or the calibre who would fire a civil servant because of political reasons. I personally did not know of any civil servants being relieved of their duties until I heard it on the news. I believe that if those things were being discussed these Ministers somewhere along the line would let us know. So it is time that these rumours be put to rest and anyone who has a gripe about it deal with the Governor and not the Ministers of Executive Council or the National Team.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.20 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I would like to begin by offering concerns and sympathy for the occupants of the house that got burnt down on Watlers Road, and also to Mr. Joseph Lou-Ellen the owner of the house. We are very happy to hear that no one came to harm when this happened in the early hours of this morning.

I would also like to thank Miss Mary for giving us such a nice lunch today. Without that, I do not believe I would have been able to get through all the chores I had to do during lunchtime, operating like grease lighting to get back here.

Madam Speaker, I read the Throne Speech a number of times. I can only say that it is quite evident from the reading that this is a Government of vision; a Government committed to progress and the development of our people and our Islands. There has been rapid progress in these Islands during the past 30 years, but I would like to point out that if we reflect over the last two years what we have seen happen is nothing short of a miracle.

When we think of the economy in 1992, when we think of Government's financial position, the first year after this government was elected there was a change in position whereby Government had a surplus at the end of 1993 and a surplus again at the end of 1994. There is evidently a trend here. I would like to feel that this is due to those of us who are involved in Government, especially the Ministers, the Financial Secretary. I think the country owes congratulations and a lot of credit to the present Executive Council for their prudence, their fiscal planning and now, we can boast of an economy again. We can call ourselves the economic jewel that we have always been here in the Caribbean and we hope it will continue to be.

When we think of one of the main pillars of our economy namely, the banking industry, if anyone speaks to those in the industry they are so busy that they can hardly keep up with the pace. Many of my patients are involved in that industry and they tell me how busy they are.

Since we have enacted the mutual funds legislation, almost a thousand mutual funds have been registered here. It was only in 1993 that the mutual funds legislation was passed. It takes men of foresight, and women too, to do such things. We do not have many things to depend on here in the Cayman Islands, but thank God those things that we do have are doing extremely well and I trust they will continue.

We know that there are over 500 banks and they are continuously increasing in number because of the confidence that people from the outside (investors) have in the Cayman Islands. We know also that tourism, another very important pillar of our economy, is improving greatly.

I do not believe that what some people say is true, namely, that we are getting more arrival of tourists but they are spending less. This is not what the Economic and Statistics Department tells us. The amount of money being spent in the country is far more now than ever before. The promotional and marketing strategies attempt to improve the local product in tourism.

We have seen a marked improvement and increase in tourism and so many of us here in the Cayman Islands depend directly or indirectly on tourism. This is undoubtedly one of the most important pillars, and I would like to give congratulations to those involved in tourism within Government and also in the private sector who have been responsible for this dramatic improvement in tourism over the last few years.

Construction is another main pillar. Many of our men are involved in the construction industry. They rely heavily on it. That has shown signs of remarkable improvement and there is hardly anyone out of work. All who want to work at the moment seem to have a job. In fact, Madam Speaker, many people on the Opposition are complaining now that the Government seems to be moving ahead too fast and we are overheating the economy. They are trying to point out some of the problems that can occur if the economy continues to improve at such a rapid rate. We are taking all these things into consideration and I believe those problems will be dealt with.

Madam Speaker, there were a number of issues the Governor alluded to in his introduction of the Throne Speech. He spoke about the Cuban migrants, and it is commendable that the Government has been able to give such assistance to these unfortunate people and still maintain such a healthy financial position. I do not know how severely that is going to affect the budget towards the end of the year. But up until now we have been able to afford it, and I am sure the Financial Secretary will keep us informed about the amounts that are being spent and how it is affecting the budget. Necessary steps will be taken to ensure that we are able to survive in the midst of such great burden.

It is my feeling that the majority of persons in Cayman commend the Government for being as humane as it has been. Yet, there are some that are a bit envious. They feel that the Cuban migrants are being treated far better than they are. Be that as it may, Madam Speaker, we know that we are bound by International Conventions to provide help to these unfortunate people. I can only hope that aid will come to us from the European Union and we have seen evidence of this already—$100,000 (I believe) has been given to the Government to offset some of the expenditure. Hopefully, more will be forthcoming from the European Union to assist us with the Cuban migrants.

We also see where some of them are leaving by making the choice to go to Guantanamo Bay. It is unfortunate that we still have to pay some of the costs while they are there, but this seems to be one of the things we have to put up with because of our Crown Colony status.

The public has been most kind. Because of their assistance it seems like Government has had to spend far less. We would like to thank all members of the public for the ready assistance they have given and we hope that some good will come out of all this.

Madam Speaker, two motions were brought to the House last year. One had to do with a Review of Court Procedures and Administration with a view to improving the system. The another had to do with a Review of the Matrimonial and Affiliation Law and various other laws that had to do with ensuring that maintenance fees etcetera, and other court orders were adhered to.

I noticed in the Throne Speech that the Governor mentioned that court administration is being improved. In this session of the House we plan to bring amendment to the Judicature Bill. I am sure that when it passes, it will help in ensuring that the Court Department functions more efficiently. It deals with the administration of funds. It will not be necessary anymore to put court funds into escrow accounts. Rather, those funds will be invested. Also the people who do not fulfil court orders will be dealt with in the proper manner with an attachment of earnings where the employer may deduct the amount specified in the court order and pay that into the Court Department. These kind of measures, I am sure will improve things generally. We will be discussing that more as we proceed during this session.

The workload has increased greatly in the Court Department. One has to agree that as they become computerised and extend the facility to accommodate the many different functions of the department, it is extremely important and does serve a useful purpose. After all, this is an offshore financial centre and there are many legal matters that I understand are far more numerous than criminal and civil cases that have to go to court. We have to have a very efficient court system.

I noticed too, that in the Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs—yet another promise of the National Team has being fulfilled here—there has been a review of the General Orders. In 1994, both male and female officers in the civil service get equal treatment. Before it was only if the civil servant was a male that his dependants got the benefits they were entitled to. The reverse of it was that if the civil servant was a female then the dependants got no benefits. I am very, very happy to see that this has been corrected.

We pledged to do our best to correct that, and it has been corrected. I am sure the women of our country are very proud of this fact and the female civil servants in particular are very happy about this.

I believe it is time that the General Orders and the Public Service Commission Regulations be reviewed and I am glad to see that this is going to happen. There are some people who feel that they can be productive outside of the civil service and if they can have another job that does not interfere with their performance as a civil servant, then there are many who feel that they should be allowed to have another job. There are many other complaints that come from the civil servants and many feel that they General Orders are too restrictive and they should be allowed more scope.

Some say that they should be allowed more freedom of speech and that is already being dealt with in this meeting. There has to be loyalty on the part of the civil service and there is scope for civil servants to express disagreements within the Service. Perhaps the civil service should stick to following the proper channel at this point in time.

I too look forward to the review of the amendment of the Elections Law, so that the next election will be well conducted and we will not have to wait long for the results and there will be less chance of mistakes being made.

We know that the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force is under a new leader now. We have Mr. Anthony Gray and also the Drug Task Force to be under Detective Chief Superintendent Derek Haines. The police have a mammoth task, Madam Speaker. There are many times they do not get the cooperation from the public that would help them to perform better. The public on the one hand feel that they cannot trust the police enough to give them the information [they seek]. It is evident that public relations between the police and the public needs to be enhanced and promoted so that the police can in fact be more successful in accomplishing their mission—to help us all in the community. I believe that if this is worked on we will have a more effective force.

Crime has been on the increase, statistics showed that overall there has been a decrease in the number of crimes committed. There has been an increase in domestic violence, and drug offences have increased, but overall the crime rate has decreased. Therefore, the police must be doing something right as they try to do their job.

There is one other thing. Many police informed me that when certain criminals are in prison there is hardly any crime on the streets. There are just a few hardcore criminals in the community, but whenever they are out on parole, we have problems. These people often engage in drug trafficking and drug peddling and sometimes in burglaries in order to maintain their habits. That leads sometimes to assault and violence of all forms. All the things we do not like to see happening in our country. Therefore, I believe that the thing to do is to ensure that these hardcore criminals are dealt with very seriously because they are the ones who are giving the police most of the trouble, they are the ones who are affecting us adversely as a community. So if it just a few of them 20 or 25, whatever the number, it should be easy enough to deal with these hardcore criminals so that we may enjoy a better life here in the Cayman Islands.

There have been many efforts on the part of Government to deal with the crime issue. We have said on many occasions all the things the Government has been involved in doing—the dog programme being reinstated, the launching of the police boat to make sure our coasts are rid off drug traffickers, the increase [of police officers] and many other such things. Government has been extremely active in trying to combat crime in the Islands.

We wish the two new additions to the Police Force good luck as they embark on their new jobs, and hope they will have better results than their predecessors.

I would like to deal now with the Department of Immigration. In my opinion, Madam Speaker, the department has been in a state of turmoil. We have had a change in leadership and it seems that many of the officers there have not settled down under the new leader. From reports that come to me, I guess this will take time before there is good communication between him and his staff. There have been problems referred to quite often by the Chief Immigration Officer himself—the Cubans, the Cubans, the Cubans—that take up so much time and therefore, he has not had the time he would wish to have in dealing with his own department.

The Immigration Department has been going by and large according to old directives. Some of them were given by the old Government. But I am happy to see that we now have new Immigration Directives 1995 that will be sent to the Immigration Board. We trust that they will improve the efficiency and the overall operation of the Immigration Department and its boards. Madam Speaker, there are a number of things in those new directives that will clear up the current problems we are having.

The Immigration Board will have to report more frequently to the Executive Council. So there will be better communication between Executive Council in what goes on regarding matters of immigration. Therefore, problems that may occur can be arrested before they are prolonged. Also there is one directive here that deals with spouses of Caymanians. I think it is time that something like this was done, and I am very glad to see that in the new directives.

The Spouses Employment Rights Certificate says that the ". . . Board may issue an employment Rights Certificate to an applicant for a work permit who is married to a person possessing Caymanian status, where the applicant has been ordinarily resident in the Islands for at least the two years immediately preceding the application and the applicant has been married to the person possessing Caymanian status, throughout that two year period and the applicant produces to the Board an affidavit sworn by the spouse possessing Caymanian status which provides evidence of the stability of the marriage and the character of the applicant."

Many Caymanians have found it to be very inconvenient to be married to someone from abroad and for that person to be denied a job in the Island and sometime having even to live aboard. I have had a few complaints from my constituents about this and many of them blame the Immigration Board for it, not knowing that there were no real directives to help them. We know that spouses of Caymanians were to have some preference, but this is taking it a step further where they will be given an employment right certificate once those conditions are met. I believe we will have a few of our constituents and people much happier and content once this goes through.

They are also looking at the three-year work permits and some adjustments are being made. I am sure this will be publicised to the public for their information.

Regarding the Health Practitioners, there is a new section in the new directive that deals with Health Practitioners. It was common practice for certain people to be issued with work permits even before they were registered by the Health Practitioners Board. This often led to problems. The Health Practitioners Board has a function to register and to discipline health professionals. It is their duty to decide whether a person qualifies for registration and after that the Immigration Board has the duty to decide whether the person should have a work permit. If the Immigration Board runs ahead and grants the work permit before the person is registered it can cause certain problems. This new directive will certainly correct that.

In addition, it will establish a new parameter here regarding work permits for an employee in a profession. In the future, a person who wants to sponsor someone from the outside has to be in the same profession as the particular being sponsored. There are people, I imagine, who may not understand the reason behind this. But it is quite easy to understand. If, for instance, a building contractor decides to sponsor a doctor to these Islands, the first thing is, he does not understand very much about the intricacies of medicine. Therefore, it is very difficult for him to control or oversee the person on work permit.

Secondly, he cannot be disciplined by the Health Practitioners Board.

We know that he has liability and it puts the person who is doing the sponsoring in a precarious position, an almost impossible position, because he is responsible for something he knows nothing about and he cannot regulate and ensure quality service to the public.

The new directive regarding Health Practitioners states that: "The Board shall consult with the Chairman of the Health Practitioners Board before granting a work permit and shall have regard to any communication from the Health Practitioners Board in respect to the requirements in the Islands for health practitioners, and shall inform the chairman of the Health Practitioners Board of the details of every application for a work permit and every grant of a work permit; shall not, except in exceptional circumstances grant a work permit to a health practitioner intending to work self-employed, and shall not grant a work permit to a health practitioner unless the Health Practitioners Board has satisfied the Board that the applicant has applied for and has been granted registration under the Health Practitioners Law, 1994, as a health practitioner." So that clarifies the new position regarding health practitioners.

There have recently been individuals who feel that there should be some sort of manpower limitation on health practitioners on the Island. In fact, I think one reporter telephoned me at my office and asked for my viewpoint on this. I perhaps talked to him in between cases for about five minutes. I think he represented in the newspaper what I said accurately.

Basically, it is my view that we have to know if we are protecting Caymanians or are we protecting foreigners. There are very few Caymanians doctors in this country. We have to ensure, too, that the public has proper choice and that those who do practice in the country are suitable, and the public finds that result forthcoming.

For instance, one could have a situation where there are apparently sufficient paediatricians, but not one of them is found satisfactory to the public. Therefore, it would be wrong in my opinion not to allow another good paediatrician to come into the country. The public has the right, in my opinion, to have access to good, highly qualified professionals, people whom they can get results from.

I feel that this problem can be dealt with through the Immigration Board. What has to happen, in my opinion, is that whoever is sponsoring an individual, namely the employer, should be the one who decides whether the employee has the right to move on by releasing his work permit so he may move to another establishment or whether he can recommend that he should be self-employed. I think in very few instances we should go the way of encouraging expatriate doctors to set up independent practices.

The reasons are very clear in my own mind. These doctors are often moving through and there is no continuity. I know of instances where some of the [practitioners] have been taken to court and they leave the country and it is very hard to get in touch with them. More importantly, if a patient needs his records he cannot get them because the doctor has moved on.

I feel that it can be easily dealt with by ensuring that the person can only move on with the expressed written consent of the employer. If that individual wants to move on of his own free will, then I believe the place for him is outside the country. He should move on to another country. I think that once this is adhered to the situation will rectify itself.

I hope I have been clear enough to the listening public and to all Members here. I feel that not in medicine alone, but in all other professions people who are employed by Caymanians should not be allowed to just jump ship and go and work in other establishments. Sometimes it is the competitor that they join, and if that person is not satisfied with his contract, the thing for him to do is to leave Grand Cayman. Leave the Cayman Islands. The individual came here being employed by a certain employer and that is the person he should remain with until termination of his contract.

Unless of course, there is some exceptional reason. For instance, if the person has been unduly victimised or abused in any way, or if the Executive Council has an overriding reason whereby the person should be allowed to remain in the country.

I think that the new Immigration directives are very explicit and will put many of the problems that we have been experiencing here to rest. I would like to see them adopted as soon as possible.

I would like to congratulate the Government in all the work they have been doing. Recently constituents have said to me, 'We have never made it so good. We have money, we can afford things that they could not afford back in 1991, 1992. But Dr. T, there seems to be something that is not quite right. It is hard for me to put my finger on it.'

I probe them a little and they say, 'You know what it is, a lot is happening but we do not know what is happening.' This is the feedback that I get from some constituents. I quickly tell them that one of the reasons for this is that the Members of Government have just now been able to take a breath, because there had been so much work to be done and they have been so busy that it is now we can begin to really have public meetings the way we wished. We have now started our round of public meetings and tonight, I think, one is in Bodden Town. We will be at the Town Hall, and tomorrow night will be George Town's night and it will be on the Courthouse steps.

It is our intention to keep the public informed. Involve the public. I think this is really perhaps where we have fallen down a bit. It is good to admit things, I think, that the public wants to hear more about what Government is doing and become involved. Once we do that, I believe we can depend on the good common sense in Cayman that will prevail and the Government will have no problem in being re-elected.

I would like to congratulate Radio Cayman, Madam Speaker, on most aspects of its work. I think they do a very good job. They have programmes with a Caymanian flavour. I have found "Open Line" most interesting on occasions. There are many other programmes that serve our purposes here in Cayman. I think congratulations are due.

I wondered how the Government Information Services was integrating with broadcasting and how it was working out. It seems from all that we can see, the amalgamation is going fine, and I certainly hope that it continues.

Turning to District Administration and Little Cayman and Cayman Brac. I have visited Little Cayman and Cayman Brac only recently, and found that those Islands have an excellent infrastructure, particularly Cayman Brac. Government has made sure that there is a good road system there and in some ways a better hospital than what we have in Grand Cayman. There is an international airport, an excellent postal service, water supply, all the infrastructure is in place on the Sister Islands. There is excellent telecommunications and I believe with promotions like what has just occurred with the group going to Hong Kong, London, and New York (and if the Islands are promoted generally) we will see more industry established in the Sister Islands.

I am very glad to hear that Capt. Mabry was a part of the team, because I am sure he took every opportunity to let all the delegates know about the Sister Islands.

The infrastructure, by and large, is in place and it is just a matter of time before those two Islands enjoy some of the prosperity that we have here in Grand Cayman.

I was surprised to see that things were so expensive in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. I think gasoline cost almost $2.45 per gallon. I could not really understand why the Governor thought that doing business there would be less expensive than in Grand Cayman. Perhaps someone could explain that to me.

The offshore financial industry is almost non-existent in the Brac. Of course, this is well and alive here in Grand Cayman. Some people complained to me that their businesses were doing very poorly on the eastern side of Cayman Brac. They seemed to think that all the activity was on the western end of the Island.

I also took the opportunity to visit the hospital and in my opinion the facility is quite capable of serving a population of at least 10,000 to 12,000 people. It is indeed one of the nicest facilities that I have seen in an Island of that size anywhere in the world. Yes, there are a few things that need to be done, like shelters for the ambulance and few minor improvements in the old part of the building to accommodate the laboratory properly.

I do not believe that we need to think of any major capital expenditure for the Cayman Brac Hospital. It is indeed a very nice facility and I am happy that the people of the Sister Islands can enjoy such facility. However, it is a little disheartening to see such a layout and yet only two or three people in the hospital.

The other point that I would like to make here is that in spite of such expenditure, the capability of the hospital has not changed very much. This I find quite disappointing. Here again, we see where we have an example of a beautiful building that can do very little more for its inhabitants. Therefore most of the individuals needing more advanced medical care have to come over to Grand Cayman or go on to the United States and that is because of poor planning.

I would like to join others in saying that we have overall an efficient civil service and the service does provide the infrastructure that we need in this very buoyant economy. Of course, there are improvements that need to be made. And I hope that the Chief Secretary and those involved in the Personnel Department and the Governor will see to it that there is constant upgrading of the service—more seminars organised to improve their efficiency so that we can remain competitive in the international scene.

I might have said this before, but recently quite a number of civil servants have told me that they would like to engage in jobs outside the civil service. For instance, some would like to get night jobs. I had to ask them if they are not tired enough during the day why they want night jobs. Evidently, their salaries are quite good. But when the General Orders are being reviewed perhaps their request can be taken into consideration.

I believe that the Governor abridged the Report here on the Legislative Assembly and I noticed that he mentioned the Select Committees that have been formed and what they have been doing, etcetera. But nothing about the other activities in the Assembly. I daresay that the Legislative Assembly has been very busy in 1994 in that there were so many Bills introduced by the Government and passed, and Private Members' Motions brought. I believe it would be too time consuming to refer to them all. Many of these we see evidence that they have been implemented and making the system better.

I asked the Clerk for a list of some of these [Bills] and there are one or two that I feel I should highlight, because it will show the public just how much the Legislative Assembly has been doing. We know that there was the Companies (Amendment) Bill, 1994, where fees were reduced, and we know the effect that has had in the financial industry; there was an amendment to the Immigration Law, to try and increase the efficiency of that department; the amendments to the Tourism Law went through, and that should certainly make a positive impact on what is going on in the tourism industry; the Powers of Attorney Law, the Partnership Law, and other related laws were all amendments to make sure that business could be conducted more efficiently in the Islands. The Mental Health Law, the Strata Titles Registration Law, there were so many things.

Then there were the Private Members' Motions. It was a very busy year for the Legislative Assembly indeed. We had a Private Member's Motion, [asking for an inspection of Northward Prison] and at least 15 to 16 other Motions were passed [or rejected] in the Legislative Assembly. So the Legislative Assembly had a very busy time and it has had a good effect overall, in my opinion.

I do not believe that there are many jurisdictions of our size that can boast of the novelty and the prestige of having a Law School. Here it is very befitting to pay tribute to the Honourable Truman Bodden, the First Elected Member for George Town, the Minister for Education and Aviation. I believe he was instrumental in helping to set up the Law School and get it going.

I noticed that the honourable Judge Tumin was the guest of honour at the recent graduation of the Law School students, he is Her Majesty's Chief Inspector of Prisons, and a judge. It just crossed my mind that maybe Judge Harre might be given such a job as Inspector of Prisons. Perhaps someone may give some thought to that.

Someone spoke during their debate on the Throne Speech that Caymanians should not be retiring too early from the civil service and wondered why certain expatriates in our community were allowed to work to such ripe ages. Perhaps there is room for a rethink of what is going on here in these matters.

The Legislative Drafting, the Legal Department. I too feel that, like teenage pregnancies, it is quite likely we will have white-collar crime here in our jurisdiction. Therefore, this idea to recruit an attorney with special experience in such fields is certainly going to be of some help to the Legal Department and the Island as whole. It is true that the Legal Department has been busy, there is no question about that. So many Bills have been drafted. But it is my opinion after speaking to so many Ministers that the Legal Department does need more help to prevent work being kept on desks in the Department.

I believe that the Governor did mention that another Legal Draftsman would be employed. If that is the answer to the problem, I will back it to the hilt.

Everyone know that last year I complained, not that I want to complain, but quite a number of Ministers did point out to me that various things were taking too long and it was because of delays in the Legal Department. So I am happy to hear that we will be getting another Legal Draftsman and that the country's business will not be held up in anyway.

I noticed too, that these students who graduated from the Law School, most of them had only second class degrees. While I would like to congratulate them, I do hope that soon we will see some first class degrees.

Many people are easy to forget, Madam Speaker, but these Islands are extremely fortunate. We boast of our own national airline, two international airports, our standard of living—second to none. There are so many things. And because of the Law School this comes to mind. We have an International College of the Cayman Islands capable of degree courses, a well-established Community College and even, a UWIDITE Programme. There are so many opportunities for advancements here when we consider the size of our Islands. We are indeed a very fortunate little country.

The Portfolio of Finance and Development. I have had the greatest esteem for the Third Official Member of Government, the Honourable Financial Secretary. He has a profound interest to keep abreast of developments in the international financial market. I believe that is so essential if we are going to remain competitive. I noticed the amount of journals he subscribes to and the information that he has at his fingertips. I am really, very happy about the work he is doing.

He has also given the private sector the opportunity to give their input and the joint Public Sector Consultative Committee has yielded excellent results. This is a classic example in my opinion, of cooperation between the private sector and Government of how it can yield results.

I believe the Honourable Third Official Member told us in his debate that there were plans to host the conferences in London, Hong Kong, and New York, that would take place early this year. In his effort in trying to promote the Cayman Islands as a financial centre of high repute—the best in the world—he has come under quite a bit of criticism. I think it is quite unfair. The people who can see no further than their noses will make such comments that the estimated $330,000—it was not even $330,000 as I had to point out to some of my constituents. It was only approximately $250,000. How many times, over, and over, is this country going to make that money back?

I believe for us to sit down on our laurels and feel that we do not have to promote the Cayman Islands, is the worst thing we can do. Everyone out there seems to want to establish some sort of financial centre. Every day there is news that one island in the Pacific is thinking about it, another one here and another one there. All these islands compete in the market and we have to present our case and present it well. I believe that the Honourable Financial Secretary and the other delegates who went along, have done just that. This is one time I had to tell my constituents whom were quick to criticise how wrong they were.

The Customs Department I believe is the main contributor to the revenue of this country. I believe that its annual budget is relatively minuscule. They collected something like $61.6 million in 1994. When you think of the operating costs it is hardly anything. Sometimes I wish the Health Services could be like that. Unfortunately, we cannot enjoy those kinds of figures.

I believe if the Customs Department takes the suggestions outlined here in the Throne Speech, it will do even better, in particular the one on more inspections of containers. I believe there was such an increase in the collection of customs [duty] last year, most of it came from moneys that would have otherwise not been paid into Government. We know that there are these unscrupulous individuals who try their endeavour best to try and defraud Government, perhaps there are a few but we know from the Public Accounts Committee that individuals were proven to defraud Government of customs duty. I believe that some of these matters are still being addressed.

I believe that the Customs Officers in the department need to inspect more containers. It is amazing what will come to light. I believe they have a targeted figure of about 20% of the containers and now they are inspecting about 6% or 8%. They need to step up that activity and we will get more money that is due to us.

There is the Commercial Fraud Unit that is being developed and cooperation between the Drug Squad and the Customs Department, all of these things have got to be good for the department. I believe that the department will have the full support of the Government in improving their department. After all it is the main contributor to the revenue of the country.

The Speaker: Would this be a convenient time to take the suspension?

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: Thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.39 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.00 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: Madam Speaker, thank you.

Madam Speaker, our most important and vital resource, I believe, is our people—our human resources. In that regard I remember being told that human beings are KASH; where "K" is for knowledge, "A" is for attitude, "S" is for skill, and "H" is for habit. I believe that what we need to do throughout the civil service is to capitalise on those things. As the Governor pointed, much is planned to enhance the civil service and we look forward that not only will we have a good civil service, but we will have an excellent one.

Madam Speaker, many speakers before me debated the Chamber of Commerce survey. I have read it and I thought I would give the Chamber a call—actually I found it amusing—I called and the person who answered said: "Well don't you know why McKeeva got a low mark? It is because he talks too much, and you got a low mark because you do not talk enough." I have a feeling that maybe I should try and correct that.

Madam Speaker, this Government's policy has been to utilise members of the public. I mentioned the joint Private Sector Consultative Committee. We can also think of what is going on in the Ministry for Education. In the Ministry for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, the strategic planning involving so many persons from the community. You must get more valuable answers from many people rather than from the Minister himself, even the people working in his Ministry (such as was happening in the last regime).

Coming up with what should be done with the Health Services and the strategic planning is yielding excellent results. Some of us who may be a bit hasty may feel that it is time consuming. But we do not have to be in a hurry to get everything we want. What is important is that when we get it, it will last us for many years and it will be what we really need.

Now, if the people who answered the Chamber of Commerce [Questionnaire] felt the way they did, then it is my wholehearted opinion that they must be dissatisfied with themselves because the Government has been involving—and it has been the policy of the Government to involve people in the community. I understand that there were about 1.5% of the voting public responded to the Chamber's survey. Now that is a very small percentage and I do not believe that it is significant. Also, one individual, I understand, responded 20 times. So that would have certainly skewed their results also. I wonder why the Chamber did not put serial numbers on their questionnaires? But you would have expected from an organisation like the Chamber. Perhaps they did not think that was important.

I believe, like the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, that with as many people in their organisation they do not have a urinal to void in and the window to throw it out. That is their problem. They have to get involved in other peoples' business to satisfy their own egos. It is amazing that all of a sudden this is happening and we know who has joined the Chamber of Commerce recently. I believe that explains it all.

I have been concerned to some extent about the Pensions Board. I was reading here what the Governor had to say about the Board. I believe that the civil service started contributing to the Pension Fund in January 1990 until about December 1990. Civil servants were contributing 4% of their salary to the Fund. The Government decided to match it early in 1991 and it continued until the end of that year. The Pensions Board was formed and the Government transferred over $3.0 million to the fund in April of 1992.

Rightly so, the Board eventually wanted some kind of actuarial study done in order to find out the capability of the Fund, whether it would be able to meet its obligations in the future and when it could start to pay off people eligible for pension. We know the result of the actuarial study because it was tabled in this House.

The results of that study, done by Wyatt, showed that at the rate of contribution the Fund would not be able to begin making payments in the foreseeable future. Therefore, pensions would have to come out of the general revenue. It said that if it started to pay to those eligible for pension as of now, then the Fund would be exhausted in the 2004. That is not taking into account pay projections. But if it started to pay in the year 2010, the Fund would be exhausted in the year 2020. To me that is a precarious position, Madam Speaker.

What is even more significant is that the study showed that civil servants would have to pay 25% of their salaries if the Fund was going to be able to meet its obligations. To me that is very significant. It looks like a long time before we will be able to pay pensions and not pay it out of general revenue, unless something happens.

I looked at the review and I noticed the kinds of pensions civil servants would be getting. I refer to the Report. It says that if you make a monthly salary of $1,500.00 then your monthly pension would only be about $400.00. If you made $3,000.00 it would only be about $500.00 per month. If you made $5,000.00 per month you would get a $800 per month pension.

We know that these sums cannot really keep anyone, not now and certainly not in the future. Of course, pension as most of us know usually only subsidises one's cost of living. I personally believe that this amount is very small. I know the Board is a good one and they are very concerned themselves about the Pensions Fund because they are thinking of ways in which they can invest the fund to make money for its contributors. But more thought needs to go into this matter.

I have become very interested in it because I understand from the Honourable Minister responsible that he is strongly considering a national pension scheme. To me it is very needed, it is very necessary. But it is quite a plunge and it is going to take a lot to get it together. So a lot of thought has to go into it for it to work. We know that only Caymanians are eligible for pension, but the work force in Grand Cayman is certainly not 100% Caymanians. Therefore, quite a number of people do not contribute to pension. It is one thing to think about pension for the civil service, but for the whole country is another matter.

We also know that the United States is grappling with this problem at the moment. They have the problem of the baby-boomers retiring now and the baby-busters are coming along, and because they cannot really support the boomers because there is just not enough money in the coffers, so it is giving them quite a headache at the moment. Perhaps we should learn from them so that our system is better and so we do not have their problems come 2020.

I will go on to Tourism, Madam Speaker. I personally would like to take this opportunity to congratulate the Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning. The Minister is known to be a hard worker. He is an educated man and he has certainly done so much for tourism over the last two years that anyone who wants to be honest can say that the results are there and they speak for themselves. To me in some ways, he is like the stone the builder rejected that has now become the chief corner stone.

I have a great deal of respect for him. I cannot forget the year 1990 and what happened to him then. I have a great deal of confidence in him and I support his initiatives. I support what is happening in tourism, the massive external promotions.

Recently I was in Washington, D.C. and even there hundreds of miles away the concept of many people of Cayman being a number one destination; if you are going South of Miami, let it be Cayman. This is so different from some years ago when people were very wary of Cayman.

Efforts and incentives to equip and involve Caymanians in tourism, and the cooperation between the public and private sectors is highly commendable. He has also made tremendous attempts to improve the local product and even attempted to diversify the local product. I remember the presentation regarding Pedro Castle, we know about the Queen Elizabeth Park, that he supports and has been involved with it. Then he has a great interest in protecting the marine environment so that divers will still come to our shores and enjoy that activity.

I believe that despite what someone said about us having more expensive hotel accommodations, generally, it is prudent for us to watch the cost of accommodation to spend a holiday in Grand Cayman. I do not believe that just to have expensive rooms and expensive everything is the way we should go. I think there needs to be some moderation there. Of course it is important to have five-star hotels so in the event an individual wants to be accommodated there they have the choice. But we should certainly consider those people who want to come to our shores but cannot afford such facilities.

I also noticed efforts being made at the National Archives and the Museum, although that does not come directly under his Ministry. But it is the working together of all the Ministries that really matters in getting the job done. I believe that the Museum will be moving shortly to new premises. The Third Elected Member for George Town is very active on the Museum Board and does have a great interest there.

All the places of historic interest, I think what we should do is promote them as much as possible. The Minister has been making every effort to do this. When the results speak for themselves, I do not think one has to question that the method must be right.

The Planning Department has come under heavy criticism recently because of the Development Plan. But I daresay that it is better for us to have some sort of development plan and we have to update it and upgrade it, because to go on as we are it is going to retard us significantly. Perhaps what we need to do is get something in place that most of the people agree with. We will never please the environmentalists, yet we should take some of their suggestions into consideration. It is timely now to have an upgrade of the Development Plan.

I understand that the Cayman Turtle Farm has been financially successful again. They have also joined in the Pension Scheme. So workers there will be able to enjoy the benefits of a pension, likewise the Community College, and the Water Authority.

The Fire Services. This is a good service. They are usually very prompt and the 9-1-1 System will enhance the entire emergency system. It has the support of the entire Government and the public. To be able to trace where the call is coming from, even if the person fainted, etcetera [before giving all the information] such a service always save lives and it is worth every bit of the investment.

The Ministry of Health was taken over early in 1994, by the Honourable Anthony Eden. He has had a great job to perform, and in my opinion, he has done it ably. He always takes the way of consultation, he believes in strategic planning because he has seen already that it is yielding results and he knows when not to wait. I have been quite impressed by the work that he has done, assisted by his staff. And despite the usual criticism, mainly because of delays, I believe that we should all be very proud to walk into a well-run hospital as part of an excellent health service where lots of thoughts went into its planning.

I support the idea of having district clinics. It is better to bring Mohammed to the mountain, than the mountain to Mohammed. I believe it is important to have the district clinics where people have easy and quick access to them where it will prevent the overcrowding that sometimes occurs at the central facility in George Town. What we will see is that some of the primary care will be given in the district clinics that otherwise comes to the George Town Hospital. I believe that with the upgrade of some of the clinics even secondary care can be given.

The facility being built in Bodden Town could easily treat an asthmatic for instance, with a drip with the presence of a doctor, and perhaps the asthma attack can be overcome and the individual need not go the George Town Hospital for further care, and could be sent home.

In medicine the way forward now is ambulatory care. We do not believe in hospitalisation the way our predecessors did. If a case can be treated on an outpatient basis, it is the best way to go. It is most economical, the person is less exposed to infection, and there are myriad of reasons why it is more desirable to treat a person on an outpatient basis.

There are plans as outlined here to have the district clinic in West Bay upgraded. That will be larger I am sure than the Bodden Town one with more capability. I believe plans are afoot to get one in East End, and also North Side.

A Government that takes the interest of its people at heart [to provide services such as this] I think the public need not worry about such a government.

Much has been said about the hospital in the past regarding its inadequacies. But I would like to state categorically that the inadequacies at the hospital have more to do with the physical structure. Those cases that are usually treated are quite often treated better than abroad. At least we do not have the wrong leg being taking off, the wrong breast being taken off, and all kinds of mistakes being made because people do get personalised attention and there are a caring set of people overall. There are some bad apples, and if I was in charge, I would get rid off them right away and the problem would be easily solved. Overall, we have an excellent health service for the size of the Island.

Caymanians are exposed to North America very early in our lives. We tend to compare everything with North America. Yes, the facility is inadequate. But a lot of excellent work has been done there and it has saved many lives. Now that we have the Honourable Minister for Health in charge, I feel confident that we will get all the changes we need there.

I have assisted the Minister on a number of efforts. We have an extremely good relationship and he never fails to call me whenever he wants to. I know for sure that the public does prefer a health service that I have something to do with more than the previous Minister for Health. Surely, we must end up with a much better facility even if I touch it with one of my fingers.

I have heard the mission statement of the new Health Services, the one the Honourable Minister is going to enact, the one that will come on line with the help of all of us here in the Government and those people in the community who mean us well. "The mission of the Cayman Islands Health Services, the exemplary provider of comprehensive health care to the economic jewel of the Caribbean is to ensure the wellness of our people through a dynamic community base health system characterised by visionary leadership, compassionate professionals, technologically advance central support, and collaboration with local and overseas providers." That is exactly what we hope to attain, and what we will attain because that is what we need.

One thing that I would like to point out here is that we can have the best facility in the world, but unless we have compassionate professionals who really care for their patients it will be no better. I am glad that we have many of them in our health service and as we all work together, we will get the health service that we deserve.

I think in the interest of time, I shall not repeat anything the Minister has said. He outlined plans for the new hospital on the present site. It will be a two storey building for the most part it will be new and it will be...I can almost see it, one of the most advanced hospitals in this part of the Western Hemisphere. That is the way I see it, Madam Speaker. It is going to be a facility that we are all going to be extremely proud of.

We will continue to need to send some of our patients abroad for tertiary care; advance life support. We will have to send less of our patients abroad for diagnoses of various complicated illnesses.

The hospital will mean that the overseas medical bill proportionally should be less. One of the things we set out to achieve is that we get a hospital with greater capability than the one we now have. Not to do that would defeat the purpose. What we will have is a hospital that will make it unnecessary for many people to go abroad, because there will be more equipment there to diagnose complicated problems and many times that is why some of our people have to go abroad, because we need to diagnose their problems in order to treat them. Those facilities, by and large, will be provided and as a result much of the care will be given here that would otherwise be given abroad.

Government has been greatly concerned about the overseas tertiary [health care] bill and it is important to say that the previous health insurance plan did not cover overseas medical care in anyway. I believe it is the intention of this Government to come up with a national health insurance plan that will in fact cover some, if not all, some of the costs of overseas medical care. That is what we are striving for and the Honourable Minister, I am sure, will be reporting to the public and to the House the progress that he is making.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Honourable Member it is now 4.30 PM. Would you be finished shortly, or—

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: No, Madam Speaker. I have quite a bit more to say.

The Speaker: May I ask for the motion for the adjournment? The Honourable Minister to Tourism, Environment and Planning—Leader of Government Business.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move the adjournment of this honourable House until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that the House do now adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

AT 4.32 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 23 MARCH 1995.

THURSDAY
23 MARCH, 1995
10.05 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Third Official Member to say Prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question 67 stands in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 67

No. 67: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what is the present staff complement of doctors and nurses at the George Town and Faith Hospitals, full time and part time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The following information is provided as at 17 February 1995. The part-time doctors and nurses are generally utilised to cover vacancies, sick, maternity, and vacation leave. In addition, part-time nursing staff are used to cover times when there is a high patient load, and part-time doctors are used to assist with on-call duties.

Doctors: George Town Hospital: Full-time 23 (includes 2 Dental Officers, 1 Medical Officer of Health and 1 District Medical Officer); Part-time 7; Visiting Specialists 2; (includes monthly visit of 1 Specialist from Baptist Hospital). Faith Hospital: Full-time 2; Part-time 1.

Nurses: The present nursing complement is as follows: George Town Hospital: Full-time 93 (includes 8 Supervisors); Part-time 14 (includes 1 at Tent City). Faith Hospital: Full-time 11 (includes 1 Supervisor); Part-time 3. Community Health Nurses—Grand Cayman: Full-time 17 (includes 1 Supervisor). Community Health Nurses—Cayman Brac: Full-time 1.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say if the part-time doctors and nurses are under any particular contractual agreement with Government? What are the terms and conditions of their service?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, I will undertake to supply the answer in writing to the Honourable Member, as the Director for the Health Services was unavailable this morning. I think he is off the Island.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wonder if the Honourable Minister could tell us of the 23 full-time doctors at the George Town Hospital how many are assigned on schedule, let us say from five o'clock AM until five o'clock the next morning so that there is 24-hour service available?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, to the best of my knowledge there is one doctor there at all times in the case of emergency. If it is deemed that more doctors are needed, he has the authority to call in other health assistance, which has happened on a number of occasions.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: As a follow-up to the last supplementary, are those full-time and part-time doctors deployed in a manner where there is full coverage both for the hospital casualty and otherwise?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker, they are supposed to be deployed. As I have said, depending on the necessity in the night when it becomes busier—especially when there has been an accident. The person on duty calls for assistance if it is needed.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Is there in place communication systems or facilities where doctors can be reached easily in the case of emergencies such as the one the Honourable Minister referred to?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Yes, all the doctors have beepers and can be contacted through this method.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 68, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 68

No. 68: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation how many full-time and part-time doctors practise in the Cayman Islands, showing a breakdown by nationality, private and public sector.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: In the private sector there are resident and visiting doctors. It is not a requirement for the doctors to advise the Government about the hours of their practice. The hours of their work probably depends upon the workload, hence it is difficult to say how many resident doctors are practising full-time or part-time. Eight of the private doctors do provide part-time cover in the public sector from time to time.

*There are a total of 23 visiting doctors who are fully registered with the Health Practitioners' Board. Five of them have not yet practised in the Cayman Islands.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Honourable Minister say if the doctors here are under any form of governmental regulation in terms of their practice (other than what might be initially applied) under the Health Practitioners Law when they are registered, approved or licensed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Madam Speaker, there is no other regulation by the Health Practitioners' Board.

This is one reason why I mentioned in the House, I think yesterday, that we plan to look at the revision of the Health Practitioners Law toward this end.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Minister say under what conditions do the visiting doctors work?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, they are required to be registered first with the Health Practitioners' Board and then apply for a work permit.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Am I to understand that they have to be associated to doctors resident practising in the Cayman Islands? Or does the registration with the Medical Association allow them to come in and work independent of doctors practising in the Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, it is not required, but it is suggested that it be done.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: There had been a call to limit the number of doctors in the Cayman Islands in recent times. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could say if in the records of the Medical Practitioners' Board or the Ministry, there is any indication of the various specialisation among doctors on the list (which is quite large I would say)?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Madam Speaker. This has been put together by the CIMDS (Cayman Islands Medical and Dental Society) and also by the Health Practitioners' Board of people practising here.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I noticed that there are two vacant posts. If those two vacant posts are in OB/Gynaecology, I wonder if the Honourable Minister could give an undertaking to consider a lady doctor for such a post and, if a vacancy becomes available in OB/Gynaecology, that a lady be given first priority. A lot of constituents complained about this. They would like to have a lady gynaecologist at the Hospital.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, the appointment of these people is guided by the advice from the Health Services. The two vacancies are: one for the Chief of Medical Staff (soon to be named Chief Medical Officer), which we hope to fill by July of this year, and the other vacancy is for a Casualty Officer.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: Madam Speaker, I too noticed that there are two vacant posts. Bearing in mind there are 52 beds at the George Town Hospital and 8 beds at the extended Care Unit, I would like to ask the Honourable Minister if there are any plans in place to reduce the number of doctors considering the workload, which seems to be quite significant for the amount of doctors when we consider the number of patients who attend the outpatient unit, the inpatient unit and who service district clinics.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, as we go into the hospital situation through strategic planning from the inspection that was done and as results keep coming in, we will act according to what is needed by the medical professionals.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: Madam Speaker, I would like to also ask the Honourable Minister if there is a mechanism in place to ensure that patients of visiting specialists get the necessary follow-up care when the specialists leave the Island. Most of these visiting specialists stay for no longer than about four or five days.

The Speaker: That is not part of the original question, therefore, it cannot be allowed at this time.

The next question is No. 69, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 69

No. 69: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what is the estimated cost of demolishing the present Mosquito Research and Control Unit Building, removing the debris and preparing the ground for the site of the proposed George Town Hospital.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The estimated cost of demolishing the present Mosquito Research and Control Unit (MRCU) building, moving the debris, and preparing the ground for the site of the new hospital is $25,000.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Minister say from what source the estimate for this work came?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, this came from the Master Planning Study done last year by the consultants.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, can the Honourable Minister say how the cost of $25,000 for preparing this site—which the Government already owns—compares with the purchase of a similar amount of land in the same area?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, as a lay person, I think it would be almost minuscule if we had to buy this amount of land in the proximity of George Town.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Could the Honourable Minister say when this particular demolition is estimated to take place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, as soon as the MRCU moves into its new premises on North Sound Way, which is scheduled to take place shortly.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could explain how much it cost to prepare the site for the proposed Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital. Would the Minister have those figures so that we may compare them to the new hospital on the existing site?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, I do not have those figures on hand. But I know the fill alone was $1.2 million or $1.3 million. I could undertake to supply the answer later on.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Minister give any idea of the difference in square footage between the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital and that of the MRCU site?

The Speaker: I do not know if the Honourable Minister would have that information available.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Madam Speaker, but I could check and have it passed on to the Honourable Member.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The next question is No. 70, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 70

Deferred

No. 70: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture to provide the numbers, by district, of those persons who received help through the Social Services Department to effect home repairs.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I am going to ask the House to defer question No. 70. The answer is not yet finalised.

The Speaker: The question is that the reply to question No. 70 be deferred to another sitting. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The answering of question No. 70 is accordingly deferred.

AGREED: QUESTION NO. 70 DEFERRED.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 71, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 71

No. 71: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture what is the projected cost to the Government of hosting the CARIFTA Games.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the projected cost to Government to host the CARIFTA Games will be as follows:

Grant to CIAAA	CI$20,000.00
Equipment	CI$51,302.63
Total:	CI$71,302.63

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. For clarification, can the Honourable Minister state or define what is meant by "equipment"?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, equipment is the equipment the athletes would be using during the games—long jump boards and hurdles, etcetera.

The Speaker: The next question is No. 72, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 72

No. 72: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture to provide the list of sports stores invited to tender for the supply of equipment for the CARIFTA Games.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The list of sports stores invited to tender for the supply of equipment for the CARIFTA Games is as follows:

1. Sports Headquarters, Grand Cayman, Cayman Islands.
2. UCS, Orangeburg, New York, United States of America.
3. Sportsland Limited, Grand Cayman, Cayman

Islands.

4. Aluminium Athletic Equipment, West Conshohocken, Pennsylvania, United States of America.

5. M-F Athletic Company, Cranston, Rhode Island, United States of America.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister state which of the company was the successful bidder?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I am told that the one selected is the second company in the answer—UCS, Orangeburg, New York, United States of America.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Minister say if the extent of the total money spent was the figure given under equipment in the answer to the previous question? Or were there additional moneys expended?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I am told that it was a little bit higher, because the amount did not only pertain to equipment but also to the facility—the George Town Sports Centre.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. May I request that the Honourable Minister provide the figures when they are available to the honourable House?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Which figure is he talking about, Madam Speaker?

I will give the House some other supplementary information. Due to the urgency noted by the Cayman Islands Amateur Athletic Association for the track and field event equipment, invitations to tenders were disbursed on February 1, 1995, for bids to return on February 6, 1995.

A local company voiced dissatisfaction about the short period of time given for the return of tenders. So, on 7 February, the Public Works Department extended the return of bids to February 16, 1995 on the authorisation of the accounting officers and the permanent secretary in the ministry.

When the bids were returned, two companies were short listed—one local and one overseas. Sportlands Limited bid US$73,437.60—7.5% higher. This tender was requested to quote alternatives to five items, which the CARIFTA Organising Committee had found due.

UCS bid US$68,347.62. Sportlands Limited submitted a revised tender with the alternatives quoting identical equipment for those quoted by the lowest tender but at an increased price of US$90,878.79 or CI$74,520.61. This represented an increase of 23.74% above their previous tender, and is 33% or US$22,531.17 above the lowest tender.

Please note, that all tenders quoted included freight and duty charges.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Honourable Member say if the successful bidder has an agent or representative in these Islands? And what arrangements are in place to cover warranty on any equipment purchased?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I understand that there are no local suppliers representing UCS. When the tenders were prepared by the Public Works Department and sent out, they were sent to people whom they have dealings with.

As for warranty, that would exist like all the other equipment that the Public Works Department purchases overseas.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for today. Statement by the Honourable Third Official Member.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

REPORT ON THE CAYMAN ISLANDS OVERSEAS CONFERENCES

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, this statement is in connection with the recent overseas conferences hosted by the Government.

Emanating from discussions of the Private Sector Consultative Committee, it was deemed prudent for the Cayman Islands Government to simultaneously strengthen and rationalise all ad hoc promotional efforts for the financial industry of the Cayman Islands. Several initiatives were undertaken to this end. The first of these was the creation of a post within the Portfolio of Finance and Development responsible for the co-ordination of all related marketing and promotional activities. Since then, efforts have been made by the Portfolio of Finance and Development to fine-tune and focus advertising expenditure.

From the appointment of the Co-ordinator of Marketing and Promotions in August 1994, to the end of January 1995—six short months of effort—several significant achievements have resulted. These include the production of a 32-page supplement circulated in Business Age—Asian, American and European editions. Additionally, the Cayman Islands now has time-phased placement of approximately 40 adverts (with complementing editorials in most instances) in selected industry publications. Also important, proper emphasis has been placed on providing a timely response to all resulting inquiries.

To adequately respond to international inquiries, one publication providing comprehensive coverage of all facets of the financial industry was commissioned and co-ordinated by the Portfolio of Finance and Development. This publication, entitled The Guide to Financial Services in the Cayman Islands became available in January of this year. Madam Speaker, the reception to the guide has been very positive and we may have to go back to press for reprints before the end of this year. It is available to all Members of this honourable House, and I encourage each and every one to review it. I am sure everyone will share the same pride in this publication that I have.

Madam Speaker, the most significant of all promotional activities undertaken were three one-day conferences recently completed in New York, London and Hong Kong. The launch of the Guide to Financial Services corresponded well with the staging of these three conferences. The Guide was accordingly presented to every conference delegate and is certain to be an excellent reference source.

The total attendance at the conferences exceeded our expectations of 240 to 300 delegates, reaching a figure of over 500. The exercise is sure to bear fruit in the months to come and the value of the information exchanged there will come in many forms.

Although there were some differences between the conferences both in terms of the presentations and also in terms of the numbers, they were all deemed extremely successful. The London venue proved to attract the greatest number, but the Hong Kong venue generated more inquiries, indicating a greater information void on the Cayman Islands in that region.

These conferences strongly showcased two of the cornerstones of the financial industry in the Cayman Islands—the availability of a large pool of highly experienced professionals, and the harmonious, high-calibre working relationship between the Cayman Islands Government and the local financial industry.

A special feature of these conferences was formal endorsements from objective speakers from each respective region. Perhaps the most distinguished of these was the Honourable Anthony Baldry, Member of Parliament in the United Kingdom. Mr. Baldry spoke extremely favourably of the Cayman Islands, explicitly emphasising the well-regulated financial industry.

In New York, Mr. Joseph Tompkins, of Sidley and Austin, and Mr. Tony Artabane, of Brown and Wood, spoke on the benefits of the Cayman Islands as an International Financial Centre. They referred to particular examples and structures used by their respective firms relating to the Cayman Islands financial services. Mr. Artabane shared several comparative advantages of transacting business in the Cayman Islands versus some of the other jurisdictions.

Hong Kong should be recognised as an area where an endorsement, particularly by a respected resident, is of heightened importance. The Cayman Islands here received such from Mr. Paul Mack of PriceWaterhouse and Company.

In summary, these endorsements lent valuable weight and credence to the message conveyed about the Cayman Islands through their objectivity.

Madam Speaker, it is clear then, that these conferences were a success in all respects. In this respect we have the delivery of concise and accurate information; a strong assertion of the credibility and strict regulation of the Cayman Islands financial industry; and the demonstration of the excellent working relationship between the private sector and Government of the Cayman Islands.

Speaking of this relationship, I would like to take this opportunity to thank publicly the Members of the Private Sector Consultative Committee for their input and support in connection with the Conferences; the Government Ministers who attended, to such valuable effect; His Excellency the Governor and all the other distinguished speakers for well researched and excellently delivered conference papers; Mr. Mike Austin, who co-chaired the conferences with me, and who made himself available as a substitute speaker; and finally to the Coordinator of Marketing and Promotions, Mr. Lyndon Martin, who, together with IBC (International Business Communications), paid meticulous and expert attention to the myriad of organisational details.

I would like to assure this honourable House that the allocated budget for advertising and promotion is targeted with great care, and with due regard to value for money. This is in recognition that the demands for promoting this sector of our economy will always exceed the resources available.

It is imperative that we consider the evolution of our financial industry against the backdrop of developments occurring within this sector in other jurisdictions. In this sector of our economy, we have enjoyed tremendous success and unparalleled growth over the past 30 years to become one of the leading international financial centres. We should, however, never attempt to take our success for granted or even to believe that if we cease to be vigilant in this area that the same level of success will continue.

Since the hosting of the overseas conferences, several articles have appeared in the local press questioning the cost of these conferences. The question that would be most relevant to ask is not necessarily how much we will gain by incurring this cost, but how much we are likely to lose by not hosting such conferences.

Today, Madam Speaker, practically every country in the region, together with many in Europe, Asia and Africa, is now developing its own economy as an international financial centre. Everywhere we turn, we find our legislation being copied and our infrastructure emulated. In light of such relentless competition, I could never in all honesty ever suggest that it could be advantageous to these Islands for us to countenance complacency in such a dynamic area as our financial industry, and certainly not as a means of abating the ongoing economic development of these Islands. To do so would amount to committing ourselves to a policy of destroying the accomplishments that successive Governments have nurtured and built over the past 30 years.

There is one significant area that remains to be addressed as a means of further enhancing our recognition as a leading financial centre, and that is the introduction of a stock exchange facility. Work is currently underway in this area, and it is hoped that the enabling legislation to make this further development a reality will be brought to this honourable House during the third session in September of this year.

Madam Speaker, a few other comments: A meeting of a sub-committee, chaired by the Financial Secretary, will be held this afternoon commencing at 4.30 PM to draft the terms of reference for the recruitment of a Project Manager to guide the development of our stock exchange. The task ahead in bringing this activity to fruition will be very demanding and could require that meetings be held fortnightly at a minimum. Whilst this will inevitably prove to be quite a daunting experience for the committee members in particular, the Government and I are optimistic that the target date of bringing this project to fruition by 1 September will be met.

At a meeting of the Consultative Committee held yesterday, a decision was taken that the overseas promotional conferences, such as those held recently, should be repeated every two years. It was therefore agreed that the next series of conferences will be held in February of 1997. Arrangements for the hosting of these conferences at venues to be agreed upon in the United States, Canada, the United Kingdom, and Asia, and will commence towards the latter part of the year.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Continuation of the debate on the 1995 Throne Speech. The Second Elected Member for George Town.

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E.
J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I was dealing with the Ministry for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation when we adjourned yesterday. I would like to point out that had this Government continued with the plans of the previous Government we would have saddled ourselves with an onerous debt. Significantly, Government did not have the money at the time, and it would have had to be borrowed. If we were lucky, we would have ended up spending $16.0 million on the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital and $10.0 million on the renovation of the present George Town Hospital. What is more significant is the cost of running these two institutions, which would have been prohibitive.

Recently I was at a meeting where the Chief Executive Officer of the Miami Heart Institute was present. He mentioned how the Gunby Health Care Corporation had purchased the Miami Heart Institute and the St. Francis Hospital, and tried to run the two hospitals as a unit. They are separated by a mile. In the first year of operation they lost $7.0 million forcing them to close the St. Francis Hospital. When they put all their energy in running the Miami Heart Institute, they ended up with a profit at the end of the year of $7.0 million.

It had been said by many that the most defective parts of the plan by the previous Government was in trying to operate two hospitals—pushing the split site idea. There are many reasons why this is cost prohibitive: the duplication of staff, the duplication of facilities, and the duplication of services.

The Governor mentioned that there will be a review of the Health Practitioners Law, 1974. I have had the privilege of meeting with the Legal Department and giving my input, as did many other people in the health service. There is no doubt that it is timely to review the Health Practitioners Law, which has served us since 1974.

When this Law was enacted there were probably no more than six or seven doctors on the Island, and probably no more than 40 nurses. The Law covered all health professionals including auxiliaries. Times have changed and there are many more health professionals on the Islands where specialisation has taken off here as in many other places. One of the problems that has arisen is quite often, because of the member's profession and background, it is extremely difficult to deal with the various health professionals—dentists, doctors, physiotherapist, pharmacist, etcetera. Although the Health Practitioners' Board has the ability to co-opt various individuals to the Board, it is thought that because of the number of persons in the medical profession it is much better to have a general Medical and Dental Council established, a Nursing Council, and an Allied Profession Council.

The function of the Board is to register and discipline health professionals. If these three councils are established, they will be able to perform far more effectively. I am sure the persons on those respective Boards will be a lot more familiar with the profession that will be registered.

The Law also has no teeth at the moment. It is important during the review that [some teeth] be put into the Law. For instance, at the moment if someone is summoned to the Health Practitioners' Board, he need not appear unless he is charged. Quite often persons who are asked to come before the Board simply ignore the chairman of the Board, and that needs changing.

The Board is often asked to give opinions on various applications. This is strictly not a function of the Board as outlined in the Law. But it has been serving this function and has been of great help to the Ministry of Health. This could be incorporated into the drafting of the new Law. I believe too that the new Board should have something to do with the monitoring of the standard of health care that is provided on the Island. With the drafting of the new law, it will be given this function and the powers to do so.

The Health Services Authority was established in 1991. I believe in 1992 it continued to function, and in 1993 a Bill was brought to this House for the [dissolution of the Health Services Authority] effective 1 January 1993. The experience gained showed that the Health Services Authority was poorly set up. It was not functioning properly and the consultants that were employed to review the services were not even given terms of reference. They were over paid. The Project Manager who oversaw the construction of the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital was making much more than the Governor—over $100,000 per annum, with other benefits. It was not functioning in the best interest of the Health Services Authority and certainly not in the best interest of the people of the Cayman Islands.

We decided that we would not pay for the folly of the Health Services Authority and to quit while we were ahead. I am sure that this was a wise decision. If we had continued on the track of the last Government, at this point in time we would certainly have had a loan in excess of $30 million to pay off. The recurrent expenditure would have been too great a burden for this little Island to bear.

In 1991, the Health Services Authority cost the Government approximately $12 million to operate, and in 1992 it cost approximately $17 million. I am taking this from the Revised Estimates. This is when the Health Services Authority was supposed to be doing a good job. There was an immediate increase of over $4 million in running the Health Services Authority. In 1993, when it continued to function, the cost was in the region of $18 million. So we could have never called that an efficient Board.

After it was dissolved, the estimate showed that the cost of running the Health Services Authority in 1994 was in the region of approximately $16 million. Therefore we have gained financially and we do not have a debt to pay off.

It is true that there are persons who would have liked to be treated in a more aesthetic building. But, as a person who works in the health services, I can assure the public that no one has suffered. They have gotten the medical care they would have gotten had there been a nice building.

I would like to point out that had those plans been enacted, we would still not be any better off as far as capability is concerned. We would still have to refer patients to the United States of America or elsewhere for treatment. With the new plans, we will have more capability in the area of diagnosis, particularly, and many of the referrals will not have to be made. Not only will we have a modern well-equipped building, we will also have extremely improved service.

In [making] plans for the health services one needs to bear in mind that it is estimated that approximately 60% of the patients who utilise the George Town Hospital are non-paying patients. We know those patients include civil servants and their dependants, children below school-leaving age, and a host of others such as patients suffering from AIDS, malaria, infectious diseases, and members of the Veterans' Association, etcetera. Therefore, for the institution to break even it will mean that significant amounts of money will have to be paid by the Government if we keep our policies in place.

A meagre 40%, or even less is supposed to pay . . . and we know there have been significant problems even in collecting bills. Unfortunately, the computer system that was put in place by the last Government has not yielded the results we thought it would. It has been just an expense in the main. People are still not paying their hospital bills.

The hospital is said to have collected less than $4.8 million during 1994, and in 1993, it was less than $2 million. As we go back in time it was even less than that.

The Government has had to take money from the General Revenue to subsidise health care on the Island. This leads me to discuss health insurance and the necessity for having health insurance, and some of the things Government might care to look at in having an efficient health service.

For a health service to be effective, it has to be universal and it should cover everyone in the country. It needs to be affordable, and it has to be comprehensive covering as many conditions as possible. It needs to be transferable in the event someone loses his job or is transferred to another job so he will not lose his coverage. It needs to be portable so that wherever the person needing medical attention is he can get the benefits. These are just few of the things that the new health insurance will have to encompass.

I also feel that the time has come where the Government should look for group health insurance for civil servants taking into considering the salaries and wages of civil servants. I see no reason why they should not be treated in a similar way as those who work in the private sector. That policy will have to be looked at and the pros and cons debated.

It is thought that the new health insurance that will be enacted should also cover, if not all, certainly a portion of overseas medical expenses. I believe the group of people (the Honorable Ministers put together) is looking very keenly on that aspect and trying to include it. The actuaries will have their say.

One of the tasks the Minister gave the Health Service has not been completed, that is, pricing every service that is done in the Hospital. Before the actuaries can really do their work, that job will have to be completed. I do not think it is as onerous a task as it is being made out to be, and those who work in the department should be able to give the Minister an answer within a short period of time.

One of the factors that will affect the cost of medical care in the Cayman Islands is the recent hike in malpractice fees that have to be paid by all practitioners. We have to have medical malpractice coverage and that has been increased 22-fold, by and large, over the last year. I used to pay in the region of £ 850 Sterling to the Medical Defence Union per year. As of next year, I will have to pay £ 22,500 Sterling. That increase is a bit overwhelming when we think about the annual revenue of doctors on the Island. That too will have to be dealt with.

One has to wonder if we could not get medical malpractice insurance from elsewhere than the United Kingdom. Up until now, the United Kingdom has offered the most reasonable malpractice insurance. But, because of cases that have gone to court in this jurisdiction and other Caribbean jurisdictions where huge sums have been paid out, they had no other options (according to management of the Medical Defence Union and the Medical Protection Society) but to increase the insurance fees to what seems exorbitant to most of us.

One thing that has always worked well is the co-operation between private health practitioners and the Government's health practitioners. Private practitioners have pledged to assist wherever possible. We have situations where one doctor is not sufficient to cover a service, but two doctors are too many. Therefore, if there is already a person who specialises in that service in the community who is willing to assist on a part-time basis at the Hospital it saves Government some money. The private sector health practitioners have been very good in this respect and often fill in to allow Government doctors to go on holiday and to help cover night duties. We can only hope that this continues.

We need to have co-operation between these two sectors. As a matter of fact, this is exactly what the Strategic Planning team has to deal with. How else can we really have a collaboration between the private and public health professionals in order to achieve what we need to achieve in the Cayman Islands?

I feel that there should be medical standards set in the community to ensure that the public gets high standard of medical care. Perhaps a board or a council could have this function of inspecting private and government medical facilities.

I noticed that recently the Minister has decided to assist the Canaan Land Development Home and donated $40,000 to the organisation. I believe and certainly trust that this is money well donated and that the project will soon be completed. This, along with the Rehabilitation Centre in Breakers, should go a long way in helping persons who are addicted to drugs.

I agree with those people who feel that there should be halfway houses set up to intervene between those people who are being treated or hospitalised at the facility and when they are discharged into the general society. This is found to be of great help in all countries. It prepares people to be integrated back into the society and their various jobs.

I feel that the Health Services has a good man at the top. He believes in listening to people who are involved in health and those who have to use the health care facilities. He supports strategic planning where so many people are involved in health planning and, as a result of the strategic planning, we will find out what people really want in the Health Services. I believe that taking this approach we will have a peoples' health service. I do not believe that there is a better way in going about the whole thing.

The Honourable Minister is quick to ask for assistance when he needs it. He is capable, competent, and has the personality to work with people in the health profession.

The outpatient service and the emergency service at the George Town Hospital have seen a significant increase in patient load. We find that many persons go for treatment at the emergency ward after 5 o'clock in the evening. These persons are not really emergency cases. They could easily be dealt with by a doctor working in an ordinary clinic during the day. Many of the doctors who work in the emergency ward feel that there should be some sort of clinic to take care of the need of this set of people who come with their children with colds, and minor illnesses when they get off from work. It tends to clutter the emergency ward and prevent some of the sicker people from getting the attention that is needed. I believe that is being taken into hand.

There are, in my opinion, quite a sufficient number of health professionals at the George Town Hospital. I believe that with proper deployment all those functions can be served. One of the doctors who works in the emergency ward said, "Yes, we may have the doctors, but we have nowhere to do the clinics." Personally, I do not accept that because most of the rooms in the outpatient ward are not utilised at night.

I believe the Honourable Minister will be listening to all their suggestions, complaints, and eventually will instruct them correctly on how those things can work.

Much has been done in the field of development in the community. I would like to congratulate the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture for the upgrading of the Sports Complex behind the Middle School. I believe it will be ready for the CARIFTA Games. I believe that once completed that will serve us for many years to come and I am very happy to see the emphasis that he placed on sports.

We know that sports are very important for our young people and for everyone if we are going to maintain good health. It also has a direct and indirect effect on the number of crimes being committed and we have found that juvenile crimes are definitely on the decrease since there are so many sporting activities now in Grand Cayman.

With the rapid development in the Cayman Islands, families have come under great stress and the Honourable Minister is trying to provide programmes; he is trying his endeavour best to make sure that young peoples' needs are being taken care of.

The Young Parents Programme has got to be complimented. There are a significant number of persons using it and with coaxing maybe young fathers also will begin to attend. Who knows? It could bring together people who would otherwise drift apart. As a result we can have stable family units.

There is more than the usual amount of stress here in the Cayman Islands as a result of some of the same development that we have been talking about. Some of our people find it difficult to keep up and there are some that feel they are being left behind. But with the assistance of the Government and the strides that are being made in this particular Ministry, it is my full conviction that many of these things will go away.

One has to begin somewhere, and the Honourable Minister has begun on many fronts. I certainly wish him well as he continues to steer his Ministry.

Now with regard to the planned revision of the Labour Law, I believe that more emphasis should be placed on the employers' rights. I think there is a tendency to put perhaps too much emphasis on the employees' rights. I know that the majority of our voters are employees, but in order to develop the country in the way it needs to be developed, and in the long run for these same employees to benefit, it is in our best interest also to consider employers' rights.

I am happy to hear that there will be severance pay, even more severance pay for people who are fired or forced out of their jobs. I am very happy to hear that. Personally, I cannot agree with too much rest period while at work or anything that will detract from one's performance for the length of time that they are supposed to perform. So this is one of the complaints that many employers have as we try to amend and upgrade the Labour Law. We have to ensure that employers get fair treatment.

The truth is, money talks; and people with money can invest wherever they want to. One looks at the best place to invest and we want to make sure that we get our fair share.

The Minimum Wage Advisory Committee has been appointed and I am certainly looking to see what they come up with. I have mixed feelings about the whole subject and I care not to go into it at this point in time.

One of the things that this Government has done is to try to encourage the local banks to invest in the country's future. Previous Governments tended to be worried and when they could get money for housing [projects], they wondered what next to tax in order to get money for those sort of projects. This Government evidently has a new policy that I think is highly commendable.

There is more than $411 billion dollars flowing through these Islands per year. The banks are willing to invest in the country's future if there is some guarantee in place. I refer particularly to the Government Guaranteed Students Loan Scheme and also the Low Income Housing Scheme.

In about ten years, the Housing Development Corporation only helped a little over 100 people. In the last six to seven months, 30 people have been helped by the Government guaranteed Low Income Housing Scheme. That is highly significant.

The same thing can be said about the Government Guaranteed Students Loan Scheme. I believe we will see that the scheme will perform satisfactorily and this new policy should be applied in some other areas. It is certainly a new one and a good one.

The Water Authority has had a lot of problems in the recent past with the former Head of the Water Authority, Mr. Beswick. Many feel that he should be in jail and I have heard it remarked that he should be. It had been found out that he did not pay for water he should have paid for, and also one staff member's mother did not pay water bills. It is said also that the previous Member for Communication and Works, Mr. Linford Pierson, somehow wiggled out from paying $1,800 for his water bill. These kinds of persons evidently should not even be in Parliament. We certainly do not want to see a repeat of these sorts of cases ever again.

The Water Authority will embark on quite an extensive expansion scheme. I believe that it is planned to eventually get water to all persons living on the Island, including people in the eastern districts. It is a pity that the Water Authority has had the problems it has had, but I think it has straightened out some of those problems and with the good stewardship of the Honourable Minister, I believe it will do much better. We certainly trust so.

I am particularly interested in our National Archives. I was there at the opening ceremony and it was quite an impressive affair. I believe that it will go a long way in promoting our culture and remind us of where we are coming from. Most of us are interested in having some records kept of our history. Researchers and students can access the National Archives. It has got to be a good thing for the Islands.

As I said yesterday, tourists too will find the National Archives very interesting. It is a pity that more Caymanians are not involved in the National Archives but we certainly hope that they will be attracted in the near future.

We are indeed a very fortunate country when we consider our size and the many accomplishments that we have made. We have a standard of living that is second to none in the Caribbean, for that matter, perhaps the world. We have a good telecommunications system and an extremely good electricity supply. We have two International Airports, and we have our own airline. There are so many things that such a small country is able to main and we are indeed fortunate.

The Cayman National Cultural Foundation (CNCF) put on the Carib Art Exhibition recently, which was very successful. We recognised the fact that our local artists have great potential and I believe that the CNCF should be more involved in promoting our local artists and their creativity.

We have creativity in Grand Cayman, and usually what comes from ourselves is what the country enjoys. I have noticed for instance various plays from books that have been written. It is certainly well absorbed and well digested by the Caymanian public when they are written by Caymanians themselves. The CNCF should try and make a greater effort to promote Caymanian artists. Of course, they are mixing with other cultures, and that too has its place, but it can bear fruit.

Like many others, I feel that we sometimes get inundated with cultures from outside of these Islands. Unfortunately, we adopt some of the negatives instead of the positives from the respective cultures. I believe one of thing that lends to this is the mass media, particularly television and radio. We are a product of what we hear and see and every attempt should be made to make sure there are healthy programmes on the television stations and also on the radio stations.

I noticed under Capital Works Programme that the Ministry of Education and Aviation completed the George Hicks High School in 1994 in a record time of 19 weeks, which was done within the initial projected cost. This Ministry has been very well run. Everyone knows that the Honourable Minister is extremely capable. He got into the middle of problems when he took over the Ministry; the education system was in turmoil. It was said that he was going to interfere until perhaps havoc was created and that hardly any student would pass the CXC Examinations.

We saw something else happen. I think that they were the best results in the Caribbean. The Minister had to rectify what was going on, and he is getting the facility built for the students and is listening to the public. I have been to many meetings that he has had at the John Gray High School and he listens to the parents, the teachers and also the students

The story of Cayman Airways is nothing short of a miracle in my book. So many people have touched on that. I will not waste the time of the House to deal with it. But as I have said, it is nothing short of a miracle. I am very proud of Cayman Airways. Residents get different treatment when we travel on our local airline than on other carriers. It is certainly a good feeling to know that we can boast of our own airline and that it is no longer incurring such deficits. It is even making an operating profit after subsidy.

It is very essential that we keep our airline to maintain the length between here, North America, perhaps Jamaica. We know what happened in Bermuda when everyone pulled out. I think that the mission of the airline should be just that: To maintain a link between Grand Cayman and the outside world. Not so far off as New York, London and Australia, but to get us on the North American Continent and perhaps Jamaica. From very prudent planning and good leadership, the airline has done well.

What we said we were going to do during our campaign we have done in a short while, and the results are there for everyone to see.

I am very happy to see that the extension has been granted to the agreement between the United Kingdom, the Cayman Islands Government, and North America to protect Cayman Airways on the Miami/Cayman Airways route. Hopefully before the next year, something more concrete is forthcoming.

I would like to go on now to the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications and Works. The Honourable Minister always felt that it is worthwhile to promote agriculture in the Islands and we all support him. He is constantly upgrading livestock and encouraging farmers to produce. A loan scheme has been put in place to assist farmers and, certainly, he has a very active Ministry.

Most of us have to go to him to make sure that streetlights are installed where needed and that roads are fixed. I can imagine that the other Ministers in Government give him a very rough time and keep him on his toes. But he is seemingly indefatigable so he is able to cope.

I would like to pay congratulations to Mrs. Corrine Glasgow of the Postal Department. I wish we had more like her in the Civil Service. She is the type of woman who gets things done. She is a mover and a shaker, and she has to be complimented for the good work that she has done to the Post Office.

In regard to roads, we know that traffic congestion is the order during peak hours. We too are very concerned with the traffic congestion particularly coming into George Town from the east and the same thing applies to West Bay [motorists] coming into George Town.

The Government is doing as much as possible with the resources it has available at the moment. We do hope to get the road corridor from the West Bay road to the Industrial Park area, which will alleviate some of the traffic congestion. We have been hearing from the Honourable Minister about plans to alleviate traffic congestion also on the eastern side.

I think, too, that it would be a good thing if expatriates and visitors learned the Caymanian way of driving. One of the things that is strictly Caymanian is to just pause and allow people to get out on the roads. We do this naturally. But not everyone is as civil as we are. They are used to their rough and tumble lifestyle from where they came from. Sometimes I do not believe that many of these sort of people even see a car coming out from a side road. I believe if they would just learn to allow someone to get out on the main road from a side road, that would help greatly.

I too am concerned about the intersection by Kirk Motors. We have not solved the problem and it needs to be addressed. I do not know whether a roundabout or stoplight is the answer. It has caused many accidents, especially since it has been changed again. I know that the Emergency Department has seen more than 20 cases from accidents at that spot. Something has got to be wrong with the intersection.

I do not believe that people are going to get used to it as quickly as we would like. Especially seeing that it is exactly where tourists enter the Island. They often rent cars near to the airport. I do believe that we certainly need to do something about the intersection very shortly.

It would be good if the Traffic Law Regulations were put into effect soon so that the Seatbelt Law can be enforced and child restraints used. It is amazing the number of damages and injuries I have seen on people from accidents that could have been avoided.

Madam Speaker, there is a rumour quite rampant on the streets that I will not be running again in 1996. Some people say that I was so prominent during the campaign that everyone knew how flamboyant I was. Then I kind of faded away into the background. I would like to say that that rumour is strictly incorrect. If I need to run, I will run in 1996. I am with a good team—not with swindlers and all kinds of people I cannot trust. I certainly will be running if I need to.

I told the public that I would not take a seat in the Executive Council. I am a doctor of more than 24 years standing and my primary allegiance is to medicine. One does not just give up one's profession like that after such a major investment. Furthermore, I think the Caymanian public wants me to stay in medicine. They perhaps appreciate the little effort that I make here in the Legislative Assembly, but primarily where they want me is in medicine. I had no intention of taking a seat in Executive Council. I was more concerned about helping to improve the country, and I am very satisfied with the great strides we have made toward improvements in the two short years.

I think my mission has been accomplished already and in the next two years if we see this much progress, then all the better.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member be prepared to take a suspension at this time?

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: Thank you, I will.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.41 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.05 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Second Elected Member for George Town continuing the debate.

Dr. Stephenson A. Tomlinson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Before closing, I would like to make a few suggestions. First, I would like to encourage the Government to concentrate and prioritise national issues, particularly in our local industries—tourism, banking, construction, telecommunication and other public utilities, garbage collection and disposal, and transportation. We have to continue our efforts and we have to pool our ideas and make sure that all those national issues are being addressed.

I would like to say that this is a strong point of this Government. We do not allow the parochial needs of our various districts to blind us and allow us to forget the importance of these national issues. I would like there to be a continued thrust in that direction.

Secondly, the Governor mentioned in his Throne Speech that some 1,700 persons are involved in food preparation in the tourism industry and in local restaurants, etcetera. I believe seminars are being planned to enhance proper sanitation procedures that must be adopted and followed. I believe that that is well worthwhile. In addition, I believe it should be a legal requirement for all those workers to have Food Handlers Certificates. We should ensure that they are healthy individuals dealing with food.

I also feel that we should intensify our mosquito surveillance and control programme. We should never become complacent that the mosquitoes in Grand Cayman are not aedes aegypti. We know that all we need along with the aedes aegypti mosquitoes is the monkey and we would have set the stage for Yellow Fever. Of course, the aedes aegypti is the vector for Dengue Fever and that fever is as close as Honduras. We certainly need to keep up our efforts in the Mosquito Research and Control Unit and intensify them.

Rodent control efforts too need to be intensified. We have heard mention of this by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We know that rodents are on the increase, and I understand it is worse in the Brac than it is here in Grand Cayman. We need to intensify the effort. I had something to do with the Rodent Control Programme back in the early 1980s and we saw great success here in Grand Cayman. I really think that we need to intensify our efforts there.

I also would encourage the Government to allocate funds for a major road construction improvement scheme. Not of the order of the MGTP, but certainly we have to put that high on the priority list. I believe the Honourable Minister does realise that and even if it means sacrificing some other thing, we should really allocate funds for such area.

I have listened and enjoyed the debate of other Members of the House. I find it quite a learning experience being here with the other Members and Ministers. We know that things have gotten much better over the past two years. I will never forget something my old man used to tell me. He used to say, "More ships go down in calm weather than in storms." Now, as things get better, we do not want to become complacent. I do not think there is a great fear of this, but we need to keep struggling on and never sit back on our laurels.

This was indeed a well put together Throne Speech and compliments are due to the Governor and all the people who assisted him. Personally, I throw my full weight and support behind the Government and I shall do all that I can to assist to the best of my ability. I believe that the Caymanian public is wise, full of good common sense. I am confident that we will see a repeat of 1992 in 1996 if the Government continues do this well.

Thank you very much.

The Speaker: As this time I will call upon the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning to continue the contribution on the Throne Speech.

The Honourable Minister, who was the mover of the motion to thank His Excellency the Governor for his Throne Speech, indicated yesterday that he leaves the Island tomorrow morning and will be gone for some time. In those circumstances, the Chair will not require him to complete the winding up debate because this is a motion that does not call for a conclusion or action. It is just a motion to debate the Throne Speech, which is now taking place. Another Minister will, as I understand, do the closing remarks.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I am most grateful to you for your kindness in your ruling.

I would like to begin by offering congratulations to His Excellency the Governor for what I would term, a comprehensive, positive, yet thought-provoking speech that deals with now, and to some degree, the future.

I would also like to welcome the new Deputy Chief Secretary to this House (although he is not here today). He was here earlier. It would not be wrong for me to offer congratulations to the Chief Secretary (this is the second time I am doing so), but there is nothing wrong with mentioning his name as well. I also offer my best wishes to Mr. Lemuel Hurslton, who retired from the Service. He served for many years prior to my joining the civil service and I know well of his contribution to the service and the people of this country.

The Portfolio of Internal and External Affairs, I believe is in capable hands in the Honourable James Ryan and his Deputy Mr. Donovan Ebanks. I support them fully.

Perhaps I should go on to say that we do know that the subjects of Immigration and Police are really the sole responsibility of the Governor. He has the last say. The elected side of the Executive Council, that is the Ministers, have been under much public pressure for improvements in these two departments.

I am pleased also to welcome the new Commissioner of Police, Mr. Gray, and the new head of the Drug Squad, Detective Chief Superintendent Haines. We had a discussion with Mr. Gray, about a week ago, and told him of our views of the Police Force. It was pleasing to hear him refer to it as "a body that delivers service to the community." When we take those words in the fullest context, Madam Speaker, "a department that provides service to the community" I believe that may be a different approach, a different attitude, to what we have experienced somewhat in the past. This I hope will cause the public to feel closer to the police officers and more supportive of their efforts and co-operative.

Many of us are concerned, and we have stated those concerns on a number of occasions to His Excellency the Governor and to the former and present Commissioner of Police, about crime in this country. The Government has arrived on the scene when many things were not in place in the Police Force. The Drug Dog Programme had been discarded. It is this Government that insisted that it be re-established. When the Police Force was in need of equipment, not just police cars, to deal with daily activities in the policing of the country this Government put that equipment in place—all that they have asked for.

I noticed that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman made mention about 18 cars in his debate, and that the Honourable Minister asked whether we should give the whole budget to the Police Force. You know why I made that remark Madam Speaker? It was clear to me in my own thinking that when the police officer (I will not call any name, we all know who it is), came to deliver that message to the Finance Committee, it was pretty evident that the play had already been made between some of the Members of the Opposition. They were well aware of what he was coming to say. Or maybe it had been rehearsed. That is why I made the comment.

The Police Force has never been in need of equipment and the Government refused to deliver. What we have said is that that is the view of the former Commissioner. We would like the new Commissioner of Police who is about to take office to review that need and come back to us with his request for equipment. We await that request, Madam Speaker.

When we took office there were no boats to carry out coastal surveillance. Two little boats that ran around the North Sound were all we had. For the first time in the history of this country, this Government, in negotiation with the United Kingdom, got them to agree to contribute to the purchasing of a boat for us. They gave the major portion of the cost of the purchase of the boat.

We said at the time, Madam Speaker, that it is our view (the Ministers of Executive Council) that as Caymanians are known to be and have been known to be some of the best seamen who were licensed captains (whether their licence is current remains to be seen) capable of taking command of this boat, I believe it is in the best interest of this country that it should be the case. No reflection on the police officers who are currently manning it. But handling a boat and taking care of it should fall in the hands of those that have done it and demonstrated experience in carrying it out.

Another point, Madam Speaker, is that the Commissioner of Police was going off into recruitment to replace certain staff for which there were vacancies. The Government of the day, because of their concerns about crime and the sessions in the swamp and elsewhere, said to the Commissioner and the Governor that they needed to establish additional officers to deal with this situation and deal with it effectively. As a result, the Government of the day gave him the authority to recruit additional officers (16 or 20 officers) which as we now know were established as the Task Force. I think there are indications that decision and the work of the Task Force is beginning to bear dividend to the community and the Government of the day.

We do not really hear too much about sessions in the swamp anymore or illegal sale of alcohol in private houses; the rap music that it turned on where no one can sleep because all they hear is drums and no lyrics; the type of music that is sometimes played that in some areas firearms were discharged . . . We do not hear too much about that anymore. Not to the same extent we heard about it a year or more ago. I would think that contribution to be the work of the Task Force of the Police Department. They have dealt with it very effectively, not to say that there is not more work to be done, but I believe it is slowly coming into the kind of community awareness and community harmony that we would like to have.

I hope that the deployment of the police, not just the officers in the Task Force, will be looked at in great detail by the new Commissioner of Police.

We as Ministers and Members of this House are not technical persons to decide who gets deployed where. Neither do we have such specific interest. But we do have an interest that the country is properly in the hands of law and order. If that means 24-hour a day police service in East End, North Side, Bodden Town, George Town, and West Bay, so be it Madam Speaker. Let us not forget Little Cayman. I do not think there is a policeman there, I think that too should have a policeman.

How much can the district officer do when the boat is discharging at Salt Rock dock and two planes are landing at the airport? Where should he decide to be? There is assistance needed, and we hear the stories about drugs and what have you. How can you provide safety for the community of the Cayman Islands if there are not sufficient officers (when I say officers, I do not mean police officers) of the Government to make sure that to the best of our ability that happens? Twenty-four hours a day? Little Cayman? We say it is small, but I have a view that the criminal never sleeps. He is waiting for you to go to sleep then he carries out his activity. Twenty-four hours a day in Cayman Brac as well.

For we know of their infrastructure. We know of the International Airport, we know that there is a dock where boats can dock at, and we know that there are many little nooks and crannies that a small boat can manoeuvre into. We need now to decide and this is not politics, Madam Speaker. This is not politics. This is law and order and the protection of us and our children and future generations. Let us begin it now.

If we need additional money, we will have to find it and I am sure that I have the agreement of the Honourable Financial Secretary, the Third Official Member, to move in this way. For if we do not, what then is the position? Can we go on talking about tourists? Can we go on talking about offshore financial services? The answer to those two questions is definitely not. They are not in the cards. The card is security, a crime free place to maintain this country to have—well you know if you ride a bicycle without light that is a crime, but that is not what I am talking about. I am talking about some of the concerns of the community and Members of this House; burglary, theft, rape, the carrying of unlicensed firearms.

We are on the right track but let us not pull back the throttle. When you are winning, Madam Speaker, they say go full speed ahead. Let us make sure that we do hit the finish line as we think we are going to do.

I need to remind the people of this country, and maybe some Members of this House—particularly those who call themselves Opposition—I am not sure if there are two or three . . . I know certainly that there are two. We need to stand together on this issue because whether or not Tom Jefferson is in this House does not matter. What is important is that the security of our people is not at risk by the lack of any foresight and backbone from any of us.

When we heard about all these incidents which appeared to be from the use of firearms. Initially some people thought it was firecrackers going off at different times in the night. Then paying attention to it, we decided that it was not the right interpretation of what we were hearing. The Government in addition to the Task Force moved to have a look at the Firearms Law and we amended that Law to deal severely with people who imported firearms illegally into this country; or who discharged firearms, or carry them around without a licence. The Law that we amended stiffened those sentences where the judge can decide, based on the evidence that he or she receives, up to 20 years, or $100,000 in fines and I think it says "or both."

Perhaps there is a clearing of the disguise, Madam Speaker. When we look at the number of crimes reported in 1993, compared to the number of crimes reported in 1994, there is a reduction in just about every category. Except when you start dealing with drugs. The total number of crimes reported in 1993 was 3,298 and the total number of crimes reported in 1994 was 3,099. It is a pretty significant drop, but in these numbers you have people who committed a crime by riding a bicycle at night without a flashlight or some other kind of light.

There are some areas in this report that are still of major concern to us, and those are the areas that Members of this House have already spoken about. Some of the areas I have already mentioned, and I think those are the areas that the police and the community working together and all of us must come to grips with. Otherwise we are going to lose this little Island that we love so dearly and all the harmony. And I would say in today's world, the small amount of crime that is going on . . . when I make that statement, look at what is happening in the rest of the Caribbean. Look at what is happening in Miami or any part of the United States and look at what is happening in the United Kingdom and Europe. We are still relatively crime free and that is a pretty bold statement to me.

Drugs are rampant in every part of the world and the crimes that emanate from drugs are also rampant. We cannot really expect to be in a world and not be tarnished a little bit with it. What we have to do because we are small is come to grips with it by providing the support the police needs, by providing the co-operation with the police and the regulatory arm, whether it is the Customs Department, the Police Department or any other department.

I look forward to working with the new Commissioner of Police and the members of his staff. Anyone who wants to check Tom Jefferson's record on that score is welcome to do so, including the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Madam Speaker, I saw something in the newspaper this morning and I wondered how it was possible. Mr. Linford Pierson, who is over in Hong Kong, got receipt of a Hansard transcript of the Legislative Assembly for Thursday, 16 March 1995—not even edited as yet! Not even available to members of the public! I ask this question, Madam Speaker: Who faxed it to him? It has got to be somebody in this building. I believe this is the level of politics that we are stooping to: break every rule and try to win by any means or try to damage the National Team Members with anything that they can get their hands on. I believe that the day Tom Jefferson has to win Elections by doing that, I am going to just throw in the towel and say that I do not want to be a part of it. It is not my way.

In his letter to the Editor in the Caymanian Compass, he made certain remarks about my colleague the Minister for Education and Aviation, and the lady (I will use the term lady) to whom I think my colleague was responding to regarding an article she wrote in The New Caymanian, Mrs. Bridget McPartland—a shadow all right. I think in the article she made a comment that my colleague, the Honourable Truman Boddin—who has about nine different qualifications and at some stage in this Government had served as the Acting Attorney General, has been in the legal profession for 25 years; has his own firm which is quite successful—that she wondered what he could contribute to a financial industry promotion.

What a joke!

Then who can make a contribution? What are we talking about at those conferences? We are explaining the facilities that are available in the Cayman Islands. Is it banking? Is there not legislation that deals with banking?

Is it trust? Is there not legislation dealing with trust? Is he not familiar with it like the back of his hand?

Is it mutual funds? Is there not legislation?

Is it partnership? Is there not legislation?

Is it shipping?

Whatever the subject may be there is legislation there. And a man with 25 years of experience in the private sector, owning his successful law firm! And this woman has the gall to make a comment that she wondered why he was at the conference.

Why did she not wonder why I was there too? A former Financial Secretary for ten years, spent 20-odd years in the Government in the Finance Department.

Politics! Politics is the reason. It is the same reason why Linford Pierson got this fax from some Member of this House.

My colleague, the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation also referred to the Auditor General's Report and he was reading from the report which indicated that when Mr. Pierson—who was Chairman of the Water Authority, and he was the Executive Council member responsible for the subject— . . . and he was not making up what he said, it is in the Auditor General's report. Mr. Pierson's water bill for his residence was under-billed by some $1,880.00. Why is Mr. Pierson upset about that? It is a fact. It is not us who said it. I do not know whether he caused it to be done or not. I cannot say that. But it is a fact.

I believe that there is a Biblical quotation that says: "He who is unfaithful in little, is unfaithful in much." That is an appropriate quotation for this event. I hope that the Member who sent him this fax will also send the fax of what I have said today too. Let us see if we get another letter from him next week because he is all the way over there in Hong Kong trying to be a politician in the Cayman Islands. Somebody has got to keep him informed.

Madam Speaker, I was almost amused when the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman started talking about the cruise ship that was arranged by the Ministry, by the Port Authority, and by the Department of Tourism and other people whom I will not mention, to visit Cayman Brac. I could not believe what he was telling me because in essence, if I have it right, we did not spend any effort to get the cruise ship there.

What I said in answer to the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, is that the ship was on a round-the-world tour. And because of how we used our influence to get it to go to Cayman Brac we (I take blame or credit for it) could not entertain it in George Town because there were too many cruise ships.

Madam Speaker, if I can invite the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to investigate how many ships were in the harbour that day, he would find that it never went over the maximum. It might have been two or three, but sometimes we have five, depending on the size. So he might not want to give me credit for it in this House, but let me say something Madam Speaker, and Members.

When I arrived there a little after 8 o'clock that morning, who was there? The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. He had his camera and he was all over the place. He was happy and he was taking photographs and everything else. That is why I was a taken aback when he got up here and tried to make it look like I did nothing to get it there—it just fell out of the sky. He was pleased with what he saw. I have no doubt, Madam Speaker, he knows the difference.

I must say that I have so many pieces of paper here that I am not quite sure what to do next. I believe that with all of the mischief that is going on—mischief by the Opposition, mischief being printed in the Caymanian Compass and in The New Caymanian, mischief by the Chamber of Commerce—there is a Biblical reading for them too. I would like to read that today and it is taken from Job 15:35. Then I will read verse 31. It reads: "They conceive mischief and bring forth vanity and their belly prepareth deceit. Let not him that is deceived trust in vanity for vanity shall be his recompense." It would do them proud if that fell straight into their plate in 1996. I believe that is what they deserve along with the Chamber of Commerce, because, obviously, there is some amount of help back and forth.

Madam Speaker, sometimes it is easy for people to write letters and make statements and hide behind the big umbrella of some organisation. I believe that is what is happening with the Chamber of Commerce. My colleague the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation, the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation, pinpointed some salient points in the Chamber's operation. I think the Chamber of Commerce would also do well to ask the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town what these 21 items were that he thought the Chamber should get involved with rather than try to play politics, which they have a record of doing.

It cost $15.00 to buy this Chamber of Commerce directory for 1994. As I open and turn the pages and begin to look through it, I see sixteen different committees. I also see an Executive Committee in addition to those committees. When I count up all the membership (and I have always worked with everyone in this country) I find a total of 128 people. Although some local people are on more than one committee, and if so, I counted them as well, I only count 35 Caymanians. What is interesting, is for the public to understand who is issuing all these letters or who has the responsibility to make sure that when they go out they should be accurate.

I look at the officers of this body, the President is well known, Mr. Roy McTaggart; the first Vice President, Mr. Steve Hawley of Workbench Limited; the second Vice President, Mr. Robert Wood, Woods Furniture and Design; Treasurer, Mr. Sydney Coleman—Padget-Brown and Company Limited; Secretary, Mr. Adrian Briggs—Sunset House and Sunset Divers. That is the Executive Committee.

What I found even more interesting is that when you look at the Committee of Government and legislative affairs you have the same names I read out awhile ago. A member of the Chamber and the Legislative Affairs Committee is Mr. Linford Pierson. You wonder why these things happen.

When you look at the Publication Committee (if I do nothing else today, Madam Speaker, I think we need to shine a little light on these people) the same names crop up again, Mr. Steve Hawley, Chairman—Workbench Limited. My information is that they cannot get him off of the Committee. I wonder why he wants to stay there? Mr. Roy McTaggart, Mr. David Byrd, and I could name some others—Dr. Elaine Campbell, not known to be a lady who causes a lot of trouble.

Madam Speaker, in my days as Financial Secretary there were many times and years when the Chamber of Commerce came to me to try and get me to be peacemaker with the Government of the day. I remember the Government of 1984 to 1988; the Government of 1988 to 1992, I even remember the Government of 1976 to 1984 (not that I played a major role in it). But from 1982 onward to 1992, whenever they got into trouble they called me to give a speech to the body of chairmen. Is that not a little bit ironic? The person who has tried to be a peacemaker—I cannot say that I was successful because I think there were hard lines on both sides.

I think they have said, 'Now that you are Leader of Government Business, we are going to put you at the bottom of the list.' Just flip the chart upside down because otherwise it makes no sense whatsoever. If all these people in the Chamber of Commerce who are making all the money as a result of contributions made by the Minister—not just him alone, he is a part of it—cannot see the contribution by tourism in this country, I say to them: You better get together with Dr. Elaine Campbell because something is radically wrong. Or get together with some doctor who can tell you about needing surgery on your eyes and perhaps put in [new] lenses so that you can read the bottom line that is telling you that you are making bigger profits.

Madam Speaker, they did a survey in 1993. My colleague the Minister for Education and Aviation quoted from a similar document that was received by us in March of 1994. For tourism it remarked: "6% excellent, 37% good, 37% satisfactory, 20% poor." So if you lump it all together you can convincingly say that 80% who answered this survey (hopefully truthfully) were satisfied with what happened with the tourism industry.

Now you look at the 1994 position [of the Tourism Department] and they are telling you that it is "below average." How is that possible? In 1993 we had 287,000 visitors who came in by air; in 1994 it was 341,000 and they have stayed in hotels and residences all over this country. Somebody in the Chamber of Commerce also knew that they had more revenue in 1994 than they did 1993: Yet, they say it below average.

I found a remark even in the 1993 Report that sort of sums it up for the whole of Government. It was at the conclusion where it says: "It would appear that the public believe that Government has done quite well with Cayman Airways, agriculture, tourism, and education. Additionally, it would appear that a satisfactory condition exist with regard to Government expenditure, the budget, health services, roads and drug abuse although, additional attention to these areas would be of benefit." This was in 1993, Madam Speaker.

What happened with the result for the 1994 survey? How can it change from what appears to be satisfactory. The public believes that the Government has done quite well; Cayman Airways, agriculture, tourism, and education. Additionally, it would appear that a satisfactory position exist with regard to Government expenditure to budget, health services, roads and drug abuse, although, additional attention to these areas would be of benefit.

What we have in this 1994 Report I do not believe is even worth talking about. It says, Tourism—the public believes it is below average and the Chamber believes it is below average; Environment—the public believes it is poor and the Chamber believes it is poor; and Planning—the public believes it is poor and the Chamber believes it is poor.

I am not going into too much detail here Madam Speaker on the 1994 Report because I think many of us have read that we have brought action against the Chamber for some of the commentary they have published. Before I finish my speech, Madam Speaker, I am going to give this country sufficient information that they can make their own judgment on tourism, expenditure control, borrowing, Cayman Airways, and all the other Ministries. Not that I am going to go into great detail, but it will reflect on all of us.

The Speaker: Would you take the luncheon suspension at this time?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.02 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.39 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Hon Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning continuing the debate.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Prior to taking the break, I wondered how Mr. Linford Pierson (who is in Hong Kong) was able to get a hold of the unedited Hansard of this House for 16 March 1995. I believe it is now clear that there is no more need to wonder. During the lunch break it became clear that the same lady, Mrs. Bridget McPartland, who was questioning the contribution the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation can make to a financial industry promotion, is the person who came to the House and requested a copy of the Hansard.

Just in case the Legislative Assembly's staff felt that I meant that they did it, I bring this clarification, Madam Speaker. I will not retract any of the comments I made earlier about pure politics.

Mr. Pierson also made remarks about his view (maybe his superior view—he thinks), that "the Government Ministers did not use the golden opportunity afforded to them to have more active participation in the conference." My God! We attended everything that was available, even outside the conference—dinners in the evening, receptions held by the Financial Secretary. There was only one dinner which we were invited to and were unable to attend simply because we were having the second meeting with an investor and we thought it was more important to try and get investment into this country rather than to have dinner or drinks. If that is what he was referring to, then he may be correct. But it is the Ministers who can make their own decisions about priorities for their time and what is in the best interest of this country, and how they may utilise their time to bring that about.

I did touch on Immigration when I was talking about the subjects that His Excellency holds absolute responsibility. I believe it is time we begin to deal with work permits in a different way. We have watched this work load grow from a couple of hundred work permits back in the early 1970s to something in the range of 13,000 or 14,000 work permits. For the Immigration Board to deal with those in addition to temporary work permits, the volume alone may not allow them to deal with it in detail that may be required. I bring that to bear when I hear the comment of the Third Elected Member for West Bay about the entertainer Patra. I think the Third Elected Member for George Town also spoke about it.

I must tell you, Madam Speaker, it was the most disgusting thing to find in a newspaper. I would have thought that even if the members of the Immigration Department Board went wrong, made an error to grant a work permit to this person to entertain people in the Cayman Islands, if I was running the newspaper and looking at the best interest of this country it certainly would not be included in such a newspaper. I think it was a rotten way to display yourself for young people to see.

I believe that we should have a system whether we want to begin it in a pilot study way or whether we want to launch it in full force where the Immigration Board has the authority to grant three-year work permits. I know the Law presently allows them to do so, and on occasion they will give such work permits. What I am taking about is a system of linking together training in the private sector and the work permit needs of these organisations where you call in the managing director, the general manager, or the chief executive officer whomever is in charge to the Board and say, 'Let me have your proposal for your work permit needs for the next three to five years. When you come up with these needs, tell me what training you are going to do for your local staff in this period of time and give me some indication of what promotion with take place in that three or five year period as well.'

I believe that this may be an effective way of getting the private sector to focus on training in their individual operation. This may mean the reduction of the volume of work permits being dealt with by the Immigration Board. If that is so, I would think it would be helpful.

I believe that if I never see an entertainer like Patra in this country again it would be a blessing to me, and maybe to the rest of the people in this country. I do not think it should happen. I believe, too Madam Speaker, that people whom we deem inappropriate in our country, we should take action to make sure that [they do not come here] whatever that action needs to be.

We have the Cubans as well, and I believe in all fairness to the Chief Immigration Officer, he has had his hands more than full because the instant he arrived he had this problem on his hand. In all fairness to him, he has done well in managing this problem, which is a financial strain on the Government. There is no doubt about that.

There are international obligations that require us to treat them as human beings and look after them. We are caught between a rock and a hard place, because we have the Americans on one side and the Cubans on the other and the United Kingdom too far away to influence anything it seems. It is just my observation, Madam Speaker. Here we are stuck with a problem created by a decision down in the United States and we have to almost go "cup in hand" begging for assistance. I do not believe that is a fair game.

In all fairness to the Cubans, Madam Speaker, they are not like the same people who are arriving by the drug canoes illegally landing in the Cayman Islands. We have heard about this happening in the past. I am not so sure how much of that is happening today. I would not want to go down on record and make a statement about the present situation. But, like most things, if you treat people like animals they behave like animals. Some of them may not be the best citizens in the world. Some of them are like many in the Cayman Islands, normal, decent people in a very desperate position. God knows we all hope we do not get in the same boat, but if some of this alliance I see comes together . . . you will never know.

We have always been hospitable people and I think it would be wrong to show something different to the Cubans. It is true that they cannot gain a US visa in the Cayman Islands. That is a fact. There is not a thing in the world the Cayman Islands Government or anybody else can do about it. It is for the decision of the United States Government officials.

There are people who visit them who are willing to ridicule. I am not in that boat, Madam Speaker. I came up perhaps in a different environment. Kindness, I think sometimes changes the whole system rather than something else. I do not have any apologies to anyone for anything that I may have done or may do.

I want to come back to this financial industry promotion, Madam Speaker. I believe that although the Honourable Financial Secretary has made many good decisions since we have been in office, the decision to take a team of private sector practitioners, government officials, His Excellency the Governor, Ministers of Executive Council and a Member of the Legislative Assembly is one of the best decision he has made. We can sit here in the Cayman Islands and play petty politics while everyone else runs ahead of us and gets all the business.

If we listen to some of the Opposition Members we would do just that. We would loose focus of what we are trying to achieve and play petty politics with them. Then when we do that, in about a year's time they are going to say to us that we are not doing anything. It would be true! Because playing petty politics with them we would be doing nothing.

We have seen a referendum issued by the Government of Bermuda and those same Opposition Members would say there is nothing to that. Maybe their views are the same for the Cayman Islands—who knows? But I can tell you this (this is not hearsay), those firms that are operating in Bermuda are getting a little glittery. There is a Royal Gazette which is put out by the Bermudan Government. I received a copy from a friend the other day. This was an editorial from the Royal Gazette of the Bermudan Government, dated 24 February 1995. I want to read this because I think it is informative, Madam Speaker. It says: "There is a story doing the rounds that every time someone advocates independence for Bermuda it causes a cheer in the Cayman Islands. As a result, a reader had sent us a 1994 Business Age special section on business in the Cayman Islands. It is amazing how closely Cayman, which was once associated with Jamaica, but chose to stay with Britain when Jamaica became independent, has been created in a very few years in the image of Bermuda" I do not know if that is so.

"Bermuda is undeniably the biggest market in captive insurance and Cayman is the second biggest." In that light I guess it is right. In another light, I would not agree.

"However, there is one major difference—it is very hard to find anyone who wants Cayman independent." Is there anyone in this House who wants to stand up and tell me that they want Cayman independent? I bet you will not do it.

"Being a British dependent Territory, like Bermuda, gives clients regardless of their nationality a great deal of comfort."

In its introduction to the Special Report of The Business Age it says: "The Caymans enjoy a growing reputation because it has more regulation than any other offshore centre in the world. The British dependency status gives investors an added sense of security. Not surprising then that it is impossible to find anyone on the Island who wants independence.

"The islanders are not going to go down some radical independent route. It is an extremely conservative Islands."

It also says: "... Cayman has always been about long-term sensible planning." Although the Fourth Elected Member for George Town probably would not agree with that. The extensive special supplement is littered with praise for the way Cayman works and of statements which are of interest to Bermuda. "The Cayman Islands are a unique oasis. Here, society offers a reminder of the kind of standards that many Western societies have lost over the past three decades. The God fearing and very religious islanders wish it to remain that way."

"It is unbelievable that in 20-odd years you can change a country where there were not many jobs and most of the people were working in either the United States or on a ship sailing around somewhere. Expatriates are an integral part of Cayman's society so as a result of that we can work together and pool ideas. You see, there is no magic formula to the Cayman Islands but the difference is we do not have these issues associated with nationalism, colour prejudice and so on."

"Cayman was helped by the fact that the Bahamas financial services industry self-destructed after a socialist Government took over. Cayman was the main beneficiary of that political change. Since then, the Bahamas has played catch-up to Cayman" [Business Age, pg. 14].

"The banks know that in Cayman they have an almost idyllic situation; perfect climate, reliable and friendly local people, zero tax regime, low crime rate, British dependent status, and the close proximity to the United States."

"With over 300 years of British rule, Caymanians have steadfastly maintained close ties constitutionally with Britain, content with provisions which fall short of full internal self Government. The stable political climate has contributed to a peaceful society which enjoys a high standard of living."

"It is a level playing field with little crime and no corruption, something which is so prevalent in other countries. This is probably expressed more strongly by politeness on the roads. Cayman is a living example what can be achieved in a country with a good Government and management."

"Consistently good decisions have delivered a high level of prosperity for not just a few, but for all its citizens."

This is put out by the Bermuda Government, in the Royal Gazette. If anyone perceives that the Cayman Islands is not the country that everyone wants to emulate—think again. When you talk to people from Bermuda, they have to admit that the way in which this country is being run is something that they would like to see in their own country. This is what the National Team brought to this Government. This endorsement, Madam Speaker, is what the National Team brought to this country.

It was not like that three years ago. When we started to campaign three years ago and we published our Manifesto, we looked at the Government's financial position and it showed that the Public Debt and Contingent Liabilities as of September 1992 were about $141.1 million; the General Reserve was then $10.0 million. When you deduct general reserve from the $141 million you get $131 million. But when we got into the Government we found out that there was a $7 million deficit. So that pushed the General Reserve back up to $138 million. I do not think this includes all the overdrafts. Neither does it take into consideration the millions of dollars Cayman Airways owed to various creditors and the Government and everyone else.

The recent position that the Government, after two years, has accomplished in public debt and contingent liabilities (when they are added together) is about $160 million. We had about $4 million in General Reserves, but let me just say that $16 million of that is for debts we paid off for the previous Government; $7.2 million is what they committed us to for the hospital (the Dr. Hortor Memorial). If you take those amounts out, which were not our decisions, you are back down to $133 million.

If we want to compare apples to apples, we would say that in the area of financial control, borrowing and really trying to increase General Reserves, we are doing well. I must offer my congratulations to the Third Official Member for the way in which he has managed and for his vision of the Portfolio of Finance and Development. Madam Speaker, having spent about ten years of my life in these chairs, I know how much work that is and I know about the demands that are made not just in the office, but after office hours.

I want the Honourable Third Official Member to know that he has my wholehearted support. There is no doubt whatsoever in my mind about that, Madam Speaker.

There were some comments about the Planning Department and the staffing. I would just like to answer one or two of those comments. When we took office the Planning Department was under staffed. The posts were there but were not filled. I believe much of the delay was caused by the lack of manpower to carry out all the many functions. The department is now up to full strength. Two posts were filled to replace officers whose contracts expired, and four posts were filled which were previously vacant. One post was the filling of a newly created post of long-range planning. I believe that is in the best interest of this country. One of those posts was for the filling of the Planning Assistant post in the Sister Island. God knows they needed it. Most of these officers arrived in the latter part of September.

The year 1994 was one of the best years for the Government attracting investment into this country in the form of construction projects—$137.2 million. The comments I received from the Planning Department had all been complimentary about the attendance to detail and members of the Central Planning Authority attendance to meetings. I am very proud to hear those comments. I think they have made a significant contribution to this country. Perhaps a $25.00 per meeting which perhaps pays the gas bill to get from home to the place when the Central Planning Authority carries out its work.

We hear too about the delays and the bureaucracy in the Planning Department. Madam Speaker, I think we need to try and differentiate between delays and good requirements that should be set down from the beginning, so that when you your building is constructed you have the necessary fire protection; the waste disposal system that is going to function effectively; the electrical work carried out in a professional manner so that persons who occupy the buildings (commercial or residential) are not at risk.

As I understand it, the department processed over 500 applications, closer to 600. I said to the Director of Planning the other day, "You know, you really need to tell me how many applications you have that are outstanding. How many have been deferred, and give me some reasons why." He produced a list and I think in answering a question in the House, I said that certain kinds of development have to give notice to adjacent landowners. That generally takes three to four weeks.

I said, "Tell me all of the applications which are presently before you, which have been deferred for more than six weeks." When we start thinking about $137 million that got processed, we are really at 44 cases, Madam Speaker.

Is that a number that frightens everyone? I would like it to be less. I would like for it to be zero, but it is not a realistic wish. In some cases, there is need to wait for advertising to be done. There is a need for the architects to correct their drawings. There may be a waiting period for the survey report from the applicant; or it may be that the applicant is before the Appeals Tribunal. I do not see anything here, Madam Speaker, that frightens me. I see some things here that suggest that perhaps more work needs to be done to reduce the number. But we know that the Central Planning Authority is operating under the Law, and the Law must be followed for fear that the applicant, if it is wrong, will appeal and have the decision overturned.

When I was talking about Immigration, I missed one particular point. There are times that you can arrive on an aircraft and get to the booth and nobody is there. Not one person is there and I think they really have to correct that. That is not hearsay, Madam Speaker, I have seen it myself.

So many people are asking: What have you accomplished in the planning area? I would say the planning operation is not now what it was back in 1992. I believe it is more responsive to the needs of the consumer. As I have indicated, there is an increase in planning approval. There is the administrative approval put in place that affords a quicker response to the public. I think that is working well.

The establishment of a long-term planning section. I do not recall that having been done before. I heard the Fourth Elected Member for George Town saying that we need to plan long term. Maybe he endorsed this unit. He has not said so.

We have increased the activities in the construction industry as a result of our work; stimulating the economy in reducing, let us call it, the "red tape." We have increased employment in the construction industry. Yes, I do not think every contractor is working full speed, but it is coming. I think that is what the opposition is worried about. The see it coming. The see every person who is willing to work being at work and they are worried about how they are going to counteract that.

We have helped to move the economy of this country to a healthy position. I believe the future direction needs to be improved—road infrastructure and we are working on that. We have the agreement for the Harquail Bypass. The Public Works Department has been requested to carry out the work, and I do not want to steal the thunder from the Honourable Minister for Communications and Works. I will leave him to speak about that.

I think there is a need to establish environmental zones. But there is always the practicality of how it is done. I am not going to agree to designate somebody's property "environmentally protected" or "environmentally sensitive" just because you may have the power to do it. You will ruin the value of the property and the owner suffers a severe loss, because there is not too much he can do with it once he gets that designation.

In my humble view, the way to proceed with this environmental zone (protected or sensitive), is that every piece of property the National Trust owns and want us to designate "environmentally protected", I am willing to put that forward; every property that the Government owns and the Government agreed should be designated "environmentally protected", I am willing to put that forward too. But any other kind of designation of private property, if we come to the conclusion that this piece of property is an ideal parcel to preserve for future generations, I think the Government will go out and buy it and pay the market value.

Do not go and designate someone's property and devalue it (as some person would want you to do) then pay the person half the price. They can all talk that way until they own the land they are talking about. Whether it is the National Trust or a member of the public who feels that way, I am not going to agree. I do not believe it is the right thing to do to anyone who owns land in this country.

In talking about the future direction, Madam Speaker, I think we need to bring into law the Building Code. But let us just step back a minute and ask, Would it be more practical to deal with the development review and try to resolve that? Get a decision and let us stop playing politics so that we can amend [the law]. As the Fourth Elected Member for George Town indicated, it is a national issue. This is in the interest of generations to come. If you do not amend the present Planning Law, where someone does something which is not within the approval given by the Central Planning Authority, and they serve an enforcement notice and the applicant says: Thank you very much. And does nothing about it . . . what are you going to do? There is not sufficient teeth in the law to really bring to bear and put him or her in a judicial process to settle it.

We hear about road corridors. My God, a lot of politics can be played with that. But is it in the best interest of the country to play politics with that? We need to do what is practical. We need to decide, and it does not take a genius, because every time you drive the street from any direction in this country (East End or West Bay) certain hours of the day you will say to yourself: My God we need another road. So, let us all decide to do it. Make it part of the Development Plan Review.

I do not agree with the Fourth Elected Member for George Town when he says the Master Ground Transportation Plan (MGTP) was a good plan, a good thing and the Government pulled it back for fear that they would get killed. The proponents and the opponents of that Plan if they had known all the facts and were truthful to the country—it was the best thing that should have happened to this country. I do not agree with that.

If it was done then, Madam Speaker . . . when we took office I quoted the figures with the public debt being in the area of $60 million. We are paying $12 million to service that [Plan] annually. Let us pick a figure, some people say $80 million for the cost of the MGTP system (I doubt it but let us use the figure). If you pay $12 million per year to service a $60 million [system], what does it cost you to serve the other $80 million? Another $15 million maybe? So let us say $27 million and when you pay $27 million out of any of the Budgets there is no money to talk about capital projects, which means it puts you in a position where you then as a Government, and politicians who hope to get elected decide to force the Financial Secretary to go borrow money to do these capital projects. Then what happens? It causes you to pay more money—not $12 million, not $27 million perhaps $30 million. That is not in the best interest of the country.

I do believe the Government must move in a direction to resolve the traffic congestion problem. If it means widening the roads, then we do that. There are alternatives, Madam Speaker. We do not necessarily need an I-95 like the United States. We do not need that.

We have heard a lot about the Madigan Pratt Report and Jean-Michel Cousteau's Report, and the Chamber of Commerce's Report and all those reports. We decided sometime ago and requested the Department of Environment to provide us with a cost of the installation of dive boat moorings around the three Islands to protect the marine environment. We now have that estimated cost—it is about $12,000. All the reports are talking about resting this dive site or resting the other dive site. You are not going to be able to do it unless we have other sites to be used. Otherwise, the visitors who are coming to dive are not going to be able to make all the dives he/she wants. That is the direction we are heading, Madam Speaker. I believe it is the direction that would put us in a position to come to grips with the capacity of these dive sites.

Mr. Cousteau said that there were something in the region of 240 visitors, and that if each of them takes 10 dives we are looking at 2.4 million dives. He sees that as a tremendous amount of pressure on our reefs and I think we see it too.

What have we accomplished in the environmental area? We have decided to implement a Recycling Programme for cans and cardboard. We have been able to achieve agreements with cruise lines where they will not dump any waste into our waters while they are within the 12-mile limit. They will do no painting or chipping of the hull of the ship while they are in port.

We are working on the construction of a building to house the Department of Environment where all members of the department can be brought under one roof, rather than two or more roofs (which is the present situation), so that the implementation of policies and services can be more cost-effectively carried out.

We have increased the effectiveness and activity of larvacides to control mosquitoes. You will have hiccoughs with it, but it is more effective now than what we found when we arrived.

For the future direction I think we need the enhancement of the Botanic Park facilities; the restoration of the Pedro Castle; the restoration of Boatswain Bay School; the improved maintenance and upgrading at public beaches; and the enhancement of our cemeteries throughout the three Islands.

For the marine environment, the installation of permanent cruise ship moorings in George Town, done in conjunction with the cruise lines. We want increased enforcement of our marine parks and replenishment zones and we are presently moving forward with the revision and amendment of all Laws dealing with the environment.

I have heard the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman asking questions about the Turtle Farm, then he made a comment and put a question about Dr. Jim Wood and how successful he was and whether we would rehire him. I do not think I gave him the right answer that morning, but I was trying to be kind and diplomatic.

I want to tell the Honourable Member that after about four months, knowing now the full details, I think the decision that we took is the right decision. Mr. Wood's success, Madam Speaker, to my mind is not based on his academic qualifications or his performance but his success is based more on the staff who worked for him. From the day I put my feet under my present desk, I have been having almost on a daily basis complaints about the behaviour of Mr. Wood and how he treated people and staff.

I even received a letter from the person who provided security services at the Farm. He wanted the watchmen to stand on a six foot ladder all night to look over the hedge of the fence where they can see the turtle ponds on both sides of the road. When they got so tired where they could not take it any more, they had to come down off the ladder. Only for him [Mr. Wood] to arrive and scold them right, left, and centre—smelling of bourbon as well.

And the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman talked about how successful he was.

He should live in West Bay and he would hear some stories about his success.

Madam Speaker, he tendered his resignation and it is my understanding that it is not the first time he pulled that stunt when he could not get his way. You put a person as Chairman of a Board, and the Board makes policy on any particular issue of that firm or statutory authority. That is the way it has to be. And if you are upset with it, you tender your resignation. I can tell you this, if you tender it to me I am going to accept it—especially the trouble we had with Mr. Wood.

Even now, Madam Speaker, two months after he is gone we are trying to figure out how he knew what the inventory was down at the Turtle Farm, because as I understand it he had six or ten different books. It is taking a pair of geniuses to put it all together. It is time for computerisation of the inventory control. And you know what he wanted to do? He wanted to put in a system similar to that in big department stores that have products with the electronic sensor buttons on them which the cashier has to use a special equipment to take it off. He wanted us to institute that system because he kept talking about shoplifting at the store.

Now, Madam Speaker, the cruise ship passenger only has 20 minutes and if you are going to spend two or three minutes to take of the [sensor] how many sales will you have?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman talked about success. Do you know that over $100,000 worth of inventory could not be accounted for while Mr. Wood was in control? If it had happened while I was there, I would have known what to do. It would be success then.

I want to come to a point that was made by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. He raised the point of Tourism Accommodation Tax. The first thing that I have to speak about under this Ministry is the proposed increase to 10% in the tourist Accommodation Tax. There is so much working together that even before the statistics for January from the Tourism Department on tourist arrivals could be produced, Mr. Rick Catlin told us that tourist arrivals were down.

When we published the information to show that that was not true, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman was on his feet saying that the Minister was taking credit for all the increases, he must take credit for the decrease. I held up the paper and pointed to the paragraph on the front page, which said, "Tourism figures up for January". He would not change the statement.

Madam Speaker, these same Members from time to time write in for all kinds of increase in expenditure. Where is the money going to come from?

When we carried out our exercise and looked at the countries in the Caribbean—Antigua, Aruba, Bahamas, Barbados, Bermuda, British Virgin Islands, Jamaica—remember now we are not the same market. Jamaica is a country with mass market, like the Bahamas, Barbados, and Antigua. The country that really compares to us, I would say is Bermuda, in terms of who we are trying to attract to the Cayman Islands. According to some people, it is the end of the world.

Let us say you pay $200 for a room, it cost you $12 in Tourist Accommodation Tax, and we now want to raise it to $20. It is going to damage the whole place.

Madam Speaker, when you look at the reality, 77% or 80% of these people are coming from the United States. We have regional offices in New York, Chicago, Los Angeles, Houston, and Miami. What is the tax on a room in San Francisco? It is 12%. What is the tax in New York? It is 15%—it is actually 15 3/4%. What is the tax in London? It is 17.5%. What is the tax in Houston? It is 15%. What is the tax in Miami? It is 12.5%. So some of those people who are trying to stir things—and that was the reason for Rick Catlin writing the article, to say that tourism figures are down and link it to the tourism accommodation tax increase. Politics as usual. But what we did—it is only 10% Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Minister take a suspension at this time?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.42 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.01 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning continuing.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the break I was trying to respond to comment made by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, wondering whether the increase from 6% to 10% in tourist accommodation tax had much wisdom was in it. I believe that having carefully surveyed about 27 Caribbean countries it revealed that the hotel occupancy tax in the region ranged from 4% in the Bahamas to a high of 23% in the Dominican Republic. About eight countries charged 7%; five countries charged 5%; and three countries charged 8%; three other charged 6% and two charged 15%.

Now in some countries the charges are different from ours, Madam Speaker. Our charge is basically on room cost. But some of the other countries charge on everything that gets billed—beverage, and food as well. I did give indications of what hotels in various areas of the United States and in London charge. I indicated that San Francisco it is 12%, in New York, it is 15 3/4%; in London it is 17.5%; in Houston it is 15%; and in Miami it is 12.5%.

When we decided to put the increase into operation we knew that when dealing with new revenue measures you cannot make the whole world know what you are doing until it comes to the point where you fully decide to do it. When we fully decided to do it we talked to members of the industry. Some of them had concerns and we listened to those concerns. Some of them indicated that we could implement it on 1 March or 1 April. Others preferred 1 June, and there will always be some that will never agree to any day unless it is sometime next year. But I believe that we have dealt with it in such a way that we said: Let us make it effective 1 June 1995.

Having passed the Budget in December of last year there is at least six months lead time to alert all the people; tour operators, wholesalers, travel agents, regional offices, and the airlines that there is going to be a difference in the accommodation tax charged from 6% to 10%.

I think the Rick Catlin article was trying to indicate, although he did not have the statistical facts to back it up, that tourism figures were down in January because of the proposed increase in tourism accommodation tax—when, in fact, the tourism accommodation tax is not yet in place. It does not come in place until 1 June 1995.

We will have to see what bears out in the end. I do not think it is a major issue. It is certainly a good political topic but beyond that, I do not think there is any substance in it.

Madam Speaker, I think it was the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who on occasions speaks about "peanut butter sandwich visitors." I do not know if he still holds that view. When we took over Government and accepted our responsibilities under the Constitution and counted the number of tourists who arrived for 1992, we found that there were about 241,000. We took control of the situation.

The Director of Tourism, the Principle Secretary, and I, and in some cases other members of the Ministry, had meetings with the regional sales managers. We called them to a specific city in the United States and met with them all and told them what we expected. They got out and did the work. They utilised the strategy that had not been implemented and produced at the end of 1993 over 278,000 visitors.

At the annual marketing meeting, we challenged them to top that figure—and they did. At the end of 1994, the figure rose to over 341,000 visitors. We are talking only about air arrivals, Madam Speaker. What was the cry? 'You are growing too fast. Too many people around.' Some of the commentary from the Opposition was "peanut butter sandwich visitors who are not spending any money."

You still believe they are peanut butter sandwich [addressing the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman]?

I cannot hear you, you need to speak up a little louder than that.

Of course, I may tell you that if you believe that that is so, you can be proven to be wrong.

All the facsimiles that have come to my attention suggest that that is absolute rubbish. It is only a figment of somebody's imagination. Well if he did not say it, Madam Speaker, I will allow him to deny it.

Allow me to step back for a minute. When we took office in 1992 and got voted to this side of the House by our supporters on the other side and were sworn in, then we were requested to arrive at the Glass House to be sworn in as Members of Executive Council. One of the first things that happened was we received this voluminous document. I do not think it would be an exaggeration if I said it was somewhere between 4 to 6 inches thick. And on the top of that document was Cayman Airways.

The document told us about the $35 million losses to Cayman Airways in the couple of years. We found out too, that the previous Government had committed us to so much expenditure that at the end of December, there were going to be a substantial deficit—turned out to be as we know it—of $7 million.

But over a period of three years, they ran the deficit up to the tone of $55 million. They borrowed until the banks would not lend them any more, and that is the case with Cayman Airways. So, when we arrived in office (I do not know about my colleagues), I wondered how in the name of God we were going to get out of this mess. And I knew that the Financial Secretary had to be nervous about that position—he is only normal like the rest of us.

So we say let us use tourism as the vehicle and Madam Speaker, as my colleague says: Thank God we did it. Thank God, our people performed for us. Thank God to the private sector people who assisted us and continues to assist us.

Sometimes when I talk about the accomplishments I hope everybody realises that I am not just talking about myself, I am talking about the staff we have that we can direct and the support which we get from the hospitality industry in carrying out promotions and everything else. They are the ones who assisted us tremendously with the farm trips which are travel agents coming to the Cayman Islands to familiarise themselves with our products; airlines—Cayman Airways, American Airlines, Northwest, US Air in bringing these people free to our Islands to assist.

Whoever said that these visitors were peanut butter visitors, I challenge that statement.

In 1992, the contribution by tourists to the economy of these Islands was CI $168 million. Madam Speaker, if you wish to see the difference between what we found ($241,000) and what we did—$287,000—you then look at the contribution during 1993 to the economy by the tourism industry. That figure is $203 million dollars up from $168 million.

When it came to 1994, which we have just completed, the tourism industry has contributed to the economy $251 million—that is a lot of peanut butter sandwiches, Madam Speaker. While we are doing all of that we are also looking to lengthen the stay of the visitors who come to our shores. I have heard all kinds of number quoted, some says it is five days, six day but my fact say it is seven days.

Madam Speaker, they do not just have to take Thomas Jefferson's opinion about it. Here is a statistical abstract of the quarterly review of the Caribbean trend put out by the Caribbean Organisation. I am only going to look at 1994. The highest increase in tourist arrivals between the months of January and September 1994 is the Cayman Islands—21.4%. One of the paragraphs says: "Needless to say almost all destination reported lower growth rates during the summer months. The single exception was the Cayman Islands, which significantly has maintained an effective advertising programme in the United States. Ten of the 21 reporting countries recorded percentage decreases during the summer month."

Then it goes on to analyse the market response. "Tourist arrival from the United States up to October grew by just over 2% compared to the same period in 1993. Unites States tourist arrivals grew by about 7% in the winter month, but fell by an estimated 3% during the summer period."

It goes on to say: "The Cayman Islands, which gets nearly 80% of its tourist from the United States, reported a 15.2% increase in United States arrival up to September."

And the Chamber of Commerce says we are below average.

It reads on: "The Bahamas, Bonaire, Dominica, Montserrat, St. Martin, and the Turks and Caicos Islands all reported increase of more than 5%." A little bit over 5% for those countries and 15.2% for the Cayman Islands, and the Chamber of Commerce says we are below average and the opposition says we are not doing anything. But here is a professional body who says the Cayman Islands is holding and taking more of the market share in the Caribbean than most other Islands.

It further states, "Tourist arrival to the Caribbean from Canada increased by an estimated 5% over the ten months in 1994. Individual country's performances were somewhat varied and increases over 10% being recorded by Anguilla, the Cayman Islands, Curacao, Jamaica, and St. Martin." We are recording a 10% increase in Canadian visitors when the whole Caribbean is recording an estimated 5% increase. And we are below average according to the Chamber of Commerce survey.

"Long stay arrival from Europe increased by an estimated 4% during the January to October period. Six of the reporting countries; Anguilla, Antigua and Barbuda, Barbados, the Cayman Islands, Grenada and Guadalupe, showed increases of over 20%. The whole Caribbean area got an estimated 4%." And we got together with some other countries five times as much. You can do as many survey as you want, but he who walks the street and drives along the street will see the tourists.

When they contribute $251 million to the Cayman Islands economy that is a lot of marbles, if I could use that word. A total of $126 million was spent on room cost including food and other charges. Over $59 million was spent on food and beverage in the various restaurants. Almost $10 million in local transportation; $2.4 million on entertainment; almost $31 million in shopping; over $17 million in watersports activities; and about $5.2 million in miscellaneous spending. Is this still peanut butter?

How come he says he did not say that?

Madam Speaker, you have some people who write letters to the press about the Department of Tourism and the department not supporting Cayman Airways. What another bunch of rubbish. We changed our advertising programme and because of that change, not everything we do we can show Cayman Airways. But we have looked through 1994 for what assistance we gave to Cayman Airways in the marketplace to help promote traffic for our national carrier.

Do you have any idea what that figure is? $6.3 million. So whoever is writing the letters, tell them write one about that.

That is another political strategy to drive a wedge between me and the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation. That is all that is. But we were not born yesterday, and we know each other from when we went to school across the street. Let me go on to say, Madam Speaker, we are resident members in our districts.

Madam Speaker, we have used this tourism industry to help to turn this country around and I am not standing here to try and tell you that it is only the tourism industry. We are playing our part. Certainly the offshore financial centre—let us call it the International Financial Centre, which I think it is . . . and it was in the Euro One article back in 1989 that proved without a doubt that the Cayman Islands is a world banking centre—number 5 in the world. And you talk about jealousy. Tell that to those people who are on shore, and keep watching their faces. You want to see an expression?

I can say without a shadow of a doubt that these Cayman Islands and the financial industry and the way it is regulated is second to none. We are right up there with the big boys. We have done our thing, Madam Speaker, we have brought the visitors, we have stimulated the economy. We said back in November or December of 1994 that the future direction of tourism is not concentrating on numbers. We are going to concentrate on the amount of money that the tourism industry can generate in the favour of the Cayman Islands' economy.

Madam Speaker, I got an article the other day that I think will take me some time to explain, but I will begin. It is an article...

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, it is now 4.30. Are you going to continue beyond that time?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Would you prefer to take the adjournment now?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I would prefer Ma'am.

The Speaker: Would you then Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Environment and Planning—Leader of Government Business—move the motion for the adjournment?

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I am pleased to move the adjournment of this honourable House until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that the House do now adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The House is accordingly adjourned until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 24 MARCH 1995.

FRIDAY
24 MARCH, 1995
10.13 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question number 73, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION NO. 73

No. 73: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Affairs how many lawsuits are pending against Government from 1993 to date, and what are they.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Madam Speaker, there are seven civil actions which were commenced against the Attorney General and/or other Government Officials since 1993 and are still pending. A list giving details is being circulated separately to Members of the Legislative Assembly only.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Member say if in any of the instances of civil action listed, Government made any attempt to negotiate settlements other than through the courts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Madam Speaker, Government always tries to negotiate a settlement, as any wise participant in litigation does. Sometimes this is successful. And a number of cases both brought against Government and, indeed, brought by Government against others, have been successfully settled without recourse to a court hearing. Attempts have been made in the cases on the list before members this morning, and in some cases, in fact, I think in all cases, negotiations are ongoing and likely to remain ongoing until either the matter is resolved or it finishes up in court.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Would the Honourable Member have any idea as to what costs these may have incurred, as a ballpark figure, so far?

The Speaker: I do not think that was part of the original question, and I doubt if the Honourable Second Official Member can reply to that.

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Madam Speaker, I certainly would not be able to give any details because the answer is that I do not know. Costs, of course, are always a factor in any civil litigation and, indeed, costs form part of the claim either way. Generally speaking, the successful party recovers his (or its) costs against the unsuccessful party and Government is in no different position to anyone else in that respect. But the costs will carry on as long as these actions continue.

I would not be able to give an indication today, and, indeed, I am not sure that I would be able to give an indication if I had some time, because the question of costs and the bill of costs is not prepared until the matter is finished. It would not really be possible other than to give a very rough estimate, and I do not think that would be helpful to the House.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Bodden Town.
Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Honourable Member give the detail of the charges in each of these instances?

The Speaker: While, perhaps, this could technically be a resulting supplementary, I am not sure if the Honourable Second Official Member could give an undertaking.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, if I may.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: May I be allowed to amplify? I mean in the case of Hurlstone Construction, whether the charge is for breach of contract or just something brief like that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Madam Speaker, I do not think it would be right of me to give details of the various allegations that are made by one side or the other in these matters. Although I am happy to give details as I have done to Members of the Legislature this morning, civil actions are, by their very nature, private actions, and the papers that are in the court are not public documents as the case may be with criminal matters. So, I do not think it would be right of me to actually give that information out this morning.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, the next question is number 74, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTION NO. 74

No. 74: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Affairs what progress is being made with the drafting of suitable legislation to safeguard against invasion of privacy as passed unanimously by the Legislative Assembly on 25 March 1993.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Madam Speaker, proposed amending legislation has been drafted by Legislative Counsel and was submitted to the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications and Works in October 1994.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Does the Member have any idea at all when the Ministry of Agriculture, Communications and Works, and the Legal Department (or whichever will sponsor the Bill) might be bringing the legislation to Parliament? And is it correct that the Honourable Member said "amending legislation" and not a comprehensive Bill?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The responsibility for bringing the legislation before the Legislative Assembly will be the Ministry to which I have referred. My Portfolio merely assists in drafting the legislation for the consideration by the Ministry, and when they are happy with it they will no doubt bring it before the Executive Council and then the House.

What I can say to the Member is that following on from the draft that has been submitted, I understand from the Ministry that they are now thinking of incorporating this into a full review of the Telecommunications Law which will be a considerably larger drafting exercise than what we have dealt with so far.

Whether that will turn out to be their final decision, of course, I do not know. That is up to the Ministry. But I have been told by the Ministry that is their thinking at the moment. I am really unable to say when that legislation will come before the House.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: The motion that was passed by the House asked specifically that legislation for the purpose of safeguarding invasion of privacy be enacted. Could this then be properly done by amending some other legislation, as is suggested in the substantive answer, or, indeed, incorporated into a Bill dealing with telecommunications?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The amendments that have been drafted and submitted to the Ministry relate to the Telecommunications Law. The Ministry felt that it needed to make further investigations and inquiries before proceeding with that.

Out of those inquiries and talks, they have now come to the conclusion (whether it is the final conclusion, I do not know) that it may be that the Telecommunications Law, as such, requires a complete review.

Now, it is likely that the sort of privacy legislation to which the motion was referring could be incorporated perfectly satisfactorily into that new Telecommunications Law. But until my Portfolio or the Legislative Council sees the Ministry's instructions, I cannot give a definitive answer on that.

It may still require separate legislation or it may be incorporated into a new Telecommunications Law.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Honourable Member say if, to his knowledge, there are any ongoing activities by the Government or of the State which might find itself contrary to any such Invasion of the Privacy Act that is in any way slowing down the progress of this particular legislation?

The Speaker: I think that is an expression of opinion and I will not admit that.

The next question is No. 75, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 75

No. 75: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture if Caymanian students enrolled at the International College of the Cayman Islands are eligible for student loans under the recently announced scheme.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Honourable Members are aware that in the November 1994 Meeting of this Honourable House, I tabled the Draft Guidelines for the guaranteed Student Loan Scheme. I should say, Madam Speaker, that the information is public.

The purpose of this scheme is clearly outlined in the Guidelines, and Members are reminded of this as I quote a paragraph from page one: "The scheme is designed to provide students with the opportunity to pursue higher education including academic, technical and vocational training at local or overseas institutions (including junior colleges)."

"Section 15 of the Guidelines generally defines the institutions to whom funding will be provided for Caymanian scholars under this scheme. Ideally, the institution must be recognised and rated as 'competitive' or above in an approved and reputable training or college guide. Funding for other institutions (such as ICCI) will be contingent upon the student having an offer of employment upon graduation or upon having identified provisional employment in his field of study, or contingent upon the student's chances of gaining admission to an accredited senior institution."

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Will the Honourable Minister give an undertaking that this information be conveyed to ICCI? It strikes me that the administration and the students attending that college do not know that this facility is applicable to them.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, we will send a copy of the guidelines to ICCI. However, as I said, in the November meeting, the draft guidelines from which I just quoted were tabled. That means that they are for public dissemination. The Member could have well informed any person or any institution or body corporate of the contents—if he had read the contents.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: There seems to be a special provision with regard to other institutions, which includes ICCI, that a student have an offer of employment upon graduation. Is this also a requirement in regard to students going to accredited universities, that they must have an offer of employment upon graduation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The second paragraph in the question identifies the provision that the Member is inquiring about. I will read it again. "Section 15 of the Guidelines generally defines the institutions to whom funding will be provided for Caymanian scholars under this scheme. Ideally, the institution must be recognised and rated as 'competitive' or above in an approved and reputable training or college guide. Funding for other institutions (such as ICCI) will be contingent upon the student having an offer of employment upon graduation..." So, Madam Speaker, the answer to his question is no.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: As ICCI is a local institution and does offer up to associate degree, I am told, and other accredited universities, one would assume, would take it up to the degree level, is it any less of a requirement that persons in the accredited ones that take it up to degree level should have a job after graduation as a part of the requirements for a loan?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the answer concerning the differentiation is that ICCI is not competitive.

The Speaker: The next question is number 20, which is the deferred question, standing in the name of The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

DEFERRED QUESTION NO. 20

No. 20: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works what is the cost to date of the diversion road at the end of the Airport runway.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

In an answer to a November 1994 Parliamentary Question, the cost for the work necessary to provide a double spray and chip diversion road was estimated by the Public Works Department to cost in the vicinity of $275,000. This did not include work on upgrading Smith Road or hot mix surfacing.

However, after taking into account the design which included a severe curve, it was decided that with heavy vehicles and the large number of cars using this stretch of road, the spray and chip surface would not stand up. Also, in having to create two new junctions and finding some unexpected deep areas, considerably more fill had to be used than was at first anticipated.

To date, the diversion road with the upgrading of Owen Roberts Drive to Foster's Food Fair; Owen Roberts/Crewe Road junction; Smith Road/Crewe Road junction; Crighton's Property to Smith Road/Crewe Road junction, and the use of hot mix have all contributed to increasing the cost of the project to $1,178,114.00.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Are there other elements that could have actually been contributory costs that have not been included here?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: The figure that I have just given is the cost of the project to date.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Could the Minister say if the costs to Public Works, as a department, are also included in this price? And, if it were, would it come, in fact, more to over $2 million?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, I refer to what I have just said. The cost of the project to date is the figure that I have just given.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning.

Statements by Members of the Government. It would appear that the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture has just one statement to make.

STATEMENTS BY MEMBERS OF THE GOVERNMENT

LABOUR LAW AMENDMENT BILL

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

As the Mover of Private Members Motion No. 2/85, which resulted in the subsequent passage of the Labour Law, 1987, I am pleased today as the Minister to be tabling as a white paper, the draft of the Labour (Amendment) Bill, 1995, which I intend to bring to this Honourable House in June of this year.

Since the enactment of the Labour Law, 1987, there has not been a comprehensive review with amendments to this important legislation.

When the Labour Law was introduced there was a fair amount of criticism from some corners of our society, particularly employers through the Chamber of Commerce who questioned the need for this legislation. However, it is now widely accepted that the Labour Law was a sensible and necessary safeguard for our workforce and has proven its worth over the years even though there are still those who would prefer to treat their employees as they feel.

To be effective, it is necessary that changes in our society (and in this case our workforce) are closely monitored and that Government's policies including its legislative framework are updated in order to anticipate or respond to these changes. This is the case with the Labour Law, and, therefore, based on workplace inspections, labour hearings, verbal, and written representations, together with practical difficulties and loopholes in the Labour Law, it was decided to undertake a review of the law.

In mid July 1994, my Ministry and the Labour Department began this review process. Once the recommendations were approved by Executive Council, we were able to receive an amending Bill in March (this month). Amendments to the Labour Law, as incorporated in the draft Bill that I am tabling today, include clarification of necessity of a written statement of working conditions; probation period to be agreed and extended in writing, and the rights of the employee and employer on the termination of employment by notice; entitlement for leave, that is, vacation, sick leave, maternity leave and compassionate leave, is strengthened; and entitlement for public holiday pay is clarified.

Provision for breaks during the workday or shift period, as well as for a wage statement, including gratuities to the employee is proposed.

The amendment also proposes to strengthen the provisions for overtime pay, as well as strengthening the prohibition of certain deductions from the employee's wages. The provision concerning severance pay, unfair dismissal and redundancy are also proposed to be clarified. The amendment also proposes to increase the levels of penalties for non-compliance with the law.

In order to allow for the new initiatives to be undertaken by the department, the amendment proposes to give the Director of Labour the functions of providing and assisting in facilitating recruitment and employment training for Caymanians.

In recent years, there has been an increase in labour disputes, many of which result in formal labour hearings. This obviously inundates the small staff complement of the department and restricts their ability to operate in the field to provide counselling and other preventative measures.

Seeing that there is a limited will for employers to abide by any voluntary code or moral persuasion in the absence of specific legal provisions and sanctions, it is imperative that we address these disturbing problems in our workplace and appropriate that this be done through the Labour Law.

The Labour Department will also continue its efforts at educating both the employer and employee on the Labour Law as well as conducting other preventative measures.

The Government feels that the proposed Labour (Amendment) Bill, 1995, will clarify, update, and strengthen the law for the benefit of all. It is my hope as the Minister responsible for Labour that the amended Labour Law will enhance the tranquillity of Cayman's labour relations and will help the economy of the Cayman Islands as we build for the 21st Century. It is our intention, contingent upon the Bill being passed in the June meeting, to have the Law Commissioner consolidate the Labour Law for ease of reference to its users.

I trust that all Honourable Members, employers, and employee organisations, and the media will review these proposed amendments and do their part to assist the public in understanding and appreciating the proposed changes.

My Ministry and the Labour Department are standing by to assist in areas where clarification is needed. If improvements are recommended, they will be gladly considered. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Regarding the tabling of the amendment to the Labour law, this is so ordered. Continuation of the debate on the 1995 Throne Speech. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Development and Planning, continuing.

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I would like to begin this morning with a brief summary of some of the topics that I touched on yesterday. Perhaps there is no better way to start than to summarise my comments on the Chamber of Commerce survey.

For a cost of $15 a copy of the Chamber of Commerce Directory 1994 was obtained, and as I scan the pages of this document I find 16 different committees in addition to the Executive Committee. As I counted the membership on these various committees, I found that there were a total of 128 members of these committees. Although one or two Caymanians were on three or four committees (and I counted them each time), I could only find 35 Caymanians among them.

As I looked at the Executive Committee of this organisation, I found the President to be Mr. Roy McTaggart; the first Vice President to be Mr. Steve Hawley of Work Bench, Limited; the second Vice President to be Mr. Robert Wood, of Woods furniture and design; the Treasure to be Mr. Sydney Coleman, Paget Brown and Company; and the Secretary to be Mr. Adrian Briggs, Sunset House and Sunset Divers.

While scanning through the committees, I found some very familiar names. For example, when we look at the Government and Legal Affairs Committee of the Chamber of Commerce, we find a name like Mr. Linford Pierson, former Executive Council Member responsible for Communications and Works. Is there any real wonder, Madam Speaker, that the survey they did turned out like it did?

There is a committee that deals with the publication of articles (all these letters we see coming to the press). But in my view it is the responsibility as well of the Executive Committee (which I have just named) to make sure that everything which leaves the Chamber falls within their blessing. This Publication Committee is headed by none other than Mr. Steve Hawley (he is the Chairman). As I said yesterday, and I am doing a summary, somebody told me that Mr. Steve Hawley has been on this Committee for a long time and they cannot get him off of it. I wonder why.

There are other members on this committee, Madam Speaker, Mr. Roy McTaggart, Mr. David Byrd, Mr. Tommy Bodden, Dr. Elaine Campbell—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I think that I need to draw to your attention that you are repeating yourself and it is becoming tedious—at least to me, because I have been hearing it over and over. You did say that you are doing a summary, which means that you have already repeated it. Could you avoid that, if possible, because that is against Standing Orders?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I look at the survey in 1993 and just to remind the public as to what it says, as a comparison to what came out a few weeks ago, the conclusion (not to mention in detail what the 1993 survey says) of that survey says: "It would appear that the public believes that the government has done quite well with Cayman Airways, agriculture, tourism and Education. Additionally, it would appear that a satisfactory condition exists with regard to government expenditure, budget, health services, roads, and drug abuse, although additional attention to these areas would be of benefit." This happened in 1993. It came to us in March of 1994. I wonder what happened between then and the most recent report.

They said tourism is below average. I was looking this morning, when it was called to my attention, at the recent issue of The Cayman Executive, Second Quarter 1995, page 16. It talks about "Cayman's Tourism keeping the picture perfect." In an article written by Miss Ryhan Shaw. I will read just the first couple of lines: "At Cayman's first Annual Tourism Conference the government/private sector marketers and travel representatives got together to forge a closer partnership in order to ensure that the island's quality product is maintained. You can say that it is all sunshine and happiness in Cayman's tourism industry as it continues to experience impressive growth."

And the Chamber of Commerce says we are below average. They also say that we are not keeping the public informed. I wonder what the purpose of this conference was. And working with the private sector... I wonder if they knew if this conference was held.

On page 25 of this same document, written by a man named Mark Chapman, the bold heading is "NO TIME LIKE THE PRESENT. Cayman's economy continues to be bright and brisk and judging from all signs in the market place the time is perfect for investing in the Cayman Islands." Just repeating one or two sentences, Madam Speaker: "Whether one likes it or not, Cayman is developing into the fast lane and leading indicators show no sign of slowdown. Construction—always a leading indicator of an economic upturn. The positive signs coming from the construction industry are a sure sign that the local economy is on the move again and after several not-so-good years for many businesses." And they say construction is below average.

On the economy: "It is difficult to think of any nation which has managed to sustain low inflation, low unemployment, and low interest rates for any length of time. Over the past few years, Cayman has accomplished this." I did not hear any excellent rating on the economy from the Chamber of Commerce either.

"Financial institutions are busier than they have ever been. Organisation in the travel and leisure industry expect another exceptional year." But that is not what Mr. Rick Catlin said, he said tourism was down in January. It is not the indication that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman was saying either. He says tourism is down even though I showed him the article that said it is up.

I think the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said the MGTP was a good Plan. I wonder why he did not say that when he was running for office in 1992. I have to believe he would not be here. That Plan was estimated to cost $200 million. If we say that $12 million is what we have to repay on an annual basis for loans which are $61 million at the present time, then I wonder what would be the cost annually if they had gone ahead and implemented that Master Ground Transportation Plan. I venture to say something in the area of $35 million to $45 million annually.

When you make that payment, I wonder if the bank is going to honour your overdraft, and I wonder where the money is going to come from to do the capital projects.

We have to find an answer to the traffic congestion. There is no question about that. But, certainly, we have to find a less costly answer, or an answer that we can implement in stages so that the country will be able to afford it.

Yesterday, I made reference to the Central Planning Authority and we heard many comments during 1993—not so many in 1994—about its activities. I asked the Director of Planning a few days ago to give me a list of the number of applications that are presently before the Central Planning Authority and the Planning Department that have been there for over six weeks. We hear so much about delays. But I think we have to differentiate between delays and the Planning Department and Central Planning Authority ensuring that the plan of a building is correct and structurally sound, and that the electric, plumbing, and fire security are in place to ensure no loss of life.

When I look at this list of 44 projects, and bearing in mind that they dealt with 589 applications in 1994, this is not an astounding number by any means. Many of these cases . . . here is one: a dock, "awaiting copies of advertisement." Here is an addition to a restaurant, "awaiting copies of advertisement." Change of use, "Central Planning Authority deferred to revise site plan." Apartments, "CPA deferred to revise site plans." A commercial project, "CPA deferred February 1995 due to design problems." Another apartment, "CPA deferred due to beach access and building height." Another apartment, "advised by applicant to hold application until further notice." Another shop, "CPA deferred awaiting revised site plan."

It goes on and on, Madam Speaker. Yet, when you hear it on the street, it is the Central Planning Authority's fault; it is the fault of the Planning Officers. That is one side of the story. The side of the story that I am telling you today is the facts.

Let us, when we hear these complaints from our constituents, . . . and if you expect me to help you, let us get the details of the project that they are talking about so that when I refer to the Planning Department we can go specifically to the file and determine what the cause is why the application had not been approved.

In what I call our National Team Bible, which is our Manifesto, for Tourism we said our policy was: "1) To maintain and improve on what we presently have to offer our tourists." I do not believe that anyone can justifiably say that we have not done some of that, and still continue to do it. "2) To promote and expand our share of the tourism market especially in relation to tourists in the middle and upper income brackets." I do not think anyone can say that we are not doing that either.

Our objectives: "We will continue to promote tourism on the North American continent." That is still 77% to 80% of our business, and we are doing it. "We will broaden the base of our tourism product by enhanced promotions in the United Kingdom, Europe and the rest of the world where the currencies are now strong, causing vacations to be more affordable." We did promotions in Frankfurt and Munich, Germany; Vienna, Austria; Milan and Rome, Italy last year. And this afternoon I am off to the United Kingdom to do promotions there.

Evidence that we are following what we promised the people and the policies that we put out more than two years ago are, in fact, being accomplished. But you do not read that in the Caymanian Compass, from the Chamber of Commerce survey neither, or The New Caymanian. I think it is time to change their name. Let us call them "The Old Caymanian" rather than New.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Call it "No Caymanian."

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: "We intend to promote Caymanianisation in the tourism industry, such as hotels, restaurants, watersports and taxis." We are working on it. It is not an easy area to accomplish a lot in two years, but we are committed to working on what we promised the people we were going to do.

We have had discussions with the representatives of the Taxi Association and the cruise lines. We have had discussions with some of the tour operators here and we will continue to do so in order to find an amicable solution to what is perceived to be a problem.

"We intend to work hand-in-hand with the tourism industry to increase occupancy rates in the hotels and the number of customers in restaurants." I quoted figures yesterday that this is actually going on. It has happened, will happen and will continue to happen.

In 1994, $59.5 million was spent by visitors on food and beverage in restaurants and in hotels. How much more evidence does anyone need to be convinced that what we promised the people in this item of our Manifesto has taken place in 1993, 1994, is taking place in 1995 and will take place in 1996, God willing. Yet, they say that we are below average. Only in the eyes of some people. The majority of the people in this Island know what the position is.

I was speaking to a gentleman the other day. I did not even bring up the subject, but before he left the discussion he shook my hand and said; "Tom, don't listen to what they have to say. What they are writing is all rot anyway." I have to agree with him.

Another item of the objectives on tourism was; "We will review the current moratorium on hotels and continue to encourage the construction of hotels in all the districts." We have done that. We have reviewed the moratorium of that day—it has expired. We have encouraged hotels in other districts. We have one that is already approved to be constructed in Pease Bay—a five star hotel. Nowhere in the Cayman Islands, at the present time, can you find a five-star hotel. I am sure that is not below average.

"We intend to promote, in conjunction with the private sector, the training of Caymanians in tourism..." The committee is established. Meetings are being held between the Government, the private sector, those involved in the labour area of it and we are going to obviously add the Community College. But first you have to get a general agreement that you are going to work together to do it. Then you put your vehicles in place to accomplish that agreement.

Yesterday I was quoting from an article written by Mrs. Bridget McPartland, apparently another member of the Opposition. What I failed to mention was an article she wrote in The New Caymanian issue of the 10th through 16th March, 1995 where she took a swipe at all of us, particularly the West Bay representatives. But in the process of it, Madam Speaker, with all respect, she took a swing at you too. She said, "Does the Speaker of the House have power that she can not enforce due to the fear of sacrificing her career?"

What a bunch of nonsense: she does not listen to the radio, or what? I here you sitting us all down at times, Madam Speaker, even the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, even me—just now you corrected me for tedious repetition. So what in the world is she talking about? I tell you she must be living somewhere else because when I was talking about her before, when she did not know that we had changed the advertising programme in tourism, I said she must really be living in some isolated area where she has no contact. If she is going to be a politician I hope she can get her act together, because this type of thing is not going to make it. Some of us hope she sticks her nose out, that will give us the full right to deal with it.

I found an article some days ago written by the economic advisor to the World Travel and Tourism Council. As I was saying yesterday, we have utilised the tourism industry as the vehicle to stimulate economic growth in this country and to assist in turning around the economy and the employment situation and business in this country.

Some people said we were growing too fast, certainly the Opposition made those comments. And then in January, before we released the statistics, they said tourism was down only to be proven wrong later.

I also made mention of the contribution that tourism makes to this country by means of total visitor expenditure. When we took office in 1992, the contribution was $168 million. At the end of 1993, it was $203 million. At the end of 1994, it was $251 million.

We said in a document which we laid on the Table some time ago, the Tourism Management Policy Document, that we have no intention of continuing that level of growth: 241,000 in 1992; 287,000 in 1993; 341,000 in 1994. What the focus is for the future is that how much contribution can be made to the economy of this Island by visitors. The emphasis will be on the value that we get from our visitors—trying to improve that rather than the numbers.

This man wrote an article entitled "Strategy—Elimination conflict between aviation and tourism policies." When I first read the article I thought about the conflict in some of our minds about all the carriers that are coming into the Cayman Islands and that Tom is taking American Airlines; and Tom is not supporting Cayman Airways; and the marketing that is being done by the Department of Tourism overseas as written in the press by someone is not supporting our national carrier. That is another bit of rubbish, Madam Speaker.

When we looked at the 1994 programme we found that the Department of Tourism Financial Assistance, in terms of the advertising programme, we spent $6.3 million (US) promoting Cayman Airways. So, whoever wrote that letter needs to write another one to correct the number.

But we cannot, as a people, as a government, ignore the contribution of the other airline. As the Minister of Tourism, I decided a long time ago to work with everybody and I am going to continue that activity. How can you exclude American Airlines, one of the largest carriers of people in this hemisphere—probably the largest. Certainly the largest amount of visitors who come to the Cayman Islands (and anybody who disbelieves this can check it) come on American Airlines. Those persons who write letters trying to tell me that I should not work with them. . . would that be in the best interest of the Cayman Islands? That would be very short-sighted Madam Speaker.

At the end of the day working with them helps us to gain more business than we presently have and that must be in the best interest of the people of this country.

The future direction that we are headed, I think this article also speaks to it. One paragraph says: "It has to be said, however, that all too often developing countries measure the success of their tourism policies by counting the number of visitors, instead of measuring the new contribution these visitors make to the economy. It is the net earnings of foreign exchange, after the imports consumed by foreign investment have been paid, for that must be measured. It must be recognised that import leakage can be as high as 40% or more for the tourism economies of many developing countries."

Our policy is right, Madam Speaker. Those people who were talking about peanut butter sandwiches—tell them to check these numbers that I quoted as a contribution to the economy of this country by visitors.

I have looked at some visitor arrival schedules. Ten years ago the arrival figure was 121,214. Last year it was 341,000. It is not the numbers that count, it is the dollars that are left behind that really matter.

I would like to speak a little bit to our dealing with the future direction of the United Kingdom Market and the European Market. In the United Kingdom, image is key in the travel industry. I think the Cayman Islands continues to position itself as an upscale inspirational destination—one which is purchased on the basis of perceived quality, rather than low cost. The aspects of safety, political stability, and the warm Caymanian welcome are the main threads of all promotional work and the Crown Colony status is also actively promoted.

I think this image is not in keeping with some charter activity of recent days. But we will deal with that. The image of being Americanised persists and is negative in that market. We stress the efficiency and reliability of service within a traditional Caymanian atmosphere. But continued introduction of new hotels adds to the feeling that the Islands are moving forward.

The Cayman Islands are well known as a premier dive destination among divers and non-divers, in fact, we must be careful not to over promote the diving to the general consumer as this sporting image can be off putting to those seeking a relaxing escape.

We know that within the travel industry the profile of the Cayman Islands has never been higher, thanks to increased face-to-face sales activity and training by the sales team, combined with increased co-promotion and the all-important tour operators, public relations has been very active and successful and the Government's stance, in refunding the extra burden placed on tour operators, is also welcome. The forthcoming United Kingdom promotion next week will further strengthen this position.

Amongst consumers, awareness is growing, but it is not as strong as other Caribbean destinations such as, Barbados, Jamaica, Antigua, and St. Lucia. Increased advertising budget for 1995 is being directed at the consumer, monthly inquiries have already risen to well over 2,000 and forward booking is looking very strong.

The Cayman Islands is outselling the Bahamas and departures in April and May are virtually sold out. There is no doubt that the added reach available by the British Airways network has made the scheduled service more viable than the original Caledonia Charter.

We must watch what our competitors are doing in the advertising world, Madam Speaker. Countries like Bahamas and Jamaica and Barbados are advertising heavily at the moment, with high spend consumer colour campaigns in the national press. It is nevertheless satisfying to see that the Cayman Islands January arrivals from the United Kingdom were up 80%—way ahead of market trend.

I think with the much publicised introduction of twice weekly British Airways service on Caledonia aircraft, the Cayman Islands competitive position is stronger than it has ever been. So many United Kingdom holiday-makers are not willing to change aircraft to get to their holiday destination—especially over Miami. There is considerable prestige also to being part of the British Airways network. It is an airline, as we do know that brings quality to the mind of a person who travels on it.

The Sister Islands are very important and have tremendous potential, particularly if improvements are made to Island Air's reservation system for European tour operators. Mr. Brian Bird, who is the new General Manager of Island Air, is accompanying us next week on promotions in the United Kingdom and will be accompanying us in Spain in May, basically to deal with this reservation difficulty.

It is these very sort of remote little Islands where the discerning traveller is constantly seeking. We must maintain a balance between increasing demand and awareness and keeping their hideaway images so as not to lose the cache.

Product-wise, the Cayman Islands lacks what is known as bouquet hotels—properties with 25 to 50 luxury rooms, high-class restaurants, beachfront locations and what many would call 'snob appeal.' Islands such as Nevis, BVI, Anquilla, Barbados and Jamaica offer wide choice in the sought after sector. Our condominium beds are of a very high standard, but without the availability for tour operators to sell those on allocation, it is a hard sell in the United Kingdom.

The Caribbean also has a reputation for poor self-catering infrastructure and we are working hard to overcome this image with regard to the Cayman Islands.

All of this would probably never have happened if the National Team Government had not been successful in negotiating with an airline such as Caledonia Air, which was a subsidiary of British Airways to have direct flights into Grand Cayman. No other government has ever accomplished that, and we take credit for its accomplishment.

We decided quite some time ago that the diversification of the tourism base by promoting visitors from Europe would not really come off in a substantial way if they had to reach us over Miami for a variety of reasons: 1) The safety reason. Germans are leery of travelling via Miami and we have seen the news on more than one occasion last year, and perhaps also in 1993 (if my memory is serving me correctly). So the ability to connect from Europe on Caledonia Airways direct to the Cayman Islands is very attractive.

When we were dealing with it we ran into all sorts of opposition. "You are going to do all of this for one flight a week?" I think that is what the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and some others were saying. What I was reminded of was in the early days of establishing the runway here in Grand Cayman in the early 1950s, sometime we were lucky to have one flight a week: but look at where we have come to.

I think that some of the skeptics thought that the charter would not survive. I heard the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman raising a question—a valid question—"How many passengers arrived in the Cayman Islands on Caledonia Air from the 5th of December until the 24th?" That was the period that the answer was given in. "Nineteen hundred and fourteen (1,914)." I do not know what they are going to do with that, I do not think that was the answer they were looking for.

It has been so strong that it convinced the British Airways Officers to decide to put in a scheduled service to Grand Cayman. And we were very pleased to see this because we believe this is in the best interest of this country now and in the future—not just for visitors who dive and relax on our beaches, or just to let down their hair and not do anything, but for business travellers as well.

Europe, by square mile, is one of the wealthiest areas in the world. Why should we not get a piece of that action? We hear so many comments about Cayman and how it is faring. There is no country in the Caribbean that is attracting more business to their shores than the Cayman Islands.

I quoted about Bermuda yesterday, moving towards a referendum on independence. In their own Government Royal Gazette, they are loading praises on the Cayman Islands—the way the government is run, the decisions they have taken. You know, everybody outside this country can see how well off we are and how well this country is managed, financial and otherwise. But the Chamber of Commerce and the Opposition cannot see it.

The consoling factor for us is that the people of this country see it; the people of this country understand it and they understand why the Chamber of Commerce would do a survey and produce results like that as well.

We are not, and never will be, a puppet government. We decided in 1992 when we were campaigning and making promises to our people that we were going to be a government for the people of this country. I did not promise them that everyday I would show up at their door and do greetings—that is not possible. You cannot carry out your duties and do visitations as you would like either. But everything that we do, Madam Speaker—and I am not just speaking for Tom Jefferson, I am speaking for the National Team—the focus is in the best interest of the people of the Cayman Islands. And, by God, the Opposition is still looking to find something that we have done that is not—and they are still looking. I hope to God that they will continue to look.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, would this be a convenient time to take a suspension?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.40 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.34 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning, continuing the debate.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I have one more point on article written by Mrs. Bridget McPartland.

In The New Caymanian dated 10th through 16th March, this is where she is taking a swing at the Minister—she calls him "Minister Bush, from West Bay." It says: "The call by Minister Bush, West Bay represen- tative for the House, to reject the original Motion of Government's Misappropriation of Funds for Paving Private Roads and Driveways in West Bay, was quite amusing and appalling since the House was previously prorogued with no resistance from the Speaker."

And she calls herself a politician, writing articles where she does not even understand the Constitution. How is Madam Speaker going to resist the power that His Excellency has under the Constitution to prorogue this House? They are trying to play like they know what is going on... Anyway, I am going to leave this lady alone for now.

In today's Caymanian Compass there was an article written on Immigration Directives. There was some wonder as to why this did not come from the Government. They are still not listening to us—Dr. Steve Tomlinson is a Member of the National Team, why could it not come from him? We keep him well informed, as well as the other Members of the House. He was giving, more or less, advance notice of draft Immigration Directives which are going to be circulated to the public. There is nothing wrong with that—putting the public on notice that these are some of the things within the draft directives that will need to be considered. I have no argument with what he did.

I do not know why the Caymanian Compass should have an argument. It does not have to come from this side of the House. It can come from our team member across the floor. There is no Standing Order that says it has to come from this side of the House; there is no moral obligation that says it has to come from this side of the House. Any team member can do it.

These are draft Immigration Directives, Madam Speaker.

There is a lot of talk about environmental matters. Some concern about our reefs; we need to rest some of these dive sites. We are presently working on a comprehensive coral reef monitoring programme utilising new methodology which will be implemented in Grand Cayman and the Sister Islands at least by the end of this year, by scientists of the Protection and Conservation section of the Department of the Environment.

This programme involves the installation of permanent quadrant trans-sections on a number of selected sites, instead of employing the labour intensive and time-consuming method of observation. Photographs will be taken at each site and analysed in the laboratory for quantity and quality of the colour on the reef. This initial data will be compared with data obtained in 1984 and should give a good indication of the change in the health of the reef in the last ten years.

The monitoring process will be repeated over time every one to two years, in order to detect changes in key component species. Monitoring programmes of this nature we believe are critical to the management of our coral reef system. The Protection and Conservation section of the Department of Environment also hopes to facilitate a study aimed at determining the carrying capacities of our marine protected areas. And some people say we are not doing anything.

It is hoped that this study will be assisted by regional and international experts in the field of coral reef management and protection.

Current marine park moorings, that is, moorings for dive boats, signs and buoys will continue to be maintained by the Protection and Conservation Section and additional moorings will be installed on the north coast of all islands, as well as East End in Grand Cayman.

A priority area for the installation of new dive moorings is the north coast of Little Cayman, outside of the Bloody Bay/Jackson Point Marine Park. The moorings will facilitate the implementation of the Marine Conservation Board's licence scheme for controlling the entry, mooring and discharge of divers and snorkelers in the park.

By providing alternative dive sites outside of the park, the stress and impact associated with divers can be better managed. Enforcement of Conservation Laws and regulations will continue to be a priority and have received increased attention with the recent hiring of a Chief Marine Enforcement Officer. It is proposed that additional enforcement officers will be employed during the current year.

There have been some articles in the press, and we have seen this at least once every year about Cayman vacation costs that top western Caribbean. There was one in the press on 2 March 1995. The point to make here is that we should be trying to compare apples to apples, and not destinations that are mass tourism-oriented to destinations which are promoting visitors to come to an upscale, quality destination. In other words, there is a difference between a business that decides to have a small profit and a big volume, so that the price paid is smaller. That is the case with places like Cancun, Jamaica, Cozumel, and Bahamas. I think it is healthy to continue to do these surveys, but it is healthier to try to ensure that the comparison is bananas to bananas, or apples to apples, and not cassava to yam.

During the contribution by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman he spoke—some people might say forever and a day—about the civil service. I know a little about the civil service too.

I do not believe that there is any government in this hemisphere that has a civil service more efficient than what we have. There are always examples that we can draw of some people who are not necessarily at that level. But, we are looking at the overall position. You know when there is some talk about victimisation, the only body of people, I believe, that may be able to prove the justification that there is victimisation going on is the National Team itself. Do you see anybody supporting us?

Not the Caymanian Compass, not The New Caymanian, not the Chamber of Commerce—they even changed their survey from one year to the next. In 1993 they said we were not doing too badly of a job. In 1994 they said we are below average. Is it because we are getting close to the election that they change their minds, or what?

I think the Members of the National Team are more victims than anyone else in this country. Anybody who has the gall to start talking about whether there is free press, and free rights in this country ought to come out of the closet and the dark because they need to come out in the sunlight and look around. If there were not freedom of the press, how in the world could all these articles be written? How in the world can surveys, like the Chamber of Commerce put out one year and then the next, be done?

I believe in those freedoms, but I also believe there is a responsibility on everyone's part to perform their functions based on fact and fair comment.

There is no need for the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman to lecture us about the civil service, unless he is going to try to tell us about the harassment and victimisation that was going on during the years 1988 and 1992. I did not hear him speak about that. He pretends he does not know.

I do not believe there is any member of the civil service that need have any fear about the present government. The only thing they need to do (like I did when I was there) is their duty, their job. God knows, everybody is making sure we do ours. Why should they not do theirs?

In the area of efficiency it is doing well, that is, the civil service. You know, Madam Speaker, I was once responsible for the civil service in this House. With the exception of the present First Official Member, I cannot recall too many times hearing after I defended the civil service on many occasions, when the government decided I had too much to do and moved that subject on elsewhere, I cannot recall hearing too much defending of the civil service in this House under the former Governor, Mr. Alan Scott, who was then the president of this Chamber. And they want to talk about victimisation—could not even get yourself defended in here.

The working together between the then Governor, the President, and the former Government, was a machinery to behold. Let us pray to God that we do not get that combination again, although there is some new alliance forming on the front page of the Caymanian Compass that I wonder about.

One of the big people in that group was the former Minister of Health between 1982 and 1992. The other member of that group is the former Minister responsible for Communications and Works, and let me not forget the former Minister for Education. I remember Motion No. 3/90 when I wanted to put forward my view that I was not in support of the motion. Initially we were told, as official Members, that we did not have any vote on it. When they realised that they could not win without us, the Governor then told us that we had to vote. When I said that I could not support it, the former Member for Education said: "You do what you want, but this is going through." And they are talking about victimisation? Tell them to go talk to Mr. Benson Ebanks in West Bay: that is the fellow who told me that.

But, Madam Speaker, that is history. What the people of this country must remember to do—is like I continue to hear the Second Elected Member for George Town saying: the people of the Cayman Islands have common sense. I would add to that—I have not run into any nationality that has more sense than the people of the Cayman Islands. I hope that they will continue to use that common sense as they make decisions about which candidate they are going to elect, or re-elect in 1996, because I believe what I see on the horizon there is some real danger.

There are some people up front who are players seeking more and more power, and God help all of us if we do not exercise our common sense and elect them.

They believe the National Team is weak—and they believe that they have everything going, their machinery going, and they have people in their clubs spreading all kinds of rumour. We work in the Glass House, but we know what is going on too. We are going to put them to the real test, Madam Speaker. It is not going to be as easy as they are dreaming about.

We are going to continue—whether the Caymanian Compass carries us, whether The New Caymanian carries us, whether CNN carries us or not—to go to the people in each district of this country and tell them what we are doing; what we intend to do; how we have fulfilled our promises to them and, how this country has been turned around by the National Team in two years, which no other government has done, as far as I know.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: You do not see any political spending spree now, Madam Speaker. You do not see any line up to the bank trying to borrow money, only the US$20 million which they committed that we wanted to pay off to look like a respectable government.

Do you know what we are doing? We have to take $12 million out of the revenue that we earned to pay their debts—$12 million every year. We could do a lot with that to provide services for our own people.

That is what happens when a government takes the position and forgets about fiscal responsibility—"We are going to do as we please because we got all the Official Members on the Finance Committee. Everything we want we can vote it in because we have enough [Members] to do it."

I really have to see the public of this country voting them back in. I do not think it is going to happen. I think they are living in a dream world.

When you look at what is happening in the financial world, Cayman has never been busier; employment has, really, never been better in the financial industry; employment in the construction industry...when we took office those who decided to register when we did the survey around this Island amounted to 1,100 people. We checked the other day and there were 100 people on the register.

You have not heard the last of the construction industry yet. Sure, there are still some contractors who are not 100% occupied, but you should talk to some of them. They see more than the writing on the wall, they have hope—what they did not have before.

A gentleman told me last night, he said: "You know, I could not find work in the construction industry during 1990, 1991 and 1992. The little bit of money I earned from rental accommodations after paying the bank, what was left over I had to use to feed myself and the property that I owned kept running down and running down from lack of maintenance." He could not find any work. Now he is working, he has repaired and maintains his property and feels some pride in what he owns, and has a bright future.

The National Team is at work for the people of this country. The National Team will continue to do what it promised the people of this country.

The financial picture of the Government is healthy. Yes, we have some bills to pay; Yes, the Cubans cost more than we expected, but we are going to honour that bill. We will grumble about some of it, I am sure—I will do it too—but we have a moral obligation and we have pride and we are going to behave as a responsible Government.

There is nothing left to talk about, except to say that I agree entirely with His Excellency when he says the civil service hiring and accepting of resignations and accepting of retirement or anything else that has to do with the civil service is his sole responsibility.

Who accepted my letter of retirement? Was it not Allan Scott? Who else can accept it?

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and, possibly, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town will try to tell the people something completely different. The civil servants have no fear whatsoever of the National Team and the Ministers of this government doing anything to them. All we are asking them to do is work with us. Let us perform the services to the people of this country at the least cost, and the best possible service we can all give. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.04 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Throne Speech.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, it seems appropriate that I begin my contribution to the Throne Speech, and the debates of those Members who have spoken with an official welcome and congratulation to the Chief Secretary, the Honourable James Ryan, and his Deputy the Honourable Donovan Ebanks. Many people may not know it, but Mr. Ryan was my senior in college, so it seems appropriate that he be my senior in the Legislative Assembly also.

I have the highest regard for those two gentlemen and in dealings I have had with them in the past, I must say that they have accorded me respect over and beyond my humble position, and are always willing to listen and to do whatever they can in their official capacity to meet any reasonable requests I put forward. I look very much forward to working with them in the future.

Madam Speaker, as one of two Opposition Members in this House, it is my duty to compliment the views put forward by my colleague, and to continue the trend in painting the picture as we see the reality existing.

We have a tremendous responsibility, seeing that we are the keepers of the balance. In so doing, while we are not in a position to get things done as the Government frequently challenges us to do—because, of course, we do not have the resources and facilities of Ministries, Portfolios and Departments at our elbows—our responsibility is, certainly, to bring to the Parliament and the people a sense of perspective and, if necessary, an alternate view to what we see happening.

In so doing, Madam Speaker, let me emphasise that where differences occur, as we expect they will, we are no less responsible, no less loyal, indeed, no less trustworthy and, certainly, no less capable than the Government. It is our duty under the Westminster system to continue to present this balance by the questions we raise and by challenging the Government to give account. This leads me very conveniently to the introductory point in my contribution, namely, the Cuban migrant situation in our country.

It is the one problem that at this time has both the possibility and the probability of challenging the country to such a degree where, if the problem is not contained and managed properly, it can send us into financial ruin. It is also somewhat unique, in that it is the one issue at this time that the Government shares the full wholehearted and unstinted support of the Opposition in getting rid of the Cuban migrants. We have said this before in less open forums and settings, and I take this opportunity to speak on behalf of my colleague and the Opposition to publicly reassure Honourable Members of this House that we are with the Government in their efforts to get rid of the Cuban migrants because, we too, see the importance of ridding our country of this financial Albatross.

The problem is compounded by the good-heartedness and the inadvertent overtures of many people in our country who seem to have gone a little overboard in their sympathies. I think it needs to be emphasised—and re-emphasised by the leaders and the representatives of the people, so that they themselves may force their minds to get this issue in the proper perspective—that there is a difference between being sympathetic and being realistic; from being soft-hearted to the point where, if we continue to cling to certain emotions, it is going to affect our pocketbooks.

I make the point that, as Honourable Members of this House will understand, there may be a need to take some firm decisions to save our country because we cannot quite realistically be expected to continue to support large numbers of Cuban migrants at the level at which we have been supporting them. We are a small country. It also seems that the Cayman Islands, known for hospitality, is being taken advantage of by the metropolitan countries—the United Kingdom, and by the United States.

I do not know what we can do to bring these two giants to the stark reality that we cannot afford to foot this bill and to carry this burden by ourselves for what seems to be an eternity. If we take the economics of the situation, we have to pay the United States $5,730 per day; $171,930 per month; $2,062,800 per year for those Cuban migrants who are now at Guantanamo Bay. And if we were to add the total of those who are presently here, if they were to be repatriated, that would amount to $9,000 per day.

Now, can you imagine what kind of country we could have if we were in the position to spend $9,000 per day on needy Caymanians? I daresay, Madam Speaker, there would be no divisions, for the country would be so good that both Government and Opposition could afford to embrace and pat each other for having achieved such an ideal state.

Madam Speaker, are our own Caymanians are suffering and being deprived because funds which could be expended to provide the necessities they now lack, have to be expended on the Cuban migrants. I hope when the time comes that the soft-hearted Caymanians will understand that we have to sever this cord or it will drag us down to the depths of the sea and strangle us beyond the point of no return.

Madam Speaker, I join other Honourable Members in welcoming the new Commissioner of Police and the new head of the Drug Squad. I have always maintained an interest in the work of the Police Force because I see it as one of the vital pillars in this society. While it is sometimes interpreted by Ministers of Government (to suit their conveniences) that I am hostile and overly critical of the Police Force, let me say from the bottom of my heart that my interests and concerns are constructive. While in many cases I have to be critical, I make no apologies, but, certainly, no one can say that I am not respectful of the police.

It is vitally necessary that we have the best Police Force. I would like to repeat again that I would like to see the philosophy move away from the notion of a Colonial Police Force and develop a force in the Cayman Islands as a modern Police Force, with scientific management and leadership and the best men that we can recruit.

To this extent I would like to say that we, as Members in this House, have a responsibility to provide them with the equipment that they need. I was amazed by the attitude of some Ministers of Government when the request was made for 18 automobiles, that the Police should be given the whole budget.

Yesterday we heard the Minister for Tourism, Environment and Planning say that the reason why that attitude was taken was because some officers had conspired with the Opposition. Madam Speaker, nothing could be further from the truth. Let me say that the Opposition is cognisant of the distance it must keep from all elements of Government that have to do with justice, its social control, and all these other areas. We, as a responsible Opposition, have never attempted, neither have we conspired with any element to betray any confidence that might exist. Far be it from our intention, indeed the necessity does not exist.

What we as Opposition are concerned about is the fact that there needs to be some sensible system of management of police vehicles in the fleet. We are advocating that a system be set up where vehicles are written-off over a period of time, be that on the grounds of age or of mileage.

I happen to know a little about the automobile business. It is recognised in the automobile world that when a car reaches the age of five years or when the odometer registers 100,000 the car has been through a lifetime. It is of critical importance in those instances where the car has registered 100,000 miles, if the car is going to be used in the future, that it be given a major overhaul, including a complete rebuilding of the engine. Otherwise, if you just continue to offer routine maintenance you are going to run into trouble and periodic breakdowns.

I am suggesting that any vehicle fleet that has a large number of vehicles with this kind of mileage on the odometer cannot be a reliable fleet. Indeed, that is one of the major complaints we receive from the police. I can therefore suggest that some system be put in place where the vehicles in the fleet are rolled-over, over a certain period of time.

I will give a further example. In the rental car business modern management dictates that the fleet be rolled over every two or three years. So a fleet with a large number of vehicles is broken down to where half the fleet is rolled over at two or three year intervals, so that at any given time you have at least half of the vehicles in new and excellent condition. I am suggesting that this kind of management be looked at towards improving the performance of police vehicles.

In regard to drugs, I was very concerned, indeed, alarmed, to read in a recent issue of the Caymanian Compass that a heroine trafficker had been apprehended at the airport. This, believe it or not, is a serious stage and we have to ask ourselves since we have apprehended one, did any other get through? Or are any others getting through?

It is recognised that in even the most sophisticated and modern social control agencies are unable to apprehend all who traffic in those kinds of illegal substances. What is dangerous about heroine in our environment and, indeed, in any environment, is that in its most common form it is taken intravenously—shot into the veins by needles. This opens us up the transmission of the HIV virus through dirty needles. It is imperative that we develop a force that is equipped to deal with this kind of frightening turn to the drug scene in these Islands.

Allied to this, Madam Speaker, it is also necessary for our police force to maintain the kind of international contact and international liaison and systems with the outside world so that we may keep abreast of what is happening in the criminal world that is bound to put pressures and further increased challenges on our social control forces in these Islands. Particularly in the world of international organised crime, the fragmentation of political geography has impressed the law enforcement authority on the international scene that certain elements of crime, certain kinds of criminals are becoming more sophisticated in travelling widely and, indeed, are taking advantage of governments who are not alert and are preoccupied by other issues.

I read a book recently, authored by one of the foremost authorities on these kinds of happenings. A book entitled Thieves' World, in which the author, a renown journalist tracking international organised crime, put forward evidence to show that there is a pact which she calls a "Pact Mafioso" between all of the major criminal elements in the world—the Russian Mafia, the Sicilian Mafia, the triads of Hong Kong and China, the Colombian drug cartels and the American Mafia.

Madam Speaker, this is frightening. You know where the conference was held? In Aruba.

Further, the book showed photographs of some of the major players in this Pact Mafioso, as it is called.

As recently as one evening this week, I was watching a CNN programme entitled "The Wild, Wild East", in which they showed and depicted the head of the Russian Mafia whom the FBI know is in New York City at this time and, indeed, they are looking for him. Organising what? A major stolen car ring specialising in high priced cars—Mercedes Benz, BMWs and the like—and laundering the money in places like London. We in the small minute (and sometimes we may think insignificant) Cayman Islands, can never rest on our laurels.

I was further struck by the charge made by the author (by the way, a lady named Claire Sterling), that all the hotels in Aruba are owned by the Mafia. Indeed, she cited the name of a well-known family out of Venezuela called the "Conterro brothers" and produced documents to show that. So we in the Cayman Islands, while we may think we are remote from those things, can never ever relax. That is why it is important for us to develop the most sophisticated facilities and to get the best equipment so that our law enforcement agencies may be able to tap into international sources and keep tabs on these [activities] because it is not farfetched.

I read in a book called Octopus, that one of the so-called kingpins may have passed through the Cayman Islands as early as late 1989 on a journey around the world. That was tracked by Interpol because the person in question was using stolen credit cards.

I would also encourage the Government to link up to the international highway—the Internet or America On-line, or whatever other service or facility they deem appropriate—because we are in the Information Age.

Marshal McLuhan long ago said that the world was a "global village." Well, if he thought at that time (in the 1970s) that the world was a global village, he should be around at this time when one does not have to leave one's living room, bedroom or wherever one wishes to place a computer, to do any kind of shopping one wishes to do.

Particularly in terms of the information available in our Finance and Development Portfolio and other departments, it would be good to consider subscribing to one of those information systems where we could have all kinds of international information literally at our fingertips.

Since we already have a sophisticated computer department, we can quite easily set in place some of the checks and balances and the security system necessary to get the most benefits of such system. Indeed, Madam Speaker, it does not cost a whole lot for an individual to subscribe. For example, America On-line is $800 per year. I am not so familiar with Internet, but, certainly, with an organisation like the Government's you pay for the services you require. So it certainly is worth investigating in my mind.

Madam Speaker, I had the occasion (thanks to an invitation from the First and Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman) to visit the Brac over the weekend. I was very impressed with the people I met, and I also developed an appreciation for some of the challenges that they face. I hope that we in this Honourable House, can become not only more aware, but can exert the will to give them more of what is necessary.

One of the things that I would like to do in my contribution is to call for a new social contract in our Islands; a social contract that would put Cayman Brac, especially Cayman Brac (because Little Cayman, as I gather, is developing along its own unique, and peculiar lines) in a position where all the young people who graduate from the high school would not absolutely have to emigrate to Grand Cayman to seek employment; a contract that would allow an infrastructure and businesses (the infrastructure is already for the most part there) to locate over there, even if there are special types of businesses not presently in existence on the Cayman Islands—"B" Class banks, businesses that do not have the necessity to employ 40 or 50 people in one office, five, perhaps a maximum of ten in an office, so that when the young people graduate from the high school, and if they are not disposed toward furthering their education at the tertiary level, they can have the option of remaining on the Brac.

Madam Speaker, I want to argue that there is a moral side. All of us grow up. We mature, and we leave home. But there is a sense in which that is the only option those young people have, even if they want to stay around for a few years longer before they make their own ways. They have no choice. We need to develop this new social contract so that the young people of Cayman Brac (and I understand there will be 12 young men and 12 women at the next graduation) can have a choice. That we can give them facilities that they are lacking now. I think that it behoves us as a Parliament to pay more attention and give the representatives of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman more than lip service in their efforts to improve their constituency.

I want to dwell a little more on the social contract now as it affects our own people here in Grand Cayman. Madam Speaker, in a country which guarantees that the Caribbean Utilities Company gets 15% profit on its investment, and that Cable & Wireless operates in a market with no competition, we fall short of guaranteeing that our people get meaningful employment even in some instances after we have told them to get qualified. This has been a fault of political directorates of the past. It is more so a shortcoming of the National Team political directorate, who in their Manifesto said they were going to work to improve these kinds of situations and, indeed, were given a sweeping mandate by the voters of this country to so do. Yet we hear the cries and the beseeching every time we move out—certainly, those of us in the Opposition do.

Madam Speaker, I wish now to turn to what I might call home—the Legislative Assembly. It never ceases to amaze me what goes on in these hallowed Chambers. I am left to wonder at the level of what passes here for debate on many occasions. It seems that some people lack the intellectual capacity to stick to issues, to debate merits, to take a side of an argument and defend it or speak against it dispassionately, truthfully and convincingly without destroying the individual who has stood up for that position. Indeed, I marvel at the challenges that are made to the Chair from time to time. Were it not that the Speaker was such an understanding person, I am sure that by now some people would have received the ultimate sanction.

Madam Speaker, it is bad for democracy. It is not in the best interest of the Westminster System, and it should not go on here. We should not use our privileges and immunities in this hallowed Chamber to destroy people who have no rights, no recourse, and no availability of the same position to defend themselves or reply in like manner. I cannot, as a responsible person, subscribe to that because before I came here as a sitting Member I was on the receiving end of some of this. This Legislative Assembly must be concerned with the preservation of democracy in the true traditions of the Westminster System.

Oscar Wilde is reported to have said: "Democracy is simply the bludgeoning of the people by the people and for the people." However, this witticism does not cover the whole ground because democracy is a delicate form of government in that it requires the conscious continuous effort by all of its members to maintain it. In other words, democracy is dependent upon a large number of institutions that are developed to control the power of the State. Madam Speaker, the press is one of those institutions (and I will develop this argument at a later stage).

The Legislative, the Executive, and the Judiciary are institutions designed to keep the State in balance and under control. And the Opposition specifically has an obligation to provide a balance, indeed, to counterbalance the government when it seems to go out of kilter. There is no use of any Minister or any National Team Member trying to project the notion that the Opposition in this House is useless and serves no purpose, and to try to put us down when we ask questions and hold the Government to account—for that is our job, and we will continue to do that.

As bad as it is now, it would be worse if there was no Opposition to provide a balanced view and, indeed, to hold the Government to account to the country.

Madam Speaker, I am familiar with an expression that says that the devil dances in the empty pocket. In countries where this expression is well known, the people (because they think that if the young people do not have any money, they are likely to turn to crime) are given to placing a coin with a cross on it in the pockets of the young. But the devil does not only dance in the empty pocket, the devil also dances in the empty mind.

I think of the two situations. The devil is more dangerous when he dances in the empty mind, because if he is just limited to dancing in the empty pockets we can throw a coin in and get it out. But when he dances in the empty mind, the problem is much more compound and it seems to me (from arguments that I have heard and from the positions taken by Members of the National Team and Ministers of Government) that there are a number of minds in which the devil is dancing in, or has danced in.

The problem seems to be that if you do not like the message you kill the messenger. That would be easy if you could get rid of the problem by killing the messenger, but it is not that easily dealt with. I can assure you. Just like when the bigots slew the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King, they could not stop the movement; they could not stop the civil rights tidal wave. So, too, will the movement not be stopped by destroying the Chamber of Commerce, or Bridget McPartland, or Will Pineau, or Linford Pierson, or Ezzard Miller, or the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, or the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roy Bodden: The message will roll on and it will have a snowballing effect because, as Richard Nixon coined the expression, "the silent majority" is waiting.

We must not afford the devil the opportunity to dance in too many empty minds.

Madam Speaker, other negative perceptions are gaining currency since the National Team so arrogantly flaunts its numbers. And one that gives me much concern too, is that the Parliament is little better than a venue for a verbal slinging match, with rudeness that has the capacity for personal abuse, insults and castigation.

It is not thought, or it does not seem to be common, that Parliament today—our Parliament, our Legislative Assembly—should be a place where meaningful debates on the problems of the country occur. On the contrary, many people—the National Team included—think that important decisions should be made elsewhere. They demonstrate this by changing the Standing Orders so that the Opposition is handcuffed in its ability to ask questions and to table motions. They castigate us and try to put us down and remind us which questions were asked when and how long ago.

I say, it matters not. Once it has the approval of the Chair and passes the Chair, the question must be asked and only if the Minister or Member displays a genuine inability, which meets the approval of the honourable House, must the answer be deferred.

Personally, I can never be put down by somebody smart answering me. My sense of self-esteem and my knowledge of my own intelligence is too high to be put down that way.

Long ago, Madam Speaker, I came to grips with my own ethnicity, my own race, capabilities, and the limitations of my own intellect. I can never be destroyed by any Minister—indeed, not by the whole National Team in their totality. So it is useless for them to try and put Roy Bodden down.

You know how I deal with the insults now, Madam Speaker? Like a Chinese Professor I had in sociology told me: just put on a stupid grin, because it takes nothing off my psyche. It reminds me, Madam Speaker, of an encounter I had with someone who described himself as an advisor to the Government of the day. His position was that the Government had no obligation to account to Parliament; the Government is under no obligation to give the Opposition any information because the Government controls the Parliament by virtue of their dominance in numbers. One can easily see that there is an empty pocket in this person's mind. I wonder what kind of dancing the devil is doing, for this person (and others like him) does not appreciate that when a Government is returned to power it assumes duty and an obligation to govern the country, not only for its own supporters, but also for the Opposition.

That position revealed to me that this so-called advisor does not understand the Legislative Assembly and does not understand the importance of the Opposition. Certainly, this person would not accept Walter Lippmann's statement that, "in a democracy the Opposition is not only tolerated as constitutional, but must be maintained as indispensable." Madam Speaker, we can believe this if we so choose. I say the same knowing it to be true according to my experiences and encounters.

The public is growing intolerant of the attitude that we continue, when people write articles which question, or are sometimes are unflattering, and we use our positions here to castigate and to destroy and say all manner of evil against people outside. The public is growing increasingly intolerant of that kind of behaviour. Sooner or later someone is going to be held to account. Let us not forget that the ultimate sanction the public holds is one that all sensible politicians should shy away from.

Another perception that occupies the vacant mind is that when a Minister is asked questions in this Parliament it is often an invitation to set out on an attack upon the person seeking the information—upon his team, his associates, and his friends. It seems to be the trend that any Minister worth his salt should be able to resume his seat without answering the question with a complete destruction, emasculation, and humiliation of the questioner.

Madam Speaker, permit me to cite one example. A question from the First Elected Member for Bodden Town to the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Education and Aviation. The Question: "What scholarships, loans or financial assistance does the Government provide for Caymanians studying at the International College of the Cayman Islands?" The answer: "The Government provides no direct assistance to Caymanians studying at the International College of the Cayman Is- lands, but this is now under consideration by the Minister. However, despite the fact that yearly grants had been stopped by the previous two Governments since 1985, the Ministry now provides a yearly grant to the College. Note carefully, at the Finance Committee meeting which considered the last Budget the First Elected Member for Bodden Town did not ask for such assistance."

Madam Speaker, I would say that the devil has been dancing in the Minister's [for Education and Aviation] mind.

It does not surprise me since this Minister's dislike of me has gone way back—indeed, since 1979. I would just like to get across the point that my responsibility and my behaviour in here is not predicated upon my personal like or dislike of someone, but, rather, is predicated upon the seriousness with which I view my position as trustee for my constituents. So, any question I ask, is not a question to illicit information for Roy Bodden; but, rather, for the edification of the Honourable House and the country.

It is useless, as I have said, to try to put me down because my sense of self-esteem has always been unshakeable.

Madam Speaker, the Throne Speech made mention that there is some outstanding committee work to be done. We have the Select Committee to consider a Register of Interests; a Select Committee to consider a Code of Ethics and Conduct for Legislators; the Select Committee to Review the Gambling Law; and the Standing Select Committee to Review the Sunday Trading Law; and of course we have the Select Committee to Review the Bill of Rights. This is a fair amount of select committee work, Madam Speaker, and time is of the essence, since we are at the two-year mark in the life of the Parliament.

All of these select committees are important. I hold especially dear the work and the necessity for us to have a Bill of Rights. Why? Because the Hansards of this honourable House will show that on two occasions I moved motions to have a Bill of Rights incorporated in the Constitution of our country. I think it is absolutely necessary that we have this Bill of Rights—sooner rather than later. There is no reason for procrastination. I am becoming concerned, because as we continue to procrastinate the motivation to get on with this work lessens. I would not like to see the Parliament die and we have no Bill of Rights.

Madam Speaker, no less eminent an authority than Lord Lester of Herne Hill [QC], on 25 January this year, during the Second Reading in the House of Lords, impressed upon this noble House the importance of incorporating a convention of human rights into the British system of Government. We cannot depend on the European Convention. We cannot depend on the International Declaration of Human Rights by the United Nations. We must have our own instrument incorporated in our Constitution. Any person who is not so disposed to providing this information should be bold enough to tell the country and their constituents that they are not so disposed.

The National Team people like to challenge people to take positions and do things—they should do that and see who survives 1996.

Madam Speaker, there is no need to get off on all kinds of side tracks. There is absolutely no need to run red herrings across the trail and to talk about cults and this thing and the next. What we need to do is to ensure that our Caymanian people (and they are sensible, certainly full of common sense) understand that with rights come responsibilities.

In the United States (which has the greatest propensity for its citizens suing the State) the courts are not tied up with these kinds of cases. I fail to be convinced that the Courts of the Cayman Islands will be so tied up, for in its essence the Bill of Rights protects the citizens against the might of the State.

What are we afraid of? It is one of the pillars of democracy. Indeed, in this article in the NLJ Practitioner of February 3, 1995, Lord Lester has given an example of some Bill of Rights which existed many years ago—the Magna Carter, the Petition of Rights, the English Bill of Rights, the Scottish Claim of Right and the Act of Settlement. The United States (which declared its independence from Britain in 1776) had its Bill of Rights in 1791. Here we are on the eve of the 21st Century, doing what my mother described as "procrastinating", because it seems the National Team begrudges the citizens of this country a Bill of Rights.

I think, also, Madam Speaker, for our own interest as Legislators and representatives of the people, it is incumbent that we arrive at a Register of Interests and a Code of Conduct because it seems to be a more frequent occurrence that certain columnists insinuate and infer that the behaviour of certain politicians leaves much to be desired. Let me say that a more effective way of countering these insinuations and inferences is for us to produce a Code and a Register that clearly sets out our obligations and responsibilities.

We cannot continue to mug them—as has been evidenced in this Chamber that certain Ministers of the National Team and their Backbench supporters have done—by castigating them and calling them all kinds of names. The way to deal with it is a constructive way of saying. 'We have set in place a Register of Interests and a Code of Ethics and Conduct to judge and to set parameters for our own behaviour. So there is no need for you in your column to try and malign us and insinuate. We have set the vehicle in motion to guide ourselves and set the tone for our own behaviour.'

Madam Speaker, I would like to now move on to the business of the Law School.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, may we take the suspension at this time?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Certainly Ma'am.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.09 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Prior to taking the break, I had announced that I was moving on and wanted to make some mention of the Law School and its operations.

Permit me, however, to put what I consider a fitting footnote on a commentary that I offered regarding the importance of a Bill of Rights. I would like to again quote from the NLJ Practitioner of 3 February 1995, page 142: "One of the most eminent Conservative supporters of the Bill [that is, Lord Hearn's argument that Britain should have a Human Rights Bill] was Lord Hailsham of St. Marylebone, who stated that, as part of 'a radical overhaul of our constitutional arrangements, a Bill of Rights entrenching the European Convention is a modest, but desirable addition to the armament of liberty against populist or bureaucratic intrusion and oppression.'"

Lord Lester of Herne Hill, himself, in his address to the Lords stated: "...a constitutional guarantee surely acts as a rallying point and a bulwark for all cherished freedom. It strengthens the sinews of democracy and promotes good governance. It provides orderly legal redress for infringements of civil rights and liberties and it contributes to public education in winning hearts and minds. The power of government needs to be matched by the power of the law if the individual is to be secure. The Law of the British constitution should encourage the spirit of liberty, and our Courts should give redress where basic civil rights and freedoms are infringed."

That, Madam Speaker, is a fitting conclusion to points made earlier with regard to the necessity for us to have a Bill of Rights entrenched in our constitution.

I now move on to the Law School. The Law School is doing well indeed, and it should be a source of pride. However, that does not mean that we should not continue to monitor its purpose and its effectiveness in our society. In this regard, I express the sentiment that it must serve to educate Caymanians first and foremost, and when these Caymanians graduate they must be accorded their rightful places in the Caymanian society.

This, too, forms a part of the new social contract that I advocate we embark on. I would not like to see the graduates frustrated by menial and unchallenging employment. I would like to see their efforts rewarded by them being placed in meaningful positions in Government as well as some of the high profile firms in the country.

I would hope that some of them could rise to the eminence of becoming obvious and prominent partners in these firms because I (being a person who has studied extensively myself) have appreciation for people who achieve after subjecting themselves to four or five years of rigorous hard disciplined studies. I have always felt that persons who can deprive themselves (particularly in light of all the attractions and all the pleasures which compete for our attention now) should aptly be rewarded by positions which not only demand hard work, but carry some prestige and some promise for future promotion. It is only human nature that people expect these kinds of rewards after making such tremendous sacrifices.

Madam Speaker, I would like to offer some comments on the Portfolio of Finance and Development. I would begin by saying that I think it is a positive step that the Honourable Finance Secretary has taken with the inception of the Public Sector Investment Committee, in seeking to surround himself with some of the best and ablest brains the country can afford. It is not only a testament to the humility and recognition of the tremendous responsibility of the holder, but it is also sensible in that he has an available pool of people who are on the front lines and should be able, through their tentacles and their contacts, to afford him the best advice regarding not only what is happening in our own society, but what is happening in the wider world. And, may I remind the Honourable Members (if any reminder is necessary) that the world of finance is perhaps one of the most fertile, fastest moving, yet ficklest, worlds that we can ever set foot in or encounter. So it is with a certain sense of pride, but it is also with a sense of challenge, that I say that we have to continue to be progressive.

I take cognisance of the announcement that we are now working on a stock exchange. I would also like to say, by way of offering some tempering and sobering remarks, that in our position as one of the major financial centres in the world (and I am satisfied that cognisance is being taken of this), we have always to guard ourselves. Sometimes we have to look over our shoulders, but always we have to look ahead, because the success of the world of finance is to keep a clear forward vision while having at the same time excellent peripheral vision.

So I welcome the trend to get away from the notion of the description (although it may sound like pure semantics) of secrecy, to the terms confidentiality and privacy, while maintaining responsibility. From the perspective of a layman, I think some of the problem has been brought upon jurisdictions which still stress secrecy (for secrecy connotes that you have something to hide, which is not necessarily so in all cases). I welcome the move for confidentiality, privacy, and openness.

Madam Speaker, one of the striking things that came out when my colleague in the Opposition (the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman) and I were afforded the half-hour courtesy call on the Honourable Tony Baldry, was expressed support for the Cayman Islands in the moves that we are making in international finance. We also did not lose the opportunity to reiterate our support and our commitment in these steps. We came away with the impression that he held the efforts made in these Islands in high regard and in high esteem. Indeed, we, in the Opposition, felt proud that we are partners with the National Team Government in their efforts to maintain the highest standard of integrity when it comes to this kind of development.

Madam Speaker, we would be irresponsible, indeed stupid, to try to obstruct or destroy this very important pillar. So I say in all seriousness that we in the Opposition are just as concerned with developments (like the BBC tape) of such infamy. We realise that if the independence of the Cayman Islands in its ability to fund itself, to be self-supporting, is eroded by irresponsible journalists and damaging propaganda, it is a ballpark in which all of us—Opposition as well as Government—are going to suffer.

I want to say that the Financial Secretary has the support of the Opposition, and the Government has the support of the Opposition in maintaining the highest standards of integrity and vigilance where this relates to our keeping ahead—not abreast, ahead—of the competition. Let them catch up. But it does not behove us to boast of all the developments.

If the BVI had kept their mouths shut about the number of companies that they had registered, it may not have impressed upon us so soundly the necessity to do something to make up ground which they boasted they had taken from us.

Madam Speaker, the Customs Department is a department that plays a vital role in the Cayman Islands, if for no other reason than we can be dependent upon the collection of customs duties for such a large part of our budget. It is also a department that must always be in the forefront of our self-examination.

There is a disturbing trend that I want to suggest, by way of constructive criticism, we must take a hold of. I think that we are falling into the trap of praising the department every time we break a record in collection. I want to say that while it is necessary, and, indeed, it is an expectation and a part of human psyche to be praised when good efforts are expended, we have to be careful for two reasons: (1) We are talking about extracting taxes and payments, whether or not we admit that Customs duties are that; and (2) we do not want to give these Officers the impression that they are doing so well that they can let up.

I noticed in his last report, the Auditor General made some observations of some weaknesses which he thought existed and which I posit we need to strengthen. One that comes to mind is we have to increase the percentage of containers that are examined by the Customs Department, especially in light of the fact that the Auditor General suggested in his report that there were some people who had been found in breach of Customs Regulations in the past, whose containers were not examined at a regularity acceptable for people who had been caught in breaches in the past. So this is an area of Customs work that needs to be strengthened.

I also (just as recently as last evening) received a complaint from an importer that there seems to be some inconsistencies. I do not know whether these inconsistencies exist because of a breakdown in communications or what, but, the complaint was made to the point that it relates to the importation of used automobiles from the United States where some people are being required to produce bills of sale and receipts while others are just required to just make a verbal statement or admission of the cost of the vehicle.

This observation was made to me by one of my constituents who was annoyed and alarmed that there was such an apparent double standard. The Department has to be concerned that these policies and these kinds of actions are entirely consistent and applicable across the board.

I take pride in the fact (although others I noticed expressed concern) that Officers are so young, because I must say in my dealings with them, I have always been afforded the kind of respect which is symptomatic of professional committed people. Personally, I have no reason to complain. I would only say that sensitive areas like Customs and Immigration need to be kept in perspective by the Government all the time because if the officers in these departments are disgruntled and dissatisfied, particularly if they believe that they are under compensated, it opens avenues for them to use their positions and their ingenuity to subvert and circumvent the system. We know in many Third World countries this has become a characteristic. I have never heard of any widespread or any endemic occurrences of that in the Cayman Islands, and I raise the point only to say that we have always to be cognisant of the work done by these people and to be sure that we are in a position to afford them the compensation they deserve.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Honourable Member, it is now 4:30.
Will you take the adjournment?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture, please move the adjournment of the House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I take pleasure in adjourning this House until Monday, at 10 o'clock.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 o'clock Monday morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The House is accordingly adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 27 MARCH 1995.

MONDAY
27 MARCH, 1995
10.15 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. John B. McLean: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.
Order. Proceedings are resumed.

APOLOGY

The Speaker: First of all I have an apology from the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay, for absence this morning.

Presentation of Papers and Reports. The 1994 Annual Report of the Royal Cayman Islands Police, by the Honourable First Official Member.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

1994 ANNUAL REPORT OF THE ROYAL CAYMAN ISLANDS POLICE

Hon. James M. Ryan: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the 1994 Annual Report of the Royal Cayman Islands Police.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Deferred question number 54, standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERRED QUESTION NO. 54

No. 54: Mr. Gilbert A. McLean asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture what amounts have been earned by the Water Authority and paid into General Revenue since November 1992.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The amounts earned and paid into general revenue since November 1992, were $700,000 in 1993 and $250,000 in 1994. These were the first payments made into general revenue by the Authority since its inception.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Can the Minister say if there is any policy in place which allows the Water Authority to retain the monies earned to invest in capital expenditures? Rather than each time that it seeks capital investment it seems to come to government when it could actually have its own money to reinvest.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I think that this Honourable House should understand, and it should not be left unsaid that the Water Authority comes to government for money because there is no truth in that statement whatsoever, and I do not know where the Member gets his information from.

The Authority is currently working with government to ensure that only excess revenue is contributed to government's general revenue as required by law.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I wonder if the Honourable Minister could state if there was any reason, prior to November 1992, why there was no contribution to the general revenue by the Water Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I could not answer that question. I do not know.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Can the Minister say if there is a policy or is it in the regulations that contribution over a certain amount of profit be contributed to the general revenue by the Water Authority as the other statutory authorities have in their regulations?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the law states that excess revenue should be given to government.

The Speaker: If there is not further supplementary, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Continuation of the debate on the 1995 Throne Speech. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town, continuing.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When we took the adjournment on Friday afternoon, I had made several observations in regards to the Customs Department. Prior to moving on to a new topic, permit me to make one important observation which I omitted on Friday.

Concern has been expressed regarding what we see as a serious matter which, in my opinion, is not being treated with the seriousness it deserves. I would point out that in answer to a question raised by myself, to the Honourable Financial Secretary, asking how many cases of evasion of customs duties had been uncovered by the Customs Department since 1991, the answer was as follows: "Madam Speaker, since January 1991, a total of 85 cases involving evasion of import duties have been uncovered by the Customs Department."

During my tenure as Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee, one of these cases involved sums of $3 million to $5 million. I was told by the Honourable Financial Secretary that this case was referred to the Legal Department. Now, there are 84 other cases, and it strikes me that if any of those other cases involve sums in the vicinity of this, we are doing ourselves a serious disservice. I wonder if something could not be done to get rid of the intransigence and bring these problems to a head one way or the other, since the Customs Law makes it clear what should happen to perpetrators who evade Customs Duties.

My argument is that I often receive complaints from small importers that Customs Officers seem to be ever diligent, and ever zealous with regard to them. Indeed, there have been cases where some of them have been penalised. I hope that this is not a case where the weak pay for the strong; and where the small are made examples of while the large escape unsanctioned and unpunished. I shall be watching with interest.

Since this is 1995 and these cases were recorded from 1991, yet no conclusion has been arrived at, I wonder how long we are going to have to wait before these matters are settled. We cannot claim that the Customs Department is doing an excellent job if we have 85 cases outstanding. The government must do something to shed the appearance of disinterest, or worse, in these cases.

Let me now turn to the Department of Tourism.

We continue to do well, but I must be frank and forthright and remark that the success could not have suddenly happened over the past two years. It was, indeed, the result of positive programmes and aspects that were laid down by past political directorates.

Some time ago I remarked that I see the business of government much like a relay race, that is, every four years the baton is handed sometimes to a new directorate, and it is incumbent upon this directorate when they receive the baton, to run with it as fast as they can. If they stop to quarrel and express disgust that they did not receive the baton in a more favourable position, what will happen is that the position in which they find themselves will be further eroded and they will be passed by competitors—even those in a less advantageous position. Tourism is a good way to express and re-emphasise this metaphor.

What we have to do with the baton is continue to move forward. I say this giving full cognisance to a bit of information that I received while reading a magazine a short while ago. This year Cuban tourism has for the first time significantly passed the 1 million persons mark. I think that we in the Cayman Islands have to be concerned with what I think the sources point to as the ultimate opening up of Cuba, because history dictates that the situation cannot continue for very long.

I recently read a most interesting special in Time magazine. It had as its focus the fact that President Castro was getting older. The description was "the lion in winter." They were speculating as to some of the changes that the Cuban leaders will be forced to take into consideration, including a softening of their hard line economic policies.

I think that we in the Cayman Islands would be wise to begin laying some contingency plans to ensure that our tourism sector does not suffer any significant loss when Cuba does open up. We must begin formulating a 'Plan B' and, if necessary, a 'Plan C'. This is especially important when one considers that tourism in the rest of the Caribbean really did not take off until after 1959, when the United States embargoed its citizens from trading and visiting Cuba. It was only after this time that tourism in the rest of the Caribbean really took off.

Even Puerto Rico, which has close association with the United States, did not have a vibrant tourism market. Cuba was described as the playground of the Americas. And it is not inconceivable that it could return to that position. So, we in the Cayman Islands must develop a strategy, or strategies, to take advantage, or to certainly bolster our position so that we will not incur significant losses when this happens.

There are those who propose that attention should be given to developing some sort of triangular trade, particularly with the Europeans in mind who take traditionally longer vacations than people from North America. We should explore the possibility of developing some sort of triangular trade which will include some destinations on the north coast of Jamaica, coupled with Grand Cayman, Cayman Brac or Little Cayman and a destination in Cuba, be that Cayo Largo or Veradero Beach.

It would seem to me, looking at this cursorily, that it might make some sense to explore this possibility, particularly with the introduction of British Airways regularly scheduled flights. We will be having Europeans. Certainly, it is my understanding that Europeans already flock to Cayo Largo and Veradero Beach in large numbers. From this side of the House, I do not envisage any serious problems and I think the Cayman Islands are eminently poised to take advantage of this sort of arrangement since we are one of the best, one of the top destinations as far as scuba diving is concerned. We would have, in these islands, a totally captive audience.

While we may not be able to compete with Cuba and Jamaica in other areas, we certainly have a distinct advantage when it comes to development and the sophistication of our scuba diving industry, and when it comes to the beauty and reputation of our dive spots.

I believe this is an area to be explored, and while the Opposition is often accused of not providing alternatives, that is a suggestion that can be acted upon if the government so desires.

I must pass a few remarks concerning the Turtle Farm, not so much to dwell on controversy surrounding the departure of the former Managing Director, but an expression of concern in that with the closure of the turtle farm operated in the Pacific by the French, the Turtle Farm in the Cayman Islands remains of even more worldwide importance.

The new philosophy seems to be one where there is equal emphasis placed on making turtle meat available for consumption in addition to raising funds from visits and tours of the farm. While there is much to be said for this move, we have to bear in mind that turtles are slow to mature. Any overly ambitious project regarding butchering may be counterproductive in the sense that it may bring us to the position where the flock of mature turtles that provides an attraction to visitors who wish to tour the farm may eventually be depleted.

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. Roy Bodden: [addressing the voice across the floor] A herd of turtles or whatever. Sometimes even the most learned can be imprecise! My mother always said that the song is not important, as long as the soul reaches heaven.

[Members' laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: A slip of the tongue is no fault of the brain in this case Madam Speaker.

[Members' laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: But, I thank the Minister.

We must be cognisant that pressure is also going to be brought to bear on the closing of our farm because in a report in the Caymanian Compass of some weeks ago, the French threatened to pressure the international authorities to have our farm closed. I do not believe that the French really have a case, and I think that they are just being spoilsports because our farm operated entirely different from theirs in that we did not depend on gathering eggs from habitats throughout the world. Our farm is the only one in history where the turtles lay and breed in captivity. So, I believe that we can make a strong case.

However, I feel constrained to say that the departure of the Managing Director must be viewed as somewhat of a setback. It is my hope, however, that we will soon recover and, certainly, I lend the efforts my fullest support.

The business of the environment and environmental concerns has taken on increased prominence in the Cayman Islands in past years. This can be attributed to the worldwide realisation that Mother Earth is facing some rather delicate balances. I am one who shares the concerns of the environmentalists. And I am one who realises that we must face up to this delicate balance. If we lose sight, if we lose the grasp of this, we run the risk of nature having to overcompensate and we already (if we view the Discovery Channel and all the other educational Channels) realise that we are losing at a very rapid rate certain species of plants and animals that play an intricate role in keeping this balance.

A case in point is a big row that is happening at this very moment between the nations of Canada and Spain over fishing rights of the Grand Banks. Certainly, it is not farfetched to believe that a small fracas will occur if the conflict is not settled soon. The Canadians claim that the Spanish are over-fishing the turbot on the banks. These nations are so concerned about this kind of thing that they are prepared to risk men and material to prove a point of principle.

We should be no less respectful of environmentalists and conservationists when they tell us that we need to exercise caution in keeping that delicate balance. Every Honourable Member in this House knows that we are faced with a serious challenge in maintaining the attractiveness of our dive sites while, at the same time, offering some constraints on the numbers that visit those sites. Also, offering some restraints with regard to cruise ships and large ships that have to anchor in some of our most bountiful and most attractive waters.

This is a challenge. I would caution my honourable colleagues not to dismiss these concerns when they are expressed, but rather, try to find the delicate balance. For a nation that does not have an encyclopaedia of resources, we have to be careful that we do not destroy those few resources we do have, which have proven over time to be attracting influences.

I believe that several experts left reports with us that should be studied and, for all practical purposes, heeded—Madigan and Pratt and the Cousteau Report.

If our tourism is to continue to be successful, we, as representatives of the people, and even more so the government, must find ways in which to maintain this delicate balance. If we enter into a power struggle between the forces of government and those advocating some respect for nature and the environment, future generations are bound to be the losers.

Let me turn now to the Ministry for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Next to education, the health of this country is of great importance. We have some very serious problems—problems that have been dogging us for many years, which, from all accounts and observations, are growing larger; or, in the very best instance we are, obviously, not beating.

I speak of drug abuse. We have been plagued with this for many years. While drug abuse in any society must be a source of concern, it is even more so a source of concern in the Cayman Islands where its victims are primarily the young—those very people who persons like me should be preparing to take the baton when I hand it down.

The problem, as I see it, has many facets. One of the facets is the fact that we are in an economic position where money can easily be found to spend on drugs. What is frightening is that we have graduated from the major drug being that of vegetable matter, to cocaine in all its forms and derivatives. This is the most powerful addicting substance in the world when used in the form of crack, as I understand.

It is unfortunate that our young people do not realise the dangers of flirting with this substance. From personal experience, I can attest to the foolhardiness of some of our young people. Several years ago, in the business that I manage, we employed a bright and promising youngster. Indeed, it is not an exaggeration to say that had he lived up to his promise he would have attained my position long before he was the age at which I attained it.

Within two years of being with the company, his behaviour totally changed. The first thing we noticed was that he kept company with people who were on the periphery of society. We (the management and other staff members) spoke to him about it because the company is sufficiently small enough that we can operate as family.

I remember on several occasions, because sometimes he travelled with me, telling him—even to the point of bringing him an article that I had read about cocaine—and he assured me that he was different, that it would have no effect on him.

His eventual addiction brought tears to the management of the company when we had to finally get rid of him because two attempts at rehabilitation proved a failure. It still saddens my heart, not only because it was a case that I know of personally, but because I know that this case is not unique. It is not singular to see a young man physically fit, an athlete, a top-notch soccer player, bright and intelligent, lower himself with drugs.

To this day, he remains beyond hope, burned out, a sad testimony to what frequently happens to our young Caymanians because they believe that they can change nature and they can change science and upset the balance.

I do not believe that the efforts of the government in drug abuse prevention and rehabilitation is enough to stem the tide. I believe that all of us in this society have to work, but the government must continue to set the tone, be aggressive, and offer facilities.

What is discouraging about this, is that we are led to measure the success of this by the number of cases we turn around. We will be committing a grave danger because the rate of recidivism, as I understand it, is high. So, we have to be prepared, as legislators, to vote a lot of money continuously and to provide top-notch facilities on an ongoing basis before we can see even encouraging results—let alone make a dent.

The wider society and those of us not involved in government and its efforts also have a part to play by giving advice, encouragement, and time to these cases. This is a good time to interject that I have always said (and certainly the Hansards of this House will show that on a number of occasions I have remarked) that I am a proponent for making it mandatory. Irrespective of the reason a person has been to prison, and irrespective of his age, anyone serving a sentence of six months or longer must—MUST—enroll in a drug abuse prevention and rehabilitation programme.

Certainly, anyone who is released on parole should have as a condition of his parole that he, on the advice and opinion of the counsellors, continue to attend counselling sessions. I also realise that age does not necessarily guarantee that one will not become an addict because I have seen 50 year olds hooked, just like I have seen 18 and 20 year olds.

Then, too, we have to have an aggressive educational programme regarding sexually transmitted diseases. It is customary for this to be a companion to serious drug use. Such a programme should start at the schools, just like the schools should be the focus of an aggressive drug abuse prevention programme. The earlier the better, for education is perhaps the most effective tool.

The famous West Indian Calypsonian, the Mighty Sparrow, sings a Calypso song in which he says that his grandmother told him that an ounce of prevention is better than a pound of cure. In these cases, education is the ounce of prevention: The cure is expensive indeed. I expect to see a continuation, if not an intensification of these programmes beginning with the young and malleable so that we can effect a realisation of these dangers in youngsters from the time they reach a tender age.

Madam Speaker, in some communities there is a great moral debate as to who should be offered the kind of education, especially as regards gender and sex. I suppose that if we allow ourselves, we can become entrapped in this. I can only say that from my experience if we adopt a practical and pragmatic approach, we are bound to reap the results in the future.

I can well recall the time that I lived in Canada. I taught at a school where there were 3,000 students. Coming from the Cayman Islands, I was pleasantly surprised to see the kind of family life education programme that they had instituted at the school. It was a programme based on the provision of information, confidentiality of visits between the students and the school nurse and the counsellor. It was a programme based on mutual acceptance of maturity by the staff and the student. In the three years I spent there, there were no young girls having to leave the school because of unwanted pregnancy.

I can say that the coming and goings of the students as far as their appointments with the school nurse and the counsellors was concerned was not the business of the teachers. When these students presented a note detailing their appointment, the instruction to the teacher was that they were not to be detained.

Prior to leaving, I was very interested in the programme. I spent some time discussing the merits and demerits with the vice-principal of the school and was pleasantly surprised to learn that the programme was a source of pride to the administration of the school. It was also going to be used as a model for some other school boards in the province of Ontario.

I do not know what the position is regarding this philosophy in our schools, but I can only say that in our society the problem of unwanted pregnancies among the young seems to be of major concern. I will get to that later when I mention some things happening in the Ministry of Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

The Ministry of Health has its work cut out for it, for this Ministry will have to provide a modern health facility for this country. There will be loud and acrimonious debate, as there has been. There will be those who will accuse people of changing positions and of advocating things now which were different than the stance they took earlier. I would only say that one of the most dangerous things ever to happen to anyone who claims to be intelligent, is to lock oneself into a rigid and intransigent position from which one cannot move or from which one cannot have a change of heart.

It is appropriate to remark at this time that the country is waiting and watching with interest because not only do we need a modern health facility, but we also need supporting organisations and sections such as a national health insurance plan. I would say that time is of the essence. Indeed, it is fleeting by so rapidly that I have now become concerned that we will not be able to deliver in the time that is left before the next General Election.

The government must be prepared again to face no less acrimonious debate, no less thorough questioning and, indeed, one might even say no less Opposition than what happened to the previous Minister. It is human nature to be this way. If only due to the circumstances that there was a plan before that was rejected, I find it appropriate to remark at this point regarding the national health insurance that the criteria should be that it is affordable to all persons in this society, and that it is portable.

Ideally, I would like to see a plan not controlled by the insurance companies, but a plan that is regulated by the government—not controlled by the government, or the insurance companies—but a plan which is regulated by the government. Why is this important? Because if we let the plans be controlled by the insurance companies, we know that the major motivation will be the profit incentive. That being the case, some elements are bound to be at a disadvantage. Who might these elements be? They are likely to be the poor, the disenfranchised, those suffering from congenital and degenerative diseases, and the elderly.

The plan has to come with enough time left that we can rehearse, we can sample it, that we can try it out, argue, bicker and perhaps that we can adjust and amend it. Even after all this, I do not expect that it is going to be unanimously accepted. However, I will be satisfied if it is a plan which is affordable to the majority of our people, which offers at least basic coverage so that our people, even the most disadvantaged of them, may be able to take advantage of the health facilities that we have in these islands. Hopefully, by then we will be on our way towards implementing a first class facility.

I would also like to say that I would like to see a system of payment where the subscriber pays a monthly stipend and is given a card so that when he or she goes to the hospital, or the health facility, the only thing he has to do is to present that card. He will not be expected to put up any money, except of course if they wish to exercise other options that can be written in, depending on what plan persons wish to purchase. There should also be an option. But the basic plan must be affordable and must be able to cover all of the categories that I just enumerated, and more if necessary.

In the Throne Speech, the Governor said this plan will be in place by the end of November. I can only remark that I certainly will be awaiting the proposal and look forward to lending my constructive criticism and support to the plan when it is brought to the Honourable House.

Over the years, we have made some obvious strides in many important areas. But much remains to be done. Indeed, much can be done if we develop a spirit of cooperation, mutual respect, and understanding. I have been especially concerned about the position of the family in Caymanian society. Sometime ago, the Opposition (the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and I) moved a motion calling for something to be done. I note with interest that in his contribution, the Governor stated that a study would be conducted during 1995 on "The Status of the Family in Caymanian Society." I welcome such a study and I must say that I will lend my support to the Ministry in its attempt to address this problem.

I will remark that it is a pity that we did not see fit to come to some understanding and accept the motion brought by the Opposition. Since I believe in this effort to arrive at and to redress these problems, government and opposition have a mutuality of interest.

I would like to see emanating from this study, and I put this out for the Honourable Minister and Honourable Members to consider, some sort of effort to establish what I would call a development of a Caymanian Family Institute or Resource Centre, based upon the results of the study.

I believe that it is timely that we do this and, certainly, the enormity of the problem, and the persistence of the problems our families face justifies that we take this step. While it is not a matter that I am in a position to expand on totally now, I can only say that we do not necessarily need to start at a very expensive and enormous level. I would prefer to see us start small and effective, and build up over the years much as we have built up other institutions and other organisations. I am happy to see from the countenance of the Minister that we are at the same level as far as our interests are concerned.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: So why did you sit in there when I said the Minister had already proposed it? Come on, tell the truth now.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, I can truthfully say that I believe the Minister would be interested and certainly sympathetic in pursuing this. I do not know, nor am I concerned with who proposed it before, or who will propose it after.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: That is all they need to say.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Let me remark that this is not a unique problem or concern because those of us who are aware will know that the United States is facing a crisis, as are many other countries, regarding deteriorating family values and the importance of redressing this problem.

There are a number of authors, medical doctors, psychologists, and other people, who have become famous as resource persons with some of the proposals they have made in addressing these problems.

The problem of the poor and the disenfranchised (as I call them) is one that strikes us by stark reminders from time to time. Sometime ago there was a tragedy where some people in the Watlers Road area of George Town suffered losses due to a fire. These persons were on the television this morning and I noted that they are still homeless and crying out for support.

I think in a country that hosted over 1,000 Cuban migrants, we absolutely must find a way to help these people immediately. It should not be a question of their having to lose their pride by begging in a country that is indebted to the tune of $5,730 per day to pay for Cuban migrants back in Cuba. We must find decent accommodations for these 24 persons. Right now!

History will not be kind to us if we do not do that. I think that it is incumbent upon the government before the day is out to tell this House what has been done, or is being done to ease this situation. I shall look forward to listening.

Many strides are being made with regard to sports and youth development. I take cognisance of the efforts. I think it is in the right direction even though I may have philosophical disagreements from time to time with some efforts being expended. Certainly, the focus on sports is constructive. What I would like to see and what I am appealing to the government and to all Honourable Members of this House to endeavour, is to let us put in place more programmes in the various communities which can complement the physical facilities that we are developing.

I noted that we recently acquired the services of two persons to be technical directors in areas of basketball and soccer (or football as we sometimes call it). Also, the announcement that there will be the formation of district sports councils. I would like to say that, from experience, as far as the district councils are concerned, I think it would be the ideal situation if they were developed in such a way that the sports office would have regular contacts with them rather than to leave them completely on their own. From time to time, the persons who volunteer for these kinds of assignments and duties are those persons who have to volunteer by their very civic-mindedness among other things. So, it is not impossible to find that these persons have sometimes two and three organisations going. So it would be necessary to depend on the sports office for some support.

I know firsthand of the difficulty in my own constituency in Bodden Town where I try to take as active a part as I can in the day-to-day affairs of the little organisation we have regarding the development of football. So, I can say that it falls on a few people all of the time. And, unfortunately, the others sit back and only show up when it is time to reap praise—but when it is time for hard work and for transporting and for digging in the pocket, they are sure that they are far from the area.

This is a positive note, and I lend my encouragement to it. I only also say that I wish that the Minister and the Government would also see fit to offer some scope for training and for a furthering of their experience to some people like J.C. Connor, who was a national coach, Gilly Seymour, Andy Myles, and Justin Morgan. I know that it may be possible to get these people on attachments overseas where they can gain knowledge and expertise so that they can come back one day and take over positions of leadership in the various sports.

I know from the time that I was vice president of the Football Association (1986-1988) and J.C. Connor was the National Coach, he has been to the Mexican Football Confederation on several occasions on attachments that he arranged. I think I saw something in the papers recently where he had just returned from there. I believe that the Minister may well consider offering official support because it would make it easier to access these persons.

I also note with interest that the G.C. Foster College in Jamaica is now a degree granting institution. I was listening to some developments over the weekend where in Jamaica the Ministry of Sports said that the philosophy is to develop this institution to the highest level so that people in Jamaica, but not only in Jamaica also in the other Caribbean regions, can benefit because they recognise that it is becoming increasingly expensive to take advantage of these kinds of institutions offered on the North American Continent.

Also, the training and the facilities available at the G.C. Foster College are no less advanced than those offered in institutions on the North American Continent.

So, I would hope that the Minister can continue on this course. And now that we seem to be nearing a position where we are having excellent physical facilities, some thought and effort should be put in place where we get Caymanian persons trained and educated and equipped where we can platoon them in the various districts or communities.

Certainly, the notion of District Sports Councils is a good one. If we develop these to the level they should be developed we should have no problem arriving at training and developing youngsters who do us well on the national level.

Before I leave this Ministry, I just want to make a few comments regarding the Department of Labour.

Madam Speaker, labour has been one of the most democratising institutions in the development of the Caribbean. While we have no sugar plantations or factories that employ large numbers of people, we no less have our problems in regard to our people—placing them in jobs where they can perform meaningfully and which offers them scope for promotion to managerial and decision-making positions.

I believe it is accurate to say that in the hospitality sector we face the greatest challenge where this is concerned. Why is this so? Because the Caymanian economy dictates that wages and salaries are high. So, it seems attractive to import labour in many instances. Not only because our people expect high wages, but because in those occupations that are obviously seasonal, it is easy to bring someone in for six months and when the slow period is on send them back to their country of origin. It is a challenge, therefore, for the Government and the Ministry to see that what exists continues and is always fair and in the best interest of the Caymanian worker.

But we have perennial complaints from some sectors of the hospitality industry where people complain of being short-shrifted with regard to gratuities, where they complain about labour conditions which are unfavourable. I note with interest that the Minister has announced a review regarding some form of minimum wage study.

I also vividly remember a motion brought by my colleague on the Opposition calling for the Establishment of a Minimum Wage by Category, and in passing only remark that it is a pity that political expediency did not allow that motion to be accepted. By this time we would have been well on our way and could have devoted our efforts instead of just having a review to taking it to the next logical stage. As a result, we are beginning when—if we had taken advantage of the opportunity—we could have been well on our way to something else.

There is, too, mention in the Throne Speech of the plans to turn district town halls into district libraries, once civic centres are available. I applaud and support this plan. But I would only request that in the constituency of Bodden Town, since we are currently having a new clinic built and since, traditionally the Town Hall has been (for whatever reason) a more popular place as far as public meetings are concerned, that some thought be given to seeing if we could salvage the old clinic for a library and resource centre, rather than using the Town Hall. Then we would be able to leave the Town Hall as an optional meeting place, remembering too that during years of General Elections, the Civic Centre is the building we use for the tallying of the votes and all of that (the Town Hall is not used for that, mainly to have public meetings).

We could carry out some kind of feasibility survey to see if the old clinic would be appropriate, and also bearing in mind that the old clinic, while it does not offer any parking space, it is right across from the Post Office. So, while parents come to pick up their mail, they could also avail themselves of the opportunity to drop off their children to pick up books or drop them off at the library and resource centre. They could kill two birds with one stone.

I hope that this could be explored because it strikes me that of the two venues this old clinic (depending on the extent of the renovations needed) would be a more appropriate place.

I want to offer some brief comments regarding education. We talked before about what is going on with the strategic and I have expressed my position on that on numerous occasions. I have to remark, however, that during his contribution the Minister for Education said something to the extent that the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and I, as Opposition Members, suffer from a misunderstanding as a result of a lack of knowledge of what is happening in the schools.

I would just like to remark that if he knows this to be the case, why does he not invite us when he goes to visit the schools as I would think is appropriate and should be done. I only learn of visits to the schools in my constituency when I read it in the newspaper. So then, is it any wonder that I suffer from a lack of understanding as to what is happening?

I noticed too, that the Minister attempted to take credit for the recent success in the CXC examination. I find this rather humorous since the Hansards of this honourable House will show that as far away as 11 April, 1979, the now Minister for Education (who was the Member for Education then) boasted that he had killed the Caribbean Council's Examination.

At that time he said: "All of the worried area of opposition to the education policies come as a result of my terminating the Caribbean Examinations Council Examination." So how can he now come back and say that the success in the recent examinations is due to his leadership? Strange, Madam Speaker, strange. And certainly not borne out by the Hansards of this House.

The position of the International College of the Cayman Islands in this country is a position that begged for understanding, if not sympathy. Here is an institution that has been operating for more than 20 years, yet has to continue to struggle for Government recognition and support. A private institution in a country where the Minister for Education says that; "efforts must be made to recognise the contribution of private institutions in the field of education because it lessens the financial burden on the Government." What a paradox that this institution of higher learning is not granted the respect that it is due.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and I, as Opposition Members, have teamed up on occasion to try to force, not only this government, but the previous government as well, in all candour, for some kind of recognition for this institution.

I received some statistics recently regarding the enrollment—and there are about 500 students, full-time and part-time enrolled in this institution. I understand from conversations with the administration that what the school is seeking is not necessarily handouts, but the kind of respect and recognition that will encourage students to attend the school when they realise that their matriculation will be accepted by the government.

Some thought should be given to this. And if it is that an evaluation of the institution needs to be done, then let us get on with it and set up the necessary expertise to have this evaluation done so that we can arrive at a position of understanding. I have remarked before in this Honourable House that I see the position of the International College not as one of a competitor to the Community College, but as one complementing the Community College since, by their very nature at this time, they offer different fields of study and different tracks. I think that these two institutions should be developed as complementing each other to the point where at some stage we can have a sharing of certain facilities, such as libraries and resource centres—if we do not wish to take it to the furthest extent and have a sharing of certain faculty members.

This is the challenge. But I do not know what strange virus somebody thinks exists at the International College of the Cayman Islands, why political directorates in the past—and the present political directorate—did not exercise their fair conscience in trying to give this institution the recognition and respect that it is due.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member take a suspension at this time?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.41 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.07 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town, continuing.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I have now come to that section of my contribution where I would like to reply to some of the comments made by previous speakers. Before doing so, let me say that debates in this honourable House often seem to be lacking in intellectual capacity and substance. The Hansards will show that I have been consistent since coming here in trying to keep to a certain standard, because when I am gone I would like to have left behind a testament to the level of my commitment and my intelligence and the sincerity of my trying to offer a positive contribution.

I am torn between maintaining that position and suffering kicks and stomps by people who would take advantage and interpret that as a sign of weakness. I well recall one of the aphorisms that my grandfather left me with when I was much too young to understand: "If you are ignorant, the world is going to cheat you. If you are weak, the world is going to kick you. If you are a coward, the world is going to keep you running."

Madam Speaker, in his contribution, the Minister for Education and Aviation took umbrage because the Opposition had questioned the necessity of the three Elected Members of Executive Council going on the financial industry promotional tour. He, in his usual way, brought up all kinds of irrelevancies including Commonwealth Parliamentary business, which (as every Honourable Member knows) should be kept out of politics.

But I would just like to say that the Cayman Islands Constitution, in section 5, Part II, states that there shall be a Chief Secretary, an Attorney General and a Financial Secretary, five Elected Members who shall be titled Ministers, making a total of eight Members with the Governor presiding. It is my understanding that the Constitution of the Cayman Islands also applies only to the geographical jurisdiction of the Cayman Islands: There is no provision for the Executive Council to meet outside of these Islands and make binding decisions.

According to the Gazette (4 of 1995) bearing the date of Monday, 20 February 1995, the Governor appointed the following: Mr. Michael Marsden, Acting Attorney General and Member of Executive Council; Mr. Joel Walton, Acting Financial Secretary and Member of Executive Council; Mr. Donovan Ebanks, Acting Chief Secretary and Member of Executive Council. Each person whom the three appointees replaced was considered under the Constitution incapable of performing the functions of his office between 11 and 24 February 1995. This was the express reason stated: These persons would not be in the Cayman Islands to perform their duties.

It therefore stands to reason that these three members for whom the Governor appointed substitutes, would not be filling the role of Executive Council Members because those Executive Council Members were outside the Constitutional jurisdiction of the Cayman Islands. Note that at this time Mr. James Ryan was also appointed as Acting Governor, so there were four new Executive Council Members appointed.

Now, in answer to the question that I raised regarding the accompaniment of the three Elected Ministers, the Financial Secretary said, and I quote: "At the Hong Kong conference, a leading trust attorney pointed out that Cayman was considered the jurisdiction of choice in terms of quality for the setting up of restricted trust companies. However, because of the fee of $6,000 Cayman Islands dollars per annum, as opposed to the standard fee of $2,000 Cayman Island dollars in other jurisdictions, Hong Kong law firms were referring business to the less costly jurisdictions."

He went on, and I quote: "The Ministers were able to consider this issue on the spot so that later the same day it was announced that a decision had been taken to realign Cayman's fees to CI$2,000 per annum, effective March 1, 1995."

My question is how could there be a meeting of Executive Council in Hong Kong, and there be an Executive Council in the Cayman Islands at the same time?

How could there be two Governors, two Chief Secretaries, two Financial Secretaries and two Attorneys General at the same time?

This means that there was at this time 13 Executive Council Members, when the Constitution makes provision for only eight. [Members' laughter]

So, Madam Speaker, tell me how this reactionary decision, taken in Hong Kong, can be legally and constitutionally valid. I say that it is illegal, invalid, and constitutionally unsound.

Madam Speaker, you know, I have also suffered because it seems that I must not exercise my intelligence and my ability. It seems that as a result of a recent public meeting held by the Opposition Members (namely, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and I), where Mr. Ezzard Miller was a guest speaker appearing on our platform, the wrath of the government has been incurred. Through their spokesperson, the Minister for Education and Aviation (whom the country knows is not exactly my best friend), this association came to be questioned. I was accused of jumping the fence and all sort of other things because of this meeting, this association on this evening with Mr. Ezzard Miller.

Well, I thought about this situation over the weekend. I meditated, and I sought counsel and advice. I want to say, as I have said before, that my position remains consistent. I have no reason to be ashamed. Mr. Ezzard Miller did not do me anything other than in the cut and thrust of debates in this House he stuck to his position. But as for the remark that politics make strange bedfellows, let me say that if in my charitableness, and against the better advice of supporters, political confidants, advisors and friends, I made alliances with people who threatened to relegate me to their car-wash boy, and who said all kinds of uncomplimentary and disparaging remarks about my then wife; and I went against the odds and made up with these people even when the people of Bodden Town put them out in favour of Mr. Franklin Smith and me, how much more should I exercise my option and associate in a democratic and legal way with Mr. Ezzard Miller who did not lay a straw in my way inside or outside of this Legislative Assembly. It seems that the good Samaritan in Roy Bodden is mistaken for weakness.

It was George Canning who said: "No eternal friendships, certainly, no eternal animosities—just eternal interests." Just eternal interests, Madam Speaker. And when those interests are not in the best interest of country and constituency, Roy Bodden will not flinch from living by the dictates of his conscience.

I want to dwell upon this jumping of the fence for a little while. I, Roy Bodden, could never jump as many political fences as Winston Churchill jumped, and I will never be the man, in a million lifetimes, that Sir Winston Churchill was. So, as far as I am concerned, politically speaking, there is nothing wrong with jumping fences if it is by the dictates of your conscience and in the best interest of country and constituency.

But, Roy Bodden, does not have the monopoly on fence jumping, as I will show now, because the National Team, by its very nature, is made up of fence jumpers.

[voices across the floor]

Mr. Roy Bodden: According to The Caymanian Herald of October 12, 1983, the Minister of Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture, and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town were at war. And the Minister... let me read what happened, according to this newspaper report: "Speaking to an all Island crowd of about 70 persons, 35 of whom were from Bodden Town, Haig Bodden said last Tuesday night that the Opposition had destroyed themselves with the peaceful march on Wednesday, 31st August. And he went on to say that a stockholder in Quality Concrete that had been selling cocaine had written the speeches for McKeeva Bush, and he promised to reveal the names next year."

And in retaliation, Mr. McKeeva Bush, in his meeting of October 8, 1983, called Mr. Haig... he said, "Mr. Haig, tonight I am calling you a liar. All right?"

Madam Speaker, how is that for strange bedfellows? [Members' laughter]

Madam Speaker, even the Lady Member for North Side was not exempt from this group, because the Herald of October 12, 1984, on pages five and six, record her claiming that she was not associated with the Unity Team and never was. She said that they should be thrown out. Yet, now, some of the people with whom she is associated were former Unity Team members.

[interjections]

Mr. Roy Bodden: She further said, regarding the new hospital, that she would like to see a new hospital located away from the flight path of the airport.

If the Minister for Education and Aviation had the common sense to complement the nine senior qualifications he claims to have, if he had even a smattering of common sense (and, Madam Speaker, by the way, I do not know why they call it common sense because it is not too common) he would not have brought this up because people who live in glass houses should never throw stones!

I want to say something else. It was Edmund Burke, that quintessential thinker, who said: "When bad men combine, the good must associate; else they will fall one by one an unpitied sacrifice in a contemptible struggle."

Now, I ask the question again: Why should I not be free to exercise my democratic right—because that was all I was doing—to associate with Ezzard Miller if I so choose?

In 1992, I associated with the Minister for Education who, in 1979, said in this very House concerning me: "I believe, Mr. President, that prevention is better than cure. Only a fool lets a fox into the chicken house and hopes that the chickens will convert the fox into a chicken, and that has been the import of recent articles, including articles which I have been very concerned about such as that of Roy Bodden in relation to the Cuban situation." [And, to go even a little further] "All of the worried area of opposition to the education policies come as a result of my terminating the Caribbean Examinations Council Examination."

I just want to say one thing by way of clarification. I have never written any article about the Cuban situation. He did not read the article that I wrote. But, political expediency and political convenience is the order of the day with the National Team, because when it suited him he embraced my presence as a Member of the National Team.

What is that? Politics makes strange bedfellows? It sure does because again... and, Madam Speaker, I have to tell you that to this day some people in Bodden Town hold my association with that Minister against me, and they are totally unforgiving of the fact that I appeared at the Civic Centre on the same platform in Bodden Town with him. There are those who hold that against me and do not let me forget that. Every time they have occasion to remind me, they do so.

Now, Madam Speaker, I am saying that if I was gracious enough to embrace that gentleman after he made me divert from my path in the civil service, why should I not exercise my right and my option to hold a meeting, or to speak with Mr. Ezzard Miller who did nothing in this country? To my mind, he is the only politician that was exonerated by way of an investigation.

[interjections]

Mr. Roy Bodden: You know, Madam Speaker, this whole business better be taken seriously by the public because of the fact that people who do not have access to the same forum to reply have been castigated in here time and time again. The fact that no respect is shown for former Members of this honourable, House fraternity members (and, I say that because I believe that politics is a fraternity), cognisance should be taken of these things. If you do not respect your peers then who do you respect? Who can be exempt from this kind of castigation?

I have to wonder with regard to the Minister for Education and Aviation as to whether he is protecting himself, or is he acting out of some secret spite, or suffering from some kind of excruciating pathological ambivalence.

In commenting, let me say that they should not forget, because it is at least three of them threw a libel suit on the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture and Shylocked about $37,000 out of him. And they talk about politics making strange bed fellows? Let us not talk about that. I mean if that can be forgotten, and they can conveniently associate out of political expediency then they should just let any other association pass.

The Speaker: May I ask the Honourable Member... I think it is time you continued with your debate. I think you have said enough, and gotten your points across. Will you kindly continue?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I shall so do.

Madam Speaker, you know that I am not the most obnoxious of Members, and, indeed, Ma'am, begging your pardon, most times I come here I am as staid as an Oxford Don. But sometimes I have to be as bristling and as fiery as a Brooklyn Rap artist. But that stage is past now, so I shall get back on track in heeding your advice.

It has been suggested by the Minister for Education and Aviation that my friend and Opposition colleague, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, is not a good representative because he does not live in the constituency he represents. But that too is not the case because we know that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, the Member for North Side and the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay do not live in their constituencies.

It is my understanding that since Cayman Brac has two representatives it was always the practice that one of them remained in the constituency while the other was resident in Grand Cayman. One does not have to look hard to see the sense in that because it gave a definite advantage in terms of being in Grand Cayman, which is the capital, in the event of important business cropping up and, for consultation purposes, there was a Member over in the Brac. So when communication and time allowed, they could confer and come up with a unified position. But they have tried to derail my colleague many times before without success and these efforts will be no less futile.

I went to Cayman Brac last Saturday night as a guest of the two Members. Believe you me, the people they represent are very pleased with what they are doing and with how they operate. I can only say that their work is cut out for them.

We have heard that the Government is a much better financial manager than the past political directorate. I am not here to argue because I have no connections with the past political directorate. I was not for very long a part of them, and they do not need me to defend them. What I would like to do is set the record straight because I heard the Minister for Tourism attempt to blame the past political directorate for what has come to be known as Motion 3/90.

In The New Caymanian of 28th August through 3rd September, 1992, in an interview with Alan Scott ("Straight Talk"), Alan Scott, says "I served without fear or favour." The New Caymanian asked Alan Scott: "Is it true that you were on leave when Government Motion 3/90 (change in the composition of Finance Committee) was approved by Executive Council?"

Alan Scott replied: "I was indeed on leave when that was approved to go before the Legislative Assembly."

The New Caymanian then asked: "Would it have been possible for the Acting Governor to defer that motion or to seek the Secretary of State's advice?"

Alan Scott replied: "Yes. The Acting Governor, Mr. Thomas Jefferson, has the full powers of the Governor under the Constitution while he is acting."

So it seems that somebody has his story crossed. I would like to say, Madam Speaker...

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Are you rising on a Point of Order?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Ma'am.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: May I hear the Point of Order Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker. The Member has read from at least three documents. I am wondering whether he could lay those documents or articles on the Table of the House.

The Speaker: I am sure the First Elected Member for Bodden Town does realise that having read from articles they become the property of the Parliament and can be laid on the Table.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Most certainly, Madam Speaker. In fact, I beg your apology, Ma'am, because I had the documents prepared to lay on the Table, but in the cut and thrust of the debate I omitted to do so.

The Speaker: Please continue, First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Perhaps before we continue I should say that the Honourable Minister rose and asked a question and it certainly was not a Point of Order.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I now wish to express my great surprise at the fact that the Minister for Education and Aviation would attempt, in an effort to retaliate as he is accustomed to trying, to besmirch my association in the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association by suggesting that I had somehow taken advantage of the Association in my travelling as a delegate of the Cayman Islands Branch of the Commonwealth Parliamentary Association.

I was surprised because it is unusual for the business of the CPA, which should remain above politics, to be brought into these kinds of debates. And also, because for every conference or seminar which I have attended, I had to go through a procedure of applying and being accepted by the Executive. I did not, in being successful, commit an untoward act; nor did I take advantage of any position. The records will show that at every conference and seminar I attended, I participated with dignity and at the level which bespeaks a representative in my position.

It is unfortunate, therefore, that I had to write in defence of my position to the Honourable Financial Secretary in a letter, which I will read, dated 17th March, of which a copy was sent to you, Madam Speaker.

"Dear Sir: I write to request copies of the relevant accounts related to the official travel costs of the five elected Ministers of Executive Council since they took office in 1992 to date, including travel costs incurred in connection with Commonwealth Parliamentary Association business. As you are aware as Third Official Member of the Legislature, today the Minister for Education read information obviously received from the Treasury Department regarding travel costs incurred by myself on the business of the Cayman Islands Branch of the CPA.

"Please note that papers on this matter were not before the Honourable House prior to the Minister raising this matter. The Legislative and Democratic process dictates that I be given equal opportunity to reply to this matter with papers and information similarly."

Unfortunately, Madam Speaker, at the present time, while I have received the reply indicating that the Honourable Financial Secretary has set the wheels in motion, I have not been able to produce these statements. I only say, again, that it is regrettable, and that in my defence I have to take these kinds of positions.

I notice a deteriorating trend here and all Honourable Members must take cognisance. There is a level beyond which we should not go.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Hear, hear!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Because, sooner or later, if it does not come to an end (according to remarks I hear frequently in the public), it is not going to end good.

This kind of behaviour, which, unfortunately, forces me to be likewise, is not in the best interest of the Westminster system—and there are some people who persist to be traitors to the high standards and principles of the Westminster system.

It goes even further. This whole business of freedom of speech and the ability to express one's opinion, we are skirting dangerously close to totalitarianism.

Let me bring something to the attention of the House, Madam Speaker. In The New Caymanian of the week of the 17th March, under "Everybody's Business," columnist Gordon Barlow remarked: "Carl Gordon phoned me at home the other day to say, among other things, that these columns have made me extremely unpopular with Caymanians." Madam Speaker, it is regrettable that a person in such a position would take such an ill-advised step.

That is open to interpretation: Is that an official line? Was that a directive from someone? Because you see, Madam Speaker, for someone who occupies that position it is not easy to separate oneself from the position: Indeed, I would claim that it is impossible.

This is the kind of thing that we should be cognisant of and I crave the indulgence of the Chair to read this: "First they came for the Communists and I did not speak out because I was not a Communist. Then they came for the Jews and I did not speak out because I was not a Jew. Then they came for the trade unionists, and I did not speak out because I was not a trade unionist... Then they came for me, and by that time there was no one left to speak up." This poem was written by someone who was a victim of the Nazis. Need I say more, Madam Speaker?

You know, Madam Speaker, the Minister for Education likes to get up and talk about the unemployed and the unemployable, and he likes to convey the impression that he was successful in every undertaking upon which he embarked. I wonder if he forgets his venture in the Cayman Times, in which he sank half a million dollars.

I wonder if he, like most politicians, suffered defeat at the polls at some stage.

I am saying that there is so much bad in the worst of us and so much good in the best of us, that it behoves none of us to talk about the rest of us. We have to remember that the position that we occupy in here—we are but merely trustees of the public.

In closing, let me say that I remain diligent in my efforts to represent my constituents to the best of my ability. I give the undertaking that I shall always serve with humility, and that I shall support what is worthy of my support and I shall not hesitate to express my opinion on things that I deem unworthy of my support. I shall continue to work with deserving people and shall continue to endeavour not to close the door on anyone. But, Madam Speaker, I too have limits to my patience.

I am grateful for the opportunity that I have been given to serve, and I thank my constituents and pledge my ongoing efforts through God's help. Thank you.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on the Throne Speech.

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I, too, would like to add my contribution to the debate on the Throne Speech so ably delivered to us by His Excellency the Governor.

I would like to start off by saying that the Lord has been good to all of us here in the Cayman Islands. We continue to enjoy peace and prosperity, and I honestly believe that we should give Him thanks, rather than to continue to behave in the fashion which all of us are guilty of at some time or the other.

Our country is on the right track, we continue to see progress in the Cayman Islands, we continue to hear of a very strong financial position. We continue to be the centre of attraction in the Caribbean, we continue to be the pearl of the Caribbean.

All of this did not come by chance. It took many years for us to reach where we are today. It took many governments—however little, or however much they might have contributed to bring us to where we are today. But, other territories around us have also prospered, but because of bad handling many of those suffer today.

The Government of the Cayman Islands today has done much to put the old ship Cayman back on an even keel and we should endeavour (if we love Cayman the way we say we do) in this honourable House to work together and to keep it that way, rather than to continue to pull upon each other and to try to degrade each other the way it has been done in this House sometimes.

My responsibility is Agriculture, Communication and Works. I am going to base my debate around the department which I am responsible for.

I will start with the Department of Agriculture. I would like to say that this Department continues to work hard to do all that is humanly possible to promote agriculture in these Islands. The Department will commence its fifth year of activities which fall under the Development Plan for Agriculture and it will be started here in 1995.

A comprehensive evaluation of the progress that has been achieved to date has been completed and information gathered would be compared with the result of the base-line survey undertaken at the start of the programme in 1991.

Madam Speaker, in 1995 a total sum, which was approved in the Budget, of $832,577 will assist us to commence several projects at the Lower Valley Farm. These will include the preparation of another road to the Lower Valley Pavilion site, it will assist us to relocate the Department's office, also, we are hoping to start up the slaughter facilities in the same area and no doubt these facilities will assist us to assist the farmers of this country to better prepare local meats for the market.

The Department also continues to upgrade the local livestock. We continue to improve on the production of crops. Overall, the Department continues to work hand-in-hand with the farming community.

It is quite encouraging for me to see where we are today with farming and to know where farming was when I took over the Portfolio in 1980. In recent times we can boast of quality and in some instances we can also boast of quantity. The quality of animals which we have in the Cayman Islands today is as good as I have seen in any neighbouring territory. Again, it took a lot of hard work, a lot of interest from the local farming community, but it is something we have achieved. It is something which we have come a long way with and through the Department and my Ministry we continue to offer every assistance possible to keep this moving forward.

I would like to touch on problems we have experienced over the last year. For example, we still have those who continue to import mangoes and flowers and the like. In recent times, I have had to instruct my Department of Agriculture to put a stop to the importation of mangoes into the Cayman Islands because we found that the fruit being brought in was infested with the fruit fly.

I know for some importers this has not gone down well, but I am not going to stand by and see the many years which have been put into farming in the Cayman Islands go down the drain because somebody feels they should continue to import. Likewise, with certain flowers we now have the problem in this country with the white fly which until now there is no know cure for.

We will continue to monitor these areas and we will continue to do all possible to keep this to the minimum and we trust that those who are involved in important will see fit to work along with us and to assist us rather than try to make it harder for us.

Also, we were able to make provisions for loan funds to the farmers at an attractive interest rate. Farmers can apply for loans up to $10,000. It is a programme which we hope will continue to encourage the smaller farmer, especially.

The loan programme covers crop cultivation; live-stock improvement and pasture development; on-farm infrastructure and equipment, such as crop irrigation equipment and small building which are needed from time to time; and also, small scale processing facilities.

Through the Department in recent times we have had several work shops for farmers which have proven to be a great success. As I mentioned, we are hoping that through this loan programme we will see even more interest in this side of farming.

Those who qualify for such loans as mentioned fall in the category of small farmers, will be persons who possess Caymanian status, or those who are legally resident with long term ties to the Cayman Islands. The applicants will be required to become members of the Farmers Co-op and encouraged to join the Agricultural Society.

The applicants will be required to provide collateral which will be similar to what would be asked for in a bank, but, of course, we will use discretion and we will try to assist as much as possible.

Also, the borrower will be asked to put up a portion of the required funds for the project and the interest rate thus far is at 5%.

The Department will continue to monitor the projects as time goes on and try to keep abreast of whatever the farmer is doing. We will also try to make sure that the return from whatever the farmer chooses to do will be maximum to the farmer.

Under achievement for the Department for 1994: We were able to bring on line a grafting programme. This is something the National Team Government promised the people of this country. I am pleased to say today that we have employed a qualified grafter. I know the lady Members here will be pleased to hear that it is a female and she is doing an excellent job. We are hoping that our farmers will utilise her to the fullest.

Also, a Veterinary Officer has been recruited who will increase the efficiency of the Veterinary Services the Department now offers.

As I mentioned earlier, the slaughtering facilities which we hoped to have started at the end of 1994 had to be put on hold, but, of course, we have that as one of our priority projects for 1995.

The Farmer's Market has also been modified to maximise use of space and we have also added somewhat of a deli and juice and farm retail supply area to the facility. It is hoped that in a short time we will have a small outlet in the old market in George Town where we will be able to cater fresh fruit juices to the tourists.

Presently we have two young Caymanians who are qualified to do artificial insemination. This is a service we now offer to those farmers who require it. We also had a Soil and Water Management Workshop, which was conducted by the Department and the University of the West Indies. This was held at the new Pavilion in Lower Valley. There were over 40 farmers who attended and the workshop lasted for five days. It was quite interesting and encouraging to see the participation of such a cross-section of farmers and the interest each one showed in receiving the most out of this conference.

Hopefully we will be putting another one together in the future. We are hoping to bring back the professor from the University to assist us in trying to fully utilise the land space each farmer is presently working. This will be of great interest to the farmer because it is a known fact that farming here in these Islands is very hard. We have some rough terrain, but it is my belief that with the assistance that we are trying to put in place we will be able to produce more and to fully utilise the land we have.

We also have a training programme, which deals with small scale food processing. This was a great success and I am happy to say that since that time we have seen a lot of interest shown in trying to preserve a lot of fruits which in the past would have been fed to the animals because of spoilage. Once this is fully working it will allow the farmer to save on his crop and in some instances certain things can be preserved and sold at the outlet in town to the visiting tourist.

I believe that in recent times the Farmer's Market has become more popular with local people. I encourage them to continue utilising the Farmer's Market facility and, indeed, to support local farming. The quality is superior to imported items and in most cases I am sure I am safe in saying that the produce is more natural. In the case of mangoes, it is my understanding that the quality is better than anything that we can import into the Cayman Islands.

As I mentioned, farming is something close to my heart. I practice what I preach and I will continue to do whatever possible to assist farmers to make sure that they receive as much as is humanly possible for whatever is produced here in the Cayman Islands.

This year, also, we are hoping to embark on a project in Cayman Brac. The Department is presently supplying the Cayman Brac area with supplies like fertilisers, bag feed, but we are also hoping to assist the farmers there with the necessary watering facilities which, as I understand, has been a serious problem for farmers for a long time. The well is already in place and we will no doubt make it much easier for those farmers who are presently involved in farming.

I would like to stress that I am very pleased to see the added interest of so many young farmers, especially here in Grand Cayman. At one stage it looked like it was something that was dying day by day; but in recent times we find all over Grand Cayman those who have come forward and are engaged in goats or cattle, and some in crops, and they are doing a very good job. This is the sort of thing which the Department of Agriculture, and my Ministry, will continue to encourage.

We hope to take a group of young farmers to the Florida area in May of this year to the University of Gainesville. They will take a week-long course in agriculture. I am certain that each and every one of them will enjoy and learn something more of what it means to do agriculture effectively.

I will now turn to Communications. I would first like to touch on the enhanced 9-1-1 system which we are presently bringing on line. I believe that this is a positive step, it is something every country needs. It is a system whereby our emergency systems in the country will be improved upon. It will help our people in case of sickness and accidents to reach the necessary emergency areas on time. The system which we hope to put in place will allow an ambulance operator (once the call is received) to trace that call direct to the residence wherever the call may be coming from.

In case somebody should become very sick, for example, a heart attack, once that number is dialed (911) even if the person should collapse before being able to talk that call could be traced and an emergency vehicle could be sent to the person. It is a very good system.

I had an opportunity to visit a town in Boston some time ago with a much larger population than the whole of the Cayman Islands. But the system there was really something to see in operation—very effective and which, no doubt, made everyone feel safe.

The headquarters for this system will be at the Fire Department. There will be two backup systems, one at the hospital. Of course, we will have another at the Police Station. The way the system works is if someone calls in the vicinity of the Fire Department, the call will also be relayed to the other two areas which I mentioned, thus keeping all three informed [department] as to what is taking place.

We are also hoping to upgrade radio communications with the Sister Islands in 1995. An additional antenna will be put in place that will cause the communications to be better.

I would also like to point out that my Ministry is all prepared for the CARIFTA games. The requirements which have been put forward for the necessary communications have been put in place and taken care of and we are hoping to do whatever we can to make this a success.

Turning to the Post Office and the Postal Services in the Cayman Islands. If nothing else is achieved by this Government, I am certain that everyone would agree with me that the Postal Services and, indeed, the George Town Central Post Office is something that has come along way in a very short time and is worthy of all congratulations possible.

This has been one of my pet projects since taking over the Ministry and I am happy to know that I have such a person in charge as Miss Corrine Glasgow. She is somebody I have the greatest admiration for. She is very ambitious. She is a go-getter, somebody who continues to push the programme to try to improve, not only on the service—she wants to see the building in top shape—but most importantly, the staff, I would say that she has done wonders with the staff. It is a good feeling when one walks into the Central Post Office to see the lovely uniforms that they wear, the cleanliness of the place, the overall face-lift. I have received numerous letters of congratulations on this and I can only say that this has been possible because of team work, not only the team work of my Ministry and the Postal Department, but also of this National Team Government.

I could not have done this by myself; I had to depend on each and every Member of this Legislative Assembly when it came time to have the funds available and today I am most grateful and pleased that I can make such a report back to the House on the achievements which have been made in reorganising and restructuring the Post Office.

This is only the beginning. Like all other things we are going to try to upgrade throughout the districts: the Post Offices of West Bay, Hell, Bodden Town and East End will all be worked on in the near future. We are also looking at the Post offices in the West End of Cayman Brac. We are looking at a sorting centre which will be constructed by the Airport here in Grand Cayman.

These will provide an additional 4,000 post boxes and I should say, long awaited post boxes, because for whatever reason it seems that no emphasis was placed on this over the years. Many businesses and residents continue to wait. So we are going to try to improve upon this and allow all those who are in need of boxes to be able to rent them.

We have also tried to introduce an identification card system and, while we have come under some criticism for this, I honestly believe that it is quite necessary. The reason behind it, as I understand from the Postmistress, is that there have been a few occasions when mail has gotten into the wrong hands and we feel that if somebody has an identification card, when presenting himself at the Post Office it is a preventative measure which will not only protect the post office, but will also protect those to whom the mail is delivered.

We are going to continue to try to promote the Caymanian staff within the post offices, we are going to try to reintroduce services to the public (in the outer districts), such as being able to pay various bills. I believe that this can be done and will alleviate a lot of problems for those having to come into George Town, especially people who have to depend on someone else for transportation.

It will also help to alleviate parking problems, and, to say the least, the long lines to pay for things like licenses on their vehicles. We are also going to upgrade communications between the Central Post Office and the district Post Offices.

A few days ago, I handed over the keys to the Postmistress for the first van that will be used for Express Mail. We are hoping that in the very near future we will be able to promote this in such a way and be able to capture sufficient business to warrant having another van put in service.

We will continue to cater to the tourists, as best we can. I believe that once we are able to separate the sorting office (which I mentioned earlier will be built at the Airport) from what is handled here in George Town it will create more space and we will be better able to serve the general public with the light mail.

The new Postmistress also developed a Post Office Logo. Like the uniforms, this identifies our Post Office—it appears on the stationery, the mail van, the mail drop. We have received numerous calls of congratulation for this bold step.

In whatever we do here in Grand Cayman, we are also looking at the Sister Islands and we are going to try our best to give as good a service over there as we have here in Grand Cayman.

Turning to Lands and Survey. This is a Department which His Excellency the Governor returned to me after being in the Ministry for about a year. I am pleased to say that it is working well and I know the Financial Secretary is always happy to hear that we are up 25% on fees and duties collected, thus making our contribution to the General Revenue 25% more than the year before.

We have also put in place the strengthening of the Survey Department. We are presently trying to do whatever possible to assist the public better. In this country we have a few survey teams, but in general the public continues to complain of the high rates which they have to pay, and continues to inquire why government discontinued the service which was given to the public many years ago.

Again, this government, with the assistance of our Backbench agreed and we have the funds in the budget and the Department is presently trying to add a few more teams of surveyors so that once again we will be able to assist the public at a much lower cost than what is presently being paid.

I know that this has not gone well with certain companies but I believe it will be greatly appreciated by our people. As far as I am concerned, it is our people that have given us the confidence in placing us in this Legislature, and as long as I am responsible for this area, I will do whatever is possible to make life easier for my people. This service is needed and it will assist our people greatly.

The Land Information System is something we can be proud of and we will continue to work on this and to bring about even further improvements as we go along.

Here in the Cayman Islands, we cater to a financial centre and we cater to many other areas and the services we offer are top class. I believe that now we can also be rated with the land information system in the same category. Again, all good reports have been coming in from banks and lawyers and the department will continue to do whatever possible to upgrade the land information system.

I would now turn to Works. To say the least, like other Members in this Legislative Assembly, I have been very much disturbed by the poll that was done by the Chamber of Commerce. The very low rating which was received by Works was very unfair and I am going to do my best to put forward the many, many jobs which the Public Works Department has undertaken for the last year and also to mention the unexpected projects which they had to do and, if I may say, Madam Speaker, I have done a very, very good job with it.

For whatever reason, Public Works always comes under heavy criticism. This is one time that I am certain that I can easily say that I do not believe there had been any other year or two in the history of the Cayman Islands when there was such a demand placed on the Public Works Department as was the case in 1994 up to the present.

We had the Cubans first of all. It was the responsibility of the Public Works Department to make sure that 1100 Cubans were covered, that is, a place for them to live in had to be provided speedily. Sometimes, I felt it was almost inhumane, the long hours that the Public Works staff had to work to make sure that the Cubans has a place to stay in. It seems as if the Chamber of Commerce must think that this happened by itself. Even if this was the only project mentioned, if credit was given for what took place there under the circumstances, they would have given some credit.

Let me say that there was no way that we could plan for what was going to happen the next day. Sometimes, as soon as we had a group put into some tents, or a building, another group arrived. Public Works was there through the night, at times, making sure that the tents and/or buildings were prepared.

If I may add, it was not an easy job trying to work on that compound, with so many bodies walking around and in some cases, as soon as something could be constructed it was being pulled down. I commend the Public Works Department for that project and to be frank with you, if I may, I would much rather see a tent city there than a hospital because that is really no place for us to put sick individuals.

As soon as that project was over we had to move on to the bypass by the Airport. Again, this was something that was put into the hands of Public Works with a deadline. There was very little time for a huge project to be completed. It seems as if the only thing that comes out of that one is continued criticism, rather than taking into consideration that regardless if it is working 100% as yet, it is still a good project.

Just prior to that, we had the other project of preparing for the Queen's visit. I need not go into that, but we all know that was not an easy task. It was the Public Works Department that everyone depended on to get the job done. I believe that throughout Grand Cayman a good job was done and we prepared well for the Royal Visit.

But with all of that we are here in 1995. I trust that if the Chamber of Commerce is going to direct another poll, they will do a better one this time because in 1995, Public Works will continue its role of maintaining public buildings, roads, it will continue to plan for implementing projects, expansions and improvements of public facilities.

We have a huge project in the road that will be coming from West Bay into George Town, the bypass, which is scheduled to be finished in 1995. We will continue to look at other road corridors we think will be necessary and will assist motorists in an easier flow of traffic. I can especially think of the eastern district into George Town. We have thus far started on this project and I am pleased to say that we have already seen improvements. We have opened the Old Prospect Road to two-way traffic, we have created a third lane from the junction of Red Rabbit which takes the traffic into old South Sound Road. Until this morning it was good to see how the traffic is now flowing in this area.

We have monitored the situation out there, the problem areas seem to be Prospect and old Crewe Road. So what we are trying to do is to create another lane whereby the traffic not needing to go across Prospect will be able to come through the old Prospect Road and filter into South Sound and into the school.

We also have plans in place to bypass old Crewe Road. Perhaps some will ask why we do not concentrate on upgrading the Old Crewe Road. This is almost impossible because of the various fences and the entrances to the main road. Even if we continue to upgrade the shoulders, it is still not going to do exactly what we need. We have looked at a bypass which will start across the road from the Lion's Centre, following the path of a dyke road which presently runs straight down behind Crewe Road and ties into Bob Thompson Way and also branches onto the road that takes you straight to the High School.

We believe that this will alleviate the problem in that area. Once on Bob Thompson Way the traffic will be able to follow Thomas Russell Way, traffic will be able to go back to the Airport, come into George Town and be able to go to the Schools.

The other bypass from West Bay to George Town will also filter traffic into the Airport and a branch road on Seymour Road will take us back into immediate George Town.

These are the corridors which we will be working on in the near future and as with the one at the Airport, I would just say to the motorists in this country that we need to take time and become familiar with the changes there, rather than constantly complaining, trying to rush through the junctions and constantly becoming involved in accidents. I have travelled the Airport junction—I am not saying that it is not a little confusing, but driving with due care and attention, I believe one can negotiate the corner, the Airport entrance, without any problem. The problems as I understand have been caused by individuals driving from the Airport, failing to stop at the Kirk Motors junction and becoming involved with the vehicles travelling into (or out of) town.

As I mentioned, the Public Works Department will continue to monitor and to do our best to improve what is there. As I promised here a few days ago during Question Time, we have already started to monitor the traffic flow in the various areas which is done on a yearly basis. This will assist us to do what we feel is necessary at that junction and, indeed, in other areas to try to alleviate the problems which motorists have experienced.

As I explained a while ago, like everything else, when it is first in place we must take time to become familiar with it. I am certain that in the near future it will work.

One complaint I have received is that the road is too narrow. We will be looking at this and as funds become available we will try to widen the hot mix section of the road. Also, in receiving those complaints, we also get the complaints from others that the overall road is too wide. It is one of those situations where it is, as the saying goes: "damned if you do and damned if you don't." But we are going to work on it and try to do whatever possible to make that roadwork to the betterment of the country.

Other complaints on that section of road are that it was not necessary. I am not here to judge if the individuals saying this are right or wrong. What I will say is that from my point of view, it is important when we can make sure that the safety of aircraft coming into this country continues to be our priority.

My understanding from speaking to various pilots that with the road in its present position, they are able to utilise much more of the runway than they could in the past. So this is but one thing that we have accomplished, I would say to those who criticise: Think of what it means to the lives of those who come into the Cayman Islands.

I know that various names have been placed on the road, such as 'Caledonian Drive', but this is not correct as I mentioned it was a safety factor that was brought into play when that road was constructed. I would also point out that certain individuals took me to task that I would not go on television and defend this road when the decision was made to build it. I know my responsibility in Government: 1) I am not a representative from George Town. The decision, first of all, to build that road was dealt with on that basis. Thereafter, I was given the job through the Public Works Department that the road be built. From that time forward, I have no problem defending what was done there.

As far as my getting up on that soapbox in the initial stages, like some so often like to do, I had no intention of doing it.

As I mentioned earlier, the department will continue to monitor the road system throughout the Island. We had to take a decision not too long ago to work on a portion of road on Eastern Avenue that, according to Public Works Department, if it were not attended to then, we would have lost a huge stretch of road. This is the case throughout Grand Cayman—the major roads need attention because when the hot mix begins to crack, and holes begin to come into it, we are then faced with a major road repair to be done. However, if we can do something that will prevent this, it will be a savings to government in the end.

It seems as if once we have to go to what is much cheaper, that is, seal and chip, everyone believes that it is not a good road. But we have to work with what we have, that is to say, that we have to work with the dollars that we have for roads. There are many other areas of need, therefore Public Works Department no doubt, must make suggestions to me on not only the hot mix, but what we can get more of for the money that we are spending. It was for this reason that we had to cover a stretch on Eastern Avenue with the seal and chip and in so doing we have protected the main base of the road and, with God's help, and some good funds in the future, we should be able to revert to what we were doing years ago, that is, the hot mix surface.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Minister wish to take a suspension at this time?

Hon. John B. McLean: Sure, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.40 P.M.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.04 P.M.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works, continuing.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I was explaining the situation with the Airport junction and I would just like to close off on that by saying that although much has been said about the diversion road, and the cost of $1.1 million, I would like to point out that this has been the cheaper way to go. If we had extended the runway into the North Sound, it is my understanding that the cost could have been about four times that amount. I believe it was the correct decision to go the way that we did and I am sure that I will be proven right in time to come.

Within the Department of Public Works, we will continue to encourage training of young Caymanians. In 1995 we will have two Caymanian students overseas studying for their Bachelor's Degree in Architecture; two studying for their Bachelor's Degree in Civil Engineering; one studying for an Associates Degree in Building Construction; in addition one graduate architect is on a one year secondment to a major United Kingdom firm. This will cause them to increase their experience and be more prepared for the professional job which is expected of them when they return home.

As I started to show that the Chamber of Commerce was not right when they scored the Public Works Department so low, I have thus far touched on two major projects. I will go on to show the involvement of Public Works Department in the last year and a half and at the end of this I will leave it to the general public to decide if the rate given by the Chamber of Commerce is correct or if, indeed, the Public Works Department has done an outstanding job.

In so saying, I am not one to stand here and paint Public Works Department as a beautiful bed of roses because, no doubt, there are many things that happen there that I am not satisfied with. It is only fair that if someone does something, as the saying goes, we give the devil his due. I do not believe this has happened in the case of the Chamber of Commerce.

The Public Works Department has been quite active in preparing for a very prestigious Hurricane Shelter/Civic Centre that will be constructed in the district of North Side. The Lady Member will agree with me that we have had several delays. But, as with anything else, it is better to have the delays in the initial stages than for us to get halfway through and have to stop for some reason or another.

This is on schedule for 1995 and God help me if I do not get it completed in 1995, because I can see the Lady Member shaking her head at me from across the floor!

But, we are on target and this will be done.

Also, they have been looking throughout the various Town Halls to make sure that new chairs were in place and other minor improvements that were needed at the buildings. They continue to make improvements on buildings that are utilised as hurricane shelters. The shutters were purchased for a few buildings owned by government.

The Public Works Department carried out their annual exercise in preparing themselves in case of a hurricane. They continue to improve and upgrade the strength of the buildings in which we will be housing our people.

They were involved with certain renovations at the Governor's residence, there were some of the quarters that are rented to expatriates renovated and upgraded; the resurfacing of the access road to the Archives building was completed; some minor upgrading was done on the office of Broadcasting. There was an extension of the present DEVS Headquarters; the continued purchasing the necessary furniture and fixtures and fittings for that department within the Public Works Department.

They were involved with the upgrading of the Tower Building to accommodate the remaining departments from the Harbour Centre; they were also involved with additional parking of a South Sound ramp and jetty. They were in charge of the Frank Sound Jetty being constructed and I must say that it is a lovely job.

They were overseeing the development of the Bodden Town Channel; there was some work carried out on the Whitehall Bay ramp, as a matter of fact, further upgrading had to be done there recently because of some dive operators who have literally destroyed it.

Some work was carried out on the Newlands Ramp and parking area. The Archives building had to be re-painted; the Police Building and Barracks were re-roofed; the Licensing Department had some renovations; some works were started and will be finished on the front park. The Central Station expansion and some maintenance work was done at Northward Prison including the upgrading of the electrical system; also, perimeter lights were put in place and a fire alarm system.

Within the Tower Building repairs such as partitions put into place, windows and frames repaired. The Customs Department, Phase I of the new offices and warehouse was completed. Some work was carried out at the Courts building. The Administration building had some alterations and additional partitioning done. Floors two and three had the ceiling done over and some new lights put in place. There was also some upgrading of electrical wires done on those two floors.

At the Legislative Assembly there was quite a bit of work done. A storage room was converted; the front entrance was re-tiled; there was a conversion of a small storeroom into a bathroom; and some upgrading on security.

They have also been involved with the planning of the Department of Environment Office which will be built on North Sound Road. There was upgrading of electrical work at Bonaventure.

On the schools there were in some cases major work carried out. In my district there was a complete face lift to the surrounding grounds. Additional doors had to be cut into the school buildings. The grounds were better prepared and the same was done in several of the primary schools throughout the Island. I think in some cases air-conditioning units were put into the libraries and there were upgrading of play field areas. I know in my district there is one just about ready to complete.

They have been quite active in preparing the sports complex up by the High School, which as we know will be needed for the CARIFTA games.

At Red Bay they were involved with additional classrooms, and I should say are still involved. Likewise in West Bay, at the John Cumber School. At the George Hicks School they were heavily involved with providing additional class rooms. At the Community College it was the same thing in providing additional space. Also, the entrance to the George Hicks High school had to be upgraded and the sidewalks put in place.

There was installation of floor tiles at Lighthouse School. There was a school bell put in place, ventilation and proper air-conditioning in certain areas of the school.

Construction of a maintenance workshop was done at the West Bay Primary School.

As I mentioned earlier, the Post Office here in George Town was one of the Public Works Department projects—one they can be commended for.

The Monument of the late James Manoah Bodden across from the Legislative Assembly, in the park.

On road construction: In my district in the Half Moon Bay area, Mr. Otto Watler Curve; the Old Man Bay Junction; the area by the Blow Hole, certain guard rails had to be designed and have now been purchased for installation. There was some second application work in North Side, East End, Bodden Town, George Town. There was a hot mix section which had to be redone in front of the Crewe Road Lion's Centre area.

Other spray and chip works were done in the Frank Sound on to the Cottage, East End area. Shoulder improvements were carried out in West Bay, South Sound, North Church Street, Hirst Road in Newlands, the main road to Bodden Town. Thomas Russell way, as I mentioned the access road to the school and the Community College, the Middle School dyke road was paved and the final portion of that will be completed shortly. Work was done on the access road to the Botanical Garden, and other areas within the park were also worked on. There were some ramps for the handicapped installed in George Town and along the sidewalk on West Bay road. Other traffic improvements were carried out on the West Bay road, as a matter of fact, it was the area where we introduced the third lane. By all accounts, this is working out well.

Certain turn lanes were put in place going to Easter Avenue and by Kirkconnell. In West Bay there were about 30-odd road projects carried out.

The Public Works Department was quite active (as I mentioned earlier) preparing for the Queen's visit with some roadwork and clean up projects. With regard to drainage and deep wells, they continued to monitor and tried to install them wherever it was necessary.

The one thing that a lot of credit must go to Public Works Department for is that lighting system which we now have here in Grand Cayman. Every light that is installed by CUC filters through the Public Works Department. In other words, if a request is made to my Ministry, I have to consult with Public Works Department. The area is checked by the Public Works Department and a particular light is recommended. This is important. The monitoring of the programme is carried out by Public Works Department.

With regard to the plans for the West Bay by-pass, all of this has to be put together by Public Works Department. The suggestions as to where it is constructed had to be drawn by Public Works Department. All the research regarding the land in that area, the design, is all part of that department.

Although Cayman Brac and Little Cayman have their own Public Works Department, most things regarding roadwork is still monitored by the Ministry and Public Works Department. Quite regularly we have to go over and look at what is taking place there. This has been another responsibility of the Public Works Department.

The plans for health clinics in Bodden Town and the other districts have been put together by the Public Works Department. The plans for the upgrading and construction of the new hospital has had the Public Works Department very much involved. Once that is done the monitoring of the project will fall into their hands.

Presently the playfield project in East End that was started some time ago has had the support of the Public Works Department, and continues to be monitored by them. The Grandstand and Sports complex in West Bay is the responsibility of the Public Works Department. I consider this quite outstanding and all to their credit.

They have been involved with the plans for the National Sports Complex, which is constantly being monitored by them. Some upgrading was carried out on the Old Man Bay Community Playfield.

Certain areas of the road along the Queen's Highway had to be patched and resealed—all in the hands of the Public Works Department.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Honourable Minister it is now 4.30, I do not expect you will be finished shortly.

Hon. John B. McLean: No, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: May I ask for the adjournment?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I move to adjourn this Honourable House until 10 o'clock Wednesday morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 o'clock, Wednesday morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The House is accordingly adjourned until Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 29 MARCH 1995.

WEDNESDAY
29 MARCH, 1995
10.11 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Third Elected Member for West Bay to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

ANNOUNCEMENTS BY THE SPEAKER

APOLOGY

The Speaker: Before we begin the proceedings of the House, I understand that the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is in the Hospital, and I am sure that all Honourable Members would like to express their concerns and their prayers for a speedy recovery.

Statement by Members of the Government. The Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

STATEMENT BY MEMBER OF GOVERNMENT

NEW GEORGE TOWN HOSPITAL DEVELOPMENT PROJECT

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Madam Speaker, I am very grateful to have your permission to make a statement to this Honourable House on the subject of the new George Town Hospital Development Project.

Honourable Members will remember that on 10 March, in response to a question from the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, I provided an update on this very important project. In my answer, I stated that eight consultants with international experience in the design and construction of major health care facilities were short-listed and invited to submit proposals by 17 March of this year.

All eight firms submitted proposals by the required date. Each proposal was considered carefully by a committee of five individuals representing the Public Works Department, the Health Services Department, Finance and Development and the Ministry of Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation. These individuals worked long hours and carried out their evaluation exercise totally independently. Their findings were presented in a report and recommendation document, which was reviewed in detail by the Central Tenders Committee to ensure that Government's guidelines and proper procedures were followed.

I am pleased to be able to announce that the firm of Ellerbe Becket, of Washington DC, received the highest technical rating by all five members of the evaluation team and consequently has been selected to provide the design and to supervise the construction of the main components of this project. This decision will be conveyed to them shortly after I have completed my statement to this honourable House. It is expected that their work will begin immediately, thus marking a very important milestone in our carefully planned program to provide the people of the Cayman Islands with first class health care facilities.

Our schedule called for the appointment of the main consultant on March 31, 1995, and we have met that date. Much credit is due to the staff in my Ministry, Mr. Max Jones, and Mr. Murray Blanchard, project manager of the Public Works Department, the Hospital Facilities Review Committee and the members of the new George Town Hospital Development Steering Committee. All of these people have worked with dedication to carry this project through to this important stage.

I would like to offer special thanks to the members of the Central Tenders Committee for their willingness to disrupt their own busy private schedules to meet with the project team, sometimes at very short notice. Their commitment and professionalism is much appreciated.

The new George Town Hospital project is now proceeding on schedule.

In a statement to this honourable House on 10 November, 1994, I said (and I quote), "I am confident that this major development will be welcomed and supported by Caymanians and residents alike. The country needs it, the country deserves it and with God's blessing, the country will have it.” With the appointment of Ellerbe Becket as the main consultants, we have made a major stride towards achieving that goal.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Continuation of debate, on the Throne Speech. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Monday evening, 27 March, I was dealing with the Department of Public Works and its involvement over the last year and one half and its involvement to date, in an effort to show that the poll taken by the Chamber of Commerce was indeed wrong. From the many calls that I have received from that time, I feel confident that I have achieved what I set out to do.

It is no wonder that such polls are produced by the Chamber of Commerce. It is my understanding that the same gentleman who has been writing nasty pieces in The New Caymanian still remains the director of The New Caymanian. I do not expect that his attitude will change over night, but I would honestly say to those who are shareholders in the newspaper, if they honestly believe in the Cayman Islands, if they honestly believe in what is good for us, if they honestly believe in what the people of this country are afforded by the prosperity they enjoy in these Islands, they should do something to rectify what is taking place at The New Caymanian.

Not only that, I also say the same to those who are members of the Chamber of Commerce. Tearing down this Government, as they have tried to do with that poll has done no good for this country. Thank God we still have a sensible majority out there; a majority that is not prepared to listen to stupid remarks like what was printed and like what has been taken to the streets by others.

Madam Speaker, I think a remark was made in the same poll that it was next to criminal for me not allowing the public a chance to see the Cable & Wireless Franchise. I would like to say that I was no part of the Government that actually put that franchise together. The National Team played no part in putting that franchise together. It was a franchise that I found when I took office.

For their information, I have established a very good working relationship with Cable & Wireless. At present, we have been working to try to bring legislation that will protect Cable & Wireless, but at the same time will allow the public to know what is in the franchise. That is something we are doing and until that is in place, it is criminal for them to believe that we should open up a company such as Cable & Wireless just for the whims and fancy of a few.

I would like to deal briefly with another department that falls under my Ministry, the Department of Vehicles and Equipment Services. This department continues to provide a special service to the Government. The department is fully responsible for Government's vehicles and heavy equipment. It is also responsible for replacement of vehicles when this becomes necessary. The department is also relied heavily upon, especially when there are fatal accidents and vehicles have to be fully checked out. It is the job of the department to make sure that such vehicles involved were either in good shape or not road worthy.

The most significant items to be replaced this year include a large aircraft fire fighting and rescue vehicle. This has already arrived and has been commissioned by the Fire Services. The department will also be involved in the purchase of a bus for the Sunrise Adult Training Centre. It will also be involved in the purchase of a bus for the West Bay John Cumber Primary School and in the purchase of a school bus for the East End Primary School. In a short time, they will also be receiving a replacement ambulance for the eastern districts. In quite recent times they took delivery of a van to be used for the new Express Mail Service.

This department has also been involved for some time now, in ongoing negotiation with the two local oil companies. These negotiations were dealing with a purpose-built facility to supply Government's vehicles with fuel and lubrication services.

The present facility that is used by Government at present goes back to the years of the Shell Oil Company in the early 1970s. This is now considered obsolete and indeed a fire hazard. The facility we have been looking at to replace this one, is a facility that will provide access to all the large equipment; it will also be automated and a service for emergency vehicles will be on a 24-hour basis.

This department has been headed by a Caymanian for sometime. The department has been doing a very good job. In quite recent times we unfortunately lost one of our workers, and I would like to [take this opportunity] to pay a special tribute to Mr. Byron Conolly, for his many efforts there and his hours of hard work to make the department the success that it has been.

Within the Public Works Department, I should also mention the loss of another good worker, Mr. Delmar Carter, who, under tragic circumstances, died sometime ago.

Madam Speaker, it is now my understanding that the present manager will be moving on to head the Public Works Department. I hope and trust that we will continue to have as good a working relationship as it has been during the time he was in Department of Equipment of Vehicles and Services. I further understand that with a bit of luck we should continue to Caymanianise the Department of Equipment of Vehicles and Services Department and it is my hope that this department will be able to operate as smoothly as it has been in the past.

I have to again touch on the remarks made by the Chamber of Commerce, and to say that, contrary to what their survey has said, the departments that fall under my Ministry have worked very hard especially since I took the Ministry over in 1992. In most cases, I can boast of full co-operation. We have had the odd case where one or two tried to put obstacles in our way, but this will happen. I can always deal with that. Thank God, we have worked as a team. Not because I am the Minister, but I like to know exactly what is happening in my departments, so I spend a lot of time visiting those departments and indeed visiting the projects which we are involved in. I find that it is good and makes my job much easier.

I would like to turn briefly to achievement in the district of East End—my district.

I am pleased that with the assistance of the National Team Government, I have been able to achieve several needed things within the district. Today I can be justly proud, like so many others in my district, of our Primary School and the facelift of the yards and fences around. As I mentioned earlier, we are scheduled to take delivery of a school bus in the near future. We have recently purchased an adjoining property with a house on it, which will be converted into a pre-school facility. We have just completed a road, which was very much needed, that passes behind the East End Clinic and now allows emergency vehicles to access the area easily.

The Half Moon Bay Road is being worked on at present, which will join up, when completed, with a stretch that had been done last year in the Frank Sound Cottage area. Shoulder work will continue in the district. In Gun Bay we have started a hard court which will be a multi-purpose court in the front and with God's help next year a small hurricane shelter in the back. There are also plans to complete a ramp in Gun Bay.

The street lighting [programme] has been carried out throughout the Island, but especially on the long stretch of road known as the Queen's Highway and in the immediate district it has added to that area. The East End play field is just about completed, and special lights have been ordered and there will be a covered area for seating.

The guardrails have been ordered and will be placed along the dangerous stretch of the High Rock area, at least the first 2,500 feet of road.

Plans are well underway to have piped water to the districts. I mentioned earlier that in a few days we will take delivery of the new ambulance for the East End district.

The Post Office will be upgraded and before leaving the new ambulance I think it is only worthy for me to say that the Elected Member for North Side has also worked very hard (along with the Minister responsible and me) to make sure that this vehicle was replaced as speedily as possible.

The Library will also be upgraded. And, Madam Speaker, I am pleased to say that three tourist sites, which I have asked for many years—namely, the Wreck of the Ten Sails, the Lighthouse, and the Blows Holes, have all been completed. Tourists visiting our district have been taking time out to visit these sites and what I see and hear I have certainly been enjoying. Also in the district, we have completed a farm road.

Madam Speaker, I have dealt with all areas of the Agriculture Department and its many services to the general public. In so doing, I omitted to comment on one important area, which will be coming on-line in a very short time, that is the Spray Programme. Only this morning I had an opportunity to meet with the person whom we have contracted through in the United States and we are hopeful that he will be here on Friday, [6th April]. The following week will we have a training period for those who will be directly involved with it and hopefully, the following week we will be able to assist the farmers who need such a service.

I have also spoken on the Communications Department. I have outlined fully the works, and I have spoken on Lands and Survey. I would like to say that if all of this is what the Chamber of Commerce calls "below average", God help this country.

Finally, I would like to thank the Members who spoke well on certain areas of my Ministry. And to those who may have been somewhat critical, I would just ask that we try to work together to make the area that might have been identified as lacking, better, rather than taking the firm action of continuing to downgrade. I do not think that any civil servant who has a task to do in this country appreciates, when he/she is ridiculed or his/her department is ridiculed.

I trust, Madam Speaker, that all Members of this Legislative Assembly will take cognisance of the fact that this country has come a long way. It is on the right track and it is in the hands of a good Government, but we must always endeavour to make it better and not destroy what has been built over the many years. It has taken many years to build what we now enjoy. But, Madam Speaker, as we look around other Caribbean Islands and we see what radical governments have done in the past . . . the Cayman Islands should pay special attention. Not because we have those who can get up on soapboxes and pound their chests that they are capable of running a country.

Madam Speaker, I thank you.

The Speaker: If no one else wishes to continue the debate, I will call upon on the Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture to close the debate.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I rise to make my contribution to what is the most forward-looking and upbeat Throne Speech presented by any Governor since I have been in this House. I will record my appreciation to His Excellency the Governor.

I would have very much liked to have been able to get up here on behalf of the Government and support what was said in favour of Government and to offer support of anything constructive that the Opposition said. However, in this debate there has been much destructive criticism against the Cayman Islands and against the Government. It is my task, as I have to wind up for the Government, to put some of that nonsense where it belongs.

Madam Speaker, above everything else, all of us in this honourable House and every resident throughout this country needs to stop and say thanks to Almighty God for all His benefits toward us. We are a blessed people; a country where there is no starvation, where God has kept us free from natural disasters; no floods, no famines, and a country where there is a good standard of living for all who will and can put their shoulder to the wheel. Yet, there are too many that take what God has given us for granted. There are too many people—Caymanians and others who only reside here—who benefit from this country who sell the Cayman Islands short.

Surely, Madam Speaker, there must be those in the country who watch television and read the newspaper, and surely they must see that the global picture is disheartening most of the time. Surely, many of us should realise where the country has come from and today, we have done well as a small Island. There is a lot for all of us to be thankful for in these Islands.

Madam Speaker, I have listened to the many speakers who made their contribution to the Throne Speech and we are thankful for those who have made objective observations and suggestions. The Members of the National Team have been very fair in their debate, and I can say that they are very honest and are making a worthwhile contribution to the Cayman Islands.

I would like to say, Madam Speaker, that I appreciate the efforts made by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. We do not always see eye-to-eye on issues. We never did! Even when he was with the same team that I supported. But we can join hands on most of the issues in a constructive manner and take those matters forward for the betterment of the Cayman Brac people, and the Cayman Islands as a whole.

Madam Speaker, before I deal with my Ministry, there are several areas that I will deal with in connection with what the Opposition had to say. There are some general observations I must make in this debate.

There is much talk about development and its impact on this country. It has become quite commonplace to ask, who we are developing for.

While I do not have the responsibility for the Planning Department, most development in this country directly affects my Ministry. If there is a fall off in construction, people become unemployed and there are other negative effects. If there is over development, that also brings negative impact upon us. There is also social fall out in both situations.

As a country we have to find the right balance. One thing is certain, we cannot turn development off and on like a light switch. The investors who want to invest millions of dollars in projects, be it a hotel or some other project, are not going to wait around to be pushed hither and thither by everyone who seems to have a view of what development should be. The investor has his own difficulties to grapple with, and the market forces to hurdle. We should all realise that a country is not like a little shop, it is not every day that the Cayman Islands will find someone with the financial capacity and confidence willing to invest millions of dollars here. When we find that investor, we should not say, come back in two to five years. We can hardly do that because there are many other territories willing and creating the right climate for those same investors. We have a good country, but let us not believe that there is no good competition. Word gets around (and we do not want to create a stigma) that the Cayman Islands does not want investment.

Between 1988 and 1992, construction was down; real estate transactions were rock bottom; people were losing their businesses; unemployment was at its highest peak; and everyone was bawling because of the very bad state of affairs. This country should not forget it. Those of us in this House should not forget that sad state of affairs, when every day the public was out in front of this Legislature with placards for one situation or another.

The National Team Government and its supporters have turned this around in the short span of two years. Now you hear that there is too much development. Mischievous people see development taking place and they know that there is a price to pay. They know that the people feel distressed in traffic. So they ask who are we developing for to stir up trouble.

Madam Speaker, we are developing for the people of the Cayman Islands—present and future. That is borne out by the fact that every Caymanian in one way or another is benefiting from the continued development and progress of their country.

Our children day in and day out, are in school to be educated and not one of us is paying any fees to speak of. Down to the very transportation, for the vast majority, Government provides it. Where has the money come from in the past, and today to pay for it? From development in one form or another—whether it is the financial sector or the construction.

Madam Speaker, Members of this House and the public in general all want a freeway to drive on, and other road networks are being asked for and we must do—and are taking measures to alleviate traffic congestion. But where is the money coming from to build those roads? It comes from the investment made by the foreign investors be it a hotel or a condominium or some other investment in the country. Everybody, except the Opposition, want more playfields, they want to see parks in the country, they want a new hospital. We must do something about rehabilitation and we have to address that issue.

Where is the money coming from to do this? It can only come from foreign investment into this country, because nobody is paying any taxes. We do not want to pay any, and we are not a Government that believes in taxing our people.

They say, Madam Speaker, that the National Team Government is bankrupt of ideas. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town likes to say that we are not intellectual enough to do anything. Well tell me how this work is getting done. If we recall, the two Members in Opposition wailed and still wail against anything the National Team Government attempts to do. If we look at their debate when the National Team Government took over this country, when we just began to get the ball rolling, when we were burning the midnight hours . . . what were they saying? They said—that is the First Elected Member for Bodden Town—that we should not reduce the tax for the land transfers from 10% to 7.5%.

Madam Speaker, the Caymanian Compass that he likes to lord so much these days, printed this. And the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman also said that he strongly disagreed with the reduction of stamp duty on properties. He said further: "There was no evidence to show that this reduction of stamp duty would help stimulate the economy as it was intended to do."

Madam Speaker, they are the intellectuals and they know it all. Thank God we have shown the world that what we were doing in 1993 was going to pay off . . . and today the money that real estate transactions brought into this country is helping to stimulate the economy and I will show it later on.

You cannot say one thing today and another thing tomorrow. People will begin to wonder what kind a [person] you are anyway.

Development must continue! Either we continue or our people will starve and the country will only stagnate; dry up and wither away without foreign investment. Merchants will close their shops and the banks will take their property which they have put up as collateral, be it their houses or the land it sits on, or some other form of collateral which they have given the bank to hold. Is this what people want? Is this what the Opposition wants?

Let me tell this House [about] a few more areas Caymanians are benefiting from this development now taking place. Turning to statistics, that is about the safest and truthful judgment of how the economy is doing and a close examination can tell how Caymanians are benefiting from the development taking place in these Islands.

Planning approvals for 1994 show that there was about $40 million in house construction, and about $8 million and over in apartment construction. I am not talking about the $1 million house, the $2 million house or the $750,000 house or even $.5 million houses. I am talking about from $10,000, to $40,000 where the poor people have added on to their houses, or where they have built one for $40,000.

These are Caymanians' homes and apartments being built in this country. Caymanians who are investing in their country, Caymanians who have the confidence to go out and borrow money to build homes for their families and build apartments as an investment for their futures. Forty eight million dollars, as real as good investment can be.

The measurement of success can be seen in another real indicator—the amount of businesses started by Caymanians. This, I would agree, has two sides to it—a negative and a positive. But for 1994 the amount of new Trade and Business Licences granted was 575 and out of that number 22 had to get Local Companies (Control) Licence, which meant that their majority is controlled by outsiders. So Madam Speaker, that still leaves 553 local businesses.

Madam Speaker, it could be that out of that 553, there are many licences that are granted to Caymanians with foreign spouses. For instances, small garages where bodywork is being done and so on.

While there are some complaints about some facets of these business licences, there is nothing we can do if a Caymanian who has a foreign spouse applies for a licence to do business. One thing I am certain of is that there are too many people starting the same business. Today, if you start a cloth shop, the next person is going to start one alongside you. If you do garage work, somebody is coming alongside you to do it.

I am not saying that that is unhealthy, according to the free enterprise system, competition is good. But I do not think it is a good thing for so many of the same businesses so close to each other in such a small population. So out of 553 businesses, we have to wonder how many will last. Nevertheless, Madam Speaker, for 553 businesses to be licensed in one year is still stark evidence that Caymanians have good enough confidence in their country to take the chance to start a business and it shows a blossoming economy.

Madam Speaker, there is much language being used today by the Opposition, but they need to take cognisance of real statistics. Not something written in some history book about Lord Hailsham or some Japanese kung-fu man. These are the realities of today!

Madam Speaker, there are complaints that some Caymanians are still not getting work on construction sites, especially the larger construction sites. The National Team Government has done well in putting people back to work. When we took over in 1992, there were over 1,100 people unemployed. Today it is less than 100. Less than 100—yet they say that the National Team Government is not doing anything. Well who is doing the work?

Who is it?

The Opposition?

I do not think so, Madam Speaker. I do not see them in the Planning Department. I do not see the two of them (the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman) working in any bank. I do not see the two of them working in the Glass House or in the Tower Building, or any of the Government departments. No, Madam Speaker, it is the politicians who direct policies, and it is the civil servants and the good business people in this country who make this country work, and who have helped us to bring this country out of the deep recession that existed during the years 1989 to 1992 when people outside had no confidence in this country because of taxation, taxation and borrow and spend, and borrow and spend policies of the last Government.

Madam Speaker, while we do not have a lot of people unemployed, it is not for those construction companies to give any Caymanian the run around. Not while they are still asking for work permits. I have said in Executive Council, I have said on the public platform that no matter who he is, if he is only going to work one day and he comes for a job and he is needed, you put him to work. If he cannot work then you get rid of him. If he only stays one day, you get somebody else.

Businesses cannot operate that way because they have to know from one day to the next what they are doing. We know that. But I am saying that every Caymanian must be given the chance to work. They cannot say that the Labour Board does not go out, because they go out to the districts. Perhaps those Opposition Members who are complaining should be out in their districts encouraging those boys who loaf around, who go to work one day sometimes, or perhaps do not go at all, educating them if they are educationalists.

Madam Speaker, there are problems in the construction industry. This is not something that we created. This is something we inherited. It has existed for many years. But the problems existing today are no different, perhaps they are less than what was in existence back between the years 1989 and 1992. If you remember, Madam Speaker, there was only one construction company that could get any construction in this country. One! And it was at a time when the economy was not doing well. So the only one who got Government's work was one construction company and everybody know who that was.

We are taking measures and we have said that every construction company that can do work and do it properly, if they bid [on Government's works] it must go to the best bidder. One of the problems, as I understand it, Madam Speaker, is where these large developments get a large contractor—we only have I guess four of them, that is Hadsphaltic, McAlpine, Arch and Godfrey, and Hurlstone Construction. These large developers get a large contract, and those contractors put out the work to sub-contractors for plumbing, painting, sheetrock laying, and so on, who beat the small Caymanians sub-contractors by bidding for instance, labour at $4.00 or $5.00 per hour. While the Caymanians sub-contractor put in his bid at $8.00 or $9.00 per hour. This $4.00 or $5.00 per hour if it is that much, is for someone [working] on work permit who is brought into the work force at a lower wage than a Caymanian will work for. That is the sort of thing that is causing problems in this country.

Let me say quite frankly and openly that I am taking a very hard line on this issue, which only recently has been brought to my knowledge. I am going to fight very hard to see that no permits are granted in this case—nobody should come into this country to develop any project on the basis of "we did not figure for Caymanian prices". What sort of nonsense is that, Madam Speaker? They are coming to the Cayman Islands to develop. When you sit down and plan, you plan accordingly.

If Caymanians are going to get something out of this development, which this Government is bringing in, then we must not allow this kind of inequity to exist. I say: "No permits," and that will stop it. That will be my recommendation.

Madam Speaker, as I understand, no investor doing construction should expect that any building is going to be built with purely outside labour. I know that in the last two administrations, very large buildings were built with nothing but outside labour, and outside contractors did all the work.

I very well remember when the Radisson Hotel was being constructed. This was one of the things that caused quite a bit of problems, because at that time during the last administration, they were not even going to use Cable & Wireless as I understand it. They had all of that arranged. That cannot happen, Madam Speaker, and while I am on Executive Council and responsible for labour, even though I do not grant work permits, I am going to pursue it. If our economy is going to benefit from any project, especially the very large ones should not expect to bring in all the people to do drywall, all plumbing, or painting for instance. Other administrations allowed these kinds of atrocities to exist, it should not mean that this administration must do the same thing.

So as a Government, we will do everything to encourage good business to come in. From where I stand however, Madam Speaker, in the past I did not get involved with this aspect of running the country simply because I did not interfere with the responsibilities of other Ministries. But from here on in, because I have the responsibility for labour, they are going to have to contend with me. Every able and willing Caymanian must be hired or no work permits will be granted for any worker.

Madam Speaker, I do not believe that the very large constructions companies should be bidding on projects that small construction companies should bid on. The larger ones, except for two I spoke about earlier, are solely Caymanian owned to a large extent. I do not believe that any large construction company should come in here and be able to bid on the smaller projects that should be left to Caymanians who are in the business. We have our own people who are well trained, who went away and received degrees in construction and who are able to do good construction work.

One only has to look at some of the work being done at the George Town Sports Complex. We have good people to do work in this country and small projects should be left to them.

So, Madam Speaker, as I close on this aspect of my debate, good development must continue. As long as we balance the development with our needs, the country can benefit. To simply say another hotel is not needed is not good enough. We must all remember that the banks can go overnight—it is just paper money and the vast majority do not buy apartments, they rent. When a developer puts money into the ground they mean business, they are here to stay.

Before I finish on this subject, sure development carries impact, as I said earlier, because we say there are too many people in the people in the country—too many work permits. We have to get into our heads, one and all, that everyone cannot expect to have a Jamaican helper and then say: "I wonder what we are doing with all these Jamaicans on the street."

If everyone wants a Jamaican helper, how can you say that we do not need them? That is the problem. Everybody wants somebody but then they do not want to see other people around. This country cannot develop on that basis. It is nonsense, and the sooner responsible people speak up about it, the less we will hear nonsense talk by people who do not really understand. They only see people here, well you wanted better homes—they wanted a better standard of living in this country. How else are we going to get it, when we are only in terms of development, just about 20 or 25 years old? I will deal with some of that later on about training. For many years we are going to have to see people, some perhaps that we do not like, but they are sometimes necessary.

Now Madam Speaker, big and bold statements have been made in this House and on the outside by the Opposition, as the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town like to call themselves. A very famous statesman said: "The business of the Opposition is to oppose, it was their first business, their second and their third, but nobody had ever said it is not the business of the Government in power to resist the Opposition." It is not the legitimate purpose of the Opposition to do things that tend to injure the country. Any group in Opposition must present a clear alternative in terms of policy and aim so that there are real challenges for the future.

However, when men or women set themselves up as intellectuals claiming to know about management, and they proceed to make totally false and irresponsible statements about the country and about Members of its Government, they are not engaging in what I call, legitimate opposition. They are engaging in nothing but destructive opposition.

Who is to say when these statements are made, that they are not regarded abroad as solemn statements of fact? Who is to say? When those same people get up in this House and give the House an exposition on merits of how we can run our financial industry, it can only be talk out of both sides of their mouth. It does not seem to me, Madam Speaker, that they care at all about whether the financial industry or any other sector improves or fails. Yet, they come into this honourable House and don these attitudes of injured innocence and declare that they are not allowed to criticise.

I do not hear any Minister or Backbencher of the National Team using any personal or derogatory language against the Opposition, be they in this House or those on the outside. I have listened since we opened the debate and I have not heard one Minister or any Member use derogatory language against the Opposition.

Madam Speaker, in my two years on the Executive Council, I have had to listen to all kinds of accusations about me and others in Government. It does not stop with Ministers or National Team Members. It does not stop there. But I live with the comfort that my life is an open book and I have never proclaimed to be anything else than what I am today and what the people know me to be. When you read what is said by writers who do a regular column in The New Caymanian about our Ministry, our policy, statements which carry a personal slant, or which some people could misunderstand and believe as truthful, should we keep our mouths shut and let all of these mischief-makers pass by as truthful? Should we let them stomp all over us as they have been doing?

Columnists are using these articles in the newspapers as a medium for their own political campaign. When the Opposition, be they columnist or Legislative Assembly Member, uses unnecessary language and writes and talks total lies against this country, as Ministers we are constitutionally bound to defend the country against these wild accusations. Madam Speaker, wild accusations about totalitarianism and about Government putting guns in the hands of young offenders. What sort of nonsense is this?

These are people, like the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, who likes to say that he is an intellectual. We shall continue as Ministers to complain in this House, where the total country can hear it and denounced it and use it as a principal agent against those who attempt to destroy the country in this manner.

I see Madam Speaker, where the "Columnists Viewpoint," by one Bridget McPartland, is also questioning the knowledge of the Speaker. Oh yes, they know it all. We do not run an American system of Government, Madam Speaker. We run according to the principles set down in the Westminster system. Let me say now, for one and all to hear, Madam Speaker, there have always been moves by those who think they can manipulate us to try and get the Speaker and me to be at odds.

There are those who write letters about us, and those who talk about what they do not understand. I have read the very uncomplimentary remarks made about me in the press. But who are they made by, Madam Speaker? People who went to jail for stealing cows. I think Bridget McPartland and her viewpoint should learn something about Parliamentary precedence and procedures before questioning the Speaker's knowledge, her years as a Clerk and Speaker, and my ten years as a Member of this honourable House. She should learn something about Parliamentary procedures, because no one in this honourable House can fool me when it comes to the Rules of this Parliament and others.

They do not only try to belittle me or the country, but they have resorted to talking about the Speaker's actions, and on one hand they complain where there is a tiff or misunderstanding in this House. But when it suits them, when they figure they can get mileage out of it they write about the Speaker. That should say something, Madam Speaker, for those Opposition members who claim to be genuine. I think it is very characteristic of the opposition. Yet, they come here with these holier-than-thou attitudes. When those same intellectuals engage in written statements, or spoken as the case may be, such as turning the Cayman Islands into a Banana Republic—with all that the terminology conveys.

When Elected Representatives, in their want for power, take tapes of shows such as the one on BBC, designed by outsiders who do not live here, designed by outsider to injure the Cayman Islands as a properly run financial institution . . . when these intellectuals publish these things and they get published and bruited about abroad, who do they suppose they are hurting? Who does the First Elected Member for Bodden Town believe he is hurting with his so-called cloak of intellectualism? He is hurting the country!

He is not hurting McKeeva Bush. They can stand in Bodden Town, or write things in the newspaper and say all evil against me, but I like to think that sometimes I am where Pastor Bailey referred to at a funeral ceremony the other afternoon—on a rock. Safe on that rock that is higher than I, and higher than the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and his colleagues.

Madam Speaker, the Cayman Islands is bigger than Roy Bodden, Ezzard Miller, Gilbert McLean, Bridget McPartland, or all of us. It is bigger than all of us. Let me say, the outsider who resides here and benefits from the Cayman Islands would do well to avoid the error in generalising concepts that are derived from their own experiences, whether those experiences are from the United Kingdom, the United States or Australia.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, would you take a suspension at this time? But before I do so, would you perhaps in future refer to Members of this House by the districts that they represent and not by their names?

Thank you. Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.35 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.04 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture continuing the debate.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, our country in spite of the many growing pains is doing well.

The Opposition is carrying on as if there exists a general state of chaos. If you listen to the Opposition, the country is broken down and all the other matters they talk about, when that perception is a false one. If things are as bad as they make it out to be, why then, Madam Speaker, is there so much activity in our financial industry? That indicates that our people are doing well. If we are a Banana Republic, why then are so many people outside, the investors, choosing the Cayman Islands?

Madam Speaker, in company registration, and I want to show the difference between 1992 when we took over and as of now. In 1992, there were no regulated mutual funds. But in 1995, there are 992 mutual funds. Banks and Trust Companies now stand at 559, an increase of 27. Companies registration was at the time 25,000, and as of December last year there were 31,612. In registered ships in 1992, there were 102, and in 1995 there is 730. Does this sound as if we are living in a totalitarian country? as was talked about by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Madam Speaker, the National Team is not afraid of criticism. I am not worried about criticism. If something is wrong, criticise it; offer constructive criticism, that is democracy. What I am really, really worried about is the kind of philosophy being pushed today. The same kind of political philosophy which made such wild allegations about Government giving guns to young offenders. This Madam Speaker, is a philosophy that I will not adhere to and I am worried when those intellectuals talk about it.

When we see this kind of hate, this kind of opposition begin to creep into our country, it is the type that existed in some other Island back in the late 1970s when our neighbours were torn apart by that kind of political confrontational activity. We do not need it, and we do not want it. I ring a warning bell to those who will stop at nothing to get power. Cayman knows better, and I hope they understand what they will get from an Executive Council with that kind of mentality as displayed on the Courthouse steps by that unholy alliance.

Madam Speaker, the Opposition should give the firm commitment to the country that rather than preaching gloom and doom, and creating panic in spreading rumours and looking for confrontations, that they would give whatever assistance they can to the country to overcome national problems. It is the wrong policy of the opposition to keep confrontation in their political strategy and tactics. Our country needs things that will galvanise and unite all Caymanians in the common interest of all Cayman.

Madam Speaker, you do not see the state of disorder that existed, existing today. They talk about democracy. Have we forgotten that a majority of Elected Member of the Legislature had no power in Finance Committee. Have they forgotten that? When they talk about power, and talk about democracy, they should go back to the Magna Carter, the bedrock of democracy. Your elected representatives have full say in expenditure of the country's funds. They are intellectuals. They should know this, or have they forgotten it? Have they forgotten that there was a march practically every day of the week when the last Government was in [power]? Have they forgotten that we had a Governor, Madam Speaker, who used to come in here and connive with the Government as President of this Legislature to knock down Members of the Opposition?

Well, Madam Speaker, I have not forgotten, because I bore the brunt of it. Every time his wife would not let him out he came here the next morning and took it out on me the next morning. [Members' laughter]

I have not forgotten. The National Team has not done anything against democracy. We have done everything to enhance it. What we are not going to allow is for the minority to run this country. They cannot. They have their say.

When we went to England, Madam Speaker, there were seven of us. A majority of the elected representatives and we had something to talk about, because the country's finances—a surplus of $30 million left by previous Government—had been depleted. We were facing $18 million deficit in one year, and $14 million in another year. For two years, we were facing $10 million tax packages in succession, and we had a national carrier that was dropping to pieces. We had something to go to England for and we did not talk about independence.

Madam Speaker, I call on the Opposition and the directors and owners of The New Caymanian to take better management policy to curtail this kind of attack, which is only hurting the Cayman Islands. For the good of all, stop it! It is not helping us and I do not want to give Gordon Barlow the credit to even discuss it in this Legislature. But I think it is time that this rock be put behind, because it is not helping the country.

As I have said earlier, Madam Speaker, they should not try to legitimise their view, their situation as existed where they come from. So let them go back to where they came from if they do not like what is happening here. There is no anti-democratic movement in the Government. There is no corruption on this Executive Council. And that is another thing I want to talk about before I end on this, Madam Speaker.

It is those rumours about the Members of Executive Council having this, and having that and the next thing. Not one of us has any more today than what we had when we took office. I got less money and more gray hairs!

Madam Speaker, rumours are put together to hurt people and our children. That is what is happening to the National Team. Let us look at something, Madam Speaker. It was not this elected Government that gave Joseph Imperato status. Why say that he is our buddy? He is no buddy of ours. I sit on the Board of Caribbean Utilities Company, and he is the Chairman. I have to work with him because I am there as the Government representative. If they believe that McKeever goes to the boardroom and is friends with them, they are making a big mistake. I am there to represent the Government.

The people treat me decent, they treat me like a human being, but they know where I stand. When I start questioning, they know even better where I stand. We go through those items one at a time in that boardroom. Yet they are out there preaching and gallivanting all over the country spreading rumours.

Not one of us has a new house, Madam Speaker. They are getting us mixed up with the last Government. Not one of us. We did not give Peter Savill permanent residence that he is here taking up all of the local business. It was the last Government that gave it to him. Not us. The thing is, the National Team has been ladies and gentlemen. We have not been running around the country bamboozling anybody. Why blame these things on the National Team? Blame it on those who did it. Madam Speaker, not one of us...why spread those rumours to hurt our children? I have one home and one home only. I do not own anything anywhere else. I had that long before I got into Executive Council. Again, I say, I am where the preacher talked about—on that rock that is higher than us. I am really tired of it, because we should not have to come in here and defend ourselves. Then the newspapers pick it up and say how bad we are behaving. How bad are we behaving?

Madam Speaker, have you ever had to close this House down for bad behaviour? There has been the cut and thrust of debate, there have been Members saying things about the next Member, and that Member responding to defend himself. I see this call from the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, about attacking citizens. Which citizens are we attacking, Madam Speaker? But those who are doing damage to this country, those who claim they are intellectuals. We are not attacking the general population, as he would make you believe and the headlines proclaimed. The only one that I know about being attacked was when the First Elected Member for Bodden Town attacked the Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation, figuring that he could bamboozle him in the hall a few days ago—and actually hit him. Is that what they are talking about? He should be ashamed of himself. Talking about he is an intellectual.

I am tired, Madam Speaker, of the holier than thou attitude. He can call me a fool. I have enough sense that if I were going to put one white spot on one side in the morning, I would not come back to this Assembly with it on the other side the next day. I have enough sense, Madam Speaker, that I would not ask, as was asked of me as the Minister responsible for Health by from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, to give contraceptives to pregnant women!

Thank God, Madam Speaker, I have good common sense.

Madam Speaker, having said it leads me right into this matter and accusations about the Hospital and what damages I did to it.

Madam Speaker, both Members of the Opposition sang the same tune about the hospital. Both of them proclaimed that the National Team was so negligent in stopping the hospital from being built in the swamp. Both of them proclaimed that we cannot and should not build on the same site and renovate the old hospital as it stands. I have been criticised as the previous Member for Health, that I did not know what I was doing.

Madam Speaker, only a few years ago they were prompting the same policy. The same policy was being promoted by those two Elected Members. This is what the Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman had to say, and I quote: "I personally believe that MRCU should be ideally moved from there. Take that to the area of land that the Government owns in the swamp on the dyke road. Ideally, that is the business it is in. Mosquito, Research and Control. Knock it down and use that large area there that the people of this country has known forever as the Hospital and build a new hospital there in phases. I cannot support the idea of entering head long into three major expenditures at one time in that particular area." [Official Hansard Report 29 November 1991]

Madam Speaker, not only that. That shows enough of his support for Government. I was hoping he would be here in the Chamber, but I guess he knew what I was going to do. I know he cannot counter it, so he is not here. However, his lieutenant is here, and I know he will hear. Madam Speaker, what you see me holding here is a set of plans brought to eight Backbenchers during the past administration by the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and his colleague (his partner as I understand it now), Mr. Donahue.

What is this saying? It is saying exactly the same thing, except that this plan was totally pre-fabricated buildings and all of it would have had to be imported here.

I am not about to read all of the report, I am just searching amongst this maze of documents given to us to show us what could be done at the present site. Here is the plan, the whole plan, Madam Speaker, the same space to be used as the Government is using today. The same space, the same one that he [the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman] said could be used.

Today he is saying that the past Member, Mr. Ez-zard Miller had the most sense in the world because he did not know what he was saying at the time. Now he understands what Mr. Miller wanted. Who do the two Members believe they are fooling? It is so evident. This plan was to put the hospital exactly where the Back-benchers, including the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, said it should go. Exactly where it is going today—knock down the MRCU building, use the other empty lot and renovate the present building at a cost of $21 million over a period of years compared to the hospital that we had to stop, where Mr. Miller had on paper a sum of $16 million on one site and $11 million for the present hospital expansion for a total of $27 million, not including infrastructure.

The whole world knows that the hospital in the swamp could not be built for $16 million. What had been planned was, if they had gotten back into Government in 1992—to give an extension to the $16 million contract for whatever the difference was going to be. I know this, that when I took over the Ministry, we had people come in from Atlanta, Georgia, to look into the matter. They wanted to build and they said that the hospital there would take $30 million. But they had the fund.

He brought in his investor who met with the Executive Council and told us, "Look gentlemen, only a fool would build in that swamp. And I am sorry, but I cannot go ahead with that." So he left and the people out of Atlanta, Georgia left. But the cost was going to be in the region of $30 million just do to what was set up.

Why make the country believe that they were honest with them? Why make the country believe that it could be built for $16 million? But that was not all to it, Madam Speaker. The nightmare was in the logistics of the two sites. That was the nightmare, Madam Speaker.

On one site in the swamp, you did not have any X-ray machine, nothing. Everything you had to come back downtown for. So you had to run two sites. If we had gone ahead we would have had to spend more in the region today of $30 million, because they did not figure out what it was going to cost for the extra staff, they did not have the extra equipment. So what are they talking about? What are the two Elected Members in this House talking about?

When they brought this Caribbean Hospital Consultant, Cayman Islands' Project Co-ordinator, Mr. Bryan P.

Donahue, a temporary resident of East End, a developer, to tell us what we are now doing, except it is not going to be pre-fabricated. At least they had one thing right. They had it right that it could be built where we are now going to build it. That is the one thing that we all had as commonality.

Madam Speaker, why have they changed their minds today? You mean to say, that one week you can hold firm unshakeable belief on an issue, then the next week change it? Did they not oppose Mr. Miller? Did they use those well-rounded speeches with words out of academia just to oppose him for the sake of opposition to win the Election in 1992? Or did they know what they were talking about?

Do you mean to tell me that they can now after all the things they have said, put aside their firmly held conviction, belief and most of all their principles, which they held for four years just to try and win the next Election? What would that be? Except proof positive that they are harum-scarum in their policy never believed in their principles in the years 1989 to 1992 and cannot be trusted. What happens after they have now adjusted their principles to try and win the next Election and lose it? Would they work on still another set of principles? They are like the chaff the wind bloweth away. It seems to me there comes a point where their eagerness to change has become an intent to pander; an intent not to lead, but to simply win.

Madam Speaker, during my political life, when I thought something was wrong I stood against it. When I thought something was right, I stood for it. We told the public, when we were Opposition that the deal with the Guinness Peat Aviation was bad, and that selling the 727s would be bad. The Government then, including Mr. Miller and his supporters said that the Backbenchers did not know what they were talking about. They said then too, that I was a fool. They have said that. They said that I was ignorant. Mr. Linford Pierson said that the whole thing would make a profit, it was a "sweetheart deal" according to them.

They said then too, that I had no education. They said those things back then, but that does not deter me. I have never changed my position. What happens in the end? We [the Government] were sued by Guinness Peat Aviation, we lost millions of dollars in the deal, they passed the law to borrow $20 million and no bank would lend it to them. They said that the country should not listen to us. They have said then too, that I should not be leading and that is what they are saying today—that I should not be in Executive Council.

But I am the saint, I can stand here and say without fear of favour, Madam Speaker, that I was one of the main soldiers up front in the front line of battle in this House where others were afraid. I was in the lead. I can say today, I told them so.

No man, Madam Speaker, can be honest, forthright, or trusted if on any matter of great substance he changes his opinion from one week to the next. That is the hallmark of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Brac; blowing with every changing wind and expect the Government to follow them.

[Interjection]

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Me? I have been constant in my opposition to the hospital where a part of it would be in the South Sound swamp and part in the centre of town where it now exists. I have been constant in my belief that it is better to spend $4 million on our young people for prevention than to continue to spend $36 million on prison and police. I have been constant in my attempt to better the living standards of our people.

It seems to me, Madam Speaker, that in politics, as in love, there is a great deal to be said for the quality of sticking by your principles in good times and bad times for better or for worst, in sickness or in health. Even when you are down at the polls, sad to say, the Opposition is for one policy today and by tonight they change their principle and are against it.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town said that it is dangerous to lock oneself into a rigid belief. That is true to an extent. But if your belief is correct, you should not change it. It is equally true that it exhibits serious instability in oneself to be constantly changing one's principles and policies and, in terms of a country, we cannot operate on the basis of changing our minds from one week to the next.

Madam Speaker, having said that leads me right into this charge about victimisation and the talk by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town about strange bedfellows. I ask them, Who is being victimised? I challenge them to repeat it, if they have any respect for the truth. Who is it that the National Team is victimising? I challenge them because I am really tired of old maid's rumours. Can they get up in this House and say anything about it? Who?

You listened to the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who said that he has a list of civil servants. If he has the list, let him present it to the House, because the National Team has no list and we did not fire, as we had no constitutional ability to fire anyone. We cannot! It is time for the two Opposition Members, if they want to try and get votes out of that issue, to put the blame where the blame should be.

The Governor, Madam Speaker, is constitutionally responsible by Her Majesty the Queen's power for civil servants. He has said that he did what he had to do with the consent of the persons in question. Tell me something, Madam Speaker, why not blame His Excellency the Governor? Let me say that I had no fun and I did not partake in any rejoicing to see any Caymanian go. But you go and work for a person you must do as that person says—That is the bottom line.

The country must remember that the Governor is responsible. The country must remember that in 1992 the two Members, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Mr. Ezzard Miller were pushing the Draft Constitution to control civil servants and hire magistrates. The civil servants said that they did not want politicians having that responsibility. And so, we did not do anything about it.

Let me say quite frankly that I am one person who likes to see Caymanians stay on a job and I make that known in the appropriate places. It is a shame and a disgrace when elected officials go running around the civil service from department to department, telling the Heads of Departments, the civil servants, that they will be next. That is the sort of Opposition the National Team is up against and it is the sort of dirty action, which only serves to create friction and cause doubts to be created in the civil service.

So, when the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman says that the civil service is unstable, it must be because of the action of the Opposition.

Madam Speaker, some Members would know about instability in the service because of the damaging private and personal letters that were sent out from the National Hero's Office, when he was responsible for Tourism, Aviation and Trade. Who was the civil servant in charge then? And who had access to those letters? The Opposition owes it to the country, and they owe it to the civil service, to be more responsible.

Why go running, as was done by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, to the Hospital Administrator to say, "You are next but we are behind you." Why do that, Madam Speaker? I say to him [the First Elected Member for Bodden Town] produce any evidence you have in this House today. Bring it to this Assembly...

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, on a Point of Order.

The Speaker: May I hear the Point of Order?

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, Ma'am. The Honourable Minister is misleading the House by imputing false motives to myself. I challenge him to produce the proof that I went to the Hospital Administrator, or any other civil servant, with such a message.

The Speaker: I have already said that if any Member is imputing or accusing another Member of anything that is wrong, he must present sufficient proof thereof.

Honourable Minister, can you do that?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I was told what I have just said, and I make no bones about it. If he did not do it, let him say he did not. But I was told he did.

The Speaker: May I ask then, Honourable Minister who told you that?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: The Officer and it caused, Madam Speaker, quite a bit of stir in the civil service when these things happen. It is time for it to stop.

The Speaker: I am not saying that, but the point is that a Point of Order has been made. I think that you should produce some statement from this Officer that he was witness to that.

If you can do that please do so, and in the meantime would you continue the debate, because the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, does have a Point of Order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I hope he is denying it. Is he? I take your point. Is he denying it?

The Speaker: You would have to ask him that.

Honourable First Elected Member for Bodden Town?

Mr. Roy Bodden: With your permission, Madam Speaker, I un-state my challenge.

The Speaker: Please continue, Honourable Minister.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker. I do not mean to bore you with these things, but we are being accused of victimising people.

Now the other issue of victimisation that has been raised and bandied about is the one about we are victimising Mr. Ezzard Miller, we victimised his clinic. That is not true. Just let me say, that while I was the Member for Health, I can say here what I did for that clinic on Eastern Avenue; 1) the licensing of the Birthing Unit; 2) the licensing of the Surgical Centre; 3) the licensing of Prodoctan; 4) licensing of appropriate medical, nursing and other health workers as deemed necessary; 5) licensing of two surgeons with special interest in laparoscopic surgery to facilitate laparoscopic surgery at his clinic. Madam Speaker, there was no victimising of him.

Let me further state to this House that, Mr. Miller set himself up as the curer of AIDS and from these articles it bears it out where it says: "A Clearwater Company has sent at least five Floridians to the Caribbean for the treatment at no charge, its spokesman say, but is now asking $15,000 per patient." That is a lot of money. It goes on to say: "International Laboratories Limited, a company which is headquartered in the Cayman Islands provides the intravenous treatment to patients recruited in Florida. The General Manager identified in the company documents as Ezzard Miller, a former Minister for Health, Cayman Islands. After International Laboratories treated the Floridian on Grand Cayman in November and December, the country's Health Practitioners Board asked that the practice be discontinued. The Board Chief, Dr. Kiran Kumar says 'treatments that have not been approved by the FDC are not welcome in the Caymans.'"

Madam Speaker, it also shows that Mr. Ezzard Miller was purporting to be (for the purposes of his services and International Laboratories Limited, in medical terminology) a Registered Nurse and a Lab Technician. The Caymanians Compass carried a story about that also. It said: "It moved its operations to Provo in the Turks and Caicos Islands following a change to the regulations to the Health Practitioners Law."

Now as I have said, he set himself up as some kind of a cure for the AIDS virus as a Registered Nurse. He was importing AIDS patients into this country, while I was the Member for Health. And when I found out—because things can happen and you do not know about it immediately—I changed the regulations to the Health Practitioners Law because Mr. Miller was using a loophole he knew about in the Regulations. That is how he could have done it. That is how he took the chance. This was the height of irresponsibility to import AIDS patients here and put our country at risk.

Furthermore, he is no nurse. He is no Lab Technician. He is supposed to be some kind of pharmacist. It is pure dishonesty for Mr. Miller to portray himself as a Nurse or a Lab Technician when he is not. It is worse when he was charging Americans $15,000 each giving them a treatment, which he knew full well was no cure and one which the specialist who was supporting his exercise wrote to us and denied.

If that is what the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, and the First Elected Member for Bodden Town talk about victimisation, then I am glad I did it under my constitutional responsibility. If that is what they mean by Banana Republic, then I am glad we stopped it. But this is the man whom the two Opposition Members now form an alliance with. I say it is one that will wreck this country.

Madam Speaker, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town said the other day in reading from the newspaper about a meeting. He said that Mr. Miller was a guest of his on the platform. A guest? When the newspapers say that "new political alliance is formed" and you see the three of them there comparing notes after their meeting . . . he was not a guest. It is an alliance. Tell the country the truth!

He brags about this investigation. Let me say that I have kept my mouth shut, because it was no investigation, but I am here to tell the country that I do not know if that was the right thing, because the gentleman they got to do it was a good friend of the previous Governor. When he did not get to be Chief Justice, he said that he would do whatever he could to put us under. When the Governor got him, he was not received with my pleasure. Tell the world that.

I do not think that it could be much of an investigation when the principal witness, the late Dr. Martin-Smith, disappeared from the face of the earth—all of a sudden—with cheques. He came to my Ministry to show me one for $75,000 paid to Mr. Miller by Hurlstone Construction Company. Mr. Martin-Smith was the chief Government witness and he is not here...

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, on a Point of Order.

The Speaker: May I hear the Point of Order?

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I think it is forbidden in Parliament to impugn the integrity of a judge of the Court, unless—not even then, to the best of my knowledge—a substantive motion cannot even be brought in such an instance. I think the Minister has just done that.

The Speaker: I am not sure I understand, your Point of Order, Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Could you repeat that please?

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I am speaking about the Appeals Court Judge. I think he is talking about Sir Peter Allen, who is a judge, and who was engaged by the Government to carry out a Commission of Enquiry. I do believe his integrity, Madam Speaker, has been seriously impugned.

The Speaker: That was a point I was going to bring up, but the other point too, is the fact that the Honourable Minister has said that the late Dr. Martin-Smith had disappeared from the face of the earth. Did they not find his body? Was he not buried?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, are you asking me whether he was buried?

The Speaker: You have just made the statement that somebody has disappeared off the face of the earth. These are things that you have to...

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Well, Madam Speaker, I should say that he died...

The Speaker: If you want to correct that... but if you were imputing anything against any judge brought in either for case in the Court or for a Commission of Enquiry that is against the rules. So I would ask you, please be very careful in the future.

But at this time I will suspend proceedings until 2.30 pm.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.56 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.38 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture continuing.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, suffice it to say that the investigation for the Review regarding the circumstances of the contract [of the Dr. Hortor Memorial Hospital] was not something the National Team pinned any hopes upon. As I have said, the chief Government witness, Dr. Martin-Smith, passed away and he had all the facts including copies of cheques which he held and would not release. As we all remember, he was suing the Government at the time because of his dismissal. So he was trying to battle with the Government.

Madam Speaker, I do not know how anyone can say that they were exonerated if there were no witness against them.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town, talked about Members of the National Team who were on the opposing side at some time or another. You can say that Members of the National Team have had differences in the past, and probably will differ again. But at the present time, and since 1989, we have been together; we get along well and by so doing the Islands have benefited from the harmony that currently exists among the National Team [Members]. This is in sharp contrast to what existed in the years 1989 to 1992, when we know the Members of the Government then were fighting each other. And this is in sharp contrast with the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, who had been a part of the National Team but has now defected.

He had been selected to fill the fifth seat in Executive Council. Bodden Towners expected he would have taken a leadership role. But he disregarded his responsibilities, let down his constituents who had high hopes that he would have stepped forward and taken the seat which he refused to take in 1988.

It is his business what he wants to do but he should not stoop to reading newspapers about Members of the National Team being on opposite sides. Madam Speaker, he read an article that he said was attributed to my colleagues years ago (I also think he used that to get back at me). Let me read what he had to say to Mr. Ezzard Miller.

On 27 February, 1992, I read: "There is no one in their right mind who can say that exporting our people to Minnesota and elsewhere is going to be a lasting solution to the problem. That is but a stopgap venture. Do you know what I would like to find out, it is if there are any referral commissions in this whole export business?"

That was his question to Mr. Ezzard Miller. The man whom he has said was exonerated. Why did he question him in such a dishonest manner, or impute dishonesty?

I recall Mr. Miller, at a public meeting saying that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town is nothing but a ganja smoking, educated lazy fool. So, Madam Speaker, all kinds of things are said in the cut and thrust of debate, all kinds of things are said in public meetings and he should not stoop to bringing into this House what happened 10 or 11 years ago between Members. Since he chose to work with the same Members over a period of years, it does not say anything for his judgment. Does it?

All kinds of things are raised in debates and if he has some problem with his constituents whom I know are complaining, because he would not take the Executive Council seat after being offered a seat twice, then he should get up and tell them: 'Look, I do not want the Executive Council seat because I...

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, on a Point of Order.

The Speaker: May I hear the Point of Order, First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, Madam Speaker, the Honourable Minister is deliberately misleading the House and imputing false and dishonest motives to myself. The Honourable Minister, as well as the public, knows that there were two times in which I submitted my name for nomination to Executive Council. The Hansards of this House will show that I was unsuccessful because I was defeated in both instances. There was no time, and I challenge anyone to produce evidence, where I declared in this forum, or any other forum, that I did not wish an Executive Council seat from 1992.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture the Member has raised a Point of Order. Can you substantiate what you have said?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, every Member in this House of the National Team...

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I am asking you if you can substantiate. He has said what the Hansards have.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, if it takes now a written statement by the Members of the Team, I will get that done.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker—

The Speaker: I cannot have two Members standing at the same time.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town has said that the Hansards will recall that on two occasions he was nominated for Executive Council and he was unsuccessful. You, Honourable Minister, stated that he would not accept. Is that what you stated?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I said that he refused when he knew he could get the seat. When he accepted was after he had gone out and knocked us on the heads and was fighting with us. How were we going to elect him at that late stage, when it was already decided to elect someone else? It was a gimmick on his part. But if it takes a statement from Members to say that they had told him they would elect him, I will get that statement.

The Speaker: I can only go by what the Member has said, that in the Hansard... the House does not have anything with what goes on in a teams' private meeting. So if you are referring to things, please refer to what has happened in the House and what perhaps is on record. If it is not on record then, please, I am afraid that you will have to not say so. Thank you.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I will abide by that, but I will bring proof because he is saying one thing now when he knows full well that he is not telling the truth about the whole matter.

But it is easy for a Member to say that I have two jobs. I have a job. And if I go out and take an Executive Council position that is a full-time job, therefore, I am not going to take that Executive Council position.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. Roy Bodden: Madam Speaker, on another Point of Order.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, what is the Point of Order, because I...

The Speaker: I have to ask, please sit. I am the person to ask for the Member to give a Point of Order, not any other Member.

The First Elected Member for Bodden Town may I hear your Point of Order?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. The Member is imputing that I, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, told him or someone else that I did not wish an Executive Council seat because I have two jobs. Again, I am challenging the Honourable Minister to bring his witnesses forward and bring the documentation because I made no such statement. Indeed, I have no such arrangement and my constituents know that.

The Speaker: I think that the stage has been reached where we will pass this one over.

Honourable Minister will you proceed to something else, because this is getting beyond comprehension.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you, very much.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I thank you very much and I will pass. I will bow to your ruling because it is true that when you throw a ball in a group, the one who grabs the ball is the tallest one.

Madam Speaker, it is true about libel suits, but you are a big man when you can get together for the good of the country and put differences aside. That is what we did in 1989, we saved the Cayman Islands by so doing, and we are still together because we are doing the right thing. I do not dwell in the past, I do not hold grudges because that only destroys your and it is not good for the country. That is not my remit for this Legislature.

They would like to see us continually at each other's throats, but that is not what the country wants. That is not what my constituents and the country told me in 1989, when I said that I would be joining with different group of people because of what was going on in Government. My people told me that they will stand behind me in the attempts that I was making and they have proven it when I go well over 80% of the vote in 1992. That was a good alliance, not like the one on the Courthouse steps the other day.

Madam Speaker, if he has a grudge against anybody, that is his business if he wants to go to his grave holding grudges. I am not going to do so. I am a bigger man than that. It is good enough for me to say that those people who live in glass houses should not throw stones.

When I took over the Health Ministry in 1992, equipment was run-down and there was equipment in terrible need of replacement, but the former Member at the time would not do it because he wanted to run down the present hospital. I can [give] a whole list of equipment that we purchased when I was the Member. An accomplishment! The main one being that we started the matter of removing the Cleveland Clinic simply because it was too onerous for old people to be travelling in between Miami and Fort Lauderdale.

We have got the Baptist Hospital because it is a better situation and the fee structure is better. At the time, Cleveland Clinic was charging something like $46,000 for a bypass surgery. We know that we can get it for less than that—half of that at the Baptist Hospital.

One of the things that I take pride in is December of 1993, when the Health Practitioners Registration Regulations were amended to monitor and regulate clinical trials in the Cayman Islands, albeit because of a loophole which the former Member knew about and used. We bought a new X-Ray machine. These are the sort of things we accomplished when I was the Member for Health. And as far as dismantling the Health Services Authority, that had a right to be dismantled, because they were loaning out money to certain people to pay school fees and all sort of other things. That is the sort of dirt that was going on at the Health Services Authority.

I did not come to this House with it. The should try to find out who it was. I know who it was and not they want to talk about the country is in such a poor state of affairs. Madam Speaker, if it is, it is simply those things that were left over from the last administration.

Madam Speaker, a whipping horse today for the Opposition is the recent advertising campaign. This country is being bombarded by competition in the financial world with all sort of misinformation about the financial centre of the Cayman Islands. The Financial Secretary organised an effective advertising agenda in three main countries of the financial world. Ministers is an integral part of the Financial Secretary's Public Sector Consultative Committee, which is a Committee that deals with all facet of the financial industry. So we were invited and encouraged by the private sector as Minister, to go so that the outside world could question us and hear for themselves concerning matters in Cayman.

Some of the most important questions that were commonplace from delegates, and I know that the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac can bear this out, were the questions concerning the political situation in Hong Kong and Bermuda, and what is our position on constitutional advancement. Why not, Madam Speaker? Why should we not have been the ones to go? Could they ask the Honourable Attorney General? No. They could only ask that of the duly elected representatives in this country. They could not ask that of the Attorney General, because he does not know. It is not within his remit to say what the position is. We did our duty in those meetings.

Now they are asking what business I had in going on this advertising campaign. Madam Speaker, let me say that in my years in this House, I raised many matters over the years to better improve the financial industry. The two things that I can remember is not collecting anything for Limited Partnership until I moved a resolution so that we could charge for it, and the one thing that the Throne Speech contains is the introduction of a stock exchange market which is being promoted by Government.

It is recorded in the Hansards that I supported it a long time before some people was in this House. When you look at who asked for what, look at the motions that I brought asking that we create an economic council. I want to quote from the Hansard what I had to say. I quote: "Virtually nobody in Europe and Asia (speaking more of the Pacific Rim) knows that this Island is trying to grow steadily gives the investors opportunities. An international campaign concept which highlights the advantage which we offer has to be given to someone with European/Asian public relations and marketing experience. These Islands depends 70% to 80% on the United State's economy. We have to identify buyers, that is tourist, of high network and investors both in Europe and in the Pacific Rim.

"I think to this end Cayman and its local finance business must make a campaign approach to offer facilities to new applicants for business permits, licences and residents given in the way to make this place look more friendly, less a place which just wants the money of the investor. Firstly in trying to build a revenue base in order to carefully target the European tourism market and increase its office representation in those areas. An appropriate marketing campaign should be devised aimed specifically at each target country as taste and preferences of tourist vary widely depending on their geographic origin and economic situation."

I wonder if it was Bridget McPartland, or the First Elected Member for Bodden Town, or the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman saying that.

Madam Speaker, they like to put down people. That is their whole trouble. And because I did not go to a University or a College overseas, I have no right to be on Executive Council. Well, I think that those people who constantly criticise should first put constructive ideas on the floor of this House.

I have done my part over the ten years that I have served this country. I want to ask Bridget McPartland, what is she doing? Except criticising. I would like to ask that of the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Madam Speaker, you hear them say that they cannot do anything. Why can they not do something? You mean to tell me that they sit in the hallowed halls of this Legislature and count themselves on a pinnacle above the people and they cannot do something to help them? You would expect that people who say they are intellectuals, who say that they were teachers, that they would be teaching and telling the populace about the things that can assist the populace. Are they doing that? No they throw their hands up and say, I do not have a department behind me.

Madam Speaker, I have said that. But you know what I did? I was out there working in my church. I was out there working in my community and my constituency. I was out there working with the youth groups and the cubs. I worked and led the cub groups in my times. What have they done? What have they done and what are they doing today? Except to criticise.

Much has been said about criminal activity and that the Government is not doing anything. Madam Speaker, we found many things that were broken in this country when we took over. One of the reasons why crime could increase is because the last Government did not take it seriously. We know that, because one of the main arms of Government for drug interdiction—contraband was the Dog Programme at the dock and the airport. What happened to that? It was disbanded under the former Government. [They] called for more police. We gave them more police. What did we do? We set up a special task force.

So Madam Speaker, we also bought the new boat for coastal surveillance and reintroduced the dog programme. As for cars, I do not understand the First Elected Member for Bodden Town. I see the budget here for at least six Nissans—six. He is the manager of that car dealer. I see a whole list. The truth is, Madam Speaker, the Government spends what it can and it is not as if the Police Force is immobile. Listening to him [the First Elected Member for Bodden Town] you would believe that. But I wonder if he recalls in 1989 we cut the requirement for 22 [vehicles], he was the leading architect in that Finance Committee Meeting, to 11. I wonder if he recalls that? I wonder if he recalls the many times—and it is in the minutes of the Finance Committee—the police was denied certain things because we felt that they could not do it at the time. The Government could not spend the money at the time.

In this year's budget we have many requests by the police. It is not that the Police Force does not have cars. When you are coming from such a high rate of criminal activity as it was when we took over, it takes a while to get down and I will show that when I come to deal with juvenile crimes statistics, which you are not hearing anything about, Madam Speaker. The newspaper is not blaring that all over the front pages, of course not, because that would show that the National Team's effort is paying off.

One thing that I believe the Government should do as far as vehicles are concerned . . . we should not be buying all from Nissan or Ford. We should spread it around. That is what should be done. They spread that kind of thing on me, but I have not gotten one iota of business on the back of the people of this country, meaning through Government. There are others here who cannot say the same thing.

So Madam Speaker, I think the effort of the National Team is beginning to pay off and we should be saying that, rather than criticising the National Team for things that were done by someone else.

You hear quite a bit about intellect; who is an intellectual and who is not. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town said that it is a pity that we did not agree on their motion on the Study of the Caymanian Family, when he was putting credit in one of my pocket and taking it out of the other one. I challenge him to bring this motion that he and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, brought. They did not bring the motion. They brought a motion here not to do with a study as we were getting done, on the family through the United Nations. They brought one calling for a Select Committee to consider Problems of Children, Young Women and the Family (Private Member's Motion 14/93). The Resolved section says: "...That this Honourable House appoint a Select Committee of the Elected Members to study and make recommendations for strategies to alleviate the problems in our society;

"AND BE IT NOW FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government consider the establishment of a Family Court to deal specifically with juvenile delinquency, neglect, abuse, divorce, custody and all other matters related to children, young people and the family."

They were recommending a Family Court and we rejected that motion, because that is what the Government was doing and I told him [the First Elected Member for Bodden Town] so. This is what I had to say to him, I said: "In fact, we are also in the planning stage for the establishment of a national institution of the family to act as a research body and to advocate in the interest of the family as a social institution."

We are trying to set up this national institution for the family, but we do not want to work in the blind, that is why we are getting the United Nation's study. Why should he try to take credit for something that he did not brought up? It would have been good for him to have brought it up, but he used the occasion to lambaste McKeever Bush.

Also we have said, that we are going to set up a minimum wage. That has to be done in this country and I know that the Chamber of Commerce is going to rail against it, but especially in the tourism sector we cannot expect the women of this country to be working in this day and age for $3.45 per hour. How it is going to be done, I am not sure yet. But that is what the Government is studying. He [the First Elected Member for Bodden Town] said that we would not accept the motion for the Minimum Wage.

This is what I told the Honourable Member that day, the very few words that I said were, and I quote: "I assumed responsibility for labour on July 31, since that time my Portfolio had been getting or becoming familiar with the functions of the Labour Office and we are beginning to identify areas pertaining to labour, which will receive policy emphasis."

"The House will recall that in February the Honourable Member for Tourism, who had responsibility for labour at that time said his intention was to have a look at the matter which this Motion seeks to address.” Madam Speaker, that is the position of Government.

I further quote: "If it is determined necessary to respond to what the Motion talks about, there is provision within the Labour Law for us to move, but having just taking over the Portfolio, we have to look at this matter closely. That is what we are now doing, and we therefore cannot support the Resolution."

We told him at the time that is what we were doing. But the problem with the opposition is, although they are saying that the National Team lacks the intellectual capacity to put in programmes and policies, as soon as some snitch can tell them what we are doing, they bring Motions down here in trying to beat us to it. So that they can be glorified in the results. If it is anyone who does not have the intellectual capacity, it is certainly not the National Team Government.

Now he [the First Elected Member for Bodden Town] wants to take credit for those things, which I am doing without any ideas or assistance from him. He could have given some if he cared. Yet he is saying that we do not have the intellectual capacity.

The whole thing is that I am in tune with the needs of this country and have the common sense—common sense—to get things done. When my staff, the very hard working staff who sits down day and night in thinking up how we can get these things done for the country. He is saying that we are not doing anything.

Madam Speaker, this is as good a place as any to deal with this matter of culture. Culture, although the Chamber of Commerce said that I have not done anything with it, it is a moving body in this country. We have to remember that there are several aspects to this. But the three critical ones are: culture evolves, influences in Cayman, and the National Cultural Foundations' role in regards to the other two.

The Chamber of Commerce does not know what they are talking about, because culture is everything people say and do in their own way, their daily lives. So it is not just high culture as some people termed it, as expressed in such forms as ballet, classic music, and other abstract sculpture. Those things are only a part of a culture. They do not begin to constitute a culture by themselves. Since culture is what a people say and do in their daily lives, it is constantly evolving. It is not just something that existed 50 years ago, it is also ten years ago and five years ago, and today and is constantly changing.

Madam Speaker, we do not wear rompers anymore, that part of our culture has changed. We do not wear fabric for a living anymore. That is another evolution. We used to have music with greater drum and fiddle, that has evolved too. Ironically, if it were not for the Cultural Foundation the late Mr. Radley Gourzong would have gone to his grave and his music with him. But the National Cultural Foundation organised a professional recording of his music and now we have that piece of Caymanian culture preserved. To depict cultures as only something from earlier time, it to miss the point. Caymanians' culture is a combination of Caymanians' past and present and the future.

So our culture today and tomorrow, Madam Speaker is determined to a great extent, by the influences that come to bear on us. I should emphasise that we have invited here certain influences, influences that have helped our country and continues to help it to prosper. I leave the Glass House at 6 o'clock sometimes later in the evenings, and as I move mostly from one meeting to the next, or on my drive home, there are a dozen fellows practising cricket at the Smith's Road Oval. We did not have cricket, probably 50 years ago (perhaps we did); we did not have soccer until teacher McField started it; we did not have our girls playing netball; our young men involved in cycling; we did not have beauty pageant. But all those things are today part of our culture. Now they have evolved.

The influences around us, some more obvious than others, and if you find yourself wondering about the influences from our neighbours, we need to look all around us. There are very powerful influences and we need to see them as ominous too. We see and we have a flood of American and European shows on television that bombards us every day with a life-style that has some very distressing aspect. Look at the scourge of foreign magazines that you can find displayed on the magazine racks of our stores. Many of them with questionable content. Listen to some of the music on the radio. So if we are going to look at all the influences, let us look at those first, because they can be very negative and worst yet, they come at us every day, every week and every month, it is none stop.

The National Cultural Foundation put on three Caribbean shows last year for a total of some 20 hours. So if it was the case were we are being flooded with our neighbours culture, that would be one thing but in fact, the shoe is on the other foot. I do not want to see us flooded with any one particular culture, that is me as Minister. There has to be a balance and the Cayman Islands do not only have influences from the Caribbean. We have American and European influences as well. We must look at this thing in perspective.

You can hear American pop music and discos, you can laugh at American comedians in a local Comedy Club. The Cayman Drama Society put on very good English plays all year round. There are bands here playing Latin music. There is the Visual Art Society with most American and British painters. Four or five times a year we bring in country singers. These are all valid expression of this evolving culture and Caymanians are perfectly free to indulge themselves in those things, but are they having any negative effect on our culture? We cannot just be concerned about one type.

I think, on this question of influences, we have to have a balance and I will have to say, thank God for the work of the National Cultural Foundation in bringing us some, I repeat: some Caribbean culture along with the Caymanian things they do. For I suspect that without them we may not have any [Caribbean influences] and we need that to balance the very powerful effect of the North American/European influences which can turn us into just another Miami if we are not careful.

The National Cultural Foundation is charged under the Foundation Law to develop Caymanian culture. Clearly the people who framed the Law had some concerns that our culture needed bolstering and that is what the Foundation has been about and should be about. I am encouraging it to do more.

In brief, Madam Speaker, there has been generated over a period of years 21 Caymanian plays through the Annual Playwright Competition. With the sponsorship of Caribbean Utilities Company Limited, it presented seven of the prize winning plays at the Harquail Theatre including, Lovennia Lee and her Sisters, by the late Joy Brandon; Hurricane, by Ron Martin and Corrine Solomon's Pity Paul. They produced another nine shows that were either written, compiled by or about Caymanians, featured Caymanians performance in overwhelming session at every show it produced. It provides professional guidance to the scourge of Caymanians from all walks of life who frequently request advice from various artistic discipline.

We sponsored the Cayman High School students to travel to London for a six week Youth Theatre event involving young people from 131 countries, as well as the John Gray High School Drama Group's participation in the Caribbean Inter-Schools Drama Festival at which they won seven awards.

They help funded the participation of the National Dance Company, Dance Unlimited and the Caribbean Festival of the Arts in Trinidad and Tobago, and the Multi-Ethnic Stage Festival in Holland. They organised 25 separate workshops locally, specifically for Caymanians involved in oil painting, dancing, fabric dyeing, stage lighting, poetry and playwriting. Co-sponsored along with the Visual Art Society two additional workshops in clay, wood and stone sculpting for which they provided full scholarships for six Caymanians. Commissioned a book of poetry and three plays from Caymanians writers; published a full-colour book highly acclaimed here and abroad of paintings of Gladwyn Lassie Bush, and this is led to the request from the American Visionary Art Museum in Baltimore, Maryland to display Miss Lassie's work there and from Phydon Press in the United Kingdom, to include here work in a new book they are producing on intuitive are from around the world.

They produced the only professional audio tape of the music of the late Radley Gourzong and the Happy Boys, co-sponsored with the National Archives; showcased historic Carib Art exhibition seen here by 5,500 people which featured the work of five local painters; two of them Caymanians; presented 18 Heritage Development Awards; 16 to Caymanians in recognition of their contribution of the development and preservation of Caymanian culture.

Madam Speaker, 1995 will see the Cayman National Cultural Foundation continuing its efforts to broaden the awareness of the art as a vital expression of Caymans' cultural evolution.

Among the planned programmes for this year are: the presentation of five staged production, at least three of them locally written. One of these will be the winning entry in the National Playwright Competition. Cayman's participation in both the first Annual Festival of Creative Art in Rugby, England and CARIFESTA Trinidad and Tobago. Two events at which there will be significant scope for cultural exchange and international exposure for the arts in Cayman. Also, the implementation for an outreach programme targeting districts, helping them to preserve and pass on Cayman cultural traditions such as basket making, in fact all of the thatch work, and giving interested person opportunities and the skills to become involved in the artistic activities which appeal to them.

It is believe that with regular sessions full-fledged community cultural groups will eventually emerge as a result of this programme. The formal establishment of a core of Caymanian actors and the semi-professional theatre company, the initial planning of retrospective slated for next year of the heart of Cayman's foremost contemporary painter, Mr. Bendel Hydes.

So Madam Speaker, when the Chamber of Commerce say that we have done nothing for culture, they are not paying attention. This is as good a time as any, to say what I intended about the Chamber of Commerce.

I have never been buddy-buddy with the Chamber of Commerce. For several reasons, because it is mostly made up of people who do not have much regard for the working man. I had to fight them all the way on the introduction of the Labour Law. And I suspect that I will have to do so again on the amendments to the Labour Law, the Minimum Wage Law, and the Pensions Law, but the working man has his rights as well as the employer. There must be a mediator. And thank God it is Government and not a Union. I daresay, Madam Speaker, that they would do well to support these sort of actions because if we did not have the Labour Law, and if the Government was not the mediator, who would be the mediator for the working man? Do they believe that in this day and age, it would just lie so? Somebody would have started some form of Union by now. Where would we be? I was criticised for bringing that Motion then, too, Madam Speaker.

Let me say this, I know that because I refused to cow-tow, I am not appreciated. I come from the wrong side of the fence for some of them [the Chamber's members]. I come from the wrong side of the street.

You know what I believe about that group of people and people like them? They would like to see me, and people like me and perhaps you too, Madam Speaker, still hewers of wood and drawers of water. They would love to see that—as slave. But as long as I have been breaking my back for one of their kind, and put him in Government, I was someone just to be tolerated. I know that. But when I stood up and said: Hey, this slave has got shoes. That was a different matter.

When people like me come into this Legislature, because there are those of us who remember what the merchants were like. People like us could not come in here. We had no right to be elected to this Legislature. They would love to see us still hewers of wood and drawers of water.

The Chamber of Commerce said people like him should not lead. Some of them [the Chamber's members] feel that if you do not come from the establishment, then you do not belong in Government. No, Madam Speaker. We have those kinds of people in West Bay too, and it is to them that I want to send this message. This is not the first time that any kind of review had been done on me. They started one between the years of 1989 and 1992, and they got 152 signatures, those bigots and pharaohs of West Bay. I am not talking about the general populace. I am talking about those who were in the position to lead and the ones who took the petition against me.

They have said that I should not lead, and they may photocopy the Chamber of Commerce's [questionnaire] and sent it by the 15 copies against me, but let me say this they will never, never break my spirit. Just as sure as my ancestors made it across the Atlantic and just as sure as their bones lie in the cemeteries in West Bay and North West Point, my spirit will not be broken. I will honour their spirits and hold up their traditions of hard work and honesty.

This Chamber of Commerce survey was just used as means to get back at me by those who have and will never have any use for people like myself. Simply because I refused to be co-opted by those carpetbaggers who just come here to scrape up what they can and run away with it. As far as the survey is concerned, Madam Speaker, it is as biased as Cat-boat jib. The Chamber of Commerce should have known that it [the questionnaire] would be abused because they had set up no safeguards.

All I can say is that certainly, they must have had a lot of fun and satisfaction writing all those things about me and others which were so personal. The Chamber of Commerce circulated it, whether they wrote it or not, I do not know—they circulated it—but they will certainly pay for it. I will see that that happens, because it is time people let the Chamber of Commerce know that it should be about the business of commerce and not the business of politics. That was all that survey was of, political means in getting back at the Elected Members by people who do not like us.

Madam Speaker, we have had to step on some toes since we [the National Team] took over and that is why they are using those things against the National Team. We have refused to let them have their way and if, people think things are bad today, had we not taken some of the measures that we took [in regard to things] like the importation of vehicles, heavy equipment and so on. They know who got the money. It is not the ordinary Caymanian businessman. It was those people who were let in here—the ones I call carpetbaggers—of late. They have the money and it is time that we stand up and say so. Some of them are not here for the good of this country. You think they love us that much? When they are starting the same business that the poor Caymanian who stood here and beat mosquitoes with his family to do what he could to eke a living out of this Cayman Islands. They are starting the same businesses.

I do not appreciate it, and they know it and that is why today I am not their favourite son. I will never be.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Minister, take a suspension at this time.

Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.08 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture continuing.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, it seems that the Chamber of Commerce has set themselves up to be a government in itself. When they are not telling us about selling the Water Authority, they are telling us who we should put on the Boards. I believe that there are decent people serving on the [Statutory] Boards in this country.

I see an article by the Chamber of Commerce of Wednesday, 22 March 1995 and I fail to understand how they would expect a Government to appoint pure business people (from the Chamber of Commerce) to Statutory Boards. There has to be a balance. Who is to say that if we gave the Chamber of Commerce the power to appoint members to these boards, who were they are going to put up? We already know. I have said that there are people in this country who do not have any regard for they Caymanian business. There are people with money who will stoop to anything to outsmart the Caymanian businessman who does not have any money, or does not have sufficient financial backup to compete with some of them.

We have it all around; we have it in the construction industry, we have it in stores, we have it all around. So why should we do as they are suggesting in appointing capable businesspersons to serve on Statutory Boards.

For too many years, those carpetbaggers have had control in this country. That is why the National Team is not appreciated. It is because we have put our feet down. It is more difficult than people believe, because a Government can only do so much. We can only do so much, they accused us of being dictators. If we were there would be a whole lot of difference in the country. I do not understand what it is they want. First they say that we must sell...now there are only one or two statutory bodies, one so far now, and then they are now saying that we must put all of their members on the Statutory Boards. Mind you there are people who belong to the Chamber of Commerce who sit on the Board. I believe one of them is on the Community College Board, appointed by them; one on the Education Council Board; another on the Port Authority Board, the Turtle Farm Board, the Planning Department Board, the Civil Aviation Authority Board...do not tell me any more, because I am already fed-up with them now. That is enough.

All I am saying is that these are Caymanians, who represents the Chamber of Commerce, but they are saying that it should be all their members. The members that are on the Board do a good job. We are not saying otherwise. We know that they do and good job and we appreciate them, but certainly they should not expect that they are going to appoint every member. That is nonsense.

As far as the Chamber of Commerce is concerned with me as I have said earlier, they can do all the surveys they want. I know that I am not their favourite son. I have never been because I have always been on the side with the working man and I will continue to be on his side. He is the one who needs people to protect him in most cases and the Chamber of Commerce is a business oriented [organisation]. The country cannot run without business, we know that. But there has to be a balance.

Madam Speaker, one matter was raised about control on entertainers and I certainly find what I see in the Caymanian Compass very distasteful, from the show that gave rise to people mentioning it. The show that was highlighted [Patra in Concert]. There were a lot of people who attended that show and were not impressed. This country needs clean entertainment and any sports body, social club or otherwise who wants to bring in entertainment should see to it that the people they are bringing are of good taste. There are limits that this country should not allow. When we heard about it as an Executive Council it was too late. But we wrote to them and told them that they must ensure that their performer is not going to be as it is on television.

I believe the Honourable Chief Secretary received a letter of promise, as I said it was too late at the time. I hope that when we take measures to curtail certain action we are not going to hear that we are being autocratic or we are dictators.

When you talk about culture, Madam Speaker, there are limits. Whether it be Caribbean, American, English or where ever, there are limits that we should allow in this country. Yes, we are connected to all, but there are limits. I believe in having a good time as much as anybody, but we cannot allow our country to be downgraded in this way. These things are not to the liking of Cayman's culture.

Madam Speaker, we see that we are accused of stopping free medical care for seamen. We suspended services to the seamen because we felt that it was being abused. We have met with the Seamen's' Association and together we have agreed that seamen and their spouses who have reached the age of 55 will get free medical once they are recommended by the Association. If anyone below that age needs assistance and are recommended, we will also assist them. We are waiting on the Seamen's' Association to send us the names and they are in the process of doing identification cards.

So the Opposition, Madam Speaker, cannot get any political mileage out of that issue. They should stop trying to beat that dead horse.

Mention was made about vehicles, but the Honourable Member, himself who raised the matter when the extra police were brought in sometime ago [he] complained about that. It is ironic that it is those whom have set fire to the building are the ones who are on the outside questioning how the Fire Brigade will deal with it.

It is time that they put on a responsible cloak, instead of doing these things then come in here with a halo of what I call angelic purity.

We were accused of overspending in sports and I have to deal with that in good order tomorrow morning, God's willing. Suffice it now to say, that we have not spent what is being said to have been spent. The National Sports and Recreation Complex is something phased for over ten years. It is not something that is going to be done overnight. We cannot do it overnight, but not to say the country does not need it. I believe that when it is all done it is going to be worth the while of the country—worth our while.

Madam Speaker, I see where the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman says that it was transferred for $140,000 one day and the Government bought it for $800,000 the next day. We are getting 38 acres of property over a five year period, I believe it is.

Can anyone with any drop of sense believe that someone bought 38 acres for $140,000 and sold it to the Government the very next day for $800,000—38 acres? How irresponsible people who say they are intellectuals get up in this House and repeat such nonsense? Who would be so stupid? If they believe that the Government made a bad deal, they can watch what it is going to worth in five year's time. That is what they have to look.

One thing this Government does not have is property to do all the things that are necessary, to do all the things the people are calling on us to do. We have to purchase property. As I understand it, the property was bought by one owner some seven years ago, but was not transferred.

I cannot believe that 38 acres of property is only valued just over $100,000 and was sold to Government for $800,000. It is nonsense. How could that be when we had just bought piece, which the First Elected Member for Bodden Town had suggested in the Bodden Town swamp, but we bought it, an acre for something in the region of $40,000. I do not have the figures with me, but suffice it to say, Members who say they are responsible, who say they are intellectuals should know better.

The other matter the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman—the so-called leader of the opposition—said that the Government does not have any policy. Of course, his lieutenant is voicing the same thing. He said that we lack the intellectual capacity to put up policies and programmes and we only look at what is done overseas. Can you believe, Madam Speaker, that after listening to the First Elected Member for Bodden Town talking about Japan this, Japan that, and Canada when and Canada now, in looking at this book and the next. He is going to talk to the National Team Government about no policies. This borders on the ridiculous.

Suffice it to say also, that when we look at the Annual Budget each year, the Government's policies are contained therein. Here it is, the 'Ambit of the Vote' for the Ministry for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation: "Expenditure relating to the policy formation which governs and facilitates the promotion of wellness, along with the provision of medical ser- vices, both locally and overseas; the development of policies to ensure the prevention of the misuse of drugs and the provision of rehabilitative services to all residents of the Cayman Islands." [1995 Budget]

The 'Mission Statement', "To realise a state of wellness among the citizens and residents of the Cayman Islands based on the World Health Organisation's definition of health as "not merely the absence of disease or infirmity", but "a state of complete physical, mental, and social well being." To ensure that the population is able to gain access to appropriate and affordable medical treatment." [pg. 223]

What more policy than this can they want? And who do they think put this together? Did they not think that is it the National Team's Ministers after discussions with our team Members, sitting down with the civil servants responsible; the Permanent Secretaries and putting these things together. Who do they think did it? Yet they say we have no policy and we do not know where we are going. It is a disgrace and a slap in the face of the civil servants who sits down day and night to do these sort of things.

It just does not happen, civil servants have to do it under our instructions. Under the Ministry for Community Development, Sports, Youths Affairs and Culture the Mission Statement says: "The Mission of the Ministry is to promote a sustainable high quality of community life, within which each individual has the maximum opportunity to seek to achieve his or her highest potential level of self-fulfilment and self-expression, in terms of the physical, aesthetic, and spiritual aspects of being."

The Ambit of the Vote goes on to say: "Expenditure relating to the formulation of policies, and direct support of activities, to facilitate and govern the repair of social dysfunction, where it exists, and more broadly, the encouragement of community development, within and through the following spheres of activity and responsibility:..."

Yet the would be leaders—the man who would be Chief Minister, the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who says that we do not have any policies. Who put this together? If he had done as much for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, instead of being down here creating trouble and spreading rumours, stirring up problems in the Civil Service, things would be better in Sisters Islands. If he was doing his job up there instead of running around playing the leader that he is not, down here.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: It is now 4.30, Honourable Minister. May I have the Motion for the Adjournment of the House?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. John B. McLean: Madam Speaker, I move the ad-jourment of this Honourable House until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 30 MARCH 1995.

THURSDAY
30 MARCH, 1995
10.12 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable Second Official Member to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

The Oath of Affirmation to be administered to Mr. Joel Walton, JP, Deputy Financial Secretary to be the Temporary Third Official Member.

Mr. Walton, will you come forward to the Clerk's table?

ADMINISTRATION OF OATHS
OR AFFIRMATIONS

OATH OF AFFIRMATION
To Mr. Joel Walton, JP

Hon. Joel Walton: I, Arthur Joel Walton, do solemnly and sincerely affirm and declare that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II her heirs and successors according to law.

The Speaker: Please take your seat.

On behalf of the Legislative Assembly, I welcome you to be the Temporary Acting Third Official Member.

Presentation of Papers and Reports. Proposed Education Development Plan 1995 to 1999.

The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

PROPOSED EDUCATION DEVELOPMENT PLAN
1995—1999

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Five Year Strategic Plan for the Development of Education in these Islands which has been accepted by the Executive Council and by the Education Council.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

When I took over the responsibility for education in November 1992, although there had been a development exercise, there was no plan that could be followed in a systematic way.

What I found was a framework on which were hung the various major recommendations of the Porter-Brooms Report, several of which were in different phases of implementation. I also found that many of these major changes did not have the full support of the very people for which such developments were intended—the students, the teachers and the parents.

Madam Speaker, although I have been criticised for throwing out the Five Year Development Plan of the previous government, Honourable Members will see that many of the recommendations made by Mr. Porter and Dr. Brooms are, in fact, included in the Strategic Plan.

I have said in other forums, and will repeat, that the review of the Cayman Islands Education System done in 1990, was a good review in many areas and the document has been invaluable to the work of the Education Planning Team. However, after a planning period of 11 months, and as a result of the planning process, I believe that the Cayman Islands people are more understanding of the reasons why such change is necessary.

Mr. Porter continues to assist us on an ad hoc basis in our plans for implementation, starting in 1995.

Another hurdle I had to cross was that the key factor in the planning process had been largely ignored. This was the reorganisation and strengthening of the Education Department so that the organisation was in place to carry out the plan. It would have been folly to attempt any kind of development with the existing organisational structure, which was in place in the Education Department in 1992.

With the help of the Personnel Department a new organisational structure with a number of new posts and new responsibilities was drawn up. The job appraisal scheme presently being implemented in central government allowed us to set up a system of accountability for all officers and to detail what objectives are to be met in a space of time. This is a key element in the Strategic Planning process—that one individual is responsible for the successful implementation of a particular action.

In all, 353 individuals participated in the preparation of the Strategic Plan. Public support often exceeded our expectations and interest was high. I would like to take this opportunity to reiterate the Ministry's thanks to all those people who served on the Education Planning Team as Action Team Leaders, and on the Action Planning Committees.

I would particularly like to thank the trained facilitators who took us through the process and whose belief that we would be successful never wavered. These facilitators were: Mrs. Joy Basdeo, Miss Andrea Bryan, Mrs. Hyacinth Connolly, Mr. Colin Ross, Mrs. Mary Miller, Mr. Leonard Bodden and Mr. Michael Hunt.

Special thanks must go to Mrs. Hyacinth Connolly, the lead facilitator who as internal coordinator was responsible for organisation of all meetings and all training.

A 35 member Education Planning Team, representative of the whole community, developed nine strategies. This Education Planning Team was made up of 50% teachers and other education personnel, and 50% drawn from, parents, students, representatives of commerce and industry, private schools, service clubs, a Minister of religion and a Member of the Legislative Assembly. Cayman Brac was well represented on the team.

Action Teams in both Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac developed the strategies into action plans that would get specific results.

The major policy areas emanating from these action plans are: the establishment of a National Curriculum; the Development of four locally accredited Cayman Islands achievement tests; the creation of a school expectorate; the establishment of a Board for each school; the establishment of Health, Safety and Building Standards for all schools. However, the 105 Action Plans which were recommended cover all aspects of the Education System. These have been scheduled for implementation during the academic years 1995 to 2000, and the first year has been costed.

The specific objectives, together with the beliefs, mission and strategies, will shape the public education system over the next five years. Every 12 to 18 months the Strategic Plan will be evaluated by the Education Planning Team to ensure that we are still on target and that our objectives are being met.

Those who participated in this exercise have created a vision for these Islands—a vision based on their experience, their sense of the needs of students as learners, as human beings and as contributors to society. We know that commitment, collaboration, courage, hard work and mutual support is required for us to move forward. We realise that change is inevitable, but growth is optional.

Honourable Members, I commend the Five-Year

Strategic Plan for the Development of Education in the Cayman Islands to you as Government's Education Policy. I ask you to accept (and I quote): "The Mission of the Cayman Islands Government School System, as the embodiment of the distinctive ideals and values of the Caymanian people, is to develop the full and unique potential of all students; challenging them to assume a productive and fulfilling role in a stable, multi-cultural society distinguished by rapid economic growth through an educational system characterised by visionary leaders, caring and committed teachers, a responsible partnership with parents and the community, and a varied and relevant curriculum."

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture, continuing the debate on the Throne Speech.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

DEBATE ON THE 1995 THRONE SPEECH DELIVERED BY HIS EXCELLENCY MR. MICHAEL E. J. GORE, CVO, CBE, GOVERNOR OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS ON FRIDAY, 3 MARCH 1995

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, there have been calls for tolerance in the House—and I agree, we are striving to be better Christians. We cannot, however, ask for tolerance on the one hand and, on the other hand, as soon as there is an opportunity to make a Minister look bad, make an insinuation about his character by repeating what is said on the outside or by reading some paper.

Ministers rarely speak first in this House. In this meeting in particular, the two Opposition Members raised matters not related to the debate. I can think of many occasions where personal castigation has been heaped upon me. Especially, when the Opposition has motions on the floor, they do this in closing their debate including times when Members, and in particular when I have not even spoken. On more than one occasion this has taken place and it is in the record, I have copies of the Hansards.

I am asking Members, if they are sincere about tolerance, if they are honest about the level of debate, to stop this tactic of attacking the character of other Members when they have no right of reply.

I am asking the Chair to take special note when Members move motions, or when they speak, and other Members have not spoken and have no chance to speak, that the character assassination be stopped. I have to defend myself. I have never failed to do that in most instances. I can think of times when I let things pass, but I can see that what is happening in this House, the creation of a style of politics—Caribbean style politics—that is not good for this House.

I cannot say that the level of debate in this House has gone to any backyard brawl. Never once has the Chair had to put anybody out of this House for gross behaviour. I think our Parliament is one of the best Parliaments that I have ever noticed—and I know that people look at the United Kingdom Parliament, I know that they look at the House of Commons. We cannot emulate them in any way, shape, or form; but neither can anyone say that the Cayman Islands Legislative Assembly is not run in a good manner.

This government is keenly aware that our fair country has gone through (and continues to experience) rapid economic growth and change. Married to this are swift and far-reaching changes in the social environment. With the characteristic vigour displayed by a free enterprise economy, much effort was (and is) being made to keep Cayman current and competitive in the lines of business in which we are principally engaged, especially offshore finance and tourism.

For a number of reasons, however, in spite of much good will, much voluntary effort, much giving, the energy and other resources put into addressing the need for development of social infrastructure has been comparatively much less effective. This government has seen the need for reform of the approach to social policy that was existing when we took office.

We do not believe (as some do) that the social deterioration will right itself. Neither do we believe that government ought merely to seek to inspire and promote action to be taken by private individuals or agencies. We do believe that in an economic structure such as ours, and with such a comparatively narrow tax base, there is much room for the latter approach. This continues to be a key part of our strategy.

There is no doubt that the public's money is being well spent on the improvements on social and cultural infrastructure which this government has undertaken. We do not pretend that we have done it all—several structures previously existed (though, perhaps, some suffered for want of a vigorous policy thrust). Other areas suffered from positive neglect.

So that the public of the Cayman Islands here and abroad can draw up their own report cards, I will briefly outline how this government has responded to the situation alluded to in my area of responsibility for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

I dealt with the matter of culture yesterday, but to begin with, let me clearly state that we recognise that there are persons who are not equipped to solve their own problems; who do not have the resources to look after themselves physically in terms of food, clothing and shelter. We intend to take, and are taking action to relieve such situations. But, when members of the community see someone being helped, whether it is by assisting them with housing renovations or some other area from Social Services, they should not question why government is doing it because they do not know the particular circumstances which exist. The public likes to be able to say that they know this and that about the next person, but they should not question in a negative matter, or cry down somebody who is being assisted.

We do not believe that the average person in this community needs or wants this form of social welfare, we believe (and I think the community agrees) that the need for action in Government's social policy is really in the area of community development.

We have defined the mission of community development in my Ministry's published Mission Statement as; "One which involves the promotion of a sustainable, high quality of community life within which each individual has the maximum opportunity to seek to achieve his or her highest potential level of self fulfilment and self expression in terms of the physical, aesthetic, and spiritual aspects of being." Such a mission clearly entails both direct action on our part and encouragement of action by and within the community itself.

We are most pleased at the level of interest that has grown concerning these matters in such a short span of two years. It is only when concern about quality of life takes hold of the popular imagination that consensus can emerge and lead in turn into concerted action in the common interest. In terms of inspiring and mobilising the community to identify and address matters of significance to its quality of life, the government in general, and my Ministry in particular, now call for voluntary and private sector agencies to take a further step toward defining the roles they can play as community actors.

We should aim to at least equal the level of consultation and joint participation between public and private sectors, which has existed for some time in the economic side of our activities.

Some sense of the Government's thinking and intention in this area of community development may be gained from examining briefly some of what this Ministry has already done towards realising its mission. We have started from the perspective that the young people of this country and the elderly were the population groups most at risk due to neglect in public policy. Accordingly, the level of financial assistance to the elderly in need has been increased twice under this administration.

We raised the Social Services grant for the elderly from $50 to $125 this year. We are not saying that this is enough, because I know it is not enough. But, under the circumstances, I could not do any more. Pensions were also established in certain deserving situations deemed to be not qualified under previous rule within the civil service. Finally, the comprehensive provision of pensions for the working population is a policy priority now under active review.

I know that the public (and I know that some in the Chamber of Commerce) expects the government must to fund the entire pension or social welfare to our elderly. Right now we are straining to do $125 and that cannot help our old people and give them the sufficient sustenance that they need. I believe that something more in the region of $400 to $500, or between $250 and $500 is what is needed in our economy today. That age group is growing by the day. More and more of our people are being pushed aside, they cannot work any longer and therefore they are now coming to Social Services.

Some of them are proud people, they have worked all their lives when there was nothing in the country, the salaries were small and therefore their savings are very small. One thing that our old people do not want is to have to come to government or go with their hand out to anybody for burial. So, if they have saved something, they want to keep that for their funeral expenses.

This is a serious need that exists that nobody should try to down play in this country by saying that government should take up the slack for old people because that cannot happen. We know that. Some people look at the United States and say that the United States has this and that. What we must remember is that those people in the United States, who are working, take home maybe 55 cents out of every dollar, which means that if they make $100, they only take home $55. That is how they get all the nice things that they get.

It is a shame when we look at some of the cases, because we know that some of the children can do better in some instances. But it is a fact that most times the children cannot because of their own drag, their own problems. They cannot, they do not make enough money to keep their own parents. The parents are independent and live separate in their own homes, they do not want to leave it and they are not going to stay with some child or not going to say that they are going to the Pines. Our old people are independent people and we cannot forget that they pushed this country to where it is.

I know that the last four or five terms of government said that they did it for this country. When I go through this country and see them still willing . . . they were the ones who built this country to what it is today. We would not have had the type of Cayman that we have today because they were the ones who set the principles. They were the ones who set the moral guidance for this country.

So, I know that I am being criticised for this increase in social welfare to our elderly people, all I am saying here is that it is not nearly enough and we are not reaching all who need to be reached.

We are going to have to find some mechanism in this 21st Century to take care of our old people who are not working. We cannot say that if they do not work they cannot get a pension because I am talking about old people who worked in the time when the dollar was very little.

With regard to young people, previously the only significant resources provided were in the field of education. In spite of the fact that educators here, as elsewhere, were finding it more and more difficult to educate because of personal development issues young people were taking into the schools.

All governments have done well over the years. Our churches have done well in education. But I maintain that in the last two terms education took a dip downward. It is a fact—we know by the results of the graduating class in the last two terms of the former government. It is not something that I get into a lot. I leave that for those people who say that they are teachers and who say they are responsible for policy. But the fact remains that education was in the doldrums.

One thing I can say that they did well was the Community College, but there was no marketing strategy provided—they built the building and left it. I will deal with that later on. The Community College can play a much more vital role, in fact they have the wherewithal now to play that role if Members in this House would stand up and say this is what is available. If Members who get up and say that there needs to be training would do their research and see what is available, then it would be better because young people on the outside who do not know would be informed.

In dealing with that issue, I want to read some of what has taken place at the Community College so that some light can be shed on this talk about training.

Out of 222 children graduating from John Gray High School in 1993, 168 were either employed, schooled overseas, at the Community College, or in sixth form. It does not mean that the balance of 54 was not employed, it means that those students did not return any communication to the schools, when the schools enquired.

Last year, of the 232, 187 were either employed, schooled overseas or at the Community College, or repeaters at the John Gray High School. The other 45 are in that same category of not returning any communication to the Education Department.

When we talk about what is available, we have hospitality studies, full time programmes, certificate and diploma. We have technical studies, auto mechanics, carpentry, electrical and electronics. Then they have the business studies of commercial certificates and secretarial certificates and they have part time programmes in insurance, accounting and banking courses.

Then, they have extension services, evening classes, and general studies. This government just completed over $1 million in the Community College by adding a new block for sciences and other general studies. So, while the last government built one part, we have accomplished a very important aspect in providing another part.

What I am trying to say here this morning, is that there is a lot of opportunity available. Instead of Opposition Members getting up on a soapbox and saying that there is nothing going on in the country, they need to encourage those young people who are not doing anything to attend the Community College. They need to tell the truth about what is going on. They cannot constantly make this country look like it is a dying country when there is so much effort being put into things like education.

I take my hat off to the Minister who took decisions that were unpopular but are now proving to be right, when those people who were against him criticised him for taking the decision and he had support from some 300 people out there.

We do have a lot of good teachers in this country, and we should say that. Not everybody is perfect, we know that, but they do a good job in trying to educate our children. It is important because they have the children for most of the day. It is good to say that through the efforts of the Minister for Education there is a general study building where we can now offer associate degrees.

I think those two Members who say they are teachers, the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, should be the ones encouraging young people and telling the truth about what exists, rather than trying to tear down. They need to say that governments in the past, and in particular the present Minister, have done a lot for education. But, if they do not go when they are invited what can you expect? But they should know and I believe that they do know—it is just a matter of trying to make the Minister for Education look bad.

The building of additional and better sports facilities and efforts to improve sports programmes and add new ones in this field were immediate priorities for my Ministry. Sports teaches self-discipline and enhances self-worth through fostering commitment to standards, goal setting and attainment, while also effectively demonstrating the value of team work.

It is, therefore, a most effective socialisation tool in addition to having the significant merit of promoting good health and providing high quality entertainment for the population and positive exposure for the country.

In regard to promoting good health, we are well on the way with the development of a number of expert coaches in various sports. We expect to be working more closely with professionals in the field of health towards our common interest in increasing participation and regular exercise by the whole population.

In regard to entertainment and exposure, this year we have the honour of hosting three prestigious regional tournaments: CARIFTA Track and Field; CARICOM Under 19 in Basketball; and the Shell Cup in Football. We will also have the world's eyes on us during the Shell Cup as we enjoy the particular honour as having as our guest a number of distinguished persons headed by Dr. Havi-lanch, the President of International Football Federation, that is FIFA, the biggest sports fraternity in the world, and Mr. Edson Arantes, better known simply as Pelee, the world's greatest footballer and now Minister of Sports in Brazil.

I would say, justifiably, that we can conclude that we have certainly got the ball rolling in sports. While we shall have to place priorities for a while on other sectors such as culture, further services for the youth, broader terms, obviously, ample and prime opportunities have been provided by this government for private sponsors to be more fully involved for the mutual benefit of themselves and the sports programme.

On another occasion, I expressed the view that while sports contributed to the plating together of the social fabric, the threads of which is made up of the relationships among people, most fundamentally within families and between people and their God. Culture, especially if read as the expressive art, best aids the development of these relationships by most ably promoting the understanding of universal truths about humanity—true knowledge of our innermost selves. The expressive arts are therefore of vital importance to the life of any community.

Sometime ago I passed a motion (back in 1988) to have a better understanding of our history. That motion asked for a written history on the Cayman Islands. It is expected that a start will be made on a project to have a comprehensive history of the Cayman Islands written this year, that is, the start will be made this year. Hirst's Notes on the History of the Cayman Islands is expected to be re-published.

Perhaps most significantly for young people, it is hoped that we will be able to stage our first National Youth Festival. This could be sometime in November. This festival would have people competing in a wide range of fields from the expressive to the culinary arts. That is, we want to see competition in cooking, drama, poetry, singing, arts and crafts. On a wider scale, young people will be encouraged, not just through school, but through youth groups. We are going to ask the service clubs and churches to get involved. This does not just mean up to age group 13, but hopefully I will get agreement to go up to a much higher age group so that they can have the different competitions within their age groups.

New storage and lab facilities for the museum are being provided along with enhanced capacity for the Archives. We are to host the Museum Association's Caribbean meeting here this year in November.

While we have formed a National Children's Choir, which had its debut in December, that is something that I am very proud of and I hope to see it further enhanced. But I also wish to promote the formation of a National Orchestra and I now invite input from the public on the forms this should take, as well as any ideas on resource and development. I believe that there is enough talent existing in our country to form one and I hope that before my term ends that I will see this develop and make its debut.

This has been an appropriate year to declare opened the Young Parents Programme. As this programme is geared to assisting young, untrained parents to becoming caring parents with the ability to properly care for their children. The Department of Social Services, from its experience over the years has been acutely aware that the younger the age of the mother the poorer the child care practices are. The children of teenage mothers have been shown by many research studies to be at greater risk than those of older mothers.

The Department is also aware that the not-yet-fully mature and self-indulging teenager is less likely to dedicate much time to ensuring proper nutrition and health care of her infant and will demonstrate much less warmth and affection to her child.

When the young parent programme was presented as an item in the 1994 Budget, and the senior staff of the Department took time out to explain what the Department hoped to achieve through it, my immediate reaction was that the Department of Social Services was proposing to implement a programme very much in keeping with the philosophy of the Ministry for which I am responsible.

Briefly put, we see it as our mission to address issues of social integration in the community, in particular, promoting healthy families as the linchpin of community development.

Many teenagers lack the education and experience needed to acquire adequate employment. Even with help from Social Service agencies or family members, there may not be enough of them to live without financial strain. We know that this exists in the country.

Therefore, as you have already heard, one of the objectives of this programme is to improve the earning capacity of these young women. While this programme does not claim to be the solution to the problem, I believe that through its approach, the programme will be able to address areas necessary to help the young parents and through them, their children to cope effectively in a changing society as we are experiencing in these islands. I am heartened to see that health education, basic academic and job skills screening, family life education and parenting skills, are the major components of the programme.

These are not grand sounding training schemes, nor are our aspirations for these young persons grand sounding. Our efforts are to help them to join the main stream of society. We (the National Team) feel that there is a moral wrong arising out of the disadvantages children in this position are exposed to, especially when the parents are very young and not well equipped to handle their own lives. It would be a further and greater wrong for the society at large, represented by government, to turn its back on these situations and to leave them to sink or swim as was being done in the past.

It is a fact that over my ten years I have called for these kinds of interventions in our community. Previous governments, especially the last government who had a young person in the form of Mr. Miller dealing with youth problems . . . and all these situations went sliding by when person after person, legislator after legislator, the Justices' Association—everybody was pointing to the problems existing with our young people and they were not taking notice. We have an obligation to give such young persons a second chance and their children a fair chance and that is what we are trying to do through the young parents' programme.

In terms of community development, this type of programme is obviously at the sharp end of things. We have to move, and we clearly are moving, to address these areas of social dysfunction.

While we must continue to impress on our young people the moral wrong as well as the practical difficulties on getting off on the wrong foot in starting a family, and those of us who are parents (and I address this House in particular) must do our part on a political platform in saying this to the public. This is education. When we talk about how the government is educating the populace, what are we doing as Members of this House to educate young people? Do you mean to say that we can only go on the platform and talk about the National Team or talk about the finance sector, or talk about some other thing that really does not matter in this community? I say that these are the areas that we as leaders need to be talking about and encouraging our young people.

We need to tell them that it is not a good thing to get a young woman pregnant and then leave her. That is not man-ship! But, are we afraid to lose votes? Are we afraid to tell that to the 17-year old because we know that the 1996 election is coming up? Are we afraid to say to the 18-year old young man, or 16-year old young girl that it may be good for you to date, but that does not mean that you have to go all the way? We should be saying to our young girls if a young man—and I tell my daughter this because she will soon be 15—approaches you in the wrong way she should slap him so hard on the side of the head that church bells will ring. This is what we, as leaders, should be saying on the political platform, rather than denigrating McKeever Bush about his education. This is what the Chamber of Commerce should be assisting in, rather than talking nonsense about there is nothing being done for the youth.

We, as leaders, must also face the fact that insofar as these situations arise, it would be more costly to the society to support such potential dysfunctional families as we are now trying to do in the long term, than to implement interventions such as this.

As Legislators—and I address the two Members of the Opposition who are teachers, and I ask them to change their opposition tactics and to assist this country because they have been in the classroom and because they are parents . . . to assist this country by talking about these matters when they get on the platform in a positive way—by teaching—not by getting up and asking what is the government doing for you.

This is a good programme. It is a pity that the Chamber of Commerce is saying that this Member has done nothing for the young people. I had to take note of an editorial in The Caymanian Compass a few days ago about information for the public. That young parents programme took three weeks to get into the press. When we opened the Joyce Hylton Centre, we invited every party of the news media to be there. They do not have to come to take my picture, but this is an important thing; this is positive. Why were they not there? Was there something more important?

What could be more important? Some truss at Tent City? No, Madam Speaker, it could not be. And when I read this editorial it says: "As a George Town MLA quite rightly pointed out, the public wants to hear what government is doing and they want to get involved. They ought not be denied that opportunity." What hypocrisy, when they had an opportunity to come.

There are many things in my Ministry that I can point to that they do not come to. When I need information, the GIS has to do some things, but would it not be better if Mr. Redman, or the other reporters who like to print negative things (and I am not saying that they do it all the time) called me and asked what is happening in my Ministry? They cannot say that I am not approachable because I have invited them into various staff meetings during my two years in Executive Council.

For other young persons in happier circumstances, the proposed guaranteed student loan scheme is expected to be of benefit once it is implemented. That is very important and is forming a very important aspect of the Government's policy. Before I deal with that, I would like to deal with the Department of Labour and Labour Relations.

My Ministry and the Labour Department are working very hard to ensure that Cayman continues to enjoy tranquil labour relations through encouraging a partnership between the employee and the employer, while at the same time strengthening the Labour Department's resources as well as the Labour Law to deal with those parties in the public who choose to disregard fair labour practices.

As mentioned in the Throne Speech by His Excellency the Governor, plans for labour in 1995 include assistance with the completion and implementation of a Manpower Development Strategy, amendments to the Labour Law to increase its effectiveness; the appointment of a Minimum Wage Advisory Committee to determine the needs for setting a minimum wage (and I believe that we have arrived at that), and a review of the 1964 Workmen's Compensation Law.

In regard to the minimum wage, we believe that there needs to be something done, especially in the hotel section, that is hotels and condominiums that I am talking about. How can we expect people in this day and age to work for $3.45 an hour?

I believe that there are several situations that we can look at to address that matter. One might be that in the off season those people are paid a higher minimum wage when the gratuities would be less, and in the high season the minimum wage would be less because of higher gratuities.

We are addressing this matter of gratuities. We passed a Law, but there are people who are still not doing the right thing. The difficulty that government has found (and I might as well say it here) is that we had a man in government who was not interested in doing anything about checking the books. We do not have an auditor in the Labour Department, or an accountant. When we asked the chief accountant about doing something about it, we were refused because he said he did not believe... I should not say the chief accountant, the Accountant General, the one that has gone—

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, you have now exceeded your four hours.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I am winding up this debate for Government. Under Standing Order 83, I ask for the suspension of Standing Order 32(6) (I think it is) to complete my debate.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 32(6)

The Speaker: The motion before the House moved by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture is requesting under Standing Order 32(6) to be allowed more time to complete the winding up, or the conclusion of the debate on the Throne Speech. I shall put the question. Those in favour, please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES (AND 1 AUDIBLE NO)

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.
Please continue, Honourable Minister.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 32(6) SUSPENDED IN ORDER TO ALLOW THE HONOURABLE MINISTER RESPONSIBLE FOR COMMUNITY DEVELOPMENT, SPORTS, YOUTH AFFAIRS AND CULTURE TO CONCLUDE HIS DEBATE ON THE THRONE SPEECH.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I thank the Chair and I thank the indulgence of the House.

The Throne Speech was a very long Throne Speech and many areas had to be addressed. The Opposition drew in a lot of matters not connected to the speech which the government felt had to be addressed. I am winding up on the Motion.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, I think it is twice that you have said that other matters not in the Throne Speech had been drawn up. It is a customary thing in Commonwealth Parliament that in the Throne Speech other matters can be brought in. So that does not forbid them from doing so.

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you very much, Madam Speaker.

The Accountant General did not believe in gratuities and did not do anything to address that situation.

The Honourable Financial Secretary and his staff have now employed someone who is going to be able to specifically check the books for these gratuities and also to check the books for the avoidance of accommodation tax. I believe that is going to help the situation because I know, as the country knows, there are people who are—putting it bluntly—stealing gratuities that do not belong to them, and they use it to help run the services of the business.

The Department of Labour is also going to explore suitable apprenticeship schemes for implementation on a pilot basis. Enhancement of the job placement system, as well as the extension of technical assistance to help the unskilled secure and retain suitable employment is also proposed.

There have been calls for assistance with the so-called "unemployable." There have also been calls for increased vocational programmes for those in our work force that may need such training and assistance. The department has recently acquired a television monitor and a VCR in order to host small groups of unemployed persons or school leavers and will show videos on subjects such as interviewing skills, work ethics, career development, skills development and so on. This is expected to be launched soon.

The department's new thrust in 1995 will lead to significant improvements and achievements in these priority areas. Based on the increased activity we have seen in the labour sector, particularly with regard to ignorance of the law, unfair dismissal, bad practices, and conditions of work in some firms and industries, it is obvious that we must carefully monitor our labour sector so as to avoid ugly incidents and to maintain smooth labour relations. Therefore, I am supporting 100% the hiring of one additional labour inspector to enable the department to increase the frequency and scope of workplace inspections as well as to increase the awareness of the Labour Law amongst employees and employers. We are hoping that these preventative measures will minimise the frequency of labour disputes and reduce the amount of labour hearings by the department.

A law alone will not take care of the situation. There is not much that government can do about a person's personality. There is not much government can do about people who believe that people must just work for them and that the employee is just an employee and not a person. We know that there is the other side of the coin—employees who are very, very unreasonable and they believe that they can come to work at any time, that they can loaf as long as they want on the job, spend as much time as they want on the telephone. When you go to work for somebody, you have to do what the employer wants you to do. You cannot expect to hope to find a job that you can do as you please. In every situation in life there is always somebody in charge, there is a boss. They cannot expect to keep running to the Labour Office every time some little thing happens on the job and say that they want this person thrown off the Island. We have progressed too far for that.

On one side of the coin there are people who have to bring in people from the outside to ensure the type of personality they are bringing into this country. We have too many cantankerous persons of and when those two personalities clash, there are bound to be problems. So we know that we are going to have to bring in people, but they must chose carefully the type of people they bring in and tell them when they come in here that they are not coming in forever. So they do not have to come in with the belief that they are going to run a Caymanian out of a job that he is already in, that is, if they are coming in below the Caymanian.

The Labour Department has improved its communication with the Immigration Board. This is only sensible because labour relations and manpower development cannot operate in a vacuum—there must be close collaboration and coordination with the Immigration Board with respect to the granting and renewing of work permits if we are to successfully deal with the challenges in the labour sector.

The Labour Department is being strengthened in order to play a better role in the implementation of Cayman's manpower development and training policies and strategies. However, if we intend to address the long overdue matter in a sensible and comprehensive manner, we must face the facts that sufficient new resources and increased coordination of existing resources will have to be the order of the day.

Honourable Members will recall that I recently provided an update on our manpower development exercise currently underway. In answer to a parliamentary question, I outlined some of Government's concern and policy statements on the important matter of manpower development and training. I also provided information on an Advisory Committee and its terms of reference as well as the committees' recent survey of private sector employers. For years there has been much concern expressed about the absence of consistent training policies or programmes and career development paths for willing and able Caymanian manpower resources.

I have always strongly believed that we need to be forward thinking in regard to labour relations and manpower development. Any country that has as many work permits as we do, representing a significant percentage of our working population, as well as seeing an increase of qualified and experienced Caymanians in our work force, must view the issue of training and succession planning—the manpower development of its people—as an area of strategic importance. If we are to ensure that the Cayman Islands economy develops in a sustainable fashion, that is, where our people feel that they and future generations will benefit from Cayman's economic development, our people must be developed to their full potential so that they can be equipped to play a better role in our economic development.

The feeling of being a beneficiary of our economic development will allow our young people to have a greater sense of belonging and commitment in the development of our island. Similarly, if our young people feel that they are appreciated by their employers—not only through the paycheque, but by other means—that they are given the opportunity to prove that they are capable of upward mobility, then they will be more productive employees and citizens as well as making a positive contribution to continue labour tranquillity.

I need not remind this Honourable House of how damaging a unmotivated and depressed workforce can be to economic development and labour relations. It is in the interest of everyone—employers, employees and Government included—that we view training and manpower development not as a burden, or an unnecessary cost, but, instead, as an investment on something which is crucial if we are to continue to enjoy the Cayman Islands as the best place in which to live or conduct business.

We know that there are not enough Caymanians to fill all of the vacant posts in our economy, and we also know that due to gaps in skills, that is, a shortfall in what is needed compared to what skills are available amongst Caymanians. We also know that there are Caymanians who have a less than desirable work ethic and attitude to work, these are all-important challenges which we need to address in our manpower development exercise which is now being conducted.

I want to make it clear that Government's intention is not to Caymanianise posts in the private and public sectors in an ill-informed fashion, or within an unreasonable time frame. It is abundantly clear in Government's policy that the Caymanianisation of positions in either sector is for competent Caymanians. People will not be promoted simply because they are Caymanian, but because they are competent and willing to work hard so as to develop themselves and their careers in order to make a positive contribution to their employer and the community in general.

Our economy is based on the delivery of services. We have very little export product at this time. It is therefore imperative that our employees are developed and motivated to provide the best services in order for these Islands to remain competitive in the global marketplace. There are, however, undeniable and well documented cases of unfair treatment and insensitivity to the upward mobility of some of our qualified and/or experienced and willing Caymanians. This type of approach must stop. Managers and supervisors in this country must be informed without a doubt that their responsibility must include ensuring that Caymanians are trained and developed in order to assume a level of responsibility that they are capable of, in accordance with clear, consistent, and properly monitored career paths.

The degree to which an employer trains and develops his Caymanian employees should not depend on whether a particular manager supports this type of approach, because when that manager is no longer there those initiatives fall away. What we need to encourage in all businesses above a certain size is the development of clear and consistent written policies and training, promotion and career paths and so on. Everyone will know what the policies and expectations are, and these will be consistent, instead of contingent upon the conviction of any one particular manager.

It must be fully recognised that a country as small as ours produces professionals at a rather slow rate, simply because of the availability of manpower in smaller numbers comparatively speaking. Also because it takes an individual many years of study and hard work in order to qualify at some college or university in his chosen field.

While these are some of the hard facts, it must also be borne in mind that what has so far accounted for the harmony in our small country is also due to the fact that Caymanians at many levels have been able to benefit and prosper from the growth and development of our own country, as we all rightly should. Surely, it is not expecting too much, nor can it be considered unreasonable, for a young energetic and qualified Caymanian, after gaining a certain amount of experience, to eventually replace the person for whom he or she is the second in command and who is a work permit holder. This is and must be the natural course of events in any small developing country and the Cayman Islands should be no different. This is the way I feel that it should be within our Island.

There are some companies doing business here that have given many workers every opportunity to move up the career ladder. In fact some companies have expended large sums of money in training Caymanians to fill responsible positions in their organisations. I sincerely take this opportunity to commend those companies for so doing.

But up until this morning, I was confronted as the Minister for Labour with a situation where a qualified Caymanian applied for a position that was advertised and she was told that that job would not suit her. I am going to look into it because what we need to do is have the Immigration Board say; "If this Caymanian is qualified, yes they may not be able to get immediately into your office practice. That takes some time. You tell them and you show them what you expect. But if they went to college to train as an executive secretary, do not tell me that they cannot be a personal assistant to the manager." Do not tell me that!

It is time that it be recognised that nobody is going to use this country as a base to bring in, or import people out of the United Kingdom, out of Canada, out of the United States, or out of Europe, because those places are having a hard time in their labour areas. If they have unemployment and we do not have Caymanians to fill the position, bring them in (I have said this) by the dozens if need be. I am all for that. But when we have a Caymanian who goes abroad and trains and works hard and did not even get a scholarship, but worked with his own money out of his pocket and trained, they must get the position above and beyond any other situation in this country. I have said that I—and I repeat again—believe that the companies, whatever work they are doing . . . and if they need work permits, if it is a law firm, give it to them; if it is an accountant firm, give it to them; if they are doing mutual funds, give it to them. We cannot expand our financial base in this country unless there are people—and the sooner all of us get it into our heads in this House that if we want to continue to grow in the financial industry, or in any sector, we are going to have to allow people in. once—always that rider—once there is no Caymanian, then they can do so.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, proceedings will now be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.40 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.08 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture, continuing.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I recently led an official delegation to Bermuda (in late January). One of the areas we looked at was that territory's labour and immigration, that is, work permit policies, and institutional and regulatory systems. There are many similarities between Bermuda and Cayman, except that Bermuda now wants to go independent and Cayman does not want to go independent. This is also the case in areas of training and manpower development. We do have similarities.

Both countries appreciate that there is some inadequacy in the efforts that have been undertaken to date. They are making some renewed efforts to come to grips with this problem and to develop fair and lasting solutions. They are restructuring the Labour Department and formalising better and more effective communication between labour and immigration in regard to labour relations, establishing time for work permits, and the monitoring of the conditions which have been attached to the grant or renewal of particular permits.

In Bermuda, work permits are recognised as more of a labour matter than one of immigration. The Labour Ministry and Department have greater involvement with the Immigration Board in the granting and renewing of work permits. They also conduct a Labour and Manpower survey every year and these are used to provide guidance to government and the Board in granting work permits and business licenses and the renewal of both.

Their work permit and Immigration computer system are more advanced in that it allows for flagging of work permit conditions and the generation of computer reports which are used to facilitate better monitoring and tracking by the Labour and Immigration staff.

Bermuda issues long-term work permits, but these are accompanied by conditions and monitored by the Immigration and Labour personnel under normal circumstances and the annual renewal of these fixed long-term work permits are handled administratively.

Like Cayman, Bermuda is also actively exploring methods of strengthening the policies and institutions in regard to training and manpower development. I have been convinced for sometime now, and I agree with others who also have concerns in this area, that the present system may not be adequate to articulate and enforce the manpower development and training for the 1990s and beyond. It is almost impossible for a voluntary board to handle the volume of business, that is grants and renewals of permits, business licenses, status, residency—they cannot!—and do justice to this very important subject of manpower and training as it relates to work permits. It is unrealistic to expect the Immigration Board, with a small support staff, to effectively deal with the volume of business and growth of complicated issues in the day and age we live in, as opposed to what may have been practical when that situation was created.

They cannot do it and we will never have the situation we want, and it is no use for Government to create manpower and training laws and create guidelines and then leave the Immigration Board set up the same. It cannot work on a voluntary basis when there are only two, three, or four staff members there. It cannot.

I believe that Cayman's existing system, that is, Immigration and Labour, must be streamlined in the short term to improve the communication and coordination, the efficiency and the implementation of Government's training policies. There is no use having the group of people that we have on the Manpower and Training Advisory Committee to make recommendations and that situation exists with Immigration.

Recommendations expected to be presented by the Manpower Development Advisory Committee in June will suggest initiatives of a more long-term nature. I hope that by September or November I can have the Manpower Development and Training Law of the Cayman Islands brought to this House.

One short term solution, I believe, is that our Immigration directives which are now in draft form should have guidance for the Board and employers when advertising vacancies, such as, stating the name, the title of the job, the name and address of the employer and the salary range. If Caymanians have applied for the vacancy the employer should submit the name of the applicant and the qualification experience and background and the reasons why the applicant was not successful and a copy of the refusal letter and interview report of the Caymanian applicant and a copy of the job description and the expatriate applicant's resume, if an expatriate was hired.

The network between Immigration and Labour should be more intimate. In January this year a Labour Department representative attended the board meetings in accordance with the Immigration Law, which was not done before. Improved communication and joint monitoring of conditions may be useful in interim measures.

The designation of term limits for categories of jobs for work permits and the establishment of reasonable conditions for training and Caymanian succession should significantly reduce the routine workload and paper flow of the board. With proper guidelines of policies and succession conditions much of this routine work can be handled by the existing and additional support staff in the Labour and Immigration infrastructure.

It may be time to consider the formation (and this is something that we will be recommending to government) of separate boards or units for the variety of matters that are now dealt with by the Immigration Board. For example, there could be a Work Permit and Training Board, a Trade and Business Licensing Board, and a separate entity for Immigration, residency and so on, matters.

As provided for in the Immigration Law, there should be more involvement in the work permit process by the Planning Department and the Public Service Commission (Personnel Department). This would ensure that the impact on labour for new development projects and new business licences is fully recognised and anticipated. These are recommendations that I will make to go into the draft guidelines so that the public can have some input on it. But it needs to be changed. The situation is not good and in this day and age it cannot continue.

The Government has done quite a bit on training of our young people. I pointed out the areas for training that exist at the Community College. But in other areas as well, Government has done well. In the student loan scheme, in just over eight years (from 1984 to 1988), just over $1 million was loaned out on student loans. In our two years (1993-1994), we doubled the student loans to well over $2 million. We are not hearing anything about this in the press. Yet, they say we are not doing anything for young people. What are some of the things that young people are doing?

A student loan of $20,000 is financing a study programme leading to an associate science degree in Child-care Centre management in Florida. That is one course. A programme leading to a certificate in Automotive Technology in Florida also. These are but some of the loans that we have approved in many areas—teaching, the different sciences, for those people who prefer to go to other universities, like the University of Tampa. But you are not hearing about this.

In less than two years, we have doubled more than the previous government did: yet we hear that there are no opportunities for young people in Cayman (according to the Opposition). According to the Chamber of Commerce this Ministry is not doing anything and has not done anything.

I had to look at the magazine called The Caymanian Executive and read what some of the young people are saying. This is the question to all of them: "Are opportunities for young people good in Cayman?"

The answer by one Phillip Patrick Wood: "Opportunities are excellent for young Caymanians. As our country continues to develop and mature the time is right for young Caymanians to position themselves for growth in their chosen careers. Young Caymanians have a wide variety of industries to chose from as well as many opportunities to become entrepreneurs. Caymanians, especially young Caymanians, should be encouraged to seek higher education and to commit themselves to gaining the necessary work experience needed in order to qualify for top management positions in their chosen fields."

I go on to another one (there are several): Roy McTaggart, President, Cayman Islands Chamber of Commerce: "Are opportunities good for young people in Cayman?"

"I believe that opportunities are excellent for young people in Cayman provided that they are willing to commit the time and sacrifice that are necessary to obtain right education qualification and experience."

Janet Hislop, Training Manager CIBC: "Are opportunities good for young people in Cayman?"

"Yes, more than ever. There are fantastic opportunities for young Caymanians who apply themselves. Although we live in a small community, it is very sophisticated and most career fields are present. There are, in fact, more jobs than there are Caymanians to fill them. I have found that most employers are anxious to employ qualified, capable Caymanians. So if young people apply themselves, the opportunities for good careers are there."

And to the young man who was just sworn in this morning, "Are opportunities for young people good in Cayman?"

Joel Walton, Deputy Financial Secretary, Government, Cayman Islands: "Yes. Even though the range of opportunity is not as diverse as in other countries, the high quality and complexity of the two major economic sectors, financial services and tourism ensure that good opportunities are generally available to persons who are willing to work and study hard."

Another young man, who I have a lot of respect for, Daniel Scott, age 32 (and I should say that that is roughly the age of all of them 29,26,35 that age group): "Cayman is a well developed and well respected financial centre. As a result of this reputation the financial industry continues to grow at an unprecedented rate. With this level of growth the opportunities in the financial industry for young people are plentiful and diverse."

Lisa Arch: "Yes, there are many opportunities for young people in Cayman. Cayman is growing in leaps and bounds. It needs the fresh ideas and the vigour of the indigenous population to be involved in that growth process." Another young lady that I have a lot of time for.

Here we have Mr. Burns Conolly, age 36, Managing Director of the Burns Conolly Group, an architect in interior design. "I believe that there are great opportunities for young people in Cayman, primarily because of the strong economy. As the economy continues to develop at such a pace, there are many windows of opportunity that will appear in every industry. In this growing market should also prove fairly easy to achieve an annual increase in both growth and market share provided that one is performing well."

I read these to show that the Opposition is talking nonsense and certainly the Chamber of Commerce could not have polled these individuals. Here we have qualified indigenous Caymanians saying yes, there is a lot of opportunity. As I pointed out, there is opportunity in the Cayman Islands to go abroad if one has to, but more so at the Community College, and all of us need to say that down the line wherever we are—in Church, from the Choir, straight to the political platform. We need to encourage our young people.

The more people who get up and say nothing is happening, these young minds will be saying the same thing and feel there is no opportunity. There is good opportunity for Caymanians and the government is doing quite a bit to assist.

Children and young people will also be the beneficiaries of two pieces of legislation to be introduced in June to replace the Juveniles Law, which has long needed attention. The Children's Law will promote the welfare of children and hopefully make it easier to both prevent child abuse and deal with it effectively when it arises.

The Youth Justice Law will provide for better management of cases of young people in trouble. Input has been sought widely in the legal/judicial fields, from the courts, judges, the Association of the Justices of the Peace, and a process of public consultation is to commence shortly in the course of which we will go to the districts to generally familiarise the community with the ramifications of the Bill.

I hope that people will come out and talk to us about these two laws.

Other community development efforts include physical infrastructure as well as social programmes. In terms of the former, that is physical infrastructure, we expect to build on the first stage of tackling housing needs by conducting a survey this year which will hopefully assist with assessment of the needs at the low income and indigent level as well as to determine the extent of so-called tenement housing. Appropriate policy responses could then be developed.

All along we have been assisting people through the Social Services Department, those that the Department knows about, with their indigent housing needs. Each district where the Social Services has been informed of need, Social Services tackles it as best they can.

The feasibility of a sewerage scheme for the George Town Central area will be examined and action taken to address the disposal of effluent from local marine craft. This is the work of the Water Authority.

Efforts will also be made to implement a public water supply system for East End this year, which I should say has the lowest rainfall on Grand Cayman and where there is keen demand for such service.

In terms of social programmes, two of the more significant steps to be taken will be the survey of the status of the Caymanian family and the eminent employment of community development officers. In a field where sound policy development is hampered by lack of research, the study of the Caymanian family should prove most helpful to our understanding of changes in roles and relationships within families. This should, in turn, lead to more accurate prescriptions for action to strengthen the family.

To begin with, there will be one community development officer each for West Bay and George Town and the Eastern Districts taken together. They will be expected to assist the Community Development Action Committees and to serve as the day-to-day contact between the social services department and Churches and voluntary social services and youth organisations the country.

It is anticipated that they will help to promote and firmly establish the after school and time-release programmes which have been initiated and not yet widely taken up. Their work may also prove important to other programmes previously mentioned, as well as to a new undertaking thus far only mentioned in our Ministry's Departmental Plan. I refer to the proposed Annual Best District Competition. Elements already in place, such as the heritage days and agricultural show, and other elements could include the proposed National Youth Festival.

If a district base was utilised for the competition, intra-district sports competition, which we expect to see emerge from the new coaches employed and the proposed Youth Parliament which would have a district base and be judged on debates on issues of public interest.

Another element would be the best-kept gardens, that is, private gardens and public places. This Best District Competition would do much more for civic life, both in terms of sparking interest in public affairs and engendering greater interest in the affairs of other districts and thus engagement in the life of the country as a whole.

I believe that the hiring of Community Development Officers is a good move for Government, one that has been long promised, and lip service paid to with nothing done. Thank God, we now have that in place.

All these actions and programmes are being put in place for Community Development and Youth Affairs and still we hear that my Ministry did not do anything for either.

What about the after school programme? We now have a total of five churches or institutions involved in after school care programmes. These are programmes that are very much needed when children are out of school and the parents are not yet home. They can be assisted with their homework, a computer lab and a library, music—these are some of the things that are being taught at the Cotton Tree Bay Church of God After School Care Programme.

There is one at the John Gray Memorial Church at West Bay; Cotton Tree Bay Church of God, Cayman Brac; Elmsley United Church; Faith Pentecostal Fellowship; Rehoboth Centre. In all of these we have some 108 children registered or enrolled in Cayman and 30 in Cayman Brac.

How much is this? $60,000—that is all it takes. We are encouraging other churches to get involved.

We also assist the churches with their youth workers. Another programme that is good, yet you hear that we are not doing anything, and that the Ministry has not done anything and it is rated the lowest. Politics, Madam Speaker, politics is what that Chamber of Commerce review is all about.

I want to turn to another area, the proposal for district libraries. Libraries are an important part of the life of any community. They provide the tools to enable parents to help their children to learn. If we want parents to be better equipped to assist their children we have to assist them in many ways. The George Town public library serves its purpose and any day you go in there you find people from the business sector utilising the library for their own benefit. That ought to say something to us about the usefulness of a library.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town questioned whether we would be using the Town Hall. I say to him that there is no need for us to use the Town Hall as a library since we already have the public library, the only library we have in George Town, situated at least 100 feet away from the Town Hall. The George Town Library will also be upgraded.

I want to thank the Third Elected Member for George Town for her management as Chairman, and her committee members for their hard work in the management of the library. She is doing a fantastic job, she is capable, she has the interest of children at heart and she is making many recommendations for improvements in the library and also for the museum, which she chairs.

So when they ask what is she doing, she is doing her part for this country. She also works her local MLA office, so people should not criticise for the sake of criticising by asking what she is doing. She is playing a very important role in the management of those two institutions and I thank her very much from a government point of view and from my Ministry as well.

We had a request from the First Elected Member for Bodden Town to not turn the Town Hall in Bodden Town into a public library, but to utilise the clinic. The clinic is an upstairs building. I do not know whether the first floor is big enough to subscribe to the needs for a library for a growing district like Bodden Town. I will not throw his suggestion out the door, but I would say that it is time that they utilise the beautiful Community Centre they have. The more they use it the more that the community will get used to it. But to let it lay there simply because they can use the Town Hall, which is more central is not good enough. I will be discussing it when the time comes with as many people as possible with people in Bodden Town and I say again that I will not throw out his suggestion.

District libraries are very much needed. I know that in this day and age, some children can get some books. I buy a lot of books because I read and I buy a lot of books for my children. But there are those who do not have enough resources at hand and there are those who cannot afford to buy books and they have to travel from their district to George Town to the library. Sometimes the school libraries assist, but a community must have a library because it is an integral part in the life of a community.

Its educational support can assist students of all ages with homework and research projects. I want to see a modern library service in each community in this country and I hope to get that done in as many districts as possible before 1996.

Cayman Brac has a nice library that was provided by the community and government assistance. I know that they will utilise that fully.

We have heard mention of the suggestion of a Cadet Corp and a young offenders programme and I would say that you have heard from the opposition that we would give young offenders guns in the proposed regiment. First of all, the young offenders will not be in the regiment. But, in answer to that (which is a bunch of nonsense) I would say that the police have cadet trainees for many years, and the police have an armoury. Has this ever presented a problem? I think it is just hot air by the First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

I believe that his answer to the regiment is to use the special constabulary. I would say that the special constabulary does a good job, but it is not really intended, nor is it equipped to assist with much more than the management of large-scale social events.

I believe that the Cadet Corp would be a valuable addition to the range of dispositions available to the courts in dealing with young persons, as well as an enhancement to the various programmes of life skills being taught in school. This is accordingly now under review by the Ministry.

To their answer that we do not need a regiment, I would not say that. The Governor's Office will deal with that more adequately. But, do we need a Japanese blueprint for that too? If this is the measure of intellectual capacity and organisation skills to be used, then my Ministry will be found lacking.

I can never forget the heaps of criticism and accusation made against me for purchasing the Hawley Estate for a rehabilitation centre. They even brought back a motion to stop it and to use that as a venue to criticise me. The Hawley Estate which is now being developed by the Minister for Health could only cater to a certain category of young offenders and this is what the First Elected Member for Bodden Town had to say, that they are going to give us that rehabilitation centre when they get into office, which the National Team would not give the country. That is where they are going to send the young offenders.

But that is only one kind of young offender, what about other young offenders? We are only trying to find areas to deal with them. Happily, things are getting better in the country socially, and I will show that in regard to juvenile crime.

In regard to what has been done by my Ministry, many programmes and facilities are in place. Government made a commitment for the total development of sports. Throughout the year there have been several programmes and a good cadre of local coaches. My Ministry found it necessary (through advice of associations in our sports seminars and general expressions of need over the years) to upgrade facilities in the districts on a national level. We feel we are well on the way with this aspect of the programme and we have now launched our efforts to upgrade the level of technical expertise available locally.

With the employment of technical directors and coaches, starting with two gentlemen, Mr. Bernard Schuum, for football, and Mr. Victor (Voot) O'Garro for basketball. I want to say thanks to the public for their support and to the players and voluntary administrators. We are most appreciative of local coaches such as those mentioned in debates, Mr. Gilly Seymour and Coach Morgan and others who have held things together over the years and their continued support will be vital to our continued success.

Thanks also are due to Mr. Jeff Webb of the Cayman Islands Football Association and Mr. Toni Scott the Cayman Islands Amateur Basketball Association, as well as the Cayman Islands Olympic Committee and the President of CONCAF, Mr. Warner, for their help in securing the services of these technical directors. Both technical directors have international experience and a depth of knowledge in their respective sports. Their charge is to advise and articulate a comprehensive programme of development in their sports to train local coaches and to select according to agreed criteria and coach national teams. All of these activities must be pursued within the ambits of the broad policy objectives for sports, as outlined in our policy statement.

We also hope to move Mr. Andy Myles, who is already teaching cricket (we have put cricket in the schools) directly as a coach for cricket and we also have the intention to hire someone, who has been recommended as a coach for netball. Government is agreeing.

We have done well in Cayman Brac. We have provided lighting at the playfield of the Brac high school and some work and maintenance of playing fields. We have purchased the Lazzari property including the pool, parking, school and community play field and additional land for further development, which already has a cement slab for possible development of a hard court. Some research is being done on possible sites for a new community field and a building to house indoor sports. So there is work being done in Cayman Brac.

It has been said that stones are only thrown at trees that bear fruit. My Ministry, as well as this government, is producing. So I expect my detractors to throw stones at me, however my Ministry and this Government intend to continue to produce so that these Islands will see our good works.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank the many sponsors and volunteers who assist us with our sports programme. I would like to encourage more to assist us and I would particularly like to thank the Lion's Club, which has assisted with the development of swimming and indoor hard court facilities in the Islands. Also the Rotary Club of Grand Cayman Central, who assisted in providing the lights at the Bodden Town Primary School play field.

My Ministry has met with this club to discuss with them the building of a youth centre in George Town and we propose to utilise the building by the old teachers' cottage by the Annex for a youth centre for George Town and the Rotary Club is helping us with this.

I would like to issue an invitation to the Opposition to join forces with the Government to provide facilities and programmes that will give our young people an alternative to say "yes," so that they may become productive, well-rounded citizens, willing, ready and capable to make their contribution to the future development of these Islands.

I saw recently where the First Elected Member for Bodden Town said that he believed sports was going good. This is a major turnaround from where he was a few months ago when I was so heavily criticised. I know that he knows better, it is just that he is on the wrong side of the fence. He can make a contribution—he has made a contribution and he should get away from the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who is continually carrying him down the drain. And, making it worse, joining forces with Ezzard Miller.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister, will you be concluding your speech within a few minutes, Sir?

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: No, Madam Speaker. I have one more area and that will take at least 15 or 20 more minutes.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.41 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, the last area in my Ministry that I want to deal with is the Cayman Islands Marine Institute. Before I get into that, there have been calls about the crime in the country. It shows that the efforts of the National Team have paid off, although we took over a very sorrowful state of affairs. No one can say that our investment in more police, in the police boat, in the new task force and in our investment in the dog programme for interdiction, that these investments have not paid off.

When we look at the Police Report for 1994, it says that; "with the exception of drug offences it is gratifying to report a reduction in almost every category of crime. Of particular significance is the drop in reported burglaries from 765 in 1993 to 595 in 1994. It remains to be seen whether this overall trend will continue but the enhanced police resources now available are impacting on the crime situation in a positive manner." So, no one should give the impression that Cayman is overrun with crime or that the police force does not have the resources to deal with it. That is a wrong impression for the Opposition to give.

In dealing with the Marine Institute, it is a very positive and moving programme for our young people. I remember the criticism that was heaped upon me in the Finance Committee by the Opposition about the Cayman Islands Marine Institute. The role of the institute is to provide cost-effective solutions to problems in the areas of juvenile offender rehabilitation and education. To achieve these goals, residential and non-residential programmes have been developed, as well as more intensive programmes for serious offenders. The programmes' success is based on the use of motivators whereby performance must proceed rewards. These procedures have been found to be highly successful in the classroom and within vocational training programmes.

In addition, all the students are exposed to exciting marine or other environmentally related study programmes. The Marine Institute programme recognises the Caymanian way of life as well as the legal and educational base found in this country. The programme designed by the Cayman Islands Marine Institute is reflective not only of the particular needs of Caymanian children, but also draws on the experience of the adult generations in terms of their seafaring tradition and our marine heritage.

The modern commercial links with the sea in terms of scuba diving and sports fishing are also recognised by the institute and our young people are getting a good education in that area, some have even found employment through the institute.

I have been criticised for the expenditure on that institute and I remember that the Opposition would not vote for the programme. But we believe that these investments are paying off and statistics tell us that the investment in the Cayman Islands Marine Institute, sports projects, and other programmes for young people are paying off.

The newspapers have not published this and the Chamber of Commerce has not mentioned it either—they say I have not done anything. But when you look at the Juvenile Court statistics, you find that in 1992 there were 335 juveniles convicted from the age of ten, Madam

Speaker; four children age 11; eight children 12 years old. What were their convictions? They were convicted for the possession of ganja, all of these 335 cases. Eleven were convicted for possession; 14 were convicted for consumption; four for possession of cocaine—that was for 1992, and for burglary, there were 118 convictions of young people.

Immediately upon taking office, we started to highlight the problems. The community started to get involved and we had the Professional Business Women's Club out there talking about the need for parents to do more and the need for the community to get involved and my Ministry was having a gigantic push on young people's problems. We found at the end of 1993 that there was a decrease to 206 juveniles convicted. The age group went down to 11 years old; two convictions (two children). Possession of ganja went down to nine. Possession of ganja with intent to supply went down to one. Consumption of ganja went down to five. Possession of cocaine—zero. Burglary went down to 56. Yet you hear that we are not doing anything. That is 1993.

For 1994 what do we find? After all the efforts we made, the number of juvenile convictions went down to 164. And the age group dropped from eight years in 1992 to one child aged 12 in 1994. The convictions for ganja possession—five. Consumption of ganja—zero. Possession of cocaine—zero. Possession of ganja with intent to supply—zero. Burglary—16. Sixteen, Madam Speaker, from the high of 1992. Yet you hear that we have not done anything. Did this all happen by itself?

It can be clearly seen that careful investment in quality programmes brings results.

They say that I spend too much money. I want to show that we are not spending half enough because we must acknowledge credit where credit is due. The fact is that beginning with the high peak of juvenile criminality, which we took over in 1992, and using that as a base (for that is when our responsibility for management started), from that high peak, juvenile crime has decreased. We are not saying that it has gone down to the extent that we are complacent, because our efforts are only now being intensified.

But, we are saying that when you are coming from the high peak of juvenile crime in 1990, 1991 and 1992, where it had reached 335 to now 164, with the statistics I have just given . . . you must pass through various regions of different heights before you come to the place you want to be.

Juvenile crime has decreased through action taken by this Government; through programmes being put in place by my Ministry; by the schools doing what they can to assist. Yet, we have the self-appointed leader of the Opposition criticising the Marine Institute—all kinds of propaganda was spread, all kinds of questions trying to say someone had a share in it. It is a not-for-profit organisation.

I say that the Marine Institute is working in spite of those who say that I have done nothing for the youth. It is not only working with the 25 young people, but it is working with their families and juvenile crime is down.

You had the Opposition not voting for the programme, but here is what they said in 1992 about the problems of young people. I want to quote the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, who said: "On the question of youth services I find that much needs to be done. It is one of our biggest problems now, the problem of youth. We do not have facilities to properly take care of them. These are various suggestions as to how it can be done and, certainly, one that I do not subscribe to is taking our youth and sending them to the United States in a completely different culture where it might work out to be like $100,000 per year per child. I cannot agree with that, I do not agree with it.

"I firmly believe that the Government, this Government or whichever Government that might come about needs to address this problem by building a facility or facilities where troubled youth can be offered the type of environment of home. Most of the troubled youths do not get the proper home environment and home environment is such that we cannot expect to find people who have families and are doing their best to survive in our type of society now to take on troubled youth and take them in an adopting type of fashion and deal with it. We cannot expect that so we need to make every effort and great and heavy priority needs to go in this area." [Official Hansard Report, 26 February 1992]

Madam Speaker, that is what the Marine Institute is all about—working with young people in the Cayman Islands, in our environment. It is working not only in the institute but with follow-up for three years, that is what is important. Yet, they do not support it, they have not voted money for it.

In regard to how much money we spend, I just want to say that politicians give lip service to preventing children from becoming criminals, but not much money or effort has been put in place. What we have had over the years is mostly anti-crime focused, to put money into the police and into prisons. We emphasise prevention programmes for children, so that they do not wind up as convicts and prevention starting at an early age has always been the most rationale and cost effective approach.

What we have from my Ministry is a comprehensive coordinated approach for families in trouble, extensive after school programmes, improve prevention of teenage pregnancy and stronger efforts to prevent drug abuse.

I say that we have not spent enough money because what we have spent is less than 2% or 3% of the National Budget for 1993 and 1994 put together. We have only spent on infrastructure development less than $4.5 million. When you compare what we have spent for police from 1984 to 1992, we spent for police and prisons a total of $72 million. This government is spending from 1993 to 1995 (three years) $36 million. We need to put money in prevention. And we should stop being wimps and put more of the money into prevention, otherwise we can build a prison in East End, Cayman Brac, North Side and West Bay, and the prison system will never be large enough for the multitude of young criminals.

Prisons are necessary for violent and hardcore prisoners who should serve their full sentences and the police are necessary. What I am saying is that we need to put more money into prevention and if some of this $72 million had gone into young people we would have had less problems today than what we have now.

Madam Speaker, before I close, I want to highlight some of the programmes that we have accomplished. We have created the Community Development Action Committees; we have bolstered after school care programmes; there is a new housing programme with some 35 new mortgages (just in seven months); we have created a National Youth Choir; we have created the summer camps; we have created the Marine Institute; we have created a guaranteed student loan scheme because Caribbean Development Bank would not fund us—and it is not good taking the suggestion of the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman talking about putting $1 million a year, that cannot fund it either. What we have is $1.5 million from the private sector where Government will guarantee regardless of which child or which family it comes from. That was not the case before, Madam Speaker, you had to belong to a special family, you had to be on the right side politically, to get scholarships or loans. That is not the way it is now. In two years, we have more than doubled what the likes of Ezzard Miller did.

We have created the Order of National Heroes, and they said that was the wrong thing to do, the wrong person to give it to—but I am glad we did it. I would like to say that the next one should be a woman and I hope that there can be some recommendations made to my office shortly about which woman should be the national hero.

We have provided community workers for the districts. We have done well, we have got the ball rolling on sports and we are completing the George Town Sports Complex. That will be opened next Sunday at 4.00 (the 9) and I hope to see all Members there. The public is invited to be there, there is going to be a football match after the grand opening between our National Players and the Bahamas National Team.

We have created the Young Parent Programme. We have increased activities in the Museum and the Archives. There are numerous on-going programmes, such as the Scouts, CASA, the Church Work/Youth Workers and many others in the district and nationally which my Ministry supports in one form or another.

How can anybody say that I have not done the work that has been charged to my Ministry? The Chamber of Commerce and their biased review—politically motivated review—should hang their heads in shame.

We have all done well. Each Minister of the National Team Government has pointed out where we have made accomplishments in our two years. Nobody can say that the country is not in a better position today. No doubt, we have problems, we still have traffic problems, but like the Minister said earlier, he is tackling those problems as best as he can with what resources he has.

Do not talk about the confusion junction, or whatever they want to call it. That was not the Minister. Put the blame where the blame is. When he told them to do something and they said “No,” that “they were going to do it their way,” what do you expect?

In spite of all that, each Ministry—the Minister for Communication and Works has done his part for this country; so has the Minister of Tourism, and the Minister of Health (although starting off late, he is doing well with what he had to face). We cannot do it all in the first term. We must get a second term! We will push for a second term and we will get a second term from the people of this county. I know it! It is in the air.

In closing, I wish to say that we face problems. But to understand the full scope of our challenge, we must keep in mind that there is something more at work in these Islands that is more profound than the Opposition's propaganda in the country. It is what Mario Cuomo talks about in the New York Proposition, that is, traditional values.

Over the years, this country got carried away and we forgot about the human equations and the aspect of well-being in life. Today we hear the question: What is happening to our families? We hear about the loss of respect for authority, the loss of discipline and for a sense of obligation. What about the values we hold as a people? The question of traditional values is being eclipsed by so many other issues that are so minor. That is too bad, because it is a fundamental question. So, we all must do more to retain these values. We must make clear what defines us as a people, what basic values and ideas tie us together loosely enough to allow us a full measure of individual freedom, but firmly enough to make us one united powerful people.

All the ideas, all the programmes the Government is offering are geared to reflect these values and principles. Those principles reflect opportunity. That is one. The next principle is responsibility. It means our basic duty to comply with the law and we should each tell our constituents this—young and old alike—it means the obligation to work if you can; it means understanding that if you bring a child into the world you should care for it and by the same token if you can you should also care for the parents who brought you into the world.

Responsibility is also ours as government. It is a government obligation while living within its means to fulfill its duty to help those people who have no one else to care for them.

Of course we have problems, serious problems, but I do not think we can claim that they are insurmountable. It will take time, but the hard truth is that if you and me as Members of this House do not succeed, it will not be because of a God who denied us the fruits of living in a blessed country. We are living in a blessed country. If we fail it will be because the leaders in this House, in the churches, in the schools, in the civil service and in the private sector and the community at large, chose not do their part by refusing to face our problems honestly and unselfishly, to make the hard judgments we require without distorting the problems as they exist, and without propagandising the problems. We must not lest that happen.

So, I ask one and all in this House, in this country, to work together with a full heart, cooperatively in order to give the Cayman Islands the progressive government and continued prosperity that our people deserve. The last word in this, Madam Speaker, these principles of the government are family and it describes the simplest most logical, intelligent, rationale for coming together in this House and in our community—we need to share benefits and burdens for the sake of all, reasonable, honestly, fairly. We must therefore act out of compassion, but not just out of compassion, out of enlightened self-interest as well. We cannot make it as a people if we lose a generation of our children to drugs, or AIDS or inadequate social infrastructure or if we are constantly locked into fighting and tearing each other down.

We cannot make it without understanding and believing in the idea of family because business cannot survive without labour, because no man is an island—no country is either. We are charged with the duty to get this country as close to these ideals as we can. Let us, therefore, put our shoulders to the wheel—whether it be in this House, or in our communities or in our own home—let us all do our part. We live in a blessed country where there is no starvation, where there is no famine or flood, where God has blessed us. The whole Cayman Islands needs to be thankful and should always be aware of what we have as given to us by Almighty God. There are those who constantly put this country down, criticising everything from government to the churches. But, we have a blessed country in these Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, I thank you, I think the House for its indulgence and I hope that I have cleared up some of the misconceptions and propaganda as spread by the Opposition. Let us all work together for the good of the Cayman Islands.

Thank you.

The Speaker: That concludes the debate on the Throne Speech delivered by His Excellency the Governor. As there is no question required for conclusion, that terminates that issue.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, on a point of procedure.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I was wondering whether it would have been in order for the Standing Orders to have been suspended today, as today was Private Members' Motions day, and seeing that the debate continued on and there was no suspension.

The Speaker: I think the suspension took place when the Throne Speech first began. It was suspended until such time as the debate was concluded. So that covered today.

We will now proceed to Other Business, Private Member's Motion 1/95 Establishment of Office for Women's Affairs. The Elected Member for North Side.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 1/95

ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE FOR WOMEN'S AFFAIRS

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I wish to move Private Member's Motion 1/95 Establishment of Office for Women's Affairs, standing in my name which reads: "BE IT RESOLVED that Government give early consideration to the establishment of an office for Women's Affairs."

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I humbly beg to second that Motion.

The Speaker: The question before the House is Private Member's Motion 1/95. The Motion has been duly moved and seconded and is now open for debate.

The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: In presenting this Motion today for the Establishment of Office for Women's Affairs in one of the Ministry's of the Cayman Islands Government, I would like to repeat the words of one verse from Norma Hardy's Women's Creed. It reads: "We affirm the story of women as the story of humankind; food gatherers and farmers; child bearers and teachers; pioneers and policy makers; needle workers and textile makers; homemakers and factory workers; parents, scientists; doctors, housekeepers and economists; givers of live and creators of art and thought; unpaid hidden workers at home and paid members of the work force outside."

I feel that the words as quoted in this verse are very befitting to the women of the Cayman Islands. In years gone by when our men went to sea, we filled all of these positions here. We were left at home with the children and the women of the Cayman Islands worked toward making the Cayman Islands what it is today.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I have always supported the equality of women inside this Honourable House and elsewhere. This Motion before this Honourable House today is being put forward to ensure that women are given every opportunity to grow and contribute to their full potential in the development of these Islands as we enter the 21st Century.

Having attended Commonwealth Parliament Association Conferences prior to being elected to this Honourable House, and since, and going overseas and constantly being asked which Minister dealt with women's affairs in the Cayman Islands, and being at a loss, having to say that it is not attached to any particular portfolio, they could not believe that an affluent society like the Cayman Islands has no Ministry responsible for Women's affairs.

In a global context, every United Nations conference held in the past three years has stressed the need for women to play an active and full role in the development of their individual countries. The United Nations has adopted two declarations that speak directly to women's issues, namely, the Convention on the Elimination of all Forms of Discrimination Against Women and the Convention on the Elimination of Violence Against Women.

The United Nations has appointed a focal point on women's human rights to the Centre for Human Rights. All of these appointments are leading up to the Fourth World Conference on Women to be held in Beijing, China, in September of this year. At the conference to be held in Beijing, a global plan of action will be formulated which will provide the blueprint for increasing the participation of women in development and eliminating violence against women and their human rights and infringements against the woman.

Most of the regions in the world have prepared national surveys. In the Caribbean a regional report has been prepared on the status of women which will be presented at this conference in Beijing.

One great concern to me is that all Caribbean countries have carried out national surveys and have presented reports which would be condensed into a regional report to be presented in Beijing. All Dependent Territories have also carried out this national survey and the Cayman Islands is the only Dependent Territory not presenting a report to be included in this conference in Beijing.

I have to ask why we have not been involved? I come to one conclusion: Past governments in the Cayman Islands have not really looked at or taken a position on women's issues and, therefore, the policy has not been addressed specifically in the Cayman Islands.

I know one reason for this is that it is quite possible that this parliament has been filled more or less by men in the past. I am not saying that the men in the Cayman Islands do not have the problems of the women of the Cayman Islands at heart. But sometimes it takes a woman to put forward the things that affect women and they do it much better than the man because he is afraid that he may be called soft.

If we walk down the streets in the Cayman Islands and ask the common man in the street if he feels that the women in Cayman are being discriminated against, his answer to you is going to be no. He will refer to the women in the judicial system, the women in this Parliament, prominent women in the government to make his point. We know that, and we are thankful that is the position in the Cayman Islands today. But, what we are forgetting is that thousands of women out there do not realise that they have rights in this country, have nowhere to turn to because this system does not provide an advocate, does not provide an education, and does not provide any help for those women who cannot help themselves or who find themselves intimidated or controlled by the males in their lives.

The purpose of this women's office is first to raise awareness and increased consciousness of the various aspects of women's issues, and to highlight those areas in legislation, health and safety which need work, so that the status and quality of life for all women in these Islands can be improved. When I say all women, I speak of the women in Cayman Brac and Little Cayman as strongly as I speak of the women in Grand Cayman.

In setting up this office, I would ask the Government that they strongly look that that some arm of it, through some part of Government in the Sister Islands is set up where the women of Cayman Brac and Little Cayman can have access to have their problems dealt with.

The terms of reference would include the promotion of women's health and welfare, the creation of a legal framework favourable to women, liaising with other women's groups.

The Cayman Islands prides itself, and rightly so, on living in an enlightened society. The women in the Cayman Islands have historically played a very important and major role in the early development of these Islands. It could be that for this reason we have never been exposed to the blatant sexual discrimination often observed in lesser-developed countries.

I would say that the women in Cayman enjoy more or less the same benefits as the men in most parts, the privileges and the benefits. The women in Cayman have come a long way since 1959 when we were given the right to vote. But there are still several things that need to be dealt with, and must be dealt with, in a professional manner.

The one plus that this portfolio will have is that the Cayman Islands is not starting from scratch in tackling issues affecting the women. We have several groups in the Cayman Islands who offer help and support to women. The Government of these Islands makes a significant contribution to childcare in the form of preschool grants. When the reception class was removed from the government system where these young children had to be placed in nursery schools so mothers could go to work, the National Council of Voluntary Organisations is a leader in providing child care from birth to school age and aftercare programmes. We heard the Honourable Minister speak about the after school programmes that will be provided in all of the other districts and I commend him for this.

The one area that I feel Caymanian women have done exceptionally well in, in the past is education. We can speak of numbers pursuing further education overseas because it is the one section of government that carries statistics male and female. As we look at those every year, the number of females going overseas for extra study is increasing.

But, while I am dealing with statistics on education, I think it is time that statistics be put in place by gender in all departments of government so that we can constantly have the results of what is affecting women and what is not affecting them so that we can deal with it in a proper manner.

The one concern I have with females going overseas for further education, and I feel this must stem from the Schools' Career Office, we do not have too many females pursuing courses in science and technology. It is still the normal teacher or nurse. And I say it is time that we depart from this sort of thing and allow our female students who are able and capable of pursuing further education in the sciences and technology to take part, get scholarships to do this.

In the Cayman Islands we are more fortunate than a lot of our neighbours in that we have an excellent public health programme for ante- and pre-natal health care. We have an excellent immunisation level that protects the children from preventable diseases.

I am extremely happy to see that the Government has filled the post of Genetics Counsellor, which has been vacant for too long. This is a very important area of public health, particularly to women.

It can be said that many Caymanian women are involved in public life. They sit on and chair boards and committees. But I think it is time for more of our young women to become more interested and involved in public life and become members of these boards and committees. For what is happening now is that the women that are service on these boards and committees are the ones that are doing it year after year and if younger women became involved the strain on the same persons who serve year after year could be alleviated.

Women have done well in the civil service. I think it was back in 1988 that we had the two first female permanent secretaries appointed and I think as it now stands, women occupy something like 50% of the permanent secretary positions.

Women are well represented in middle management of the civil service, and the one concern to me (and I have the figures from personnel, but not here with me today) is that there are something like 236 females filling temporary positions whereas there are only 12 males. I ask the question: Why? Why is it that the women are on temporary appointment? I have answered that question myself: The majority of these appointments were done prior to the removal of the discrimination in the General Orders against women. Hopefully, now that this has been corrected, the Honourable Chief Secretary will look into it and see why so many women are filling temporary positions in the civil service.

I am pleased to know that the discrimination against female officers in the General Orders was removed, with the support of this Honourable House, in 1993. The condition of service for female officers is greatly improved because now they can feel that they are equal to their male counterparts.

I am thankful that the Cayman Islands has two very strong female representatives today. I would hate to see the day arrive in the Cayman Islands ever again when there are not women sitting within this Chamber.

I am very pleased (and I am certain that the entire female population of the Cayman Islands is pleased and proud to know) that the first Speaker of the Legislative Assembly of these Islands is a strong and capable woman.

If this Motion only succeeds in focusing more community attention on issues affecting women and when the responsibility to women's affairs is put under a Ministry as a subject, we will need the involvement of all sectors to ensure that areas of need are dealt with in a partnership and in cooperation.

I would like to make it very clear that this Motion is not being brought here by women liberators, or feminists. We want this to be dealt with and carried out in a partnership with our males. I have attempted to set the subject of women's issues on an international, regional and local context. All withstanding, we must face the facts that many issues of concern to women are not being addressed in the Cayman Islands today. This is the prime reason for the setting up of a women's office to act as a focal point for information; to advocate for and to coordinate efforts to improve the status of women and the quality of life for women; and to increase awareness for us as a community to address the issues that particularly relate to women, which have so far not specifically been addressed.

We are simply seeking the information and education to allow our women to become more involved in the development of our community and to be effective advocates of those issues, the improvement of which will lead to a better quality of life for our children, our families and ourselves.

I will first of all deal with the lack of concern in our community as far as issues affecting women are concern. We need to focus on the additional services and support which we need to enable our women to carry out their God-given responsibility as mothers, grandmothers, sisters, wives and daughters. We are the primary caregivers in this world to our families.

The time has come (in our humble opinion) to increase the public awareness on the issues affecting Caymanian women. It is time to increase the individual woman's consciousness that she has the responsibility to be informed and aware of the issues which affect her life, her health, her livelihood, her education and her peace of mind, which will in turn help her to make good choices in her personal and social relationships.

One of the most vital issues affecting the women, not only in the Cayman Islands, but also in the world, relates to our health. Cervical and breast cancers are among the top ten killers of women in the Caribbean. Yet, the Cayman Islands has no mortality rates broken down by gender. It is to be hoped that the Honourable Financial Secretary will listen to our need for statistics to be kept by gender and have the Statistics Department, or all heads of departments, do something about the way statistics are kept.

Unless we can have statistical evidence to show diseases that are posing the biggest threats to the women of these Islands, we will not be able to address them. I feel that with HIV, AIDS, STDs as rampant in the world as they are today, it is time that sexual education be placed in the curriculum of our schools and I will say (and maybe I will be brought down in the debate by some Member) that it is time for sexual education to be placed next to Math and English. We can no longer continue to sweep it under the carpet and not expect have severe effects by not teaching our children.

In regard to cervical cancer and breast cancer I feel that the need is here to have national screening programmes offered free to all women under public health. We know that the facilities are here now. But, the majority of the women that are making use of these facilities are the women who are educated to know of the need for such screening. I feel that we need to carry out public campaigns and programmes to include those thousands of women who are not aware of the need to have constant mammograms taken and the only way we can do this is through educational programmes for women.

Going back to screening, I do not feel that screening is outside our present capability to be done in our district clinics. If the necessity arises that we have to have mobile units as is done in other territories (I think it is also done here with dental), then let us do it and help our women become aware of the diseases that affect them so they can have some sort of prevention with the proper screening (mammograms, pap tests).

We need to look into our labour legislation and put something in it because when the public was made aware that this Motion was coming before Parliament, I had a tremendous number of telephone calls from women who have become pregnant on the job and have been treated badly because they are pregnant. Their bosses will not speak to them. It is as though they are being forced to resign just because of their pregnancy. This is very unfair, it puts an extra unfair burden on the woman and it should not be allowed to happen in these Islands. They do not say it is because she is pregnant, but they make it so hard she decides it is time to get out for the safety of her unborn child—not because she feels that she will be physically attacked, but because of the mental strain and the unhappiness in her job.

I feel that maternity leave must be increased. I feel we must look at increasing the number of weeks for maternity leave in our Labour Law.

In a recent report out of England, which will be presented to the Fourth World Conference in Beijing on Women, I noticed that in England the law gives women the right to a minimum of 14 weeks maternity leave with pay, with a maximum under certain conditions of 40 weeks.

I know that a lot will be said, that this is a product of their social security legislation and we do not have a similar legislation in this country, but we need to put some quantum on the importance of peace of mind—that a woman will know that her job is protected while she is at home with her infant in those first few crucial weeks of her child's life.

I am looking forward to the new legislation being brought forward to this Honourable House by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture, which addresses children and which will be of crucial importance to the parents in the Cayman Islands.

I implore the parents that when this Bill is brought forward that they will take time and study it and make their views known to their representatives in this Legislative Assembly. It does not make sense for us to bring legislation, put it out to the public, and once it is passed into law, parents come and say we should have done this and that. I am saying take time out to study this Bill and make your representations known.

I am also happy that the Justices of the Peace are studying the Bill and now it relates to matters coming before the Juvenile Bench.

The other matter that needs to be addressed, is the matter of teenage pregnancy from a health angle. I had the opportunity to attend the formal opening of the Joyce Hylton Crisis Centre a few weeks ago. I was so impressed with the young ladies that are in that programme, some of them I know from my district and since they have been into this parenting programme, they have become so mature, as far as the care of their young children is concerned. They speak of their babies now with happy faces because of what the Young Parenting Programme has taught them and how to care for their children.

The Honourable Minister is to be commended for brining the Joyce Hylton Crisis Centre into reality along with his Social Services Department.

I said a while ago that I felt it was time that sex education was put into the curriculum in our schools. The sex education curriculum includes moral consideration, the value of family life and the responsibilities of parenthood. I implore the Minister that in developing a national curriculum that the family life education would be one of the priorities and would be developed along with the academic subjects, not after the academic subjects.

The Health and Education Department needs clear guidelines as to how to handle the issue of contraception and teach about it to our teenagers. In this day and age, we have to take an enlightened view of informing our young people about contraception.

When I was growing up—many, many, many years ago—one of the worst disgraces that could have happened in the Cayman Islands was to have been a single mother. But we have reached a stage where having a child outside marriage is no longer the worse thing that can happen to any young girl. The teenagers in these Islands must have the information necessary to make responsible decisions about their personal and sexual behaviour.

I am certain that there are many women who would rather know that their daughter . . . and I am not preaching that having a child outside marriage is right. I am also not telling the young people out there to do it, but I am being realistic. Having a child would be much less to them than seeing one of their young daughters dying of AIDS or something else.

We know that we have family planning clinics in George Town and I believe that these are used regularly. We know that our women have the option of going to these family planning clinics or they can go to their own doctors for advice. I am a very strong supporter, and I think the Honourable Minister for Health is aware of this, that it is time that we take health care to the district clinics and I believe that this is one of the things that he will be doing. I hope that in his upgrading of the district clinic of North Side it will be done during the present life of this House because. If it is left until this House is finished, I have every reason to believe that I will be returned as the Member for North Side (we do not know what can happen) and I feel that if more men are returned to this Parliament that things which affect women, like having a clinic where they can go and deal with their problems, will be put on the back burner. So I implore him to have the North Side Clinic upgraded before 1996.

Madam Speaker, as you and Honourable Members of this House are aware, on my very first debate on the Throne Speech, I spoke about the priority of a facility for our mental health patients. I stress that again today because women tend to need this facility more than men. We tend to suffer more from depression and some of this could be caused from menopause and I feel that much of this depression could be lessened or eliminated if information and education on the different treatments available were made to women.

I am happy to know that the Cayman Counselling Centre will still be focusing some of its time on substance abuse treatments, but I would ask that this be strengthened where programmes of family counselling including support groups such as incest survivors, rape counselling and co-dependence counselling can also be offered.

I will touch briefly on social services. The need for the provision of improved social services to women and children is crucial to the continued development of any country. The situation as it now exists in the Cayman Islands of non-payment of maintenance by fathers who are absent or by fathers who refuse to pay, in my humble opinion is nothing short of a disgrace.

The complaints by numerous women who have been awarded maintenance by the courts, but who are unable to collect because there is no machinery for its collection has been one of the biggest issues that Members of this Honourable House, especially the Lady Member for George Town who brought a motion to this House that something be done to revise and review the laws. Urgent consideration needs to be given to the creation of a child support agency, which will provide the means to ensure that absent fathers pay for the maintenance of their children.

When many people hear about women's issues, immediately they think of domestic violence. Domestic violence is one of the issues and the main issue facing the women in Cayman, the Caribbean Region and the world. It has become such a big issue that the United Nations has made it the subject of a convention. At this point in my presentation, I would like the Honourable Attorney General to investigate whether Cayman needs to take special action to accede to this convention because I am not certain that it extends to Dependent Territories. If he would be so good to let me know at some future date whether it is automatically extended to dependent territories.

Domestic violence is on the increase in the Cayman Islands. We saw this in a headline by the past Commissioner of Police that it is on the increase. But I am totally shocked at how he has come about the figures on the increase of domestic violence.

Prior to bringing this Motion here, I checked with the Police Department. I asked if they could give me some numbers. The person who spoke to me told me that all they could do was go into the computer and pick out what they think is domestic violence. I say that this situation is no longer acceptable to the women of the Cayman Islands and proper statistics must be kept of any criminal activity or anything else which affects us.

We have heard for many years that if there is a family quarrel or family fight, the police cannot move in until someone is actually physically injured. We will no longer accept this, Madam Speaker. The most important thing in responding to domestic violence is the need to respond immediately. The women and children need to be removed and protected first, then the offender needs to be dealt with by the law.

In speaking on domestic violence, there are many women in the Cayman Islands today who live under intolerable conditions because they have no idea as to where to turn, or who can provide protection for them, even on a temporary basis. I feel that the women of this country are entitled to much more respect. I would hope that the Government (and I know that my Government, the National Team) will look into these needs as early as possible.

We need better statistics to be kept, we need to hear from the women what types of services they need and want. The NCVO and the Business and Professional Women's Club have long been advocating a home for battered women. I feel that this home is needed and is needed now. I would say to the Government before they take on a project such as this, that it be properly planned and executed. A needs assessment should be done and let us see the shape of the beast. Let us see what we need and provide the facility according to our needs.

At this point I would like to challenge the non-governmental organisations, such as the Business and Professional Women's Club and any other organisation, to hold a forum on domestic violence, whether it be on radio, or television, and let us hear the women themselves tell us. Let us let them tell us what is happening, what they feel can be done to help them.

These two organisations have for some years manned a crisis line so they are aware of the women out there who are hurting and who have nowhere to go. The women that are struggling with domestic violence in the Cayman Islands do not just come from one group or one bracket of society—they come from all.

It is not only Caymanians, but Caymanians and expatriates. They live with abuse daily. When I stand here and speak on issues affecting women, I know I use the word Caymanian. But when I speak, I speak of all women in these Islands. We all know that there is one thing that can keep a woman's self-esteem at its lowest and keep her down trodden, is when she is unable to participate in her own community because of domestic violence.

In bringing this Motion to this Honourable House we have done a lot of research and I would like to just mention briefly, and ask this Honourable House to make what as known as zero tolerance of domestic violence a goal for the Cayman Islands in the 21st Century. We have papers on the zero tolerance publicity campaign against domestic violence which was started in Canada and is now being used in most major cities in the United Kingdom. If this motion does no more than contribute to programmes for reversing the trends and wiping out domestic violence in this country, it will have accomplished something worthwhile.

You have heard me speak of the criminal justice system of these Islands in my debate on the Throne Speech. I would say that because of fear of being rapped on the knuckles by the Judicial Branch we need to review our sentences for crimes against women. We need to look at sentencing policies for indecent assault on women where they exist in other parts of the world and compare ours to them.

It does not make sense of our boasting that the Penal Code raises the age of consent for women to 16 if, as we have seen happen here just a few weeks ago, a man can defile a 14 year old girl and get six months in prison. In my humble opinion that is an insult to the young girls and women of the Cayman Islands.

In the United Kingdom the maximum sentence for indecent assault on women is ten years, while the maximum penalty for rape, sodomy, and wounding with intent to do bodily harm is life imprisonment. Do we feel that the people of this country value their mothers, their sisters, their daughters, and their wives any less than the people of the Mother country? I say no.

We all know and have heard of the crimes that have been committed in this country against women and children and they have gone unreported, thrown out of court or dealt with leniently by the Judicial System. Again, the Court needs clear sentencing guidelines and the police need good practice guidance in dealing with abuse and domestic violence.

We all sit day after day and glue our eyes to the O.J. Simpson case now on television. We in the Cayman Islands do not want to wait until we have a Nicole Simpson incident in these islands. Progress in the Cayman Islands has brought every other evil to our shores. Before we have a major incident, I feel that we should have prevention programmes in place and the proper support and counselling to deal with it.

When I speak on this particular crime against women, in my opinion, a lot of people inside and outside are going to be shocked. I do not want to be an alarmist, but when I tell this Honourable House that there are men in this community who are stalking women with intent to injure, you would say to me that it is unknown in the Cayman Islands. It is not! There are women who live with fear of threats by their husbands, their boyfriends, and they have nowhere to turn. The time has come for seminars to be held on how women can protect themselves from violence and how to recognise the signs of abuse. We need opportunities for women to learn self-defence and the women in Cayman need to understand their legal rights and how to access them.

The Speaker: Would the Honourable Member wish to take a break now? Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 4.02 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.20 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

The Member for North Side continuing the debate.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

We in the Cayman Islands are fortunate in that the Government and the private sector are doing many things for the people of these Islands. I can say without fear of contradiction that the Cayman Islands is still a beautiful place to live and raise our families.

We cannot relax and say that everything is being taken care of. We have to try to stay one step ahead in preventing problems from arising. I feel that one thing that is happening is that the services that are being offered are not coordinated. The Motion seeks to promote and coordinate the various services that are in this island for women.

At present the Business and Professional Women's Club is carrying out a survey on the status of women. The office that will be taken on the women's affairs office will then be in a position to offer assistance to this club to make their survey an instrument which is valid, their sampling adequate so that when these statistics are brought about they will mean something and have a useful purpose.

If one is going to quote statistics and surveys, they must have credibility. They can only serve a useful purpose if they are properly designed and tested prior to taking them to the public. If these things are not done they become a means to provide a biased and self-serving point of view. We are all aware of what just happened recently as demonstrated by the Chamber of Commerce survey farce.

The type of survey that we need done to show the issues affecting women and what can be done about them, I implore the Business and Professional Women's Club and the Member under whose responsibility the women's affairs office will fall in doing this survey, please do not follow the example of the wasted time of the Chamber of Commerce.

When this survey is done, it must be a survey that proves the statistics and gives that office something to work from, not something that would be thrown in the wastepaper basket.

The purpose of a women's office in one of the Ministry's of Government is to increase public and governmental awareness of those issues of particular concern to the women and also to highlight legislation health and other areas where more work needs to be done to improve the status and quality of life of the Caymanian woman.

I would like to stress that this Motion is not recommending creating more bureaucracy or setting up another Government department. The Women's Office does not provide the services women need, it is more or less a clearing house for education and information making the women of these islands aware of where necessary services can be found and advocating on behalf of women on the issues which affect them.

The terms of reference of the office include working with health personnel to promote women's health and welfare, cooperating with the Legal Department to create a legal framework favourable to women, liaising with women's groups and organisations and supporting them in projects and programmes, interacting with other women's offices regionally and internationally.

One of the first activities needs to be the research into the status of the women in the Cayman Islands and communicating the results of these findings to the general public.

Activities of other women's offices, or women's desks, as they are known in other areas in this region have included the establishment of a women's study section at public libraries; coordination of a law reform committee; establishment of regular seminars to Police officers to sensitise them to issues of violence against women; radio programmes on women's issues and publications of various pamphlets on issues of concern to women, such as AIDS and domestic violence.

Women's Offices in many countries coordinate a campaign called "16 days of activism against violence" celebrated in November, which focused on ending the physical, sexual and emotional violence perpetuated against women and girls.

The Women's Office in the Cayman Islands will take part in implementing the platform of action for the Caribbean region, which is presented in Beijing in September, which has been developed out of national reports of all Caribbean and Latin American countries.

I would like to be specific in terms of setting up costs of this office. Most of the other small countries have set up their offices with one member of staff as administrative, or here for example an assistant secretary, or senior secretary within the Ministry. This might not be ideal, but it would be a good start, as long as this person is committed to developing this office and promoting the interest of women.

In conclusion, I would just like to say that I trust this motion will have the full support of all members of this House. I sincerely hope it will not be seen as a trivial matter, or a motion that will only be given lip service or surface acceptance. I trust that the Honourable Members will see this Motion as I see it—as a landmark decision that will contribute to the quality of life for all of us.

As I said in the beginning, this Motion is not intended to be divisive. Nothing will be accomplished if we focus only on the needs of women. Rather, we should focus on improving the status of women as an improvement to the lives of our children, our families and our society in general.

I am asking no less than full cooperation and commitment from the Government on this Motion and I have no reason to believe that my Government will not give me this. I also trust that my debate has focused their interest and their support and that unanimously members of this Honourable House will resolve to create a women's office within a Ministry of the Government without delay.

Madam Speaker, I commend the Motion to establish a Women's Affairs Office to this honourable House, and humbly ask for their support.

Thank you.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: It is now 4.30. May I ask for the Motion for the adjournment of the House?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I inform the House that tomorrow we will continue with Private Member's business after a suspension of the Standing Orders, if that is necessary.

Accordingly, I move for the adjournment of this House until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House adjourn until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 P.M. THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 31 MARCH 1995.

FRIDAY
31 MARCH 1995
10.07 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Elected Member for North Side to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen. The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated. Order. Proceedings are resumed. Suspension of Standing Order 14(2), in the absence of the Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture, the Honourable Minister for Health, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2), that Private Members' Motions may take precedence over Government Business.

The Speaker: The question before the House is that Standing Order 14(2) be suspended in order that Private Members' Motions take precedence over Government Business. I shall put the question: Those in favour please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Order is accordingly suspended.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE OTHER BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

The Speaker: The debate will now continue on Private Member's Motion No. 1/95—Establishment of Office for Women's Affairs. The Honourable Second Official Member.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 1/95

ESTABLISHMENT OF OFFICE FOR WOMEN'S AFFAIRS

(Continuation of the debate)

Hon. Richard H. Coles: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I want to address a couple of issues that the mover of the Motion mentioned in her opening speech. They are first of all, the United Nations Convention to which she referred and the issue of domestic violence, and to perhaps give a perspective on this from a law enforcement point of view.

As far as the United Nations Convention is concerned, the Member was not able to give us the full name of the Convention. I took the opportunity this morning of looking through books in my library back in the Administrative Building and with your leave, Madam Speaker, I will refer to the book. Hopefully I have found the Convention to which the Member for North Side referred.

I believe that the Convention to which the Member for North Side was referring to is entitled "The Convention on the Elimination of All Form of Discrimination Against Women", which was concluded in New York on the 18th December, 1979. I am afraid I do not have a copy of the terms of the convention, but I do have a copy signifying the signatories to the Convention.

The United Kingdom ratified that Convention on the 7th of April, 1986. (In fact, most ratifications were around the years 1984 to 1986). Perhaps I should explain the process for ratifying United Nations Convention and how they get applied to dependent territories, particularly the Cayman Islands. It is certainly not normal for a United Nations Convention to automatically extend to dependent territories. But sometimes if the United Kingdom is advised in advance of signing the convention itself, it will sign the convention in a way that enables it to be extended to dependent territories as and when the dependent territory wishes. Sometimes that territory will signify its wish to be included right at the outset, and so, when the United Kingdom ratifies, it does so on behalf of the dependent territory as well. More often that is not the way it is done; the United Kingdom ratifies and includes the ability of the dependent territories to ratify at a later date to have it extended to them.

It would appear that that is the situation in respect of this particular Convention, because although as far as I can see and to the best of my knowledge, what the Member says is true; it has not been extended to the Cayman Islands. It has been extended to some dependent territories but by no means all. I cannot say for what reason it has not been extended here. Possibly because the Bill of Rights is still under consideration. That is what I am sure has an effect on this particular convention. It may be that is why it was not felt appropriate until the Bill of Rights had been finalised. I do not know. Certainly from my information it has not been extended to Cayman, but it has to some other dependent territories including some Caribbean dependent territories. As I have said, by no means all. We are not the only territory that did not get this extended to it.

I wish I could give Members more information about terms of this Convention, but I do not have a copy of it so I am not able to do so. But I thought it might be interesting though for Members to know the process that we go through when conventions are extended.

The other point I want to talk about is domestic violence which is a very emotive issue. The Mover of the Motion talked of the need for increased legislation to deal with this problem. I have to say that I am not entirely convinced that increased legislation is the real answer—certainly not the only answer to it.

The Law at the moment deals with domestic violence in two different ways: one is the Criminal Law which deals with domestic violence in no different manner than it deals with any form of violence. The partner to a marriage who committed violence against the other partner could find himself/herself charged with a number of offences. Those offences could range from common assault, which is probably the most minor type of offences, to the most serious offence causing grievous bodily harm. It would depend upon the individual circumstances as to what charge(s) would be brought by the police against the individual.

The second way in which the Law can assist and deal with this kind of situation is through the civil process. This would require the victim to bring civil proceedings in the Grand Court. Incorporated within those civil proceedings would be a request to the Court for a form of injunction. Now, that injunction could either be a restraining order, for example: restraining the husband from committing acts of violence against the wife, or indeed, against any other individual because it does not necessarily have to be a husband and wife. It could go further than that and the injunction could be mandatory excluding the husband from the matrimonial home. There are various ways in which that can be dealt with and that of course is initiated by the victim as opposed to the criminal proceedings which are started by the Crown.

I have to say that usually the civil proceedings arise out of matrimonial proceedings that are already entrain probably by a divorce, or separation proceeding. During the course of those proceedings an application is made to the Court for some sort of injunction restraining the husband/wife ordering that person out of the matrimonial home (whatever the case may be). So that is how the Law deals with it, but the real problem with this (and I do not think it is the Law's fault that this problem exists) is that for either of those courses of action to be taken and be successful they need in the case of Civil Proceeding someone to bring the proceeding and continue with it. In the case of Criminal Proceeding, a complainant to lay the complaint and continue with it eventually giving evidence on oath in the witness's box in Court: without those ingredients there will be no successful prosecution.

Unfortunately, in very many cases although an original complaint is laid alleging violence in a domestic setting, all too often that complaint is not proceeded with although the police and the Crown may be and are willing to proceed with the charges the complainant (victim) for whatever reason is not prepared to proceed with it. When that happens there is no possibility of the charge being pursued unless the individual who has been charged pleads guilty. It would be essential for the complainant to stand in the witness box and give evidence.

When I say that, I am not criticising the victims—the ladies or indeed the men—but let us be honest: invariably women who are involved in domestic violence are unwilling to take the witness stand in those circumstances. I am saying that it is wrong to say that it is the fault of the Police or indeed the Crown that such proceedings do not always result in cases going before the Court.

In my opinion, the way that this should be addressed is not so much by altering the legislation, but by putting in place within the community some form of support for these women who are subjected to domestic violence. In my experience from dealing with these sort of cases (before coming to Cayman and since being here), there are a variety of reasons why the complaint may not be proceeded with and is withdrawn. Very often it is pressure from outside, from family, pressure in some cases from the perpetrator of the violence. The natural inclination by most people is that the relationship should be saved if at all possible. Bringing criminal proceeding is not the way to save a relationship. Maybe it is the best course of action to take in the circumstance, but it is unlikely although not impossible.

So there is an awful lot of pressure from outside on the victim who has been subjected to violence to not proceed with the case and the initial indignation of the lady from the act that has taken place starts to subside. That is why I think the assistance that is then required is some form of support. What form that support it takes I do not know and certainly I do not believe I am qualified to say that.

I do believe that it is at that stage that the victim needs help, support and guidance as to whether she really does wish to pursue the case or whether she is going to allow it to be dropped. She also needs to understand that without her positive contribution to the case it is not going to proceed.

It is not an easy thing for anyone to cope with, bearing in mind of course that the individual has already been through this traumatic experience. Now she is expected to go through another traumatic experience which is very often the case against a loved one or someone that has been a part of a loving relationship.

So I wanted to hopefully assist Members of the House in understanding that I do not believe changing legislation is going to alter this state of affairs. I really think that is its support, and I would submit community support, that is going to enable women who are subjected to this sort of violence to use the Law and for it to take its course in the proper manner.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Certainly according to my assessment there is a need for the bureau and for an awareness if not, education as put forward in the case by the Honourable lady Member moving the Motion. There was a time in Caymanian society where women (as in most societies), were responsible of many aspects of life within the society. We need go no further than the days when it was a common vocation for most able-bodied Caymanian men to go to sea. The women at the time were the keepers of the castle—so to speak.

As I pondered over the Motion this morning, I wondered if these problems existed at that time. Or if it was the case where they did not exist because we were not accustomed to some of the pressures that we are accustomed to now. Certainly it was harder, but I think in many instances we had a more cohesive unit.

My amateur assessment was that in those days the women had to operate in perfect tandem with the men or else the difficulties involved in the situation dictated that they would not survive as a unit. Certainly they would not be able to survive as individuals. So I have come to the conclusion that if the problems existed from that time, they were certainly not at the levels and as wide spread as they are now.

I think also that there was a different attitude and approach towards solving the problems then, because the society seemed a lot more community and communal oriented; meaning that people were much more willing to help and to intervene and offer support. Now it seems that each one has his problem and there is a reluctance to get involved. Sometimes even between family members, for fear of certain stigmas, and also because people claim that they are busy with their own problems and struggles in trying to survive.

It is interesting that my notion of women in this society has always been one in which they play the more prominent roles. If you consider that we were from the beginning a seafaring people, it meant that the men were absent for many years and so all the responsibilities for rearing the children, keeping the home and managing the home economics fell on the women.

I have always been pro-women in this regard so much so, that I have said that there was a time in this society when the women married the men. The fact that the women were always in the position where they were slightly better educated, I think to a large extent they chose the husbands—the husbands did not choose them. I suppose we have gotten away a little from that now with the dissemination of education and the fact that men no longer go to sea. So one of the breakdowns has come from a perceived rivalry for the position of more importance between the man and the woman.

I think, however, that the women still have the advantage. If you take our society and analyse it on a per capita basis more women hold higher and better paying positions than the men. The men are just now beginning to catch-up and they still have a couple years.

I venture to say that it is interesting to follow up the graduation classes of the schools and see that the young ladies do just as well, if not, better than the men. You have to look at some of the people returning from universities; certainly the men have no advantage over the women as far as being more educated is concerned. One of the problems I believe that has negatively influenced our attitudes and caused us to grow away as men from the respect that we held for the women in our society is the influence from North America. I believe that the influence from North America and the whole business of television has played a major role in changing our philosophy, not only towards women, but towards the family.

If we recognise that West Indian society (men) always had a kind of macho image and added to that, the image projected on television of the male who is important; who must be dominant; who must not share responsibilities; and who is independent has resulted in the compounding of our problems.

I believe, Madam Speaker, that a Bureau of Women's Affairs is certainly a step in the right direction to help us re-focus and to always keep our plane of vision the importance and the absolute necessity for us to recognise, realise, and appreciate the contribution of women in our society.

I am disturbed by the number of complaints I receive from my constituents and from the wider public about cases of neglect, abuse, disrespect. Madam Speaker, these incidents do not necessarily start with physical abuse. They start in most cases with small things; disrespect, failure to live up to one's obligations as a husband, a father or a mate. Then when this is challenged or called upon, it grows because some men have a thing about losing face, sacrificing their pride.

So I think that such a bureau would help us as individuals and as a society to re-focus and to remind ourselves that the role played by women in our homes and society is an important one. I did not realise that the whole problem of neglect and abuse was so serious until I lived outside of the Cayman Islands where for the first time in my life I saw abused and battered women in a home. I can vividly remember the morning that we visited [a halfway house] as a sociology class; I saw women with bruises and disfigurement (like I have never seen in Cayman) as a result of abuse by their spouses.

If one reads the newspaper and listens to reports (including reports from the Court), we have the same kind of phenomena here albeit on a much smaller scale. So definitely now is the time to move to have this redress.

I, too, would hope, Madam Speaker, that there could be some possibility of a delegation from the Cayman Islands attending the United Nations sponsored conference in Beijing this year, even if not as delegates, but certainly as observers. I believe there is much that we could learn, certainly the association and the opportunity for making contacts would be invaluable.

Thirdly, the women of the Cayman Islands would be serving notice of solidarity to the women in the rest of the world. This leads me to say that the whole movement of a consciousness towards the plight of women is a worldwide one. Although, we have some problems in our society we can consider ourselves fortunate to others who have to go through the trauma of fibrillation and all those other things that cause pain and disfigurement and relegates them to little more than chattel. I would hope that we can, through this small step demonstrate to the rest of the society and the world that we are interested in the problems of women.

So, Madam Speaker, let me conclude by saying that I certainly lend this Motion my full support and I would hope that it gets the support it deserves from other Honourable Members in this House.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I rise to offer my comments on Private Member's Motion No. 1/95—The Establishment of an Office for Women's Affairs.

As I look around this Chamber it is clear to me that everyone herein is here as a result of nature's greatest design "the miracle of birth" which is given to women. In fact, all of the human species on planet earth are here as a result of that special creature of nature called the woman. Men as important and as they may think themselves in all the various fears of life cannot procreate his own species—his gender. So I think that the role of women in the Cayman Islands, and indeed, the world, is of the greatest significance.

There is often the argument about the domination of the species and indeed, if there is any domination whatsoever both in numbers (for there are more women in the world than men), and the power to bring about a cessation of the human species on earth lies with women.

In the Cayman Islands women have played a significant role historically. From my earliest recollections I can remember my father as being a seaman and away from home two, sometimes three years. When he did return, it was for a visit of a month or two until such time when he received his call (as it was so termed), which was a summon from the national boat carriers of a shipping company that he should return to crew on a particular ship.

I think my life experience in growing up has been similar to hundreds of thousands of people in this Island—where the mother (the woman of the house) played all the roles. She was the disciplinarian; the home manager deciding how best to spend the money; she was the one who had to go to school to contend with the situation if the child got into trouble with another child and the parent complained. In sickness she was there and when there was a need for comforting it was always the mother—the woman of the house.

I think it is true that it could be said that in the Cayman Islands the influence of the woman is highly significant even in these times. Strangely enough in the Cayman Islands like other countries, there seems to be a disparity in the mental image of most [people] toward the role which women play. For example, it is clear that in the Cayman Islands and other countries the universal adult suffrage or the right of women to vote came about at a very late stage: it has been noted by the mover of the Motion, the Member for North Side as recently as 1959. So it goes to show that in certain areas the significance of the woman did not appear to be extended into the area of politics and their right in determining the political development of the country through the power of vote.

It has always been my impression as well that there has been a mental attitude among the male population of the Cayman Islands that the woman's role was to a significant extent submissive to the male. At least to the extent that the male was to have the last word on most issues and in fulfilling the homemaker's role, the woman did not necessarily see parity with the male in decision making.

This was from the time I was a young boy, and I think it still obtains to quite a degree even now: when males would gather whether it was at the bar or otherwise and joke among themselves about what would happen to them—what their wives would do, if they went home at a certain time. I can remember hearing remarks like, "Well she would get one slap on the side of her head"—which was always an indication that he was boss and would go home whenever he chose.

I think it has largely been a part of our culture that the male has been seen as the person who has certain rights to roam or to be out from the matrimonial home for hours over and beyond the wife. This is something which continues to be a part of our culture.

As we grow and move forward into the year 2000, I personally trust that with all the factors and stresses of life, it will become clear to both parties that equality is a more desirable condition—there is a need for greater parity between a man and a woman. For if whatever reason, it is not in the best interest to be out of the home for long and extended hours into the morning and every night—that is an undesirable condition for both the male and the female. These are some things that are particularly peculiar to Caymanian society as I have observed it in my lifetime.

If we are talking about a situation in having a Women's Desk that will be looking after women's affairs, we need very clearly to understand what we have to attack, be it to change or to amend the way it exists in the minds of both men and women in this community. I did not perceive in the presentation of the Motion that the idea behind it was to gain an upper hand to reverse the roles that I believe are presently skewed toward the greater dominance among men.

A need exists for a parity: an understanding; an education of ourselves to see the good of understanding the individual role between the male and female, and that more can be achieved financially, economically, socially, in a personal relationship.

The Mover, in presenting the Motion, raised various points which to me were quite relevant in the concept of this Legislature looking at approving a special unit, or desk, or persons, or a number of civil servants to look after women's affairs. I would like to offer a few of my own [ideas], and comment on some raised by the Member for North Side.

If we take the situation of sex education in schools—junior, secondary up to the tertiary level—I subscribe to the belief that sex education is something that is desirable in that it has to deal with personal health. The more both genders learn in this area the better it is for the fundamental understanding of the biological functioning of the human body (be it male or female) and the natural, normal interdependence in the social structure of society. Surely it is no more necessary for a woman to be taught about the various social diseases than it is for a man. For if both clearly understand, then each can effectively respect one another in the avoidance of these diseases.

It would also mean that if there were a greater understanding of sex education in this populous, it is very unlikely that the sexual diseases, existing here, would exist. Good logic would teach both male and female how to avoid this type of condition; how to protect themselves against this kind of situation. It all comes back to a mental outlook in the process.

So, while I subscribe to this as being a very necessary part of education for life, for quality of life I think it would be incorrect to look at it as being more necessary for a woman than a man.

Madam Speaker, at this point perhaps I should say that the Caymanian male is at high risk in this country. I do not have the statistical proof of this, but just observing the number of women who are working in jobs other than technical, and those who are achieving success in this society, the men in this society need to be helped as much or perhaps a bit more than the women. The women have proven to be wiser and more responsible, less hasty and they have done more toward educating themselves. They are a more stable entity than the male entity in the Cayman Islands.

If we look on the street today or at the building across from this Legislature we will see few women lazing around in the park and elsewhere—it is men.

[Members' laughter.]

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: True! True!

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: They are employed one way or the other. They are at home doing chores or perhaps a temporary job. But if we seriously look at the situation, the women are out-doing the men and understand that such wasteful life achieves nothing. In fact I am aware of some situations here socially where those men look to the women to give them money and have a meal prepared for them and that is unfortunate. The women should tell them: "Go out and work like I do, then you can eat". It does happen. I just made that point in looking at the situation between men and women in this community. Madam Speaker, I am happy to see that because of the imbalance of the men in this country, working towards more professions and understanding the need for education, and not to be walking around the streets in a tatty manner or trying to lift their quality of life; I think it is good that women are fulfilling that role. It is basically a historical carry-on into these times.

I believe that in any effort where women are getting recognition of their rightful role, women as a necessity for continual communal life need to try and 'pull' along or educate the men, because they are failing to quite a degree in achieving what they could in totality.

I think what is most fundamental in the effort of recognising the role that women play, is in truth and in fact, further education of women in our society. Again, I hope that will extend to the men. For women do have influence on men in ways that a man does not have on another man. Women can persuade. I trust that in fulfilling their greatest success, women and the Women's Desk will see that as one of the things it attempts to do. In the education process, Madam Speaker, I think it is important for women to come full circle and to the furthest degree understand exactly what their innate strengths are.

Although men make all sorts of brags about their strength, and they can be loud and whatever, women do exert over men worldwide in almost every society a persuasiveness—or the ability to ultimately have their way—that it should be secured that way—which is an innate strength as I termed it, which can be used in a way to assist the imbalance in this country.

I think also, there is no question about women not being able to learn, study, or achieve the same levels as men: that is only in a very chauvinistic sexist view of the world today. In doing this, women will educate themselves to the highest degree and this bureau will see to it that there is the widest communication among women in this country to understand clearly their individual rights. There should be and really there is no law which says that there are any differences in individual rights and freedom for women—that women have to submit to men or men have to submit to women. It is a question of parity among the two sexes.

Madam Speaker, I think also that women in educating themselves, understand that there are various defenses in life (verbal defense and physical defense), which are right and proper and have to be resorted to when the situation arises. I think it would be well for the women of the Cayman Islands to get away from any ideas of being defenseless human beings. They should understand that they can physically defend themselves; they have nails they can use to scratch, they have the same access where necessary to a club or whatever. But the idea that a woman has to submit to any violence against her is nonsense. I hope that in the process that will clearly be something that all women in this country understand; they have a right to physically defend themselves.

Madam Speaker, I would never want to see in this society a situation where a male could not admire a female or make a complimentary remark to let her know that he is attracted to her in the proper manner. That is an extreme. I think when it comes to the question of sexual harassment, to my mind (and of course, that is something that is very much mooted around the world today in various societies), there can be lines drawn or definitions to what it amounts to. There are varying views and that is why there are so many cases particularly in the United States [of sexual harassment] where these matters end up before the courts. But I think between the sexes one can arrive at what is a sensible understanding of sexual harassment. Each person I believe has to have some idea of when he is going too far with another person. The male has to understand when he is becoming too overbearing where a woman is concerned, she feels fearful, she is under stress and would rather be out of a working situation simply because the man is making her life miserable. So I think that is part of the education process as well.

I have heard of situations of sexual harassment and most recently I heard one which I think is quite deplorable since it involved certain official connotations. I certainly find what I have heard most objectionable in this particular instance.

Madam Speaker, there are many areas in which women can be educated. To the best of my knowledge indeed, I have a catalog on the United Nations' Publication and it is good to see the number of research papers and textbooks on ways that are recommended as to how women can become an integral and vital parts of a society thus strengthening the society.

Certainly I would recommend to the Mover of the Motion, to the House and to any desk or office that is set up for women to avail themselves quickly and immediately to all these various publications. For I think most of us would agree that the United Nations is a leader in this particular area of collating and collecting and doing research in the matter of the role of women in society.

Civil rights as I have mentioned, Madam Speaker, continues to be something which is important to all of us. I think the most important point that is to be borne out in this country and in any society is that certain rights and freedom are fundamental to the individual, because they protect the individual against what the state or the Government at any given time might attempt to do, which would infringe on the basic rights of persons. So that I trust would be a vital part of any educational process.

The Mover of the Motion mentioned family planning. As I said when I began my debate, without women the human race would cease to be. I believe an understanding of women and the role they play for the continuance of life on this earth is of vital importance. This education should extend to the point where a woman irrespective of whether she has a husband or common law husband who believes that in order to boost his ego he should have 16 children should not necessarily be the role the woman plays. She has a right to determine how many children she wishes to bear.

Here I believe the question of population growth becomes a very serious thing in regards to women. There are those in societies who believe that to procreate is the way to go. Those societies that have too large a population suffer because of this type of situation. I think it is most important that women clearly understand their role in this particular way.

In planning a family the woman has the right to decide how many children she wishes to have; how many she believes she and the father of her child would be able to afford to give the opportunity towards higher education; and improving the quality of life. Family planning hinges very heavily on the woman and she has a right if she chooses not to have more children, not to be badgered or beaten into a position where she is simply giving birth to children. Children who are making her life harder, more miserable, and she is less able to do for them all. These are the types of things I believe could well be done through an office dealing with women's affairs and offering education.

Mental health was also mentioned by the Mover of the Motion. I think that is true. Years ago it would have been quite unacceptable to talk about menopause where women are concerned. In fact, years gone by I am not sure how familiar the word was. It was simply a case where at a certain time in a woman's life her biological functions changed and there were changes in the family and the husband would complain about [her behaviour]. The man does not know, and the woman in many instances does not either. We have moved from those times. I think things such as that should also be vital to the education of women and the assistance of women toward a better quality of life; to understand this biological change to understand the time when this might begin. And that with the improvement in medicine there are certain medications or treatment that help nature to balance itself and lead to improved quality of health for women.

In this time it is known by us, who take the time to listen, read, or become familiar with menopause. There is a change in many instances in the mental attitude or the disposition of a woman. It is all a part of the cycle of life and the knowledge of it can make well for both women and men in this society. I think as a natural course of mental health (or insanity) that does not necessarily sway one way or the other where men or women are concerned.

There are other factors involved. Closely allied to the mental health situation would have to be the woman's health. Again, I think Madam Speaker, that though the situation has improved and there is more awareness, a bureau of Women's Affairs could surely see to it that there is more information regarding the health of women. I know there are many international magazines publishing [articles on women's health]. I know there is one called Men's Health and I find reading these magazines informative. Certainly I am a subscriber because more and more medical scientists are discovering things about the human body and illnesses and no doubt it is similar with women.

Women are different biologically and physically. Each curve or condition where a woman is concerned can actually be related to the particular physical role for which nature has designed. Here again it would surely help men to understand. In part of the process of women educating women, they need to see that their lives can be better managed if they too educate men to whatever extent is considered necessary in the process.

Madam Speaker, domestic violence in this society has become a serious problem. I think there is more of it now than in years gone by. For if I think back to times when I was a young boy, while the man in the house played the more dominant role, I do not recall a lot of instances of domestic violence. In fact, because both the man and the woman accepted and played their roles, the relationships were more loving between the two. Now that has changed considerably.

I would like to suggest that the Women's Desk could take up a more careful look at the movies that are played here in our cinemas. We do have a Cinematograph Board and as the Member just reminded, its members never meet except if there is an application for a theatre. I think it could seriously look at the type of movies that come into this country displaying violence against women.

I am a person who likes to watch action movies, adventure or whatever the case may be, but I am particularly disturbed and disgusted at some of the movies that I see. After a few minutes in trying to get the gist of it I will switch to something else. If I remember correctly there was this movie by the famous movie star Arnold Schwarzenegger, where women were being displayed as cyborgs. To get rid of these particular 'awful creatures' they had to be shot in the face between the eyes with a special weapon which he used to blow them away.

Madam Speaker, that to me was developed by a sick mind. That mental sickness of whoever directed, produced, or wrote such a movie had to have stemmed back from his infancy with violence against his mother. While I like the actor for his action movies, that is one that I really believe did the women of the world little good—even though I understand that he and his wife, who is also a television personality, have an excellent personal relationship.

There are more and more movies that you come across—some of the most repulsive things such as women vampires tearing up the men who have to kill them, by driving stakes into them. It is sick! Madam Speaker, I do not want to call it censorship, but we could talk about the Board getting selective in having certain preference to what is showed here in our theatres. Of course it is most difficult to control it on television, but it is growing more and more gruesome. Some of the scenes with blood and violence are absolutely unnecessary.

In movies showing the inner cities, violence against women is rampant. Referring to them by all sorts of derogatory names is not helping the situation. Madam Speaker, I can say in one particular instance where there was a very explicit movie showing—I think it was Beverly Hills Cops—I was amazed the night I went to the cinema, because I must have been the oldest person there. There were 14 and 15 year olds squealing, clapping, laughing and enjoying some of the scenes. I really think that there are ways in which we can thwart the development of violence.

Nowadays, Madam Speaker, in most of the movies the producers do not even leave anything to the imagination. You get the background music and you hear him and her coming together; it has to be explicit. Nothing is left to the imagination. Long gone are the good days when you got the fade out and every smart child who saw the movie knew—'a-ha that happened!'. Why does it have to be the way it is now?

Madam Speaker, we have a domestic violence law cited by the Attorney General: I think that this is quite a strong Law to put a stop to some of the violence in this society. I believe that what is needed is enforcement. This Law provides that a person can be prohibited from going to the house where the violence occurred. The police in some circumstances may make an arrest without a warrant. I have seen several instances particularly of women with some awful bruises and swollen lips et cetera, from being abused and beaten.

It is also my understanding that there are relationships where the man gets similar thrashing. My position is that it should not be the case either way. Madam Speaker, I think all Members realise the extent to which domestic violence has grown, and again it takes an educational process to understand that it is unacceptable and it is not the way for people to get along and survive.

A man who might believe that he has to beat a woman into loving him or being his faithful spouse is missing the point. I think that women need to be educated in this area regarding themselves. Indeed there is something called the "battered wife syndrome" where it is identified that in families where there is a lot of violence, it is perpetuated simply because the woman in most instances accepts the role of it being her fault. It is a mental condition.

This is something I believe the Women's Desk or Women's Office could direct knowledge and information on a daily basis (I would see this to be a full time job), into changing this situation. It cannot, and will not, happen overnight but surely it can be changed.

Madam Speaker, as I said when I began, I certainly would not perceive, nor could I support, any situation where an office (as has been asked for in this Motion), was one where the women had now to outdo the men. I would perceive this as a situation where women would look to educating themselves in all of the relevant facets of life, towards creating a greater quality of life; to dealing with situations that present themselves which have peculiar relationships toward women; and that such an office would be used to keep women of this country current on affairs that affect women around the world. Not that the women of the Cayman Islands must attempt to adopt a militant attitude because they are being downtrodden.

Let me say, Madam Speaker, that to the best of my knowledge I do not know of any instances in this country where a woman who is qualified is being paid less than a man who is qualified. It may be, but I am unaware of it. Certainly if that does exist I would be one who would condemn it outright. That should not be. Indeed, I think that in our country women are filling vital roles, for example in the field of law and teaching (the majority of teachers in this country are women), et cetera. There are many areas where women have filled these jobs. As I have said, I believe that men are at risk and they should understand and follow the lead of the women in this case to try to educate themselves—to achieve similarly as the women in this country are wise enough to do.

Madam Speaker, an office such as the one being asked for needs to be given clear terms of reference so that it will continue to operate within those terms even if the person heading the office is changed. Ideas will not go off into an extremist view. It would show what the office should achieve. It is very important from day one to set up proper terms of reference.

I see the office as being one that would co-ordinate information coming in from international agencies and route it directly to where it would need to go, (including the Courts Office where there may be need for legal aid to defend the woman). I think such an office should work towards examining the laws or co-ordinating efforts to get women lawyers involved who may see certain need for changes in legislation, certainly bringing in and learning what is happening with international law. I believe that it would be one that would have a serious education programme in place for educating women. Again I say I trust that women will try to educate the men along with themselves, because if that is not done it creates further disparity.

Madam Speaker, I think it is already provided in our Law that—I am not 100% sure—legal aid is provided for women in cases of domestic violence where it ends in divorce: but not only associated with divorce. I think that it should be available to women—married or single. We are talking about violence to the individual and it should not be only to married couples.

Of course the Mover spoke of the situation where there is a very great lack of statistical data on women's achievements in the Cayman Islands. It can surely do us no good and it is doing us no good up until now, that we do not have the necessary statistical data. For indeed statistical data would show what jobs women are mostly employed in. It would show where women have the greatest tendencies of getting involved; and it would provide data to show areas where women may not be involved and could become involved.

Madam Speaker, this Motion is very significant because it brings about a moment in time in this Legislature when things have indeed caught up with us. Indeed it is the first time that there are two women legislators in the Assembly: certainly we have the first Speaker (yourself) who is a woman. I think it is significant that it should come about now. I give this Motion my full support certainly along the line as I have expressed. Everything can go to an extreme and I trust that at no point in time what is obviously an honest attempt to bring focus on a particular social issue, would become extreme in any particular way.

Madam Speaker, I think the Motion is timely and it falls within a sensible educated framework of understanding our society and falling in line with what is an international concept and proven theory that women can and should play a greater role in society; simply because they are women; there are more women than men; they are as wise and capable as men.

I give this Motion my support, Madam Speaker. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, it has been said that "the hand that rocks the cradle rules the world". Certainly this has been so from the time the first man Adam, followed the advice of his woman (Eve). Women have a way in getting what they want either by crying a little harder or smiling a little brighter, but they usually end up getting their way.

One speaker mentioned the worldwide phenomenon whereby there is a move to establish the rights of women and to stop discrimination against them. I personally believe that in the Cayman Islands women never had the serious problems that exist in some countries. For example, yesterday I was reading that in one of the eastern countries the women always walked on the road behind their men. During World War II a visitor to one of those countries said, "Well, what has changed? We see the women walking ahead of you on the road?" He said, "That is only because the roads are mined now."

But our women have enjoyed from as far back as I can remember the advantage of being leaders and being in the forefront of all businesses. I recall in the 1950s in George Town every big business was manned by a woman. The late Mrs. Corrine Thompson was a big spoke in the A. L. Thompson empire; Mrs. Veta Bodden ran the H.O. Merren and Company business; Mrs. Ena Coe was the leading person in the Comart business. Mrs. Thompson ran the Thompson's business and when they changed from selling groceries to the shipping business she was the first manager.

Women played a vital part in the Church—and in fact it is a common thing even now to find that the only people in Church on Sunday mornings are women (sic). In the service clubs and such organisations the women have been leaders for years; the Women's Guild, the Christian Endeavour, the Girls' Brigade, the Girls' Guides and more recently the Business and Professional Women's Club. They have taken the lead in all the service clubs; the Lions Club (and in some of these clubs they have their own organisation), the Rotary Club, the Inner Wheel Club, the Rotorans (a special people who do tremendous work in the club), and the Rotaract Club which is for the younger people (like teenagers to probably age 30).

And to show you how fast they [women] take over a business like this: Only a few years ago Rotary Clubs admitted women and last year's president of one of the Miami Rotary Clubs was a woman. That particular Club which meets at the Omni has nearly 400 members and it is the oldest service organisation in Miami and they had a woman as the President. Now she had to be elected and she was elected by a majority of men, because there were not many members in proportion. So once you give them a chance they show their worth.

We hear all this nonsense today about children being delinquent because they come from a one-parent family. This is all nonsense. My father died when I was two years old and I was raised by my mother. I can tell you that as far as discipline is concerned I did not need but one parent. She knew how to administer that discipline with love so that you grew to like it. The more she put the tamarind switch on you, the more you loved her. Now sad to say this type of woman is disappearing.

The other day I heard about a case where a woman had an eight-year child before the Juvenile Court begging them to take the child [saying] "I cannot control him." That kind of woman should be flogged. But if we look at the roles that women have played in the development of these Islands we can see that women are in a sense, they are equal in intellect to the men, if not superior because in every area of activity women have played their parts.

I recall in 1959 I was asked—and perhaps I was one of the few who had been invited to enter the Civil Service—I was asked to come back into the Civil Service by the late Mr. Lee Ebanks, because he could not get any men to work in the Customs Department. At that time the Civil Service was predominantly made up of women. And what did these women do? They went on to become heads of departments; principal secretaries; professionals: lawyers, nurses, doctors, and teachers. They have filled up the Courts Office; they have not yet filled the Legislative Assembly, but we have a lady Speaker and she was appointed Speaker because she was the best person qualified in the Cayman Islands for the job at the time. She received the full support of every Member of the Legislative Assembly and I believe it was an all-male Assembly at the time.

We in Bodden Town boast of having the first elected woman in the Parliament—The late Mrs. Evelyn Wood. The late Annie Huldah Bodden had been nominated a Member of the Assembly before that time. But the first woman to win an election came out of Bodden Town.

That election was won against all male candidates and I do not think that Mrs. Wood was elected because she was a woman. She was elected simply because the population of Bodden Town felt that she was one of the two best candidates for the election at the time.

The Mover of the Motion mentioned that in the Cayman Islands women only received the right to vote in 1959, which is true. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman seemed to think that we were late in getting it. Perhaps we are behind a few countries, but nevertheless we are ahead of many because there are still some countries of the world where women do not have the right to vote.

One of the departments of Government that was solely staffed by men was the Police Force. But we note in the Police Report, which has been tabled in this sitting, that 19.82% of the Police Force are women. There are a total of 45 officers in the Police Force and they are not all constables although their advent to the Force has been quite recent. We have among them (the female officers) six sergeants, one inspector, and one chief inspector.

So what I am saying is that it is not the sex of the person it is the person's worth, their ability. There are some countries where women have taken over, for example in Japan more than 60% of all the Life Insurance Agents are women and they do a tremendous job in sales. This has been the century for women and we find that many of the outstanding politicians have been women. I can think of Margaret Thatcher, the late Indira Gandhi, Mrs. Bandaranaike of Sri Lanka. And although she is not a politician, Her Majesty Queen Elizabeth II is rated as one of the greatest monarchs—one of the most stable in the British Commonwealth of Nations—perhaps even in the world.

So the setting up of an office and the appointment of a person to look specifically at the needs of women is a good thing. I support it, but it is not as necessary here as it would be in some other countries. For I believe that the Caymanian people respect their women. There is the odd case where you hear about some discrimination or violence. But we know the history of these Islands: for generations the men went off to sea and the women continued to be fathers and mothers; to work at home, to raise and discipline their children, and so produced a nation that is perhaps the envy of the Caribbean.

The Mover of the Motion dealt a little with the role of the officer [who would man the Women's Desk.] It seems to me that the person will act more or less like an ombudsman for women's affairs and will be in a position to advise women and put forward perhaps to Executive Council ideas which can be accepted by Government for the welfare of women.

I would certainly like to see this officer attached to one of the Ministries. Perhaps the Governor in his discretion (authority given to him under the Constitution) would give to one of the Ministries the authority to deal with women's affairs. I know this authority would not be delegated to the officer, but certainly there should be a delegation of authority to one of the Ministries to have the responsibility for the affairs of women to be answerable in parliament for the actions taken.

I know that in supporting this Motion I am here talking to the converted (as all the Members appear to be supporting the Motion). The Government has not yet given its consent but no one would dare fight the women. As the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Brac said, they are in the majority and we know from experience that they know how to exert their influence. So Madam Speaker, I support this Motion and trust that other Members will do so.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.52 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.21 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 1/95. The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

Hon. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I rise to speak on behalf of the Government on this matter as it presently falls under my Ministry.

Madam Speaker, the Cayman Islands Census for 1989 stated that the total population was 25,355 which comprised of total male 12,372 compared with 12,983 female. The Vital Statistics published by the Economics and Statistics Office for 1993 gives the end of year population as being 31,200. It is estimated by that Office that the ratio of men to women is 49% men to 51% women. This equates to approximately 15,912 women to 15,288 men from the 1993 figures.

Madam Speaker, as such, women continue to outnumber men in our society, but for the most part in employment hold a high proportion of jobs in sales, customer services, and positions of office clerks. The men hold a high proportion of jobs in the managerial, agricultural, plant operators and labourers' categories.

It is worth remarking, Madam Speaker, that women outnumber men in professional category among the Caymanian segment of the population.

Madam Speaker, the Government supports the Motion, partly due to the fact that the impression of our professional social workers (who deal with such matters daily) is so similar to the popular impression that women carry the heavier part of the burden in terms of certain fundamental social responsibilities such as, child rearing and household duties, while also carrying responsibility for a job in the market place, but often at the lower end of the pay scale.

Even more to the point in terms of issues requiring attention, are the matters of fathers not facing up to the responsibilities of paternity and the consequent struggle imposed on single mothers some of whom have not completed their secondary education. It is felt that this (along with other reasons) makes it very difficult for a number of single mothers to make ends meet.

Further to this, is the matter of direct physical violence on women in domestic settings spoken about by some Honourable Members. The following catalog may be used to simply list the salient impressions recorded by the social workers in the Social Services Department. These factors lead them to suggest the empowerment of women for the following reasons: Women must be educated on laws affecting them; encouraged to pursue academic qualifications; delay first pregnancy until their education is completed in order to command better paying jobs; and participate fully in all aspects of their community.

The catalogue of salient impressions are:

- 1) Most fathers work.
- 2) Many fathers play a small role in parenting.
- 3) Most mothers work.
- 4) Many mothers play the roles of two parents.
- 5) Many prospective fathers abandon an expectant woman to whom they are not married.
- 6) Single parenthood is becoming more common; pregnancies out of wedlock, divorces and separations being among the causes of single parenthood.
- 7) A number of young women become pregnant and do not complete their secondary education. They, therefore, have some difficulty getting and holding jobs.
- 8) A number of women are victims of domestic violence and sometimes they have to flee their homes to protect their lives and those of their children.
- 9) Flexible and affordable child care is not available in adequate supply. For example, in relation to shift work where many women, (mothers sometimes) are employed.
- 10) Many parents lack appropriate parenting skills, this affects mothers more as the de facto principal care-givers.
- 11) Women take up a large proportion of the work force, but also hold the higher proportion of jobs at the low end of the wage scale. Young unmarried mothers especially, are therefore sometimes at risk in terms of being able to provide enough food and decent shelter for themselves and their children.
- 12) Improved legislation for maintenance and affiliation cases is needed. The current review of the Law is welcome and there needs to be serious amendments to allow for easier filing, ensuring payment and follow-up of those persons delinquent in payments. As the Law is now, the mothers usually have to take the delinquent father back to Court if he does not make the payments. Imprisonment for non-payment, because some men seem to prefer imprisonment rather than paying to care for their child.

The possibility raised by the Honourable Chief Justice, regarding salary deduction in maintenance cases being enforceable by Law seems to have a great deal of merit to it.

Madam Speaker, I propose to see to it that an entity is developed in the Ministry, having a clearly defined mission and guidelines. I believe it can form a positive force in our community, vigorously engaged in the development of services to women and families.

No matter whether this charge is given to a Government department or whatever entity, there are a number of points that must be borne in mind. First, we must proceed on the basis that we do not either romanticise or over-dramatise the issues involved. There is no sense in taking the view that women ought to stay in their places—with all the implications that has—for assuming that women's role is subservient to man's. Neither ought we to make the position of women out to be direr than it is. We know what the problems are, but we cannot compare the Cayman Islands to Africa, India, or any of those countries.

We know what our problems are and what we need is a mechanism between Government and the Community to deal with it more effectively. The catalogue I have listed is not intended to be exhaustive and I fully realise that I have not expressed the full complexities of the situations noted. Indeed, we do not appreciate many of these complexities at present, because women's issues have not been a focus as such up until now. Any initiatives we undertake in this area must be sober initiatives.

In a very general way, Madam Speaker, we might say that what the entity responsible for women's affairs should try to accomplish is the effective promotion of feminine self-respect and real masculine pride. Generally speaking, a woman's self-respect must be diminished if she cannot get a reasonable educational foundation. It would be diminished if she cannot hold a decent job, look after her own and her children's needs where necessary as minimum. And real masculine pride cannot be based on neglect or abuse of one's child or the child's mother. Nor can it exist while permitting any situation to persist in which women suffer the sorts of deprivations others (including myself) have mentioned.

My Ministry has initiated some things that will have some impact on the position of women and I believe they were mentioned by the Mover of the Motion, the Elected Member for North Side. We are pushing parenting skills training through the Community Development Action Group which is soon to be assisted by the deployment of Community Development Officers.

We have started the Young Parents Programme to try to address the rehabilitation of existing young unwed mothers and prevent enlargement of the scope of the problem. We also shall conduct a survey on the status of the Caymanian family within this year which should provide much relevant information on the position of both sexes within the family setting as an important component of women's affairs.

Madam Speaker, I say this not to establish any claim on the subject: I believe my Ministry is big enough and busy enough as it stands. Rather my position is that there is enough false pride among the men in our population to account for the existence and persistence of many of the phenomena we observe, which operate to the disadvantage of our women.

Something more can be done to address this issue in spite of the efforts made by the departments now dealing with those issues and the Ministry stands ready to help. We must be an ally in such an effort and therefore, pledge support accordingly.

I thank our two lady Members of the National Team who brought this Motion and all those entities in the country who in one way or another advocated for more and better mechanisms in our community for women. There were many matters raised, Madam Speaker, which have a lot of merits and I do not think that I could add any more to what has been said except to say, that there is a conference which will be held in Beijing in September of this year.

I will look forward to sending one of the lady Members, perhaps the Mover of the Motion, along with a member of my Ministry. Who knows? Perhaps by then I too will have a lady Permanent Secretary—one never knows!

I, along with the Members of Government, support the Motion, Madam Speaker, and we all look forward to working together on this very important matter. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is very gratifying to hear, so far, that there has been a lot of support for this Motion and I would like to thank all those who have spoken in favour of it.

Madam Speaker, this Motion is not intended to promote women to develop independently or even competitively with men. It is about finding the ways and means with the help of a Women's Office to allow all the women of these Islands to reach their true potential, that is, so that they can be equal partners with men in the continued growth and development of Cayman. We are bringing this Motion to ensure that the women of these Islands participate freely in its development.

Over the past several weeks I have been reading about the history of Women's Offices (Bureaus as they are called in the dependent territories). Many of the bureaus were started as a result of the United Nations Year of the Women, in 1975 to 1985 and culminated in the Third World Congress on women health in Nairobi, Kenya in 1985. I believe the Elected Member for North Side and the Honourable Minister for Community Development mentioned this in their debate—the World Conference for women that is due to be held in Beijing in September of this year. I am pleased to hear that there will be representation at the conference. Most of the countries of the world will be presenting papers, which will show how their countries have progressed on a global plan of action to include women in development which was accepted in Kenya.

Since the decay of the Nairobi Congress most of the Commonwealth Caribbean countries have established their women offices and it is usually called a Women's Bureau in the larger countries and a Women's Desk in the smaller countries, mostly the dependent territories.

Before this Government took office in 1992, the British Development Division based in Barbados provided funds for the dependent territories to carry out a study on the status of women in each country in order to prepare a national report for this conference in Beijing. The way it was accomplished was creating these Bureaus (or Women's Desk) charged among other things with overseeing the survey and preparing the report.

The countries that I researched, Madam Speaker, I found out that the impetus for the Women's Office came from external sources and most of the time the funding also came from external sources. Here in Grand Cayman, the invitation to be involved in this movement to increase women's potential to fully participate in the life of their country was not taken up. I think this was mentioned by the other lady Member and who knows why? We should not harp on this. We should put it behind us and move forward since there could have been several reasons.

However, the overriding reason had to be that the former Government had taken no position on women's affairs and therefore there was no one to push for involvement. We are a developing country and sometimes the women are being overlooked. Recently my brother declined to participate on the television forum on Issues-27 and the moderator of the programme contacted me, to ask if I would sit in not as a politician, but as a woman in business. I declined naturally [to sit in on the programme], but we got to talking and discussed women who were in the business community, and Madam Speaker, it was very difficult. Even though we have some women in the business community, we do not have active women who are not afraid to speak out and who participate openly. Some people might argue that women have done quite well in the Cayman Islands and that after 20 years after the International Year of Women, we really have no need to establish women's affairs as a subject in one of the Ministries.

The other lady Member—the Elected Member for North Side—and other Members as well, spoke to the needs in our community which need to be addressed. Many of these needs that are lacking are specifically relevant to women and children. It is very interesting to note that the United Nations have established Women's Ministries worldwide.

I do not believe that in proposing a Women's Desk it will single-handedly address all the needs of women. I do not think that is the function of a Women's Office. Many of the Women's Bureaus in the region took as their mandate, in the early years, the provision of services and projects. I am going to share with this Honourable House some of the objectives listed from my research but I will do so further on. The establishment of the Bureaus in some of the other territories were unsuccessful, because they did not have the trained staff, the funds, or the political support to compete with other well-established departments of Government and women's organisations to be project-oriented.

Another stumbling block that they faced in establishing the Women's Offices was a great deal of disagreement as to the Ministry in which it should be located. The former speaker, the Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs, and Culture addressed this in saying that it does not necessarily have to be in his Ministry. But knowing that, the other lady Member and I will push so that it will get established once the Motion is accepted. We would hope to have a lady permanent secretary to whom the officer is answerable and one who will keep a watchful brief on the Women's Office. The main issues are that the office gets established.

In saying that we would like to have a female Permanent Secretary, it is not [that we are] trying to be sexist. In the research that I did on Women's Bureaus, I researched a book called "Ladies in Limbo, The Faith of Women's Bureaus", and there were case studies that were done in the Caribbean. Madam Speaker, I would like to thank Mrs. Joy Basdeo and the Cayman Islands Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London for obtaining this book so that I could do the research. I have a copy, Madam Speaker, in the event you would like it to be laid on the Table or if someone would like to look at it.

In the book it talks about the conflicts which can ensue when a male administrative officer is made responsible for women's affairs. I would just like to quote what it says: "Few male administrators have either the desire, the sensitivity or indeed, the humility to acquire competence by gathering information; going into the field liaising with experts; reading relevant documentary material in the process of self-education aimed at initiating and sustaining innovative change in women's affairs, which has been culturally conditioned to consider marginal and that is those concentrating on women."

"I believe that women's affairs emerge in the responsibilities of every Ministry. Experience often shows, other Ministries have seen the establishment of a women's office as an unwelcome interruption to their own planning and programmes for the entire population, not just half of it."

"According to the other studies on the other countries, the women's office has been marginal to the extent that it has become ineffective in spearheading any change in the status of women."

Hopefully, Madam Speaker, it will not be the case here, because it must be integrated and not just added to the work of the Ministry. I share these thoughts on the Women's Office so that my honourable colleagues will realise that the establishment of a Women's Office is not simple or will it be an easy task. The question is: Is it a necessary thing? My colleague and others who have spoken seem to agree and believe that it is necessary.

I looked at the objectives for six of the larger Bureaus and I came up with eight objectives that I would like to share with you in order that we may have a better understanding of what the Women's Desk would accomplish. Firstly, it should have data collection and research. I think the Mover mentioned that we need to find out about the 'beast' with abuse and other unknown 'territories' (sic) that women seem to encounter. We know it exists but no research has been done. I believe this is where Churches, the community and Business and Professional Women's Club can assist the Bureau in gathering data and in doing research.

Secondly, it should have participation in the formation of national plans. As I mentioned earlier I believe that it should be integrated into all Ministries. I took the Education Development Plan that was laid on the Table yesterday morning and looked at some of their beliefs and strategies and thought how invaluable the Women's Office would be in working to develop the Education Plan and to carry it forward. I would just like to read from the beliefs of the Education Development Plan. I read: "Each individual has a valuable role in society. The family is the primary means of transmitting values from one generation to another. Every one has the right to express his or her opinion."

Moving on to strategy No. 4 in their specific objective. I could only think how the Women's Desk could assist in carrying out these objectives. I quote: "To provide the students and parents skills to cope with the trauma of family breakdown; to teach parenting skills within the life-skills curriculum; develop an ongoing programme designed to establish greater communication between parents, guardians, students, and educators."

The final strategy is: "To develop a support system for students, parents and teachers to increase their awareness of abuse, and their ability to counteract its effects."

With this office and being able to integrate with the Ministries such as the Education Department, and the Health Department and other areas it can only add to what is taking place in the development.

Thirdly, it should have co-ordination of programmes affecting women. I believe the health of women was mentioned. And it could establish workshops and seminars to identify the needs of women in order to reflect their conditions to Government in order to influence changes in policies and programmes in the community.

One Honourable Member in his debate mentioned self-defense, and for some time now I have been advocating this with the Instructor at the Takewando School (where my son attends), to develop a self-defense programme for women. Not to help them [become violent] but aid in violence they encounter, because the average Caymanian woman is well travelled and could use it to avoid being mugged and to some extent, use it here in Cayman to defend themselves. I believe that a programme like this could be developed from the Women's Office.

Homemakers' Associations can be formed where some women at home can assist with car pooling, they can share recipes and discuss meals, they could share baby sitting chores. All of this could come out from programmes at the Women's Desk.

The fourth objective is monitoring and evaluation of ongoing and future plans to ensure that the interests of women are reflected, and the involvement of women as beneficiaries and participants is assured. Madam Speaker, I listened to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town when he shared with us the different clubs and women involved and I smiled to myself as he mentioned the Rotary Club in Miami having a lady member as President, but wondered what happened to one of the rotary clubs here in the Cayman Islands that voted not to have women participate. If this objective is here at the Women's Desk, perhaps one of the things it could do is to educate men and change their thoughts in having a turnaround and perhaps have women participate in the Rotary Club in Grand Cayman.

Madam Speaker, I am not saying this from a sexist point of view, but this week in the newspaper I noticed two advertisements, one by the Health Services—Personnel Office which says: "This position is more suitable for male applicants. This is for a porter or cleaner. The applicant must have at least grade school education, be able to lift 75 pounds and not be allergic to cleaning solutions. And in one complete sentence, "This position is more suitable for male applicants." Is it because a woman would not be able to lift 75 pounds?

The other advertisement is from an electronics store: "Male Assistant Retail Store Manager applicant must have a minimum of two years experience in merchandising, sales, marketing, computer literacy and some knowledge of inventory control, accounting organization skills and interpersonal communications." And in bold type it says "Male assistant".

Here with this objective perhaps this will assist in making sure that this type of advertisement would not be placed in the newspapers. In that it is leaning towards the male [population] and the women are forgotten. For those skills I see no reason why a woman could not be able to hold that position. Madam Speaker, I am not saying that the office must monitor [the newspaper] and every time they see an advertisement in the "Classified" go through and scrutinize advertisements looking for male and female positions. But I am sure that the interest of women would be reflected in this objective in making sure that they are beneficiaries and participants.

The fifth objective is documentation, publication relation and policies. Here they would share with different organisations, polices and so forth, affecting women. I feel this is a very important objective of the Women's Desk.

The seventh objective is: guidance and advisory services. During the past two years since I have been elected, Madam Speaker, on a daily basis I receive calls or visits from women not looking for anything more than just a listening ear. With this objective the Women's Office could offer counselling or direct someone to the right counselling service; whether it is the EAP Co-ordinator, the Counselling Centre, or a pastor of a Church to get some guidance. It could also have a support group for single parents.

We talked about violence. Perhaps there could be a support group for battered women and men for that matter. I have heard some members mention about men being battered and there is no reason why they should be excluded if they have that need for support.

Lastly, number eight: the liaison with regional and international bodies. Here again, we can learn from the other countries and work with international bodies like the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman mentioned, to look to the United Nations for their books and knowledge to assist us with our problems here.

In this session before the House we have the Judicature Law and in there are provisions for employers to deduct funds from employees' salaries once the Court has ordered it. This can only assist women. If this office is established and the Law is amended as proposed, the Women's Desk might consider having someone there to monitor maintenance fee payments and assist with the collection of these fees to make sure that the women and the children get the benefits of such payment in a timely manner.

The Speaker: Will the Honourable Member take the luncheon suspension at this time?

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Yes, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.30PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.04

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.36 PM

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mrs. Berna L. Thompson Murphy: Thank you, Madam Speaker. When we took the lunch break, I was listing the objectives that I felt appropriate to establishing the Women's Desk. Unfortunately, I missed out No. 6 as I was reminded by my colleague. I would like to list six of the promotions of innovative pilot projects. Since I touched on the maintenance fees, I believe this is one area the Office could assist with as a pilot project in the collection of maintenance fees.

In my research on the Women's Desk, Madam Speaker, I was hoping that the Mover, the Member for North Side and I, would have had time to prepare the terms of reference for the women's office. Unfortunately we ran out of time. As I read the history of the Women's Bureaus in the different Islands of the Caribbean, many of them had failed to do the one thing that they had been established to do; to address and research the needs of a wide cross-section of women at every level in the society.

I came to the conclusion after studying and reading the book that we really could know what the terms of reference of our office should be. I think we need to give the women an opportunity to tell us what they would like to have the Desk assist in establishing in the community.

The Cayman Islands are very unique and the needs of the women and families are unique as well. While we can generally set the objectives for the office, our local objectives have yet to be researched in order to complement the office.

I hope that when the office is established the first step will be to convene a forum not only for the women, but men should be included—Ministers, single fathers who are trying to raise a family—so that they will help in eliciting the terms of reference objectively for the country.

From the research I have done, the Women's Office will need an advisory body or some form of national machinery to assist in the identification of priorities for action. There are many individual women in our community and organisations who have advocated issues of particular concern to women for a long time. Community representation and a working group would be in a position to help the women's office plan for a national forum.

Madam Speaker, I believe everything has a purpose and we are fortunate that we are somewhat behind the rest of the Caribbean countries in establishing a Women's Office, as this makes it possible to learn from their mistakes. We are also fortunate that we are entering the arena of women's affairs at a time and during the year when the whole world is focusing on issues concerning women. There are many regional and international organisations that we can turn to for help and advice.

We are fortunate that unlike many of the other Islands the creation of a Women's Desk is not a reaction to demands from the international communities, but rather, as I mentioned, a reaction internally to a perceived need: it is to ensure that the women of these Islands participate freely in its development.

Again, Madam Speaker, I want to stress that this Motion is not intended to promote women to develop independently or even competitively with men. I know women can be very competitive. It is about finding ways and means with the help of the women's office to allow all women of the Cayman Islands to reach their true potential as equal partners with men in the continued growth and development of these Islands.

I think most speakers have shared with us the way it can be carried through. Like previous speakers mentioned, our history is full of strong women and we give all of those women, strong or otherwise, credit. Often we hear that it was the men who built up the Cayman Islands, but what about the women? Were they not here keeping the families together, managing, budgeting? We have to give them credit as well in the part they played in developing the Cayman Islands.

I believe, Madam Speaker, that our greatest challenge today is the social problems facing our families—in particular, our youths. No one can dispute the fact that women play a pivotal role in influencing their children and their partners either up front or behind the scenes. Yet, there are many social issues remaining unresolved or not attacked. The issue of ineffective machinery for maintenance is one very dear to my heart, because it is the children who are the innocent victims.

As mentioned earlier, the growing incidents of domestic violence is another issue with which we must grapple. The community is crying out in its condemnation of an inadequate sentencing policy and crimes against women and children. I believe the Mover touched on this issue as well.

One of the earlier speakers mentioned harassment. I believe there is harassment on the job site in certain areas, but again we have to be careful that it is not taken to the extreme. Sometimes when we are in this honourable Chamber, the other lady Member and I reach across to touch one of our male colleagues and I am sure if it were in the United States they would probably accuse us of sexual harassment in trying to get their attention.

So Madam Speaker, we must be careful. If sexual harassment is out there we should be able from the Women's Office to assist the individual, hear both sides and come to some agreement to solve the problem if it exists or if it was unfounded.

While we have a few individuals and organisations working on some of these issues, we have no coordinating agencies or department and sometimes these individuals are working at cross-purposes when they could be, and should be, co-operating.

We need a strong policy from the Government which sets out the concerns about issues facing women in particular in the Cayman Islands in 1995 and beyond. We need the Government's commitment in addressing these problems through an office which will be a focal point and a strong advocate for women in one of the Ministries.

Once the first step is taken (and I am sure the commitment is there), I believe the women in our community will respond once they are given the forum to express their needs. The other lady Member and I, will not sit back and accept lip service to this Motion. We will press to make sure that this office is established and that it will bear fruit.

In The New Caymanian a few weeks ago there was a statement made in regards to the Patra concert—'that the women in Cayman were set back 100 years'. This, Madam Speaker, other Members talked about on the floor of this honourable House regarding the disgusting pictures that were placed in the New Caymanian. From this office again, this could have been prevented. Where pressures would be put on the media in order that this type of photograph not be included in the publication. We have discussed a committee which would prevent this type of entertainer coming to our shores and the committee would be more selective—we are not talking about censorship—to prevent this type of entertainment in order that we may have better and more wholesome entertainment for the community at large.

I would like to conclude with a quote from Her Majesty the Queen's Commonwealth speech on tolerance, because I think it says a lot that "understanding is essential to a tolerant society", which is not simply one which gives to the individual scope and freedom from restraint. Rather it is a society which actively develops the people who belong to it, brings out their gifts and enriches their lives because it values their diversity. It does not condone persecution or the harming of some people by others, but it knows how to make allowances when things go wrong. It can forgive mistakes as well as giving encouragement and guidance and how to avoid them. It knows also that enhancing the quality of life of the individual brings benefit to the family, to the community, to the nation and to international relations."

I believe, Madam Speaker, that if this Motion is accepted (and I think it will be), then we will press to have the office established and this will take care of some of the needs and ideas that I just quoted. There are a lot of perceived needs in the community and we can address them when the office is established. I think Cayman will be a better place not only for women, but for our children and it can also assist the men of these Islands.

Thank you, Madam Speaker for your indulgence and all Honourable Members for their support thus far.

There used to be a saying when I was growing up and I am sure most of the Honourable Members here may know this cliché. "Man may work from sun to sun, but woman's work is never done." If we can make the work of a man and a woman much better and enjoyable then we will have accomplished a lot by establishing this Women's Desk. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Hon. Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I support this Motion wholeheartedly and I would like to congratulate the lady Mover and the Seconder for bringing this here. I think it is long overdue and I believe that these two lady Members have contributed more towards bringing together and dealing with the rights of women than any other Elected Member in this House.

They have steadfastly moved towards upgrading the rights of women. We have seen a request moved by the lady Member for North Side and supported by the lady Member for George Town that the General Orders be one of those important areas that [addresses the rights of women].

Madam Speaker, the passing in this House of the Battered Wives Law was another major step that the two lady Members moved forward on. I know that they have the support of the women within the organisations and within the Islands as a whole.

I would hope that the Law will be dealt with as regard to enforceability, very forceful by the police. No one, be it the man or the woman, should have to put up with being assaulted or beaten. Surely marriage gives no such licence to do so. It is the duty of anyone be that person male or female who is battered by the other person to report it and for the police to investigate and carry out the Law.

The sections relating to injunctions are important, because once this happens the Court can bring an injunction and ensure that we do not have a repeat of what has taken place. If it is repeated, it is a contempt of the Court; the Judge has the power to put that person in prison.

The maintenance of children and spouses is very important. If a man has a child he has the duty to support it and to pay such amounts to the mother as is necessary to maintain the child. The worst thing a man can do is to fail to maintain his children. Many times the innocent victims, as the Lady Members have clearly pointed out, are the children in these relationships. Within the schools we do everything we can to ease the impact and to ensure that the Social Services is always contacted when this happens.

The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs, and Culture, has provided many facilities that go a long way in dealing with the problems of the young unmarried mothers. Within the schools we do as much as we can to guide the children in the right path.

I know that the churches and the social service clubs all do their share in trying to ensure that Cayman has a society that is fair to females and children, and one that promotes the family unit. Madam Speaker, we look for examples like you—extremely capable, yet modest and graceful and you have shown us the heights to which women can rise. That in itself sets a good example for younger women in this country when they see that it is possible to move to the top.

Unfortunately, on the other spectre we have some misguided females. The New Caymanian of the 16th of March, 1995 in which Mrs. Bridget McPartland attacked you, Madam Speaker, was in my view misguided and quite frankly disgraceful for someone who is not in a position to know the Standing Orders of this House to make an outright attack and to point out that you are in fear. I think that is a very misguided, misinformed [person.] In fact, Mrs. Bridget McPartland should get the Standing Orders of this House and try to read them before she goes off on such misguided attack against you, Madam Speaker. I can say as a fact, knowing the Standing Orders that what was done was correct. It is really unfortunate when you have a woman such as this, making these sorts of attacks on someone so capable and graceful as yourself, Madam Speaker.

While the majority in this House are men, the department itself is headed by you, Madam Speaker. Our Clerk and Deputy Clerk are also females: in fact all the staff here are females with the exception of our Sergeant-at-Arms (because so far ladies have not reached the stage where they would carry a sword). I think this department is a good example of how ladies have reached the top and throughout the full spectrum we have seen them succeed.

Madam Speaker, a few days ago I made a statement in relation to culture which unfortunately has been taken out of context by a lady writer. What I said was that I believe more stress should be put on teaching the children English as a language, than having the increasing amount of patois brought into the plays and the schools. I said that I felt that to get a much more rounded personality one had to be exposed to culture from different areas on a smaller basis. My concern was that there was a very heavy input of patois from the Eastern Caribbean and Jamaica; that I felt it should be reduced in the schools and in our culture.

That was unfortunately picked up by Mrs. Ellen Peguero, who does not understand the subtle difference between patois and dialect. She has gone on to attempt to say that what I was saying is that there should be no Caribbean culture only culture from the United States and Europe. That is totally misguided. It is as misguided as Mrs. McPartland's attack on you, Madam Speaker, in relation to the Standing Orders. This is the way the press can take things out of context.

I would like to point out here that the English dictionary defines "patois" as a provincial form of a language spoken in a restricted area and having no literary status. That is what I am getting at. You cannot bring this into a culture or literary status, because it has none. There is a difference between a dialect, which is why English is spoken from island to island. But the English that is spoken is from a language point of view correct. Patois has no literary standing and she [Mrs. Peguero] has unfortunately totally missed that and went on in a misguided manner.

Madam Speaker, I live in George Town; it is my electoral district in which I have always lived despite what was said earlier. At that point I chose not to make a personal statement. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town said that I did not live in George Town: that is untrue. I was born there; I live there; my family is buried there; and so will I one day. I am about as much a George Towner as one could ever get.

Madam Speaker, the rights of women and children, because they are very closely intermeshed are undoubtedly rights that for too long have been left in a state of ineffectiveness. Many times we have seen conventions and laws put in place. I know as a fact, that some years ago before the Battered Wives Law came into force, calls would be made to the Police Force and they at that stage—perhaps quite rightly in some ways—would say that they could not interfere in matrimonial matters. I would say to them at the time when I was the Prosecutor, that if there is a committal of a criminal offence, regardless of whether it is matrimonial or not, you must intervene. It is your duty to uphold the Law and that includes assault and battery, by another spouse. These days I believe with the new Law in place much more is being done to ensure that the rights of women are not abused.

I would like to believe that this Motion is one of the greatest things that will ever be done for women in this country. It provides the conduit, the office, the communication and the right to ensure that proper legislation and controls are put in place through this office. And it can be developed along proper guidelines to be beneficial to women in this country.

My law firm has always had a greater number of women working there than any of the other law firms. I have always felt that they have the capability. We have seen extremely good lawyers—some articulated through my firm by me: people such as Mrs. Karen Thompson. I think she has assisted considerably in putting forward the law on battered wives that was brought to the House some time ago.

And within the Business and Professional Women's Club—and other clubs—we also have some very strong and capable ladies. I wish the two lady Members who brought this Motion all the best and I would urge the women in the community to rally behind them, give them their support and assist in this very, very important role.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I rise to give my full support to Private Member's Motion No. 1/95—Establishment of an Office for Women's Affairs. I would like to congratulate the Mover and the Seconder for bringing this Motion to the House. It is long overdue as has been said here by other Members. We all know of the respect we have for our parents, our sisters; we know the benefit of women; we know of the abuse that women are put through; and we know the necessity for this Motion and the creation of the Women's Desk or Office (whatever it will be termed).

I would like to thank the Mover for her remarks on the attempt that will be made to make this beneficial to the women who live on Cayman Brac and Little Cayman. Because of the distance from Grand Cayman, unless there is some way of dealing with the issue within that district, it would probably not be beneficial. The need for this service is certainly evident as you go through Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

I have often wondered over the years why the Elected Members chose to wait until 1959 to give the women the right to vote when (as earlier speakers have said) women had been literally running the country during those years when the men had to go to sea. Although it was late in coming, they have certainly rose to the occasion. They are very involved in the affairs of this country for which we are very grateful.

I could go on [speaking] but I would only be repeating what other speakers have already said. The Motion has been well presented and the debate has been very constructive. Madam Speaker, with these words I give this Motion my full support.

The Speaker: If there is no further debate, would the Honourable Mover wish to exercise the right of reply.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Thank you, Madam Speaker. First of all I would like to thank all Members of this Legislative Assembly who have spoken on this Motion and have given it their full support. There are one or two minor points to which I would like to reply. Other than that, I might have gotten up and said 'Thank you', and sat down.

The first point I would like to reply to is one made by the Honourable Attorney General regarding his explanation on the United [Nations] Convention. I must correct him on the Convention we are speaking about. It is the United Nations Convention on "The Elimination of Violence Against Women", not the one on Discrimination. I would ask him to do whatever is necessary to have this Convention extended to these Cayman Islands.

Listening to the majority of speakers on this Motion, to me it boils down to Education. When I say education, I do not mean formal education of our young girls or women. It is to educate them about their rights; to send them to proper places where they can be guided. Particularly when there is domestic violence to be dealt with, the most important thing is to remove them from the situation. But to me, removing them without a proper facility that can administer to their needs serves no purpose.

What we find (and I think the Second Official Member said it too), is that they go in to domestic problems, but when it comes to taking the matter to the Courts, the woman always tends to say she does not want it to go to Court. I feel that if a facility is provided where she can go and receive counselling she will do something about the constant abuse she receives. The education could play a part from the primary or middle school level.

If we did a study on people who are abusing each other in the society, it stems from the fact that they grew up with this type of abuse and they now feel that it is a natural process of life; whether it is the woman abusing the man or the man abusing the woman. Recently it was found out in the parenting group at the Joyce Hylton Crisis Centre. That girls who are becoming mothers at such young ages are children of young mothers. It went back to their grandmothers and mothers. Therefore, they feel that it is a normal way of life.

I think it was the First Elected Member for Bodden Town who said that we have lost the community spirit of helping each other. I can agree with this Honourable Member, because I say it from day to day. When we look at the progress in the Cayman Islands, we all enjoy it. But the family life that we were all a part of—that one big family—has been lost. Maybe it is time that these Islands (and maybe the proposed Women's office) will do something about this.

I would like to stress, Madam Speaker, that this Motion is in no way seeking an advantage for the women of this country. We only want equality with our partners. We tend to hear that the women who attended university are doing this and doing that. I commend them for this, but my greatest concern is for the thousands of women in the Cayman Islands who have not been exposed to where they can turn and find help; that we educate them and bring them out so that they may stop living the abusive life which is not only physical abuse.

I would like to read from [an article entitled], the "Sixteen days of activism against gender violence", it says: "What is abuse? Abuse can take many forms. Emotional abuse harms a person's self-esteem or causes shame. Examples of this kind of abuse include: repeated lies and broken promises, infidelity, withholding affection, extreme jealousy aimed at keeping one's partner from friends or hobbies, insults and put-downs, threats against a person's safety and efforts to control somebody's every move including how he dresses and what he eats."

There are probably people who will tell you that this does not happen in the Cayman Islands. I beg to disagree with that, Madam Speaker. Not only do those things happen, but there are women in this country who work from day to day, week after week, and at the end of the month when that pay-cheque is made out to them in their name, it has to be taken home and handed over to the man. This is not right and these are the changes that we would like to see come about, but in a partnership—not just standing up for the women.

I think it was the Honourable Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman who mentioned that sex education should be taught to both male and female students. I agree with him 100%. If I gave the impression in my presentation that it should only be intended for female students, I humbly apologise.

But I think I made mention that in developing a national curriculum for the Education Department, that Family Life education should be put along with the subjects of Mathematics and English.

The Honourable Member made some very good points on women pulling men along: we have done that all our lives in the Cayman Islands. I can assure you that the women of this country will continue to assist wherever we can to help the men improve their way of life also.

I too had the type of movies that are being shown in this country as a topic, but I did not deal with it in my presentation—the type of movies that are being shown here which constantly show abuse against women.

The other matter that gives me concern is the way advertisements are written in the newspapers—which I feel the Ministry that will be dealing with the Women's Affairs Office should address. We open the newspapers and see advertisements for night clubs and constantly they portray women as sex symbols. I feel that the women open themselves up to this type of abuse when they agree to use their bodies in such a manner.

I did not speak about performers during my debate on the Throne Speech, Madam Speaker, but this too gives me great concern when we have women coming into our country and performing acts as the performer Patra did a few weeks ago. This woman has been banned from some countries of the world because of her disgusting performances. We were told that her performance here was a mild one. I would urge the Government to take steps to ban her also from the Cayman Islands.

I know people on the outside will say that if someone wants to go to see Patra it is his/her right to go. I can agree with that, Madam Speaker, but when the newspapers are going to be flaunting disgusting photographs that my children and I must look at, I cannot agree—though the good must suffer for the bad.

Madam Speaker, one Member in replying stated that there is a need for co-ordination. I could not agree with that Member more. In my presentation I stressed the need for co-ordination amongst all ministries of Government, departments, and all the non-governmental organisations.

I would like to thank the Honourable Minister for accepting this Motion on behalf of the Government. It was most interesting when he pointed out in his reply that women are the bearers of the heavier part of the financial burden in this country—yet the majority of them remain at the low end of the pay scales.

Madam Speaker, I know that this Honourable Minister has been doing a lot of work during his time in the Ministry, in dealing with matters affecting women of this country. We need to do some research. Once again we go back to statistics, as to why it is happening. We are the bearers of the heavier part of the financial burdens of families and yet we are kept at the lower end of the salary scales.

Someone mentioned that the proper terms of reference should be set up for the Women's Office. Madam Speaker, I agree wholeheartedly. In my presentation I did attempt to put forward some terms of reference for the Office. At this point I would again like to stress the purpose of the Women's Office in one of the Ministries: It is to increase public and governmental awareness of issues that are of particular concern to women and to highlight those areas in legislation, health, et cetera, where more work needs to be done to improve the status and quality of life for women.

The terms of reference for such an office include: working with health personnel; promoting women's health and welfare; co-operating with the Legal Department and the Government to create a legal framework favourable to women; liaising with women groups and organisations and supporting them in their projects/programmes; and interacting with other women's offices regionally and internationally.

Madam Speaker, I had the pleasure of attending the Commonwealth Parliamentary Conference that was held in Banff, Canada. At one of the sessions on issues affecting women a draft report was sent out. The Report says:

"National Women Bureaus"

"A number of countries have yet to establish an official body mandated to collect data on the status of women to track their achievements; to speak out on issues of concern, or to lobby for their rights. Non-governmental organisations with resources and leadership to mobilise women country-wide and whose central role is to provide women with political education and training may be scarce or nonexistent.

"The Task Force recommends that government establishes national women bureaus: to review legislations, policy and platforms at each stage of development and delivery; to determine the impact on women; promote the advancement of women through the development of a collaborative relationship among the agencies, government departments, organisations involved with the co-operation of industry, educational and health authorities, local government and non-governmental organisation; to act as a catalyst to influence the activities of government departments; to work behind the scenes tracking the progress of legislation, policies and programmes; to ensure that government decisions have a positive impact on women; to organise meetings and conferences and keep issues alive; monitor development in other countries and represent the nation at the United Nations, Commonwealth and other related activities dealing with the advancement of women."

Madam Speaker, that is all we are asking the Government to do in the Motion.

I would like to encourage the non-governmental organisations in the Cayman Islands to assist and put forward their views. While I am urging that this Desk be established in the Ministry for the overall good of women and where organisations and individuals can present their views on matters, it is imperative that everyone in the Cayman Islands, whether she be Caymanian, resident, or visitor, remember that this is a British territory and not another state in the United States. We tend to follow whatever happens in North America. Madam Speaker, I see certain things happening in the United States that I would hate to see brought in under this Women's Office in these Islands.

Madam Speaker, another thing that I would like (and I have asked for this in a question in this House), is for a dress code that was brought about by the late Ms. Annie Huldah Bodden at a meeting of this Legislative Assembly in Cayman Brac. I constantly visit the beaches (and I am probably going to be knocked because some will feel that this does not need to come about, because we have to support tourism)—I support tourism but I am not going to support it at the detriment of my people. It is disgusting when I take my young granddaughters to the beach and see half-naked women sitting on the beach with G-strings or without tops—and at some restaurants they try to get through the doors. Some actions have to be taken.

The Honourable lady Member for George Town made mention of women taking self-defense classes. I would like to congratulate the Business and Professional Women's Club for the week of self-defense [classes] that they brought in 1992. On the community calendar it says: A week of self defense, the Business and Professional Women's Club and the C.I. Martial Arts Federation is sponsoring a series of seminars especially for women. We need to continue to do more of these seminars not only on martial arts, but seminars on other things that affect women.

One of the suggestions that I would like to make to the Ministry—and it is one again from the Task Force Report on women issues from the conference I attended—is to publish a magazine such as the Bermudian Heritage Month magazine. This magazine is in celebration of women and traces the history of the female presence in the community and highlights the valuable contribution of women and their influences in Bermudian development.

Madam Speaker, once again I would like to say thanks to all Members who supported this Motion. In closing, I would like to read the seem two verses I read at the beginning taken from Norma Hardy's Women's Creed. It reads: "We rejoice in our diversity and versatility; our intuition and our logic; we confess our fail- ures, frailties and imperfections; including our past acceptance of violence and injustices in relationships between women and men.

"We look forward to the age of peace when violence is banished: when both men and women are able to love and be loved and the world and the wealth of our world is justly shared."

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Private Member's Motion No. 2/95—Removal of Twenty Five Cent Tax on Diesel Fuel. The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 2/95

REMOVAL OF TWENTY-FIVE CENT TAX ON DIESEL FUEL

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 2/95, standing in my name and entitled "Removal of Twenty-Five Cents Tax on Diesel Fuel", reading as follows:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government removes the twenty-five cents per gallon tax increase levied on diesel fuel brought into effect by Government Motion 9/91;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the revenue from Motor gasoline, Diesel oil, kerosene, other fuel oils and basic petroleum products be held in a special account to be used exclusively for road development and maintenance.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: Madam Speaker, I beg to second the Motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 2/95 having duly been moved and seconded is now open for debate.
The First Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Madam Speaker, this Motion affords a glorious opportunity for the National Team Government to live up to a promise that was made, and a promise that people are looking forward to being kept.

Let me dwell a little on events leading up to and surrounding this Motion. When the last political directorate brought this last twenty-five cents increase in Government Motion No. 9/91, this increase met the resistance of the then Backbenchers and we lamented the fact that the Government was levying taxes on the people which they could ill-afford.

Madam Speaker, the immediate result of that was an increase across the board in electricity rate seen to be especially burdensome on the small consumer. And although it would seem that a twenty-five cent tax per gallon on diesel is insignificant, it nevertheless carried a significant percentage leap in the increase. Prior to that the tax on fuel oil had been increased by thirteen cents to make it twenty-five cents, and with the addition of the twenty-five cents with the coming into effect of Government Motion No. 9/91 the total tax levied was fifty cents. We can see that from fifty cents per gallon we are talking about a significant increase.

During the National Team's campaign it was popularly received that some effort would have been made to have this reduced by twenty-five cents. Indeed, I recall vividly at the swearing ceremony at least one Member of the National Team remarked that he hoped the National Team would remove this twenty-five cents tax very early in its tenure as the Government. Madam Speaker, if this twenty-five cents is removed it should bring immediate relief that would be beneficial to the small consumer but which should be applied across the board to all consumers.

The call to open a special fund for road development and maintenance with the remaining twenty-five cents seems a sound management principle and indeed, good budgetary practice. We have reached the point in this country now where roads and especially, maintenance and development of new roads is of critical importance. We have also reached a point where it strikes me as good management sense and certainly from a budgetary perspective proper procedure, to have a special fund/account earmarked for roads. This practice, Madam Speaker, will allow us to ascertain precisely the position we are in regarding developing new roads and for maintaining road networks at present.

Madam Speaker, not only does it make sound management sense, but I would argue that it is also sound ethically, since those people who use the roads the most would contribute more towards their maintenance and the development of new roads, by virtue of the fact that an automobile owner or a fleet owner would pay more than persons who are passengers and who use the roads less frequently than those who traverse the roads on a daily basis. It is fair, equitable, and ethical from that viewpoint.

I would argue that this twenty-five cents tax is the most ethical way of paying for road usage and certainly it is one which will be easily understood and perhaps easily accepted by residents and citizens in the country.

Madam Speaker, it is not expected that the yields from this twenty-five cents tax are going to be able to address all of the existing or future road problems. If managed properly it will go a far way in addressing the major problems that confront us at this time. I would say that in the first instance we would have to define how we would use the proceeds from this tax that we put into this fund. I would suggest that these proceeds be used primarily to maintain or to construct roads categorised as primary roads. I would say that this money should be used on the main road links and not expended on any arterial links except in those cases where all of the main arteries have been brought up to par and have been properly serviced.

I would also propose that it be used judiciously in the sense that it would not be used to do the alterations or to construct alternate route such as the Crewe Road/Airport Road junction. For the simple reason being that I believe such an undertaking should have been done by the Civil Aviation Department since the Civil Aviation Department is the direct beneficiary of that project. If we take that kind of line the proceeds realised from this special fund would be able to service more people and we would be able to use it in a more effective and efficient manner.

Madam Speaker, we realise that we have an acute problem now, because everyone of us in this honourable House realises that something needs to be done with regard to opening up new corridors and developing new roads in addition to maintaining the system that we have now. Hence there is an urgency to arrive at a point where we can be able to accurately and specifically realise just how much work we can undertake in the run of one year.

I contend that there is no better way to arrive at this point than to setup a special fund that will be used exclusively for road development and maintenance. In so doing there is no more sensible or rational way; and there is no better way from the standpoint of modern scientific management than to begin with moneys realised from the proceeds of the sale of petroleum and its derivatives.

If we need to take it further, there is also the possibility of fees being realised from road users, licensing of automobiles, drivers' licences, and those kinds of things. This, Madam Speaker, is a basis for starting and we could quite logically start the fund with the twenty-five cent tax realised from the sale of petroleum and its products. And if we find out that we need to add more, we could also look at moneys derived from licensing of automobiles, drivers' licences et cetera.

I want to go back now to the twenty-five cents reduction on diesel and how I see that as helping across the board. We realise that all of the people of the Cayman Islands use electricity now, even the most humble person. Not only do we consume it as individual householders but the cost of electricity affects us in that when we purchase goods from the supermarkets part of the price we pay no doubt is reflected in the cost of electricity of the establishment. Services that we use sometimes too take into consideration the use of electricity. So a reduction of the twenty-five cent on diesel should bring some reduction in the cost of electricity.

Not only would it be limited to the costs of electricity. We would probably also see a small reduction in the telephone bills because there is an intertwining of the two. We should also see a reduction in the costs of other commodities if we buy aggregate, if we buy cement, or, if we use any product having to be trucked to us. So it should quite conceivably affect people who are in the process of construction.

Madam Speaker, it seems logical and safe for me to conclude that this reduction even of twenty-five cents off the diesel would have perhaps a more widespread and significant effect than a reduction of a similar size on any other single commodity; there are but few other commodities. We should even see a reduction in the cost of water that we consume—those of us who are on the public water supply system. What is being requested here is mainly—and I want to underscore—the keeping of a promise by the National Team Government, of what they were going to do after they took office.

Further than that, it is a move that would significantly lessen the burden on our people who are least able to pay. We are not asking that all of it falls away. We are saying that we take twenty-five cents off and give the people an ease in the cost of living, and the other twenty-five cents we take and place in a special account so that we can be in a better position to understand how much we can afford to spend. For, Madam Speaker, while our system presently is good and has served its purpose for years, I believe that we are fast approaching the time—if we have not already done so—where when it comes to things like infrastructure (roads and sewerage systems et cetera), especially if we are going to maintain our present development rate it makes good money management sense and good budgetary sense to develop special accounts. If we can have these funds in, we will be able to ascertain just how much we can undertake at any particular time, and also what we need to do to maintain these funds and our system.

My contention is that when the funds are in the general revenue we have to compete with all other areas and avenues. In a sense one could argue that it is an unfair competition since some areas of revenue contribute more to the general revenue than others. Therefore, one could quite sensibly ask: 'Is it not more equitable and fair to allot proportionately rather than to throw everything in and depend on the priorities?' For if we had a special road account with $10 million to spend exclusively on roads over a year, we would be in a much better position to know exactly what road works could be undertaken. We would better know what should be given priority and what should be ruled out, than if we had to take the road vote out of the general revenue fund where it had to compete with the Education services, the Health services, Social services and all the other services—when it could be argued that by virtue of the fact that we collect moneys off licence fees, drivers' licences, diesel fuel, et cetera, the roads should not have to suffer inordinately.

Madam Speaker, I think that is certainly a position which could be taken and defended and also one that seems quite logical. It is my understanding that in other jurisdictions that is the way things are done. I know in countries where there are local government councils that is how some of those councils raise the money for the maintenance and development of road systems. Even in those areas where we have a central system it is not far-fetched to see the base organised along those lines.

So, Madam Speaker, in my estimation there is merit for consideration of this proposal, because in the first instance it is something that we were encouraged to look forward to; and secondly, it makes good management sense and allows us to be in the position where we can develop some perspective on exactly how much road work we can undertake in any financial year. And as I said earlier, we can start in a restricted way and use the funds specifically and exclusively for the development and maintenance of primary arteries. Later on if funds allow, we can move into the secondary and arterial roads.

I open the Motion to Honourable Members and hope that the Government can see merits in the argument. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: It is now 4.30 PM. Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, I take pleasure in moving the adjournment of this House until Monday morning, 10 o'clock when we will continue with Private Member's Motion No. 2/95.

The Speaker: The question is that the House do now adjourn until Monday morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House is accordingly adjourned until Monday morning at 10 o'clock.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 3 APRIL 1995.

MONDAY
3 APRIL, 1995
10.07 AM

The Speaker: I will ask the Honourable First Official Member to say prayers.

PRAYERS

Hon. James M. Ryan: Let us pray.

Almighty God, from whom all wisdom and power are derived; We beseech Thee so to direct and prosper the deliberations of the Legislative Assembly now assembled, that all things may be ordered upon the best and surest foundations for the glory of Thy Name and for the safety, honour and welfare of the people of these Islands.

Bless our Sovereign Lady Queen Elizabeth II, the Queen Mother, Philip Duke of Edinburgh, Charles Prince of Wales, Diana Princess of Wales and all the Royal family. Give grace to all who exercise authority in our Commonwealth that peace and happiness, truth and justice, religion and piety may be established among us. Especially we pray for the Governor of our Islands, the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly, Official Members and Ministers of Executive Council and Members of the Legislative Assembly that we may be enabled faithfully to perform the responsible duties of our high office.

All this we ask for Thy Great Name's sake.

Our Father, who art in Heaven, Hallowed be Thy Name, Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done, in earth as it is in Heaven. Give us this day our daily bread, and forgive us our trespasses, as we forgive them that trespass against us, and lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil. For Thine is the Kingdom, the power and the glory, forever and ever. Amen.

The Lord bless us and keep us. The Lord make His face shine upon us and be gracious unto us. The Lord lift up the light of His countenance upon us and give us peace now and always. Amen.

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Order. Proceedings are resumed.

Suspension of Standing Order 14(2). In the absence of the Honourable Minister for Community Development, Honourable Minister for Health.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I beg to suspend Standing Order 14(2) so that this Honourable House may be able to continue with Private Members' Motions.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(2) be suspended in order for Private Member's Motion No. 2/95 to be continued and brought to a conclusion. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye...Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Standing Orders are accordingly suspended.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Debate will continue on Private Member's Motion No. 2/95. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture Communication and Works.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 2/95

REMOVAL OF TWENTY-FIVE CENT TAX ON DIESEL FUEL

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to speak to Private Member's Motion No. 2/95, removal of twenty-five cents tax on diesel fuel.

The mover of the Motion rightfully mentioned that the National Team Government had in its Manifesto that if elected we would look at and, if necessary, remove a twenty-five cent [tax] on diesel fuel. The Motion brought to this Honourable House came from a previous government and it was actually for fifty cents per gallon tax on diesel fuel.

After coming into government we did as we promised the people, we checked out the situation and found (as has been repeated in this House) an almost bankrupt government. We tried our endeavours to add no further tax on the people of these islands, and in so doing, after working quite closely with the Honourable Financial Secretary, we saw that it was almost impossible at that time, or even now, to go ahead and remove a twenty-five cent duty which was placed on diesel.

I am certain, the Honourable Financial Secretary will elaborate on more fully, but if that was removed we would be faced with an additional $4 million which we would have to raise one or the other. We would have to tax the people in another area; or we would have to look for further loans. It was not thought by the Financial Secretary, or this Government, prudent at that time and we took a completely different approach to it. I sat with the officials from Caribbean Utilities Company and I explained to them the situation. I explained what was in our Manifesto, and we discussed it on more than one occasion.

As a result of those discussions, we had Caribbean Utilities Company restructure its rate system, both for commercial and homeowners. This is not something that one would see in the first year because it has been spread over three years. The first was a 2% deduction and until next year will be the last 2.35%, bringing it up to 6.35%.

For many years, the rate structure was such that the homeowner had been paying the higher percentage. This now has changed and with the adjustments which I mentioned it will no doubt revert to the commercial businesses.

I know the argument is that on certain things it will be passed back to the homeowner, but this will not be directly and what we tried to do was to assist those who had been paying the higher percentage over the years.

My understanding of the reason why the rate structure was done in such a way was that when CUC came on line there were more homeowners than commercial ventures so it had to be scheduled the way it was.

Government believes that what it has done will assist the homeowner and at the same time it has helped us not to disrupt what was laid down in the budget.

I feel certain, like with anything else, if things become better, whereby we have less problems balancing our budget that we will be open enough to sit down once again and re-look at this and, if possible at that time, remove the 25 cent duty.

So, the government at this time finds it impossible to accept the Motion before us.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Madam Speaker, in responding to Private Member's Motion No. 2/95, I am to advise, as pointed out by the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications and Works, that the proposal for a reduction of 25 cent per gallon tax on diesel fuel at this time, if implemented, could have adverse fiscal implications for the Government's budget, particularly since we are now the first quarter of 1995.

The Budget will show that the amount of revenue that is targeted to be raised in 1995 amounts to $12.4 million, of which the duty on diesel fuel accounts for approximately $10 million. This Honourable House is aware that the duty that is applied to diesel fuel at this time amounts to 50 cents per gallon, which means that a reduction in duty would result in a reduction of approximately $5 million in revenue. Therefore, if this proposal is to be entertained at this time, since we have commenced the budget for 1995, it would mean that the government would have to consider alternative proposals at this time in order to raise revenue to the tune of $5 million, which would be the sum that would be lost.

As pointed out by the Honourable Minister, it is not to suggest that this proposal does not have some merit, or should not be given some consideration at a later time. But it would best be considered in the context of looking at the annual budget in terms of when the annual budget is being considered for a given year. At this time all of the elements—all of the revenue and expenditure proposals—could then be considered and alternative arrangements considered, or measures agreed upon, if it is felt that certain adjustments should be made in an area such as consideration being given for the reduction of the tax on diesel fuel.

I should also point out that the way the budget has been dealt with in the past and even up to this time is that the revenue which is derived from a given area is not necessarily matched against the expenditure to be incurred in those areas, because to do so would mean that the whole revenue process would need to be overhauled and it is likely that this will have to be done in the future.

For example, medical services. This Honourable House will note that approximately $15 million appears in the estimates at this time, being the operational costs for the Medical Health Services. Where the revenue to be obtained, or generated from those services provided by these facilities in 1995 will be in the region of approximately $2.1 million.

It is recognised that roads are a very important aspect of our infrastructure. The providing of good road facilities should not be taken for granted because, obviously, it would not be within the interest of the Cayman Islands and it would not be promoting the image that has been associated with these Islands at this time, as an emerging developing country.

It is very important that measures be looked at in order to provide the necessary road infrastructure and the other infrastructural requirements of this government. But to do so at this time would mean that any reduction in revenue (because we are operating a very tight budget and we refer to it as a balanced budget which means that we do not have the flexibility in order to propose drastic reductions throughout a given year unless these reductions are considered when the budget is being agreed upon to be brought to this honourable House).

So with these comments, as pointed out by the Honourable Minister, the Government at this time will not be in a position to support this proposed reduction. As also pointed out, it is not to say that this could not be a consideration exercised in the future. Obviously, we are in a very dynamic economy and we cannot go about issues as though they are carved in stone because what is logical and what is best for the country at any given time will have to be considered and pursued.

This honourable House is also aware of the additional expenditure that the government will have to address in 1995 and quite likely beyond in meeting the upkeep costs of the Cuban migrants. All of these expenditures are placing pressures on the budget.

Therefore, to consider reductions in any given area at this time would mean that the compensating funds would have to be derived from others, otherwise we will be winding up the year 1995 in a deficit position.

Madam Speaker, all of these factors will require careful consideration. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Mr. Gilbert A. McLean: I rise to speak on Private Member's Motion No. 2/95—Removal of Twenty-five Cent tax on Diesel Fuel.

As the seconder of this Motion, I naturally support the requests that are made in the two resolves. This Motion is a request to the government to undertake a certain line of action. Both government Members who have just spoken alluded to the fact that perhaps somewhere later down the line this could be done, but, indeed, the Government has not said that they would do that. Their reply is that no, this cannot be done and not a case of accepting the motion with the view of examining it further in the future.

This promise of a reduction in diesel fuel was contained in the Manifesto of the National Team—that document which is referred to in every meeting of this House for one reason or the other. It was a focal point of campaign promise repeated over and over and over again throughout the districts of this country. It was, in fact, I contend, a prime factor in persuading the electorate of this country to vote for the present Government in a majority.

It is not impossible to do what this Motion asks, by any means. We all well know that the monies which come from diesel fuel is presently funnelled into general revenue. We heard the Financial Secretary say that it represents approximately $10 million of the revenue.

I postulate that the National Team Government never thought of the implications of the promise when it was being made; that it was something very hot to be talked about and, indeed the country had felt the pinch of the increase in the taxes on diesel fuel.

Often the Members of the Government and their supporters talk about the bankrupt government they inherited. I would hope that even the most uninformed person in this country would know that is an untruth. The reserves of this country in 1992 were $10 million and someone or something that is bankrupt does not have that kind of money in its reserves. This Government, in fact, for 1993, took approximately $7.0 million from the reserves of $10 million to balance the budget. Therefore, I fail to see how, if the Government was bankrupt, they could take $7.0 million from nothing.

The last Government was the Government that increased the taxes on diesel fuel. One thing that can be said on behalf of that Government was that it had the courage to come to this Legislative Assembly and take whatever pressure, or beating it did from the then opposition in achieving what it wished to do.

It is interesting, in looking in the Hansard of 15 November 1991, when this Motion to increase diesel came in an omnibus tax package. That Motion passed with eight people saying yes and seven people saying no. Those saying no were: the First Elected Member for West Bay (now the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Development, Sports, Youth Affairs and Culture); the Third Elected Member for West Bay (now the Third Elected Member for West Bay); the Third Elected Member for George Town (presently the Minister for Education); the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman; the First Elected Member for Bodden Town; the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town (who is now the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town); the Member for East End (who is now the Minister for Communications) and me.

How times change.

Here is the opportunity now to reduce the amount from 50 cents to 25 cents. There is no question that when this tax was brought back in 1991 it increased the cost of living across the board. Electricity immediately went up and thus affected everything in this country—people, supermarkets, businesses. You name it, in whatever form, that increase affected it.

It is reasonable to forecast that if this 25 cents were reduced, we would see prices go down. For one thing, the electric company (to the best of my knowledge) must reflect in its charges an increase or a decrease, depending upon the cost of diesel fuel. In the same way that it increased in 1991, it is reasonable to assume that there would be a decrease in the cost of living and prices generally. Another area where there should automatically be a price reduction would be in piped water throughout the Island.

What is being asked for here is not something that would have a detrimental effect on costs or inflation. This would have a positive effect.

I am not here to argue the points made by the Financial Secretary in regard to the loss of revenue he says would occur. We are well aware that the Government of the day needs all the finances it can possibly have, particularly in light of the fact that the Government has multi-million dollar undertakings with regard to the Cuban refugees. It obviously is this Government as well that negotiated that we should pay the United States these millions of dollars. It is obviously government's problem but it has, indeed, become a national crisis, as I would term it.

The Minister for Communications and Works says that the rate structures of CUC have been negotiated and it will be changed. I understand this is the case. But, when we talk about a reduction in electricity prices, I have not heard any members of the public saying that they have seen decreases in the cost of their electricity. Surely, when the higher charges have been applied to the businesses now, the businesses have simply jacked up their prices and so the consumer continues to pay beyond what is reasonable and affordable, which puts the average consumer under financial stress.

It is not correct to say that while the last government did tax this country in amounts that had not been sought prior, they did so specifically for certain undertakings like the increase in civil servants' salaries. I am sure we can all remember that the civil service got a 22% increase through the taxes brought by the last government. That was one of the main reasons for the tax increase.

This Government has been a taxing government whether it wishes to admit that or not. It is a fact. Taxes were increased in 1993, 1994 and also in 1995. We know that the hotel tax was increased, and the garbage fee was increased this year. In comparison and in truth, while it can be said that the last government taxed the country, surely this Government has been a taxing Government as well.

The particular difference in the taxation with this present government—the National Team Government—is that many of the taxes applied over the last two-odd years, have been taxes that have been increased in Executive Council through regulations. They have not been taxes that have been increased here on the floor of this House, except in the case of the Hotel Tax to come into effect on 1 June.

In the second resolve of this Motion, it asks that a special account be set up within the government organisation into which the revenues from gasoline, diesel, oil, kerosene and other fuel oils and basic petroleum products would be paid. And that this account would be used exclusively for road development and maintenance. I do not think there are too many of us who would try to sensibly argue that one of the major needs in this country is that of road development. There is glaring congestion of traffic, roads have deteriorated in many areas and need maintenance and repairs, and the government is attempting to inch and pinch while it sets priorities on stadiums to find sufficient money to spend on road work.

I visualise that if an account such as the one being asked for in the Motion is set up, the monies from gasoline and diesel and other fuel oils used for motor vehicles and equipment would go into that account. The account could realistically be limited to earnings coming from these various items. So, in any given year, the government (any government) would be in a position to guide itself by how much has been collected therefrom. In effect, the users of the road would be paying for the roads.

I am not saying to extend it into the taxes on motor cars and so on, I am speaking specifically of the items requested here in this particular resolve. This is not something strange, for in various countries things are handled this way to separate specifically the cost of roads and maintenance of roads and charge it to those people who use the roads.

Countries have highway commissions set up that look after road development, road maintenance, and the like. This is normally the way that such commissions are funded for the purpose of road development and maintenance.

This Motion requests the government to take a modern approach to the matter of road development and maintenance. Certainly, I am aware of no other and more specific way that it could be done. This Motion, therefore, does not in any way set this country back or make ill for this country, but it offers a realistic opportunity to address a major outstanding need in road development and maintenance.

I support this Motion, and it seems a great pity that the government should not accept this Motion with the view of dealing with it as has been said at some particular time when this might be possible.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. G. Haig Bodden: Madam Speaker, the matter of the reduction of the tax on diesel fuel had been an item in the Manifesto of the National Team. I supported that item in the Manifesto and I believe the government, once they were elected, had every intention of making a reduction.

But, as explained by the Honourable Financial Secretary, we see that it is impossible.

The reason why it is not possible is because in November 1992, when the new government took over, they found this country in a state of financial flux. The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman referred to our comments about the bankrupt government. The Honourable Financial Secretary did not go into all the reasons why it has been impossible to make this reduction, or to even accept this Motion today. We found a country with depleted reserves.

It is true that a small portion of money had been left in the reserves, but this had to be used to wipe out the deficit which had been created over three years. You cannot really say you have a reserve when you are running a $18 million or $14 million deficit.

So, the reserves that went into revenue helped by a long measure in wiping out the deficits which the previous government had created. So, they could never in actual fact leave a reserve when the deficit far exceeded the reserves.

Then, other major expenses facing the government in 1992 were to pay for the many advance accounts which had been set up to be paid in 1993. There was a settlement pending from the court case against Cayman Airways. We were faced with falling revenues in that the revenues had not been increasing in the proportion we had been accustomed to. Everyone knows that to run the country you need to increase revenue, as the cost of everything goes up every year.

In fact, the country was in such bad state that the banks would not lend the $20 million, which this Legislative Assembly had agreed in September 1992 to guarantee for Cayman Airways. The reason why the banks would not lend the money was not because Cayman Airways was in a bad state financially, but because the whole country was in a bad state.

If the person guaranteeing the loan had been in a strong financial position, the banks would not have cared what happened to Cayman Airways. They would have come up with the money. But the government itself was in poor shape. What is even worse, is that this country had lost its credit worthiness.

Sometimes you can get by without cash if your credit is good. But when you have neither cash nor credit, things are bad indeed. This country had reached a state where not only was it difficult to get the money for Cayman Airways, but the Government itself owed so much that at that time, in relation to the revenue, it was not prudent to take on further loans. If we had done that we would be paying too high a percentage of our revenue to service the loans.

I remember a couple of years ago when I went to a conference in Canada, the Commonwealth countries were discussing the financial plights that their governments were in. In the case of one of them, they were paying 80% of their revenue to service their debt and to pay for military expenses. Those countries had borrowed beyond their ability to repay and it finally caught up with them and they are now asking their creditors to waive or write off the debts.

As a sensible financial professional, the Honourable Financial Secretary cannot allow this country to slip into that position. What even made it worse, this government had no ability to tax the people of this country because the previous government had used us all the taxable leverage. They had imposed in quick succession two separate $10 million tax programmes.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman mentioned the increases in the garbage fees. But this is infinitesimal when compared to a $20 million tax package.

Although the country through savings and pruning expenses have begun to get the finances under control, we find that this year we have been hit with the Cuban crisis which no one foresaw. I would like to say that if this government had found no deficits and the reserves that should have been built up, the Cuban crisis would not have presented a financial problem to this country. We could have taken $3, $4, or $5 million from the reserves and taken care of the Cubans.

The Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman mentioned that we should have negotiated to let the United States pay us for the refugees. He knows better than that. He knows that this dependent territory is at a great disadvantage when it comes to negotiating with the United States or any other super power. We are compelled to take care of the refugees not by an act of our own, but because the United Kingdom is a party to the United Nations Convention on Refugees. As a dependent territory, we are saddled with that cost whenever refugees appear on our shores.

The second part of the Motion has not really been addressed by the Government in any great detail, but if we were to accept that we would be creating an accounting nightmare—a financial and bookkeeping nightmare. It asks that the revenue from motor gasoline, diesel, kerosene other fuel oils, basic petroleum products be held in a special account. I wonder if the Members realise how difficult that would be because the revenue from these varied items does not come into Government's accounts or into the treasury on a single day of the year. It is spread out over every tanker that comes here, every cargo ship that brings a case of lube oil and even sometimes the shipments of car and motor fuels by air. So, there would have to be a special person just to monitor the collection of the revenue from these fuels and make sure that a separate account was opened up and all the money credited to it.

Let us say that this was possible. We would then have the second nightmare of spending the money because if we accept the Motion, the Motion asks that the money be used exclusively for road development and maintenance. This means that no part of that money could be used for anything else without a special provision. It would also mean that all parts of it would have to be used for the roads. I would like to know how on any given day of the year the revenues from the fuels would equal the expenditures on the road. This is a bookkeeping headache, which should not be entertained by this government.

This government, the National Team Government, has a history of tax reductions. We know that we recently reduced the tax on the land transfer from 10% to 7.5%. This was a tax which the National Team had put on because real estate sales were so sluggish the government reduced the tax and we saw beneficial results immediately.

Then, some time ago we passed a Bill in this House that reduced the fees on certain companies to make us more competitive. Here again, we have had favourable results. Even quite recently the government by its glorious action in Hong Kong decided to reduce a specific fee and of course when they came back here the few Members of Council who were not with them agreed that this would be done. It made investors in Hong Kong very happy.

This Government will reduce the tax if it is possible and necessary. But to seek to have $5 million taken off the tax in one lump sum, and, even worse, to take what is left (the other $5 million) plus the revenue from other petroleum products and put that in a frigid account where it would be frozen and could not be used for anything else but roads, would really wreak havoc on the finances of this country.

I was one of the seven Backbenchers who said no to the increase on the diesel tax. And, as mentioned earlier, I was a part of the team of Members who agreed in the Manifesto to reduce this tax. But, we have to be practical. We cannot put the stability of this country, the stability of its finances in jeopardy by doing something that we know we cannot afford to do now. Certainly, as times change, if it becomes possible in the future to make this reduction, I would be happy to support it.

I believe that the Government must examine every action that it takes, must look at each case on its own merits and if the government can give relief on the tax on diesel or whatever else, the government should do so. But the government can only do so when it will not upset the balanced budget for which this government has become quite famous.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman.

Capt. Mabry S. Kirkconnell: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

I rise to speak on Private Member's Motion No. 2/95—Removal of twenty-five cent tax on diesel fuel.

This Motion gives me great concern at this time. The country has deferred the implementation of the Hotel Tax until June and also, with compassion for the residents, did not increase the garbage fees for private residences, reducing the revenue source upon which the budget was prepared.

I remember quite clearly that the previous government looked very seriously at the Grand Cayman Road Improvement Policy, which came after the Master Ground Transportation Plan. Much of what is imbedded in this Motion was discussed by that Committee.

As I see it, the only way this could be implemented would be by the formation of yet another authority—the Highway Authority. I also realise that as authorities take revenue from the main treasury it reduces the amount of revenue with which the Honourable Financial Secretary has to work.

So, as we look at this whole entire scenario, I look back at the position I faced in the previous government where we were forced to vote large revenue measures to provide for the needs of the country.

Every avenue was looked at where taxes could be imposed with the least impact. One was found to be the additional 25 cents on diesel. This had an effect on the economy, but I also realise that we have no control over the inflation that we face in this country. It was necessary at the time that revenue measure was done, that some increase be given to the civil servants as their salary was not sufficient to cover the cost of living then.

If my memory serves me correctly, I think that out of the revenue in that particular tax-package there was a 5% increase given to civil servants at that time.

We realised that we had no control of the cost of manufactured goods being brought into this country and therefore, we had to seek revenue. Nothing has changed today. I think all of us would like to eliminate all import duties, but certainly none of us is willing to give up any of the privileges and wants and desires that we have and the demands that we make on government.

So, I do not see how today having voted, as the Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman said, it was an eight to seven vote, and at that particular time I admit that I voted with government to pass the revenue measure that imposed this tax because they had no alternative. The then Financial Secretary felt it was prudent that the civil servants be given an increase and the budget was prepared with this in mind. I supported government in that motion and it passed eight to seven.

Today I cannot support this Motion. I look forward maybe in times to come when the country may be in a position to reduce import duty, but, honestly, I do not see it over the horizon that I see. Therefore, I think that we have to be responsible representatives and vote where it is necessary to provide the revenue that our people justly deserve in salaries and the infrastructure to provide the standard of living we all cherish and want in the Cayman Islands.

So, with these words, I cannot support the Motion.

The Speaker: If there is no further debate, would the Mover like to exercise his right to reply...The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

There is much to be said on both sides of the coin regarding this Motion, and I daresay that this is one of the times when heavy is the head that wears the crown.

Initially, when the increase was put on the diesel by the previous government, there was a lot of talk as to the merits and demerits of this additional tax on diesel fuel brought into the country.

The one difficulty with this motion is the fact that if it were dealt with in the immediate future, there would be some problems (to say the least) with projected revenue and the country finding itself in a balanced position at the end of the day. Nevertheless, to my mind, there are several reasons why the Motion has its merits, and several reasons why I think government should be looking into those merits.

It is said that allocating revenue for specific expenditure and separating it from what is now termed as Government's general revenue is not only precedent setting, but can lead to problems in the way our system works.

Let me first of all say that roads, specifically roads with regard to upgrading of our infrastructure, is one of the main priorities to my mind that the country should be looking at. I feel very strongly that a process of development is being skewed in that the way of development is taking place (geographically) it is causing much stress on certain limited areas and to my mind mainly because of a lack of infrastructural development not spreading in the country the way that many of us would like to see it. This has been an ongoing problem. I am sure that legislators before me, and those who are still here, are racking their brains trying to tackle this very serious issue.

I personally feel very strongly that government should very seriously try to look at dealing with our lack of infrastructure in a way that we can see some type of long term specific goals with a view of trying to stick to achieving those goals.

I know we have elections every four years. And I know that there is no guarantee that a train of thought for government today will be followed tomorrow. But it is my belief that from the perspective of continuity we still have to deal with it in the way that we expect once something makes sense, whether it be the same government or another government, that it will be followed through. Certainly all cannot be achieved within the time frame of one election to another, especially if we are going to do things the right way.

This may seem to be skirting the periphery of the Motion at hand. But the truth is that I think the main positive thought behind the second part of the motion was simply to achieve the point where the country would decide that unless there are emergencies occurring (for instance, the Cuban crisis), that there would be specific allocations on an annual basis to make serious attempts to address our lack of infrastructure.

The years that I have tried to keep up to date with the affairs of this country have displayed to me that at all times we deal with certain issues, and, whatever is hot for today, and whatever satisfies the situation and the general populace at that time, is what we focus on. I can truthfully say (and this is my own thought) that I believe that this country has suffered a lot because of that way of thinking.

The decision-makers, whether they be people like me who is simply allowed an opportunity to take a position and hope that the government sees the good in it, or whether it comes to those who make the final decision, it is all a question of the responsibility that goes with the turf and the vision that can be applied as to how we see our country years down the line. We cannot just keep talking about it and hope that 10 years from now things are going to become a reality, it does not work like that. We have to work towards making those things become a reality.

So, while the Honourable Third Official Member and others probably will, when looking at a wider perspective, have a problem with trying to allocate specific revenue to go towards specific expenditure, in that that is not the way the system works now. I am at an impasse as to exactly how we could address this specific problem in a more meaningful fashion. There will be much debate as to why it cannot work the way that I envisage it, but the truth of the matter is that I see no other way at this point in time. And until I am shown a different way, I am at the point of exasperation with our lack of infrastructure and us continually trying to play catch up, that I see no other route than to designate specific funds to deal with it.

We will find other problems every day. If we talk about each Ministry, each of the Ministers can get up and sing a long swan song as to why they need "X" amount of funds if the responsibilities that they have are to be carried out effectively. We all know that. But, today, I contend that while we must have good health services, other basic necessities for our populace, the truth of the matter is that we continue to say that the growth of the country is almost totally dependent on the success of our banking industry and our tourism industry. While we continue to preach diversification, at this point in time those are the main pillars of the economy.

When we look at those two segments of the economy, it is easy for us to understand that development is what will continue to let those two segments thrive and where the spin-offs will come down to the people of this country in order for our standard of living to be maintained. Having accepted that as I do, I feel that one common denominator about that entire perspective is our infrastructure. While our infrastructure extends further than simply roads, my mind tells me that it starts with roads.

I believe that no matter how we apportion priorities, we have not dealt with our infrastructure properly. If we are to continue to boast about this wonderful standard of living and quality of life, then we have to make a special deal with ourselves with regard to the infrastructure and under the ambit of infrastructure, specifically our roads.

Roads will naturally enhance the chances of further development and if we look specifically at the district of George Town we will understand why lack of long term planning has caused such a stress on a very limited area within the district.

We have certain parcels of land that even a few years ago we would have termed the price of them as astronomical. We have other large tracts of land that at this point in time are almost of low value, except for those who see down the line in the future. It is like (and I am sure the Minister for Agriculture will take note of this one) cows in a pasture: If you keep the cows in one pasture all the time you soon will have no grass for them. The point that I am making is that you rotate the use of your pasture so that you will always have one that the cows can feed upon. It is the same thing with land use and traffic flow, road networks, and the ability for land to be developed.

As far as I may have seemed to go with the point, I firmly believe that this country must find a palatable means by which we can address our road situation in a way that it is not done as we see fit. As we see fit has never been good enough as compared to the development that has taken place.

The question is how politically right it is as present, or how politically right it is for the future. I am no exception. As a representative I face the onslaught on an almost daily basis to make those things right. And I know that none of us is the good Lord and we cannot flick fingers and make things happen, but today I take this opportunity during this debate that our infrastructure and particularly our roads need to be addressed in specific form.

I will be taken to task with a list of other priorities and some people are going to say we keep talking about roads but what about this, and what about that. I think the day has come when we have to deal with our lack of infrastructure even if we have to go to the public and say to them: 'Ladies and gentlemen, this is how we perceive the future. These are what funds we have available, this is what we need to do.' If we need to ask the public to help us prioritise, then let us do that. I am sure the public fully understood and if they were made aware of what was happening to us, that if we dealt with our roads the way we should, it would be politically acceptable.

I think that for a long time the final decision has always come into problems because there were more immediate demands. It takes a lot of courage and maybe even people like myself have to summon it up from somewhere and draw from other strength because individually we may not have enough to take the task on properly, but I contend that we have to do it.

I have not given the government a specific answer as to how to do it. That simply displays the complexity of the issue and I accept that difficulty. But I believe that we hold that responsibility for the future of this country. If we continue to develop anywhere near the rate that we are at present, before many of us in here are old and grey, we are going to be faced with a problem that we will not know what to do about. Insofar as costs are presently restricted, they can only be multiplied down line.

I believe that a network of road corridors needs to be established... and I am not trying to shift the topic at hand, I think the stress on the second resolve of this Motion is to deal with our failings in those areas specifically.

Let the government understand that while I may seem apologetic sometimes it is only to make clear my position. It matters not to me who did not do anything right yesteryear, or yesterday, what matters to me is if we understand what was not done right, let us make sure that we do it right for the future. That is what matters to me.

Getting back to the first resolve of the Motion, it reads: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT Government remove the twenty-five cents per gallon tax increase levied on diesel fuel brought into effect by Government Motion 9/91." I could stand here and probably muster a fairly decent argument that the Honourable Third Official Member might have to make some notes on, but I believe in being pragmatic and I also believe in being totally honest with myself.

The reality of the given situation is that I would find it impossible sitting on the government bench to say that this 25-cent tax would be dropped immediately. If the government were to do that immediately, then they would give people like me the upper hand to tell them about their budget which is not balanced. What I would have hoped for is for a bit more specific commitment in trying to alleviate this problem within a given time frame. As the Honourable Third Official Member mentioned, this very dynamic economy that we have . . . and I am sure that I have also heard him mention in times gone by that we have to take a very innovative approach when dealing with projected revenues so that there is as little impact as possible on the general population of this country.

I have contended before (and I have not been given enough of a preaching to change my mind, so I still contend) that when we deal with specific tax measures on any given areas within the commercial sector of our society, it levies a multiplier effect on the ordinary consumer when it comes to what they end up paying directly or indirectly as a result of those tax measures.

When this increase was brought on at the very beginning I listened carefully to the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman justifying his position for voting for it and also justifying his position why he will not support this today; there is some consistency in his thoughts. But we have to be looking at a different train of thought in order to achieve enough revenue for this country to operate to satisfy the ever-growing demands on the government in order for it to function properly.

We say that we do not have any direct taxation and we boast that especially in our banking industry in attracting new foreign business to this country and it certainly is an asset to be able to talk about. But the anomaly is when we put a direct tax on diesel fuel that the largest user of that commodity has a monopoly in this country. It is obvious that while there is a direct taxation which brings that direct revenue to the government, by the time that is passed on through that monopoly to the various commercial areas that have to utilise that monopoly, those commercial areas take into consideration their additional cost and pass it on to the consumer, that if it is 25 cents, the consumer is paying much more. It would take the Good Lord to tell Kurt Tibbetts different.

The point that I make is not a question of what is wrong with it. It is simply that I believe we have to devise other methods to gain revenue. I do not have all the answers I am just trying to help identify what the problem is at this time.

If we are to continue in that vein that is when we are doing an injustice to the people of this country. It will take a lot of knocking of heads, but we have to try to lean towards other areas. When we look at an area that has faced direct taxation and that is a monopoly and it has to spread its services out into the private sector, and each of those corners of the private sector (which provides goods and services for the people of this country) passes that price on again, it is the consumer who pays the most. The truth is, the consumer would have been better off if whatever that 25 cents amounted to at the end of the day was divided amongst the population and told that they must give so much every year and then they would be left alone. The consumer would pay less money. I am not saying that is the answer, I am simply saying that I know that is true.

Having understood that the first part of the resolve section is not something that can be dealt with immediately, I still say that there must be a plan to sit and discuss and draw from all sources that could help in this matter. And I am not suggesting that this is the way that the budget is dealt with, but I suspect that because of so many pressures elsewhere by the time you are called upon for "X" amount of money because that is what it will take to run the country for the year, there is a last minute rush to see how we are going to do it.

Maybe if we could find a way to sit down and go through as many things as possible we might devise means that we can achieve the same goals, revenue-wise, and we may find better ways to accomplish them. I cast no aspersions, but I do believe there is merit to what I am saying.

So to repeat the words often used by the First Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman, "with those few words, I will sit down."

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.43 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.19 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 2/95. The Honourable Minister for Education and Aviation.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

This Motion is typical of what an irresponsible Opposition puts up. It is stating that we should make a reduction of some $4 million in revenue, but they do not provide the solution as to where the $4 million is going to come from to pay for this.

Anybody—you do not even need to have spent any time in Finance—knows that it is very simple to come by and say cut your budget by this amount, but if it is going to be constructively done then the solution to where the $4 million is going to come from to fill this gap has to come with it. Obviously, the Opposition has no plan in place. They just up and criticised us for spending. They are talking about money moved out of the reserves.

What I would like to know from the two Opposition Members is where is the money going to come from to pay for this? Where are they going to take it from? Money does not just grow on trees; it does not just fall out of the air. If $4 million is cut from here, where is the money going to come from to replace it?

Moving on to looking at this and what the true results of what the Minister for Communications and Works has achieved, he has achieved what we promised in our Manifesto without having to cut the $4 million from the budget. That is the reason why today we do not need to reduce the cost of diesel at this stage. That Minister, along with the National Team, has been able to reduce residential rates by 6.35%. So, we have been able to achieve what we promised without having to reduce down the cost on diesel.

What we specifically said in this Manifesto was to seek to reduce the high cost of living, for example, by reducing import duty on diesel and thus reducing the cost of electricity. So, we have reduced the cost of electricity and we have done so without having to reduce the import duty on diesel.

I am told that if there had been a reduction in diesel by 25 cents, it would have possibly reflected somewhere near to 8% reduction in the residential homes for electricity. We achieved substantially that, because we achieved a reduction in electricity of 6.35%. So the basic cost on one's electricity bill for residential purposes has come down by substantially (a bit less) the amount of what this Motion would do.
