Similar with computers: Any unbridled and unsupervised use of the Internet by children is a danger and a weapon. I am saying all these things to stress the importance of a supervised after school programme. I might add that I would expect that television and computers be an integral part of any such programme particularly where it applies to children in the upper age brackets of 12 to 14. This is a fact of life. They are going to come into contact with this at school and at the wider world of work and when they travel.

Television is a cheap babysitter; but it is not a good babysitter. I believe that if we had more of these after-school programmes it would be more beneficial in the sense that it would ensure that our children come into contact and be taught and trained in specific and positive ways which will allow them to be better informed citizens, more productive citizens and also develop and inculcate in them a sense of self-esteem and a sense of responsibility. But, it also has cultural benefits too because one of the problems that we are struggling with—particularly the young people—is that we watch so much American television and we believe we are Americans.

These programmes will allow our children to learn, practise, and participate in activities that are, strictly speaking, cultural and country based. And that is not to say that it won't allow them to develop an appreciation for what is outside of our geographical borders. But they should serve as an emphasis point and a launching pad for an appreciation of what is Caymanian and inculcate what it means to be a Caymanian.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that there is significant merit in the motion. I believe that the government can accept this motion and I believe and I hope that they are so minded. Certainly by so doing, it will add to those communities where these kind of programmes are already well established. It is only fitting that Bodden Town—which according to the last census is the fastest growing residential community in the Cayman Islands . . . It will enhance that reputation of Bodden Town as a desirable growing congenial, tranquil residential community, and it will meet the needs of many young couples who will be relieved in more ways than one when there is supervised after-care for their children.

Mr. Speaker, I believe that the government need not act alone in this. It could harness community efforts. And mention was made of the Community Development Officer. There are other people as well as Mr. Scott, who I am sure would give of their services and who are eminently equipped to help. Some of these people are already involved, but I am sure they would be willing to stretch their efforts even a little more. Significantly, too, we can tap into the resources of the churches—both their physical resources and their personnel.

I would encourage the government in its examination of this to view it in the broadest most comprehensive and community oriented light. Mr. Speaker, I give my support to this and I don't know what is going to become of the proposal made by the gentleman and the lady whom I mentioned already, and the proposal which I shared with the member moving this motion because, of course, the ultimate decision will lie with the government.

I hope, however, that some consideration could be given to entities in the community that have expressed a desire and a willingness to participate in these exercises. I certainly would be willing to lend my support and my efforts both from the viewpoint as a representative and not the least of which from the point of view as an educator who has some insight into these things. I trust, Mr. Speaker, that the motion will be accepted and I hope before long—possibly before the end of the summer—that such a programme is established in the community of Bodden Town incorporating, that is, Savannah and Bodden Town.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wishes to speak?
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I rise to give my support to the private members' motion seeking to establish an after-school programme for the district of Bodden Town. My contribution can be very short.

I would like the government to take into consideration the fact that the whole concept of schooling is changing, it's evolving. We need to recognise that in our society today parents are very much occupied with trying to earn a living and, therefore, the question of how we take care of children that are only legally required to be in school between the hours of say, 8.00 a.m. and 3.00 p.m. is becoming more and more of a question.

Although the State might have conceived its responsibility as being between the hours of 8.00 a.m. and 3.00 p.m., the employment of a great majority of mothers today means that the State must again look at the question with regard to its involvement with the socialisation, and the education of its future members.

I am one of the supporters of the Rehoboth Programme, which operates now from the T.E. McField Youth and Community Centre. I would also like to very much recognise the contribution of the First Elected Member for West Bay who was the Minister for Community Development at that time. He was in fact responsible for bringing this very progressive concept into our social thinking. The Rehoboth Programme in particular is always grateful to the First Elected Member for West Bay for what he did in getting the government to the point . . . and it seems at that particular time it was no easy job to accept that programme and to begin to give that programme the kind of recognition that I believe the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town is asking for Bodden Town.

I believe that if we use the Rehoboth Youth and Community programme after school, based upon very strict religious values, we can begin to understand that discipline has to do with values. And only when strong values are inculcated into the minds of our children will we be able to elicit from them behaviour that is desirable.

So we have watched the tremendous fruits of success with regard to the George Town experiment and we would like to encourage that this concept of after-school education be extended nationally. It is a national concept rather than a concept that has to do with just one, two or three districts. And I believe that this was the intention of the First Elected Member for West Bay when he was the Minister for Community Development. But good ideas take time to establish in the Cayman Islands.

I would also say that the government or the education department needs to reconsider this monopoly with regard to educational facilities, with regard to the buildings. We find that the school buildings are left vacant between the hours of 3.00 p.m. until 7.30 a.m. the following morning. So, for many hours, good government property is left unused when it could be used by the community for continual education programmes during the evening.

In other words, we don't really need to build after-school centres. We don't need to be paying rent for after-school centres when we have the schools. Now, this means that we would have to get some kind of agreement between the education department and the ministry responsible for the after-school centres where they could come in with their separate kind of teachers. Because it would be rather expensive for the government if it ran the programmes itself paying for these highly qualified teachers to run the after-school programmes.

And you really don't need highly qualified personnel. You need people who have good values, who are willing to establish a regime within the particular environment that would cause the kids to behave in such a way has to exhibit the type of concentration necessary for learning.

Now, there is no reason why we cannot continue to encourage people to get involved with the after-school programmes as volunteers. In fact, we could do this in some of the districts by using the primary schools. I don't see the point of saying we need separate facilities for after-school centres, when the kids coming from the schools are leaving empty buildings. I would hope that my recommendations of how it will be possible to utilise the schools in a much more aggressive type of after-school approach would be taken into consideration. Therefore, I would like to commend the member who brought this particular motion.

Mr. Speaker, that is my contribution. Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2:15 p.m. for lunch.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.41 PM

The Speaker: Debate on Private Member's Motion No. 1/99 continuing. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This private member's motion dealing with after-school care is one that the government supports. As other members have mentioned, we also believe that it is not just a government item. For example, the Department of Social Services, I am sure would be happy to assist in the development of an after-school care programme for the district of Bodden Town. But (and this is information the minister has passed on to me) the Department of Social Services is not staffed sufficiently to take sole responsibility for this initiative. I am sure that they are willing to assist the process in terms of training and other activities that are going to be required.

They also feel that it is imperative that the Education Department be involved from the beginning with this programme as it would be an extension for those who are involved with the school day. I think it was the Fourth Elected Member for George Town who reminded us that the school facilities throughout the country are available from about 3.00 p.m. until just about 6.00 a.m. Therefore, we need to ensure that the Education Department is part of whatever proposal for implementation comes forward.

We agree too that the excellent work done by the churches—not just today or yesterday but for the last fifty or more years in this area of care for members of the society, be it young people or otherwise . . . that the churches would be asked to be involved. I know that some of them if (not all) are already involved. Maybe not to the extent that we are talking about here, but I feel certain that they would rise to the occasion if asked to assist.

We know that there is a programme in George Town that the good member has referred to as well. It has already been in operation. Since we are in agreement, Mr. Speaker, I do not propose to make it a long speech. But I think if we look at the country in a global sense and the needs that are evident within our community . . . and I believe some other Member may have made this point as well. Prior to the early sixties, mothers were at home raising their children. And with all of this development that came afterwards, it put pressure on the respective families for the wife to also work which means that the children then do not have that parental supervision like we did.

And we as the government, have to as they say in baseball—step up to the plate—and do what is necessary to work together to ensure that the society as we know it and that we wish to see years down the road is in essence the same wonderful place to live. And we see little items popping up here and there, Mr. Speaker, which we believe need to be addressed. A programme such as what is put forward in this motion is a step in that direction and I believe that we need to address it perhaps in a global context and deal with it along those lines.

So the government is in support of the motion seeking to establish after-care in the Bodden Town district for members of the society who live in that area.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wishes to speak?
The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I rise to add my support to the resolution. I don't think that much more can be said. I believe that the contributions made from this side by the Fourth Elected Member from George Town, the Third Member from Bodden Town, and the mover, the Second Member from Bodden Town, were very good in summing up the situation as it exists.

As minister, one of the things that I put much emphasis on was getting after-school programmes in our communities, recognising the many problems that we were having in and amongst our young people. Times certainly are different from when were growing up. There is a need for positive programmes in the time frame from 3.00 p.m. - 6.30 p.m. or when children are left alone.

Members have referred to churches and the tremendous [work] done from some fifty years ago, as one member has said. And certainly, we want to say a word of thanks to the churches for the work that they have done in our communities. But it was not until we got assistance from government for youth workers that we put the programme in place. Churches have that at their disposal, if they need it and many of them avail themselves of it.

Mr. Speaker, there are some seven or eight programmes presently in operation. I am little bit saddened to note that there are no new ones since I left as minister. And there is room for them as the members from Bodden Town have identified and I trust that the ministry will be up now and about getting this one in place. And for those others that have applied, I do know that they are people who have applied and have not been able to get off the ground. The ministry needs to move quickly in that direction.

I am sorry that the minister who should have been answering this is not here for whatever reason, Mr. Speaker. I would have loved to hear a response as to why some of the applications made to the ministry are not yet processed. As I said, since 1997 there have been none created. And if there is this need, as everybody has said—even on the government side—then there should be some urgency in getting programmes started.

I would hope that the policy has not changed. But I will wait to hear how they will move in that direction to create the one for Bodden Town. Mr. Speaker, I just want to congratulate the mover who has spent some time on this motion. Thank you very much.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the First Elected Member for West Bay just said, there is not much more that can be said on this motion. I too would like to congratulate the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town for bringing this motion, and I would like to particularly congratulate her on her presentation.

I offer my support to the motion, but I am going to state here that I am little bit concerned, if it is a policy of the government, that the government did not move an amendment to this motion to provide a similar service for the district of North Side and the district of East End. I do not think that an after-school programme is provided in these two districts.

I don't think that we should have to come here each time there is a need to set up a programme if it is a government policy to provide this service in all the districts. We heard from the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town (moving the motion) of the needs of our young children, the hours that they spend alone, both parents working to make two ends meet. I don't think the district of North Side and the district of East End are any different from the other districts that require an after-school programme.

So, Mr. Speaker, I would ask the government in accepting this motion to provide an after-school programme in the district of Bodden Town, to also look at the district of North Side to provide a similar programme for those children in that district. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wishes to speak?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, perhaps what can be done is to move an amendment to the motion to include consideration for East End and North Side if the government would accept it. If they don't want to accept it, I won't bother to put it. But I don't see any reason why not to, because it is just a consideration.

[Inaudible interjections]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am hearing from government that it would accept that. I so move, Mr. Speaker, if somebody would second.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I will second that, sir.

The Speaker: An amendment to the motion has been made by the First Elected Member for West Bay and seconded by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. Does any member wish to speak to it?

If there is no debate, I will put the question that the motion be amended.... You will prepare an amendment or...?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes.

The Speaker: Maybe we will take that at a later time then. I will wait to put the question later then. The only thing I see for us to do is to suspend proceedings for a few minutes while the Clerk prepares the amendment.

We shall suspend for ten minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 2.52 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.10 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Before we took the break . . . and I have waived the two days' notice on the amendment. Would the First Elected Member from West Bay now move the amendment as written? Do you have a copy?

AMENDMENT TO Private Member's Motion NO. 1/99

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The amendment is as follows: That we delete the words "such a programme for the district of Bodden Town" as they appear in the resolve section and substitute therefor the words "such programmes for the districts of Bodden Town, East End and North Side."

The Chairman: Is there a seconder? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I wish to second the amendment, sir.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 1/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does any member wish to speak to it?

If there is no debate, I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 1/99 has been passed.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 1/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: If there is no further debate, I shall now put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 1/99— The Honourable mover wishes to exercise her right of reply?

Miss Heather Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. First of all, I would like to thank the government for accepting this motion and also my sincere thanks to my colleagues for their support as well on this motion.

I am sure every honourable member in this honourable House realises how passionate I am about this motion. I took specific note of what my colleague, the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town, mentioned regarding a place to house such a programme. It is our intention to seek the assistance and the involvement of churches in the Bodden Town district. In fact, Mr. Speaker, I have been approached by church members who have indeed expressed interest in assisting. This is the whole idea of why this motion was brought, to get the churches and the community involved.

I look forward to working with my two colleagues, the First Elected Member and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. I know the three of us are very community-minded and it will go a long way to make Bodden Town a better district, assisting our young children in setting up this after-school programme for their benefit.

Mr. Speaker, the new amendment also has my full support. Anything I can do to assist the member for North Side . . . she knows she can count on me when it concerns youth and the elderly.

I thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 1/99, as amended, do pass. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 1/99, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 8/99, Prayer of Thanksgiving for the Cayman Islands and Comfort for Victims of Other Jurisdiction to be moved by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 8/99

PRAYER OF THANKSGIVING
FOR THE CAYMAN ISLANDS AND COMFORT FOR VICTIMS OF OTHER JURISDICTION

(WITHDRAWN)

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I rise to ask permission to withdraw Private Member's Motion No. 8/99, Prayer of Thanksgiving for the Cayman Islands and Comfort for Victims of Other Jurisdiction. Just allow me briefly to say that part of the reason for withdrawing the motion is that the motion was for the last sitting of the Legislative Assembly—during the period we had been experiencing these hurricanes.

I feel, Mr. Speaker, as it had to do with it being discussed and resolved at a specific time, I ask now for the permission of this honourable House to withdraw this Motion.

The Speaker: In accordance with the regulations of Standing Order 24(14) permission is being sought to withdraw this motion. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion has been withdrawn.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 8/99 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 4/99, Civic Centre/Hurricane Centre in George Town, to be moved by the Third Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 4/99

CIVIC CENTRE/HURRICANE CENTRE IN GEORGE TOWN

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 4/99 entitled, Civic Centre/Hurricane Centre in George Town, standing in my name, which reads:

"WHEREAS budgetary provision of CI $100,000 was made in the 1997 Estimates under Head 51-104 (34-451-1) to commence the construction of a Civic Centre/Hurricane Centre in George Town;

"AND WHEREAS budgetary provision of CI $25,000 was again made in the 1998 Estimates under Head 22-550-1 (54-103) for preliminary designs and costing of the George Town Civic Centre/Hurricane Centre;

"AND WHEREAS there is an increasing demand for such a facility within this the most populous district of Grand Cayman for various civic events including school graduations, etcetera;

"AND WHEREAS there is an urgent need for additional hurricane shelters in George Town;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government consider taking immediate steps to secure and/or earmark suitable property for the construction of a Civic Centre/Hurricane Centre in George Town and that such construction commence as soon as possible, but no later than June 1999.

The Speaker: Is there a seconder? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to second the motion.

The Chairman: Private Member's Motion No. 4/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: As in the case of the previous motion, this motion was submitted during the fourth meeting of the 1998 Session of the House. At that time, it appeared as Private Member's Motion No. 27/98. Due to the protracted meeting of Finance Committee, it was agreed by the honourable House that this motion would be brought forward to the first meeting of the 1999 Session.

Mr. Speaker, also because of the delay in dealing with this motion, the period in the resolved section dealing with the commencement of construction of the building, where it states that "...such construction commence as soon as possible but no later than June 1999" that section is not realistic because it would be too much of a short period for government and the developers, the builders, Public Works Department to be able to get this building on track. If it had been dealt with as was envisaged for the last meeting then this would have been a much more realistic proposition.

As in the case of the previous motion, I trust that this motion will get the full support of the House. There is already a sort of tacit support from the Minister for Education who is also a Member for George Town and other members. It is not asking for a completely new situation or proposition, as budgetary provision was made in the budget as far back as 1997 for action to be taken on this facility. I trust that members will not find it necessary to enter into a political or adversarial debate on this, but that indeed, because of the obvious need for this facility, it will be met with the unanimous support of this honourable House.

Mr. Speaker, a similar situation was brought to the House as far back as 1995 in the form of Private Member's Motion No. 16/95 entitled "Disaster Relief Fund." It was brought by the then First Elected Member for Bodden Town, my honourable colleague who is now the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. I read through that motion and I felt that it was somewhat unfortunate that it was not approved at the time. It was obvious to me from reading through the motion that the honourable mover had, as is his usual style, done his homework and much research was done.

He made a very convincing argument in support of a relief fund, and much of that debate centred on the need for a disaster relief fund in the form of a fund for the aftermath of a hurricane, similar to the terms of my motion.

I wish to point out that notwithstanding the structural integrity of most of the buildings here in the Cayman Islands, that is, those approved by the Central Planning Authority in Grand Cayman and the Authority in Cayman Brac, I share the view with some of my colleagues that if a hurricane the magnitude of Hurricane Mitch were to hit the Cayman Islands that we would see very substantial and serious damage to many of our buildings. The question could therefore be asked: Is anyplace safe in a hurricane of the intensity of Hurricane Mitch? That question notwithstanding, I feel that it is our duty and responsibility to ensure that shelters up to hurricane specifications are provided for our people.

It was certainly frightening to learn from the Honourable First Official Member with responsibility for this subject (in answer to a parliamentary question brought by myself) that of the 23 hurricane shelters available in the Cayman Islands—19 in Grand Cayman, 3 in Cayman Brac and 1 in Little Cayman—that only four are built to hurricane specifications. These four, for the information of the listening public, are the Civic Centre in East End; the emergency medical centre in West Bay, which is not properly equipped to be used as a shelter for the general public; the Aston Rutty Civic Centre in Cayman Brac; and the North Side Civic Centre. So, Mr. Speaker, having excluded the emergency medical centre in West Bay I think we could reasonably and safely say that there are only three hurricane centres available to the public built to hurricane specifications.

In addition to the alarming statistics provided by the Honourable First Official Member—which showed no hurricane shelter in the two most populous districts, George Town and West Bay, up to hurricane specifications—we also found that in George Town, which has 58% of the population of Grand Cayman had only 38% of the hurricane shelter spaces available to the people of Grand Cayman.

Just for the record, I would like to quickly say that there are four hurricane shelters in George Town, and none of those shelters are up to hurricane specifications. I will not go through the list of these, but if honourable members would wish to have it, I would be happy to provide this information.

Also, in West Bay, there are four shelters and none of those shelters are up to hurricane specification. In East End, there are three shelters. One in the primary school and one in Gun Bay at the Civic Centre, with the civic centre being the only building that is up to the specification.

In North Side, the Adventist Church and the Civic Centre are used with only the Civic Centre being up to that standard. The Breakers Community Hall is not up to the standard and none of the Bodden Town or Savannah area is up to the hurricane specification. Similarly, in Cayman Brac, West End, and Spot Bay, there is only one in Cayman Brac and that is the Aston Rutty Centre.

So, Mr. Speaker, when we look at the very alarming statistics we can see the serious situation we are in, not only in George Town—the most populous district—but indeed throughout the island. We also have to bear in mind that Bodden Town is the fastest growing district in Grand Cayman. That district should also be given very urgent and serious attention.

Mr. Speaker, when we look at the information on the George Town Hurricane Shelters, we see that of the 2,500 spaces available in Grand Cayman, only 950 spaces are available in George Town. This represents 38% of the total shelter spaces in a district that boasts 58% of the total population. This is based on 1996 figures as I was unable to obtain any later figures, but I believe that these are fairly accurate. So I do not believe that these figures, the proportionate figures would have differed very much.

I would just like to mention on this that recent experiences with Hurricane Georges and Mitch have shown that we could easily have in the order of 3,000 tourists to shelter in the event of a major hurricane. And that there may not be sufficient time to evacuate all our tourists depending on the nature of the storm, etcetera. There are typically 6,000 to 7,000 air tourists in the Cayman Islands during the hurricane season.

During Hurricane Gilbert ten years ago, in the order of 2,000 persons were accommodated in government shelters. The members of the National Hurricane Committee who were involved with the provision and management of shelters are of the opinion that we are extremely low on hurricane shelter spaces and that a more appropriate number of spaces would be in the order of 5,000 to 7,000 spaces. This can be achieved over the next approximately five years by constructing new government buildings and particularly new school buildings to hurricane shelter standards. But that will leave us short of spaces for a few years to come.

During my short presentation on this motion I will not attempt to deal with the technical minimum hurricane shelter requirements. That can be better dealt with by the National Hurricane Committee and the engineers of Public Works and the private sector. However, in considering the development a civic centre to be used as a hurricane shelter certain basic requirements must be met, such as the proper location for this structure, the electrical power requirements, the emergency medical centre and so on and so forth.

There are certain basic things that government must bear in mind when considering this. The shelter should be located a sensible distance from the sea—ideally no closer than around 1,500 feet—and it should be located in an area that is not prone to flooding. Because of these basic requirements regarding location of the centre, I would request that if government gives this motion its full support (which I understand it will) it seriously considers trying to locate appropriate property for this needed facility.

In discussing this with members before coming here, certain members rightly raised the point that if a hurricane the magnitude of Hurricane Mitch hit the Cayman Islands that perhaps no shelter would be 100% safe. But, Mr. Speaker, I think that the basic requirements would have to be somewhat below that standard. I understand that the National Hurricane Committee will be looking at a facility that could withstand a basic wind speed of something like 110 miles per hour rather than trying to build a facility for over 200 miles per hour wind at this point. This is something that we will need to seriously think about because unless we are in a facility that is adequate, then we might as well not leave our own homes or other areas of abode.

The government has (as I said earlier) given its support to this motion in a way by providing token provision in the 1999 budget under the capital budget, under the account centre, 22-551. There is an amount of $10,000 that is provided in the budget for this project. However, if we look on that page of this year's budget, we will see that there is an estimated total cost of something like $4M that was approved for this project. I trust that the $10,000 approved in 1999 is not a sign that this project will eventually fade away because it started with $100,000 in 1997 then it went to $25,000 in 1998, now it is down to $10,000.

I trust that by accepting this motion government will also give the undertaking to the public that it will see this as a priority and that funds will be made available to start the development of this project.

It might also mean that there is already land that could be used for this purpose. I understand that a particular school might be interested in utilising some of its space for that purpose. But if a school is going to be used for that purpose we would have to ensure that the school is built to the basic hurricane specification. Otherwise, as I said earlier, we might as well not use the facility.

Plus, there are also other requirements especially for the handicapped that must be placed within the facility. So it is not enough to say we have an open space that can be used for a hurricane shelter and as a civic centre. That open space must also be equipped for use by the handicapped as well as other individuals.

I need not remind the honourable House, and in particular the government bench, that this project is too important to be placed on the back burner. Government should locate the necessary property post haste. I believe that the project should be a customised building built to certain specifications. It should not just be housed in some open space because that space might be available. I believe that this is such an important issue that government should form a committee to look at the logistics of such a building, the sort of designs and configuration of the building. The same way that another government building would be built to certain specifications and designs we should also invite the experts from Public Works and the private sector to advise us on the building of this facility.

I have not said a lot on the need for a civic centre—even though this motion addresses the need for both a civic centre and a hurricane shelter—mainly because I regard the hurricane shelter to be of greater importance at this point in time. But this is not to minimise the need for a civic centre in George Town to accommodate such things as very large conferences, school graduations, and other civic and social events. We now use the Lions Centre and some of the church halls, but I know that certain conferences would not be easily accommodated in some of those areas so we may have to look at building a more adequate facility.

As intimated earlier it is important that an organising committee be appointed to advise government on the plans and logistics of the development of this civic centre and hurricane shelter. Whether as a joint venture with the private sector or as a government facility, this must be done with the advice of an organising committee. Such a committee would be responsible for overseeing the design and configuration and suggest the necessary equipment for the facility. If this motion is accepted—as I hope it will be—I trust that the project would proceed as a matter of priority and would not be delayed any longer.

I would also recommend that to head up this organising committee, government consider somebody of the calibre of Mr. Kirkland Nixon. Not only because of his knowledge in matters to do with hurricanes, but he is a senior member of the National Hurricane Committee.

I would also request that government consider including but not necessarily limiting the members to individuals such as the Director of Social Services, the Chief Engineer, the Chief Education Officer and the Hospital Administrator. I am sure there are others that should be included but those individuals come to mind as some of the key individuals within the government sector that should be included. I am sure that there are certain key people in the private sector that should also be included.

Mr. Speaker, the terms of reference of the organising committee should also authorise them to be able to make recommendations for suitable property or suitable accommodation if that is the way that they plan to go.

It was brought to my attention that there was a recommendation that we look at a particular school that might have certain accommodation available. But, as I said earlier, if we do take that route to look at a school it is not enough to say that there is available space. The space must be able to accommodate a cross-section of individuals including those that are old and incapacitated. It is not just enough to say we have a space. Also, it must provide for trip-in generators so that if the electricity is off that these individuals will have a certain degree of comfort.

Mr. Speaker, I will not say a lot more on this motion as I hope that government will see fit to support it. But I would just like to say that, in reference to a joint venture, it had been mentioned to me by a minister of one of the churches here in George Town. His church would be very willing to enter into a joint venture with government whereby his organisation, his church, would provide with the understanding that they would be involved with the management and the maintenance of the facilities. This is one of the advantages, of course.

As he rightly pointed out also there are possible concerns that may be considered by some members of the public. If it is under the management of a church then there could be certain religions that may not be too comfortable with that arrangement. Be that as it may, I do feel that this is within the purview of the organising committee, I have suggested. This is something that they could look into in their recommendations to government.

Mr. Speaker, what we now need is a tangible and realistic financial commitment by government, not just a token provision. I trust that if the government is minded to support this—which I hope it is—that in doing so it gives a commitment that this will indeed form a major priority of government.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Boddan: Mr. Speaker, the honourable minister in charge of this has given me the opportunity to speak on this as it is a George Town matter.

I would like to begin by commending the mover of this motion. There is a very obvious need for a civic centre, and even more so for a hurricane shelter in George

Town. In relation to the hurricane shelter, this is something where we are dealing with people's lives. It is important that we build whatever is necessary to deal with our population during a hurricane. The worry that the mover of this motion has had to the wind strength of the buildings (and we recently had a list of them) is one that is also well founded. I think it was not really until Hurricane Mitch—which had winds in excess of 200 mph—moved through the region that the force or of that category of hurricane was realised.

The hurricane shelters under the Florida Code, which is the southern building code that we are under, deals with buildings to take winds just in excess of 100 miles per hour, I think it is 135 miles an hour maximum. So, while it may only be once in a century or half century that we get a hurricane the strength of over 200 miles per hour, I would strongly recommend that, at least in relation to the big shelters, there be a construction either of steel or of reinforced concrete that can withstand winds in excess of 200 miles an hour; and of a size that would be necessary to put people in for perhaps 12 to 18 hours or whatever that force would last. Once the people are in there and the heaviest part of the hurricane goes by, obviously they would be able to come out.

Now, there may be no other structure there when they come out, but I believe to try to build a building large enough for people to occupy of that structure it is possibly cost prohibitive. We are looking at really basically a hurricane bunker, if you could call it that, in which people could withdraw to for short periods in the event of a very heavy hurricane.

Now, that may never happen again for another fifty years. But I believe that it is something, sir, that the Honourable Chief Secretary who is responsible for the Disaster Committee and the islands preservation (if I may put it that way) . . . it is something that I think we all should look at. It does provide a solution to that force of wind. Obviously, I support a civic centre for George Town and I also support that it be a hurricane shelter.

The mover of the motion mentioned that he hoped government would make tangible and realistic commitments, not just a token. Mr. Speaker, for some time now I too have been trying to find a solution to this matter. Within the past few days I believe that subject to this legislature agreeing I may be able to come up with a solution to this problem.

Mr. Speaker, the Community College is about to build a hall that is 13,600 square feet. It will be built to hurricane strength, and that will cost us an extra one-third to do. It will therefore be built as a custom-built hurricane shelter.

I take the point that the honourable mover made, that we do have some shelters that were built very long ago. I think perhaps updating . . . and I know the Honourable Chief Secretary has ensured that many of those have been reinforced with hurricane straps put in and everything. This will have handicapped facilities in it. I believe if we could spend a bit of time when we get back in a week's time (because I need a bit of time to try to put together what I would need to show to the honourable mover and my other two colleagues from George Town, and members of the House) . . .

It has the handicapped facilities in it. It would be air-conditioned, it will have a kitchen, changing rooms, a storage room, a sports arena, a balcony, a drama room and most important, it is very central. It is in the vicinity of the sports complex, the schools, and the other sporting facilities that are there, the hard courts. And while there is adequate parking on the Community College's land (because there is quite a bit of land that the college owns), it also would have access to the massive car park for the Truman Bodden Sports facilities there.

It will have an emergency generator and all the necessary hurricane facilities in it, and it would obviously have the storage for hurricane supplies. We can ensure that there is a built-up area for functions outside the main building because this at times can be very important during months when we don't have a lot of rain. Sometimes it is more pleasant to have functions outside.

The area itself . . . and it is hard to explain this but I think we would really have to get together on it because I really think that this may be an acceptable solution with putting out very little money unless modifications would be needed. Like I said the square footage is 13,600 square feet—

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The cost (I am going to come on to that in a couple of minutes)

Inside as well, there will be a balcony with seats so there would be seating below and there could be seating on the balcony, which would be mainly used for sports really.

Mr. Speaker, it would also have a sports floor to it; it will be a typical school hall. I have spoken with the President of the Community College and also it is something that have been offered by the Board and I believe that this could well be a quick answer.

The other point I wanted to make, sir, the road that now goes to the College, the Crewe Road Bypass will be coming and joining into that road so there would be access from the new bypass. Failing that, one of the things (subject to my three colleagues from George Town agreeing) I believe we should do (and it would not cost very much at an early stage anyhow) is run a road in from Walkers Road. I think it is about 11,000 to 12,000 feet or maybe that is yards, I don't know. Anyhow it is not very far because we are basically only going in front of the Hurley's Shop and that would then connect the College to Walkers Road and avoid a very long distance of going all the way around the George Hicks School.

I know some of the land is cliff so it seems like most of the ground in that area is fairly solid. I think it is, well, I know it is well inland so it could be placed sufficiently high to ensure that it is a proper hurricane shelter and civic centre. Like I said, it is very central because it is into an area where there are a lot of other school and sports facilities.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The size of what? Well, I said 13,600 square feet.

I think we have 15 acres of land in total so there is plenty of land for that. There is a massive car park beside it that could be connected instead of coming all the way around. Perhaps, a 10 or 12 foot walkway from the easterly part (which is rarely used) of the car park, walking straight across to the hall. But whatever amount of parking we need, there is the acreage.

Secondly, there is parking for the Community College and also at present between the John Gray High School and the Community College there is further parking in front. So, I really think that this is probably one as central as we are going to get it. While I don't know exactly where it is going, I do know there is a lot of cliff there. So it is probably good land to build this type of facility on.

Now, the cost, Mr. Speaker. The cost is already provided for as we know. But, obviously, I think further down the line we would want, you know, government to relieve the College of some of that debt. The cost is estimated at $2,348,000 and for this we get a loan of about $1.3. There is sufficient money in the college now to contribute maybe about $1M and the plans are all ready, in fact they are just about ready to go out to tender. But I think we need to look at this because it just seems to me that this is something being done anyhow.

The President said that this is a Community College, why not a Community Hall? And I think that this could be a very good solution to the problem we have.

Now, negotiations are going on and I must say the President is a very good businessman, he is a very good negotiator. Negotiations are going on to reduce this price. I know this is something that government would normally do on its system but hopefully there will be savings on that amount. Government, by the way, quite a while back, required the College to do this as a hurricane shelter. Like I said it added a third to the cost but it will now be a purpose built hurricane shelter that is useable for a civic centre and for their hall and I am sure that it can be shared. No matter how we go, the building is going to cost in this area anyhow.

If honourable members are happy, once I can get stuff put together on it, then it seems that we could have a solution to what the honourable mover on this motion has quite rightly put forward. I think that we could really get literally no better location because you need a lot of land, sir, and there is nowhere in the middle of town obviously. We will never get as central as the Town Hall, not in George Town. It is not very far and it would be linked, sir, to Walkers Road ultimately. Well, it is linked now to the Bob Thompson Way and Crewe Road because you can go up through and back of the school. The bypass would be connected into the road, which would give even further access to it.

What I would do is to pull together the relevant parts of the plans and that sort of thing for honourable members to look at. If they saw fit, then we could proceed on that line or if necessary, I guess there should be a better time if modifications are needed.

So, government is happy to support it. I commend the honourable member for bringing it. I must say that we have talked about this, all four of us, for a long time and it is the first time that I have really seen a solution. And solutions that don't cost money are rare in this world. So I think we should grasp on this really and.... Sorry?

[Inaudible Interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, I don't mean build it for nothing. But we were going to build it anyhow for the College.

My colleague has asked me to explain. . . I am not saying we are going to build it for nothing. We were going to build it in any event as a hurricane shelter with the handicapped facilities and everything in it—generators, supplies and the whole lot. If the size and that sort of thing is okay then I think we could find an early solution.

Executive Council some time back (a couple of years back, I guess) took a decision that all new buildings unless they are in areas that are subject to flooding . . . we had that with, for example, Red Bay. We know that is a very low-lying area that may have to be evacuated. I think that is probably the only new building in recent times that was not built to hurricane strength. The decision was taken because it was not the appropriate area to spend the extra one-third of the money on.

I am not certain what the hurricane strength moves it up to when it is built this way. But I would still strongly recommend, sir, that we look at what I would call the hurricane bunkers in the event that another 200 MPH storm comes close to the shores. I think it would save a lot of lives.

I would like to thank the minister in charge for allowing me to address this matter, because it is in my district, and also to thank the honourable mover of the motion for bringing this. It had really spurred a lot more intense thinking—at least on my part. And as you can see I have the Community College President here with me. So we will sit down and put together as much on this as we can and when we come back, we could just meet and have a look at it.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Before I call on the next member we have about twenty-three minutes before the hour of interruption. Do honourable members want to take a break or shall we just continue right through.

It is the wish of the House that we continue?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, in what is a relatively short contribution, I want to say that I am happy that I have lived to see the government accept a sensible motion. I wish to commend the mover and the seconder.

I say this in all seriousness and not tongue-in-cheek because as the mover mentioned, in 1995 when I brought the motion (which was seconded by the then Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac), calling for government to establish a disaster relief fund, we spoke at great length about the necessity to set up these kinds of shelters and to have some kind of organisational plan whereby we can dispense with funds. I still think that it is necessary to have such a fund established.

I have been speaking with one of my colleagues, the Elected Member for North Side, about bringing back such a motion. There are those of us on this side who deem such a fund of crucial importance given the experience of Hurricane Mitch and given the predictions by climatologists that for the next decade the hurricanes will be of greater intensity and greater frequency.

It is a pity that these kinds of motion have to be embroiled in the political arena where the government thinks that it must play political one-upmanship and deny the nation and the country the infrastructure it should have just because it is deemed that some poor struggling political soul may gain creditability which the government begrudges them. I am happy to stand on my record to say that as a proud son of the Mico College, I don't sit here and cut my ten. My being here is purely constructive. And, if one has any doubts about that, he just has to look at the litany of motions I have moved since I came here in 1988 to see that I am thinker destined—certainly if not in this forum, in another forum—one of these days to be a leader.

I believe that it is worthwhile encouraging a joint venture. I say that for many reasons. I certainly don't believe, with economic developments and all these kinds of things that impinge on the government's coffers, that it is fair to expect the government to provide all this infrastructure particularly when we have a society where there are other entities just as eminently equipped. I would certainly encourage the government to scrutinise and to examine with an open mind any proposal to develop a joint venture. I believe that if we have corporate minded entities that this is the way to go. Such a hurricane shelter/civic centre, if it is to be constructed properly, would stand somewhere in the vicinity of around $5M to construct. And I am not even talking about equipping it, because you would need a sound emergency medical centre and you would need all the equipment that goes with that. So we are talking about $5M for construction alone. Staffing and equipping then would be a significant incidental expenditure.

I heard the minister speaking for the government mention something about bunkers. Certainly it is feasible to inspect the establishment of hurricane bunkers, but I have a particular concern about that in a low lying area prone to tidal waves and flooding if the bunkers are on the ground. We have to really deal with that—

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, if I may just explain something.

The Speaker: Would the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town give way?

Hon. Truman Bodden: I didn't mean an underground bunker. I would say the bunker has to be about 20 feet above sea level. I use the word "bunker" because of the type of building. Do you follow what I mean?

It will be above ground. . . well, up above the tide, but steel . . . a bunker type of building but not on the ground, sir. I am sorry if I misled.

The Speaker: Thank you.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I thank the minister for that explanation and I concur with him that certainly such a proposal would bear examination and we should check into the feasibility of constructing it.

If we really reflect seriously on the damage of Hurricane Mitch in Central America, I mean these kinds of hurricanes have ominous proportions and present dangers far from what we have thus far conceived in the Cayman Islands.

I want to say in closing that I have received numerous requests from my constituents in the Savannah area about the construction of such a hurricane centre/civic centre. I believe that these requests are legitimate because Savannah is a rapidly growing area. Even though the standard of housing throughout the Cayman Islands is by international standards excellent, if not among the best in the world—barring no country—I believe it is worth the while for us to cursorily examine the construction of such a centre. A hurricane centre in these kinds of residencies offers the security of numbers and is especially attractive as a place where the elderly, children, and those who may be physically disabled can be housed together. Those are the persons in the event of this kind of emergency that would be at greatest risk.

So I want to say in recognition of these requests that I will, in my capacity as one of the representatives, try to impress upon the government, finances being kind of tight right now . . . I would not expect the government to take it upon itself now. But I certainly will encourage them to look into this and I would encourage my colleagues in the honourable House to take these matters seriously. I am happy that the government has seen fit to accept the motion. I commend the mover and the seconder and I look forward to rendering any assistance that I can render as a member of the Parliament in support of this and other such worthy undertakings.

I want to say finally that I was impressed by the knowledge and concern of the Honourable First Official Member during question time a few mornings ago. And I don't have to speak for him. He is certainly knowledgeable and articulate enough to speak for himself. I don't want to be so presumptuous as to say that he be co-opted, I would rather say that he be kept apprised of all such developments, since the whole business of the National Hurricane Centre is administered from his office. And, that office is responsible for putting out the various bulletins, etcetera, to see that the nation on a whole is prepared.

Finally, I want to say that as we approach (because soon it will be June again) another hurricane season we cannot be too prepared and I am happy that at this time in our busy schedule we are talking about such important matters. I give the government my undertaking that they can expect constructive input and support from this honourable member.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I offer my support for Private Member's Motion No. 4/99, which calls for a Civic Centre/Hurricane Shelter for George Town.

As the Chairman for the National Hurricane Committee, I have had a great deal of concern, particularly for the area of George Town, in the event of a hurricane. As honourable members have seen recently from the statistics, there are very few spaces available in what we do have as shelters in George Town, and it is incumbent on us all to correct this.

Mr. Speaker, Grand Cayman is relatively flat with the exception of a few areas, and relatively low. This, of course, is also of great concern. As other members have mentioned already, we must try to identify a suitable area, hopefully the highest possible area, as far away from the sea as possible for whatever facility we choose.

As chairman of the National Hurricane Committee, I have attended a number of the Annual National Hurricane Conferences held in the United States. In fact, this year's National Hurricane Conference is taking place this week. Traditionally, it comes the week of Good Friday. In fact, it concludes at 12 noon on Good Friday. Tomorrow at the conclusion, Dr. William Gray, one of US leading authorities on predicting hurricanes, will give his prediction on the tropical storms and hurricanes for the Atlantic and the Caribbean. We all await his predictions.

Mr. Speaker, one thing that has come out of the National Hurricane Conference (and it was the first time I heard it, and it was a sobering thought) is that statistics for the last hundred years have proven that water kills more people than wind. I use to think years ago that wind was the biggest killer, but that is not supported by statistics. The hurricane surge along with torrential rain is the major killer in a hurricane.

For many years, the Cayman Islands have been amazingly fortunate. We have been able to escape almost unscathed during the hurricane seasons while our neighbours to the east, north, and most recently to the west have been severely hit. We should not gamble with the fact that we have been lucky in the past and I am so very pleased that this motion has been brought and that it has been so well supported. I believe it will be supported by everyone here.

It is incumbent on us to take the matter seriously and to find the means to construct, or adapt as the case may be, a facility that can be used for George Town.

Mr. Speaker, whatever is built must be equipped with a suitable standby generator, as the mover mentioned earlier, complete with automatic starting and the many other necessities. About two years ago, maybe three, the National Hurricane Committee decided to add two new sub-committees. One was called "Mitigation" and the other "Recovery." We subsequently combined them into one committee, and we do have a considerable amount of support from private sector, individuals, most of whom are professionals who have been able to contribute a great deal.

One sobering thought is if the George Town area gets severely hit many of the commercial buildings do not have their own standby generators. I know this is slightly off the subject but there is a lot of food for thought. Should this island have a major hit from even a moderate hurricane, the economy can be crippled for a period of time until electricity can be restored.

Mr. Speaker, on a more positive note, I authorised earlier in the year the purchase of computer software to assist the National Hurricane Committee in dealing with models which will identify flood-prone areas not only in George Town but in of all the three islands. I expect that software will be in hand fairly shortly and this information will I believe prove invaluable in taking another look at the hurricane shelters we now have, not only in George Town but in all districts of this and the other islands.

We will be able to better determine and better advise the public on areas that are safe or areas that are not safe in the event of a hurricane. We hope that this software will be along shortly and we can better work towards dealing with this situation.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think I need to say much more except that I am delighted to lend my full support to this motion. I am glad that it has come and I am glad that we are going to work together to see a facility in George Town that will be a big improvement over what we have today. I want to commend the mover and the seconder and all those who have spoken on this.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other member wishes to speak?
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, my contribution should be brief, but I would like to say first of all that it would be absolutely impossible for mankind to completely safeguard himself from all the elements of nature. We as human beings are at a certain degree of risk with regard to diseases and natural weather conditions.

However, I think it is quite obvious that Caymanians have testified to the fact that their greatest insurance policy has been their Christian heritage and belief. And it is this rather than any construction of any building which has provided them with the security so badly need. I think those of us who subscribe to those principles need to therefore remember in trying to create the physical protection that spiritual protection is still the one that we should rely heavily upon.

In believing somehow that there is this faith that is well founded, that we are blessed by God and, therefore, that we have protection from the hurricane, I would begin to say that hurricane shelters are important but we have to look at the fact that we will not be able to create this type of modern structure to protect everyone, especially when society is growing so rapidly.

I believe that the business community has a specific responsibility to provide shelter for persons here because a large number of people that are living in the Cayman Islands are not Caymanian but they are working here for institutions that may not even bring tax back to the Cayman Islands society. So I am thinking when buildings are being built, banks are being built . . . we see these big business buildings that are going up in George Town, why shouldn't these buildings be built to a kind of specification that would allow them to at least provide shelters for their own employees if nothing else. We need to think about that as a possibility in terms of preparing for a hurricane. We need to encourage the business community to evolve within their own designs protection for their people.

Mr. Speaker, I see that you are moving.....

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: I would like to interrupt you for just a moment. We have reached the hour of interruption. I don't know if it is the wish that we continue on, but I imagine that a few of you have to go. The honourable mover has the right to reply and other members may wish to speak, so I would entertain a motion for the adjournment if that is the wish of the House.

Is that the wish of the House?

[Interjection: Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes, it is]

The Speaker: Because they were telling me no. Please continue Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 10(2) to finish the debate and voting on this motion.

The Speaker: I shall put the question: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The debate continues. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED.

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you very much for allowing us the possibility to finish this motion. What I have to say is not very much. I just want to basically call to the attention of members of this House that it is impossible for us to design and pay for a system that would afford everybody protection from severe hurricanes and storms. The real protection has to come from our faith, that we are protected by the Almighty God.

Secondly, once we have that understanding, we would go towards the situation of trying to encourage the private sector when building their banks, when building their business houses to include spaces for, if not the general public, at least their employees to protect them from hurricane disaster. So some degree of assistance can come by this way.

If we are looking at that what I am saying, we have to look at separately the civic centre concept, the town hall concept. I know that we are interested in trying to combine the two but it is important to understand that civic centres have specific social functions and we need to see this. I for one believe that George Town has now grown with regard to numbers and with regard to the specific identification of individual communities within George Town with the emergence of specific community consciousness within these particular areas, that George Town would be best served at this particular time by having more than one civic centre. I would say that we would have one perhaps in the Scranton area, we would have one perhaps in the Rock Hole area and we would even consider the one that the Leader of Government Business/the Minister of Education is suggesting, the larger one.

I do believe at this particular time in working towards developing the civic centre concept, we need to combine that somehow with the whole concept that we have of community policing, community workers, community committees. We need to integrate some type of facility by way of making them available for these groups to use. And if we revisit this whole concept again, I believe that we will not only do what the Minister of Education is suggesting we would also at the same time look towards developing some centres that might be the size of the T.E. McField Youth and Community Centre.

Those things don't cost $1M. We could probably put them together with the assistance of service clubs or something of this sort for $200,000, $250,000, $300,000. I would suggest that at least two of these similar types of facilities be erected within the district of George Town as soon as possible. So, I am supporting the motion, supporting the contribution the Minister of Education has made with regard to combining that with his Community College/Community Hall concept. But at the same time I am advocating that we look towards establishing smaller civic centres within some of the communities in George Town that would not serve necessarily as hurricane centres but would have a much more immediate social role at the moment.

Mr. Speaker, thank you very much.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If the no other member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: My comments will be rather brief. I wish to thank the members who got up in support of the motion and those who did not speak by their silent support of the motion. I know that even though the First Elected Member for George Town did not speak on the motion he has told me many times, we have discussed this, that he is also in support of this motion as is the seconder, Mr. Bush. And, I am sure all honourable members of this House support the motion. I believe that we in fact have a unanimous support for the motion.

I would particularly like to thank the Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning for the very good suggestion raised by him and that we may be able to have this dream realised much quicker than we had thought. And I do hope that we can get started on this very soon.

I also thank the Honourable First Official Member who is a very knowledgeable person when it comes to the logistics of the National Hurricane Committee as the Chairman that has been there for a number of years. And getting his solid support behind this is very, very encouraging indeed.

I thank all honourable members those who spoke in support and those who by their silence have also supported the motion. And, Mr. Speaker, I trust that we can soon see action taken to get this facility on the road.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion 4/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 4/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday, 12th at 10:00 a.m.

The Speaker: Before I put the adjournment I have given permission to the First Elected Member for George Town to raise a public matter for which Government has responsibility and to elicit a reply from a Member of Government response.

The First Elected Member for George Town to be followed by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER

STANDING ORDER 11(6)

QUARRY PRODUCTS

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I have discussed with you, I have a matter that I believe requires the urgent attention of the government. The purpose of me seeking your permission this afternoon was because I hold the view that the matter should have been dealt with prior to this and it seems like the government cannot find the way in which to deal with this matter.

I am going to, as quickly as I can, go through a sequence of events which have taken place over a period of time and perhaps the government will be minded either to give a response or some type of commitment at the end.

Mr. Speaker, on 26 March during Question Time, I asked supplementary questions of the Minister of Tourism, Commerce and Works regarding Quarry Products and its operations. And I was asking the minister if there were any reports to the government regarding the activities at Quarry Products extending into adjacent property owned by the government of the Cayman Islands.

The minister then answered me that it was affirmative that the mining of aggregate had extended into the government's property. Now, on investigation as my understanding is, here are facts:

On September 5, 1980, planning permission was given to the company which was then called, I think, High Rock Aggregate to do mining or the quarrying of aggregate. There was only one relevant condition attached to that approval. That condition was that there was to be no mining or quarrying of aggregate on that piece of property below two feet above the water table. That simple means that they were to stop any excavation, blasting or digging of aggregate when they reached 2 feet above the water table.

Mr. Speaker, that was in 1980. Obviously, the company has continued to mine aggregate since then.

In 1985, the Water Authority Regulations were passed, on February 5. And quickly as I can, section 22(1) of the Water Authority Regulations, states: "A permit to quarry shall be required whenever it is intended to remove any geological stratum from its natural environment and export it to another location, whether for sale or not."

In those Regulations section 41(1) says, "All discharges of sewage effluent, trade effluent or other waste into or onto the ground, into ground water or into the territorial waters, and any quarrying operations which were in progress on the 11th March, 1985 shall have been, within twelve months of the said date, registered with the Authority in the form issued by and obtainable from the Authority."

Number 41(2) says, "All applications for the registration of [existing discharges or of] existing quarries shall have been accompanied by the registration fee prescribed in the Second Schedule. No application under this subregulation shall have been entertained by the Authority until payment of the prescribed fee has been effected."

[Number 41(3) says,] "Upon receipt of an application under this regulation, the Authority shall have issued to the applicant a waste discharge permit or quarry permit...."

So, Mr. Speaker, these regulations of February 1985 literally gave people who were operating as a quarry twelve months in which to make an application for a permit and to comply with these regulations.

In 1992, Mr. Speaker, a separate company called East End Aggregate entered into negotiations with the government of the Cayman Islands regarding permission to mine a piece of property which is unclaimed and is vested in the Crown. What transpired during those negotiations is as follows (and I want to be listened to carefully because it seems there are some people who do not know what went on):

The negotiations were such that the government was prepared to give permission to the company called East End Aggregate to mine this said piece of property. There was some stipulations in the discussion telling them how deep they could mine the property and also that there was to be a royalty of 50¢ per ton of aggregate rock mined. Rock, is the right word, to be mined. The principals of the company tried to get the government to change that fee from 50 cents to 25 cents; the government stuck to its position of 50 cents because that was the government's view that it was fair royalty at the time.

When the principals calculated how far down they could blast and dig the rock and also what quantity of top soil they could reap during the process, the principals decided that paying 50 cents per ton was not feasible for them to enter into such an arrangement.

The matter died as a result of that. So, basically, regardless of what correspondence transpired before that the principals made a conscious decision not to pursue the matter because it was not financially feasible. That was in 1992.

Very recently within the last two years, the Water Authority, the property which as originally been mined by the company which was High Rock Aggregate and is now called Quarry Products Limited. And after their professional examination it was discovered that more than 75% of the terrain that was blasted and mined was mined below the two feet above the water table that they had received permission for. In fact, more than 75% of the property was mined below the water table.

There are also reports that the said property that was being negotiated for mining in 1992 which adjoins some of the property that was originally being mined by the company has been encroached on and mined into. The knowledge that has been passed on to me is that this is a fact which the Minister for Works verified that to me on Friday, 26th March 1999 when I asked him the question. He could not answer me as to what degree or to what degree the infraction or infringement into the property was. But, Mr. Speaker, without being exact I can stand here today and say that it is approximately 25 acres of this piece of property that has been mined without permission.

When the Water Authority made the examination and determined that the vast amount of property was mined below the water table, they tried to do something about it. Let me explain why this is so important and no one is doing anything about it to this point. That property is above the largest water lens in this county. When you expose a water lens to nature, that is, when you go below the water table that you can see the water physically, what happens with that is especially during the times of year when we have what we call the dry season, which we are experiencing now and has been for several months, that water evaporates from that water lens. Ground water is always holding above salt water because it is not as dense and the situation there is dangerous and it has to be repaired. It must be repaired! If we lose that water lens while a lot of people are not appreciating it, that area is where the majority of farming is done in this country. And, the farmers may not be aware of the danger they face but it is very possible that contamination can take place with the salt water which will not allow them to be able to raise their crops and reap the type of crops they have been reaping in the past and still reap in that area. People might think that is not important and I know I have very limited time but that is a very, very important issue.

Now, the facts are that in 1980, the planning permission, which was given, was that it was not to go below 2 feet above the water table, it is obvious that there is a breach of that planning permission. Mr, Speaker, my understanding is there has been no application to the Water Authority at no point in time for a permit which is under the regulations as I quoted. There has been no application, there has been no permit granted and no fees have been paid. There have been no royalties paid for any of the mining that has been done whether on the property that permission was granted for or on the property which has no permission. And everybody else who is doing inland mining today is paying royalties prescribed by the Government of this country.

Mr. Speaker, the piece of property that is unclaimed, I understand there is still some claim that is outstanding for that piece of property. It is unclaimed but it is vested in the Crown at present. There was no blasting licence granted to do the blasting into that property so if perchance some poor soul had been there at any point in time when there was blasting done, I don't know what the Government would have done. But any way.....

It is also my understanding that of this 25 acres that has been mined illegally on this property, the vast majority of the aggregate that was produced from mining of that property which is Government Crown land was sold back to the Government. It is my understanding that has been to the tune of millions of dollars. Now, my purpose to raise this, this afternoon has no bearing on any one individual whether they sit on the government bench or whether they are part and parcel of the ownership of this company or not, I couldn't care less. But it is obvious that there are irregularities and those irregularities must be rectified. The Government is the authority who must see that this is done. It is my understanding that some arms of Government have made attempts to get this done in prior times but I don't want to venture what has transpired why it has not been done but nevertheless it has not been done.

Mr. Speaker, I run risks I know standing here this evening saying what I have said but I have said what I have said based on all information that I could gather from the various arms that are involved. It is obvious that this cannot be allowed to continue. I want to say one more thing because I have already heard since I have asked the question of the Minister who is responsible for Works today that it is possible that I live in a glass house and I must not throw stones but I want every human being who can hear this to hear this. I don't live in any glass house and neither do I throw stones but anyone who wants to believe that they can make me believe I live in a glass house to shut me up for what I know my responsibility is as a representative of the people in this country then he can throw a stone or a rock or a boulder at my glass house any time.

Now, I am saying to the Government that I want this matter dealt with not for my case, not because I am getting up and demanding it but it is only right it must be dealt with. There are people who are going to say from what I am saying that I am making attempts to close down this place. I don't want no place to close down but if it was anyone else they would have been hung, drawn, quartered, boiled in oil and crucified. I want everyone in this country to understand me. This great pretence about being great philanthropist and everything else, don't wash with me, my country must not be run like that. I hope the Government is prepared to deal with the situation because it is obvious that what has to be done to get it regularise is not an impossible act. It is simply a matter of going through a check list and meeting whatever criteria is set out or requirements. But no one must be made to believe that they can operate in this country and don't care who it is that is telling them what is right and what should be done, that it doesn't matter.

In summary, let me also say this because I understand that the Auditor General and the Minister answered me on Friday saying that the Auditor General is investigating the situation. I am calling on the Government as soon — if it isn't, I don't know if it is completed yet but as soon as that report is made, if it has been made to please table it on the floor of this House and if it has not been made yet as soon as it made to do so. Because that report should have at least given us the facts. I am calling on them to determine the facts, to get the situation rectified that everybody can go on about their business.

I also hear that there is a thought about giving a mining licence for the said piece of property that is unclaimed and vested in the Crown to be able to make this whole thing go away, I hope they don't attempt it like that.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 11(6) his time is up and I call on the Member of Government if they wish to reply. The Standing Order says, “.... the Member of the Government shall be called on to reply.”

If there is going to be no reply, please indicate that to me because I will move on to the other Member. There will be no reply....?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I think it is a little bit unusual that the government is replying to something that it is unaware was going to be raised this afternoon and the subject I think is so significant that it would be wise for the government to examine the position and if necessary come back to this House.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town, I don't want to get into a long debate.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: No, Mr. Speaker, I am not going to do that, sir, but I remember our discussion this morning and I just want you to know that I did what you said or what you suggested that I do. So never let it be left in the [minds] that are here that I did not do what you suggested I do, sir.

The Speaker: Well, please state it.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: You asked me to advise the member of government who I thought it would fall under that I was going to do it and I want you to know that I did that, sir. Okay?

The Speaker: Thank you. If there is no reply then I call on the First Elected Member for West Bay. You have twenty minutes.

PEDRO CASTLE

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I don't intend to be that long. I rise to ask the government what is happening at Pedro Castle. There is much public speculation and many constituents are asking for a clear statement on the situation. This project we must be reminded cost these islands $10M, that is a lot of the public's money. We know that the manager was suspended from his job, we know or we believe we know why. We know that he was banded or ordered not to go to the project again. We have to ask why?

We know and we have heard that the Auditor General's team went and locked the manager's office. We must know, Mr. Speaker, what is wrong? Is the Auditor General's team doing an investigation? What kind of investigation and for what reasons? Is the investigation about missing artefacts? Is the investigation about missing money? Is the investigation about abuse of authority? When will this honourable House get a report from the Auditor General? Who is managing the project and if someone is who are they reporting to daily?

Mr. Speaker, this honourable House needs to know about the situation rather quickly.

The Speaker: Again, in accordance with Standing Order 11(6) I ask if a Honourable Member of Government will reply.

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am also willing to provide some information to members of this House but we know that matters are also being dealt with through the court and I am reluctant to delve into and dive into areas that perhaps I am faulty to do. I undertake to provide details to members of the House when I am able legally to do so.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: The matter I raised is not before the courts. The matters that I asked about are not matters being dealt with by the courts of this country. These are matters on-going daily. I asked about who is managing the project. Who are they reporting to daily? Is the Auditor General is doing an investigation? What kind of investigation? Is it about missing artefacts? Is it about missing money? Or is it about abuse of authority? These matters are not before the court. Did the Auditor General lock up the manager's office? Why was the manager banded from the project?

Mr. Speaker, these are not matters before the court. We do know that the manager has a problem or we understand he has a problem that is before the court. That is separate and apart from Pedro Castle project. That is a project that cost $10M and this honourable House deserves an answer.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There are two matters here. One is the court matter and the other is that under Section 11 of the Tourism Attraction Law it says that every employee out there shall be deemed to be a civil servant. So the civil service process as regards disciplinary action is being followed.

I am not going to jump over board just to answer this and jeopardise my own self.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I understand the law and regards to personnel. The matter that I am raising here is not personnel per se. The questions are very straightforward. What is the Auditor General doing? Is there an investigation going on? Was the manager's office locked? Was the manager banded from the project, not to go back to the project? Is the investigation about missing artefacts, missing money or abuse of power?

These are not personnel matters. I understand the law and the Minister of Tourism has a responsibility to answer those questions whether he wants to do it this afternoon or whether he wants to come back another time. But I have asked questions in the Finance Committee about Pedro Castle that are not answered yet and this is very disrespectful to the House whether he feels that he does not have to answer me or whether he does not want to answer the House now. Say so! But as a member of this Honourable House I am demanding that something be said about this situation.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Based on what I have already said, my intention is to inform members of this House when I can. All the questions that he is asking he will get an answer to but I need to be careful how I go about doing so.

The Speaker: That concludes this matter. I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until... I am sorry, I have the motion already.

The Speaker: You have already moved it. Yes.

I shall put the question that this Honourable House do now adjourn until Monday, the 12th of April. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until Monday, 12 April at 10.00 a.m.

AT 5.10 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, APRIL 12 1999

Resources who is also sick; and the Member from North Side will be arriving later this morning.

Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question number 30 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. This question was deferred from Thursday, 1 April 1999.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERRED QUESTION NO. 30

(Deferred 1st April 1999)

No. 30: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to state the procedure to be followed when importing heavy equipment into the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In order to import any type of heavy equipment into the Cayman Islands, the importer must first complete the requisite application form. This form seeks to obtain such information as the company's name, list of directors, nationality, and description of equipment to be imported.

Additionally, a current Trade and Business Licence must also be provided. Once this information is obtained, the application then goes to the Advisory Committee on the Importation of Heavy Equipment, which was recently established by my Ministry to advise Executive Council. This Committee meets once a month. The Committee reviews each application and makes recommendations to Executive Council. The application is then considered by Executive Council and the decision is conveyed to the applicant and the Collector of Customs.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House the names of those persons who form the advisory committee.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yes, Mr. Speaker. The Senior Assistant Secretary in my Ministry is the Chairman, Mr. Charles Clifford. Other members are Mr. Culbert Scott, who is the Chief Engineer of Public Works; Mr. Phillip Tatum, who is the Acting Head of Department for the Department of Vehicles and Equipment Services; Mr. Anthony Scott, who is the representative from the Heavy Equipment Organisation (HEO) and there is a police representative. It could be the Commissioner or it could be the superintendent in charge of traffic.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the minister tell the House approximately it takes from the time an application is made until word has passed down as to whether the application is approved or disapproved?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I don't believe that I have an accurate handle on how many weeks or days it may take. I do know that on some occasions equipment is imported and we are informed of it when it is on the dock and we try to act accordingly, to give the decision as quickly as we possibly can.

In discussion with the Chairman of the Committee, I indicated to him that I believe depending on the number of applications that the committee should meet twice a month. And even if we don't have sufficient applications then there would be no need to have a meeting. But I think if they structure it every two weeks I think that would probably be more in line with the applications at the moment. I think there might have been some amount of back-up as a result of the change over from one ministry to the other but I believe at the moment we are presently on top of it. If you know of any particular case that is out there that we have not dealt with, please bring it to my attention.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister say if the procedure as outlined in answer to the question is one which was inherited or can he tell the House whether there were any modifications made since he took up the ministry and this particular responsibility?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The committee, which is an advisory committee to Executive Council, I think prior to us establishing this committee there was another committee. I think the majority of the items I included in my answer are in conjunction with the way it was before — we may have added one or two items.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister state if there is any policy followed by the committee regarding the age of this heavy equipment? Does it depend on the different categories of heavy equipment? Are any restrictions regarding the age?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the committee has a guideline that basically tries to allow equipment coming into the island that is less than ten years old. It, however, depends on the type of equipment because we do know that cranes, for example, can be 25 years old and still in good working order. So it is a guideline that is being used.

I think it depends on the particular piece of equipment. Sometimes we have pieces of equipment landed at the dock that has not been approved as yet, and in some cases that piece of equipment is examined by a rather well known mechanic who certifies that it is good order. I think it is in the best interest to use the guideline but there are exceptions.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: For purposes of clarity, is it fair comment to state that while there is this policy of equipment not being older than ten years, individual circumstances and situations will be examined on their own merit for pieces of equipment older than ten years?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the member has categorised that correctly.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: While I know he has inherited this situation and it existed prior to his being in charge of that subject, can the honourable minister say why the importation of heavy equipment is different from how it used to be before when individuals simply imported as they needed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe this all came about back in the early 1990s when there were a number of taxis, tour bus and Omni-bus operators. You basically came to government and asked for some action to be taken. I think most of us will recall the three buses that came in and I think most of the people in the transportation industry were quite upset about it as well as people in the heavy equipment services.

They were also concerned about the number of pieces of equipment that were coming into the island and wanted government to more or less get a handle on it, in essence to try to be as fair as we possible can with this particular area of service offered in the country. I believe it was also a time when the water sports operators were also concerned so it dealt with vehicles, heavy equipment, boats, and it also dealt with other vehicles other than private cars.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: In his answer, the minister stated that there was a requisite application form seeking to obtain such information as the company name, the list of directors, nationality and description of equipment to be imported. He also mentioned that a current Trade and Business Licence must be provided. Is the reasoning for this that not everyone (even if they provide this information) is allowed to import heavy equipment?

To try to make it a little bit clearer, are there certain categories of persons who will not be able to import any types of heavy equipment? And, if so, what are those categories?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the system more or less captures the need to know for the government as to who is importing the particular pieces of equipment and basically to offer some amount of protection, if you wish, to Caymanians who are operating in that area. We do know that there are substantial amounts of equipment in the island and we are trying to avoid a wholesale importation which obviously will damage those people who have spent hundreds of thousands of dollars in equipment, be it water trucks or drill rigs, or cranes, or heavy duty equipment, or any vehicle of that sort.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: What kind of reasoning would the committee use to not allow the importation of a specific type of equipment, bearing in mind the factors that the minister just mentioned a while ago?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: If you hypothetically have 25 cranes already operating in the country and certainly you saw an application wishing to import ten more and perhaps the individual was not a Caymanian, then I think the recommendation coming from the committee would be not to approve.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I think that is fair, I do get the picture. Can the minister then state what method is used by the committee to monitor? Or is there a list of pieces of equipment imported for specific tasks and for specific time periods which should then be sent back off the island once the task it was imported for is completed? Does the committee have a list of these pieces of equipment, and if so, how do they monitor that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding is that the representative from HEO supplies that input to the committee which basically says the number of pieces of equipment that are on the island at the present time. And as a result of that input, the committee is guided as to whether to approve or not approve.

If I have not answered the question to the wish of the member, he may—

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Let me perhaps try to make it a little bit clearer. From time to time, we hear of equipment that is imported. For instance, to use a hypothetical situation as the minister did previously, there may be a specific type of development taking place and the principals are allowed to import certain pieces of equipment relative to that development. On completion of the use of the equipment for that development, they are supposed to be sent back. Is the committee responsible for that? And how does the committee ensure that this happens?

Should people who have such types of equipment wish to sell that equipment on island rather than send it back, is there any method by which it is decided as to who can purchase that or can anyone purchase that type of equipment?

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We have not so far this year run across any situation of that sort. But I do know that from time to time we have seen such applications. And normally what happens is that the conditions on importation are stated so that the Customs Department will then follow through on that particular piece of equipment.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister state if, when such equipment being imported is going to be sent out, duty is then waived? Or is the duty paid up front and then on exportation there is a refund?

The reason I asked the question is because if the duty has been waived on such equipment and it is sold on the island rather than sent back out then government will be losing on the importation duty. I just wanted to find out if there was some check and balance to ensure that this does not happen.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My experience with this suggests that if the equipment is sold locally duty would have to be paid if it was waived. I have not seen too much waiver in recent times.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town. Final supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: To try and wrap it up so that I get the answers I am seeking, I understand what the minister has just said but my question is: How does any arm of government know if the piece of equipment is sold if the duty had been waived? And, how would government know in order to ensure that the duty is collected if this is what happens?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the question as posed by the First Elected Member of George Town and my answer suggests that there are conditions attached to the importation. One of the conditions that I was thinking about is that the item would have to be exported back out of the country after a particular time. If, however, that is not done then the Customs Department will follow-up and ensure that custom duty is paid, if it was waived.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 33, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay. That is to be answered by the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications and Environment and Natural Resources.

Earlier this morning, I tendered an apology as the Honourable Minister is sick. I would appreciate someone moving Standing Order 25(5) in order that that question can be deferred to be answered at a later sitting.

DEFERRAL OF QUESTION 33

Hon. Truman Boddin: I move under Standing Order 23(5) that the question be answered at a later stage.

The Speaker: Thank you, the Honourable Minister for Education. I put the question: Those in favour please say Aye....

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Chairman, sorry.

The Speaker: Go ahead.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Did the minister say answer at a later date? Not answer in writing, right?

The Speaker: At a later date, orally – yes.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

The Speaker: When he is well to do so.

I shall put the question: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION 33 DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Moving on to item number 5 on today's Order Paper. Government Business, Motions. Government Motion No. 2/99 to be moved by the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 2/99

THE HEALTH INSURANCE LAW, 1997 – THE HEALTH INSURANCE (AMENDMENT) (INDIGENT PERSONS) REGULATIONS, 1998

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Government Motion No. 2/99 which is entitled, The Health Insurance Law, 1997 – The Health Insurance (Amendment) (Indigent Persons) Regulations, 1998.

The Speaker: Government Motion No. 2/99 has been duly moved. Does the Honourable Minister wish to speak to it?

Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The motion before this Honourable House is: “WHEREAS Section 19(2) of the Health Insurance Law, 1997 provides that regulations made under this law are subject to the affirmative resolution of the Legislative Assembly;

BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Health Insurance (Amendment) (Indigent Persons) Regulations as attached be hereby approved in accordance with Section 19(2) of the Health Insurance Law, 1997.”

Mr. Speaker and members of this honourable House are reminded that the Health Insurance Law and Regulations 1997 came into force on the 1st July 1998. And that the Health Insurance Regulations provide inter alia, “For the establishment of a segregated fund to cover medical cost for indigent uninsurable and indigent partially uninsurable persons.” The fund is administered by the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority and has been duly receiving regular payments from approved providers of health insurance coverage since the commencement of the legislation.

For the information of this House that fund is up to approximately three quarters of a million dollars. Also, as a side note, there are approximately 26,000 people now covered by health insurance. The good part about this is that most of them are above the standard required by government. When we look at the approximately 10,000 others covered by government, we have come a long way and I think this House should be proud of the coverage that we have been able to establish. As I have always said, I see health insurance as an investment, especially in recent times when we have seen some of the tragedies that have happened in these islands.

Whilst the legislation provides for the establishment of the fund by government in order to cover the medical cost of the indigent uninsurable and indigent partially uninsurable persons, it does not set down in specific terms which entity is empowered to make claims upon the fund. The Health Insurance Regulations provide for medical treatment for this category of persons to be provided by a government health facility or at any other health care facility upon reference by the Chief Medical Officer.

Essentially, therefore all benefits to be provided to this category of persons will be provided directly by or under the auspices of the Chief Medical Officer. It, therefore, appears reasonable that the Director of Health Services should be empowered to make claims upon the fund. It is recommended that the Health Insurance Regulations be amended accordingly.

Mr. Speaker, it is also recommend that in order to ensure greater clarity in the Health Insurance Regulations, the opportunity be taken to amend Regulation 5: (a) by inserting the word, "indigent" before "partially uninsurable", wherever those latter words appear; and (b) by inserting the word, "indigent" before "uninsurable person" in Sub-regulation 2.

Mr. Speaker, these amendment were approved by the Governor in Council in accordance with Section 19 of the Health Insurance Law, 1997. Nevertheless, the amendments are subject to the affirmative resolution of the Legislative Assembly.

There are a number of things that we continue to work on to make this a better product, but as we come upon situations that will develop with the support of this House and my ministry we hope to deal with these accordingly. I, therefore, urge members of this honourable House to approve the amendments as set down in the Health Insurance (Amendment) (Indigent Persons) Regulations, 1998.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wishes to speak?
The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am going to support these amendments, therefore my contribution is not going to be long. But I feel that there are some important points that I have to make to explain my position and also to bring to the attention of honourable members some concerns I have.

Ever since the first efforts were made to introduce this health insurance coverage, I exercised some concern, if not alarm, over the fact that the providers were in such a powerful position as to be able to control the clients and the business they wish to take.

Right now in the United States, President Clinton served notice on health providers that they will not be allowed to be so selective as to disadvantage any particular socio-economic element of the population. These providers have a wholly captive audience. I can say from experience that some of them, if allowed to get away with things, will disadvantage those elements in our population who are least capable of dealing with these kinds of health contingencies.

Case in point, I know firsthand of a situation where a group policy was entered into and when the individual's information was submitted to the provider, they sent back one out of a group of about thirty rejecting it saying that the person was ineligible because the person was too obese. Were it not for persistence, obstinacy and at one point downright threat of legal action that person would not have been accommodated.

Now, I have heard from the elderly. I know of at least two cases whose identity I won't divulge here because it is not necessary. Suffice it to say, however, that these persons were refused coverage because of a health condition that occurred while they were covered. I know of a case where one of my constituents who is an elderly gentlemen paid three months premium and had not been feeling well. When he went to the hospital after paying three months premium, he was diagnosed as a diabetic. When the gentleman, being honest and forthright, reported that to the provider, they sent back his three months premium (this discovery didn't come until the fourth month), saying that if that condition obtained, they would not be extending coverage to him. Not only is that morally repugnant, it is downright callous and these kinds of incidents are by no means apocryphal, they are true.

When it happens to the elderly, people who are borderline indigents, I am alarmed that these providers (not all of them I might add) could be so disregarding as to treat the potential clients and the people of this country in that way when there are so few providers and they have this country as a wholly captive audience.

I implore the minister to stay on top of these situations. He has my support in this amendment and he knows that he has my support in any efforts he brings that are constructive. I implore him to use his department and the other arms of government to keep his eyes open for these kinds of situations.

Mr. Speaker, for what it is worth, I might add that the situation concerning my constituent is by no means over because I am right now in the process of trying to access advice as to how best to handle it. But I consider it downright morally repugnant for an organisation to do that to an individual when in the first instance they accepted the person's premiums for three months in good faith.

I can only say, if they are allowed to get away with it, that the Cayman Islands will be the only country in the civilised world where such a practise would be allowed to go unchallenged. I say this in the hopes that the minister may sharpen his perception with regard to these kinds of practises. I believe that it is a progressive step to provide this kind of avenue for our people because we have to get away from the position where the government is the be all and end all. I think we have progressed beyond that route.

I see the government's role now as that of a watchdog ensuring that people get what they pay for, and ensuring that no one—irrespective of colour, class, social status, or economic position—is disadvantaged. I commend the efforts to provide health insurance in the country and I am supportive of these amendments. I would only ask that the Government use this machinery to ensure that our constituents particularly the elderly, the indigent and those whom we may classify as uninsurable are not left out in the cold when it comes time for them to access proper medical attention.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would like to just make a few comments on this government motion attempting to allow the Director of Health to take monies from the fund that is now accumulating with regard to indigent persons.

I too believe that the government has taken the right direction. But I have had quite a few complains from persons that have sought health insurance. I know that there are a lot of complaints that might not be necessarily legitimate, but I would like to ask the minister to look into what the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town was speaking about because I have been confronted with persons that are aggrieved by this situation in a similar manner.

Apparently, when a person goes to an insurance company to take out insurance—as is required by the law—the insurance companies fill out the applications. Persons believe that at that particular time they become insured, when in fact they are not insured. It has to go to a head office someplace else and it has to be approved by the head office and sent back here before those persons receive the insurance. So, we need to begin to look at that whole process of how the head office in these countries make the decisions as to who receive insurance and who do not receive insurance.

A lot of the people that are selling insurance themselves have complained behind the scenes about the practices of their own insurance companies. They have seen no reason why certain persons should be excluded. They have gone ahead and given the persons more or less the positive go ahead that there should be no reason why they shouldn't get health insurance only to have it sent off to Trinidad or someplace like that and to have these head offices make the decision that the person does not qualify to be insured because of some reason.

Weight has been an issue. They are saying that the person is too heavy and, therefore, could be a health risk. I don't think that the minister will allow for insurance companies to come here and pick the best, the healthiest people in our population and just insure them, minimising their risk and causing government to have to be responsible for the majority of the cost for the other segments of the population. Insurance means that we throw everybody into the same package and we somehow take risk.

If the insurance companies are not taking any risk simply because they are going through a process of choosing the healthy people and leaving the people that might have health problems later on then I don't believe that insurance companies are taking a risk. Not only does it have a captive audience but also it has a risk free clientele. I don't believe that is fair! I know that the government's intention was to provide better health care for the people and to minimise the cost that would be on the Treasury of the country by legislating compulsory health insurance—not legislating a defined and exorbitant profit for the insurance companies.

I am just going to rely upon the good judgment of the minister to see that he goes into this a little bit more to see that it is not abused. At least, in the beginning it was being abused by the insurance companies because of the types of complains that I was getting from clients of these insurance companies and by workers in the insurance companies. If we could get that ironed out, I would be grateful. In the same instance, I do say that I support Government Motion No. 2/99.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I would like to take this opportunity to thank those who have spoken and supported the motion, as well as those who indicated support but have not spoken. I really appreciate the pointing out by both the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and I will certainly be looking into this. It has been one of the most difficult things of the whole process trying to deal with the elderly and we certainly will not encourage cherry picking.

And as the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said, it certainly should be incumbent on the providers to educate the public. Let them know what transpires after an application is put in, how it works. I think this is something they should take on board. And as good community citizens, this should be done through the media so it has wide and proper coverage so that nobody has any doubt as to what happens.

It is sad like in the instance that was drawn that after collecting three or four months premium that the person was notified that they were not accepted. This is not going to be tolerated, Mr. Speaker, and whatever we need to do will be done.

Once again, I want to thank everyone for his or her support.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 2/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Government Motion No. 3/99 to be moved by the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 24(5)

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the suspension of Standing Order 24(5) to allow this motion to be taken. While it was filed back nearly a month ago, it wasn't put in five days before the session started. It is just that the notice was not prior to the meeting.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 24(5) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, please continue with your motion.

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 3/99

AMENDMENT TO THE DEVELOPMENT PLAN 1997

Hon. Truman Bodden: This motion is one of several that I have brought over the years. It deals with amendments to the Development Plan. In this case, it relates to four categories of parcels of land that are set out in the letter.

It alters one from public open space to low density residential and this was a mistake that was made as is set out in this. Instead of designating the blowholes with public open space, it designated land that was somewhere in the vicinity of it.

The other parcel relates to property from hotel/tourism back to low density residential. And, the other area is from neighbourhood/commercial to hotel/tourism and that is in a tourism zone area.

The other one is from public open space to beach resort residential.

These have all gone through the full process under the law as is set out by the Central Planning Authority. There have been no objections to these and they recommend that these zoning changes be made, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? Does any other member wish to speak to this motion? If not, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

No reply? I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 3/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Bills, First reading, the Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1999.

Bills, Second Readings.

SECOND READINGS

THE ELECTRICITY (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1999. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the second reading of the Electricity Amendment Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Electricity (Amendment) Bill has been duly moved. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Truman Bodden: I also wish to move or wish to mention an amendment that has been circulated and will be raised at the Committee stage.

The amended bill deals, firstly, with the establishment of a Board of Examiners, which really replaces what was called the Board of Examiners and operated since 1978. There were some technical problems that arose, some doubts in relation to it, and this now seeks to clarify that. Along with the amendment to the Bill it actually ratifies the past acts of the old board and establishes this new one.

Secondly, there is an Appeals Tribunal set up and prior to this when the Board of Examiners made a decision, the only recourse people had would have been into the course under the prerogative risk and it increases the fines in section 22. It also just sets out the hours and duties of the board.

So this is the first of what will probably be several or probably a further amendment later on to this Bill to try to bring it up to date. It is a very old law, however it is a very important area for the islands. It is one that has come directly under my ministry and we will be endeavouring to update the law, the regulations for this, sir.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, the Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. The motion is opened to debate.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: While I understand and appreciate the efforts being made by the Minister to streamline and modernise the practises of the Board, I have to raise some questions—some of which I previously raised in debate in this honourable House regarding the practises of the Electricity Board of Examiners.

I vividly recall making a suggestion to the Minister that perhaps an ideal situation would be to streamline this practise and place it under auspices of the Community College which is eminently equipped for carrying out these functions. I can say that over the past months (and up until the present time) I received numerous complaints from persons who sit the examination and are dissatisfied with various aspects.

From information I have received, the process as it exists is rather confusing. I would say, from the point of view of an educator, that it is illogical. I will go on to explain why, but let me say why I believe that moving these functions under the Community College would be the ideal situation. First of all, the Community College could provide the teaching, expertise, and also practical experience necessary. The physical facilities would be there. Significantly, too the Community College is an unbiased and impartial provider.

With the appointment of a Board of Examiners as it is now, most of these examiners are persons directly involved with electrical contracting. And I am by no means suggesting that anything untoward happens, but I am saying that the worry would be removed were it completely under the auspices of the Community College. Certain insinuations could not be made.

Now, purely and simply as an academic exercise or as a technical exercise that is not good enough. I would rather the situation be one in which a professional teacher or licensed electrical instructor—who is not practising in contracting but is solely under the auspices and the ambit of the Community College as a staff Member—be responsible for administering the exam as well as teaching and setting the practical tests necessary.

A complaint frequently heard by myself is that persons from the smaller firms and the smaller entities feel that there is not a fair enough chance for them. I also receive complaints on the matter of the content of the examination. And a third complaint is that people sit the course sometimes three and four times. The first time, they may get a score of let us say 70%. The next time, they may get a score of only 40% and on a subsequent occasion, the score may fluctuate between those two. Now, in situations where you are allowed multiple sittings of an examination until you achieve the pass mark, the practice is that the highest score obtains until you get a higher score. In other words, if you have to do three or four sittings, and the first time you sat you got 70%, that score would be the score on record (if on subsequent occasions you got below that) until you got the pass mark. But these people inform me that the last score is the score of record so that it does not matter if on the fourth occasion they only got 50%, and the first time they got 70%. That 70% is not the jump off point.

Now, there is a certain amount of frustration experienced, as I understand from these people who sit the examination. I am suggesting that if the practise is continued, that the highest score should be the score of record until the candidate achieves the passing grade.

I am also confronted with the situation that these candidates themselves complain that the system is not completely impartial and when I propose to them the possibility of the examination and the course being offered by the Community College, all of them jumped and said that would be the ideal situation. So I would hope that at some stage we arrive at that.

I am a little disappointed seeing that I had raised it in a debate as a suggestion before, and the minister didn't take this into consideration. However, I am prepared to give the benefit of the doubt and hope that the minister eventually leads up to what I think would be the most appropriate and the most ideal situation, seeing as in his remarks he said that this law has not been amended since way down in the 1970s. I would hope that he would bear in mind what I have offered as a constructive consideration and move towards that.

I vividly recall when I made the suggestion that the minister himself in a reply said that it was a suggestion worth examining at that time. I would implore and encourage him to examine it as I think it would give the Community College a fitting role it is eminently equipped to carry out. In so doing it would negate if not completely remove any necessity to further bureaucratise the system by having an Appeals Tribunal.

Mr. Speaker, what I don't like about Appeals Tribunal in these kinds of cases is that you get into a situation where you cannot scientifically quantify or argue what is being appealed. The grounds for appeal, as it says here in section 5(c), the second paragraph, "An appeal under subsection (1)..." First of all, I better read the section, which talks about appeals. It says, "Any person who has applied to the Board for a license to carry out electrical work under this law and whose application has not been successful may appeal against the decision of the Board to the Appeals Tribunal whose decision shall be final."

And then section (2) says, "An appeal under subsection (1) may only be made on one or more of the following grounds: (i) That the decision is erroneous in law; (ii) That the decision is unreasonable; (iii) Or that the decision was arrived at contrary to the principles of natural justice."

Now, if we had a system that was administered by the Community College clearly in these cases we have academic appeals. But the appeals as I understand it would only be made under one ground—that you achieve the requisite amount of marks to pass the exam or you didn't pass the exam. Only one ground! Here we have three different categories of appeal. This is a skill we are measuring and it signifies that the person must have manifestly mastered that skill to a significant level. So when we are talking about these three grounds of appeal, I am afraid we are getting into a quagmire and burdening a bureaucracy that might not be the best positive move. If this exam was being administered, or this licence being granted by the Community College, we could understand the grounds for the appeal.

Maybe it would be set up so that there is a theoretical section and a practical section. It would be possible that someone could pass the theoretical and may not have done so well in the practical, in which case they could do the practical over as many times as would be necessary. The grounds for appeal then would be clear cut and you would only be appealing to a body within the Community College.

No one could scream that there is a vested interest in not having someone pass the exam or not pass the exam. It would remove any possibility of certain kinds of insinuations, which I hear about now. The same persons who are set up now to administer the licence could be involved at some stage in the Community College process as, for example, supervising the practical aspects of the exam or in some other capacity which would not be deemed to be controversial or ambiguous.

The reason I am stressing this is that most of the persons who have approached me are young Caymanians. In one case, I went to great lengths to speak with the employer of one of these young Caymanians. I spoke to the principals of that firm who on two occasions expressed overwhelming confidence in their employee and were lamenting the way the Board is organised now and the way the Board dispenses licences.

I might add as a footnote that this firm was not only a firm of Caymanians but it had several qualified, experienced and high ranking expatriate persons. All of them gave unqualified support to the young Caymanians involved who were frustrated in repeatedly sitting the examination and getting a wide range of scores. They could not understand how when they got 70% that that score wasn't the score of record but only the score of the last exam that was a significantly lower score.

I am saying to the minister that while this is an improvement we are not yet up to the ideal situation. I hope that my sentiments and my suggestions are not misconstrued as they so often are when I make suggestion to this minister (they are taken as a personal assault on the minister or his policies), I am merely being constructive. I remind the minister of his undertaking to consider my suggestions previously made of getting the Community College involved in this aspect of what I consider a vocational and technological enterprise.

Mr. Speaker, that is my contribution. I would not stand in the way of progress by opposing these amendments. I would only hope to prick the minister's conscience and extract from him some kind of sentiment that he is willing at some stage in the near future to examine the involvement of the Community College in this enterprise.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I rise to give support to this Bill, but I would just like to echo the sentiments put forward by my colleague, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Many people who have sat this exam have come to me with very similar concerns. The consistency in which it appears to be scored for whatever reason does not bear out at all times and I think what is put forward as to allowing it to go to the Community College is something that I feel the minister will look at.

I just wanted to share the similar sentiments. There is a lot of frustration in the people who have been through this. I understand the passing rate is minuscule. I have to wonder what causes. But just to offer my support on this.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: My contribution will be short, but I think that I would like to go a little bit further with the arguments put forward by my colleague, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. I will not go over the point about the Community College but what I would like to speak about for just a short time is politically appointed boards.

Experience has taught us that perception becomes reality. I am sure that every one of us here has experienced the fact that this is so. It just so happens that at this point in time we are talking about a board regarding electrical examinations. The way that this Bill is tailored and crafted, I think the assumption is right that when it says that the Governor will appoint this Board that means the Governor in Council, that is on the advice of Executive Council. I hold the view that this is a tradition that we need to get away from.

Too often we have sides. And while I will grant that in the vast majority of occasions it is only perception, there are people who will perceive by the fact that individuals have been appointed by Executive Council that they are on a given political side and that certain things will be more favourable to certain individuals whenever they have to encounter such boards. There is no sense in our saying that it is not so, that the members of the Board would never engage in such activities. I am dealing with perception and no amount of words is going to change the way people think.

If we have a single occasion where it seems obvious that such a situation has occurred then people by nature make their rulings across the board on that one circumstance. I think that in itself should give rise to the opinions expressed by other speakers prior to me.

On the eve of reform, when we talk about transparency, when we talk about accountability, and when we talk about changing the whole thought process in the way the country does business, this indeed is an occasion where we should be thinking along those lines. When we are talking about freedom of information, for instance, and we see the way these things are set up now . . . and while this Bill gives rise to the methods by which appeals may be made, what we have to take into consideration is the actual way that it will work.

The average person who is going to undergo this test and who may feel aggrieved at the end result (whether that feeling is a biased one or with merit to it), the average person is not going to go through the procedure of appealing to a tribunal. I mean, I am not suggesting that we should make laws to suit people and their whims and fancies, I am just trying to be as realistic as possible. And while this has been the way that we have done things for years and years and years, it does not mean it is not time for us to have a new way of thinking.

So what has been said about supporting the Bill with the hope that the minister will take a fresh look at it, I have to differ with that. My experience tells me that if we approve the Bill—and while the minister may reply and say that he is going to look into it—my experience has taught me that in such matters nothing happens. So without getting into a confrontation, I am saying that I am not going to support the Bill because I would like to see the minister withdraw the Bill and re-craft it and perhaps come with something that is a little bit more palatable.

I hope that my little bit of argument is understood in the right vein. I say it as I see it and we will see exactly the reaction. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, would the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Yes, sir. Thank you. I will now endeavour to deal with the two main points that have been raised. I support—and I am sure the government does—that the exams can be done by the Community College. There is also power to accept licences that are of a proper standard from other countries so that is also an area that would be looked at.

What I would suggest is that in the (and if I may give oral notice of this, now) committee stage to put it beyond the doubt in section 5(b) the penultimate line, where it says, “...lay down from time to time...” that we add in there, “or prescribed” and that would allow us then to prescribe exams of the Community College or any other college. I don’t think it should just be limited to the Community College. So I made it wide enough that the exams could be prescribed.

I fully accept what the member has said. Quite frankly sir, this whole electrical business has now come to the Planning Department. It has been a source of considerable problems. I think both the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Minister for Health raised these problems. I have had a lot of people come to me as well on the unsatisfactory present law. There are problems that go well beyond just the examination stages and also touch beyond that in relation to the Immigration Law. So I would hope that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town would look at that has been an answer to what he has mentioned and that is something that will be developed and it will be used.

I would just like to say that at present, sir, we do have some of these courses that are run from abroad in relation to the building code. We found that it is sometimes better to have the standards applied by someone directly outside of the department.

Also, sir, like I said, certificates from abroad I think should be accepted — and there is now power for that.

What we tried to do with the Appeals Tribunal was to actually use a tribunal that already exists and that is operational. That has been the subject of the scrutiny of the courts many, many times, even the Court of Appeal and which I believe is one that has stood the test of time. The appeals for this are not going to go to a new tribunal that we are appointing.

I would just like to point that out. It will be going into an Appeals Tribunal that is already established under the Development and Planning Law—one that is always chaired by a lawyer. Prior to this it was chaired by W.S. Walker, a well-respected and very learned lawyer, who I have no doubt in my mind has always been very fair. It is now chaired by his deputy, Mr. Casey Gill, a lawyer with some thirty years’ experience, well respected in the community. And also supported on that by other lawyers.

And, yes, there will always be times when people are not happy with a decision, but the Court of Appeal, or the Grand Court, or even the Judicial Committee, the Privy Council makes a decision. A case is a case—one side is disappointed and one side is happy. For the case on appeal, it is rare that a court can make both sides happy but I believe the integrity of the Development and Planning Appeals Tribunal is long standing, its willingness to fully hear and to give its decisions in such a way can be tested either before the Grand Court or the Court of Appeals or indeed in some instances even by the House of Lords, which is the judicial committee of the Privy Council.

I can’t really add any more to that, other than to say that I hope I have fully addressed the two points both as to the exams and as to the appeal. But I would just like to say, sir, we have to remember that before this there was no appeal. The old Board of Examiners had absolute power. However, there was always a right for judicial review, and I don’t think that, that has ever happened. So the fairness of that Board, while it has been there for donkey years—and not just under me—has really done its best. The amendments to the law, sir, are really to promote fairness, to promote the right of appeal and to ensure that this important area—electricity, which is so important to all of us but also is a very dangerous occupational area as we know—is well regulated.

I can do no more, sir, than to add that I am always open to innovations and if I find that something does not work then I do come back here and I will see it isn’t working, I need to amend it. But I believe what we have here now, with the right to take exams, with the amendments that I propose, and the fact that the present Appeals Tribunal under the Development Planning Law is well established for many years, well chaired and a very capable tribunal that has taken the scrutiny of the Appellants Courts, the Queen’s Council and the senior lawyers in this community. And that I can’t tell you because there are appeals from it and the tribunal has basically stood the test of time.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE ELECTRICITY (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: I think this will be an appropriate time to take the morning break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:48 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:17 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Bills, Second Reading.

THE LABOUR (AMENDMENT) TRIBUNAL BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Labour (Amendment) Tribunal Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture is absent. So with your permission, we will move on to the next bill.

Bills, Second Reading.

Should I put a motion for that? Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, would you move a motion that we move on to the next bill, as the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs is not present?

DEFERRAL OF THE LABOUR (AMENDMENTS) (TRIBUNALS) BILL, 1998

Hon. Truman Bodden: I move the deferment of the Labour (Amendments) (Tribunals) Bill, 1998 as the Minister is ill at present.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE LABOUR (AMENDMENT) (TRIBUNALS) BILL, 1998 DEFERRED UNTIL A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Moving on to Bills, Second Reading.

THE BILL OF SALE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Bill of Sale (Amendment) Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move the second reading of the Bill of Sale (Amendment) Bill, 1998.

This amendment relates to two main changes. The first being the increase in the time required under the law for registration of Bill of Sale from 30 days to 90 days. Over the years, it has become increasingly difficult for financial institutions to complete what is required in this process—that is, the whole process of execution, stamping, and registration within the required 30 days. This is primarily due to the increase in complexities of transactions. Therefore, we propose to increase it from 30 days to 90 days.

The second change proposes to tighten up on the documentation that is required to be submitted to the Registrar General's office in order to register a Bill of Sale. That is it, sir, thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other honourable member wish to speak? If there is no debate. Does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: Mr. Speaker, no sir.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Bill of Sale (Amendment), 1998 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE BILL OF SALE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1998 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE TRAVEL TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: I beg to move the Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1998 to its second reading.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Joel Walton: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: Please continue.

Hon. Joel Walton: This amendment deals with only one change and that is to tie or to actually (how can I put it?) specify those persons eligible for exemption from travel tax to three main categories of persons. That is:

1. Diplomats travelling in and out of the Cayman Islands;
2. Persons employed on aircraft or in connection with providing services relating to aircraft; and
3. Children under the age of twelve.

That is the substantive change to actually allow exemption to those three categories of persons only. Any exemptions outside of that would require the Financial Secretary's using his discretionary powers under the Public Finance and Audit Law to allow any further exemption beyond those three categories.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1998, be given a second reading.

The motion is open for debate. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, listening to the short delivery by the Acting Third Official Member just raises a couple of questions.

I think the Bill itself is self-explanatory to the point as to what it hopes to achieve, but I think if it is at all possible in winding up perhaps that honourable member could expand a little bit as to the reasoning behind the Bill itself. For instance: 1) Is it that this was some loophole that needed to be tidied up? 2) Does this relate to internationally accepted methods? Do other countries deal with it in this fashion and we are simply coming in line with what is understood and accepted as the way that this is done? 3) Or was it also for a specific reason, which might involve, for instance, a controversy regarding Cayman Airways and its crew members and any exemptions that they may have thought they had but they actually didn't and this actual legislation is to make sure that this is the case?

Mr. Speaker, if we could just have some type of broadened explanation as to the reasoning behind the Bill perhaps we would be a lot more comfortable with the Bill itself. I don't think there is a question with regard to its actual content. But I believe that there are questions in the minds of members as to the reasoning behind it. Perhaps this is as opportune a time as any to get that reasoning so that we may be able to fully understand what is behind it all.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate. If no other member wishes to speak does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: Just to say, sir, that the three categories of persons that remain under the law were there before. That is, aircraft employees, diplomats, and children under the age of twelve. What has happened generally throughout the government over the years in a number of areas which the government seeks to raise and members might recall some years back, we did a similar thing in the case of exemptions under the Customs Law where we removed the exemptions from the Customs Law and we asked everybody to pay duty up front.

The Finance Department through refund process in turn refunded the money back to the person who paid the duty in the first place where that person or that association is eligible to receive the refund.

In the travel tax we see very much the same situation. Over the last few years since I have been dealing with it, the Director of Civil Aviation is normally approached directly for him to exercise discretionary powers because the law before was not quite clear in some areas. We felt the need to specify those three categories that are normally done internationally—diplomats in particular, aircraft employees, and children under the age of twelve. In some situations, children under the age of twelve are also exempt but, certainly, the first two categories are the norm as far as I am aware.

What we are saying here is that under the Travel Tax Law are the three categories of people that can get exemption under that law. If anybody else shows up, for example associations, you might be representing the Cayman Islands overseas, would like a similar treatment, how it works is that you pay it and we in turn reimburse it. As opposed to having a situation where we have many different types of categories of people receiving exemption, the accounting gets messed up over a time; everybody will be calling net accounting as opposed to gross accounting. Although I am not an accountant it is easy to see your money coming and your money going out. That is really the primary reason for this change.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Joel Walton: I am not aware of any situation relating to....

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Joel Walton: They will be covered under number 2, the second category. That is the aircraft employees. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. The question is that a Bill entitled, Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1998 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: TRAVEL TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1998 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The National Gallery Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

DEFERRAL OF THE NATIONAL GALLERY BILL, 1998

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would ask that this be deferred or move that it be deferred as the Minister is ill at present and should be taken at a later stage.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is deferred until a later sitting.

AGREED: THE NATIONAL GALLERY BILL, 1998 DEFERRED UNTIL A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE EURO CONVERSION BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Euro Conversion Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: I beg to move the second reading of the Euro Conversion Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it? Please continue.

Hon. Joel Walton: Yes, sir, if I could briefly.

Honourable members would be aware of the change in Europe in terms of the introduction of the single currency. What this short bill provides for is the framework under which existing contracts, securities and other instruments can be dealt with in terms of the new currency.

It protects existing contracts, securities, and instruments from being unilaterally discharged by one party, that is because of a change in the currency situation. By the same token, it also provides an opportunity where if two parties agree to a change they can do so on their own accord. That in essence is what it is. It allows you to re-denominate your existing agreements into Euro. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill shortly entitled, The Euro Conversion Bill, 1998 be given a second reading. The Bill is now opened to debate. Does any honourable member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I will just make a few comments on this in view of its timeliness and in particular the government's appreciation as to the significant impact the introduction of the European Union's new single currency, the Euro, will have on the world's economy. I wish to also congratulate the Honourable Acting Third Official Member for piloting this Bill through the House today.

Certain leading financial experts have even predicted that the Euro single currency will refashion the economies of Europe and may even change the international monetary system. But whilst this Bill before us focuses mainly on the necessity to provide for the amendments to contracts and other documents, I would also make note that the Honourable Third Official Member distributed a number of amendments which will perhaps be made in the committee stage of the Bill and will no doubt make certain significant changes here and there. Most of these amendments are really minor amendments nonetheless.

The area that I felt should have been included was in reference to registered companies, in particular exempt companies that are denominated in many of the currencies that will be affected by the introduction of the new European single currency. I would ask the Honourable Acting Third Official Member to give an undertaking that this matter will be considered in the committee stage of the Bill.

Also, as regards the parity of the Euro currency perhaps he would comment only on how this currency is pegged and whether there will be any areas of fluctuation. I think it is in the Bill, but for the interest of the listening public, he might want to comment on that.

This amendment will also impact on the financial operations within the Cayman Islands. As I mentioned, whilst this Bill is strictly dealing with matters in relation to contracts (and I would just like to read the objectives of the Bill), "It is a Bill for a law to provide for necessary amendments to the terms of existing contracts, securities and instruments consequent on the introduction of the single currency by Member countries of the European Union." As I mentioned earlier, we should also pay very close attention to the direct impact this will have on our registered companies and make arrangements to deal with this.

As a matter of interest, although the UK and three other European Union members have not yet opted into the European Union's new single currency, it would seem only a matter of time when political and/or economic pressures will force these four countries to participate in the Euro. As regards the UK's position, it is my understanding that it is a manifesto issue with this new Labour Government, to ensure that this matter is dealt with as speedily as possible.

Of course, because of the political situation in regard to the UK's position on this . . . and this is a matter, Mr. Speaker, I understand more of a national and sovereign matter rather than a economic matter with the UK. The Conservative Government felt that they did not want to lose their national standing and would, therefore, not want to be a part of the Euro or the single currency. However, the Labour Government is taking it from the point of view of the economic realities and that the UK could be alienated and left out of what promises to be a economic boom for the European nations.

So I think it is just a matter of time before we see the UK become a fully fledged member and that they will do away with the national pride issue and will regard this whole situation as in their interests from an economic point of view.

I would also like to say that one of the OECD aims, that is the Organisation for Economic Community Development, is to encourage the transition to a global free market and thus towards increasing the mobility of capital and labour. It will be of interest to see how this objective materialises.

It is the view also that the single currency will give a boost to the development of a liquid Euro wide capital market, thus lowering the cost of capital and improving its allocation. And as you know, one of the major problems with the recent OECD reports on Harmful Tax Havens or on Tax Havens had to do with the mobility of capital. The Euro could defeat the very issue that they are trying to protect in that it would encourage more mobility of capital not only within the European countries that are member nations or member states of the Euro but worldwide including, of course, the so-called financial centres or tax havens.

I have no doubt that the introduction of the Euro will have a very positive effect on the Cayman Islands in that it will remove some of the pressures. Time would not permit nor would the ambit of this Bill provide to go into all of the details of the pros and cons, but it is my view, having given this subject some amount of study, that the Cayman Islands will benefit indirectly from the introduction of the Euro.

Mr. Speaker, in my opening I said that the Bill is timely and this is particularly true, although the single currency will not officially come into effect until January of the year 2002, starting in January of this year European firms will start keeping their books and conducting business in the new Euro. This will effectively provide for a three-year transition period.

As mentioned earlier, this Bill addresses mainly the question of the conversion of contracts and other documents which contain references to currencies which will be replaced by the Euro as a result of the adoption of the Euro as legal currency in a number of the Euro member states. Nonetheless, I feel that it is appropriate to expand my brief contribution to the debate in view of the importance of the introduction of this new single currency. It is also of interest to note that when we are talking about the EU member states, there are basically eleven of them as at the end of 1998. There are still four of the states (a total of fifteen altogether) that have not yet opted in. Included in those four are the United Kingdom. The eleven that have already opted in are: Ireland, Finland, Austria, Spain, Portugal, Belgium, Netherlands, France, Luxembourg, Germany, and Italy.

Mr. Speaker, you will also note that these are some of the key members of the OECD member states.

Since January of this year the Euro has become the second largest currency in the world next to the United States dollar. But in many ways the Euro will have a much more significant impact on world economy than the United States currency. And I would just like to make reference to that.

The combined Gross Domestic Product (GDP) in 1997 of the countries involved in the single currency was something like $3.5 trillion and this is compared with America's GDP in the same period (that is at the end of 1997) of some $8.1 trillion. Even though America is still a much bigger economy, you can see that there is not very much between the two economies.

This year on international trade, outside the Euro area is 19% compared with the United States of 17%. So, it can be easily seen that the international trade of the Euro countries is much wider than that of the United States even though the GDP of the United States will still be significantly higher than that of group of Euro nations.

There is no doubt that this currency is important to the Cayman Islands. I have given that background on it because of Cayman's position as the fifth largest financial centre in the world and how the single currency, I feel, will invariably impact upon the economy of the Cayman Islands. The other reason for giving some background on this is that I feel that it will have a somewhat more positive effect on the Cayman Islands when we consider the impacts that the OECD report and the follow-up to that report could possibly have on the smaller financial centres of the world.

Mr. Speaker, with those few remarks I want to give the Euro Conversion Bill, 1998 my full support. I trust that the Honourable Acting Third Official will see fit to include the areas regarding registered companies and other points mentioned. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to does any other honourable member wish to speak? If no other honourable member wishes to speak would the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: Thank you Mr. Speaker. Thanks also to the Third Elected Member for George Town for his contribution. He sort of laid the groundwork for me to talk about a couple of things, two things in particular. One, is the whole idea of where does the Euro derive from and secondly, to the treatment of companies.

Before I go into those two specific areas just allow me to say that like him I see . . . we all know the longer term goal of Europe is the United States of Europe. And I say that to lead into explaining the parity issue in terms of the currency and what that will do is certainly allow capital to be more mobile. Post World War II (1940s – 1960s) we saw a period of protectionism. Into the 1970s we saw national economies, national pride, national currencies and all these kind of stuff. But by the early 1980s - mid 1980s, with the deregulation of national services, certainly in North America in particular, and coming out of that had an impact worldwide certainly in Canada and then on into Europe which has led to a situation where money does not stay too long in one place.

The Euro speaks to that in that it gives investors a single currency by which they can judge the investments against another currency as opposed to having to deal with 11 or 15 national currencies.

In the short term, until the Euro is fully introduced, the Euro will derive its value from the respective national currency, which will continue to exist in the short term. Beyond that, much like United States which we understand in this part of the world quite easily in that we live so close to it, we have the United States of Europe—you have one currency as in United States, you have the national currency in the US dollar. Of course, you have got several states; some economies are down, some are up. They all come together in one basket, which then in turn determines the value of the US dollar.

Very much the same thing will happen in Europe once the Euro is fully in. Like Mr. Pierson, I certainly don't see countries being left out over the longer term. I think the countries that have opted at this point in time to stay out of the Euro will over the medium term join. And it is not only those fifteen countries we are talking about because the European economic area gradually includes more and more countries in Europe.

Certainly, over the longer term the Euro will become, in my view, the world currency. That is the United States does not include Mexico and all of the South America, which could possibly happen over time.

Moving on to the particular point about companies, the member had raised this with me and I have not had a chance to talk back to him about it. But there is a separate bill coming up a little bit further down, which does I think address that particular point. But if it does not fully address those points we can discuss it at the committee stage.

That's all I have to say and thanks again for the contribution on this particular piece of legislation which is most important. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. The question is that a Bill entitled, the Euro Conversion Bill, 1998 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE EURO CONVERSION BILL, 1998, GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Would members wish to take the lunch-break at this time, or continue?

We shall suspend then until 2:15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12:52 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:35 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Bills, Second Reading.

THE NATIONAL PENSIONS (AMENDMENT)
(SELF EMPLOYED PERSON AND PRESCRIBED
MAXIMUM) BILL, 1998
(Deferred)

The Clerk: The National Pensions (Amendment) (Self Employed Person and Prescribed Maximum) Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Boddin: Mr. Speaker, I had asked for this Bill to please be deferred. I move rather that it be deferred as the Honourable Minister is ill.

The Speaker: I shall put the question that this Bill be deferred to a later sitting. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill is deferred.

AGREED: THE NATIONAL PENSIONS (AMENDMENT) (SELF EMPLOYED PERSONS AND PRESCRIBED MAXI-MUM) BILL, 1998 DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: The Bill is deferred. Moving on to Bills, Second Reading.

THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (EURO) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Companies (Amendment) (Euro) Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: I beg to move the second reading of the Companies (Amendment) (Euro) Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it? Please continue.

Hon. Joel Walton: Yes briefly, sir. Thank you.

This morning we dealt with the Euro Bill to allow amendments to existing contracts, securities, and instruments. This Bill which is currently before the House focuses on allowing amendments to the capital of companies where it is denominated in a currency replaced by the Euro.

What this Bill would allow is that appropriate alterations are automatically made to the Memoranda and Articles of the company concerned to re-denominate the capitals of the Euro where necessary at the appropriate rate. Whether the company reverses alterations or makes alternative arrangements is also preserved and provision is made for rounding up or down in the conversion and for appropriate adjustments to be made to the company's accounts.

So it is basically providing the opportunities for companies who currently have share capital in currencies that are being replaced by the Euro to now use the Euro as the currency of choice for their expressed capital. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled the Companies (Amendment) (Euro) Bill, 1998 be given a second reading. The motion is opened to debate.

Does any honourable member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate. If no honourable member wishes to speak, would the honourable mover wish to exercise is right of reply?

Hon. Joel Walton: No, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. The question is that a Bill entitled, The Companies (Amendment) (Euro) Bill, 1998 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (EURO) BILL, 1998 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE PUBLIC SERVICE PENSIONS BILL, 1999.

The Clerk: The Public Service Pensions Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: I beg to move the second reading of the Public Service Pensions Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: Do you wish to continue? Please continue.

Hon. Joel Walton: Thank you, sir. If I could be permitted a couple of minutes to speak to some of the....

The Speaker: Certainly.

Hon. Joel Walton: Thank you, sir.

For several years now we have been working diligently on seeking the reform of the Public Service Pension Bill to bring it more in line with current practise. There have been a number of areas in the Bill, sir, that are not quite clear. In addition to that, there have been a number of significant changes in the way in which the Public Service operates since some 35 years ago when this law was first passed that we need to take account of.

In a nutshell, what we are proposing in this Bill is that it is quite similar to what we have done over the years. In fact we now have in place in the civil service a definite benefits plan, which basically means that the benefits you receive upon retirement are defined by law. Your employer (in this case being the government) then provides a supporting fund to support those benefits in the future. What we have done to date in the Cayman Islands is that the benefits to pensioners have so far been met from General Revenue. However, we have moved away from that and we are in the process of building up a fund so in the future those benefits will be met from a fund not from General Revenue.

What this Bill does is introduce a second type of plan, and that plan is called a defined contribution plan. How that one operates is that while your benefit is being prescribed in law, you contribute to an account along with your employer (in this case being the government), and those funds are in turn invested in investment grade securities, so that when you retire in the future you will get your contributions to that account along with the contributions of your employer combined with the interest earned on investments over time.

This particular scheme, the defined contribution scheme, is in recent times more popular. It is easier to understand in that whatever you put in and your employer puts in and whatever you get from your investment, you get back out. In that respect it is easier. In other respects, it might be more difficult for some people in that your future benefits can vary up or down depending on the quality of the investments made by the Public Service Pensions Board in this case.

There were two things that were okayed. We were trying to ensure that future civil servants were provided for but at the same time we had to be conscious that these liabilities that occur today can be met in the future. In terms of the defined contribution plan, those liabilities are easier to define, understand and invest for. However, recognising the transition from a defined benefit scheme that we are all used to for the last 30 - 35 years or so, to a scheme that is different would be most difficult for existing public servants.

Therefore, to put it in one sentence, if you are in the civil service now and in the plan, you remain in the defined benefit, if that is your choice. Only those public servants that are employed in the future, that is, beyond the date of this law being enacted would join the defined contribution plan. So those civil servants who come in with the full knowledge that they are entered into the civil service on the defined contribution plan will understand what that means as opposed to defined benefits plan.

All persons who are currently receiving a pension and who are currently a part of the defined benefits plan are grandfathered into that plan. Only those employees who joined beyond the date of the enactment of this Bill would go into the defined contribution plan.

Having summarised that, I will go into some of the other general points that the law seeks to do because there are number of other areas this Bill attempts to deal with.

In general, the Bill seeks to re-establish the Public Service Pension Board as a statutory corporation to manage and administer the public service pension fund. And that is a critical statement in that we are now saying that it is important to separate the funds from the government. I think all of us will recognise the importance of doing that, and this is why it was set up that way in the first place. But this Bill furthers that along the road in creating the statutory independence of the Pension Board.

The Bill also retains existing pension rights for existing government employees and pensioners as I mentioned before. The Bill provides for a defined contribution pension plan for future employees, that is employees beyond the date of enactment. It also provides for other incidental and connective purposes along with the related regulations that are acquired to further the Bill.

Mr. Speaker, the current Pension Law which provides for pension benefits to the public service on retirement, death, and/or dismemberment, as I said is based largely upon a law that was passed some 35 years ago. This law is outdated in a number of areas and it has become hard to manage over time. There had also been a lot of changes in pension management over the recent years and this new bill seeks to incorporate that.

We have used in-house a committee of civil servants to review the law along with representatives of the Public Service Commission. Also, we have contracted two companies, the Watson Wired Company out of Washington who has helped us over the years with the pension fund itself, to help us with actuarial assessments. In addition, we also use a law firm out of New York to help us with the initial drafting which was then routed, of course, through the government's legal department, the Legislative Council.

Mr. Speaker, at the same time several steps are being taken to administer the plan more effectively. The Public Service Pension Board, which will be the sole governing authority for the plan, is in the process of making arrangements for appropriate staffing. Furthermore, modern computerised accounting and administration systems are being implemented that will ensure much greater communication of benefits to participants than in the past will greatly enhance the record keeping operation of the plan.

The government is confident that this House will be pleased with these important changes to our plan and will hopefully be able to support them.

In a nutshell, this proposed bill will repeal the old Pensions Law and introduce a new one along with regulations. In short, this Bill seeks to achieve the following:

- It repeals and replaces the old law, establishes a new law called the Public Service Pensions Law, 1999, which we feel is a more equitable, more secure piece of legislation and more in line with modern practise.
- As mentioned before, the Pension Board will become the sole body for the management of the Government's Pension Fund, that is, the Civil Servants' Pension Fund, sorry. And in so doing, we will be bringing together under one umbrella all matters relating to pensions, that is, matters relating to their payment, to the investment of the funds, grievances and so on.
- All civil servants that have since retired and are currently receiving their pensions will continue to receive their benefits in accordance with the old law. As well as civil servants currently employed who are part of the existing defined benefits plan, those will continue to receive their benefits as in the past. There will be no changing, there will be no degradation of benefits in those areas.
- In addition, the Bill makes provision for the continuation of ex gratia payments previously approved and for the commencement of payments relating to applications previously received.

Members will recall that sometime ago, I think in the early 1990s, the government took a decision to recognise those public servants that had worked prior to the introduction of the Pensions Law years ago—some of whom had not gotten any benefits at all. Those persons are being assured exgratia programme which will continue to be paid from General Revenue because there were no provisions for those persons. That particular payment will continue to be a General Revenue item that will continue.

Remember that while we have started ex gratia payments for some ex-civil servants already, there are some civil servants who have not yet reached retirement age but who had resigned prior to the new law who we have to recognise in the future. We have those persons on file.

An important part of the new bill is that it provides a more secure financing package. I think during the budget discussions last year and early into this year, I had an opportunity to speak to some of the important changes we have done in recent years in making good on the past service liability of the fund. I think during the discussion we had probably a month or two ago we talked a bit about the fact that while the six and six deals with current liability, to some extent there is a large past service liability which will take some time to be paid down. In this respect, the government has over the last six years made considerable strides.

In anticipation of the Bill coming into effect, the 1999 Budget includes the required sum on an annual basis. Starting in 1999 was the final piece of the puzzle towards financing the fund. This is why it is building so rapidly because we are now in a position to not only pick up the current liability but also to pick up the past liability.

Mr. Speaker, as mentioned before the new bill has two parts: One is the defined benefits part and the second is the defined contribution part. All existing employees who are in the service and who have been on pension remain in the defined benefits scheme. It is only the new employees beyond the enactment date that will go to the defined contribution scheme. However, current employees will have the option of converting to the defined contribution scheme before reaching the current ten-year vesting period. I will speak about that a little bit later on actually, the whole idea of vesting.

Under both parts of the plan, most of the benefits will be based on benefits accrued at the time of retirement, death, disablement or resignation. On the defined benefits plan, the accrued benefit is a monthly pension defined in terms of the number of months of pensionable service and a final month's pensionable earnings.

Under the defined contribution part, most of the benefits will be determined based on the amount of money in the beneficiaries pot, contribution account and the employee contribution account at the time of retirement. Account balances will accordingly increase as the contributions are made and as investment earnings are accrued so that at the time of retirement the person's defined contribution payment will be a combination of contributions and investment earnings.

Currently the pensionable civil servant has to wait ten years to become eligible to join the pension plan, this proposal eliminates that, and vesting, as we call it (that is, a person's right to a future pension) becomes effective under both plans on the date of employment. The ten-year period has been eliminated.

If a person resigns, the participant will be able to transfer the value of the benefits earned over the approved plan to another employer subject to some restrictions. So while we have built portability into the new scheme and also into the existing defined benefits plan, that portability has some restrictions. Members of the House will recognise what happens in our situation because we have a longer period of pensions being accrued without (prior to early 1990's) a contribution towards the pension fund. So not just to protect the integrity of the fund and to ensure that it does meet its liability in the future, while we have built in portability there are some restrictions on portability.

Existing pension payments that are made will not be less than it would have been had the existing law continued. So, for all the pensioners who might be listening to the deliberations, your existing pensions will not drop under the new law. In fact, what will happen is that your future pension will be protected by a fund and on top of that by inflation provision, which I will speak to in a little while.

The Bill contains provisions that will considerably strengthen the financing, the benefits payable under the scheme. It will enhance the security of benefits by allocating resources to provide for these benefits now while relying on the future generation of participants to finance past service accrued benefits. The Bill (and I mentioned this before) sets out a provision for linking the pension payment to inflation. Experiences in some other countries quite close to us have showed where persons have worked 35 – 40 years, got a pension which would have been worth something when they retired but some ten years later due to inflationary pressures that pension is now significantly of lesser value that it was when it was first received.

To date, successive governments have been able each time there is a cost level adjustment to civil servants to also give that adjustment to pensioners. What this Bill does is put it in law so that it continues that way as opposed to relying on the goodwill of future governments in order to protect the pension benefits of the retired employee.

Last but not least, the Bill provides for . . . how can I put this one. The only way that a person can lose a pension or part of his or her pension is if there is a debt owed to government. The government has the right under the law to offset that debt against the pension. The second way possible is that if the Court directs that a pensioner pay a portion of his or her pension to a dependant then it can be done. Other than that, there are no other ways under which the civil servant can lose his or her pension, or a portion of it.

Under the old law there are provisions where if a person was sentenced for some wrongdoing, the person would forfeit his or her pension. I just want to say that the Committee took a strong view on that, in that a pension is a person's savings account for his or her retirement. If a person commits a crime, there is a legal judicial process through which the person will be punished. And that person should not in turn as well suffer by losing his or her pension because they worked 30 or 40 years and forfeit it if they make a mistake. That type of archaic provision has been removed.

Mr. Speaker, at this point I will close off my contribution and allow other members to make theirs. Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I am really just standing to say that I would like to thank the Honourable Acting Third Official Member for his very comprehensive description of the Public Service Pension Bill, 1999.

I am also pleased to note that he has given in his contribution specific attention to a concern, which I believe many members have had.

The Speaker: I would like to advise honourable members that you do not have the right to speak again. You have spoken on this debate but I will allow you to make a brief statement.

I beg you pardon, please continue Fourth Elected Member of George Town. I am one step ahead of you.

Dr. Frank McField: I was beginning to believe that somehow we were not on the same planet together. I would basically like to again say that this whole idea of giving the right to the employer to deprive the employee of his savings simply because the employee had been involved in certain acts of behaviour that were defined as criminal. The fact that we can remove this from our legislation, I believe is admirable because there is no reason why an individual should be....

The Speaker: Could I interrupt you just one moment again? I need to put the question before you start your debate. The question is that a Bill entitled, The Public Service Pensions Bill, 1999 be given a second reading.

The floor is now opened to debate. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Dr. Frank McField: Again, it is just to acknowledge this Bill being brought to the House by the government and to congratulate the Honourable Acting Third Official Member for his very able presentation of this Bill and to also acknowledge the fact that in this new bill repealing the old archaic bill, and, therefore, taking away the power of the employer being the governor in this sense to deprive and individual of his saving because that individual had been involved in behaviour that was concerned to be unacceptable.

To know that is now removed pleases me because I don't believe that an individual should be punished twice for wrongdoing and if he has to go to Court and go to prison and the same time loses his pension then he is basically being punished twice.

I believe that the development of this particular kind of concept of saving and the responsibility of the civil service for contributing to what they will later be entitled to is a good system. We have many people working in the public service. We also have many people working in the statutory authorities and it would be, I think, important that government in fact has a public service pension plan, or bill, or law that really is modern and it is really causing both sides to accept the responsibility for providing for persons in their older ages is both the responsibility of the employer and the employee.

I don't suppose that I am making a tremendous amount of sense here but it is basically to recognise the fact that this is an important bill. The government has played, I believe a progressive role in bringing in it as it is and I commend the mover of this Bill.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I rise to remark that this Bill is a welcomed and refreshing move in what I consider the right direction. It is in keeping with the spirit of reform that is so often echoed in and around these chambers now.

I am particularly pleased to learn that the government has seen it appropriate at this time to move forward and to organise its pension in a way that will be manifestly more appropriate and certainly more encouraging than past practise. Like the previous speaker, I too have to comment on what I consider a significant improvement in that the departure has been made from the highly immoral position of the ability to deprive someone of what I would consider a right, just on the basis of some occurrence which for all intents and purposes may not necessarily have had any bearing on the person's ability and the calibre of service they performed.

I am happy to see that the government has seen fit to distance it self from this highly questionable and immoral practise though I cannot recall where in our history it has ever been applied.

Mr. Speaker, I am also happy to learn of how the Board will be set and how it will administered. And as I said, this is in keeping with the refreshing ideas of some persons in the civil service as well as those of us in the legislature who are touting his reforms and who are touting the sophistication and the separation and development of these kinds of principles and ideas in such a way that will make it easier to function and it will make it more easily understood by those people who are involved in the service.

I commend the government. And, I want to say before I take my seat that the proposal as outlined here not only bodes well for positive effect on those persons who have just entered the service and those who may be about to enter the service, but it is one of those developments in which people who are not the beneficiaries of the pension will not be at any disadvantage indeed they will be advantage. While remarking that sometimes with changes and improvements it is not always possible to let the benefits trickle down in a way as to effect persons who have been past contributors, I think this is a significant point and it is worth noting.

I too lend my support and encouragement to this. I commend the government on what is one of a series of positive moves. I look forward to more such moves in the future as I think in the 21st Century this is definitely the way the bureaucracies will have to function if we are to attract, retain and maximise the human resources that we have.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Today marks a major landmark for the public service of these islands. The provision of pension arrangements is a vital component of the terms of employment within our public service. While provisions have existed for a long time, there has been a growing concern with some of the, should I say, idiosyncrasies contained in those provisions.

Pension is insurance for the well being of employees when their employable years are ended by age, ill health, disability or whatever. It is the sole purpose of a pension and the fact that the current legislation unfortunately sought to use pensions for certain other purposes, as I said it was of growing concern. One of the major deficiencies of the current law has been the fact that while public servants since the beginning of this decade, since 1990, have contributed to pensions, the actual receipt of a pension was at the discretion of the Governor or as the law termed it, a privilege.

Pensions are in some ways like the irrevocable letter of credit that we use in commerce and if the employee fulfils his part of the deal then someone must ensure that he gets what he is due. In this legislation, the Pensions Board will be that intermediary that will ensure that those who have earned the pension will receive one.

Mr. Speaker, certainly the public servants of the future as we approach this next century must be expected to take risks and those risks would be risk relating to their performance or lack thereof. But I don't think it is fair to take a risk as to whether you are going to get a pension or not if you have fulfilled the requirements of your employment.

The vesting will also greatly enhance the mobility of public servants. The mobility between the public service and the private sector because while the previous legislation sought to bind you as it were into a marriage, that you join at whatever age and you stayed until you could not do anything else. With the advent of the vesting provisions, mobility will be greatly enhanced and I think will lend to the development of a public service that is more robust and that is less polarised in terms of what side of the employment fence we come from.

I just want to thank a few people who have played some key roles in this. I certainly want to thank the former holder of this seat—the former First Official Member and former Financial Secretary—who started the pension fund when he was head of the public service some eight or nine years ago. I think he certainly took a decision then that has proven to be in the best interest of the public service and the country as a whole.

I certainly would like to thank the government since then for their continued support for that fund. I am sure there were times when it would have been a lot easier to balance the budget if you didn't have to commit the $8M - $12M to the fund. But we are grateful to them for having stuck with it.

I want to thank my colleague on my right here, The Honourable Temporary Acting Third Official Member, who chaired that committee that he mentioned that he said very little about. He worked very hard, and I think the product that you have before you today is one that all public servants and you as legislators can be justly pleased with.

And to members, who expressed their support for the Bill, let me also on behalf of the public service thank you very much. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: I support this Bill. I do not perhaps understand all of the technical aspects of the workings of the pension. What it does is that after the coming into effect as law people in the service will be able, the same as private persons can do, to contribute to a defined contribution scheme in which they will be putting money in, government will be putting money in and it is always there.

There is no need for having the extensive reserves that are now being built up to deal with the defined benefits plan. In other words, the present plan that government has is one in which people are entitled to certain benefits under it but unfortunately it has always been and still is even though to a less extent under funded. I think back five years ago, it was may be $6M in it and at the end of this year it will be closer to $49M in the reserve. But even with that, it will take considerably more and each year — this year, for example, nearly $10M was put from the recurrent revenue into the pension reserves and I fully support building that up, it will probably be another 10 or 12 years at that rate before that fund is built up. In the meantime, the present pensions are paid for directly out of recurrent revenue.

So that is a course of action I fully support and like the First Official Member mentioned it is funds that could be used elsewhere or to more easily balance the budget. However, it is important that, that contingent liability is finally wiped out. The Constitution, of which I actually struggled to get a stronger provision in, does provide in paragraph 55(c) for pensions. It states that the law that is applicable to persons prior to the coming into of operation of the 1993 Constitution Order would apply and that if there are amendments in the future then they will be not less favourable to the person, to the civil servant concerned.

So this basically entrenched the benefits that prior civil servants had and ensured that at least for the future that could not be taken away or diminished. That obviously if it is done by through consent and they consent to change the scheme, that is different but at least could not be forced upon them. That I think was very important. What I actually asked for was that the reserve itself would be entrenched in the constitution and, therefore, could not be touched by politicians in the future under any circumstances. That aspect of it, United Kingdom was not prepared to grant because that would have been perhaps the strongest provision that the civil servants could have had. Because persons' pension is really a right, there is something that those funds belong to them and it is basically as if government should be holding those funds in trust for the people.

So the next best to that was the amendment that we got in the constitution, that at least preserved that right. And it did a second thing because in subsection (3), it entrenched in the constitution the right that if those funds/ those reserves were ever insufficient then they became a charge upon the revenue of the country so that the civil servant could not lose money, benefits that had been paid into or should have paid in for purposes of their pension. So, Mr. Speaker, I am happy with this.

The law once we have funded the defined contribution aspect of the pension, future governments then will not have to further fund that because persons coming on, as I understand it, who will be recruiting in the future would be defined contributions and, therefore, that pension liability of government will not exist. So, I am happy that this is coming about. I am happy that the United Kingdom's Government saw fit to entrenched in our constitution the benefits and I say entrenched from the point of view that this legislature cannot change that constitution, and thank God for that, or any legislature in fact.

Now, what is being done is sensible, we can properly budget in the future for the pension and civil servants are secured in that those funds are kept away from government. They are kept in the pension fund and that, I think, will make for a more secure service as the Third Official Member and First Official Member has stressed. I fully support this and I will also continue to support the funding of the pension fund for the old pension benefits that existed, the defined benefits scheme.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, would the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: In winding up sir, I would just like to thank all members of the Legislative Assembly who have spoken today and have lent their support to the Bill. But also to all those others throughout the last two years who have encouraged me personally and others on the committee in various forms, be it in the informal basis or in meetings that we have had, we have had an opportunity to discuss this Bill. I certainly thank you very much on behalf of the committee. I would also like to thank the committee itself for their contribution, and the Legislative Drafting Unit of the Legal Department for their assistance and to the companies who have helped us from outside.

Also, just to say, certainly from the standpoint of the civil service, we have gotten a lot of support. Some of these points were not easy to resolve and I myself have had difficulties with some of them to really fully appreciate them because this whole business of pensions can be very complex. I must say that I just want to associate myself with the comments of the Acting First Official Member and just recognise the efforts of the current Minister for Tourism who had the foresight some years ago to pilot the initial bill to establish the fund and to establish the Board through this House.

That is all I have to say. Thanks once again for the thoughts and comments and support on this most important piece of legislation.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Public Service Pensions Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Bill has accordingly been given a second reading.

AGREED: THE PUBLIC SERVICE PENSIONS BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, Second Reading.

THE LIQUOR LICENSING LAW (AMENDMENT)
(PROTECTION OF MINORS) BILL, 1999
(Deferred)

The Clerk: The Liquor Licensing law (Amendment) (Protection of Minors) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I would beg your indulgence and that of the House to not proceed with this Bill this afternoon. There are some areas under consideration that have not been quite finalised. I might be setting myself up to be holding more than one line again when I actually get here but I would prefer if we didn't receive the Bill as it currently is this afternoon.

So, I am in your hands as to whether....

The Speaker: Would you like to move a motion and defer it to a later sitting?

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: The motion has been moved that this Bill be deferred to a later sitting. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE LIQUOR LICENSING LAW (AMENDMENT) (PROTECTION OF MINORS) BILL, 1999 BE DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING .

The Speaker: This concludes the debate on the Bills. The house will now go into committee to consider . . . or maybe this might be an appropriate time to take the afternoon break prior to going into committee.

We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4:10 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. The House will now go into committee to consider a Bill entitled, The Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1999 and six other bills.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 4:10 PM

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is committee.

With leave of the House, may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such likes in these bills. Would the Clerk state the Bills and read the clauses?

THE ELECTRICITY (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Electricity (Amendment) Bill, 1999.

Clause 1: Short title.

Clause 2: Definition.

Clause 3: Amendment of section two, Definitions.

Clause 4: Addition of new sections, Board of Examiners.

Clause 5: Amendment of Section 22, Offences.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 5(b) do stand part of the Bill.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Chairman, I gave notice of one amendment and that is in Clause 5(b) between the words, "down" and "from" in the penultimate line of the green paper, to add in the words, "or prescribed". I didn't do that in writing, sir, and I am sorry about that.

The Chairman: Let us then take Clauses 1 through 4, and then come back to that.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Yes. Well, 1 to 3 because this is actually 4, sir, even though the number of it is [Clause] 5 of the Bill that it is amending.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 3 do stand part of the Bill. Is there any debate. No debate? I put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 1, 2, and 3 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: THAT CLAUSES 1, 2 AND 3 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 4: Amendment of new section, Board of Examiners.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Chairman, I just had a question.

The Chairman: Dr. McField.

Dr. Frank McField: I wanted to find out if the Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning has brought this Bill as the Minister of Education or as the Minister of Planning because I noticed that electricity also comes under Planning. I wasn't quite sure so just as a point of clarification.

The Chairman: Mr. Bodden.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it has been moved under Planning.

The Chairman: Would you now move your amendment, please, Mr. Bodden?

Hon. Truman Bodden: Yes, sir. I would like to move that the words, "or prescribed" be added between the words, "down" and "from" in the clause number 5(b). Also, sir, that an amendment — but maybe I should do that under 5 — but it relates to this section.

I would like to amend Section 21 of the Electricity Law itself — this will be a new one, sir. By adding in Section 21, subsection (a) the word, "examinations" between the words, "qualifications" and "or". This would allow the prescription of examinations there. So it is two minor amendments and in fact the Attorney General has pointed out the second one to me, sir.

The Chairman: Read the first amendment again, please.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Well, I ad lib that— [Laughter] That in Clause 5(b) in the penultimate line of the green paper between the words, "down" and "from" adding the words, "or prescribed."

Then the other one, sir, is a totally new clause to the green paper which relates, sir, to 5(b) and it may have to go in probably as Clause 7, I guess. It may be better for me to wait on that, sir, and put that as Clause 7 as I have a new Clause 6 that is going in. It should really have come as Clause 5, I guess but....

Or I guess maybe we should do it right, sir, when you hit Clause 5 I will put an amendment to the numbering and put in Section 21 as amended and go on from there, sir.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 5(b) has read out by the Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, that between the words, "laid down or prescribed from time to time" be accepted. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: Clause 5(b) AMENDED.

The Chairman: The question is that clause 5(b) as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 5(B) AS AMENDED PASSED.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Chairman, if you would take next Clause....

The Chairman: Would you prefer taking that under Clause 4 because Clause 5... or are you just going to renumber?

Hon. Truman Bodden: It would probably be best if I renumber, but I will leave the Attorney General to what he wishes sir.

The Chairman: Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I think it would be preferable to re-number the existing Clause 5 with the new amendment to Section 21, to keep things in order. In other words, Clause 5 of the Bill would read that "Section 21(a) of the principal law is amended by adding the word, 'examination' between the words, 'qualifications' and 'or conditions' on the first line.

This is by way of explanation to make it clear that in exercise of the power under Clause 5(b) where we have just added the words, "or prescribed" that examinations can be prescribed under the regulation making power of Section 21.

So, it is really a consequential amendment, to make it plain in response to the concerns raised by members in the debate, that examinations may be the subject of prescription by regulation. That's the explanation for it. Hopefully, it will make it clearer on the face of the law that examinations can be the subject of regulations under Section 21 in order to have those examinations set and marked by those who are considered to be competent to do so.

Then the other clauses would simply be re-numbered. Clause 5 will become Clause 6; the new Clause 6 would become Clause 7.

The Chairman: I shall put the question that [new] Clause 5 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 5 has been amended.

AGREED: NEW CLAUSE 5 PASSED.

The Chairman: Now, we will put that Clause 5 be re-numbered Clause 6. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 5 RE-NUMBERED AS CLAUSE 6.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 6 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 6 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSE 6 PASSED.

The Clerk: New Clause 7, Validation.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: I move that the new Clause 7 as circulated do stand part of the Bill.

["7. Anything which has been done between the 5th day of December 1978, and the coming into force of this Law by the Board of Examiners purportedly established under Electricity Regulations, 1977, made the 27th September, 1977, in purported exercise of any power conferred by the said regulations which would have been lawfully done if the said regulations had been properly and lawfully made, and the said Board of Examiners properly and lawfully established under a regulation making provision contained in the principal Law, shall for the purposes whatsoever be deemed to have been lawfully done and shall have effect and be deemed to have effect accordingly."]

The Chairman: The question is that new Clause 7 do stand part of the Bill as circulated. Is there any debate?

It was numbered on yours as 6 but it is now re-numbered 7. Honourable Second Official Member?

Hon. David Ballantyne: I caused a slight delay by inquiring as to the drafting of this particular clause and I am satisfied that it has been subjected to appropriate scrutiny by the legal draftsman. The reason for it, as I understand it, is that the Electricity Law did not contain specific provisions previously for a Board of Examiners and this is necessary in order to validate what has been done under that law.

This amending law contains specific provisions which will be in the primary legislation for a Board of Examiners so that I am satisfied that the content of what is now Clause by way of validation is both necessary and appropriate. Thank you.

The Chairman: I thank the Second Official Member for that explanation.

The question is that Clause 7 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 7 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: THAT CLAUSE PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Electricity Law, 1997, Revision, to provide for the establishment of an Electrical Board of Examiners to increase penalties and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

THE BILLS OF SALE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Bills of Sale (Amendment) Bill, 1998.

Clause 1: Short title.

Clause 2: Amendment of section 3.

Clause 3: Amendment of section 4.

Clause 4: Insertion of new section.

Clause 5: Insertion of Schedule.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 5 do stand part of the Bill. Is there any debate?

Mr. Ballantyne.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I am sorry to interrupt. I just advised my friend to my right that there is an amendment, I believe to Clause 2.

[Pause]

The Chairman: Bear patience with us for just one moment. We are getting clarification from the Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, I received notification of this from the Legislative Council in the Legal Drafting Section of the Attorney General's Chambers on or about the 21st December [1998]. So far as I am aware, it hasn't been incorporated as yet—certainly not in the Bill. Rather than try to progress matters and perhaps omit an amendment which may be material, it would be my suggestion if it is competent that perhaps we defer consideration of this overnight to allow an opportunity for clarification as to whether this amendment is in fact desired.

I don't wish to obstruct or interfere with the Acting Third Official Member's business, but would rather that we make sure that it is or it is not needed. Mr. Chairman, if that would be acceptable, it would be appreciated.

The Chairman: It is just a suggestion that it may be the appropriate time as it is within four minutes of the normal adjournment time. Maybe we can just conclude deliberations in the Committee for this afternoon and we will come back on Wednesday morning in the Committee.

The Honourable Leader of Government Business is that....

Hon. Truman Boddén: Mr. Chairman, I am just wondering whether we could not put that one aside and perhaps go on to try to finish the committee stage of the others and get them out of the way. Because you are now in committee, it means coming out of committee, going back into the House.

The Chairman: I am completely in the hands of the House whatever is the wish.

Hon. Truman Boddén: I guess we just close down, sir.

The Chairman: This will conclude proceedings in Committee for this afternoon. We will reconvene on Wednesday morning and [we will now] return to the House.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 4:30 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday morning at 10.00 a.m., sir.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 a.m. Wednesday. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House do stand adjourned until 10.00 a.m. Wednesday.

AT 4.31 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 14 APRIL 1999.

EDITED
WEDNESDAY

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies for absence from the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Works who is sick, and from the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture who is also sick.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question number 32 is a deferred question standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town — correction, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERRED QUESTION NO. 32
(Deferred on Thursday, 1st April 1999)

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I am concerned that this question bears more than a striking similarity to a question which was previously answered. As a result, I crave leave of the House to withdraw this question at this time, sir.

The Speaker: Under Standing Order 24(5), would you move that it be withdrawn?

WITHDRAWAL OF QUESTION NO. 32

Mr. Roy Bodden: Under Standing Order 24(5), I humbly move that this question standing in my name be withdrawn, sir.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Member from North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I second.

The Speaker: The motion is made and seconded that this question be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The question has been withdrawn.

AGREED: QUESTION 32 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 34 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION NO. 34

No. 34: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning (a) if the Civil Aviation Authority has a Capital Development Programme for the future; and (b) What period of time does it span?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman Bodden: The Civil Aviation Authority current airport development programme includes the following:

Grand Cayman

1. A 2,000-foot runway extension to meet the take-off requirements for large aircraft on direct flights to Europe and distant North American destinations.
2. A taxiway parallel to the runway to enhance the safety and efficiency of aircraft movements.
3. Extension of the ticketing concourse of the main terminal to improve the accommodation for airlines currently operating and provide for future air carriers.
4. Extension of the departure lounge at the main terminal to alleviate current congestion and provide for future passenger movement growth.
5. Extension of the general aviation aircraft parking apron to improve the safety and efficiency of the current situation and provide for future growth in this area.
6. Construction of a general aviation terminal to provide suitable accommodation for passengers and aircraft crews.
7. Construction of an express cargo facility to accommodate the rapid growth of business in this area.

Cayman Brac

1. Resurface the runway, taxiway and apron.

2. Expansions of the ticketing area in the terminal to alleviate current congestion and provide for future growth.
3. Construction of an air cargo handling facility.

Little Cayman

1. Construct an airport
2. The programme is for the next ten years subject to periodic reviews. A comprehensive review is to be undertaken this fiscal year to determine detailed phasing and feasibility of the programme.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, can the Honourable Minister say which of these items Civil Aviation will move ahead on first and if he considers that the runway extension and the extension of the ticketing concourse is a priority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Boddan: Mr. Speaker, as I mentioned, there is a comprehensive review being undertaken to look at detailed phasing and feasibility. At present, some of the major things that hopefully will begin this year will be the resurfacing of the runway, taxiway, and apron at Cayman Brac. Some decisions on the siting and maybe the beginning of construction of the Little Cayman airport are the more urgent ones that we were looking on the short term of moving ahead with.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Minister state if the Authority has got any rough estimates as to the cost of these individual developments and/or a total cost of what the development will be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Boddan: Mr. Speaker, in rough estimates Cayman Brac is $3.2 Million and Little Cayman $2.6 million but excluding the terminal and that sort of thing.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, a supplementary.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if the Authority has any ideas for increasing its revenue stream besides the natural increase of revenue that will occur from these developments in order to ensure that the operation is still feasible with regard to expenditure and income?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Boddan: Mr. Speaker, there are several areas now in which fees are imposed. Unless the honourable Member wants to suggest some other way, by all means we could look at it. But we do not have any at present that go beyond what are the internationally accepted areas of raising of fees and money.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, a supplementary.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, let me try to use one of these specific examples and perhaps the Minister might be in a better position to give an answer. For instance, in the very first one that is proposed for Grand Cayman, a 2,000 foot runway extension to meet the takeoff requirements for large aircraft on direct flights to Europe and distant North American destinations, can the Minister state if when this is completed it will naturally mean additional revenue for the Authority by virtue of the fact that this extension exists, or might it be an expense that is incurred with no additional revenue? That is what I am trying to understand.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Boddan: Mr. Speaker, I now understand what the honourable Member is concentrating on. Yes, it will be increased revenue—larger aircraft, more passengers and the aircraft pay basically by weight.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on the matter of the runway extension to 2000 feet, can the Honourable Minister say what kind of examination or study has taken place to determine exactly the need for the European and the distant North American destinations as it seems that new technology is allowing larger planes to use our present facility?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Boddan: Mr. Speaker, I am not saying that this is going to be done. As the Director of Civil Aviation has just reminded me, he found the plans for that in 1976 when he came—twenty-two years ago. I was just asked but there are no plans to do this right away, by any means.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I want to ask the Minister if Cayman Airways will be able to use the airport at Little Cayman.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the answer to that is no. At Little Cayman what we would be seeking to do is to keep the strip substantially the size it is now, 3,000 feet, and it would therefore restrict the planes to much smaller types of planes.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, and let me ask to be pardoned if the terms I use are not exactly correct and I am quite happy to be corrected but I am going to try to be understood anyway. Is it a fact that the apron where all of the aeroplanes park to offload or unload passengers is only constructed to accommodate a certain weight of aircraft? If these new additional aircraft are landing may there be cause to have to do some type of resurfacing or bolstering of that area?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the answer to that is no. The airport is constructed to deal with the big aircraft. I should also mention that what really happens is whereas a small plane may only have two wheels with tyres, for example, a large aircraft may have clusters of 12 or 16 which spread the weight more. But I have been assured by the Director who is sitting here with me, the airport can take the larger aircraft.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister tell the House the last time that any improvements were made to the apron or any other section of the runway with regard to it being able to accommodate the larger long haul aircraft?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, in 1993 we resurfaced the airport runway and the apron.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister say if any work on runway or apron improvement had to be done to accommodate the recent change of aircraft by British Airways?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the Member is right. We did do slight increases to each end to permit the 777 to turn. I am sorry I forgot that, I was thinking of major works that we did in 1993.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister tell the House at what cost that accommodation was done, and also if he could explain to the House what entity bore that expense?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the cost was in the region of $420,000 and was borne by the Civil Aviation Authority.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, moving away from the line of questioning and getting into the finances of the Civil Aviation Authority, can the Minister state if the Authority itself has recognised the need for some of these developments that are listed in the substantive answer, to take place in the very, very near future? In fact, some of them are very pressing, including for instance, the resurfacing of the Cayman Brac runway. If this is the case, can the Minister state what has been the Authority's position with regard to recognising this need and trying to put revenue on stream in order to properly organise financing in the very near future?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the Authority sees the resurfacing of the airport in Cayman Brac which has not been done in about 15 years now, or close to that, as urgent. We also see as important No. 7 which is the construction of a cargo facility to facilitate and accommodate the rapid growth of business in that area and also the Little Cayman Airport where we have had for some time pressured to ensure that the standards there are increased up.

At present, we have not gone into the financing because we need to get final costings. More than likely, we will need a guarantee from the Government for it. Government owns the authority so we would be coming to Finance Committee but when we do we will come with proper costings or more accurate costings on these. If that is necessary and more than likely I think it would be.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker can the Minister state how long the Authority has expressed that this especially the extension to the runway in Cayman Brac is something that needs to be done in the immediate future? How long ago since this has been recognised?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I would just like to mention in Cayman Brac we are resurfacing not extending. What has really happened sir, this was resurfaced about 15 years ago. It has become quite rough but it is safe. I would like to point that out but the roughness of it is mainly what we would want to recap and smooth it out again. For some time that has been recognised but I would like to point out that safety is not an issue with it. It is hard on Cayman Airways' jets going in there obviously and on all planes because it is not as smooth as it will be after it is resurfaced. I hope that answers the question.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, it is my understanding that this has been recognised for some time now and the Minister has basically just verified that. Can the Minister state exactly why this has not been done up to now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker the Civil Aviation Authority has done other things which they felt should be done in priority to it. I cannot give any more than that but, he is right, for sometime now it has been recognised that we should do it. This year it is in the Budget subject to Finance Committee if we need a guarantee for it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister state if financial constraints have been the reason why it has not been done as yet?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, not really because we will be coming for a guarantee anytime, or we may not even need a guarantee. I know the Port has raised considerable funds without a guarantee and we may not need that. But, it is something that was slated for this year. I have the Director here with me and I continue to point out there is nothing wrong with the airport. From a safety point of view it is safe.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker. Can the Minister state how much money the Civil Aviation Authority has given to the Government out of their revenue, outside of paying any loans between 1996 and 1999?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it is about $5 million over the three years. The Law requires that any surplus, I believe exceeding $100,000, should be paid to Government. Rarely, if at all, has Government ever got the full amount that is required under the Law from the Statutory Corporations. They normally find ways of using it for other things. But that has been paid in. Last year it was $1.5 million, $2 million the year before and in 1996, $1,5 or $1,7 million.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Regardless of the Law, if Government makes the demand on an annual basis to the Authorities—and specifically in this instance the Civil Aviation Authority—can the minister state if this impedes the Authority from properly operating and planning in such a way that they will be on top of all of these situations rather than having this long list not knowing when it is going to happen?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, once again this is an area that was gone into in depth. What has happened is this: The Civil Aviation was created many years ago and Government vested into it what today is extremely valuable land. That was put into it and a loan valuation at that time was done for which they pay no interest. They created the Statutory Authority to run the airport but they also vested in them what Government had a right to, which presently is about $12 million per year which are taxes, duties, fees. So basically Government transferred to the Civil Aviation Authority, as its subsidiary, very valuable property but it also transferred to it vast sums of recurrent annual revenue that would normally go to Government. I am just trying to put this into perspective.

It is basically a wholly owned subsidiary of Government. Into it was put a law that specifies what can be done and what cannot be done. What I think the honourable Member is getting at is that the statutory bodies should be free to operate as if a private person owned them who request no return back. With every subsidiary company sir, dividends are paid.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

The Speaker: This is unusual but let me hear your point of order.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, not to be contentious sir, but I just want to correct the Minister. That is not what I am trying to say. He can give me the answer but he must not presuppose what I am trying to say. I will say what I am saying, sir.

The Speaker: Please continue honourable Minister.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Okay, sir, I will withdraw that part.

Therefore, the Statutory Authorities are subsidiaries of the Government and the Law does not allow them to keep all funds out of the profits that they make. In fact, if those laws were strictly applied, far more would come to Government than does now. I know, sir, that at times, the Members feel that the statutory corporations are a private corporation owned by the members who sit on the Board but it is not that in reality.

While the Law exists, the Law has to be applied and like every subsidiary owned by a company, the Laws require that dividends be paid to Government because Government otherwise would be getting the $12 million that is coming into the Statutory Authority each year and would just put it into its general budget.

Therefore going along with it, if the Statutory Authority is going to pay nothing back to Government then it is as if . . . I do not know who it would be regarded as owned by even though I know members very jealously hate paying anything to Government, but it is like every subsidiary.

I sit on the subsidiary companies in the private sector and there is always the feeling, 'look we keep what we make.' But at the end of the day, Government is responsible for the Civil Aviation Authority and a lot of the debt that we guaranteed or that is owed and there has got to be a give and take.

These amounts are small compared to what, if the law was strictly applied, would have to be paid in to the Government.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: What the Minister has just stated regarding Government and the Civil Aviation Authority being a subsidiary and the fact that the Civil Aviation Authority should be giving Government a certain portion of its revenue, that is not what I am questioning.

He also mentioned about the Government vesting with the Authority certain recurrent revenues to the tune of about $12 million a year and how that money could have been received by the Government and it would have added to the Government's receipts. What he did not put into the equation is that if Government was dealing with the entire operation they would also have the expenses and they would also be making the borrowings directly. That is the point that I wish to make and I am going to turn it into a question.

If Government continues to take direct revenue from the Authority and the Authority then has to borrow more money than it would have normally have had to borrow to continue its development programmes and the Government is still responsible, then in truth and in fact all that is happening is that the money that has to be borrowed is simply being borrowed by another entity than directly by Government. That is my point.

So regardless of the Law, I am asking the Minister how can he truly justify the methodology whereby Government takes the earnings and uses it for other means? The Authority then has to borrow money and Government is ultimately responsible for that money, whether by a guarantee or just by the fact that the Authority is an entity of Government. It cannot make any better sense than for Government to use this revenue and still have an increased liability even though it may not be termed a direct liability.

In fact, one could almost presuppose that it is a method by which Government's direct borrowing becomes less when in truth and in fact it would have been different.

So, I am asking the Minister, he boasts of his 25 years' experience in banking and he continues, as he just did, to tell us all about the way that this thing works. Does he consider in his professional opinion, if he is willing to wager one, that that is the best way for the Authority to operate?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, let me just say that at present the Civil Aviation Authority has $4 million in reserves. They are entitled to keep $100,000. So if there is any imputation that Government is fleecing the Civil Aviation Authority that is totally wrong. If we really follow the Law, they are entitled to $100,000 and they have $4 million. So let us get that clear.

From a banking point of view, it is the normal practice that when you are building capital assets long term as we will be doing here, you borrow long term. If you go into a bank and say to them, I want to build a house, the banker does not say that you can have a loan for one year, pay it all off. This is what has been expected of Government and of the Authorities. The banker will say to you that you should borrow long term, you should get a house mortgage, say for 20, 15 or 25 years whatever, and you borrow on that basis because nobody can finance out of their salary the payment in one year for a house.

This has got to be common sense. It is not just banking experience. And what is prudent for everyone, not just an individual, but a Government to do, they must plan long term and borrow long term for assets which are long term. Assets that are short term, you borrow short term for. The airport runway and apron is long term and the Authority would have to borrow long term. When a bank builds its own building many times the loan is spread over 10 or 15 years.

What is being done makes sense because if you take all of your short-term cash and borrow long term at the end of the day you will only have probably 10% of what you could otherwise have done.

Now, if the revenue was not here to support the loan, I can see the problem, in which case you should not borrow at all, not long or short term. We have a $4 million reserve that Government has, of its own discretion and accord, left with the Authority. But, at the end of the day, it is a subsidiary and as the honourable Member says, at the end of the day there is a moral duty and in some instances a legal duty to assist all the Authorities in seeing that there is payment for their liabilities. What is being done here will be, and I will be recommending to the Authority, that for long term assets they borrow long term. If they take that $4 million, if I can just wind up on this, Mr. Speaker, there is a saying that when you have money a bank will easily lend you, when you do not have money it is not quite as easy to borrow.

What I suggest is that reserves such as this be kept because they can service loans in the event of there being a slow period. It is better to keep some cash reserves rather than just spending it all on long term assets and borrow long term on the assets that are long term. The assets that are short term you pay out of cash or you borrow short term. I don't know if that answers the Member's statement.

The Speaker: Before calling the next supplementary I will ask the Honourable Minister if he would move the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) that questions can go beyond 11 o'clock.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) AND (8)

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this surely must be the first time that one question has gone beyond, I think it might be the second time. I move that we suspend the Standing Orders for further supplementaries to be taken sir.

The Speaker: I shall put the question, those in favour please say aye, those against no.

Ayes.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question time continues, the First Elected Member for George Town. There will be two additional supplementaries.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8) SUSPENDED.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you Mr. Speaker. I saw the Minister give you the gentle hint there about the length of the questioning so we will cut short the two. I will divide them between the First Elected Member for West Bay and myself.

Mr. Speaker, the Minister in his usual style answered my supplementary the way he so wishes to suit himself which was not the way the line of questioning sought an answer. The Minister has explained how the banks operate.

My opinion of what he was saying, in answer to my supplementary, was that I was suggesting the opposite to what he was saying which was not the case. I will turn this into a question. But you see, there is no suggestion that the Authority should not borrow long term when it needs to. There is no suggestion that the Authority should spend all of its earnings before it borrows. We are simply talking about a proportion . . . and I was not, at any point in time, dealing with the fact that the Authorities should exercise their borrowing rights in such a manner.

My question again to the Minister is this: the revenue from the Authority that Government takes is spent elsewhere. In fact, on occasion it has been needed to ensure that at the end of the year there was not a deficit as has been the case in the past. If the Authorities were allowed to operate, and I keep saying notwithstanding the Law, the Minister could tell me forty-eleven times about the Law, I know what the Law says. He does not have to continue repeating that. I understand what it says.

I am talking about what is the right way for the Authority to operate and the Minister must know what is right for the Authority and what is in its best interest, regardless of a Law which may well be outdated at this point in time.

My question to the Minister is this: Is it the best way for the Authority to operate where, notwithstanding the reserve that it has, but the fact that such proportions of its earnings at year end go back into the Government, instead of them being able to have a proper long term plan which is been touted in the substantive answer but has not actually been put in place, and I will see if God spares life next year if a feasibility study is actually done and a proper plan is put in place?

I know that the Authority has wanted a plan for a long time and have not been able to do so. But, is it right for the Authority to have to put this money back into the Government and then the proportions of its borrowings have to be much more than it would have had to be especially in view of trying to get these things done on a timely basis?

The Minister in his answer has not addressed whether or not this is the right way for them to do. He goes off to talk about hypothetical situations and if you go to borrow money for your house and all of that. I understand all of that, but the Minister has not answered the question and I would like for him to answer the question directly.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon Truman M Bodden: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, the reason why the honourable Member is saying that I have not answered his question is that he has got up and had a full debate on this.

Quite frankly . . . Mr. Speaker, I answer questions but if we are going to get into a full debate and Members are just getting up and debating, if I have to comment on everything he has said it will probably take me the rest of the morning. At some stage, we need to stick to questions and answers.

The airport cannot stand on its own. The airport needs an infrastructure by which to operate. If there was just an airport no government and nothing else, the airport could not operate. So, the money that comes back to the government is used for things like roads. Without a good road you can't get to the airport, without lights on the streets there would be more crime. What is paid is paid same as everything else. It deals with an infrastructure to support an airport.

I do not know what else of the statement you wish me to comment on other than to say that my duty is to see that within reason the Authority operates as it does in a proper way and it complies with the Law. We try to do that as best we can and take a practical approach rather than a theoretical approach to it.

Government takes to assist the Authority in every way it can and, as I said earlier, there is $4 million there. I can tell you Governments in the past enforced that Law and took that money. We have not. I would like that to be pointed out very clearly. The $4 million sitting there if we really wanted we could have added it and we would have had $11 million surplus this year instead of $7.2 million.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I do not know whether this question has been answered but I will ask it.

Can the Minister say what is the status of the construction of the Little Cayman airport as far as the timetable is concerned?

The Speaker: The Hon Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, you did touch on that but would you elaborate?

Hon Truman M Boddan: Mr. Speaker, at present there are two sites that are being looked at and some costings have been done. That is why I had to say when the First Elected Member for George Town asked that there were estimates. One site is sort of where the present airport is but a bit further inland and the other site is sort of opposite that over on the other side about a quarter the way from the other side on land that Government presently owns.

For the old site we will have to buy land and that is being looked at. I would hope on the timing which is what the honourable Member is asking that we could go to Planning within another few months and I would like, if possible, to get a decision made this year and to come to you in Finance Committee before the end of the year for the guarantee if we need it to build it.

The Speaker: That concludes Question Time for this morning. Moving on to item 4 on today's Order Paper: Government Business, Bills. The House will now go into Committee to consider a Bill entitled, The Bills of Sale (Amendment) Bill, 1998 and other bills.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 11.10 AM

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct all printing errors and such the like in these bills?

Would the Clerk state each Bill and read its clauses?

THE BILLS OF SALE (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Bills of Sale (Amendment) Bill, 1998.

Clause 1: Short title.

Clause 2: Amendment of section 3.

Clause 3: Amendment of section 4.

Clause 4: Insertion of new section.

Clause 5: Insertion of Schedule.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 5 do stand part of the Bill. No debate? I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 THROUGH 5 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to Amend the Bills of Sale Law (1997 Revision).

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The Title do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

THE TRAVEL TAX (AMENDMENT) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Travel Tax (Amendment) Bill, 1998.

Clause 1: Short title.

Clause 2: Amendment of section 2, Interpretation of Traveller.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. Is there no debate? I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 & 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: A bill for a law to amend the Travel Tax Law to reduce the categories of persons who are entitled to exemptions under the Travel Tax Law, 1995, Revision and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

THE EURO CONVERSION BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Euro Conversion Bill, 1998.

Clause 1: Short title

Clause 2: Interpretation.

Hon. Joel Walton: We have an amendment to Clause 2, I do not know when you would like to take it, sir.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 1 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 1 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSE 1 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 2: Interpretation.

The Chairman: There is an amendment, the Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: Yes, sir. Thank you. There are actually three sets of amendments to that section and I could take them in order.

The first one relates amending the definition of "Treaty" by deleting "of" which comes after "union" and substituting "signed at Maastricht on". And, then deleting, "establishing the European Community." So the new clause would read, sir, "Treaty means the treaty on European Union signed at Maastricht on the 7th February 1992."

The Chairman: I shall put the question on the amendment. The first amendment to Clause 2 as read out by the Honourable Acting Third Official Member. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: FIRST AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: The Second amendment. The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: That the second amendment deals with definition of the introduction of the Euro and the proposal is that that section be amended by deleting the words, "on European Union of 7th February 1992. So the new section now reads, "Introduction of the Euro includes the implementation from time to time of economic and monetary union in member states of the European Union pursuant to the treaty."

The Chairman: The question is that the second amendment to clause two as read out by the Honourable Acting Third Official be accepted. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: SECOND AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: Amendment number three to Clause 2.

Hon. Joel Walton: The final amendment to this clause is to amend the definition of Euro by inserting the word, "common" after the words, "means the". So the new clause would read, "Euro means the common currency of participating Member states of the European Union but adopt a single currency in accordance with the treaty."

That is it, sir.

The Chairman: The question is that the third amendment to Clause 2 as read out by the Honourable Acting Third Official Member do pass. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THIRD AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 2 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 2 as thrice amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause two do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSE 2 AS THRICE AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 3. Substituted Currency.

Hon. Joel Walton: We do have some amendments, sir, to this section as well. There are actually two sets of amendments.

The Chairman: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member, you have an amendment.

Hon. Joel Walton: The first amendment relates to Clause 3, subclause (1) and the amendment will insert “,” after the word, “of”. That is, “subject of any,” after the word, “under”, that is “payment under”. That is the only amendment to that section.

The second change to that section is to subclause (2) and the amendment will insert the word, “of” after “subject” and the word, “under” after “payment”. I could read that new sub-clause if you would like me to.

The Chairman: Please do.

Hon. Joel Walton: Okay, the new sub-clause 2 will read, “If a subject of or medium of payment under a contract, security or instrument is in the ECU, the Euro will be either,” and it goes on. That is the amendment, sir.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 3 be accepted. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 3 is amended.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 3 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 3 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 4. Continuity of contract.

The Chairman: Honourable Acting Third Official Member, an amendment.

Hon. Joel Walton: The amendment is to Clause 4, Section (d). The amendment is to insert “of” after the word “subject” and by inserting “,” after the words “payment under”. So the new section will read, “The calculation or determination of the subject of, or medium of payment under, the contract, security or instrument in accordance with Section 3.” That is the amendment, sir.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 4 be amended as read out by the Honourable Acting Third Official Member. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 4 is amended.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 4 PASSED

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 4 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 4 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 5. Application.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 5 do stand part of the Bill. No debate? I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 5 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 6. References to ECU.

The Chairman: Honourable Acting Third Official Member, you have an amendment?

Hon. Joel Walton: Yes, sir, thank you. The proposal is that Clause 6 be amended in sub-clause (1) by inserting “,” after “security” as in the third line of that clause; and, by inserting the words, “or any legislative provision, administrative action, judicial decision, unilateral legal act or payment instruction” after the word, “instrument.”

I could read the new clause.

The Chairman: Please do.

Hon. Joel Walton: “On the introduction of the euro as the monetary unit of participating member states of the European Union, a reference to the ECU in a contract, security, or instrument or any legislative provision, administrative action, judicial decision, unilateral legal act or payment instruction that also refers to the definition of the ECU in the section 2 shall be replaced with a reference to the euro at a rate of one euro to one ECU.”

That is it, sir.

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 6 be accepted. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 6 AMENDED.

The Chairman: I put the question that Clause 6 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 6 AS AMENDED PASSED.

Hon. Joel Walton: Mr. Chairman, I am sorry. I actually had an amendment as well to sub-clause (2) of section 6.

The Chairman: Please go ahead.

Hon. Joel Walton: The proposal is that sub-clause (2) be amended by deleting the word, "Community" after "European" and replacing it with "Council." That is the only change to that sub-clause, sir.

The Chairman: We will have to redo what we have just done as this amendment goes to Clause 6. The question is that Clause 6 be amended by the two amendments as read out by the Acting Third Official Member. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO CLAUSE 6 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 6 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No....

Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I fully support this. I just wondered if the Honourable Acting Third Official Member could give assurance that the Bill would be retrospective to January 1st when the Euro effectively came in to operation. It is my understanding that many contracts have been already put in place because of the delay in getting this legislation. I just wondered whether this would have retrospective effect.

The Chairman: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: The legislation had been drafted, as it was presented, in 1998. It is an excellent question. I have consulted with my colleague next to me and the advice is that unless we make specific provision for that in the legislation of the Bill it will not be retrospective. But the Honourable Attorney General can comment on that further if he chooses to.

The Chairman: Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Chairman. I confirm that unless there is specific provision in the Bill, it would take effect in accordance with its terms on publication in the Gazette, which is the sort of fallback provision that operates as to the commencement of any law if no specific provision is made in that law for when it comes into effect. In order for it to have retrospective effect, in my opinion, it would be necessary to incorporate a clause to do that and it would not be prudent, again, in my opinion, to do that as it were off the cuff. It would be preferable to seek a draft of that clause and to put it forward at this committee stage.

I might also mention that I had a question in my mind in any event about Paragraph 6(2) of the law, which may or may not be a material question. That related to the amendment to Paragraph 6(1), Clause 6(1) of the Bill, the amendment that we just approved. It may or may not be the case but we have expanded the range of instruments to which Clause 6(1) applies, but we have not made a corresponding expansion to Clause 6(2). It might be just prudent to seek perhaps in what I imagine would be the forthcoming short adjournment of the Committee, Mr. Chairman, some view on that question as well as obtaining a draft that might serve the purpose, if it were the wish of the House to seek to make this legislation retrospective.

This legislation essentially relates to contracts, I think that is the primary function of it. Members will be aware that there is, I think, a two-year period within which countries can move from their individual currency as it were to the Euro. In other words, there is a two-year period during which the original currencies are still valid and so it is a matter for you really as to whether it is important to you, to make this effective from the beginning of the year. It won't obviously become law until it has gone through this process anyway and I wonder if I may ask out loud as it were what the effect of making it retrospective would be in the sense that it may not but I stand to be corrected confer any real advantage.

I think the important thing is that as we are now doing that it get on the books at the earliest opportunity, we are in effect roughly one-eighths of the way into that two-year period. So we are still, I think, ahead in that sense. I will just offer these comments for the guidance of the Committee.

The Chairman: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I want to thank the Second Official Member for clearing that point. My....

Hon. David Ballantyne: I am sorry, Mr. Chairman, I have been advised by a manuscript note which may assist the honourable member. I think the government would support having this legislation effective from the 1st January, which I believe has already been said was the intention. If that is the case, and if that meets the consensus of the committee, I would seek an opportunity for an appropriate clause to be forwarded for your consideration.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: While we are at this, I just wanted to make reference that we would seek for a similar consideration for the Bill for a law to amend the Companies [(Amendment) (Euro)] Law, 1998. That would need a similar amendment, Mr. Chairman.

Hon. Joel Walton: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Honourable Acting Third Official Member.

Hon. Joel Walton: I propose that we defer further consideration of this particular bill until we can get the appropriate clause drawn up. Is that possible at this point? And we will do the same thing, sir, for the Companies (Amendment) (Euro) Bill, which comes later on in the committee.

The Chairman: How long would you anticipate that it will take because we could probably take a suspension.

Hon. Joel Walton: Yes.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I think that to legislate at haste and to repent leisure . . . it would be appropriate to give the Legislative Council a suitable opportunity to address this. I would think it wouldn't take very long, but it would be better to allow a proper opportunity. If progress might be made on other matters, consideration of this matter could be resumed in the afternoon, if that were agreeable. That is without prejudice to the need for a break.

Thank you.

The Chairman: Is it the wish of the House that we take a suspension or continue on?

Mr. Joel Walton: Mr. Chairman, if I might try to help, sir. We have three bills left. Well, three including this particular one and of the other two, one relates to the Euro as well. Perhaps, you might do the Pension Bill where there are only three short amendments.

Okay? We could take the break then if you don't want to go on. There is only three bills left of which two are affected by this proposal. Thank you, sir.

The Chairman: We shall suspend proceedings until a time to be announced.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:34 AM

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12:49 PM

The Chairman: The Honourable Acting Third Official Member, you have an amendment to a new clause?

Hon. Joel Walton: The Honourable Second Official Member has dealt with both issues, that is the retrospective issue and the amendment to sub-clause (b) and does have an amendment to read, sir.

The Chairman: Honourable Second Official Member, do you have a written copy of the amendment or you will give it orally?

Hon. David Ballantyne: I do, Mr. Chairman, but perhaps I might be permitted to explain the position regarding retrospective effect for the benefit of the members of the Committee.

The Chairman: Certainly, please go ahead.

Hon. David Ballantyne: This question, which was properly raised, was to ascertain whether it would confer any benefit on those liable to be affected by the legislation. In discussion with the member who raised the question, I think it was a matter of agreement that companies which were the primary concern behind the question of retrospective application if they have acted to date they would have done so by means of special resolution and would have already altered their Memorandum and Articles as required in the way that the Bill itself would do by law

Those who haven't made such an alteration will be able on the passage of the law to benefit from its provisions and would not have to go through that procedure. So that it doesn't appear to be any need to effectively back date the law. If that can be avoided it is preferable, because retrospective legislation is generally not desirable if it can be avoided.

So the recommendation is that we try to pass the law as promptly as we are trying to do at present and it would take effect from the date at which it is published in the Gazette, which would follow shortly on from present proceedings.

On the other matter, if I may just explain slightly, the reason for my question about sub-clause 6(2) was that with the amendment to sub-clause 6(1) there seem to be some inconsistency between the two clauses. I have discussed that in the interval. It appears that to be consistent that we ought to adopt the same amendment to sub-clause 2 as was adopted in relation to sub-clause (1) and that represents the amendment to which the Honourable Third Acting Official Member already drew the House's attention. It effectively involves adding the words, "or any legislation provision, administrative action, judicial decision, unilateral legal act or payment instruction" after the word, "instrument" in the first line of the sub-clause (2), and adding ",", after "security".

So it is exactly the same amendment as we already have to sub-clause (1) would be applied to sub-clause (2) in order to cover the same range of legal instruments.

Therefore, that's an amendment, which I would recommend to the Committee.

There is a further small amendment that I would recommend in the interest of clarity in this section of the law. It is not the easiest piece of law to read and what it actually means is that (if I can explain as briefly as I can) where in a document, this is [sub-clause] 6(1) of the Bill — where there is a reference to a definition of ECU in a document, that reference is to be replaced with a reference to the euro. That is clear enough.

But the effect of the second sub-clause 6(2) is that where there is no reference to a definition of ECU, there is presumed to be a reference to the definition of ECU contained in the law. And then [sub-clause] 6(1) would apply so that reference to ECU as contained in the law would be replaced by a reference to euro.

Well, I hope I have not confused the issue further with that explanation but it seems to me that it would make it rather clearer on the face of the law if an amendment were made to [sub-clause] 6(1) on the third line. The amendment would be after the word, "refers" and I would suggest the addition of the following words, "refers (as is contained on the page that you are looking at) or is presumed under this Law to be refer". I would suggest the addition of those words, "or is presumed under this Law to refer". That would come in after the word, "refers". The word, "also" before the word, "refers" would be deleted.

I think it helpful if I just read out the clause as propose to be amended. [Sub-clause] 6(1) would then read, "On the introduction of the euro as the monetary unit of participating Member states of the European Union, a reference to the ECU in a contract, security, or instrument, or any legislative provision, administrative action, judicial decision, unilateral legal act or payment instruction that refers or is presumed under this Law to refer to the definition of the euro in section 2 shall be replaced with a reference to the euro at a rate of one euro to one ECU." That then makes it clear that where there is definition of ECU in the document, it is replaced by a reference to euro.

Where there is no definition, it is presumed to have such a definition and then would also be replaced.

I trust that I am still making sense, Mr. Chairman, but if not I am happy to go over that. I can provide you with my manuscript version of this if that would assist matters but I think it is very straightforward in principle. We are amending sub-clause (2) in the same way as we amended sub-clause (1) and we are adding these additional words.

My final suggestion to get this law into a comprehensive state is to alter the numbering so that the present sub-clause (2) becomes sub-clause (1), and the present sub-clause (1) becomes (2). Because really what you are saying is that where there is no definition of ECU in the law, it is to be treated as if there were a definition in it and then all laws that have that definition are to be treated as a reference to euro.

If all of that is too confusing then it may be better to have a wholesale replacement of clause 6 but I think it is two matters: it's being consistent—sub-clause (1) with sub-clause (2); and secondly, the reference to the definition of ECU is also to include a presumed reference to the definition.

I may say that in saying all of this, there is no such thing in my view as lawyer's law. This really has to be understood and it is in the interest of clarity that I am proposing these amendments but if anything is unclear then I would be happy to try to deal with it.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Chairman, I just wondered whether the Honourable Second Official Member might just clarify whether he was suggesting that Clause 6(2) should now be (1); and (1) will be (2), if that is what he was suggesting.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Yes, that is exactly what I was suggesting. It then would follow that (2) would follow (1) logically so that we are going to be treating any document which has reference as a reference to the euro. And, any document that doesn't have a reference to the definition of ECU would be treated as if it has a reference and then that would translate into a reference to the euro. This is all designed to substitute euro for ECU, and you are quite right, Mr. Chairman, in that assumption. It is just a case of trying to put these sub-clauses in their correct order.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 6 be re-committed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 6 RECOMMITTED.

The Chairman: There are several amendments to new Clause 6 and they are as follows:

- In Clause 6(1), we will delete the word, "also" as it comes before "refers". We will add the words, "or is presumed under this Law to refer" that comes immediately after "refers".
- The present Section 6(2), ",", after "security" adding the words "or any legislative provision, administrative action, judicial decision, unilateral legal act or payment instruction" after "instrument".
- And by renumbering sub-clause (1) to (2), and (2) to (1).

Is there any debate? If there is no debate, I will put the question that the amendment to Clause 6...

Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 6 has been amended.

AGREED: AMENDMENTS TO CLAUSE 6 PASSED.

The Chairman: The question is now, that Clause 6 as amended do stand part of the Bill. No debate, I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 6 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSE 6 PASSED.

The Chairman: Are you proposing Honourable Third Official Member to move Clause 7 or that is not going to be done? That was on the retroactive....

Hon. Joel Walton: No, sir.

The Clerk: A bill for a law to provide for the necessary amendments to the terms of existing contracts, securities and instruments consequent on the introduction of a single currency by member countries of the European Union.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. The Title do stand part of the Bill.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 3 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 1 through 3 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 THROUGH 3 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 4: Definitions.

The Chairman: Clause 4, Honourable Acting Third Official Member, you have an amendment?

Hon. Joel Walton: Yes, sir, I have two short amendments to that Clause 4. The first one being purely a change to reflect the fact that the 1995 Revision of the Pension Bill has been replaced with the 1999 Revision of the Pension Bill. Therefore, the reference to the "1995 Pension Law, Revised" on page 19 of the green bill, the fifth paragraph down where it begins by saying, "prior law and prior plan means the Pension Law (1999) Revision" to reflect that change from the 1995 Revision to the 1999 Revision. That is on page 19 of the green bill, paragraph 5, first line. It replaces 1995 with 1999, that is the only change to that.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Chairman.

The Chairman: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I am not sure whether the Honourable Acting Third Official Member made any reference to the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons where a similar situation occurs. It refers to the Pension Law, 1995, Revision — I don't know if....

Hon. Joel Walton: No, sir, I didn't and I am appreciative to the Honourable Member for bringing that to our attention. It is not part of the law but it is important for us to have it corrected.

That is on page 3, the second line of that first paragraph. It refers to the 1995 Revision again. For the sake of clarity it should reflect 1999 Revision. Thank you for that, sir.

I am just taking a quick glance to make sure it appears nowhere else. It is actually also on page 8, the same thing happens where the reference is to Clause 6 or 7, appeals the Pension Law. Again, it should be 1999 Revision as opposed to 1995 Revision.

The Chairman: If there are consequential amendments then the Second Official Member will deal with those, they are outside of the Bill.

Hon. Joel Walton: Okay, thank you, sir. Sorry.

The second change to Clause 4 relates to the definition of "final average pensionable earnings" which can be found on page 17, the sixth paragraph on that page. Where it starts by saying, "final average pensionable earnings means the sum of" the proposed amendment is to add after paragraph (b) of that section, to add a paragraph (c) which will now read, "If a participant is employed as a Police Officer, his final months housing allowance".

The reason, sir, for this amendment (if I might just speak to it a bit) is that it ensures that Police Officers who are currently a part of the existing defined benefits plan of government would upon retirement from the service be eligible to have their housing allowance added into their basic salary and count towards their pensionable earnings.

It just ensures the principle that nobody who had previously enjoyed a privilege—which in this case, one person had already that because of the change in legislation—it would not cause that person to lose that privilege. Even though it is grandfathered in, we saw it necessary to actually include it as a specific item to ensure that nobody could be disadvantaged by not having that specific clause in.

So, on page 17, down where it starts (middle of the page), "final average pensionable earnings" we had a section (c) which now reads, "if a participant is employed as a Policy Officer, the final months housing allowance."

The Chairman: The question is that the amendment to Clause 4 as read out by the Honourable Acting Third Official Member. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 36 through 45 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 36 through 45 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSES 36 THROUGH 45 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 46: Applicability.
Clause 47: Defined contribution eligibility.
Clause 48: No transfers to defined benefit part.
Clause 49: Maintenance of accounts.
Clause 50: Transfer of assets into the fund from an approved plan.
Clause 51: Accrued benefit payable upon retirement.
Clause 52: Late retirement.
Clause 53: Disability retirement.
Clause 54: Disability benefit.
Clause 55: Retirement under special circumstances.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 46 through 55 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 45 – 55 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSES 45 THROUGH 55 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 56: Resignation from service prior to retirement.

Clause 57: Vesting.
Clause 58: Distribution of participant contribution account balance.
Clause 59: Forms of benefit and methods of payment.
Clause 60: Pensions payable to surviving spouse and children.
Clause 61: Inservice death benefit.
Clause 62: Pensions to beneficiary where a participant is killed on duty.
Clause 63: Death after resignation but prior to benefit commencement date.
Clause 64: Death after benefit commencement date.
Clause 65: Benefit paid to estate if no surviving designated beneficiaries.
Clause 66: Benefit paid to beneficiary if no surviving spouse or children.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 56 to 66 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate, I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clauses 56 through 66 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSES 56 THROUGH 66 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 67: Repeal of prior law.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 67 do stand part of the Bill.

Hon. Joel Walton: Mr. Chairman, just to ensure that the consequential amendment as a result of the change in Clause 4 would also follow through to Clause 67, where there is a reference to 1995 Revision, we need to amend it to 1999 Revision. Just to make sure. Thank you, sir.

The Chairman: I put the question that Clause 67 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Clause 67 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: CLAUSE 67 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 68: Payment of ex gratia allowances under prior law.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 68 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AGREED: CLAUSE 68 PASSED.

The Clerk: Schedule 1, Schedule 2.

The Chairman: The question is that Schedule 1 and Schedule 2 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it. Schedule 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill.

AGREED: SCHEDULE 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to reform the Law relating to Public Service Pensions to re-establish the Public Service Pensions Board as a statutory corporation; to manage and administer the Public Service Pension Fund; to retain existing pension rights for existing government employees; to provide a defined contribution pension plan for future government employees and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill.

That concludes proceeding in Committee on a Bill....

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman, I don't think you put the question on the Title.

The Chairman: I beg you pardon! Please repeat.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I don't think you put the question on the Title.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am wondering whether the House would agree to go to Private Member's Motion No. [10] first. We have some agreement to move in that direction.

The Speaker: If you would just move a motion, we will put it to the House.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Okay! I move that we take Private Member's Motion No. 10/99, Renaming of Harquail Bypass to "Esterley Tibbetts Highway" instead of the Amendment to the Immigration Law, Motion No. 5/99.

The Speaker: I will put the question that we move on to Private Member's Motion No. 10/1999. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: It is very close.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, please can we have a division, sir.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, could you call the division, sir.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, if I may, sir?

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Before we have a division, it might be helpful if the mover of the motion could perhaps ask for a little time to discuss this with the government bench because I am sure there must have been some good reason why he is asking that this item be moved up.

I have not been able to discuss [this] with the First Elected Member for West Bay but I feel sure he would not have asked for this if there was not a good reason. So I just wondered whether we might be able to discuss it with your permission.

The Speaker: Would it require a suspension or you think it could be done very quickly?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I think maybe with a five-minute suspension we would be able to resolve it.

The Speaker: If it is the wish of the House, we shall suspend then for ten minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 2:42 PMPROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:57 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, before we took the suspension, sir, I had requested that you call a division on the motion for the House to deal with the renaming of the Harquail Bypass to the "Esterley Tibbetts Highway."

The Speaker: If that is the wish of the House . . . Madam Clerk would you call a division?

The Deputy Clerk:

DIVISION NO. 2/99AYES: 8

ABSTENTIONS: 1

Hon. David Ballantyne

ABSENTEES: 3

Hon. John B. McLean
Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly
Mr. Linford Pierson

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if I could just question whether all members who voted on the division were inside when the vote was taken?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, really! Tell me something this afternoon, how much trouble is this motion to the government? I mean, what I moved earlier, Mr. Speaker, if I may, was simply because I thought that this was a non-controversial motion that we would be going along and that really we would be finished in five minutes. We had a ten minutes break just because of it.

And, my God, all they need to say is that they don't support it or they support it.

The Speaker: Parliamentary procedure is that a person voting in a division must have been in his seat when the vote was taken. Which members were not in their seat?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't know! From my point everybody was here, sir—except half the government!

The Speaker: If there are members here that were not in their seats when the vote was taken, they are not eligible to vote. But the division as given to me by the Clerk is: eight Ayes, five Noes, one Abstention, and it should be two absentees. So the Ayes have it.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/99 TO BE TAKEN.

The Speaker: We shall proceed then with Private Member's Motion No. 10/99. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/99RENAMING OF HARQUAIL BYPASS TO "ESTERLEY TIBBETTS HIGHWAY"

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 10/99 entitled, Renaming of Harquail Bypass to "Esterley Tibbetts Highway" standing in my name and which reads as follows:

"WHEREAS this Honourable House on previous occasions has recognised Caymanians for services in various fields;

"AND WHEREAS roads in recent times have been named after prominent Caymanians;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the road presently known as the Harquail Bypass and all continuing portions thereof be officially renamed as the Esterley Tibbetts Highway."

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?
The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am pleased to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 10/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I have to begin by expressing my consternation at the obstinacy of the government in agreeing to debate this motion at this time because one would have thought that this motion was a non-controversial motion. Certainly, there were those of us who were relying on the fact that this particular piece of business would have been expedited through the Legislative Assembly by virtue of the fact that we expected not to have encountered any such opposition. Elements on the government side—spearheaded by the Leader of government Business, it seems—leads me to realise that illusion and reality will forever be distinctly different.

Mr. Speaker, I understand that this year Public Works celebrates its 50th anniversary as what I would term a modern government department. I would think that it would be fitting on this auspicious occasion to choose someone who served with Public Works in the good old days when things were much more difficult than they are today and certainly when there was far less choice of modern equipment to construct our roads. This proposal is to name this particular piece of road after a Caymanian who headed up the Public Works in the days when road making was far more difficult than it is now as a tribute to the dedicated service of that gentleman.

I am particularly happy that Parliament can deliberate and decide on this move at a time when the person proposed is still around, in good health, and in an excellent state of mind to realise that there are those in the country who appreciated the sacrifices that he made in those days. Those of the younger generation, in spite of the complaints we have about traffic jams, can drive on roads many of whose foundations were laid by this gentleman's leadership.

Mr. Speaker, I vividly recall this gentleman rooming the streets of Bodden Town when I was a youngster. On occasion, he came to that district with his road crew. Not only was the gentleman an excellent road-making engineer but his diplomatic skills weren't too shabby either. I crave your indulgence to relate a short anecdote.

I remember a broiling hot sunny day in the summer when I was a youngster of about ten or 12 years of age. The Public Works were engaged in doing some re-alignment at the famous Guard House Hill, the curb on which the house where my family lived is situated. Mr. Esterley and his crew were in the vicinity and he sent a couple of his workmen into our yard to inform my mother that it was necessary to move a hedge and a fence that she had painstakingly constructed and watered religiously every morning.

Well, my mother took those plants and her labour seriously and her response was that under no circumstances were any alignments going to be made to destroy her wonderful plants and all the backbreaking labour that she had put into it. She told one of the gentlemen that if he didn't move fast enough, he could be warned that she had sufficient resources at hand to move him at the speed with which she would wish him to move.

The gentleman took it seriously (as he well should) and informed Mr. Tibbetts. And, Mr. Speaker, I can vividly recall him, because he was the first person that I can remember that used to have aviator glasses and he had the glass case strapped through his belt. He came and he called my mother by her popular name and she came outside. He told her that he was the author of the request. My mother said it really didn't matter who was the author of the request; she was the controller of the property and the answer was still in the negative.

Well, at that point I realised that this little dialogue was getting interesting because my mother never really had too much give. She never really wilted in these kinds of occasions. Anyway, it seems that Mr. Tibbetts was very familiar with my mother as a young girl growing up in Cuba and he began to engage her in a conversation about those times.

I won't relate the whole story but by the time he was finished my mother asked him if he was sure that that was all he needed to take! And he was welcomed to take more if he so wished! So, this gentleman not only had proficient skills in engineering but he was also somewhat of a diplomat. And his interpersonal skills were not too shabby.

When they heard this motion announced in the media, many Caymanians expressed to me their appreciation of the efforts made by the mover and me to have this named after this gentleman. Today I am happy to move this motion recognising the work, the sacrifice, the ingenuity, and the toil of a well-respected and well-deserving Caymanian.

With that, I need not say anymore in this the introductory stage of this motion. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other honourable member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am pleased to see this motion before the House, as I have always sought to find ways to recognise the outstanding work and contribution of Caymanians from whatever walk of life they come.

Mr. Tibbetts, Mr. Esterley—"Pete," as they used to call him—is one such Caymanian we can be proud of. He worked at a time (and this is a cliché but it is the truth) when the country had nothing. He joined the Public Works in 1949, appointed to that department as Superintendent of Works by Sir Hugh Foot, the Governor of Jamaica and Grand Cayman.

When he commenced his duties in those days, he had about twelve members of staff to build and maintain roads, all government buildings, lighthouses, telephones, the runway with the flare-path, fogging of the whole island for mosquitoes, maintenance of all government property, and also the maintenance of vehicles and heavy equipment. These tasks also included supervision of Cayman Brac.

In those days, the Public Works Department had three wheelbarrows, a few picks, shovels and hand-beaters made from hard wood. Later on, a second-hand grader drawn by mules was sent from Jamaica, which was hitched to a Studebaker Truck in order for the roads to be graded. Several years later, a roller was sent from England via Jamaica, which was of great value to the country. The first road this roller was used on was the road to the entrance of the airport, which we still drive on today. As we all remember, the roads were made from marl. That had to be dug by hand using picks and shovels from various parts of the islands.

Those of us in the House . . . and I shouldn't say us, I should say, those in the House who were teenagers at that time knew that times were hard for everyone, and the government had very little money. Wages were small but the work had to be done and it continued steadily through the efforts of stalwart civil servants like Esterley Clarence Tibbetts (or Pete, as they called him in those days).

The country cannot repay that kind of contribution, we have to recognise the efforts in the pioneering days of these islands—and that is what I called those times, the pioneering days. We should not hesitate to name any major highway after Mr. Esterley.

I believe he saw some very hard and trying days and nights. But he knew the various jobs had to be completed and this he did until his retirement in 1976. But he was asked to continue working for the government in the Public Works Department, which he agreed to do for several years after.

Mr. Esterley not only did a great job in government [but] through the Presbyterian Church now the United Church, he also did a great work. He is one of those old Caymanians that I appreciate because no person ever got turned away from his door either at home or his office. I recall that as a young man, probably around twelve years old, going to look for a job to be able to work on Fridays when school was let out half day. I remember looking for Mr. Esterley, and I got a job and was able to work on the Friday afternoons, even though there was not a lot of time left before they closed down for the day and also to be able to work on Saturdays because they worked on Saturdays in those days. I know there were other families that benefited from such work that was given by Mr. Tibbetts.

You can believe that this did help in a time when things were rough. And when you stop and think about where we have come from to where we are today, when you think that we had just a few wheelbarrows and men would cut the roads with machetes . . . to make roads they would burn the big rocks by gathering wood and burn them even in the night so that in the day they would work and make the major highways.

I remember the road being build from Town Hall Road going up to the town hall just south of the Chapel Church, Church of God, that is — it was all high cliff. Stalwarts built those roads with bare hands. Mr. Speaker, we can give thanks not that I know him or knew of him, but to people like Mr. John Smith of West Bay. That was a long time before I was born but these kinds of people were willing and worked for nothing.

Clarence or Esterley Clarence Tibbetts is a good man, one that we can recognise. We have come a long way, Mr. Speaker, when we stop and think what the Department of Vehicles and Equipment is today considering what they had then. Yes, we should all be proud of our country and say, 'Thanks be to Almighty God for bringing us thus far,' but in so doing let us not forget those people—Caymanians . . . and not only Caymanians but other persons, a few people who came abroad and worked with us.

Mike Simmonds, we don't often hear his name called but he worked on one of the main highways in this country—the airport. He was not a Caymanian but came here, put down his roots and made a grand contribution to our development. Can we forget to say thanks and name just a road after Mr. Tibbetts? For what reason?

I like to talk long on these kinds of occasion because it has a lot of history and it is something that I like, history that is. But I will close by saying publicly that I certainly appreciate in the highest regard the work done by Mr. Esterley Tibbetts and those of his contemporaries. I think that all of us in this House should vote to name that new piece of highway that is being built and any extension thereafter, the Esterley Tibbetts Highway.

I challenge government to behave and for once give a little without amending a resolution to mess it up as they did with the Public Works and the other motion that I had for the meritorious awards that we moved in this House. Government must stop this king of fancy footwork . . . to get mileage for what—for the election? For what? We pass this way but once, let us recognise those persons that built this country for nothing.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak? The floor is opened to debate.

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: I rise to give this motion my support because if anybody should be honoured by having a road or a building or something named after him, it is Esterley Tibbetts. I knew him from the time he came from Cuba probably [19]60's. I remembered when he also joined the Public Works. Nobody else would take that job. Those days they didn't have anything to work it as my colleague here said. But he took it and he worked. You know he worked with the people, with his gang himself.

I don't see any reason why there should be any hesitation in naming this highway after. That is all I have to say and I thank you and I hope it will be finished.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I too had no intention of speaking but after the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay made those remarks, I would just like to say for the record that I think it is important for a country to at least be able to afford itself the privilege of naming public buildings and public roads after citizens that have made contributions. Of course, if there was such a deficiency in our country that did not allow this, I think it would be a bad reflection on us. I thank God, therefore, that we do have the people that can supply the names for the buildings or the roads that the people's resources have gone to build.

The Harquail Bypass as it is now known is not the property of any government. It is the property of the people of the Cayman Islands. I therefore feel it is fitting for us to uphold our dignity and believe in ourselves by naming this road after Mr. Esterley Tibbetts.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The Private Member's Motion before the House, Renaming of the Harquail Bypass to "Esterley Tibbetts Highway".... I don't believe there is anyone in any part of the government that does not appreciate the work that has been done by Mr. Tibbetts. I remember as a very young boy seeing Mr. John Smith (whom the First Elected Member from West Bay talked about), and I recall Mr. Lambert Ebanks working with him at times as well. That was probably when I was about eight years old.

Actually, where I went to high school just across the way from here is where the Public Works Department was at that time. I remember seeing Mr. Stanley Panton also in the little office across from the CIBC Building which is presently being used by some other organisation. I, as well as many other members of this Honourable House, can also appreciate the contributions made by Mr. Tibbetts. We were happy to see him at the opening of the Hurley's Supermarket not many weeks ago in good health and moving around and in cheerful spirit.

The only difficulty the government has, Mr. Speaker, is that several months ago (I think it was late last year when we were dealing with this particular subject), the Executive Council of the Cayman Islands said to the then Governor Mr. John Owen that it would wish to [rename] the Harquail Bypass, the John Owen Parkway.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Now, our thinking was at the time that many places within the Cayman Islands have the name of a previous administrator or commissioner or governor. I think we only have to walk down Cardinal Avenue and understand that it was Wolsey Cardinal who was Administrator or Commissioner in that day. We also recognise that the airport in the Brac was named after Gerrard Smith. So that was the line of our thinking at the time.

Even nearer to this area, in the area near to the Education Building there is the Thompson Russell Way as well. So I think that basically gives us some rationale for why we came to our own conclusion in probably October or November last year when the government came to that decision. We were bound, as it were, or committed by the then Governor, Mr. Owen, not to make any publication of this until after he had departed the country. Therefore, we were not able to make—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What time was this done?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Well, I was not prepared to speak, Mr. Speaker, so I don't have the exact time. But I do know it was several months ago. It might have been three to five months ago. But this did take place that far back.

What we were thinking as we thought about the Esterley Tibbetts Highway (and we haven't put this to Executive Council) is that we have just broken ground for the Crewe Road Bypass, which in essence is a road that leads all the way to the Frank Sound. It has not been Gazetted as yet but the corridor will take it up that far. We would name that road the Esterley Tibbetts Highway.

Mr. Speaker, that was our thinking of it so our view on this is that, yes, Mr. Tibbetts certainly deserves every recognition that anyone can give to him.

AMENDMENT WITHOUT NOTICE

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe that the Government would appreciate it if we could amend the Private

Member's Motion to change the word, "Harquail" to the "Crew Road Bypass."

Even if we look at it in terms of the Private Member's Motion where it reads, "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the road presently known as the Harquail Bypass and all continuing portions thereof be officially renamed as the Esterley Tibbetts Highway . . ." What the Government would appreciate is that we just agree to remove the words, "Harquail Bypass" and substitute the words, "Crewe Road Bypass" which in essence leads straight up to Frank Sound Road. I think that would give recognition to both parties and I think both parties are worthy of recognition.

So, it is a matter of how members of the House will accept the two proposals. I don't believe there is any need for any controversy over it, to be quite honest. What I moved is a genuine move to recognise Mr. Tibbetts. What someone else has done is also a genuine need to move to recognise him so I think in reality there are two proposals.

If you look at it the longer road would be the one that we are talking about which takes it basically from Walkers Road straight up to Frank Sound, through the heart of George Town and through Savannah and all the way up through Breakers and what have you.

The other point of view is that Harquail begins at North Sound Road and according to all the corridors that are presently being talked about it would end in Botabano Road in West Bay.

Those are the two proposals, I think both men are worthy or recognition.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?
Are you moving that as an official amendment?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I referred to it as an amendment and I am moving that amendment.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I think we should put the amendment to rest.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: That was what I was going to ask whether you are going to debate the amendment now then.

The Speaker: That's what I would propose, yes.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: All right. As for me, I have not changed my mind. Harquail....

The Speaker: The amendment as moved by the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works is now open to debate.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I heard what the Minister of Tourism said. Perhaps they should have communicated to us three to five months ago what their intention was with this road. While they could not have made it public, they could have intimated it to members of the House quietly. However, that would not have changed my mind about the proposal.

I am not knocking naming anything after any Governor or any official who comes here and puts in time. As I said, whether they and I get along or we don't get along, we recognise the contribution they make.

Mr. Speaker, the truth is that Mr. Tibbetts is a very old man at this time and the Harquail Bypass is already built with an extension on-going. My good friend, the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town, just intimated to me that Mr. Tibbetts is an old man and that we should go ahead, and I hope she is going to vote that way too.

[Laughter]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Really, I have no qualms [about] doing anything for the Governor that just left within reason. But we had an announcement that they just gave him Caymanian Status. That is a very high honour, Mr. Speaker, you can't get higher than that when a government of the day proposes citizenship on someone who had just been here for five years when there are hundreds of people who have been here for 25 to 30 years and have got nothing—still up in arms or running to their representatives trying to get some sort of immigration security of tenure.

So, they cannot say they didn't do something for the Governor. They did a lot for him and he did a lot for them and I think that they should stop and think before they try to sabotage the resolution from this side of the House. It is given with all good intentions and as we said, we didn't want any upheaval in the House about it.

If the government is on all fours with us with that then they should withdraw that amendment as one being facetious. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Esterley Tibbetts, I think as all members here have said, is very deserving of having a major road named after him. He has put in a lot of time in the Public Works. When I was going to school, the Public Works adjoined the school and I knew him well — I know him well, I should say, and his family.

The position that the government is in and the amendment that we put forward will allow Executive Council to keep what it has already done while naming a road that is also a major road after Mr. Tibbetts. That way, he will still have the honour of having the road named after him, which he very much deserves.

As the Minister said, this decision was taken quite a while back. One of the reasons why we had hoped that this would have been coming next week because the announcement is in train now to go out. This was one of the reasons why at this stage we would have preferred to have the time so that we could have brought the amendment at a time when the announcement on that road was going out. However, that I guess is history now.

I would hope that members of this House would take a logical approach to this. There is no question of sabotage as the First Elected Member for West Bay is talking about.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It is an amendment to the motion that achieves the same thing and it is one that would at least in many respects be within areas of roads that Mr. Tibbetts would have worked on during his tenure with the Public Works Department. The reason for this has been clearly set by the Minister, and we would hope that which satisfies both the naming of the two roads would be accepted by the Legislative Assembly and both roads could then be named.

It is in an effort to do exactly what the First Elected Member for West Bay, the mover of the motion, put forward but to a different road, a much longer major road that is now approved and there has been the ground breaking for it.

I ask members of the House to look at it in that light and to keep the peace as has been put forward by members of the opposition, and to therefore accept that the road that would be named after Mr. Esterley, is the one called the Crewe Road Bypass.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am going to begin by saying that I have no peace to keep. As I listened to the two government ministers—especially the Leader of Government Business, the Minister for Education—I wonder how long he thinks he can Samfie this Parliament by that old line that he took.

Mr. Speaker, if the government—and particularly the Minister last speaking—was so interested in naming a road after Mr. Esterley Tibbetts then, pray, explain to me why there is the Thompson Russell Way, the John McLean Drive and now, there was a proposed John Owen Parkway and still no Esterley Tibbetts Drive until this motion came to the House. It's an afterthought on the part of the government.

Mr. Speaker, give me a break! Credit me with a little intelligence, sir. When this motion came that Minister who last spoke had ample opportunity . . . he had every opportunity in the world to have come to me and the seconder of the motion and say, 'Gentlemen, we have a problem. Let us see how you and the government can sagely (although, I must admit, we are not losing any face)....'

Tell me, why is it that the government allowed itself to be placed in this obviously embarrassing position now. Why are they asking, as always, for us to flip flop? Mr. Speaker, that minister has been here all these years accusing me of being inconsistent. He is asking me for a favour of this magnitude now? He must be reading Alice in Wonderland!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Keep the town laughing at him!

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would have to say, sir, that I am not convinced of the government's purity of intention. I have always been cosmopolitan in my views. I am one Caymanian who is always encouraging and appreciative of the input, and the services, the work and the sacrifice put in by people from outside of the Cayman Islands and I welcome that. I have always been accommodating because I think it is through these people and their efforts that our country is becoming strong. I am all for having the deserving ones of them integrated into our society.

So let me be explicitly clear—I am not against naming any road or any building or anything of that nature after outside persons who have come here and worked and have lived among us. But this is a case of principle. And the Minister who last spoke knows that he doesn't have a point. That he is why he so quickly departed when he finished speaking.

Mr. Speaker, I have not been convinced. It is not a good enough reason. I say again, were this the case, why did that minister who is so quick when the occasion suits him to put me and other people . . . why didn't he come and say something? There is one thing I learned from this exercise: Mr. Tibbetts has far greater diplomatic skills than the Leader of Government Business! Far greater!

And that is a flimsy excuse and I will not accommodate such waffling. I have no war with the Minister for Tourism. It is unfortunate that he got caught in a position where he has to try to rationalise the mistake of the leader. It is a pity that our particular political circumstance does not allow deserving people to extricate themselves from these kinds of situations.

Mr. Speaker, tell me, if this is as it seems to be, is it not easier for the Government to rename that portion of road that they propose after the former Governor, Mr. John Owen and let this motion remain as it stands? All I have to say is that I am usually not an unreasonable person, but I have taken a stand on principle. I have gone to the extent of calling Mr. Tibbetts' family explaining to them (before we drafted the motion and moved it, the seconder and I) [asking if there] would be any objection to this proposal because it is necessary to do these kinds of things. We were assured that there would not be any objection.

Now, the Minister is saying that the government is going to lose face. Well, we are going to lose face too because we took it upon ourselves in the utmost discretion to contact Mr. Tibbetts' family many months ago. Remember too, sir, that this motion was tabled a long time ago, this was part of the business that had to be postponed and brought to this time so the government had all of that time. And they could have (as they have on occasion) come to us in the utmost discretion and said, 'Gentlemen, we have a little problem, how can we solve it so that as the Japanese say, we don't lose face.'

I am not prepared to give way because it casts us in a bad light also. We stand to lose face. I am somewhat angered that this well-meaning motion should have to come to this House in such a way as to further widen the gap between us. I would have thought that all of us could have been unanimous in our move.

Note, that the Minister for Education and the Leader of Government Business although he objected and got voted down in bringing the motion forward, still did not avail himself of the opportunity to say why he didn't want the motion debated at this time. Mr. Speaker, I have to say again, obviously that gentleman is lacking in diplomatic skills, sir, because [this] was the last opportunity for him to have come to us and said, 'Here is what the problem is gentlemen. Let us see how we can get over this hurdle so that no one looks really bad.'

No, it shall have to go to the vote! Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak to the amendment.

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: When the request was made not to bring this particular motion, that is, Motion 10/99 forward, I was not apprised of the full reasons. After having listened to the mover and the seconder of the motion, I understood the urgency in this.

In my usual manner, I tried to bring about some kind of a compromise in having this matter resolved not knowing that the government had other intentions and that they wanted to be able to announce this before this motion was debated. This position is somewhat regrettable as far as I am concerned because that could have been mentioned to me when I tried to assist in resolving this matter.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment to this motion is somewhat late. It is unfortunate that the mover of the amendment, the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works did not see fit to bring this before. I believe that it is being brought with all good intention, and I can understand the embarrassment that the government is being placed in and this is exacerbated by the fact that they also seem to have lost their collective responsibility over on that side.

In the first time in my history in the House members of Executive Council are abstaining without good reason but I suppose this is a new twist on things. Normally this is not with the concurrence of the Governor and Executive Council. But that is not my concern. I just mentioned it in passing, as it seems somewhat unusual.

Nonetheless, I believe that in the same way that government can suggest that the name of the Harquail Bypass be changed to that of the former Governor, Mr. John Owen, and that the Crewe Road Bypass should be named after Mr. Tibbetts, there should be no problem in reversing this suggestion.

We already have a motion calling for the Harquail Bypass to be renamed the Esterley Tibbetts Highway, and I think that this is somewhat appropriate. Mr. Esterley lives in that general area. He has perhaps been the most instrumental person in the Cayman Islands in the development of roads and it is good that a road that is as frequented and as popular as the Harquail Bypass should be named after somebody of Mr. Tibbetts standing. Mr. Esterley, like many other very prominent Caymanians should indeed have a road of that prominence named after him.

It can be recalled that some years ago while I was on Executive Council, I named a number of very public roads and buildings after prominent Caymanians, such Dr. Roy's Drive, and the Cargo Distribution Centre after Mr. Berkley Bush, and so on and so forth. So this is not an unusual motion. I can understand the amendment that is now before the House because it is trying to resolve a very embarrassing situation. But in the same way that it is embarrassing to government to have their plans fail, it would be similarly embarrassing to the mover and the seconder of this motion. As the seconder said, he has advised Mr. Tibbetts and his family that this motion was being brought before the House.

Mr. Speaker, I have a tremendous amount of respect for the Governor so I would not want the wrong impression given that I have in any way shown any disrespect for him. But I am sure that he will understand the situation here today. I will fully support a prominent road being named after the Governor. I believe that the proper procedure in the circumstances would be for the Crewe Road Bypass to be named after the former Governor, Mr. John Owen, and that the motion as it stands be accepted by this Honourable House.

I want to make the point that I reserve my right to also speak on the motion as I am now at this point in time speaking on the amendment to the motion. My position on the amendment would be that the Harquail Bypass be renamed after Mr. Esterley Tibbetts as the Esterley Tibbetts Highway, and that the Crewe Road Bypass be renamed as the John Owen Highway.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Since reference has been made to an earlier matter before the House, I seek the opportunity of clarifying my position in relation to that. In my view, the abstention I recorded earlier was in relation to a motion to bring forward a Private Member's Motion—not in relation to any decision of the Executive Council.

Since it appears that surprise has been expressed about that, I thought that I should take the opportunity to clarify the issue. I was not at that point—nor am I yet—party to the reason for the opposition to that particular matter, and I felt unable in the circumstances either to support the motion to bring the matter forward or to oppose it.

But I do wish to make it abundantly clear to anyone who might harbour any other conception that as a Member of Executive Council—and I have been a Member of Executive Councils or their equivalent for the best part of ten years. I am well aware of the constitutional responsibility of collective responsibility in relation to Cabinet or Executive Council decisions. And I would like to make it clear from my own part without recrimination but just by way of explanation that I am bound by the doctrine of collective responsibility of the Executive Council, of which I am a Member.

But I took the view that the matter on which I recorded my vote was not an Executive Council decision. I trust that clarifies my position and if I can further clarify it at some future date, I will do so. Mr. Speaker, thank you very much.

The Speaker: Would honourable members want us to just continue right on till 4:30 p.m. or take a break?

The First Elected Member for George Town are you....

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I stand here this afternoon to say, let's do what we have to do while Mr. Esterley Tibbetts is still alive. It makes no sense to bestow these things on people after they are gone.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Hear, hear!

Miss Heather Bodden: I am sure Mr. Tibbetts would be honoured to hear of this while he can. I would also say that I would think that it would only be appropriate to name the Harquail Bypass after Mr. Esterley, as Mr. Tibbetts only lives two minutes away from this road.

Mr. Speaker, as my mother often tells her children, "Give me the flowers while I am alive." Thank you.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am very happy that I gave way to the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town because one of the points that I was going to make was exactly the point she made, and I concur with her thoughts.

Mr. Speaker, I am known at some points in time to be very blunt. I will do the best I can not to be too blunt this afternoon. However, I will speak my mind.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I wonder if the Honourable Member will give way for a minute on a point of elucidation.

The Speaker: Will you give way, the First Elected Member for George Town?

The Honourable Minister of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

POINT OF ELUCIDATION

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe that from what I can understand we are basically in agreement with honouring both gentlemen. If it is the view of this Honourable House that the Harquail be named the Esterley Tibbetts Highway, let's do it; and then name the Crewe Road Bypass, the John Owen Parkway. Let's do it. I think if we can go that direction, we could withdraw any amendment we have put.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works, are you withdrawing your amendment because that is what the amendment said.

AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yes, I am withdrawing the amendment.

The Speaker: Thank you. Let us proceed then with debate on the substantive motion.

The First Elected Member for George Town.
Maybe I should put the question....

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I was just about to say that, sir, just to make sure.

The Speaker: I will put the question that the amendment be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment to the motion has been withdrawn. We shall continue debate on the substantive motion.

The First Elected Member for George Town.

AGREED: AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/99 WITHDRAWN.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Having been headed off at the pass by the withdrawal of the proposed amendment, perhaps I will not have to speak as long on the motion. But there are a couple of things that I think need to be said.

As I said, I concur with what the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town said regarding the fact that a Caymanian who is so deserving need not wait for someone else to hear about it when he or she has passed on. I had not intended to speak on the motion because when I saw it originally the fact that the person in question bears the same surname that I do, I thought it best not to get involved. Someone may have thought that I had my own personal reasons for pushing, which certainly is not the case.

But, Mr. Speaker, what I heard a certain part of the government just go on with a while ago reminds me of the thought that I hear on the street a lot when it comes to awards. We have people who have slaved for their community all of their lives who get a certificate and badge of honour. But others who come that are dressed better and who are talked about more get a MBE, or OBE, or CBE, and I have to say that this afternoon because that is all it reminded me of. This is with no intention to malign the persons involved but unfortunately because the situation was not dealt with in a way that it could have been resolved quite readily, it has come to this.

Now, the Minister for Education said in his contribution that the government was hoping that this motion would not come until next week because the announcement for their counter to the motion was in train. My understanding of what he said would mean that the announcement would have been made before the motion came so they would have got what their wish was. Mr. Speaker, anybody with any good sense would not say something like that, because regardless of what was intended to be said, what came across to me about that was, 'Listen guys, if we had our way, we would have fixed it so none of this would have happened and we would have gotten our way.'

I respect the fact that the government may have thought of bestowing this honour on the previous Governor. I don't have a problem with that thought process and it is unfortunate that the two issues have collided. But in the same manner that the government had this thought, I do not believe today that the goodly gentleman who has just left our shores will have a problem with the fact that they might name another road after him instead of the one that he was told.

So any attempt on the part of the government simply tells me that they are not concerned with the individual or individuals involved; it is simply a matter of upstaging. That's what it tells me. And shame on them for thinking in that manner and bringing about the situation that publicly we have to be arguing in this fashion.

Mr. Speaker, the motion that was brought by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the First Elected Member for West Bay, I am sure was brought with the purest of intention. And the government will not fool me that its counter or its withdrawal was laden with purity.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: No!

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We can take the vote, we can do what is right and just regarding the individual situation. Perhaps the lesson for the government may be to look toward their own more instead of remembering others before. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other Member wish to speak?

If no other Member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you very kindly. I find it regrettable that this well intentioned motion was not seen as an opportunity to present a solid and united front that should have united us and sent a message that in spite of the cut and thrust of debate inside here sometimes that we have not lost the ability to be united on very important issues.

I am not convinced of the purity of motive on the part of the government and I think that the Minister for Education and Leader of Government Business must have taken leave of his senses, when he admitted....

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. Truman Bodden: He said that I must have taken leave of my senses, which means exactly what it says and I am going to ask him to withdraw it.

The Speaker: I would ask the honourable mover, please withdraw that. That is really not necessary.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, let him take an intelligence test first sir, and then I will withdraw it.

The Speaker: Let's not get in an argument, please withdraw it and let's get on with the thing this afternoon.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it is pity that I left my sanity test at home today because I could have used it now. Anyway, Mr. Speaker, I will bow to your ruling, sir, and I have a sufficient command of the language that I can get across what I have to say . . . and you can listen carefully, sir, because how I am going to coach it now, I won't have to withdraw it.

The Speaker: Please withdraw what you said and then we will go on.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I bow to your ruling, Mr. Speaker, I have said that, sir.

The Speaker: I ask that you say that you withdraw. You have lost your sanity.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw the comment made, sir.

The Speaker: Please repeat the comment. That is necessary.

[Members' laughter]

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I do not wish to make a spectacle of the Parliament. I have said that the Minister of Education seems to have taken leave of his senses, you have asked me to withdraw the statement. I withdraw the statement most humbly, sir. Is there anything [else] you would like me to withdraw, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: No, I thank you for that. Please continue.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I have come to the conclusion, sir, that if we are not part of the solution, we are all part of the problem. The reason I say that is that the Minister for Education has been around sufficiently long enough to know that if that was what the government wished to achieve there were ways of doing it.

I am happy that the motion carries. I think it is deserving of Mr. Tibbetts to have this particular piece of road named after him. And I lament the fact that the government seems to have a repertoire of persons to name roads after, but missing from that repertoire are those Caymanians that have laboured and toiled in hard times when monetary rewards were not so generous, who seem destined to pass on without being able to live to understand that we appreciate their efforts made.

Be that as it may, however, I want to say this in closing: This exercise has taught me a few things. One that bears a striking note is what was echoed by the futurist, Alan Toffler, when he said that the illiterate of the 21st Century will not only be those who cannot read and write but those who fail to unlearn, learn and re-learn. Mr. Speaker, it is an adage that I hope the Minister of Education remembers and takes note of.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on....
The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, before you put the question on the motion that we voted to withdraw the amendment, that was not a motion to agree to naming the Crewe Road Bypass after the previous Governor. Am I correct?

The Speaker: We simply withdrew the motion.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Okay, sir, because my preference is to name that one, the Carter Wood Highway after Miss Ever Wood, the First Lady Member of this House; and Pearl Carter, a great teacher in this country.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall repeat, I shall now put the question of Private Member's Motion No. 10/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 10/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: At this time I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House. I don't think it is — or would you all want to start another Private Member's Motion, I don't think it's....

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: We didn't have any break in the afternoon so....

[Interjection: Let's take the adjournment.]

The Speaker: I just wanted to make sure that I was on all fours with everybody.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman Bodden: I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow morning.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10:00 am tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow.

AT 4.17 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 15 APRIL 1999.

EDITED
THURSDAY
15 APRIL 1999
10.17 AM

*Mrs. Edna M. Moyle, JP, Deputy Speaker
In the Chair*

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for George Town]

The Deputy Speaker Please be seated. Proceedings in the Legislative Assembly are now resumed. Item 2 on the Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Speaker has asked me to extend his apologies as he is off the island for the next two days.

We shall now move into Item 3, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

MATTER OF PRIVILEGE
Standing Order 28

SELECT COMMITTEE TO REVIEW
THE WHITE PAPER

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Madam Speaker, it is good to see you in the Chair. Before moving to that, I want to raise a matter that I think affects the privilege of this House. And if it doesn't affect the privilege, I think that the government needs to be reminded of a process.

For some time, we have had the report from the United Kingdom on the dependent territories and while there was some discussion in the Throne Speech, two members of Executive Council were on national television talking about it. I want to remind the government that there is a Select Committee appointed to review that White Paper.

I know members are busy and everybody's hands are full but we need to get moving on that White Paper. I want to remind the government of this. It is the duty of this House to look at that White Paper. It is the duty of this House to then make its thoughts known to the United Kingdom. It is the duty of this House before we do that to go to our people to find out how they feel about each item that affects this country's future. We cannot do that and we have been withheld from doing that because we have not been able to have discussions as the motion demands that we do.

Now, whether government adheres to anything that this backbench does or asks for, they have to understand that a motion here . . . and if they reject it then nothing happens but if they agree to it then they are agreeing that something be done. It is bound by the rules of this House, which is law.

Now, the country is bigger than we are. The country is bigger than any committee. They might have a point in saying that we need to go to the public to point out certain things, but they should not fall into the trap of going to the public not knowing what our thoughts are either. So what are they going to go to the public with? Are they going to go to the public and say this is what government wants? Well, how can government want something when government has said (government meaning the Legislators) sit down and discuss the White Paper?

Madam Speaker, I am asking government to please pay some attention to the process.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member before you move into the Private Member's Motion, maybe the Honourable Minister for Education could call a short meeting of members at the break time to see if we can go into the Select Committee on this at some point. The Honourable Financial Secretary I think is the Chairman of that Committee.

Hon. Truman Boddan: Since the member has made a statement, may I just therefore reply to it? I know this is not procedural but if I may?

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, sure. It is not procedural but I think it is a matter that is very important.

Hon. Truman Boddan: The Select Committee that has been established . . . when that sits obviously is a question for this House because Select Committees don't normally sit when the House is sitting—which has been sitting for six months. But what I said, and I believe the Financial Secretary will agree with me, was in no way in breach of the rules of the Select Committee. But if the member is trying to restrict the freedom of speech of the government to say that we must say nothing on a matter that a Select Committee has done nothing on at this stage then that is not right. That is not what the Standing Orders of this House say.

What we did this morning we were entitled to do. I would not like it to be imputed that we were in breach of the Standing Orders of this House because we were not Madam. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay before you take the microphone . . . Honourable Minister, I don't think that was the intention of the First Elected Member for West Bay. But I will give him the opportunity to explain and then we will move on to Private Members' Motions.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, thank you very much. Your understanding is okay as far as I am concerned. It is right on target. I am not saying that the government... The government is the government and they do as they please, we all see that and we all know that, we are feeling the effects of it. What I am saying is that the government must pay attention to matters that the House has set down. I am not saying that they cannot speak on subjects, but the minister knows the rules of this House and if he has not broken them, he has cut very close to it.

All I am saying is that the country is bigger than any of us, bigger than any committee. I would even give leeway for the government to say something. But I am reminded of this and I think that there is an effort . . . I should put it this way: I hope that there is not an effort to stop us because I know there was before.

The matter was raised in Executive Council by me about picking a motion and I was stopped. When I resigned from Executive Council, I had an opportunity to bring the motion. I am reminded also that the seconder of that motion was approved by His Excellency the Governor to say, "Don't bring the motion."

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member can we now proceed with the Order Paper and move into Private Members' Motions?

Private Member's Motion No. 5/99, Amendment to the Immigration Law (Re: Domestic Problems)

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I beg to crave the indulgence of the Chair to take Private Member's Motion No. 2 entitled, Training Initiative, rather than Private Member's Motion No. 5 which stands as item 1 on the agenda entitled, Amendment to the Immigration Law (Re: Domestic Problems), as the seconder of that motion sits in the Chair.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 2/99, Training Initiative, be dealt with as the first item under Private Member's Motions this morning rather than Private Member's Motion No. 5/99. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 2/99 TO BE DEALT WITH BEFORE PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/99.

The Deputy Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 2 of 1999. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 2/99

TRAINING INITIATIVE

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you very much Madam Speaker. I was just trying to get my papers in order.

I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 2 of 1999 standing in my name entitled, Training Initiative.

"WHEREAS between 1992 and 1996 Government accepted a policy through the Ministry of Community Affairs for a training initiative;

"AND WHEREAS the need for training in the various sectors of the Islands continues to grow;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government carries out the undertaking given to the country to see that proper and viable training programmes are promptly implemented in the country."

The Deputy Speaker: Is there a seconder? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D Jefferson: Madam Speaker, I am pleased to second the motion.

The Deputy Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 2 of 1999 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you Madam Speaker. The purpose of this motion is to try to move the government into action on one of the most important subjects facing us today—the subject of training, one that is crying for bold and innovative leadership. The government is too far behind on the matter of training, and I would say that no attention has been given to it for some 19 months now.

Let me give a synopsis on the history of training as it was handled during the years 1992 through 1996 and 1997, at least until July of 1997. I was and still am concerned about the training and long-range career development of able and willing Caymanians as a means of fostering economic development and assisting with labour tranquillity. I believe as I always have that the articulation of well defined and workable manpower development policies and strategies are essential tools for achieving these important objectives.

The policy I always adhere to is the Caymanianisation of positions within the public and private sectors whenever there are competent Caymanians to fill these positions. I know that such a policy fully requires that adequate training programmes become commonplace in order to ensure that Caymanians are able to fill responsible positions consistent with career paths and succession planning and the development and monitoring of workable and specific labour budgets.

This country has a significant over-employment together with a large number of workers on permits due to a lack of skilled persons to fill all of the demands in our economy. We are a service economy, as we all know, which suggests that the development of skills, a sound work ethic, and good attitudes are most important if these Islands are to remain competitive in the global marketplace. At the same time, there are undeniable and well-documented cases of unfair treatment and insensitivity to the upward mobility of some of our qualified, experienced and willing Caymanians. Therefore, government is duty bound to take a bold step and lead.

There are many cases and representatives of this House are always faced with problems existing in the work place, not just simple labour issues but that of upward mobility of Caymanians and whether there are sufficient training initiatives within the private sector to allow this. As I have said, government has to take the lead in this and see to it that this is done.

For many years we talked about training. We heard about training, and there was a labour demand survey, which made certain recommendations in 1990. Nothing was done on those recommendations. Between 1992 – 1994, thereabouts, we set up a Manpower Development Advisory Committee with a broad cross section of persons on that Committee. Members of the House, members of Executive Council, members from the private sector from various industries, the Chamber of Commerce, I as the Minister was Chairman, and the Minister of Tourism was the Deputy Chairman.

That Committee set out to lay the situation fully before government, and they made their recommendations and findings to Executive Council, which did not allow that Report to be tabled. Instead, Executive Council made recommendations from that report which I tabled in the Legislative Assembly here.

Madam Speaker, this is an important matter, one that demands we move quickly to stem some of the problems being faced in the workplace. Now, I know that we are not going to always please everybody. But I believe that that report goes a long way in addressing some matters of this territory. As the minister, I tried to set up the Caymanian Training Initiative that targeted first of all the tourism, restaurant and hotel sector. I am not going to take the time to read all of that Madam Speaker because that is well documented in the Caymanian Compass and in the Hansards of this House.

To say that there were a lot of people who came on board . . . I do not think so. But there were some that took up the offer of getting into the hotel and condo industry through management courses from the Community College and also courses to do with cookery. There has been some success. This was a joint effort with the Community College of the Cayman Islands. We did not have sufficient funds as the minister responsible for manpower development has to deal with it. The will was not there in the entire government to deal with the issue.

The Manpower Development Committee made many recommendations and I want to deal first of all with a few of those:

1. That a unit of government should be given the responsibility of monitoring whether employers are complying with the conditions imposed by the Immigration Board on work permits, advertisements and so on.

2. That a unit of government should be charged with accessing the labour implications of new major development projects.
3. In order to reduce the bias towards certain professionals and post secondary qualifications, they said all jobs should be classified according to their requirements, in order to standardise job descriptions and thereby allow applicants to better understand the requirement of each job being advertised. It also said that the stated qualifications and credentials of each worker on permit should be verified, his job should be classified in accordance with the classification system and it should be confirmed that his credentials meet the minimum requirements for the class of his job.
4. They said that there should be safeguards in the advertising procedures, which ensure that Caymanian applicants are encouraged to apply and there should be a penalty for false advertising.
5. They pointed out that Caymanians or persons applying for a job should be encouraged to copy their job descriptions to the Immigration Board.
6. They said there should be in place some means of monitoring whether there is consistency in the salary and benefit packages for Caymanians and expatriates that perform the same job, and there should be penalties in those cases where inconsistencies are found.
7. There should be a system to gather statistics on the labour force in the Cayman Islands and the Committee recommended that a proper labour market information system be developed or purchased. Such system should be able to show the number of Caymanians and expatriates in each occupation, the average salary of the Caymanian and expatriate in each occupation, the average number of years and experience of the Caymanian and the expatriate in each occupation, and so on.
8. A unit of government should be charged with ensuring that every employer has in place a training programme that is appropriate for its size and profitability and the unit should provide employers with a system in devising such programmes.
9. A unit of government should be given the responsibility of determining the skills that are lacking by Caymanians in all sectors, from vocational to professional, and of devising training systems to address such skill gaps.
10. They recommended that a training fund could be established to assist companies with defraying their training costs recommending that perhaps employers who have the most expatriate employees would be required to contribute the most to the fund.
11. It said that a unit of government should be charged with assisting schools to inform students of the career opportunities that are available in the Cayman Islands.

Madam Speaker, that report was one that was in depth on the matter of training, succession planning, and in their view what was needed.

Now we heard much about advertising in the recommendations. That is because we often see that there are advertisements for positions which require from five, ten, 15 or 25 years—all sorts of numbers—for a certain post and therefore the Caymanian who comes out of the school cannot reach the position. They are turned down because they do not have five years' experience. They come out of school with a degree . . . we are talking about High School. We know that here has to be some apprenticeship movement for them, but even when we reach those persons who went abroad and got a BA or a MA, that was a concern of the Committee.

You might note they pointed out that a training programme for the country should be appropriate for the size and profitability of a company. They were not trying to say that a company of two or three people should have five trainees. They were being realistic. So these are some of the things that the Committee was finding.

The recommendations tabled in the House (I am not going to read that whole document) made specific recommendations for safeguarding the advertising procedures and they said to reduce the incidence of unrealistic and inconsistent advertising for employment, several actions are needed:

1. There must be safeguards in the advertising procedure which ensures that local and/or Caymanian applicants are encouraged to apply. Advertisements should include the following standard information and procedures: the advertisements should state the name, type and title of the job, name and address of the employer, and the salary range.
2. Conditions and procedures for advertising and submitting applications for work permits. If Caymanians have applied for the vacancy, the employer should submit these details with the application for a permit (a) name of applicant, qualification, experience and background; reasons why applicants were not successful; copy of refusal letter and interview report for Caymanian applicants; copy of job description and expatriate applicant's resume. They said, as I said earlier, about the penalty for false advertising.

I do not believe that the government has to do a lot to search around for ideas to deal with the matter of training in the country—that of upward mobility and succession planning in a company. I am not here knocking any outside company or local company because we have those companies that do quite a bit in training. I do not know what the particular situation is now but I know Cable & Wireless was one such company. I think Caribbean Utilities does quite a bit with their staff, the larger ones.

Where we find the most complaints are in the finance industry. And when it comes to other labour matters more in the casual labour sector, that of clerks in the shops and so on, but that has more to do with salary, time off and the sort of day to day workings. What needs to be addressed, while some of those areas need constant attention, is training in the workplace.

I said in my debate on the Throne Speech that we have a fine Community College. I take my hat off to the President, the Board and his staff. And we can say that the minister has done some things there as well. I could not say otherwise, because I was a part of the government that instituted certain things. But, I maintain that the Community College is not being used as best as it should and government does not give it funds to do certain things—not even the proper marketing of what is there. This is where government has fallen down.

The President of the Community College, Mr. Basdeo, and I got together on the Cayman Training Initiative (CTI). He had no funds. Neither did my ministry. But we went out and we tried to get certain things done. It was obvious that the will was not there, and I do not want to start any unnecessary bickering or controversy in the House, but training was controversial and I do not see how we can get out when government says one thing and we say another.

What I would like to come to is some agreement where something is done. They can say I had the ministry for a certain time—I sure did. At times I had no funds to work with, but I tried to work with what I had and tried to put certain things in place. I maintain that the will was not in Executive Council to get certain things done or else the whole report would have been tabled in the House and not just the recommendations or just certain recommendations.

For instance, when I say the report, I am not saying that everything in it had to be accepted. No. They talked about apprenticeship schemes. It went on to note certain things about the education system. It pointed out the main features of the Cayman labour market; full employment, limited scope for more local supplier capacity, strong dependence on expatriate skills, incidents of multi-job holding, low level of employment, relatively high vacancy levels in selected categories, relatively high rates of under-qualification of the labour market, high percentage classified as managers and professionals, limited investment in human capital at establishments and individual levels.

We know that it takes at least four years to get a college or a university degree. So we cannot supply all the needs of the labour industry or market at one time. And we as representatives owe it to our people to say that to them. Never let them believe that because we are Caymanians we can demand a job. The man that puts in a large investment wants to know he has competent people dealing with that. The man that is paying $400 or $500 a night at a hotel wants good service; he wants to see smiling faces.

So we as representatives need to be about telling our people this and saying if you have a job and you are expected to be there at 8:00 a.m. then unless you have good reason otherwise you should be there. And if you are only expected to take one hour for lunch then you are only just supposed to have one hour for lunch. And on every job there is somebody in charge, there is a boss.

There is an old saying which I can't repeat but I think you know it because I heard you mention it yesterday.

We have to be up and about telling these things to our people, helping them. A large majority of them will understand the situation. Again, I say for emphasis: The need is for training to get to the workplace and training after the workplace. Some of that needs to be done. I talked about it in the Throne Speech when I spoke about the career guidance and counselling that needs to be done at high school level early. I sit here and I say that I have not heard yet whether it is being done but I don't believe it is being done sufficiently and people taking the wrong subjects for the things that they want to be.

We are not going to have qualified Caymanians and it is simple deduction. If we are going to maintain the standard of living that we have, we have to keep development at a level we can handle. And I am not just talking about building, I am talking about expansion of the financial sector which we all want but that too brings people with it. To do that we have to qualify our people. And until our people are qualified, we have to let them understand that we are going to have to bring in people. We all know this.

On the education system, that report it said, "There is a need for a better preparation of students for the world of work as well as emphasising problem solving, creativity, adaptability, self-motivation and co-operation." At that time they also said, "To motivate parents to provide a more supportive home environment so as to enhance academic achievement, foster cultural identity, encourage greater participation in uniform groups and junior service clubs as a means of increasing self-confidence, community responsibility, leadership and discipline." Stress the importance of a career rather than a job.

It pointed out that the vocational guidance and career counselling activities in the high school should be more structured, possibly including increasing the size of the counselling staff. All students in the upper grades of the high schools should be involved in a more structured and comprehensive system of work attachments.

That report went on to say that from a training system, civil service training and a human resource development programme should be developed and surveyed and existing records could be used. Identification of persons for specific types of training at suitable facilities and/or institutions and/or programmes. Personnel department policies regarding long-term training should be reviewed to identify if the deficiencies and or these incentives to training exist.

So it not only dealt with the private sector but it dealt with government. It said, "Training and orientation of teachers are essential priorities. Work attachments in other departments or affiliated companies or administrative internship programmes would be well beneficial for new recruits or young inexperience officers who have been promoted or are recruited into relatively senior positions."

The Committee made good recommendations. We know that there have always been divergent views in discussion with various groups of persons regarding whose interest are being protected by the Board, that is the Immigration Board. The Committee had this to say, "The Board is faced with a situation in which its implicit short-term objectives of keeping the economy going appears to conflict with its implicit long-term objectives of attempting to develop a more skilled Caymanian work force. An approach is to lengthen the period of time of the work permit for selected categories of workers but specify the conditions and increase the monitoring of the employers' establishment to ensure the required efforts to identify and train Caymanian counterpart staff. The duration of the work permit should correspond to a reasonable training period with the training and transition of the counterpart staff."

"A re-tool immigration capability or the labour department Manpower Unit staff, can do increased monitoring. Expansion of present resources would be necessary in order for the task to be effective." So I think that the Committee had their hand on the pulse of the situation.

It beholds government to move in the areas that we have pointed out and to see to it that some of these are set in motion. I ask members, I ask the government to look into this, to move quickly by setting up another committee to deal with it since I know they are not doing anything about it now. But fast action needs to be taken. There are all sorts of problems out there that need to be addressed.

I don't need to go into the whole matter, I think I dealt with it in the Throne Speech of the take-over by companies on the outside, how they affect especially the Caymanian women who contribute so much to financial industry. Some of them while they can be given good severance still have a lot to offer the country or any company and need to have been given that opportunity. Government needs to be vigilant about that situation.

Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Boddan: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I have listened to what the First Elected Member for West Bay, the former Minister responsible for Training, has had to say. It brings out very clearly the fact that for the five years or thereabout that the First Elected Member for West Bay was the Minister responsible for Labour, Training and Human Resources, he achieved very little.

The move to blame the present government (as it is made up) for the problems in training and labour—when that honourable member was responsible for it for far longer periods of time than this government—is basically saying that very little was done during his time as the minister responsible.

I would like to make my position clear. I will show what I have done in the past seven years, and will point out as the motion very clearly states that between 1992 and 1996, in fact a bit beyond then, the ministry responsible was the Ministry of Community Affairs. If there are no programmes in place on these training initiative policies, the blame must rest squarely on the shoulders of the First Elected Member from West Bay and the mover of this motion.

The responsibility for it laid there throughout one whole government—full four years—and part of this government's period of about year after. So for five years, let's get clear where responsibility for this has lain.

Now, the portfolio has changed. Two months [ago] Human Resources became my responsibility and there was a part transfer of about, I guess (I will say exactly when) a year and a half ago, when responsibility for Technical and Vocational Training was moved across. Now, I can endorse what the First Elected member for West Bay has said. The government is too far behind in training in this area. But the fault does not lie on me as Minister of Education because I did not have responsibility for the larger part of the time for it. Nor can the responsibility fall on the Minister of Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture because she has only been a minister since the First Elected Member for West Bay ceased to be a minister.

Let's put the blame where it should lie. The responsibility for the past five years—from 1992 to 1997—lay with the First Elected Member for West Bay. And if nothing has been achieved (or very little as was pointed out) then the only person to blame is the member who brought this motion. I can see why the motion was brought because it is in an effort for the first time to maybe get something done in this area.

I had to deal within the schools and I have effectively dealt with a considerable amount of training. But it is within the area of schools. And I am going to deal with the area that has been referred to about not sufficient promotions and why some of these courses in my view have not succeeded, as they should.

We have in place at the Community College programmes in construction. That programme deals with broad-base training for the construction industry and I would just like to read from the calendar what it says: "This is a practically oriented programme, its aims are to provide a foundation, a broad-base training for the construction industry. It also provides a platform for continued study by the student to ensure advancement in any area associated with construction. Project work is an essential part of the programme."

And under work experience, they spend two days a week at a work experience attachment and successful completion of the work experience is required.

There are also courses in electrical and those are practically oriented and broad-base programmes. Once again, work experience is involved.

There is also a programme on the hospitality side and this programme provides students with an overview of the hospitality industry in preparation for entry-level positions in tourism related fields. Theoretical and practical training are given in a range of subjects required by the hotel and restaurant industries.

There are also courses that relate to things like computing, bookkeeping and over and above that a very effective associate degree programme. So, the college has not only courses that can assist on the practical side in technical and vocational areas.

I would just like to give some statistics on the associate's degree. At present, we have a subject enrolment of 504 and we have a total of 162 in the associate degree course. The programme covers accounting, business administration, computer science, hospitality management, physical science, office administration, mathematics, natural science, social studies, literary studies, history, economics and condominium management. The point I am making is that what I have had responsibility for in education has moved again and there are very clear courses in place on what I had responsibility for during the five years that nothing is alleged to have been done in training in the Ministry of Community Development.

We have seen an increase this year in the technical and vocational courses and at present with the certificate programmes, 81.7% of the classes are Caymanians. So, there is interest there. And there is always scope for improvement and we have to keep pushing towards improvement in all areas.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister would this be a convenient time to take the morning break?

Hon. Truman Bodden: Yes madam.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:29 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:15 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues. Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: The 1996 Manpower Development Advisory Committee Report addressed the matter of the training initiative and at that stage this training was and had been for the previous four years under the First Elected Member from West Bay.

The Report was submitted to the Commonwealth Secretariat in London and they were asked for funding and that was approved subject to certain terms of reference. The terms of reference required for the consultant is to review critically the Manpower Report and data in the light of other countries, policies and practises. And, also to review critically the Manpower Report in the light of local research to update and check the validity of the report materials. Also, to look at restructuring the Human Resource Department.

Let me say that this is not under me, even at this stage. It is basically the Labour Department so I don't intend to go into any details there. And to assist in establishing the role and objectives of a steering committee when required and to prepare an action plan and coordinate with the Human Resource Committee and any steering committee when required in implementing the acceptable changes.

Since that requirement, a few months ago part of that has now been transferred across to me. One of the important matters which arose and which the consultant commented on was in relation to the statistics that were not researched by the Manpower Report. The major statistics not researched during that report reveal that of the approximately 1,600 employers in Cayman, approximately 1,300 have fewer than ten employees. One hundred and fifty have 10–19 and only 100 have 20 or more. This is, therefore, a clear indication that approximately 80% of employers would find the recommendations of the Manpower Report difficult to comply with in terms of training costs and releasing staff for purposes of training.

So one of the things ascertained and one of the few things that was done during the four years from 1992–1996, was that this report was produced. The Report, however, has a very serious flaw in relation to the statistics.

What is set out, as I understand, from the consultant is basically that the report deals with the big companies, deals with the large employers. And 80% of the employers in the country are smaller employers employing ten or fewer employees. Therefore, you cannot apply the criteria that relate to companies with large staff to that which applies to small companies.

If you go to a Caymanian who is employing four people, for example, and say to him employ a back-up to take over from the person in charge, the company in all likelihood can't afford the salaries for two people for one-fourth of their staff. Whereas if you go to a large company and you say put in somebody to under study this one, the large company can carry that salary and those benefits.

So this is one of the things that I have now asked the consultant to look at, and I believe that the Manpower Committee (I want to make this clear throughout everything I say) did as much as they possible could and it is a valuable report. They also consider it as the First Elected Member for West Bay mentioned the 1990 Report that had been done. But this was one area which the consultant who I am happy to say has within the last month or so come across or at least had agreement to come across to my ministry to look at these areas of training.

Now, there are two aspects of this and I have dealt with that which relates to the schools and the college. I am satisfied that while there is always space, there is always that one who could do more, a lot has been done. I can say that in the seven years that I have been dealing with the vocational education and training in the schools and in the college, I have achieved a lot. I am very proud of it. But where the problem has arisen is beyond that and this is the area that I didn't have responsibility for, and that fell under the Ministry of Community Development since 1992.

The Careers Advisory Service in the high schools is a very important service and we are doing certain continuing improvements to that. It is very important that students who are getting into say, Year 9 or Year 10 have the necessary counselling to know where they are going when they come out. Probably only 15%–20% of them will go on to colleges and universities. The balance will be in the world of work.

But there are also on-the-job requirements that go with students in the schools as well and this is an area that continues to be developed.

I guess the difference despite the criticisms levelled at my ministry is I have in place a system within the education system that is there and has been there for considerable period of time. Like I said, it can always be improved and be constantly worked on. It's part of the National Education Strategic Plan.

Lots of stuff has been talked about plans, but at the end of the day plans of themselves don't feed people. Words don't feed people, its action. There has been action in my ministry and I am satisfied that I have some systems in place that are dealing with technical and vocational education and training, and I will continue to build on them. But, as the First Elected Member for West Bay quite rightly said, training that was under that ministry (or was under his old ministry up until recently) is "too far behind" to use his words. I agree fully with that. But to say that no attention has been paid between the nineteen months to now is not correct.

It would have been more correct to say that no attention has been paid from 1992 until 1997 because there is nothing tangible at this stage other than a report that came out in 1996. Four years to produce a report! And, like I said, the report does not train people, it is the implementation of that report that is important. As I can see it, there is a lot to be done but the loss of five years has critically hampered what can be done in this area.

The large employers were quite well covered (as the mover of this motion has said) such as Cable & Wireless. They do a lot of training but there is no capacity within the smaller businesses—either with money resources or the staff skills—to deal with the training of staff. Until we can look at something within the system external to the school to assist the small businesses to deal with training, then I do not believe that we will succeed within this area.

So there has to be focus. And I intend to focus on the smaller businesses as well because I believe that with 80% of the businesses being smaller than ten in number, the focus now has to be directed in that area. The consultant quite rightly is studying the feasibility of establishing a type of service bureau for employers who have small numbers and this will offer low cost professional advice, low cost professional training and service, employment assistance, and possibly, at a later stage (as we move into the computer world technology) [formation] T[technology].

From what I can see with the schools and the college doing everything in the world, unless we can reach and deal with smaller businesses—and it is the smaller businesses that are Caymanian businesses—this is where thrust has to be. Now that is fully under me, this is where I will be turning to look. But they are the areas that up to this stage have suffered and been neglected because the Immigration Board cannot say you must put in a second person to understudy the foreign person who is running this area if there are only four people in the business. The Caymanian then would be basically duplicating it.

I hope the difficulty of implementing some of the Manpower 1996 Report is getting through.

Many of the findings were good, but the thing that the consultant I think pointed out quite correctly (and I must be frank) . . . I need more time to pull in many of these areas in in depth. I am not saying I am totally right on what I am saying, and I am always subject to varying that if I am wrong but I believe this is where the thrust must come. And if it comes in that area there will be better opportunities not just for Caymanian employees but also for Caymanians employers. That is where we must endeavour to solve the problem.

Without proper underlying statistics in relation to jobs and labour, and I know this is another ministry . . . but that is critical to knowing where we are going. There has to be the proper classification preferably under international standards, guidelines, categories rather, that will be the source of taking the decisions relating to the training initiatives that will come about. The careers advisory function will be strengthened and that will continue.

Now, criticism has been made to the College about better public relations (PR). I admit there can always be more promotions. The Community College in this country is successful. There are over 1,000 people—the majority of them Caymanians—who go there for one type of course or another. We are now having students able to get associate degrees in Cayman that are accepted by highly competitive colleges and universities in the United States and Britain, and by the University of the West Indies. So it is now moving on to international acceptance.

Madam Speaker, to tell you how difficult it is to get Caymanians to go to some of these courses—and I admit that this is a problem—we started courses in block work. We began with about 14 in each of the classes. After a month or a month and a half people learned how to lay blocks and the classes dwindled to three or four. That is the real problem because we have over employment and there is always the lure of attracting people away. How do you keep them there? I would like to know too but I don't believe that problem only relates to the Community College.

Sometime ago, I guess about two years (I may be wrong on the time) the First Elected Member for West Bay when he was the Minister for Community Affairs and Training, produced something called Cayman Training, Tourism, Technical Initiative in which people were paid to go there. If I am not right in this the ex-minister can correct me but when he was minister I believe that the minister personally went into each district or some districts and promoted it.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Though I haven't done anything!

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: And also the information was [published] by the government news bureau. And despite all of that promotion and the minister personally going from district to district, there were less than ten people who joined for that training initiative in the hospitality industry and only six of them were Caymanian.

So the problem doesn't just lie with the Community College, the problem is a basic problem where we have to teach our people that it is important sometimes to sacrifice some money to get some more learning. Learning is something that money cannot buy and it is something that remains with you throughout life. Money comes and goes.

Now, I believe (and I have seen this at many levels) that more promotion has to be done. But don't just criticise the Community College when the ex-minister—the First Elected Member for West Bay despite his personal promotion of this—really failed to get people out as well. In fact, the courses really didn't fly, if I may use that, but a lot was done to try to get them in.

As long as we have a period of over-employment, . . . we have been in a boom for four to five years. Most of Cayman's economic period regardless of the government has been a boom stage. It has moved upwards, let's face it, and we have over-employment. People become disinterested in leaving the work place to go and take further training. Some do, don't get me wrong. Many do. But many also do not.

With this initiative, from what I can remember, the government actually paid the students to go to school. They weren't students; these were people in the work place. So it is not easy, and I accept it is not easy. I will do everything I can to see how we can motivate our people for higher training and more education.

During the five years that practically nothing was done, the Minister (if I am wrong, he can correct me on this) travelled to Singapore with a delegation to have a look at different things there including training. I think he and his Deputy Permanent Secretary or Assistant Permanent Secretary (Mr. Mario Ebanks), and others, went to Canada to look at systems. They travelled to Bermuda or at least some of them did. They also travelled to The Bahamas. Now, I have not had the benefit of that and quite frankly I would not spend the public's money running all over the world looking at these systems because what we have here is a set of problems that are peculiar to this country and they will have to be solved in this country.

For me to spend $6,000 - $10,000 going to Singapore or Hong Kong or someplace to look at their system . . . it probably works there and it will probably be good to look at it. But I believe that we can develop because we have the Caymanians with the ability here who along with the technical help that we now have, I believe we can put together what is necessary to deal with the problem. I believe if further systems are to be looked at, they should be those that are similar to ours and nearer home.

Now, there was talk about this Manpower Report, areas of it not coming to the Legislative Assembly. But I noticed the First Elected Member for West Bay—who was the minister—didn't mention why some of that didn't come. Perhaps I will reserve that area, but there were areas of the report that believe me if they . . . at least one area, if it had come to this House, it would have raised some eyebrows.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, it was not that. [Laughter] I am sorry Madam Speaker. I appreciate that I should not be talking across the floor, but I had a lot of comments thrown at me there.

So I would like to continue with building and promoting the advisory service in the high schools and also to assist whenever possible the private high schools to also ensure that their counselling is there. To go through areas of the Manpower Report . . . there are a lot of areas in there that are good. It obviously needs updating. I think a critical area is in relation to dealing with the small businesses (and I call those businesses of one to ten employees—which actually make up 80% of our islands' businesses) and to try to come up with practical considerations in relation to how to deal with them.

I think the 1996 Manpower Report quite effectively deals with the large businesses but it is impractical to small businesses both from how much resource they can spend and also how much time can be taken out. If you have four employees, you just can't take one employee off for a week and send him to school. But a lot of that training can probably be done in another way to avoid long periods out from the work place.

It is a long and hard road ahead on this. What has been outlined and what this motion has clearly drawn to the attention of this house and the public is the fact that between 1992 and 1996, the government accepted a policy through the Ministry of Community Affairs for a training initiative. Substantially all we have is a report that has had very little implementation, if any, and perhaps the First Elected Member for West Bay could tell us the areas of implementation under the training initiative that went on from 1992 to 1997.

It is true that part of the motion is correct, we did accept the policy. It goes to say, “the need for training the various sectors of the island continues to grow.” It continues to grow and it is more difficult because five years were lost from 1992 – 1997 when something more tangible could have been done.

The operative part of the motion states, “BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government carries out the undertaking given to the country to see that proper and viable training programmes are promptly implemented in the country.” It is a clear indication that proper and viable training programmes have up to this stage not been implemented in the country and they are now asking the government to do so.

But don't blame this government for the first five years of the failure to implement this policy, please. The imputations levelled at this government applied when the First Elected Member for West Bay was a minister with this government in charge of that training initiative. What I would like to clearly get through is that this is not as simple as saying tomorrow implement something. It has to be done right and the statistics from 1992 – 1996 have to be brought up to date and the proper statistical data put in place before decisions are taken.

So, on behalf of the government I am very happy to accept this motion. But this motion takes no blame whatsoever for any consequences done for the first six years. At least, not by the minister who succeeded the First Elected Member for West Bay about a year or a year and a half ago, the present Minister for Community Affairs. The motion points very clearly at who was responsible and where the policy lay. And believe me, a large part of that report was controversial. It could have been implemented if there had been the will to implement.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Why didn't you do it?

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, would you direct your comments through the Chair, please?

Hon. Truman Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. Through you to the honourable member my question is: why didn't the First Elected Member for West Bay implement in six years nearly, that honourable member was responsible for—training? Why wasn't there an implementation of the policy?

It is easy to stand here and talk, as words are cheap.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, I believe I am more competent (through you, Madam Speaker) to say what I am saying than that honourable member is. And I know when I should sit down and I know when to keep my mouth shut—which is one thing that is lacking at times.

To be frank, where training is needed badly is for members of this Legislative Assembly on how to conduct themselves in this House. I think we will all benefit from it!

Training is lifelong, but it must be along the whole spectrum of the work force because there are times when the examples set by certain politicians are really not what the youth of this country need to follow. I mean, lets be frank about.

If this motion is correct, and I accept the first part of it that says that a policy was accepted, 1992 – 1996, and then it goes on to say that the present government, and I guess the present minister (me) who has training at this stage should implement it. I am happy to do that. I am happy to do whatever I can. But it is not going to be an easy task and that is perhaps why for five years nothing was done on it. I will do my best. I give that undertaking to this House and this country. I would ask for support. I think that after this motion is over with perhaps the politics in this area should stop.

Let's see if we can help to get our youth, our adults and to implement lifelong training for the people of this country and help the small businesses that make up the vast majority of businesses in this country with training through proper programmes, proper assistance and the uniting of Caymanians and residents in this area to move forward in unity towards providing better jobs, better businesses, better promotions for Caymanians.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: I think this will be a convenient time to take the luncheon break. Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.26 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.25 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 2/99. Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I rise to make my contribution on this motion and I wish to preface my comments by saying that there is a clear and distinct differentiation between education and training. I would also like to show how training is significantly different from education and how training is an important element in the future development of the Cayman Islands especially as we enter into the 21st Century.

I don't necessarily see it as my responsibility to defend the efforts made by the First Elected Member for West Bay who was at one time the minister responsible. But I want to say in all candour and in all honesty that at the outset, the efforts put forward by that minister in this Honourable Parliament to the best of my knowledge were worthwhile and well meaning.

I vividly recall when we discussed the CITI. He laid out the parameters and tabled the relevant documents. I was then, as I am now, an Opposition Member and we were on opposing sides. But because I saw the merits in what the former minister (now the First Elected Member for West Bay) was trying to do and realised it was a worthy step in the right direction, I quickly identified myself with those overtures. I went on record both in the House and in a public meeting in my constituency. I vividly recall promoting that programme and encouraging young people to avail themselves of that opportunity.

I am going to say now as I said then that the fear I had with the proposals was that they may have faltered because the minister proposing them then (the First Elected Member for West Bay now) may not have received the necessary support from his Executive Council colleagues. Having listened to the presentation put forward by the minister who has responsibility for education and now shares some of the responsibility for training, I now understand why the programme and the proposals and the efforts did not experience more success.

It seems to me the bottom line lay in a kind of rivalry, if not jealousy, and the programme was not allowed to come to fusion because the politics of the situation did not allow the players to reach the sufficient level of maturity to be cooperative. There was obviously some attempt on the part of some people to distance themselves from the efforts put forward by the minister.

Madam Speaker, that seems to be peculiarly a National Team problem. But I will leave that to my good friend and colleague the (now) First Elected Member for West Bay whom I know equips himself well on these kinds of occasions to completely exonerate himself. There is an old saying that fools rush in where angels fear to tread. I am not an angel, and I resist the urge this afternoon to be a fool.

Madam Speaker, the first thing I think we need to realise in this whole debate is that there is a necessity to have a fresh approach to this effort. This is not only unique to the Cayman Islands, other people have suggested that this whole business of education and training needs a paradigm shift. We need to somehow unfetter ourselves from the old beliefs that we have been labouring under. I have not been completely and totally satisfied with the efforts of political directorates since I have come to be in this House as regards the notion of training—especially in the Cayman Islands.

I want to make a distinct differentiation now between education and training. When I speak of training, I take it to mean an orientation towards technical and vocational fields, but not exclusively technical and vocational because there has to be a marriage with some academic subjects—mathematics and language arts. In more sophisticated cases, we talk about subjects like chemistry, physics, calculus, algebra which are necessary to understand certain principles in electromagnetism, electronics, construction and these kinds of technical areas. So I want to make the point that while training pre-supposes a certain amount of hands-on experience, it is not limited exclusively to that hands-on experience. The trainees at some stage must be expected to deal with the traditional kinds of classroom subjects if only for ease of communication and the ability to understand and explain principles.

Madam Speaker, this is a good point to interject something I learned just recently. The First Elected Member for George Town and I recently returned from a global education conference sponsored by the international accounting and consultancy firm Arthur Andersen. At this conference, not only were education issues discussed but also training issues.

One of the presenters at this conference was a German man named Albert Hoser who was (up to a short time ago) President and CEO of the Siemens Corporation. The Siemens Corporation is one of the largest most successful multinational corporations in the world. It is a German electrical firm with a large history of success. Mr. Hoser has retired from the firm, but he now heads up a new organisation called the Siemens Foundation, which is an educational foundation whose primary objective is to foster training and develop trainees who will be funnelled into the enterprise.

Madam Speaker, he raised a significant point: Siemens assumes a great responsibility for training their employees from the high school level. And he said something that I found very significant. He said that there is no employee taken into the Siemens Firm who does not have a mastery of calculus. And, how do they get that mastery? The corporation has assumed that responsibility. They take the trainees from high school for the lowest job. In order to be employed at the Siemens Corporation, you must have mastery up to high school level of calculus. That mastery is acquired by a combination of two things: practical work and classroom knowledge.

He made another profound announcement that, especially in the United States, the corporation has an enviable record for maintaining its employees and it has the lowest turnover rate of any of the Siemens factories and organisations through out the world. Why? Because they have spent time and effort in organising a successful training programme. Why is this necessary? Because this corporation realises that it must take an active interest in its stakeholders. By doing so they are increasing their profit margin and eliminating certain pitfalls like having to train and re-train new staff.

As I listened to the presentation by the Minister of Education, I began to get the larger picture of why these efforts so frequently fail in the Cayman Islands. There seems to be a disjoining among the various organisations responsible. And I have to ask myself, will we ever have successful training when that training is split among three different ministries. I mean, can we not see that this in itself is a weakness?

I noticed that the split only came about after the responsibility was relinquished by the now First Elected Member for West Bay. I have to be concerned with the fact that attempts are made to blame that minister for not doing enough to exonerate the current holders of the responsibilities by saying, 'Well, we only had it for two years. And since we got it here is what we were able to do.'

Well, as I listened that what was remarked to have been achieved, as far as I am concerned is still not good enough. I think that the first truth we have to come to accept—if we are going to be successful—is that we will never completely master this if we have to split it among three different ministries. I understand now that the right hand does not know what the left hand is doing. And we said that from the very beginning! When the split was made there were those of us who remarked that it was not going to work. Here is another point I wish to make before I leave this: The former minister must not have done such a bad job if he as one person was able to do what three are now trying to do!

It is true that 85% of the students fall into this category; only 15% (and this is an international norm and standard) go on to college and university. The other 85% fall into the category of technical and vocational training, which is not in any way to imply that they are not academically sound or they cannot make the academic rolls. We have to find a way to get the best results out of this 85% in the Cayman Islands. I am suggesting that we have to begin by overcoming some historical, cultural and social obstacles.

Unfortunately, in the Cayman Islands the idea seems to be rather prevalent that if you work as an auto-mechanic, or in construction, or if you are an electrical technician, a mason, or a refrigeration technician that you are somehow a lesser being than the person who wears a neck-tie or fancy attire and works in an office. I have to say again and again to young people coming to me soliciting advice that there is no difference between the dollar of the mechanic and the dollar of the accountant if it is earned honestly. If you go to the bank on a Friday evening and you are a mechanic and I am an accountant the bank teller does not say that your dollar is only half a dollar because you are a mechanic. If it is the same legal tender, it has the same value. So that stigma is more a perception than it is reality.

The bottom line is this that there is dignity in any labour—as long as it is honest labour—and it takes all of us working at our different vocations and professions to make the country strong.

The foremost and greatest example of such a diversity of backgrounds, professions, vocations and labour is the United States. For all its faults, it is the envy of the world. Why? Because it has been so successful at capturing this notion that many people in all of these different fields come together to produce and make the capitalist system work and keep the country strong.

Now, we have no factories and no assembly lines and we are a much smaller population, but if we master the concept and are able to separate and make the distinctions we can be in our own right just as strong and just as powerful. But first of all, we have to see the need for a new paradigm; we have to understand that we need to shift away from placing blame and from saying, 'Well, the former minister had it for five years and he didn't do anything but a survey.'

All right, we have survey! Let us begin with that. And I want to say something else that I have noticed in my tenure here: If there is no chaos, there can be no progress. If you don't have a situation where you are sometimes in a quandary, where you come up against an unfamiliar problem or you are challenged by something out of the ordinary, how can you grow? So it is unrealistic to expect that every time you inherit a position you are just going to be able to sit down and say, 'Well, isn't this nice and cosy. Here is the road map, all I have to be able to do is follow the direction in which it is going.' If you don't have to unravel some situations and if don't have to be creative and inventive, you will never learn, there will be nothing for you to measure your progress, your intellect, and your efforts against.

Madam Speaker, I contend just as Alan Kay said that the only way we are going to control the future is for us to invent it, the only way we are going to be successful in training is for us to invent or craft a training programme which is going to give us the results we want. And we are not going to get that by pointing fingers with the Opposition blaming the Government and the Government blaming the former Minister. We are not going to get it by that. All of us have to put our shoulders at the wheel and try to work together. This is a glorious opportunity for us to do that now.

I want to draw attention to something else which I think is of great significance. A short time ago a question was posed in the House to the Minister with responsibility for Education, Aviation and Planning and the question was: "What plans have been implemented in relation to career training since the Ministry of Education assumed responsibility for this area?" Well, I won't read all of the answers that were given, I just extracted two significant areas which I crave the Chair's indulgence to make reference to.

The minister went on to say that he was "re-examining the concept of career training since he had assumed responsibility for it in 1997."

"Discussions have been held with principals and senior teachers from private and public secondary schools on Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac. As well as with principal and president of the two tertiary institutions, a career advisor, human resources managers, personnel officers and a selection of managers from private business."

And then he went on to say that there had been "vocational courses proposed by the Community College and the International College of the Cayman Islands and other providers and that these courses were often greeted enthusiastically by parents and potential applicants. Curriculum are developed, equipment purchased and instructors hired. Subsequent poor enrolments and retention rates have left providers quite tentative when considering vocational courses."

Two weaknesses immediately come to the eye of a trained professional, such as I. The minister said, "Discussions were held with principals, career advisors, human resource managers, personnel officers and a selection of managers from the private sector," but no discussions were held with the prospective clients for whom this service is going to be provided.

So now you tell me how people can be surprised at the failure? If you are going to provide a service for me and you have not come to pull my opinion and to ask me what kind of service I would like, do you think you are going to be successful in selling me that service? No, you are not going to be successful. You must come to me and say, 'Listen mister, I want to go into the business of providing a service for you. Tell me what kind of service you would desire.'

So all of these people have been polled but the most important element have not been polled—that is, the clients and the prospective clients—these young people and the other prospects. So it is no wonder we are not achieving success.

And then the dropout rate is high. People come in, there seems to be some great enthusiasm at the initial instance when they all come in and they dropout before the course has reached its conclusion. But in the answer, the minister said, "...retention rates will be monitored carefully and it is recommended that students dropping out should be surveyed to document reasons for leaving."

No, that is wrong! They should be documented to provide reasons for enlisting in the first place. While it is nice to know why they leave, you want to know why they came in the first place. Accessing that knowledge is going to help you make it more attractive for more of them to come in and you have granted that a certain percentage of them by attrition are going to drop out. You want to develop and devise a strategy that the more you recruit, the more you retain. You are not interested in them dropping out, although you want to stem the flow of the dropouts. You want to find out why they came in the first place. Why did they lose interest? Was it after a week or two because the content was not what you expected? Is it that you were dissatisfied and bored with the practical or were the classroom subjects too difficult for you? Was the level too difficult for you? Why are dropping out? Why did you enrol in the first place? Did you think this was just going to be a fun thing? But we have to make it a fun thing if that is the reason that they dropped out. We have to find a way to make it a fun thing.

Clearly, there is room for improvement. But these are the most striking reasons, as far as I am concerned, and I want to express this rather gingerly, because it is a delicate matter and I do not wish to be misconstrued. Some employers are anxious to fill vacancies and are less demanding about experience and qualifications and because they have an overriding need to fill a vacancy, they provide attractive salaries and wages to start with, and then lay no emphasis on training. Those employers that do that, are short-shifting themselves.

Other employers have encouraged employees to give up courses early believing them well enough prepared to cope with on-site demands and offer fuller pay for full-time work. Again, they are short-shifting themselves and I would say that it is short-shrift and due to a lack of insight rather than another thought that come to my mind.

It is not a good practice and the employer has to understand that in the long run these shortcuts and this abbreviated opportunity for training their employees does not serve them well, does not bode well for their organisation because they lack immature persons; and certainly, does not in the long-term help the employee. In a jurisdiction where it is an accepted norm that people move from job to job, they are doing no one a favour. When the person leaves Company A for Company B (because Company B offers $10 more), that company is not better off either because the person is not fully trained. I would try to find a way to discourage employers from abbreviating their staff training.

I have learned that the greatest success in these kind of ventures comes from organisations that let the employee feel a viable and integral part of the organisation. That is done through a number of incentive programmes, and each company or corporation has its own peculiarities. But I must admit that we in the Cayman Islands are somewhat disadvantaged because many of these companies and corporations have their headquarters established elsewhere and so they are not at liberty to make certain offers.

In the 1980s, the Japanese were hailed as the most successful business enterprises. Unfortunately, with the economic downturn this model is not touted as a worldwide model any longer, but it was recognised and it still is that their success lay in the fact that they were excellent providers of in-service training. Having gone through that training, the employee was made to feel that he or she had a stake in the company or the organisation.

Madam Speaker, in an age of mergers and acquisition I think that this is a challenge but not an unrealistic achievement. I believe that one approach we could take to bolster our success rate is a public relations campaign with the major employers here who do not already have in place some kind of effective in-service training programme.

In earlier contributions, two companies were mentioned—CUC and Cable & Wireless—both of whom according to what I read in the media, have fairly successful and progressive in-service training programmes. There are other corporations that I think can do much better and immediately some of the people in the finance industry come to mind. They do a lot of training as it is peculiar to that particular vocation but many of them can do much more.

Regarding the smaller companies which the Minister of Education spoke about, those having ten or fewer employees, I think that the government can best help by setting up some sort of bureaucracy to offer guidance as to how these entities can strengthen their staff training. And perhaps, the government could offer some kind of incentive that would not be a financial burden on the institutions.

An example might be that the government enter into some kind of arrangement with these companies whereby the government subsidises the training and a situation could be arrived at whereby the training could be very versatile for part of a day, two or three days per week. The government will take care of the cost of the classroom training and the company would meet its share of responsibility by keeping the person in their employ—albeit at a somewhat reduced rate of salary until the training is completed with the understanding that upon the completion of the training, the person will become a full-time, full paid member and would be available and eligible for any upward mobility.

I believe it is unrealistic for the government to attempt to provide all of this in and of itself. Perhaps that is why these kinds of efforts failed in the past. That is perhaps one of the weaknesses with the system that was offered previously.

I believe that in the 21st Century, we have to get away from all of the responsibility being assumed by the government. That is why I am an advocate of social and corporate responsibility whereby we have more partnerships between the government and the private sector. In these kinds of ventures, particularly in a place like the Cayman Islands where we have a limited tax base hence a limit to the resources that the government can provide. But in order to do this, we have to craft a decent public relations programme; one which we will be able to sell to these entities whether they be small business enterprises or whether they be the multinational corporations.

We are not going to be able to arrive at that by staying in the Chamber pointing fingers at each side or at each individual. I think that there are enough people inside here with the intellectual background and the practical experience to come up with a rudimentary plan that we can take to the wider community for input. But I would caution against developing any kind of group that is going to further burden the bureaucracy taking ten months in order to craft the report that will be necessary to please every Tom, Dick and Harry and their disparate interest.

The most important caveat is that such an entity should not be dominated by the employers because, of course, we are only going to get one biased perspective, that is, the employer's. I am not saying that anything may be wrong in their perspective, but we need to balance this. And the bottom line is, of course, we have to get involved at some stage the clients and the prospects for whom we claim we want to provide this training. If they don't tell us what they expect and what they want, we can stay here till as many years as Methuselah was old (according to the Old Testament) and we will still never get it right.

For all of the admissions and the self-righteousness of the Minister of Education, he failed to take that into consideration. That is where we cannot continue to repeat that mistake because we are doing nothing but repeating failure and history will not be kind to us if we do that.

Now, there are other problems. I believe that one of the reasons we have failed to get sufficient people in the Cayman Islands interested in vocational and technical training is because there are elements in our society who do not wish to work for companies and organisations but wish to work for themselves. And in this discussion on training I have heard no mention made of accommodating these kinds of people.

I would say that the Cayman Islands are eminently equipped to absorb this kind of entrepreneur and to take advantage of this kind of technical and vocational training. For example, for all the tourists we have, no souvenirs are made in Cayman by Caymanians. It is an enterprise that for years I have said has gone begging. You go in the stores and you can pick up the item, turn it upside down, and it says made in Hong Kong, made in Taiwan, made in China and you go and you can shop at the most expensive and exclusive Freeport Plaza and the stuff is still imported. I am not saying that we have to make everything, but I am asking what is wrong with an entrepreneur being trained into basket weaving?

You know, I am reminded of a young lady in my constituency. This lady is the most excellent straw-work craftsman that I have ever seen. She had an exhibition at the Bodden Town Heritage Day at the Civic Centre last year and the year before. I made it my business to ask, "Where did you get your training?"

She told me she was a graduate of a vocational training programme in Jamaica (because she is a Jamaican married to a Caymanian).

I told her, "Lady, I have seen good work but this is excellent."

Do you know what she told me? She works at one of the major hotels here, and she said, "Mr Roy, believe it or not I cannot make these things fast enough. I cannot keep up with the demand."

And I asked her, "Were you given the opportunity, would you be prepared to impart this skill and your knowledge to Caymanians?"

She said, "Of course, I will do that."

These are the kinds of things that I am talking about. I am saying that in addition to the vocational and technical training, consider the training of individuals for individual entrepreneurship. But I want to take it a point further. I would like to see some kind of an organisation set up whereby these people once they are trained could go to the organisation. And again, it does not have to a government organisation. It could be an NGO and access a micro loan. I talked about that too because the model for that is an organisation in Bangladesh called the Gramean Bank, where the bank lends only up to $1,000 and below for micro industries.

Of course, it would have to be tailored to meet the requirements of the individual jurisdiction—$1,000 might not be able to get you very far in the Cayman Islands. It is idea, the model I am transposing, but not in all of its rigidity. If we are serious, these are the kinds of things that we can look into.

And I want to say something else about the Gramean Bank. Just recently the United Nations set up a foundation for people not only from the developing countries but many of the inner cities in the United States to study that. And if you go on the Internet, you can access all of the information you need about the Gramean Bank. They even have a support group and they have a very inexpensive little pamphlet (US$15) telling about it.

There is an organisation in Boston, Massachusetts in the United States called Accion International, which on-lends money to these organisations who want to get into micro loans. The most recent Governor, Mr. John Owen, he and I talked on length and indeed we struck up a little informal correspondence on this. Because when I raised the matter to him one year at a district visit in my constituency it turned out that he was familiar with Accion International from his stint as a diplomat in Boston, and then I told him about the Gramean Bank. And a few months ago, he sent me some information because he himself did some exploration on this whole business Gramean Bank and the micro loan system. He told me that he was interested in seeing if he could get something set up in Cayman. Because he reckoned that it would be of benefit to certain elements in this society.

I don't know what happened, I only knew that he was working on it. As to his success or lack there of, I cannot say. But I do know that it is something that should be considered in any training and vocational programme that we are talking about if we are serious.

I want to say too that this whole business of training, as it relates to school-to-work, or the popular acronym now is STC, School to Career Training, is taking on a new importance now on the eve of the 21st Century. It is intriguing because what successful corporations are realising needs to be done now is an incorporation of information technology into careers training. There are several models again in the United States, which have come to my attention most recently. These organisations are not limited exclusively to providing assistance and information to the United States, but will do so on the request of any individual or entity outside of the United States.

They have many programmes, one of which is the National Employer Leadership Council. And what is interesting about the programmes these people set up is their criterion for measuring results. I crave the Chair's indulgence to read a little from a publication put out by this organisation called "Intuitions Confirmed."

On page one, when they talk about measuring students results, "School-to-Work Programmes, also known as School-to-Career Programmes, provide structured opportunities for students to learn in business environments. With help from teachers and business people, students apply their academic learning to real world tasks and tackle workplace challenges that build on classroom assignments and test. Employers who provide students with work-based learning opportunities know instinctively that these experiences are valuable. For motivated students, contextual learning adds another layer of understanding to book learning. For other students, workplace learning awakens a dormant interest in academics." (That marriage that I spoke about earlier between what is practical, meaning what is learnt by the hand and gained from experience, and what is academic.)

I have to say that the attempts at this marriage, as far as I have seen in Cayman, are rather feeble attempts. Without pinning any blame, I want to say why I see them as being feeble. Candidates who come for work experience at the organisation for which I work, just show up. An informal introduction over the telephone, no programme and sometimes they are ill equipped because they don't have the proper equipment.

Now, my experience gained in Canada is if you are sending someone to be trained as an auto mechanic technician and they have go underneath cars, first of all, you have to have protective eyewear because you go underneath a car and you look up and one drop of brake fluid drops in your eye and you are blinded so you need protective eye wear. You also need boots because if you are taking a part off the engine and it drops on your toe and you don't have steeltipped shoes, that is the end of a couple toes.

And then if I am responsible for the training, you have to be assured that I know what the objectives of your programme are. You have to come to me and say, 'Well, I want this person to be seconded here for six weeks, one or two days per week. So who is going to be in charge of this person. Whom should I ask for when I am making enquires? Who is going to fill out the report and the conclusion of that time and sign off on it and what is his or her rank in the organisation?' Because if I am going to train your trainee, first of all, you have to be assured and ensured that I am trained myself. And the bottom line is also liability, what am I responsible for? Accidents happen all the time. Do I have to get insurance to cover your trainee or does your trainee already have insurance coverage? You can't just show up.

I was surprised because that is not the kind of thing that would happen anywhere else. I mean someone should say, 'I want to speak with the manager because we have a proposal. I noticed that your organisation accepts our trainees. Let's discuss the philosophy, let us share our sense of what I see is your responsibilities and what ours as the institution sending the training.' For the best results it needs to be clearly laid out and all these parameters have to be set out, it is not done at present. We can make a significant improvement in that regard.

I think the bottom line is that we need to arrive at a model that we think best suits our jurisdiction. I would encourage the government if it is serious . . . and the minister made note of the International Labour Organisation and other entities that would be more than willing to provide support. But do you know what the problem is? And I wish that I could stand here this afternoon and say that things were different. We really cannot expect any better results when those who propose ideas are labelled as "theorists" and "defunct."

The only way I can take it is with a sense of humour. I have to laugh because to take it seriously, believe you me it would be too depressing. We have to put ourselves in the position where we learn from each other, and if we can't do that then it is no wonder that we are failing at the most basic of enterprises.

I want to say something with regard to surveys. I would not place too much emphasis on statistics and surveys in our jurisdiction beyond the point that they should tell us what the clients and prospective clients want and why they become disillusioned with what we have to offer. One of the reasons I think that surveys may be misleading in our case is that we are a small market. To be consumed by the accuracy of surveys to the point where precision statistics calls for will defeat the purpose of us trying to provide the vocational and technical training.

I think that our use of surveys should be limited to the kind of courses we want to offer. The reasons why we have, it seems, at the beginning great enthusiasm and before the programme is over, the enthusiasm wanes and the drop out and the attrition rate is of such a significant level that it does not make offering the course feasible or economically viable. The very number of vocations we offer is limited in terms of comparison with markets such as the United States.

I want to mention too that there is one other element in this vocational and technical training that is rather inexpensive and that is increasingly being utilised now, that is, the business of mentoring. Many companies and organisations choose further candidates for leading those organisations through a process of mentoring. That is, they may identify one or two persons whom they have found to have leadership skills and technical ability and place them as understudies under some high-ranking officer in the organisation, be that person of a technical orientation or be it of purely business orientation.

Now, in the Cayman Islands there is certainly great scope for that kind of thing by virtue of the fact that we have many organisations that appear to be eminently equipped to do this kind of understudy. One of the hurdles we have to get across in any mentoring or any technical and vocational training is the immigration matter and immigration issue. This is of great significance because we have a system in the country where many workers are brought in from outside. I scan the newspaper ads because I learned from my classes that reading newspaper ads give one a real accurate feeling of what kind of society one is living in. I wonder how Caymanians feel about volunteering for further training and for study when they read an advertisement for a staff member prefaced by this statement. "Prior to renewing the application of this work permit, we are advertising for a suitable Cayman. . ."

Now, on the eve of the 21st Century, it is only in my country that you could get away with that, because any intelligent person would know right away (if they are a Caymanian) that there is already one strike against them prior to applying for a renewal of this work permit. With all of the best intentions in the world I would say that no Caymanian will get that job and that kind of thing is immoral—it is not illegal but it certainly is immoral.

When I say that we have some immigration hurdles to get over before we can effect successful programmes it is this kind of thing that I am talking about. And I have heard numerous complaints about it. I believe that the most successful of these programmes has to be based on an understanding that where possible local people have to be placed in a pool for training.

Listening to Albert Hoser and persons from successful corporate entities, I realise that the fundamental fact is that these people say, 'You know what, if we can train these people within our organisation and keep them, that gives us a much greater chance of success than if we have to go on the open market and recruit people and then train them and then worry about them staying.' It may be that the very basis of our community is such that that cannot work. But we have to find a way to make that marriage work and so the challenge is for the government to get some kind of PR exercise whereby it can impress upon these entities the necessity of working together to have such training done.

Mention was made too about the Community College. The minister himself said that there could be improvement on the public relations. I would say that the best advertisement, the best public relations is done by successful trainees. They are the greatest magnets for entry into the programme and for people to remain in the programme. And I want to throw this out as a challenge because we learned at the conference (even though it is a concept that I knew before) that one of the things I done at places that offer this kind of training as the Community College, is that some of this training is done by trainees—people who pass through the programme, particularly people who recently passed through the programme because they have a rapport with their colleagues that is sometimes difficult for outsiders to catch.

Similarly, the principle could be applied at the two high schools and the emphasis now is what is called group learning techniques and the facilitator could be a student as well as it could be an experience teacher. Indeed, we are convinced that a successful facilitator might well be one of the students in the group and this is a concept that I think can be applied and should be applied in this situations because what we are looking for is the greatest means of success.

There is a great emphasis now on this whole business of workforce economics. I am reminded that the best time to learn a concept and to learn a principle is while teaching it. So this is what technological trends are going to allow us to do. They are going to allow us to get first hand experience. It is going to allow us to work in small groups where the responsibility of imparting the learning is shared among all the group members: computers, videoconferences, on-line, all these kinds of techniques we have to apply.

I would hope that we would be able to arrive at a point where we realise that the responsibility for these kinds of programmes is our—I stress our—responsibility. While it may be the parliamentary duty of the Minister of Education or the Minister of Labour and Community Affairs or the Minister of Tourism, to bring them to the Parliament, all of us share a responsibility in making them successful. All of us share a responsibility in making them work. That is why when the former minister brought the CTI I made it a point of encouraging young persons in my constituency to sign up. I will do that now, that is my responsibility. I would be abnegating my responsibility if I stood up here and opposed something and said it is going to fail without involving myself.

For all the faults I have (and heaven knows I have a myriad of faults), I would never be so irresponsible, when something is proposed here, to gloat and say it is going to fail or try to sabotage it.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, would this be a convenient point to take the afternoon?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Yes madam.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings are suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3:25 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3:53 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town continuing.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. In the time remaining before the adjournment, I shall try to come to some sensible conclusion and arrive at the position that I believe we as Parliament should take with regard to this issue calling for training initiatives.

One of the reasons why it is important for us to arrive at a well understood and articulated position as regards training is that educators and business leaders reckon that in the 21st Century learning is bound to take a different twist. Indeed, there are those people who claim that schools and universities will no longer function as they have been functioning traditionally; and that there will be a closer link between schools and work.

These proponents go on to talk about what they describe as community learning centres and community learning organisation. I crave the Chair's indulgence to quote a brief passage from a pamphlet entitled "Transforming Education—Breakthrough Quality at Lower Cost," authored by Morin Eogol and Richard L. Measly who are partners in Arthur Andersen. Indeed, Morin Eogol is the Managing Director of the Arthur Andersen Project, School of the Future.

The quote is from page 10 and it says, "A large number of the nation's colleges [the nation being the United States] and universities will no longer continue to exist as such. Many will link up with local school districts to become community learning centres and speciality boarding schools. However, today's leading universities will become even more valuable as they compete to adapt to learners already disciplined in living to learn."

This section, Madam Speaker, is what I find most relevant and significant to our situation and to the debate at hand. It says, "As business organisations enter school-to-work programmes, apprenticeship programmes and internship programmes with secondary schools, businesses will realise significant savings in remediation, training, recruiting and enhanced productivity. As viable pathways open up for the non-college bound, many will consider alternatives to college especially as business begins to expand their human resource development programmes. Eventually, today's fragmented education system of K to 12 higher education and business training will become a unified learning system that reduces the time required for formal schooling while offering the flexibility needed for life long learning."

Madam Speaker, that brief statement captures in essence the whole prospect and gives us added reasons to work to ensure that we set up viable and attractive training programmes in the Cayman Islands. Already by our own admission, we realise that too many of our young people fall through the cracks in our system. And if we are to believe what was just read, if we don't find a way to remedy this when the new information technology age takes over, very early now, we will be even worse off than we are.

I would like to lay on the Table a document entitled, Schools to Careers and Information Technology, which is published by the National Alliance of Business Education Development Centre in the United States.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Mr. Roy Bodden: In talking about schools to careers—an emerging approach—this National Alliance of Business says that, “School-to-Careers or School-to-Work activities are ideal for strengthening the academic and work force skills of young people. School-to-Careers is built upon research showing that students learn more when given the opportunity to apply knowledge and skills to real world challenges.” And it goes on to stress the key components of school to careers as: Contextual learning; Links to post-secondary education; Structured student internships; Teachers internships; Job shadowing

In conclusion, it says: “School-to-Careers can have a dramatic impact on meeting the information technology needs of today and tomorrow. School-to-Careers provide an opportunity for students to reinforce and apply classroom learning through work place activities. School-to-Careers also exposes students to the variety of opportunities available in the information technology sector and the skills required to succeed in these jobs. As a result, students develop and strengthen both academic and work force skills and knowledge.

“In addition, when school-to-careers exposes future workers to careers in information technology, it exposes them to virtually every industry in the global economy. And of special significance to our country, for example, the banking, retailing and hospitality industries all rely on information technology to do business in the information age. In the next millennium all workers will need to have a solid foundation in technology in order to get and stay ahead.”

That brings me to one of my most serious concerns. I have always said that I believe we in the Cayman Islands need to place ourselves in position where we take greater advantage in technological trends in education. Certainly, we are eminently equipped to provide that for our students because we have a relatively small student population and also we have always had the kind of finances which should have enabled us to provide our learners with access to information technology schools.

Now, I admit that we find ourselves in a position where we have to play catch-up, but we must at this stage find a financial and physical resource in order to effect a beginning. Because if we allow the next millennium to come in and a significant time elapse and we have not so equipped ourselves, we will never be able to catch up. The reason why I said that is because being able to manipulate, being able to handle, being computer literate is a marketable skill in and of itself and if we can get our students up to that point, we already have a certain amount of marketable appeal in them. If they can progress beyond that level then they become even more attractive to our work force and as the pamphlet said, “All of the key elements of industry; hospitality industry, the banking industry and the retail industry will be hinged upon some grasp of information technology skills.” That is the route to go and that is the challenge that we should take up.

I would hope that this debate could place us in a position where we are posed to take off. I believe that even with the divestment of the responsibility among the three ministries and the different departments, we can still be successful but we have to get rid of the boogey man which has been plaguing us by encouraging us to point figures and to one-up one another. We have to come to the point, we have to look at the man in the mirror and say, ‘It is my responsibility. Man in the mirror it is your responsibility to see that these programmes work. It is your responsibility man in the mirror if you are a back-bench member like I am to go out and sell this idea. It is your responsibility when persons come to you and ask you for counsel and for advise, it is your responsibility to route them in the direction.’

And for those on the other side, they have to say, ‘Man in the mirror this is my responsibility, I have to work on it. I have to so convince my colleagues on the other side that it is worthwhile and when it is failing, I have to come to them and say, I think we are in trouble, what do you think you can help with to get us over this hurdle.’

Certainly, I have been around long enough not to take as an excuse and I lament the kinds of comments I hear. The success or failure of the Cayman Islands has nothing to do with the fact that Roy Bodden is more sensible than Tom Brown or has more experience than Tom Brown. But rather that Roy Bodden is willing to lend his resources, his time and his support to the efforts of Tom Brown in order for the country to move ahead because I have put a finite number of years but the country goes on and on.

So we have to shake, we have to exorcise those old ghosts who tell us that, “I can pound my chest and say all these years I have been doing this so I must the authority.” No! We are in this together and either we are going to succeed collectively or we are going to fail collectively. It is not by any means an individual responsibility.

Madam Speaker, as a more learning intensive economy emerges the relationship between work and education is changing. The relationship between work and school is changing and it is incumbent upon us that we grasp the significance of this change and that we do all we possible can to ensure that the clients, the learners are involved to the extent where we bring out the best in them. In this new and emerging economy, work and learning is intertwined. There will be no significant difference. We have to find a way.

I like the approach that they have in New Zealand. They have embarked on a venture to bring the corporate entities closer to the government and to the society by encouraging them to get involved in the provision of services that will enhance the learning community, mentoring work experience, the provision of facilities which allows young mothers the freedom to take courses, to spend time in career development.

I want to make one point because I don't want to sound like these kinds of programmes and these kinds of opportunities must be exclusive to the school age because I realise and I recognise that in Cayman we have problems with young adult age mothers, single mothers. To a lesser extent, the young male population is affected by this somehow find ways and means of coping. I think that it is the young women who are especially vulnerable.

Well, I see these same opportunities and these same resources being made available to this element of our population also. And indeed, at the conference recently we were made to understand that it is this element also which are encouraged to take advantage of the opportunities provided. I think the bottom line is that we have many of the necessary elements, many if not all of the necessary elements to be successful. We just have to find a way to intertwine them and work them in such a way that our efforts are cooperative and not competitive.

It is one of the pitfalls, I suppose, of the political system under which we labour that particularly as we approach the year 2000 and the upcoming election that quite often our best efforts are expended at trying to one-up each other in a spirit of competition rather than working together in a spirit of cooperation to achieve objectives of which all of us can be proud. I want to say that the vision that we should hold is one which says that in any educational debate, it is realised that upon the shoulders of education and training lies the greatest responsibility for the failure or success of the country, its economy and its people. We can do well at this or we can fail miserably at this, depending on which approach we choose.

It is of interest to note that the minister replying for the government has indicated that government is going to accept the motion. Having given that indication of acceptance, I would hope that the government can find a way to get on with the business in such a manner that we will not have to reinvent the wheel. And I say again, I do not believe it is absolutely necessary to spend an inordinate amount of time on the gathering of statistics. I would rather see a fair amount of effort made to harness the interest and the support of the corporate private sector.

The Chamber of Commerce is eminently equipped to offer assistance. I would like to see more emphasis placed on utilising the skills of the prospective clients themselves, ask them what they would like to acquire as skills. Ask them how they would go about recruiting and maintaining the interest of those recruited. Ask them if they would be prepared to share skills learned with those who are not as proficient as they are. Ask them if they would be interested in entering areas of individual entrepreneurship. And then try to access some finances that will allow an element of these people to venture off into business enterprises for themselves.

One of the problems we have in Cayman when we train people is that they are going to be expecting a job and what if the job is not forthcoming. Just like we have to get away from this business of all of the returning university graduates being employed by the government, so too have we got to get away from this notion of people being trained in areas where they are going to be expecting immediate employment. We have to train them and inculcate in them a versatility and ensure that training is of such a versatile nature that if A doesn't work out they can easily fit into B. That is why I would like to see as a complement to some of these vocational and technical training courses this whole notion of setting up some kind of system where we could train people and prepare them for entry into individual entrepreneurship. Set up a system where they could access micro loans and where we could teach them among other things how to set up, run and manage their business so that we take some of the slack, some of the pressure off the Immigration Board of all these other things and employment in our country then will not be as contentious and controversial as it sometimes is.

I am going to throw the challenge out and I am going to hope that the Minister of Education because he has said that he has the ability, the knowledge, and the experience. I am going to throw the challenge out that I expect that he will spearhead this effort as he says he has already set certain things in motion. And I am going to say to the Honourable Minister that whatever assistance he needs from this side of the House, I am going to be so presumptuous as to say that none of my colleagues on this side would dare renege on any request for assistance should he so request it of us.

This is a partnership. It is for the future of these islands. Not only for the future of the fifteen elected members in here, it is for the future of our progeny and our successors. We are duty bound to make this work and I make myself available in any way that I can constructively assist my services but for the asking.

I support this motion and I hope that we can exorcise the old ghosts of finger pointing and one-upmanship and self-righteousness and get on with the business of preparing our country for the 21st Century.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: It is now 4:20 p.m., I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman Boddin: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow morning.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it. This House do now stand adjourned until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow morning.

AT 4:20 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10:00 AM FRIDAY, APRIL 16 1999.

EDITED
FRIDAY

[Prayers read by the Honourable Acting Temporary First Official Member]

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings in the Legislative Assembly are resumed.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Deputy Speaker: I have received apologies from the Third Elected Member for West Bay who will be absent today, tomorrow, and Monday.

The next item on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports. Report on Transportation/Traffic on Grand Cayman Prepared by Peter Partington, PE, September 1998. The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

REPORT ON TRANSPORTATION/TRAFFIC ON GRAND CAYMAN PREPARED BY PETER PARTINGTON, PE, SEPTEMBER 1998

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

I beg to lay upon the Table of this Honourable House the Report on Transportation/Traffic on Grand Cayman Prepared by Peter Partington, PE, September 1998.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Does the honourable minister wish to speak to the report?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

This work was commissioned by the government and carried out in August 1998 by Mr. Peter Partington the engineering design manager for transportation and traffic engineering in the city of Ft. Lauderdale, Florida. Just some information about Mr. Partington for members of this House and for the listening public; Mr. Partington has more than twenty years' experience in transportation planning and traffic engineering in both the United Kingdom and the United States of America. He has a Bachelor's Degree with honours in Civil Engineering from the City University in London, a Master's Degree in Management Science from the Empire College of Science and Technology, London University, and a Master's Degree in Infrastructure Planning from Stanford University in California. He is a registered chartered engineer in the United Kingdom and a professional engineer in the United States.

Members will recall that last summer I read a statement which alerted members as well as the listening public that the government's wish was to have an independent look at the traffic problems in Grand Cayman as well as the road construction in order to be fairly comfortable that the way in which we were proceeding was the correct way.

Members will also recall that I gave an estimate of $10,000 to be the cost of this exercise by Mr. Partington. I think it is important, Madam Speaker, to indicate to members of this honourable House that the cost of the actual exercise was $3,617.02. I must say that was well worth . . . almost in essence a gift to this country by this able gentleman.

Although this report is now a public document, for the information of the listening public I would like to list the main points and key recommendations of the report which government has accepted. They are (in numerical order):

1. The policies on work in progress in respect to roads and traffic management was found to be carefully and soundly prepared and undertaken, and the Public Works Department staff who were responsible for these subjects are well able to carry out policies and programmes as directed by the Cayman Islands Government.
2. The extension of the Harquail Bypass and the construction of the Crewe Road Bypass are seen as top priorities and will provide improved travel times from both West Bay and the Eastern Districts in central George Town.
3. The preservation of road corridors for future roads is seen as a priority. It is considered essential that the road corridors which have been drafted by the Public Works Department are included in the development plan.
4. The design of roads in major road corridors should accommodate cyclists as well as motor scooters.
5. The taxi dispatch system for the Port is well thought out and its continued use is recommended.

6. An appropriate maintenance programme for Cayman roads is needed and stricter regulations should be introduced with respect to overloaded trucks which are causing premature deterioration of the roads.
7. Resurfacing of existing main roads should commence now in order to avoid greater expenditure in the future and the construction of these roads.
8. The endorsement of the infrastructure fund enacted under section 4 of the Development and Planning (Amendment) Law 1997 and the recommendation that additional funding sources dedicated to road construction and maintenance be developed as part of a five year capital improvement programme for new roads and the maintenance of existing roads.

Additionally, there are other sensible recommendations in the report some of which have already been implemented such as the erection of signs at all signalised intersections stating "Left Turn on Red Permitted After Full Stop" and the removal of several parking spaces along Fort Street to allow for a left turn lane from Fort Street onto Harbour Drive.

The report indicates other items but I would not want to prolong my delivery of its contents as it is laid on the Table and becomes a public document and members of the public may have access to it, as do members of this House, and many have a copy already in their possession. But I trust that we will have the support, as we have had in the past, of all honourable members as we move to the implementation phase of this report as well as the implementation of other connected issues.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The next item is The Financial Statements of the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands 31st December, 1996 and 1997. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF THE CIVIL AVIATION AUTHORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS 31ST DECEMBER 1996 AND 1997

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, the Financial Statements of the Civil Aviation Authority of the Cayman Islands 31st December, 1996 and 1997.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Does the honourable minister wish to speak to it?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The accounts of the Civil Aviation Authority are very healthy. The Civil Aviation Authority is very efficiently run. The accounts show that for the years 1996 and 1997 the net income or profit for 1996 was $2.8 million and the profit in 1997 was $4,275,000. That is after substantial provisions for depreciation. There can be no doubt that the Civil Aviation Authority is in a healthy position despite the fact of what the law says of only keeping $100,000. Government, in 1996, permitted the general reserve to be $5,144,792. And in 1997 that general reserve that could have been reduced to $100,000 by government stood at $7,670,005.

The Authority has heavy reserves, it makes a very substantial profit. It is well run and most importantly as mentioned in the white paper from the United Kingdom, the Cayman Islands was until recently the only Caribbean country that the Federal Aviation Authority had certified to have a category 1 rating. In other words, no limitations were placed on our airport as has been done and continues to be done with category 2 in other countries of the Caribbean. Not only is it making good money but it has been allowed to keep very substantial reserves that government could have taken and put into its general reserves.

Also the safety has been certified externally both by the United Kingdom and most recently by the Federal Aviation Authority of the United States as a category 1, the highest category that an airport can be put in. There are therefore no restrictions on us as has happened to our neighbouring countries.

There were delays in getting these reports here because of the problems that arose in relation to certain accounts, mainly for rental of Cayman Airways and the Cayman Islands Government and its different departments. This continues not yet to be sorted out, but I hope to meet early with the Financial Secretary in an effort to deal with the rentals between the government departments, immigration, customs, agriculture department, and the Civil Aviation Authority as well as the two airlines. What is really happening now is that government owes the Civil Aviation Authority for rental, Cayman Airways owes the Civil Aviation Authority, Island Air owes the Civil Aviation Authority. We really just need some journal entries to go through because at the end of the day it's all government. But they are separate legal entities and I would hope there would be no delays once they are sorted out in bringing the accounts here.

I would like to thank all of the staff, especially the director of the Civil Aviation Authority who is at a conference abroad and not here with me, and to also compliment the staff for their careful and cautious decisions, and to also thank God that there has been no disaster at our airport and that it has been substantially problem free over the past decade and that has come about from well qualified and well able staff.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The next item is Financial Statements of the Port Authority of the Cayman Islands 31st December, 1997 and 1996. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

THE FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF THE PORT AU- THORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS 31ST DECEMBER 1997 AND 1996

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Financial Statements of the Port Authority of the Cayman Islands 31st December, 1997 and 1996.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

Does the honourable minister wish to speak thereto?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

Let me begin by offering my sincere congratulations to members of the Port Authority Board, as well as the Director and his staff who I believe have done and are doing a very able job for this country. We know that the Port Authority of the Cayman Islands that was officially open for operation in 1977, and which was the dream and work of the late Burkely Bush and his Permanent Secretary Mr. Harry McCoy, was funded by this government and the Caribbean Development Bank and ever since that day the Caribbean Development Bank has used the Port Authority in the Cayman Islands as the model or an example for the rest of the Caribbean to follow.

I believe just those words demonstrate the quality of work that has been carried out by the Port Authority over the years. Directors of the Port Authority in the past and the present director, member of the Port Authority of the past as well as the current members, and I think it is always right and proper to say how appreciative we all are, no matter which government it is, of the work that has been done in the past, including the former elected member responsible for the subject who is with us today as the Third Elected Member for George Town.

We know that the Port Authority which was established in 1977 with what I would call a peanut fund, very small sums of money, sums so small I can't even remember what it was (a couple of hundred dollars), and today with a balance sheet at the end of 1997 of $11.9 million speaks to the able stewardship of everyone concerned, past and present. I believe that if we look at the objective of establishing statutory authorities, the Port Authority has followed that right up to the last dot of the "i" and cross of the "t". As a statutory authority it has a responsibility to declare a dividend to its parent and it has been carrying out this function since 1993 in particular.

We know too that the Grand Cayman Port has been funding from the very inception the Port operations in Cayman Brac. And in recent times we have seen the closure of that wide gap between the revenue earned by the Port in Cayman Brac and the expenditures. And we hope that the trend continues and that in the not too distant future the Port itself in the Brac will be able to pay for its operational cost at least (that's the objective) and not have to be funded by the Grand Cayman Port.

It is also fair to say that the Port Authority was recently requested by government to also take over the operations of the Port in Little Cayman. And we look forward to taking up that challenge as well.

We see that in 1997 the government received a contribution from the Port of approximately $1.5 million, while in 1996 it received about $.5 million. But as I said in the past, it is appropriate and timely that government and these statutory authorities work out a formula known to both parties as to the contribution required from the statutory authorities on an annual basis going forward allowing sufficient funds to remain to pay operational costs and to assist the process of capital development in those respective organisations.

We know that when we talk about self-financing, as far as public debt is concerned, that we generally count to one side and we don't normally count the other side. And some person in this honourable House said some years ago that that is single entry bookkeeping. Really it is because while you count the self-financing side as being the debt owed by the statutory authority we fail to count the fact that the statutory authority reimburses government for that payment. So there's an offset between the payment and the receipt of the revenue from the statutory authority.

I believe that members will find the accounting and the audited report of the Port Authority to be done in accordance with the generally accepted auditing standards in the world of chartered and certified public accounting and that the document which I laid on the Table of this House also speaks to the notes which tend to back up or further explain what the dollar figure represents. There are various notes within the document and I respectfully thank everyone for their assistance to this organisation.

The Deputy Speaker: Cayman Airways Limited Financial Statements 31st December, 1997. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

CAYMAN AIRWAYS LIMITED FINANCIAL STATEMENTS 31ST DECEMBER 1997

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the balance sheet of profit and loss of Cayman Airways Limited.

The Deputy Speaker: So ordered.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

The accounts show that (and these are audited accounts) for 1997 there was a loss of US$2.1 million, or approximately CI$1.6 million. The difference between the assets and liabilities, in other words the shareholders' deficiency or what government would be liable for beyond, amounts to a deficiency of $5.9 million. How that is arrived at is that the share capital of $38 million, which is what government has put in over the years, and that is taken from the accumulated deficit of $44 million leaving a shareholders deficiency of $5.9 million. There is a difference between the assets and liabilities of US$5.9 million, which I think is nearly CI$5 million.

Against this it has to be realised that Cayman Airways has been leasing jets from government's wholly owned subsidiary companies and those companies are showing a reasonable profit. What is happening is the payments being made from Cayman Airways to the leasing companies have been going to pay off those assets (those two jets) which are owned by wholly owned government companies.

The rental that has been paid to the leasing companies is in the area of US$2.7 million, I think. Along with that a substantial amount of the reserves are paid to the leasing companies for dealing with the future checks on the planes. The position of Cayman Airways has improved considerably over last year and the deficit after the subsidy will come in under US$1 million. So at least the company is now going in the right direction. But the airline business is a very fickle business. It is a very predatory business. For example, many times American Airlines will put on fares and even though the United Kingdom says they should stop they know that they can sell a certain number of days before the machinery under the Bermuda II triggers and they have to stop. It is just one of the many ways that the highly competitive and predatory airline business operates.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank all the staff at Cayman Airways, and to thank the Chairman and the Board of Directors of Cayman Airways, and the managing director and general manager. I think they are now renamed president and executive vice president. We have seen dramatic changes in the last few months, some are good, some are in the early stages and I hope that this year, unless fuel prices move up which they have already done, that could have quite an impact on this year's operations. But at present, we have our cash position in relation to operating cash in a reasonably good position and I will continue along with the board, the management and staff to do everything we possibly can to reduce this loss to what is acceptable.

However, I must say that $2 million is a long way from the $15 million losses that had occurred back in the early 1990s. So we have come a long way and I know there are times when the board does feel some frustration in that we have taken a very conservative approach to the operation of Cayman Airways in an effort to stabilise it. And it is now stabilised. There have been no serious heavy expenditure. At least we have never had to put Finance Committee together in an emergency in the six years that I have had it, which was common in the past. So I would ask all members to continue to support Cayman Airways and it is our national airline. I would also ask the public to please support it. It's very safe and it is our own airline.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The next item is Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers, but it is after 11 o'clock, so I would entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8). The Third Elected Member for George Town.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Madam Speaker I so move.

Mr. Roy Boddin: Madam Speaker, I beg to second that.

The Deputy Speaker: The Motion has been moved and seconded. Those in favour please say aye. Those against no.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 O'CLOCK.

The Deputy Speaker: Question 35 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 35

No. 35: Mr. Linford A. Pierson asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to state: (1) the most up-to-date figures on the outstanding debts of Cayman Airways Ltd., showing the details of the net current liabilities; (2) What affect, if any, will the newly installed Hush Kits have on the passenger and cargo load factors of Cayman Airways Aircraft; and (3) a realistic estimate of needed Government subsidy to allow Cayman Airways to reach a break-even position and to provide for all current liabilities on an annual basis.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: (1) Details of our current liabilities are reflected in attachment 1, as follows: Details of outstanding Debts of Cayman Airways Ltd 30 November 1998 All amounts are US$. These amounts are in thousands even though that is not on here.

Outstanding Debts of Cayman Airways Ltd

Current Liabilities:
Bank overdraft	1,185
Accounts payable and accruals	13,165 (1)
Unearned transportation liability	4,374 (2)
Unearned Government subsidy	632 (3)
Current portion of long term debt	820
Subtotal	20,166
Long Term Debt	1,687
Total Liabilities	21,853 (4)

Supporting Notes:

(1) Details of Accounts Payable Civil Aviation Authority	4,617 (5)
Customs	653 (5)
Flowers Air Dispatch	130
Royal Bank of Canada	103

Texaco	149
CKX Aviation Leasing	140
Texaco International	152
All other less than $100,000	1,489
Total	7,433
Month end accruals	2,097
Taxes collected	542
IATA accrual	847
C check reserve	1,877
Other	370
Total accounts payable and accruals	13,166

(2) Unearned Transportation Liability Arises because passengers pay for tickets in advance of actual flight

(3) Unearned Government Subsidy Arises because Government subsidy is generally received quarterly in advance

(4) Total Liabilities Excludes any funded (or unfunded) reserves held by lease companies

(5) Civil Aviation Authority and Customs The shareholders has agreed to assume US$3,161 in obligations to CAA and US$342 in obligations to Customs in exchange for shares. The net impact of the adjustment will reduce liabilities by US$3,503 to US$18,350.

The answer to the second part of the question is: This question of the impact of the hush kits on Cayman Airways Ltd's (CAL) fleet was raised and answered in September. The answer is the same "installation of hush kits to CAL's B737 aircraft, in order that it complies with mandatory USA regulatory stage III requirements, will add 339 lbs to each of the aircraft's empty weight. This minor addition to the aircraft's weight will have negligible impact on the day to day payload capability and fuel consumption. There will be no denigration to engine performance.

The answer to the third part of the question: The financial performance of CAL has been a concern of the Board of Directors and to the shareholder. In the summer of 1998, the Board of Directors hired a new Managing Director who has been given a mandate to produce a profit after subsidy in 1999. The new Managing Director has made an assessment of CAL and he has developed a plan for producing a profit. The Board of Directors has reviewed the plan and support it. While the turn-around will take time, the results to November 1998 are significantly better than prior years and better than our expectations when Mr Winders was hired.

A budget has been prepared for 1999 and the budget indicates that CAL should make a profit after subsidy, unless there are unforeseen unusual events. This assumes that all obligations incurred during 1999, including Civil Aviation Authority and Customs, will be taken into consideration in the Profit and Loss Account. The budget does not assume that prior obligations of CAL to the Civil Aviation Authority and Customs will be paid.

The current shareholder's deficit (liabilities greater than assets) for CAL is approximately US$6 million. In 1999 the amount of the shareholders' deficit will reduce by merging the aircraft leasing companies with CAL and by issuing new shares in exchange for amounts owing to Civil Aviation Authority and Customs (approximately $4,800,000 was outstanding at the end of 1998). It should be noted that the issuance of new shares to the Cayman Islands' Government in exchange for Civil Aviation Authority and Customs' obligations represents an investment by the shareholders rather than a subsidy.

Although the 1999 plan will significantly improve the financial position of CAL, it will not produce a positive shareholder's equity. The shareholder's intention is to determine future investments' requirements after assessing the progress of the management team in implementing the turn around plan.

The airline business is a competitive, predatory, capital-intensive, cyclical business and the shareholder understands that the financial condition of the airline is not adequate for long term success.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Deputy Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: In the answer under (1) which asked for the most up-to-date figures on the outstanding debts of CAL showing the details of the net current liabilities, the honourable minister stated accounts payable and accruals at $13.1 million. I wonder if he is able to provide a breakdown of the accounts payable as apart from the accruals and whether he can state within the accounts payable if there is any outstanding rental?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The breakdown that . . . if the honourable member would have a look at the supporting notes. I don't have any further details of that breakdown, but if there is one specifically that he wished to have then I could get that for him. We need to note that the bank loans are not in that. But I can supply that in writing if he wished either one of those to be further broken down. The highest amount is $4.6 million to the Civil Aviation Authority. But the bank liability is separate and the honourable member could get that from the balance sheet that I just laid on the Table.

I know the loan that we had for $4.5 million, we have been paying $50,000 per month and that is down now to under $1.5 million. So about $3 million of principal plus a lot of interest has been paid on that.

The payments on the jets, the lease payments the member asked about, have been paid on time to the government's leasing companies and nothing should be owing there now. There are mergers taking place and over a period of the next . . . or started taking place about two months back. More than likely during that period, because all the accounts are going together, unless there may be anything outstanding between the two of them. But in any event, under the merger the debts and the assets, because the leasing companies do have some cash, would be coming across to the Cayman Airways balance sheet.

The Deputy Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Part (3) of the question asked for a realistic estimate of needed Government subsidy to allow Cayman Airways to reach a break-even position and to provide for all current liabilities on an annual basis. The minister's answer was, in part, "A budget has been prepared for 1999 and the budget indicates that CAL should make a profit after subsidy, unless there are unforeseen unusual events."

Just to clarify where my question is going, having a look at the recent statement made by the honourable minister which shows that they were still at $2 million net loss after a government subsidy of $5.4 million, I wonder if the honourable minister is in a position to state more precisely how Cayman Airways intends to make a profit and what size the budget would have to be for Cayman Airways to make such a profit.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Forecasts are forecasts and I did not want to . . . when the budget was presented to me, I would rather see a budget that high-targets, even if we don't meet them because it drives the company towards that budget. The budget in my opinion is a very optimistic budget. I believe it is perhaps better than may well be done. But as the member asking the question knows, one has to set one's targets high and I think that oil prices, for example, have gone up drastically. That will impact on that budget because it did not take that in.

The subsidy we get, while it would be good . . . obviously we could do with more, but I have avoided asking the House for any more on the general subsidy of $4 million. In fact, that is what it has been for the last six years. But the offer that was put out about refinancing some of this, and government assisting, is one that we will by all means look at—once I can get out of here for a while—and we will be coming back with that.

If government injected some cash, we are paying a lot of heavy interest on this that we could get away from which would help us as well.

The Deputy Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I want to thank the honourable minister. My reason for highlighting this particular point is that the accounts just laid on the Table of the House reflect that in 1996 there was a loss before government subsidy of $6.3 million and the situation worsened in 1997 where the amount was $7.5 million, thus reflecting a government subsidy needed of some $6 million. The agreed upon amount is now about $4.8 million. That is why I am asking if the honourable minister could give an indication of what is a realistic subsidy needed to keep Cayman Airways as a going concern.

I am not in any way knocking the airline, I am just trying to solicit what would be a reasonable amount the House may have to consider subsidising the airline with.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: I think that a reasonable subsidy that would allow us to pay the Civil Aviation Authority, I would think . . . I don't know, whatever increase we could get. Perhaps another CI$2 million would . . . go to CI$6 million, from $4 million to $6 million. That is only a guess and I have to be honest. The airline business is one of the most [un]predictable in the world. I am doing my best, but it's not like a bank or another type of business that is stable and you can predict. From day to day oil prices go up and down, new airlines come in, or American puts on bigger jets. It's just very difficult, the predatory fares, American issues those things and it really hurts us. By the time the United Kingdom can stop it, they've already done the damage.

It is just not an easy business.

The Deputy Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I wonder if the minister could give an undertaking that he will pursue this matter and bring it to Finance Committee seeking an increase, if that is necessary, so that we can have a more realistic situation as regards the operations of Cayman Airways.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

The Deputy Speaker: Yes, I appreciate that offer from the honourable member. By all means I will pursue it and I thank him very much.

The Deputy Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister also give an undertaking when he is doing this that he includes the other hidden expenses which are offset by Cayman Airways utilising government services and not having to pay for them so that we can have a totally clear picture? As has been established, if dollar value were equated to all of those other services provided, it has been established by the Auditor General that the true amount of subsidy given at present is in the region of $7 million.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There are no hidden figures. The accounts I laid on the Table are audited accounts. Those figures the member is referring to, like payments to the Civil Aviation Authority, are accounted for in this.

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Which services does government provide?

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: They are all accounted for in this.

Madam Speaker, these are audited accounts. They are certified true and correct by a large firm of government auditors so there is nothing hidden in this. The only major areas that are not being paid, and to be very frank have never been paid for the last 15 or 20 years except the one or two years we made a profit, are the Civil Aviation Authority fees. Some of that is offset because government owes Cayman Airways somewhere a bit under $1 million I think for tickets that government has gotten from Cayman Airways and not paid them for. There are some offsets but everything is accounted for in this, also that offset.

The Deputy Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town, I will allow two more supplementaries after this.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

I will not pursue that supplementary. I will be back with the facts so I won't have to argue without knowledge. In the substantive answer the minister stated that "in 1999 the amount of the shareholders' deficit will reduce by merging the aircraft leasing companies with Cayman Airways and by issuing new shares in exchange for amounts owing to the Civil Aviation Authority and Customs. Approximately $4.8 million was outstanding at the end of 1998."

Can the honourable minister explain to the House which entity has decided that this is what is going to be done and what was the process which allowed for this decision to be made, as obviously the decision has been made.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The decision would have been made by the Board of Directors of Cayman Airways and of the two government owned leasing companies. In relation to a part of that transaction the guarantees I came to Finance Committee with that and this was mentioned at that time and it is one that is approved by government.

What is now going in as rental in the profit and loss account which is $2.6 million or $2.7 million for the aircraft, Cayman Airways will now own the aircraft and will be paying that towards equity in those jets. And with the putting in of the capital that will capitalise a part of the deficiency which is what is owing the Civil Aviation Authority. But I need to point out that all of the Civil Aviation Authority's debt is into these accounts as well as what government owes Cayman Airways.

If there was anything specific that the member has, I will try to answer it to the best of my ability. But I just am not sure exactly what the member is getting at there.

The Deputy Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Madam Speaker, I am craving your indulgence to not count this as one of those extra two we have left, because it is trying to satisfy the original question which has not been answered to my satisfaction. But you will make up your mind when I am through.

What I am trying to seek from the minister is the statement, . . . and this is not to do with whether or not it should have been done. This is simply to do with the fact that we see it there that it is obvious a decision has been made for this to be done. All I am seeking is for the procedure to be explained. The minister said that the Board of Directors of Cayman Airways and the Board of Directors of the two leasing companies will have made a decision and it will have been approved by government. I am asking the minister, for instance, if that is the case has Executive Council met on this matter and made a decision to say that this is what the government is going to do? That is what I am trying to determine.

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This was put to Executive Council as the shareholder and it has been agreed. But I would just like to point out that it was one of the things I explained sometime back when the guarantees on this were changed.

So the answer is yes.

The Deputy Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

On the details of accounts payable in the substantive answer it says that Cayman Airways owes the Civil Aviation Authority $4.6 million. I understand that is United States Dollars. The day before yesterday the minister in answering another question stated that the Civil Aviation Authority has a general reserve of $4 million. My question to the minister now is, Does the general reserve he is talking about that the Civil Aviation Authority has, include this money that Cayman Airways owes the Civil Aviation Authority?

The Deputy Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Once again, these are audited accounts that I have just laid, and the accounts would include it. I would think it would be shown as a receivable as would the money owed by government to the Civil Aviation Authority. I have actually just laid the accounts. That specific area, because we are into Civil Aviation, I would have to find out the exact answer. But I am sure it is taken into account in the accounts.

Now the general reserve is not a special reserve for any specific purpose, it is a general reserve.

The Deputy Speaker: This will be the last supplementary question, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, very much.

You know what, Madam Speaker, I will quit now. I won't ask any more right now.

The Deputy Speaker: I think this is a convenient time to suspend proceedings. Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.35 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.52 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I would entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to allow Private Member's Business to have precedence over Government Business.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to allow Private Member's Business to have precedence over Government Business.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 14(2) be suspended to allow Private Member's Business to have precedence over Government Business. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW OTHER BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

The Deputy Speaker: Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 2/99. Does any other member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 2/99

TRAINING INITIATIVE

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you, Madam Speaker.

Before I begin I would just like to say how much I appreciated the inner school debate finals last night here in the Legislative Assembly. I am also pleased to say that from the start I seem to have been a supporter of the Cayman Brac team. There was something very special about all of the debaters, but I felt from the very beginning that the Cayman Brac ladies were really into what they were doing and I think that it is appropriate to mention this since we are dealing with Private Member's Motion 2/99 talking about a training initiative.

When we look at the extent of the academic abilities of our young people, or at least a good number of them, because I was privileged to have had two young persons on my Public Eye television show last month and I was pleasantly moved to have been in the company of such young creative intellects. I think what this tells us is that there already exists a certain amount of disparity between the new intellect and the old. I believe that when we are talking about training, when we are talking about equipping members of our society with tools which will allow them to be more productive individuals, not just for themselves but for the companies they work for and society as a whole, when we begin to contemplate how this can be done I think it is important that we realise that from the very beginning although education in schools are not final, although we should have the concept of education for life, in other words from the very beginning in terms of our contemplation of the use of education, the purpose of education and the goal of education, it should never mean that children will go to school until a legal age or until they graduate from college with a Bachelors or a Masters or a PhD, but education should be for life. Anyone who fails to realise that education, especially in a rapidly developing world, in a country like ours that has developed so rapidly over the last thirty years, . . . anyone who believes they can go and get a degree and experience and that's that is sadly mistaken.

If we become complacent and believe that what we have from the point of view of knowledge is sufficient at any time, we will certainly fall backwards and fail. So what I am saying is that there seems to be a need for the values and ideas, the awareness and consciousness in this society where we become a society of learners, where we are always learning, where we are always acquainting ourselves with ways of solving the problems and challenges we meet on a day to day level as citizens and productive members of our individual companies.

Therefore, there needs to be a shift on the importance of learning. We need to say from the very beginning that the educational programmes and policies in our schools have to be reformulated. We have to have a new vision about the educational system. I am saying that I am delighted to know that we can have intelligent, articulate and creative youngsters like the ones who won the debating contest, those youngsters from Cayman Brac. On the one hand, if we looked at the youngsters that I interviewed on my TV programme there would be no way that we would not see that the school system has been successful. But the school system has been successful as a class system that reproduces the class divisions in our society. That is basically it.

My position is that I cannot be complacent with that kind of success because I must see that there are thousands of young Caymanians who have placed no importance on learning beyond the point of being able to achieve a job in a bank, in a service company to be able to afford the Japanese car and get a little apartment with the girlfriend or boyfriend so that they can carry on certain types of relationships. I am saying that the training initiative must be a part of a strategic movement initiative in our society where we understand these interrelations between the values, ideas, desires and expectations of individuals and institutions.

So when I find that the training initiative that should have taken place between 1992 and 1996, or 1992 and now, and the fact that the government has not really as far as I am concerned showed exactly where they are going with their recognition of the need for training and their ability to design an integrated strategy that would make training possible. In making training possible I mean to also diffuse the social frustrations that Caymanians individuals have found themselves in because of their own short-sightedness. As the two young ladies said on Public Eye last month, they have a lot of school mates who are just looking at finishing school as is legally required, finishing the basics to get a job at Barclays Bank or Royal Bank or Bank of Nova Scotia and be able to pay for that car and be satisfied with that immediate gratification.

We need to build our children from the earliest age with the desire to not just seek immediate gratification but to seek long term satisfaction and through long term satisfaction they will find the type of ongoing need for them to always rehabilitate their educational position. The fact that we as a government or a society leading the ideological war against ignorance in our society is a failure on our part. It is also because we do not see education as important. I am not going to get into the philosophical differences between training and education at this point, but I do believe that they are interconnected and I am not going to separate the two at this time.

I noticed that when we say, 'That's an educated fool; you can't give them too much education because they can't take it. They go crazy if they get too much education. If you give them education, they are going to ruin everything.' There is in our society a lack of good values in regard to education. This is not to say that we do not admire some people having education because we look on the other side and say, 'Oh wow, they are such educated and sophisticated people; they are such civilised people.' As if it is something we expect in other people but we shouldn't expect in our people.

Therefore, when we see the school system producing children who are intellectually very bright, at the same time producing children without the ability to earn a position in society we understand that it comes from this discrepancy in our values in regard to education. If we look at other societies like Jamaica, we look at how a person is trained as a carpenter or a mason or a mechanic, how inventive they are, how creative they are in terms of using that particular knowledge, how important it is in other countries for people to become apprentices and work in restaurants and bakeries and butcheries to learn, to gain knowledge, to be trained, to have access to the knowledge and ability to be able to perform certain functions in order to improve one's economic and social status.

The predicament we have is a result of the deficits in our philosophy in regard to education and training. I think this must be recognised. I think that the National Team Government between 1992 and 1996 did not put great emphasis on training because it did not see training at that particular time as a politically expedient initiative. It is wrong that we always have to grab things up and look at things because they might be politically expedient. When we get to the point where we really have to make the kinds of changes and rearrangement for our conceived initiatives to work we don't want to do so. I believe that is what happened to the National Team between 1992 and 1996.

Although the Minister for Education might blame the former Minister responsible for Training, the Minister responsible at that time for Community Development, I believe that I would like to take the personalities out of it and put the problem where the problem lies. It is a problem of disorganisation from the top. The disorganisation from the top which might look more pronounced once there is a certain amount of frustration which results as a result of personalities becoming involved and people being frustrated with one another. But it's not the individuals who create this problem. This problem is created by the system where we have five different governments in one Executive Council.

So, if you have one minister responsible for training and one responsible for education, of course you're going to get a conflict of interests. You are going to get disjointedness. You are not going to get what you really need which is an integrated approach when both ministers must realise that training affects education and education affects training. They are interrelated and you can't really separate them. Perhaps in discussing this Private Member's Motion it is also important to recognise that training now under the Ministry for Education is where it should be. Maybe it should not have been under the Community Development before and the question would still be why did it end up under Community Development Minister before and not under the Minister for Education? Did that have anything to do with political expediency?

Maybe it was politically expedient to have that happen in 1992, but at that particular time it did not work. There was a lack of cooperation. In any case, it is quite obvious that what was intended was never achieved. Now we have to revisit this particular predicament. We have to decide what it is we can do to improve training in our country.

If you go out there and you ask Caymanians working in the workplace if they are being trained, they will say, no, they are not being trained. Most people who have complained to me have complained about a lack of training. But when they are talking about the lack of training they are basically making an accusation about the lack of desire on the part of their employer to promote them. So they are looking at training already in relationship to social mobility, economic mobility and moving up. But it is important that people realise that if you are going to move up the ladder, you also have to sacrifice something even if all you have to sacrifice is your time and your concentration. You have to give up something to be able to learn to be able to digest, to take in and retain the information you are going to need in order to be promoted.

Of course, persons will be concerned with promotions that might not really be serious about training. So when given the opportunity to be trained in particular areas persons might not go and take advantage of this as we might think. Again, we can be very political about it because it appears that when we talk about training and the lack of training we are almost criticising a particular group of people, like criticising the foreigners and the foreign employee versus the Caymanian. That is a scenario where these type of conceptions are involved. They are ready-made political distinctions and social distinctions between Caymanians and foreigners. They have already created their own challenges and limitations that are political rather than educational and I believe this is very, very unfortunate.

The Minister for Education mentioned yesterday that there are many small companies in Cayman. As a matter of fact, the majority of the companies are small companies except for the large companies, and we know what the large companies are—the banks and the hotels. In the banks and the hotels we already know that the banks are not good corporate citizens in that sense. And I have criticised them on many occasions for this in dealing with certain aspects here. The hotels are not good corporate citizens and we cannot expect that they are going to cooperate with our desires to train our people so that the people will have social mobility so that we won't have social and political problems down the line. They are not thinking that way; they are thinking about getting what they can get today and moving on someplace else. That has not changed.

When we are talking about training and the lack of initiative in training, we have to look at the fact that that is all tied up with the question of immigration. Will people be able to bring people in from Canada to work as chefs and cooks and waitresses and this and that and accountants and so forth and so on? If they have an easy availability for trained, disciplined labour they can bring from Canada or Austria rather than train Caymanians, what are they going to do? Unless you have a government that knows the importance of training and the challenges which training faces what is going to happen? They are going to choose the easily available, trained and disciplined labour from these countries. They are not going to look domestically and try to improve the quality of the domestic labour because they see it as a waste of time. They see it as too expensive. They see it as something that should not be their responsibility.

But, when Mr. Jim Bodden was in power between 1976 and 1984 he had the tourism training school and the marine training school. They had their people trying to learn different skills in regard to the hotels. It would be surprising to do a survey to see how many people had initial contact with that particular training initiative back then are actually involved in tourism today. How many of them have actually been pushed out by the policies of management in these hotels to disqualify Caymanians from wanting to be involved in the industry?

Then again, that's compounded by the fact that we have a situation of over employment in the country which the Minister for Education remarked on. This is a significant fact because it means that rather than trying to retrain yourself to get another job, you can go to another job. In a lot of places when people are talking about training, it's talking about retraining. It's talking about people who have already taken up a position in society somehow as an active worker who finds himself unemployed because the factory closed down and they go out there and train themselves in order to take up another position. If I go to a job and someone says I can't do that too good, I can go to another job. It's important that we realise that when we are talking about training objectives, if we are not going to make those training initiatives totally political in the terms of demanding that these people do this and that, if we are not going to do that then we have to take into account our sociological problems as well, in other words the lack of values and ideas that we face here where we need to begin to condition people or encourage people to look more long term in regard to their desire for certain rewards.

We need to take that into consideration when we say that other persons are not doing enough for training in this country. But overall, the areas I have identified, which are the hotels and the banks, people could be educated within the work place to perform better and to move up within the professional hierarchy. I see that as a possibility in the hotels and banks. I believe that is not taking place as it should in the hotels or the banks. But I do not believe this is a predicament that can be completely relegated to the question of training from an institutional point of view or a governmental point of view. I believe that lack has to be solved in our entire labour concept, the concept of how labour will be organised and rewarded, how local labour will be treated, how expatriate labour will be treated.

Given the possibility to amend this situation I believe that as the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town said, we cannot rely too much on the statistics. I think that it is not a question of how the numbers are here that is really meaningful. What is meaningful here is the predicament we are in. If we cannot give our people the feeling that there is the possibility of social upward mobility within the workplace it will create a political problem that will cause us to have economic problems in the future. Therefore training, regardless of how many persons we have demanding that they be trained is important to begin these training initiatives. It is important that the government shows it is important in supporting training initiatives and that it is sensitive enough of the overall predicament the country as a whole is involved in, whether it be the employer or the employee. So it's not the numbers but the predicament that's important.

The predicament that in the major hotels and banks they have foreigners who own and local people who are trying to get involved there as employees. In the banks, in particular, there are mostly women. Someone was remarking about Cable & Wireless and CUC training. Madam Speaker, I know how you feel about women's issues, but I do believe the reason why Cable & Wireless and CUC have the type of training initiatives they do is partly because it would be more difficult to suppress the male's desire for acquiring status and prestige and advancement. It is easier to suppress that in females. Therefore if they had 90% men working in banks or at CUC you would have had more of a desire to promote them and train them and satisfy them by these types of initiatives.

We have to look at the fact that persons who have stifled the training programmes or who have not been enthusiastic about training, like a lot of the banks and hotels, I believe they feel they can get away from it as a political issue which we as a legislature are confronted with. I am saying that we are asking those persons to become involved in an initiative that would prevent these problems from happening in the future.

I welcome any initiative that would broaden government's involvement in equipping people with the tools to improve their lives, their companies and our country. I believe that the issue of training, more so than the issue of education and schooling which is carried out for a longer period of time separately from the productive institutions, that the issue of training cannot be separated from the issue of rapid growth in a society that is growing so fast and bringing in labour and professionals so fast.

All in all we need to have a strategic plan that will know what the end is, where it is we are going. If we get an idea of the end first, we will be able to put the parts that we need in place. We need to have a government that is capable of getting us where we want to go by cooperating and not by the ministries pulling apart because they have to cater to the egos of the individual ministers. We need to get to the point where we more ably express in unison the challenges we are facing in our society.

I dealt with the hotels and the banks as two institutions that most people identify. Then we had the situation regarding small companies and the fact that most of these companies if they had to train people they would not be able to afford it. But there is no reason why we can't make a distinction between small companies and large companies and there is no reason why government couldn't get involved in trying to support the training of individuals if it was going to be carried out by smaller companies that might be in a financial position as a result of having this as an obligation.

I don't think that government always has to bring legislation to force companies and individuals to do things, but I believe that a strong government with a strong feeling about these issues interacting with the very people who are making decisions on this particular level could cause decisions to be made by showing that it would be good for all, that we would get maximum benefit if these things were done, by breaking down the problem and showing the persons who are a little short-sighted—be they the Caymanian who should desire training or the hotel managers who seem to not want to train Caymanians but make profit instead. Basically, they come here to profit.

We need to have them profit in order for us to get something too. So we can't go in there and do things that will destroy their profit, but we can go in there and try to convince them to work along with us because in working along with them their profits won't only be profits for today but for tomorrow.

I believe we can do this. I believe we rely too much on legislation and not enough on debate and discussions. I believe there are people who believe you bring a motion for everything, and everything has to come through here and pass as if once it comes through here and passes it become reality. I have seen a lot of things that come through here and pass in that's it—it doesn't go any further. There are a lot of things that have not come here that are doing very well, thank you, because people are involved. You have to get people involved. You have to get people to stop criticising and say they are responsible. But to get our people to also accept their part of the responsibility also for something going wrong because when a relationship goes wrong, both parties have some fault.

We have to watch the politics. We have to watch the intentions of certain people to politicise and dramatise everything because they are not willing to go in and dissent the problem and look at how it is all interconnected and understand that you cannot change it just by changing one thing, but you have to change all the things to change the one thing.

The desire of this motion is to set in place an initiative that would allow Caymanians or foreigners, whoever, in these particular jobs to be able to enjoy an improved standard of living and to be more productive to their respective companies. That is the desire. I am for that. But I am not for short-sightedness that doesn't cause people to realise that these problems are societal problems and therefore more complex. It's not mechanical. You can't just have a mechanical solution because you are dealing with human beings, and in dealing with human beings, you are dealing with values and ideals.

As much as there are those who like to ridicule this I say we are beings composed of values and ideas. We live in an idea world—everything is an idea or a result of an idea. Therefore, you can't just take a screwdriver and change the bolts to change anything. You have to change the ideas, the attitudes our people have towards training, towards teaching their children and spending time showing their children how to do little puzzles. When we were young we were already being trained by nailing things and playing with hammers. We were already being trained to work as working-class people to saw wood and to be carpenters and to be builders.

This whole socialisation process is part of the training process. You train people early. You inculcate in them, you socialise them in such a way that they will be able to emulate and imitate. As I said, as fishermen we were going down on the docks and throwing out our little lines in imitating our fathers, who were catching more fish than we were, but we were training ourselves to become fishermen. By playing with the piece of wood we were training ourselves to be carpenters builders. By taking the bus tree and building little boats we were training ourselves to be boat builders. We were training ourselves by cutting tops and twisting how to be all those things. But the fact is, we all believed that everything was so mechanical, that you put this up here and that up there and you have a solution.

The solution has to start from inside. It has to be an internal solution. We have to start in the homes. This is the reason why the after school programmes are great programmes. They are working! We have seen the results. The pre-school programmes are great programmes. They are working; we will have our results. But what we don't want to do is because of certain political misgivings, rush into the situation and create political problems with people and begin to alienate our society in such a way and frustrate our society in such a way because we see a lack here and there.

I believe that we in this country have the opportunity to have access to situations that will teach us to improve ourselves. We have to teach people that in order to get what it is they want they are going to have to work for it. And if they have the equipment to work with in specific jobs they will even be able to get these things even more.

Unfortunately I have, as a sociologist, some negative situations to report. I started a college programme back in 1996 called College Discovery to assist young Caymanians who were not academically inclined but were more athletically inclined to go to college. I was able to get a scholarship for some of these kids from Island Companies and as a result some of the kids went off. Unfortunately, the programme was not successful, as far as I am concerned, in the sense that they were able to pursue that degree. It was very frustrating to me.

In addition to doing that I also had a programme where I was dealing with adult education. I had a tutor who was willing to take mothers, or adults and go through the basic steps in trying to help them to learn to read and write. I was paying them to come to the course. And even paid, Madam Speaker, the programme failed. That doesn't mean this is an example of how people relate to it. But it went to tell me somehow that in a lot of cases, like the minister for education was saying, while we are offering a lot of things at the Community College persons don't want to put the time in there. If they put in any time, they want to put it in for a salary. In this particular case I was giving them some money to come to be able to do this, and they still didn't do it.

That is the reason I say that anybody who is talking about training or opportunities who doesn't realistically see that a lot of our people are quite happy doing what they are doing is making a terrible error.

Mr. Roy Bodden: True!

Dr. Frank McField: We have seen this happen in other places where the government is always going in saying this or that is a problem and that is what the government is here to deal with. But it could be a problem not because of the person you are blaming for creating the problem it could be a problem simply because people think it's okay.

It's funny. What I am saying sounds like I am putting people down, but it's an expression of a social reality that I know. There was a time when I lived a life that everyone thought was weird. But maybe it was what I wanted to do! Or what I had to do. But what I am saying is that the human being is capable of a lot more than we say they should do. In other words, we say that this person should have an education but that person is capable of living without an education. We say that that person should have this particular standard of house, but the person could live without that standard of house. All we have to look at is Yugoslavia today to know that people can actually tolerate a lot more than we would ever credit them for tolerating.

So, when it comes to change and choices, and exercising a choice to go to the Community College and learn something, or stay at home and watch TV, a lot of people will stay at home and watch TV. And we are not a totalitarian state where we can say 'You must go to school!' We must leave it to choice. So even as much as we desire change, we must leave it to choice. As much as we desire training and education, we must leave it to choice. The person has to choose to go to school, to learn to make that extra sacrifice to do these things.

Let us not simplify the issue because of politics. Let us not politicise the issue because of desires to change positions.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town made some remarks yesterday. He created a possibility for us to see that there is no quick fix. There is no quick answer, not even for those of us who assume somehow that we have some kind of training and education because we will be like the dinosaurs if we do not continue to unlearn some things and learn other things. He is talking about the integration of the school with the workplace. He is talking about education for the 21st Century how it will radically change; how there has been so much change in the surgical rooms where operations are performed, but how there has been little change in the classrooms.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has been talking for a long time about the new technology and the fact that people should learn how to use computers. Maybe it's time that we look at the internet and really say something to Cable & Wireless about this restructuring where they are trying to make us believe somehow that they are doing us a great favour when every child, every home in this country should have access to the internet at a better price. Maybe every person should have a computer. Maybe that's the way of approaching it too.

What I am saying is let us not simplify in trying to find political solutions to problems that are not political problems. These problems are problems that are wider on a societal level. We need people who can think these things out involved in governments. We need persons like the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town as education minister. I was very saddened that this young gentleman is still up until now not education minister. And every time I sit down and listen to him, like I sat here and listened to him yesterday (because not everybody was listening), the way in which he put his theories, his concepts together, if you don't pay good attention it will fly over your head. But the flexibility of his ideas, the way in which he speaks with dignity and the way in which he allows knowledge . . . because a lot of times we tease people about that in Cayman, 'Oh look at how he talk, he trying to talk like this or that.'

If we don't learn words, if we don't integrate more and more words, we are not growing because we are living in an idea world. If we only have two or three words we have a smaller world than if we had all the bigger words. So what he does is something he learned a long time ago and it's very useful. He's always learning, learning, and learning. He's reading, reading, and reading. That's a good example. He's a good role model. He's a good education role model.

We need to change the system. We need to put away the political bickering and understand the thing we are trying to change is bigger than personalities, bigger than one discipline, bigger than one degree. It's a big world and we have to learn how to dissect it, pull it apart and put it back together again.

What I believe I have done in regard to this Private Member's Motion is set the stage again for us not to get political about it, for us not to get blamey-blamey about it, but for us to realise how complicated it will be for us to find meaningful solutions to the question of mobility and education and training for our people.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.42 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.30 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion 2/99. Does any other member wish to speak? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Perhaps on a Friday afternoon it is fitting that contributions such as mine not be very long, especially since the mover of the motion and the seconder, and also the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, although some taking different angles to the motion, have all amply explained the need for this training initiative to take place. Needless to say, I am certainly in full support of the motion and I think I can safely say this is one area that I, as a representative, have been talking about for quite some time.

There is no question in my mind that the future of many of our young people is at stake. I think that it is probably fitting to get some kind of perspective as to why this motion has been brought at this time. If we look at education in the Cayman Islands and we track it back for a while we will get to understand that like most other systems in the world our system is such that the results that are forth coming when students pass through our primary and secondary education system, those results always bring about a fear in those of us conscious of the fact about a certain percentage of individuals who pass through the system and actually graduate.

While it is easy at some points in time to separate training specifically in an education system, the truth is that up to a certain point both are actually engaged in a marriage. I think the focus of the motion before us now is not limited just to training initiatives post secondary education, but I think it wants to include in its ambit a situation that we don't wait until after that to talk about training but we look at trying to parallel certain types of training specifically tailored to individuals who may not be that academically inclined if that is proven to be the case while they are going through the system.

We always pay lip service, and every one of us here have said at some point, 'You know, let us make sure that our young people have ample opportunity to be all that they can be.' And we like to sing that song. But I wonder how many of us really think about it and realise that it is not something that will happen just by our saying it. This is what this motion is all about.

I wish to take a slightly new twist for the short time I will be speaking on this motion, and I want us to see if we can focus on the realities of the lack of training in our society as it exists and what the negative impacts on society are. Let us look at some performance indicators when it comes to the quality of our education system and whatever training might be deemed necessary as part and parcel of that or complementary to that system.

Let us take our Social Services Department for instance. And without being specific with figures and quantities and all of that it is obvious every year at budget time that in that department there is a growing demand from within society for financial resources by way of assistance to people, and not just the old and indigent. There is also a continuously greater demand for the skilled professionals in that area, the counsellors, and the other social workers. Our population is not growing in leaps and bounds from the indigenous side to the tune where it equates with the increasing demand in that area. That, in itself is a signal that what we are producing in our society is not quite up to par with what we would like it to be.

Let us look at crime. They can doctor the figures all they want but it is obvious to us that as time passes certain types of crimes are on the increase. One can easily say, 'Well, that's the price you pay for development in your country.' If you want to just pass it off like that, fine. But if we are to examine the great proportion of reasons why there is that increase in crime it is because at some levels we are producing children who pass through our system and who are not equipped, or tooled, when they go through that system to find their own niche in the society. That is what is happening to us.

This is also a topic that most people don't want to think about because they think it doesn't exist. But if we were to seriously check the amount of illiteracy in our country it would shock us to know that with all of the wherewithal we have, that we have those numbers. Even stepping up a little bit, let us call them semi-literate. People might not want to hear this either but there are people who pass through our primary and secondary education system and when they get a certificate that they have graduated they can barely read and write. That is not to castigate the system, but it just shows the inadequacies.

If we look at all of us in here who have school age children, I think we can all say 'Thank God my children are doing well in school.' The system allows for children like ours to blossom as they go through primary and secondary education. It also allows for many of them to be properly equipped to move on to tertiary education. But it's like a water filter, if you have some dirt in the water when it passes through that system you have pure water running. What we have in our system now is no safety net to make sure that all the impurities are taken out. This is where this training will fill that gap.

The other thing I wish to speak about is that it is all well and good for us to boast about our exam results every year, percentage-wise, getting better and better. That is fine. I have talked about misery loving company on many occasions. Those who don't make the cut, we don't have any thing in place to tool them to train them, this is where the gap is.

What I detest (and I really mean detest) is when I hear people spouting their mouths off talking about all of the good. I know we need to talk about that, but let us not hide our heads in the sand and keep talking about that good because it is difficult to address what is not good. That's what this motion is about: addressing what is not good and find the ways and means to correct it. That's what this motion is about.

We could look at each of our lives on an individual basis. And we can say that at such and such an age we did such and such; we provided for our children, we have our own homes and all of that. We can fool ourselves into being content that that has been enough effort expended in our lives in order to satisfy ourselves. But it goes beyond that. Every one of us has a responsibility to our fellow man to truly ensure that he or she has an opportunity to be what he or she can be, not just to sound good about it but to make sure that it happens. That is what good citizenship is all about.

Unfortunately for too many of us we get caught up in our own selfish ways, with our own individual lives and we don't remember that not everyone has the same opportunity we have had. We need to stop and think about that.

We talk about the fact that the way our economy is growing the labour demands are such that we have over employment and we have to bring in a lot of foreign labour. That is a fact. But here is where we are missing the boat. We still have (and this is something that I have to argue with everyone about) a noticeable number of people in this country who are Caymanian without a job. What I disagree with people saying, because it's easy to get up and say that if anyone here wants a job and they are willing to do it they can get a job, that sounds good but it doesn't work like that. There are a noticeable number of us in this country who are not tooled or equipped to compete with the job market to find a job. It is a fact. We see them daily right in the foyer.

Mr. Roy Bodden: True!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: They come to every one of us.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: We would like to get them a job, but by the time you talk to them for five minutes you realise it's going to be a real serious uphill task because they are not equipped. And you cannot make one conversation that you have with them and figure that's going to cure it and give them a sense of direction so they know what to do. It's not going to happen like that. I am not saying it's easy, but I don't know that it's the case where we must lay down and play dead. That's what will ruin this society.

I believe that if this society is going to succeed we can talk about all the tourism statistics, we can talk about all of the glorious things we have succeeded in in our financial industry and we can talk about the per capita income compared to other Caribbean territories and for that matter other Caribbean territories all over the world and boast about that, but we are to the point now where to allow euphoria to set in and to live the rest of our lives leaning on that supposed success we have achieved will be our downfall.

For too long things like what we are talking about now have been pushed aside because we figure it can stay a little bit longer, that's not so bad yet. Do you ever notice when you get a sore and you leave it alone, it's not so bad yet, and you don't deal with it in the proper way? Then by the time you really go to deal with it it's gotten too bad and sometimes you have to cut off a leg or something like that. That's the way we have been known to be thinking. That's what we have to stop.

I want to challenge the Minister for Education to go through an exercise. I am sure the message will get to him, and this is no argument with anyone. But I don't think it has ever been done. If we really want to prove a point that we do have some kind of problem in our system let us take the graduating class for 1999 at the John Gray High School. I am sure the information is available. Let us have that entire graduating class listed and by whatever means are available to government six months form graduation let us revisit those individuals and have proper records of where they are six months later—who has gone on to college, who is working at the Royal Bank of Canada, who has a job at the post office and so on. Let us see when we get those results if every one of them are employed and what number of them are not. Take a look at those who are not employed and examine them and see why they are not employed.

That is a challenge simply because that is the best exercise the government could go through right now to have a hand on exactly where we are. I am sure that's as good an example as we can get throughout our education system, including the private schools because I for one do not believe that the public education system is by any means inferior to the private education system in this country. Not for one minute. I really hope he will take up the challenge and do that because that will at least show us people like me who have these great fears whether those fears are unfounded or not. I am not wanting to see a certain result from it, I just wish to see what is the truth.

When the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, in his very capable fashion, made his contribution to this debate about training, he spoke about several new initiatives which have not ever been looked at, I don't think, in the Cayman Islands. He alluded to the importance of a marriage between the private sector and the public sector when it comes to training our people.

I need to digress here for just a minute. I noticed when the Minister for Education was doing what he was doing about the motion, he mentioned this manpower survey and he mentioned 80% of the employers employing less than ten people and that being the majority of the workforce and the businesses in the country so there lies the difficulty in having on-the-job training. I hear what he is saying. But we are at the point now where we cannot continue to be orthodox and pull from the old textbooks and hear what people have been doing all these years in the past. If all of that were right, we wouldn't have the problems now. We have to be innovative.

The marriage I talk about when I talk about the public and private sector is not going to make any sense to simply go to the Immigration Board, as has been tried unsuccessfully in the past and it is now known cannot work, and say . . . let us say one of these employers who employs less than ten people and they need two work permits out of eight employees. It makes no sense for the Immigration Board to write them back and say 'Okay, we are going to issue this permit for you now, but we want to ensure that you have a Caymanian in training and make sure that either by one year or two year's time you don't have to apply for this work permit again and the person is trained.' We understand. I live it myself and I know that it's not physically possible. But because that is not possible, and because that is 80% of the businesses in this country doesn't mean that something can't work. It just means that doing it that way can't work.

The marriage I talk about is something I will explain now. If we really want to be effective and we have the will to do what we should do. One of the first things we need to determine, and not by sitting down in the common room spouting off our mouths to each other, but by finding out the facts. We need to find out what the employers of this country need in the line of employees. We need to be able to categorise exactly what they need a person trained for. I know that you will not be able to do it to the exact level. But there are enough generalisations in employment to where there are many basic toolings that can occur that will give the person the ability to fine tune themselves on the job after this is done.

We know that by nature, employers are not minded to go through the costs, and some can't afford to go through the cost of having two people to do one job just to train the second person. We understand that. But that is why you have collective efforts at some times. That is why you don't have one insurance company insuring one person. Similar reasoning. This is where we need to be looking. We need to create a situation where the employers of this country can see first hand the benefits of participating either by way of a financial participation or by way of actual on the job training, because some of them can, or by whatever other means devised. But the employers must see the benefits of doing that, and there are many benefits.

If no one gets a move on and starts to push this thing it's just going to remain as it has been all along. This is what I believe the mover and seconder are all about in bringing the motion. We need them to recognise that it's a win-win situation all around. You get certain, I want to say idiosyncrasies but syndromes might work. You know I am not that good, but I guess people will understand what I am saying. You get this thing where people, Caymanians, say 'Look at the hotels. They don't want us to work there, they want the foreigners to work there because they don't like us they like the foreigners.'

Let me tell you something. This is my land! This is mine. I welcome anything that is good for my land. It's just like the body, if you take too much of anything that's not good for you, you are going to get in trouble. I don't care who or what it is, our situation must be a situation that we are in control of. I don't care what anybody says. It doesn't mean that all of us can't coexist. But some of the times this thought is not real and sometimes it is.

When we look at work permits, over the years because so many of our people who have been demanding jobs have gotten jobs and they are not equipped to do the jobs there is another thought on the employers part. The thought is that there are many Caymanians who do specific tasks but they do them to an inferior quality than if the people are allowed to get a work permit. Some of that is true and some is also not true.

When we look at the whole picture, and I am talking about work permits, no one can convince me that if a large establishment, a hotel for instance (because I don't want to get into training that involves three or four years of higher schooling), and let us say they have to employ 50 people on work permits, depending upon the category of employment and whether they have to find accommodation for these people, depending upon what other perks they have to attract these people with to come to the Cayman Islands to work, for that quantity of work permits I don't care what prejudice in the world exists no one can convince me that if we have our Caymanians trained for the vast majority, if not all of those 50 posts, it doesn't make sense that the company would rather bring the work permits in. No one can convince me.

If you add all of the dollars and cents up, over a period of a year you are talking of hundreds of thousands of dollars. And when you talk about over employment, I have my own ideas subject to anyone taking me on, but I have a real difficulty with this over employment business. Let me explain. If the Caymanian workforce is 10,000 strong and the foreign labour workforce is 12,000 or 14,000 strong and you were able to calculate the income of the vast majority of the Caymanian workforce not classed in the professional skilled level, compared to the earning power of the foreign labour workforce, I am here to tell anyone that the foreigners will earn more than the Caymanians, not because they are foreigners but because the people who employ them employ them because they are tooled to do the job. That's where our problem is!

If we want to talk about having to bring in foreigners, we need to not . . . you see, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town brought up a very important point when he mentioned the attitude of our own people and it's like wherever they are allowed to fit in they kind of cool out, they relax and are happy with that. That's the kind of stuff we need to change, and it can be changed. I know it's difficult, but it can be changed. We need our people to want to rise to the challenge. We need for them to be tooled and better equipped so that they can get the better jobs. Then you won't have so much 'us and them.' That's what causes 'us and them' now; it's an inherent jealousy because Caymanians, rightly so to a point, believe that this is their land and they must reap some of the benefits. Of course, they need to understand that they must have the ability to do so, not just the mind, not just the will, but the ability. That's where training comes in.

Needless to say, I honestly believe that there are innovative ways and means to make a dent into this thing we are talking about. I believe that we can reap good results in time. I know it's not something we can talk about today and by tomorrow it will be cured. I know that. But the longer we talk about it and do nothing, the longer it will take for anything to happen.

I want to do the best I can, Madam Speaker. The very best I can to deal with the issue and leave it at that. But sometimes it grieves me when I see how big hard-back sensitive people who are supposed to understand these kinds of things, and who are supposed to deal with them in the right fashion spend so much time acquitting themselves, ensuring that when they stand up and speak that they say the right things to make sure they are not faulted for something. What a pile of hog-wash! I am not going to go too far with it. Don't worry.

Here we are talking about something as important as anything else in the world for us as a country. And when government is going to reply, the only sensible thing said was that they were going to accept the motion, but they spent an hour and one half trying to ensure who was not to blame and who was to blame and who is incompetent and who can speak better than the other one . . . Madam Speaker, I am different. The Minister for Education means nothing to me. It's his post that's important. I want him and everyone else in the government to understand that we as representatives expect them to do what the post demands. That's what it is all about.

I truly don't want any fighting. I know it might sound strange because sometimes it seems that I do. But deep down I really don't. But stuff like this is important. This is no time for foolishness. That game that he played when he was a kid, he still likes to play. So I guess we will have to see what happens.

When we look at this motion there are many other areas I could cover, but I truly believe there are some good ideas that can be forthcoming from the members of the backbench—all of them. And I do believe that the members on the backbench are committed to seeing something done, otherwise the motion would not have come. I also believe that it is fair comment to say that when you see motions like this coming from the backbench not only is it meant to call attention to a certain topic, but what it is saying is 'This is a responsibility of the government and we do not see any action. Here we are, we will help. Will you please pick it up and run with it?'

Mr. Roy Boddin: True!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: If it's a little to heavy to run with, then maybe they can walk with it. We'll help them! That's all right. But they don't believe that because they figure that we spend our time on this backbench conniving amongst ourselves to make sure we get their jobs. I couldn't give . . . I couldn't care less about their jobs. I want to see results.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Yes!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I want to see results!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: When the time comes to fight about the job, we'll do that too. But this is not the time for that!

They will come back tomorrow and say the same thing. But you know what? They don't act it out. That's what!

Madam Speaker, this motion is calling for action. If government is not in a position to move forward, I stand here this evening to tell you, Madam Speaker, the government and this country that the backbench has the wherewithal to get it going. We are even prepared to help them and let them take the praise. That doesn't matter. We want to see results because the future of the country is at stake.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Precisely.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: There is nothing so senseless as becoming more efficient at doing the wrong thing!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Tell them!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Anyway, Madam Speaker, I think I have said enough regarding the motion. In summary, I am simply supporting the motion. I am neither the mover nor the seconder and they have both acquitted themselves quite well. I am sure in his winding up the mover will explain everything. But the point I really wish to re-emphasise and reiterate is that this issue is a very important issue.

We talk about the disparity of the wealth distribution in the country. That's where our social problems are coming from. We have too many of our Caymanians who are not tooled properly and their earning power is not where it should be. That is what it is all about. Training equates to earning power and that's what we want our people to be into.

We don't want them to be waiting fifteen years before they can get a house mortgage. We want them to have the ability to move in there and fit like everyone else. The tension would ease, you know. That's what a lot of people really don't understand. We are talking about social problems and this thing and that thing. Those are real problems. But if we have our people well placed and well positioned, earning decent salaries we will find better homes, we will find husband and wife staying together more, we will find children being better cared for . . . everything will be better.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: So all of this is why this motion is here. I just hope the government will react accordingly. Utilise the knowledge on this side because we are ready for it.

I will wait to see the results and I certainly commend the motion.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does the mover of the motion wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, thank you.

I wish to say thanks to all members on this side who spoke in this debate and those who by not speaking still give their support. I would not have needed to say too much in this part of the debate because some very good ideas have come across from members of this side. I would not have needed to speak especially after the contributions of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the First Elected Member for George Town because they were right on target. In fact, I know that the member for Bodden Town can put it much better than I could. I hope that the offers of assistance made from this side to the Minister for Education will be taken up.

The purpose of the motion is to get government into action on the very important matter of training. It has nothing to do with politics. I really thought that I had introduced the motion in a very high level of debate. The motion is here before us because after I resigned from Executive Council in November 1997 until today I don't think anything was done by the Minister for Education and the Minister for Community Affairs with the plans we put in place. Seventeen months have gone by and the Minister for Education has the audacity, even the temerity, to come here and point his finger and try to make me a scapegoat one more time.

I wonder when is that Minister and his cohort, the Minister for Tourism, going to stop trying to put blame on others for things that they should have assisted in, or things that they did everything they could to stop. The Minister for Education has certainly laid blame on me for, as he said, getting nothing done. He posed the question, What did I do in five years? Blame has been laid on me for a lot of things, even things I knew nothing of. I guess that will continue for a lot longer because it is true, and I believe this is the situation with the Minister for Education, that when you don't have anything constructive to offer you try to shift the focus of the debate and lay blame on somebody. And that has been his tactic all the while. That seems to be a great part of his training and his expertise!

I recognise today, as I recognised when I was in Executive Council, that action must be taken to get something done. It's not easy. I never said it was. If it were easy I would have gotten everything done. As I said, seventeen months have gone by since I was in Executive Council. We tabled this motion in October of last year. That's some six months ago. Do you mean to tell me that the Minister for Education couldn't have come here yesterday with something more tangible than to point his finger at me and say "you are to blame"? Using this word "blame" I looked through his short contribution on some two pages and in those two pages he used the words "The First Elected Member for West Bay is to blame" twelve times!

Now, after seventeen months you mean to tell me he couldn't have come here with something other than to low rate me and lay blame on somebody else? If the Minister for Education had the interest or the welfare of the people of these islands, students and workers, present and of the future, . . . the Minister of Education and the Minister of Tourism would have come to this debate on this motion with a clear set of guidelines or plans or ideas as to what needs to be done. But as we all can see, one coaches the other when they are debating, but neither of the two have any interest in training Caymanians so they come here to point their fingers and lay blame on somebody else.

Well, I say to that sorry pair: blame me if you will, but for God's sake do something now! Do something! This is what the motion is all about, forcing government to put in place before work and workplace training strategies.

The Minister responsible for Education with the coaching of the Minister for Tourism has asked me to show what I accomplished in five years. He said nothing was accomplished. Well, let me begin since, Madam Speaker, it seems it is left to me to remind him and others what was accomplished. I am not saying that we had the cure all, but nobody can really say that I didn't attempt to get something done. But of course, the Minister for Education said that.

First of all, having accepted the policy of training we referred the matter to an advisory committee to fully examine this issue and to propose recommendations. In collaboration with the private sector and the public in general the Manpower Advisory Committee comprising 20 members representing a broad cross section of knowledge and expertise from the private and public sectors was appointed in July 1994. And it was provided with broad terms of reference to guide its deliberation. The Minister for Tourism was the deputy chairman of that committee, but he didn't attend but one meeting—one, single, solitary meeting, the first official meeting of that committee. And he was busy with tourism. He was busy with a lot of things. The truth has to be said and I am saying so.

ExCo did not accept the report, but agreed to table certain parts of the document. This honourable House was kept abreast of the progress on the committee's work. Members here now, who were here then, will recall that in September 1995 I tabled a document which outlined those recommendations in the report which government accepted. I will get to that report, but I want to continue with this and I want to put in sequence what was accomplished and why certain things were to be accomplished.

Having done that, I think we can all place our minds back to the mindset back in 1995 during the debate and the upheaval and the controversy on the Labour Amendments, I think we all remember that, and the role the Chamber of Commerce played in it. Unfortunately, there was some delay in the implementation of the long overdue initiative due to opposition from some quarters of the private sector, particularly the Chamber of Commerce who viewed government's role in this matter as interference and who seemed to be satisfied with the status quo at the time. I think positions have changed with the Chamber of Commerce and I am glad it has. I don't know all about what they are doing but it seems they are not as militant as they were.

Despite the setback my Ministry and the Department of Human Resources coordinated the implementation of some of the existing initiatives as resources allowed. And we do know that other items were underway. We know that a discussion draft of an outlined proposal for an apprenticeship scheme was developed by the ministry. The Governor-in-Council, of which the Minister for Education was a part and still is, gave approval for this discussion draft to be distributed to the education sector as well as all other associations in the private sector. My ministry then, and the Department of Human Resources launched a scheme for the job placement and reintegration of suitable Caymanian ex-prisoners. You know that that was all part and parcel of the plan. It was not the be all and end all, it was just part of it.

We created the guaranteed student loan scheme and for the years 1993 until August of 1996 there were 183 student loans approved for a value of over $3 million made available through the Agricultural Industrial Development Board which operated under my Ministry and also through the guaranteed student loan scheme which was launched in August 1995, and has proven its worth (if I say so myself) as an effective tool in human resource development.

We set plans in place to further assist students when they came out of college with their loans they got through the guaranteed student loan scheme. I recognised that they would come out to face a big loan from the scheme even before they started to work. That was all in the report on page 12—not a part that was accepted by government, mind you. Not one of those parts accepted by government.

This is what the report said, "In regard to the guaranteed student loan scheme this should be coordinated with the manpower development and training policy strategy, particularly employers who are arranging for the Caymanian worker or apprentice to further his education through the government student loan scheme should be responsible for the percentage of the employee's student loan repayment with appropriate bonding arrangements being optional as what the employer and employee wanted as employer would be reaping the benefits of that employee's knowledge and skill. This kind of cost sharing is being adopted through the Caribbean and elsewhere in recognition of the need to invest more in training without burdening the student with a heavy debt burden upon graduation."

Additionally, they recommended that employers be required to invest in training for every three to five permits he has. This investment would be in the form of a scholarship contribution into the training super fund or subsidising the students or employees participation in a loan or a grant scheme. This was part and parcel of what the report had—not what government accepted and allowed me to put out in this House. So that was another thing we were working on and had hoped to have accomplished.

We created the sports scholarship. We created the cultural scholarship. We also set in place educational grants to young persons involved in sports who could not get scholarships or qualify under the government rules and regulations of the Education Council, but who could get into a community college or other college, who would start off and then when they brought themselves up they would then enter another university. These were grants that the Ministry put in place to help these young people.

[Please note: Tape 175 not clear and there are some word problems/Janet]

I want them to come back and say how many they have done since I left. Do you know that they did? They tried to scuttle it. Some of those students still [?] their money and he comes here talking rubbish about I haven't done anything and show something more tangible. I wonder where the Minister for Education was all the while. Do you know what he was doing? Playing Chief Minister with the Governor! That's what he was doing!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Tell the House about it! Yes!

Mr. W McKeever Bush: And playing Attorney General. You got to go tee-tee now?

Madam Speaker, I can go on to say that we emphasised the need for a more structured approach to human resource development in these islands. And there have been more interest and offering of scholarship grants instead of [?] and I wish to commend those individuals and businesses which have been proactive and consistent in regard to the human resource development of their employees and other scholars in our community because there are those who do their part and we must recognise it and say thanks.

We strongly appeal to all employers to ensure that if at all possible their employees are given reasonable time off to take full advantage of the lectures or tutorials, programmes and examinations offered at the Community College. And we urge that there be increased dialogue between industry as the users of the out-turn from the college and the college as the provider. More dialogue so that the college is meeting the needs of industry in terms of courses and programmes and that the graduates be adequately prepared to carry out the duties which are required by industry. That is what we did. I don't know if the Minister of Education took the opportunity of that support, or whether he paid attention and was aware. As I said, he couldn't pay attention because he was too busy being the Chief Minister.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I take a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Deputy Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The point of order is that the member is misleading the House. This country has no Chief Minister. He said that I was out there too busy acting as Chief Minister or words to that effect. I wish he'd desist of that.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: He did not say that!

Mr. Roy Bodden: He said you were playing Chief Minister!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Same thing!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Is not!

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, I do not see that as a Point of Order but I would ask the Member speaking to use those words as little as possible please.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: Yes, Madam Speaker. I knew he would get up soon.

No, we don't have a Chief Minister, but we have some people who believe they are, and the Governor believed he was too, and he is still acting that role!

Let me go on with what we tried to accomplish and what we actually got done. I believe that with the right partnership between the private and the public sector it was possible to achieve very high standards in education and training in these islands. I still believe that.

"Caymanians have the ability and desire to advance in education as well as in their careers; there has to be a shared responsibility to see that equal opportunity is afforded to Caymanians." That is what I was trying to accomplish when I was sabotaged. Investment in the human resources of a country is definitely a great investment. In a service economy . . . I think the First Elected Member for George Town was talking about this. In a service economy such as we have, we have to recognise that investment will cause the value of all goods and services to compete in the global marketplace that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town was talking about through increased productivity and efficiency of our human resources.

I believed then and I believe now that the way forward must be based on a partnership with close communication and appreciation of each other's efforts and expectations—what the employer expects, what they put out for the country, what our people expect.

We did some restructuring of the Department of Human Resources so that it can be more effectively developed and encourage policies and initiatives with the private sector and use outside experience as necessary. We said then, and it is still not done! I said in my debate that the career development was not what it should be, the career counselling aspect of education. We thought we could amalgamate that with the training scheme but we realised the fight we had on our hands so the Minister for Education . . . and perhaps that is more education and not training because I differ from the Fourth Elected Member for George Town who seems to feel that education and training have to go together. I don't think so.

Any way, we felt that a comprehensive career counselling needed to take place. We pointed that out to the Minister. But still, children in his schools are still taking courses that are not compatible with the higher education or career path they want to be on. That's where the minister is failing. Children taking courses who can't do a doctorate, can't be a medical doctor taking other courses and can't do accounting but want to do it. This is what he needs to be busy with. Coordination needs to be at all levels, secondary, post secondary and on the job training.

Even some of those things, I believe there was a lot left to be done. We then had to move ahead. That took me up until 1996.

The Deputy Speaker: Would this be a convenient point to take the afternoon break?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I can continue. I don't need a break. I don't know about the rest of the House.

The Deputy Speaker: Is it the wish of the House that we continue without a break, seeing that we arrived fifteen minutes late on our return after lunch?

Honourable member, please continue.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you for your indulgence, Madam Speaker. You are most kind as is the House.

All these efforts took me up until 1996. In 1996 Executive Council told me that the training initiative had to be a joint one between education and community development. They can't deny that because they went forward and put it in the 1996 Manifesto. That was to keep an eye out on me and keep me under control.

I can say that the permanent secretary of education showed a lot of interest. She knew and recognised that something needed to be done. But we had to fight the minister who was doing his best to ensure that things did not go any further.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Deputy Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The member is misleading the House when he says that he had to fight me in relation to keeping things going further in relation to education. It is untrue.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member, I do agree with the minister unless you can give an explanation as to what your 'fight' entailed.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Well, Madam Speaker, I use 'fight' broadly. I will withdraw it for now, but I will come back to it when I get to the point where I really want to prove his . . . a—

Mr. Roy Bodden: [inaudible]

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Yes, that's good word.
How ungenerous he is. I will come back to it.

In early 1997 we started to put things together to get actual plans in place to begin to deal with the private sector companies. This is where the Minister for Education got jittery because he didn't want me to be dealing with them alone. He thought—and he still thinks—that that is his sole purview. Nevertheless we plowed ahead and we appointed a committee chaired by Mr. Brian Hunter who we all know is a very capable young Caymanian.

We agreed to get someone from the Commonwealth Secretariat to assist in implementing the recommendations and to work with the committee. There was some stalling with that too. I couldn't find out where the opposition was coming from against my ministry dealing with the Commonwealth Secretariat.

The Minister for Education made some nasty remark about me wasting $10,000 to go to Singapore. Well, let me get to that one. I don't think that we wasted any money. We tried to save. When we went abroad you didn't see us in big limousines. Sometimes my permanent secretary and I shared rooms to save the government funds. In the meantime the permanent secretary of education and my permanent secretary decided that it would be good to look at a progressive country training system so as not to have to reinvent the wheel, so to speak; a fact-finding trip, if you will.

The two ministries arranged the Singapore trip. Singapore was chosen, but the Minister for Education said he couldn't go. I remember quite clearly the Governor objecting to the two ministries going because he was told by someone that nothing was done, so why go to Singapore. He wasn't informed of the report. He wasn't informed of ExCo's acceptance of some of the recommendations. He wasn't even informed about the involvement of the Commonwealth Secretariat although there should have been things on file because Mr. Gore had knowledge and had certain correspondence.

Anyway, when I told the Governor of all the work done so far he changed his mind and said it was a good idea. However, some people were determined to stop the progress being made one way or the other. And while I was away the First Cayman Bank matter reached a point and the government closed the bank while I was in Singapore. When I got back to the country everyone knows what took place. The whole thing came down on me like I had caused the bank to collapse and so the National Team asked me to resign.

That was assisted by the government's statement. But one of these days that too will be made clear!

As I said earlier, Mr. Hunter, a young intelligent qualified lawyer was the chairman. They didn't even call him to continue the work because they were not interested in training Caymanians. There was no official correspondence, not even an answer to Mr. Hunter's letter to the minister. He wrote to her twice after she took over trying to get confirmation that she was in agreement with the programme. He did meet Mr. Bainbridge only on an introductory basis. He never had any discussion whatsoever about the programme. That was not the basis on which they met him. The minister didn't even answer him, yet the Minister of Education came here yesterday saying we can't blame him, blame McKeeva. Well go ahead and blame me, but I say again: do something!

Now, the gentleman from the Commonwealth Secretariat arrived here in January of 1998. That was on what I had put in place. We had sent an invitation and asked for assistance to the Commonwealth Secretariat. We had confirmation of another gentleman who somehow had to pull back his agreement and they had to wait a little while and Mr. Terry Bainbridge came. He arrived here in January of 1998. The Minister for Education wasn't even generous enough to say yesterday that it wasn't him (or her) that did that, you know. No, no, no, blame McKeeva, he didn't get things done; he didn't do anything.

He came here in 1998 and they didn't put him with Mr. Hunter and his committee, which we left in place, where he should have gone to start implementation of the plans. They sent him down to the labour office. However, in September of 1998 that gentleman, Mr. Terry Bainbridge of the Commonwealth Secretariat, who we got to come here and assist with the implementation of the report, was sent back to the Ministry of Education until today.

Isn't it funny? You heard him constantly interrupting me in the Throne Speech debate saying he didn't get training until two months ago. You all remember that? I am sure you do. I think the Caymanian Compass quoted it. Well then, if that is so, what was Mr. Bainbridge doing in his ministry from September 1998? Counting cockroaches? Or counting ticks? Or doing Vision 2008?

You see, Madam Speaker, I happen to know that Mr. Bainbridge is in Vision 2008 on the planning team and on the education roundtable, and that he is now involved in restructuring the department of education. This is information that I got from the Minister for Education. Why try to make the House believe that they didn't have training? What then was Mr. Bainbridge sent to his office to do? If Mr. Bainbridge came here to do training, but the Minister for Education didn't get training until February, why was Mr. Bainbridge in the Ministry of Education? Why? Oh what tangled webs we weave when we first practice to deceive.

They will have to act because of the motion—

The Deputy Speaker: Madam Speaker, I take a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Deputy Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The member is saying that I am deceiving. Now he must show where I am deceiving and I would like to answer that. That's a very serious allegation.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Minister, that was not what I gathered, that it was the you who was deceiving. I did not gather that from what he said.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I accept that, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

When I was the minister I took my licks. If something happened, I had to take responsibility because I was told the buck stops with you, you're the minister. I want to know who knew where training was. Then what was Mr. Bainbridge doing in the ministry of education if he came here to do training? But the Minister of Education didn't get training until February, but Mr. Bainbridge was there from September last year.

Training was locked up in the Governor's office.

I was appalled that the Minister for Education would stand on the floor of this House to say that the report of the manpower advisory committee was flawed because it didn't take cognisance of small companies. In my introduction of the motion, didn't you hear me say that the reports recommendation said, and I quote again "A unit of Government should be charge with ensuring that every employer has in place a training programme that is appropriate for its size and profitability." Didn't you hear me say that? I sure did.

Then I explained that the committee was cognisant that a small company of four couldn't be expected to train five people. How can he mislead the House and the public so when the report is clear about companies of a certain size?

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am taking a point of order. He is saying that I am misleading the House and the public. That is not correct. I have misled nobody. I would like him to withdraw it or point to where in my speech the misleading part is.

The Deputy Speaker: Unless you can point to the particular statement in the Minister's speech, I ask you to withdraw the statement.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: It's in the Minister's speech. And I have some of his speech. He said, let me quote him exactly, "I think the 1996 Manpower Report quite effectively deals with the large businesses but it is impractical to small businesses both from how much resources, how much they can spend and also how much time can be taken out." [15 April 1999]

If he said that, and this is the Hansard. And the report says on page 4 was that "we need to encourage in all businesses above a certain size is the development of clear and consistent written policies in training, promotions, career paths." And on page 15 it says, "Firms and/or businesses with more than four employees, and/or with 50% or more work permits would be subject to the policies including assessment and monitoring prescribed in a law."

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable member, in reading those words I don't think it was the intention of the honourable minister to mislead the House or the public. So I would ask if you would withdraw.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I guess I will have to withdraw it. But it shows that he did not know what was in that report when they didn't want it put out.

There are a few recommendations on page 15 of the report which I am going to read. But I had specifically asked Governor Gore that I not be responsible for that particular aspect, that I was not willing to take on that . . . that is work permits, even though at least one member of my staff felt that this set up should be put in place as soon as possible.

The acting First Official Member here today can verify that I had long discussions with him on that recommendation. He can also verify that I told him that I was not willing to take up that responsibility, that I felt it was an objective for the future but not with immediate effect. I am going to read what it says because the Minister for Education went on yesterday to say that if the public had known of certain things, . . . words to the effect that it would make people think that there was a lot of things wrong with this. You know, like something bad was attempting to be done. I am going to read page 19, and it is captioned "Manpower Development, Human Resources and Training Board."

"As referred to in the proposed law, part A of this section, it is recommended that a new board be established as an integral part of this strategy. It is recommended that the existing Immigration Board be split into three boards, 1) Work Permits and Training Board; 2) Trade and Business Licensing Board; 3) Immigration Residency Board.

"The Committee concurs that the present system is no longer adequate to articulate and enforce Cayman's manpower development and training efforts for the 1990s and beyond. It is almost impossible for the present system to efficiently handle the volume of business—grants and renewal of permits, business licenses, status, residency—and carry out the very important functions of business growth as well as ensuring proper manpower development and training of Caymanians as it relates to work permits.

"It is unrealistic to expect that the board with such a small staff to effectively deal with the current volume of business workload especially with the growth of complicated issues in this day and age as opposed to what may have been practical ten to twenty years ago.

"The new proposed board will comprise of the following: Chairman and deputy, secretary, up to eight other persons of major industries." It said that the chairman would be a full time person, that the deputy chairman would be a volunteer or appointed, the secretary would be a full time person and the eight persons representing a cross section of major industries.

That was the feelings of those twenty persons about the situation. But I say to the Governor, and I said to the acting First Official Member that I didn't want any part to do with work permits. I had enough problems dealing with labour issues as such and be sabotaged from that point. If I had to take that kind of responsibility they would have really cut my throat!

The Minister of Education said that I did nothing tangible in five years. It must be remembered that I developed the Cayman Training Initiative, but I went from district to district including the Brac. While only, as he said, under ten persons took up the courses at the Community College, at least that was that many more who were well trained. It was that many more Caymanians and long term residents (because we opened it up to long term residents) who are well trained.

Now, if I had the funds I probably would have gotten more done. But it gets me to sit over here watching the Minister of Tourism coach the Minister of Education when that Minister of Tourism was deputy chairman of the committee and he at one time had over $300,000 to do Tourism development. What kind of training did he do? And to get up on a point of order, tell him to search the 1996 Budget—$300,000! And ask him what kind of training the Caymanians got out of that $300,000.

I had to rob Peter to pay Paul in my ministry to get that Cayman Training Initiative started. I went to all the districts, including Cayman Brac. We even had a motivational speaker. And do you know why we started? There was some questioning as to why we started in the tourism industry. We felt that interest in the hospitality business had been waning for a long time. Ever since the 1970s with the influx of international business it's been that way. Careers in that area are still considered to be, what's the word? And, we felt that the hospitality industry and international business rely on each other.

One of the attractions of setting up here was the fact that people could take their clients to good restaurants, stay in good hotels, use a good taxi service and a lot of these people returned with families. So we said let's get people trained in this because one complemented the other, the hospitality business complemented the international business. So how can the Minister for Education get up here and say that I did nothing tangible? He could get up there and say that because he believes that by his saying so he convinces everybody. But he is fooling himself and he is fooling no other person because not even members of this House who want to be forthright can agree with him—not even the Minister for Tourism who coaches him can get up here and say that I didn't do anything!

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Yeah, you're the coach. You're doing pretty good coaching the minister for education, that's when the two of you are not cutting each other's throats you know! Or stabbing one another in the back.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, could we get back to the item before us now, and not talk across the floor?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Now just let them behave themselves over there, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: I would ask all members to desist from talking across the floor.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

I wanted the Minister for Education to remain here because this is one point that I am going to say to him that he misled the House. He rose on a point of order and I have to deal with it.

The Minister for Education talked about . . . I proved already where he misled the House one time by talking about the companies, or he didn't read the report, one of the two. But the fact that he said that we wasted government's money and go nothing done by going to Singapore, I want to tell this House what we got done.

When we went to Singapore we looked at every training facility they had. And, Madam Speaker, that small country is well equipped and Cayman would do good, . . . instead of looking at New Zealand Cayman would do good to look at how Singapore has done business. I believe that. I am not throwing cold water on anyone's efforts with New Zealand, I am saying that because they are so small and the way they have developed is a good example of what we should be doing.

But when we returned sometime in late October and my permanent secretary, Mr. Carson Ebanks, received this invitation from the government of Singapore, "Singapore Cooperation Programme, Courses for Singapore, Technical Assistance for Sustainable Development" in 1998.

Madam Speaker, he shouldn't leave because I am going to tell you that he misled this House. But he runs!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Don't worry about it.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: He runs.

Madam Speaker, let me read that correspondence. It is addressed to: Mr. Carson Ebanks, Permanent Secretary, Ministry of Community Development, Sports, Women's Affairs, Youth and Culture, Government Administration Building, Grand Cayman, Cayman Islands, Fax (345)949-3896:

"Dear Mr. Ebanks: On June 1997 Singapore's Prime Minister, Mr. Tung, announced at the 19th Special Session of the United Nations General Assembly that Singapore would offer a technical assistance programme for sustainable development which would train officials in developing countries in areas such as urban planning, park management, transport management, and other relevant areas. We are pleased to invite your government to nominate participants for six courses to be implemented in 1998. Please nominate one suitable qualified candidate and a reserve candidate to participate in each of the six courses. Under the Singapore Cooperation Programme co-payment principle, Singapore will bear the cost of accommodation, training fees and per diem while the nominating county will bear the airfare."

Now, let me read to you what those courses were and I believe still are: 1) Water and waste engineering; 2) Solid waste management; 3) Industrial and hazardous waste management; Urban management; Pollution control, environmental technology. What the Minister for Education should say, when he says that we wasted government's money and nothing was done, why they didn't take up these offers. That's bad enough, Madam Speaker, but that's not the bad part of it because everybody knows that people in the civil service could benefit, the Cayman Islands could benefit from these kinds of courses—very much so—because of the problems we are facing today in solid waste management, urban management, environmental technology, water and waste engineering.

Here's the bad part, and that's why I am telling you that that minister is so devious and where he misled this House and where he continues to do so every change he gets when nobody can rebut him! That's why we've seen him go out this door this afternoon. He wouldn't stay here because he cannot rebut this!

Here is what is so bad: One young Caymanian—my permanent secretary—sent this to all the various departments and, of course the first thing he did was send it (this is in 1997 now, you know) to the permanent secretary of education. Received 4th November, sent to his ministry on the same day or the day afterwards. But here is what is so bad about the whole thing: One young Caymanian went. And do you know where the young Caymanian came from? Which department? Would anybody care to guess? He went from Planning, the Minister for Education's ministry. His responsibility. That man had the gall, had the audacity, the temerity to say that I had got nothing done when one—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Dissing!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Yes!

When one of his own staff went! And here is the report and I want to read it into the records. Perhaps I should say who the person was. The person was Mr. Adrian Bodden, a very intelligent young man, a Planning Assistant. And he did benefit from it. A very intelligent young man, Planning Assistant in the Planning Department, the Minister for Education's ministry. I want to read this into the record because I think it is important. He said: "On arriving in Singapore the first difference that I noticed was a lack of customs. I walked outside where I was greeted by a liaison officer who escorted me to the Merchant Court Hotel, a very nice place. At 8:00 AM the next morning I met the other participants while waiting for the bus. With all of us coming from the Caribbean we had a lot to talk about. We arrived at the University of Singapore where we had an official welcome tea and met the faculty. After a special invitation lunch in the faculty dining room we were given a general overview of Singapore. Every day for the next two working weeks we had a different lecture and technical tour. The topics covered included: 1) Plan-making progress. They looked at Singapore's first town plan and the concept plan of 1991, the Strategic Plan New Town Development Transport and Communications Infrastructure. Singapore's planning system is integrated and coordinated at the national level.

"2) Green and blue plan. The plan is based on a hierarchy of open spaces and complement waterways and catchment area thereby creating a green and blue network. 3) Conservation policies. Preservation of monuments, selection criteria, architectural merits, historical significance, rarity and contribution to the environment. 4) Environmental impact assessment and auditing. A process that examines the environmental consequences of development actions in advance. Types of assessment included ecological, social, health, cumulative, and strategic impact. 5) Water and waste management. Catchment areas cannot sustain public consumption. Water must be imported from Malaysia. There are very few landfills in Singapore so most of the bulk is incinerated prior to dumping in landfills. 6) Urban transport planning. Road pricing, vehicle owner charges using taxes, parking charges, public transport subsidies, and MRT and LRT and bus services are integrated. 7) Infrastructure projects. Very important factors because it attracts companies and investors to Singapore. 8) Housing policies public and private. Housing is very expensive and dominated by public sector. Expats can only buy used flats. 9) Industrial and commercial projects. Precision engineering, electronics, information technology, petroleum and petrochemical, heavy engineering and other labour intensive textiles. Retail and office space is in very high demand. 10) Town Council management of public housing. To transfer responsibility for estate management from HDB to local councils to allow participation by residents and policy formulation in decision-making on local estate matters to provide members of parliament to lead town councils.

"Singapore has a population of 3.5 million people made up of 75% Chinese, 15% Malay, 8% Indian and 2% other Eurasians with a land area of 650 square kilometres, over 13% of which is reclaimed with the materials shipped from Indonesia. Singapore has progressed towards a developed nation over the last 30 years with rapid economic growth, strong foreign reserves an emphasis on value added industry and services. Eighty-five percent of the population lives in public housing (flats) which gives a lot of control, land-use wise, to the government. In order to alleviate the overcrowding in the central business district, a plan was devised to construct new towns and estates which were fully self-sufficient housing, hospitals, supermarkets, etc., all linked by MRT, [that is mass rapid transit]. This move decentralised commercial activities that do not need a central area location. Through decentralisation three major proposals have arisen. Industrial development extended belts of technology corridors are proposed to house business parks and science habitats a large move from polluted heavy industry. Social and cultural facilities: land will be reserved for the provision of schools, health care facilities and suitable facilities for the performing arts, museums, libraries, and art galleries. 3) Transportation: Present networks of expressways, mass rapid transit and bus service will be upgraded and expanded to cater for economic and population growth.

"With Singapore's limited land resource and a projected population of 4 million by 2010—6,000 people per square kilometre—there are very few houses, mostly 30 storey public housing. This is because a single storey house has low density. Singaporeans strive for the opposite. Through this urban management course, some of the topics discussed such as industrial development and urban public housing does not apply directly or on such a massive scale to the Cayman Islands. However, much can be learned from the concept planning, development and implementation of their very detailed development plan. They made a plan for their future and have stuck to it, and for their specific needs it has served them well.

"Issues such as waste management, viable infrastructure projects and environmental impact assessment apply on a small scale directly to the Cayman Islands and need to be dealt with immediately in order to grow economically and environmentally."

That's the report the young man made when he came back from the course. How good it would have been if more civil servants had gone to that course. What was the Minister for Education doing? Why didn't he pick this up and send people? It seems he didn't even know because he said yesterday that the trip was a waste. He didn't even know that someone from his ministry had gone. That shows you how much contact that minister has with his ministry! And that is why education is in the doldrums! That is why the schools are suffering and that is why the students are suffering, because the Minister for Education is too busy being Chief Minister, or playing Chief Minister, following the Governor up and down everywhere he goes like a little lackey boy and not doing his job as the Minister for Education—and now the Minister for Training—while the people in the country suffer, long time residents and Caymanians in general!

And he dares to come here and tell me that I have done nothing? And that this trip was wasted? Was it wasted? He didn't even know that somebody from his ministry went!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I take a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Deputy Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Two points of order. The last statement he made saying that I didn't know whether my ministry went . . . I have the files. I have been through them. I know who went where. And I would like him to withdraw that.

The other thing is that I would like him to withdraw the remark that I am a lackey boy and a Chief Minister.

[laughter]

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, I would request that you withdraw the words that he is a lackey boy. I do not think that that is very parliamentary.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, it is. It's very befitting of the situation that I used to see sometimes. But I will withdraw it in all deference to the minister.

The Deputy Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: But he should behave himself with the next one that comes.

[laughter]

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: How can he say that nothing was done? And he might have the files to know who went because his permanent secretary in his ministry help to set it up. Yes. That's a fact. I am not saying anything about that. I am saying is that he accused me of wasting government's funds and getting nothing done when somebody from his ministry went into one of the courses that was offered.

Madam Speaker, I am glad that I was that type of minister that I could go and ask for things. Because I don't believe that the government ought to spend money all the time, sometimes we can get things if we make the right approach to the right people and things that can benefit the country rather than spending heaps and heaps of money that we don't have at times.

The Deputy Speaker: Honourable Member, will you be completing your speech in a short time? Or are you going on to a new section? It's now 4.25. If you are in favour I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Madam Speaker, I will take the five minutes.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I would only hear a reply to one matter the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said, that it was politically expedient to put training under Community Development. He said that education is where it should be. Well, as I said, that is his opinion. Community Development had labour and our Human Resources Development. When it was given to me I was the Minister for Health and Human Services. That carried over into the new ministry of community development.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town raised the point about bringing motions for everything. That is a point I think I need to take. He said debate is better. Well, if that is so, motions are one way to bring debate. But throughout my time on the backbench motions were, and still are, my way of getting debate and agreement on matters affecting the people. Let's take one aspect. He mentioned after school programmes. Let's look at it.

I brought a motion here between 1989 and 1992, but nothing was done about after school programmes. But when I became the minister I didn't have to bring a motion because I had executive authority. I could put the programmes in place. I couldn't get things done as a backbencher but even those on boards shouldn't have to bring motions because the government doesn't, or very rarely do, put people on their boards who don't support the government. So, if they are on boards or government committees anyone, a member, could be in a position to effect matters positively and have no need for a motion.

But if the only recourse to get something done is by a motion, then that is what we are being paid for, whether it causes political bickering or not. I try to make sure that I don't cause political bickering, but I have a duty to do something about matters affecting our people.

I will end with this point: The Minister for Education quite often gets up here, as he did yesterday, to say that actions of certain politicians are not what the youth should follow.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Let him look in the mirror!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Is he talking about himself?

Mr. Roy Boddén: What?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Is he talking about himself? You know, he better get off of this holier than thou attitude. And I think we can all say that we live decent, honest lives. Did God come down here to tell him that he's better than we are? No! I don't believe so. He should be ashamed of himself and he should look in the mirror when he makes those statements because it's not only one way. I know that I holler when I get up here in the excitement of things. I shout, but there's a lot more ways of laying good examples for the young people.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Are you finished with your debate, or just for this evening?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Oh no, unless you want me to go on. Just for this afternoon.

The Deputy Speaker: Okay.

I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Monday at 10.00 AM.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Monday, 19 April. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL

MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: First I would like to extend my thanks to the Elected Member for North Side for so ably filling the Chair in my absence last Thursday and Friday, 15 and 16 April 1999.

We have apologies for absence from the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Presentation of Papers and Reports. The Port Authority of the Cayman Islands Annual Report 1997. The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

PORT AUTHORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS
ANNUAL REPORT 1997

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House, The Port Authority of the Cayman Islands Annual Report 1997.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Do you wish to speak to it? The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you.

The year 1997 marked the 20th anniversary of the Port Authority. This occasion was appropriately celebrated and a wide cross section of the community was invited to participate in a formal reception. Present and former members of management of the Port Authority were recognised for their contribution to the Port from its inception as an authority in 1977. A television documentary on the history and achievements of the Port Authority was produced and televised at the reception and on local media. The Port also participated in an awards ceremony held by the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport in which long service employees were recognised.

Speaking a little bit about the content of the report I would like to offer a few comments about the cargo capacity and the growth in that area. I would expect that what I am about to say comes as no real surprise. The Port Authority has experienced tremendous growth since its inception 20 years ago. During 1997 we accommodated 211,591 tons of domestic cargo, over four times the cargo capacity of the George Town Port in 1977, a 15.9% increase over 1996.

While it is true that the Port, like many others, is a passive recipient of the affects of the state of the economy the Authority has a responsibility to manage itself in a manner that will accommodate the present and anticipated importing volumes of the country. In other words, the Port has to grow to accommodate the growth of the country in terms of its importing activities.

The 211,591 tones of cargo mentioned earlier translates into 36,385 containers handled by the Port during 1997, a 7.3% increase over 1996. In 1997 the Authority embarked on projects which will enable the Port to handle the increasing volume of both cargo and carry equipment at the inland facility. The Authority has purchased 2.2 acres of property in the industrial park area for a total of $1,227,004 which will be developed to be used to accommodate the increasing volume of containers.

The Port has also commenced the redesign of the inland facility in the industrial park to create a more smooth and efficient flow of traffic. The Port has doubled the size of the warehouse at the industrial park facility to 20,000 square feet which is estimated to cost around $928,000, and has also ordered four new electric forklifts to be used in the warehouse for an estimated cost of $138,000 as well as racks for $36,000 to be used for a racking system within the warehouse. The racks and the tracking system will facilitate better use of the warehouse space and provide a systematic manner for storage of cargo.

During 1998 the Authority looked at the feasibility of redesigning and expanding its docking facilities to accommodate the ever-increasing volumes of cargo and containers there. Speaking of cruise ship calls and passengers, during 1997 a total of 868,062 cruise ship passengers visited Grand Cayman along with 574 cruise ship port calls, an increase of 11.6% and 7.7% respectively.

Revenues earned from the cruise ship passenger tax for 1997 amounted to $1,421,926, representing 19.3% of operating revenue. Obviously, the cruise ship business represents a significant portion of the Authority's revenue and is an important sector of the country's tourism industry.

For some years the Authority has been considering possible expansion schemes for the docking facilities with a view towards including some form of permanent facility for cruise ships. In an effort to minimise the ecological impact of anchoring, in 1996 the Authority contracted two foreign firms for the geo-technical studies and consultation necessary for the provision of permanent moorings to be used by the cruise ship operators. During 1997 the Port continued with these projects and after consultation with the cruise ship operators themselves it was subsequently decided that the desires of the cruise ship operators regarding the permanent moorings were not economically feasible. This prompted the write off in 1997 of the professional fees associated with the permanent moorings.

Perhaps I should say a few words about crane services as well. In September 1997 the Authority started using the crane and for the first time in the history of the Port Authority offloaded cargo using its own equipment. Despite the controversy and despite the teething pains experienced, overall customers are satisfied with the crane service the Authority is providing.

Another matter is the taxi dispatch building. During 1997 the Port Authority assumed responsibility for the taxi dispatch building on Thomas Russell Way. In an effort to ease the congestion on Harbour Drive the Port Authority will use the taxi dispatch building as the central dispatch for taxi drivers. This will limit the number of taxis in the ranks at the cruise ship landing at any one time. This system was implemented in 1998.

Financially, the Port Authority has experienced one of its best years. Operating revenue surpassed $7 million to $7,586,695, a 15% increase over the previous year. This is mainly a result of the increased importing activity of the country which resulted in an increase of 15.9% in domestic cargo, and the increase in cruise ship passenger traffic of 11.6% as mentioned earlier. Net income for the year was $1,670,034, 29.2% over 1996. The Port also contributed $1.5 million to the Cayman Islands Government Treasury in 1997. Conversely, the Port has also experienced a 20.8% increase in operating expenses in 1997. During the last five years the Port has not kept pace with inflation. That's the cost of doing business by way of its tariff, as tariff has not increased since 1991 yet the income continues to rise as a result of volume.

What I have said tries to capture the main items in this annual report for the Port Authority for 1997. It has been several years since we tabled such a report and we thought it important to be within the spirit of the operations of the Port, the Port Authority Law and Regulations and actually open government's activities as it relates to the Port Authority itself. In other words, the ability of us to put together a document which the public can have access to and be able to appreciate what has been accomplished in the last five or six years.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: For the benefit of the listening public and the record, further to what I said earlier in thanking the Elected Member for North Side, she is the Deputy Speaker and she filled the Chair as Speaker during my absence, for which I am most grateful.

Item 4, Other Business. Suspension of Standing Order 14(2) The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to take private business in preference to government business.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 2/99 TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 2/99, Training Initiative. Debate continuing by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 2/99

TRAINING INITIATIVE

(Continuation of debate thereon)

AMENDMENT

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Right off I would like to move the amendment that I spoke to you about earlier, the one that has been circulated, which reads: “In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the First Elected Member for West Bay, give notice to move the following amendment to Private Member’s Motion No. 2/99 by adding at the end thereof the following resolve: “AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT Mr. Roy Bodden, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, and Mr. W. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, the First Elected Member for West Bay, be members of the National Training Initiative Advisory Committee whose Chairman is Mr Brian Hunter.””

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I humbly beg to second that motion.

The Speaker: I would like to add that I have waived the two-day notice under SO 25(2). The amendment has been duly moved and seconded, do you wish to speak to it?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence. We have been talking about being co-operative and trying to work together for the good of the country. In this case, the good of our working populace, especially our young people those out of school and those now working. We have many times offered ourselves verbally to work on different things with government. This amendment goes further. And we are asking the House to agree that the resolve section be added to the motion.

The Speaker: The amendment is open for debate. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

This motion is indeed a very strange one because I am wondering exactly what is the reasoning behind it. I know that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and other members such as the First Elected Member for George Town and perhaps the First Elected Member for West Bay, but the backbench—opposition I should say—has come out very strong against political committees, political appointments. This is one of the most politically driven types of motions one could find.

How can the opposition sit there and criticise government by saying there should be no political appointments? At this rate we don’t just have politicians on a board. It looks like we are going to have a board of politicians.

Obviously, this caught me by surprise because I have never seen motions . . . in fact, motions in this House seem to be coming from everywhere on everything in the world at this stage. What this motion can have the capacity to do is stagnate training in this country because for five years (well, four-plus years anyhow) the First Elected Member for West Bay as the minister in charge of training did not get anywhere of any consequence. Some things were done, but very little. If, when that honourable member had charge of it, he had done what should have been done, then he wouldn’t have to bring a motion stating as this motion being amended now does, the need for training and the undertakings given in 1992 and 1996, and to state that proper and viable training programmes are promptly implemented. I mean in six years there have been no proper training programmes implemented.

Why must I take advice from the First Elected Member for West Bay who had training for five years and couldn’t get anywhere with it? Now he must advise me on it? Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, this doesn’t make sense. If he can’t implement the advice himself, then how in the world can we expect that advice to now be passed on to me and I implement it?

It is indeed strange. Let me just say that I believe that what the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town came out with in his constructive debate can help me. I will say that openly. He is a trained teacher. But for the life of me I really . . . and I hope this is taken right, I really do not believe that the First Elected Member for West Bay can offer me any advice that is going to help.

Secondly, if we . . . and there are other members of the backbench, why not just get the advice of other members? There’s the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, there’s the Third Elected Member for George Town, I know that the Member for North Side was on the board or is, also the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and other members of the backbench, the First Elected Member for George Town. But I think a decision has to be made here.

We can’t be talking out of both sides of our mouths. If the backbench wants a political committee to advise on training, well, let’s do it right. Let’s at least get some of the brains on the backbench and put them on it, and let’s go ahead. If you want to lay out a policy on training, go ahead and lay it out. But I don’t believe that by adding a few politicians . . . and I am being honest with this because I am not on this board at this stage to take and add another two politicians, there are very few left on the backbench. Let us go ahead and move them on.

I would need a bit of time, naturally, to consult with my colleagues on this at the end of the debate. I would like to hear what other members of the backbench have to say about it. But there has been enough politics on this whole thing of training. I don’t really want to be saddled with something that for five years has failed and then I am going to end up with advice that’s going to cause me in the next year and a half to fail. I think members of this House need to think of this carefully and perhaps restructure the board in such a way that maybe something constructive can come out of it. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: In regard to this amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 2/99, Training Initiative, where it is being resolved that Mr. Roy Bodden, The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and Mr. McKeeva Bush, OBE, JP, the First Elected Member for West Bay be members of the national training initiative advisory committee whose chairman is Mr. Brian Hunter, it's interesting that that person's name would even be mentioned in the resolution to almost like emphasise a point. I cautioned this House the last time I spoke on this motion regarding the political motives I seem to be witnessing here.

It is said that the worst kind of war is civil war; the worst kind of quarrel is a lover's quarrel. When political colleagues, people who have been together in political organisations, disagree we have to be careful that that disagreement does not begin to tear away the very fabric of our democracy and that that conflict does not defeat the purpose of our being here which is to be as objective as possible about the needs of the country and the business of the people.

I believe that it is possible for me to say that if somebody brings a motion which is a concept of how they believe a particular challenge can be met. I can debate the merits and demerits of that particular proposition without debating the merits of the individual bringing the motion. It is unfortunate that the First Elected Member for West Bay in particular seems to always take anybody who questions the concepts of his proposition to task. I have been spoken to by him on this floor on many occasions. He has tried to minimise the importance of my contribution when it does not suit him. When it is in praise of him he seems to lap it all up. I believe that this is not good politics.

I believe that the amendment to this private member's motion which I tried to debate as objectively as possible last week regarding the merits of a training initiative that sought to change the basic values of the people regarding the making of choices and not just setting up programmes, but seeing those programmes as also being objects that have to be subjected to change and influence. So I was not just talking about setting up programmes, I was talking about changing the basic values and attitudes of the users.

I say this from an informed position as a sociologist. Regardless of those talking about training, it is interesting that we are talking about training but we might have somebody who might be trained and educated in a specific discipline and yet those same persons talk from two sides of their mouths by trying to discredit people's qualifications and advice as a result of those qualifications.

I believe that this amendment expresses more the political frustrations and desires of the mover of this motion than anything else. I am saddened to say this at this particular point, because I thought that our debate had advanced sufficiently by now for us to be able to have concluded this private member's motion on training initiative because there were some very good contributions to that particular motion. One of the most excellent contributions, of course, was made by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, Mr. Roy Bodden, who the mover of this amendment is now suggesting should be a member of the national training initiative advisory committee, whose chairman, again, is Mr. Brian Hunter—for emphasis!

I have nothing against that because I said last week that I believed that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town should have been minister for education a long time ago and I will go back and repeat my desire to see him as education minister in this country. So I am not going to pull away from that because I believe that that is not a political motive on my part. I have assessed the situation and I see the merits of this good gentleman. So I am not talking against this particular amendment because I believe that this gentleman would not be useful on the board.

I am talking about the way in which this amendment has now come to this motion. When this motion could have been resolved, when government could have supported this private member's motion because it would have been impossible for government to say it is not interested in training. Now, we can blame government for not having done anything over the last 19 months. We can blame the former minister for not having done anything over the last six years. Regardless of where we put the blame my position is that we need to do something and I think this is what we agreed to when we concluded on Friday. I believe that the intention of the First Elected Member for West Bay, the mover of this motion, was to sum up. It appeared as if he had all the time in the world to have done this. If I am not mistaken I believe that he started with the conclusion on Friday. He didn't finish. He said a lot about what I had said also, which is partly what I am reacting to.

It goes to show that if he could dismiss everything that I said simply because I am not in complete agreement with him about everything that he says or does, the member is somehow losing his objectivity. And I caution him. He was taking that particular direction on Friday and he comes back with this amendment.

The former minister had six years to do something about training. I said that I blamed the National Team Government. He was a member of that government. Nothing was done. I said it was because it was not perhaps politically expedient at that time it was not top political priority—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: The merits of the motion are not under debate. Some of that was discussed by all members who wanted to debate, including the member now speaking. I had begun to conclude, but I still have my contribution to make to the conclusion. What is being debated now by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town is the merits of the motion again. He already did that.

The Speaker: Please continue. We are debating the amendment to the motion. Let's remember that please.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I realise that an amendment to a motion will alter the motion and therefore to discuss the amendment I have to refer to the motion it is amending. I am saying that the amendment could be considered to be an attempt by the mover of the motion to make the motion more effective by also drafting onto the committee two members. Therefore what I said just now in regard to his particular performance, as mentioned by the Minister for Education, I don't believe is talking outside this, and I thank you for your indulgence.

I don't want to say much more, but I think it is important for all of us to be critical of one another when it is necessary. If we cannot show the public that type of objectivity we are going to find that the public will not judge us like we imagined the public would. The public will judge us because the public has no particular agenda, therefore the public has more the capacity to be objective in regard to these particular issues.

I believe that this amendment should be voted down because this amendment does not serve any other purpose but to further politicise a situation that should for the good of the country be apolitical.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I like to think that the years I have spent here have matured me to a certain point, and as I sit and reflect I think that the behaviour I should adopt is more like that of my role model, my paternal grandfather, who was a man of honour and respect in this society. So I have to say that I will not let the good name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, the grandson of Joseph Scobel be fallen into disrepute and be torn asunder. So I respectfully withdraw and disassociate myself from the amendment.

I would like to say that I thank the Fourth Elected Member for George Town for his eloquent expression of faith in me. And I have nothing to prove. I have no ego to stroke. I think that when the Chronicler writes about the time I have spent in this parliament that my progeny will have reason to be proud of the contribution that I made and my constituents will have reason to recall to themselves in a studious assessment that their efforts were not wasted in having me as their representative.

These times remind me of one of that great and eminent Irishman, Edmond Burke, when he said that generation will not link with generation and men will be like the flies of summer. I do not wish to be like the flies of summer. Thank you.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

This amendment was moved simply because it was thought that the First Elected Member for West Bay—who was intensely familiar with what had gone on while he was minister for the training initiative—would have complemented this committee with that experience tremendously.

The other name, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, was suggested also because of his experience in the field of education. He is an avid reader in that area and we also believe that tailored with all of his experience and knowledge he would complement this committee.

I have seconded this amendment. I will tell anyone, excluding no one in this Chamber who thinks that I have been participating in this amendment for political reasons, privately where they can go and what they can do. But I won't say that at this point in time. The motion was to simply complement what existed.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town in his contribution admitted that part of his reacting was because of things the First Elected Member for West Bay might have said prior to this. I don't want to see little things like that get us upset with each other. So I am hoping that that doesn't carry itself into any type of battle because that's not needed. But what the Minister for Education has said is, in my view, almost demented. His understanding of the motion is typical of him because he judges others by himself.

Now, I want the minister to understand that my participation in the motion had nothing to do with what he talked about. While he may not have referred to me personally, I seconded the motion. So I construe his thoughts expressed in words to come to me at the same time. It is either that or he doesn't think that I have the good sense to know what to do, and I just signed a paper because somebody asked me to do it. Either one is just as bad.

Again, I will not follow into a long thought process, but I do keep these things in mind and I say once more the motion was simply done to complement. Part of our job on this backbench . . . and no government would like it if the situations and roles were reversed. The same things would happen and I understand that. But part of our role is to examine what the government is doing and if there are things which need to be corrected we need to bring it to the attention of them and everyone else. When that is not accepted, well, that's tough. I will not stop doing it because that's my job. That's the way I understand the job description, sir.

So if government or anyone else is not minded to accept the motion, let me simply just say this: I participated in the amendment for the reasons I have already outlined and I want the government to understand that this area is most critical in my view for the direction in which this country will head. I would have thought that instead of construing it as a political ploy the government would have grabbed it to see what pluses they could get from contributions from these members.

I do not believe that that committee is constituted of a majority of politicians, but of course the Minister for Education had to make it sound like that's all it was. So be it. Let them do as they wish. The fact that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, because the reaction to the proposed amendment was what it was has disassociated himself from it, probably allows the government to get its wish without it going any further. However the mover will talk to it I am sure.

But I want to make very clear my part in the proposed amendment and why. Any time the Minister for Education thinks that he can judge what's in my mind, he can try it again and this morning is not a good morning. I promise him that I can do just as he does and sometimes I even do it better.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of the House that we continue with the debate or take the morning break?

Does any other member wish to speak? If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I never thought that proposing an amendment at this time to add two names, the name of Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and mine, would have caused such vehement opposition. I am not going to reply to what I believe is spurious and spiteful argument because I have better things to say this morning. But you live and learn.

I will say that any time the Fourth Elected Member for George Town gets a chance to berate me, he does it. And that's okay. I would just like to say that I think it is my right to debate anything any member has said. He might not like what I say or how I say it, but I ask him to listen to himself. I don't think that I dismissed all that he said because he made some good points. But there was an area where he suggested the need to bring motions for everything that I thought was uncalled for and I had to go to show why we need to bring motions.

There is no one in this House who is playing a cuter political game than that member. No one else! And all you have to do is sit and look. In fact, the political games that I see being played here . . . I am glad I am on this side of the House. I don't ever minimise the contribution of any member. Every member in this House has a right to speak. Every member in this House has a contribution to make, not to say that I am always going to agree with what everybody says, or they with what I say.

The amendment came because we had been talking about being cooperative and trying to work together for the good of our youth. I thought that I could add something to that committee being the person who had been responsible for training and got certain things done, and had not gotten certain things done. That's why the amendment came. It might be that some members want to say that I should have done more. I note that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town didn't say that in his main contribution, but having an opportunity to reply to what I said, he took that opportunity today.

I should say this: More should have been done, and because I was the minister the buck stops with me. I know that and I have never run from responsibility or not owned up to something that I was responsible for. But the circumstances that I had to work with, I think the country is well aware. The people are not stupid. While some members in this House who have degrees believe that they can speak in a way that the country don't understand, they are only fooling themselves. The country well understands.

I don't hide the fact that I want to be able to make a contribution. And from the depth of my soul I am hurt that I didn't get the opportunity to fulfill all that I needed to do and had planned to do and had started to do. So I try to make a contribution today. But is that wrong? I don't think so. And I don't think it's being political because that's our job. I have some time on my hands.

I am busy in my constituency, as I am sure other members are but I have some time on my hands that I can give this country. And we can do more, and we have been offering the government to do more. But because the government is acting political, as they are accusing everybody else, while they say you should be doing more they don't want us. In fact, this is a good case. We offered ourselves. This is the acid test of whether they want us to assist or not.

I can only say that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town while he has his capabilities he sometimes talks in parables because he's the one who is constantly criticising people or members for being on boards, yet he allowed himself to be put on at least two in recent times—Civil Aviation Authority. The Chairman? The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning. The Tourism Advisory Board, I believe it is called or if it's not that one the Advisory Board for Attractions headed under the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism. So what are they talking about politicians being on boards? If they don't want politicians on boards, and they are politicians, what are they doing on the board? It is simple arithmetic.

This was an opportunity for the Fourth Elected Member for George Town to bamboozle me in his way, and he does that whenever he gets the opportunity. But one of these days he is going to go too far. It was a good opportunity again for the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism who is smarting under the exposure that I gave him on Friday for his neglect in training Caymanians all through his career as minister.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: The Minister of Education I am dealing with, Mr. Speaker, but I am not leaving out the Minister for Tourism who is now eager to interrupt because he had an opportunity too. I would like to say that I don't think very much was done.

Anyhow, Mr. Speaker, any chance that any member of this House can get to be on a board to make a contribution for the good of this country, he should do it. We should do it! That has always been my position. Now some of us don't like to work with others so we naturally don't want to get on some boards, or would not accept the appointment. But when we say that we would like to go on, I think the ministers should give an opportunity.

And, do you know what, Mr. Speaker? When we look at the salaries being put forward we should say give us more work. But let's see who will accept the salary but not the work.

If they want to lay blame on me, as I said I was the minister and more could have been done, then I have to accept that blame because I had the constitutional responsibility. Because of all that has been said I am going to withdraw the amendment to the motion. I move that it be withdrawn.

WITHDRAWAL OF AMENDMENT

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, given the circumstances I beg to second the withdrawal of the amendment.

The Speaker: The question is that the amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 2/99 be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay was making his contribution. Do you want to take the break now?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I don't know about other members, but we were late in starting, and I can continue.

The Speaker: That's fine with me.

The First Elected Member for West Bay, continue until lunch.

CONTINUATION OF DEBATE ON THE SUBSTANTIVE MOTION

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

It's good to see you back Mr. Speaker. When we adjourned on Friday I had shown where we had gotten to up to 1995 when Executive Council had been given the report and some recommendations from the Manpower Advisory Committee were accepted. Some of the reasons they gave for not accepting the report was that the pensions and the insurance were about to come on line and government couldn't expect the companies to sustain all that cost at one time. Those things coupled with the fact that the training requirements were going to be costly.

They also said that I was being embroiled in a bitter fight with some of the private sector on the proposed Labour Law amendments at the time. They didn't see that it was good for the country and therefore the report would not go public.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education who has taken on the effort to answer the motion again went wide by saying that nothing was done. He emphasises that, but I think that I was able on Friday to show that certain things had been done and why we hadn't gotten any further. It also shows that that minister either did not care or was not capable of doing the job himself. In fact, he didn't seem to have the pulse of what was going on because he didn't even know that I had gotten six scholarships under the Singapore Technical Assistance Programme and that one person from his ministry attended the courses there. He didn't even know that.

It goes to show that the minister is not genuine in what he is talking about and is being very, very political.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I take a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The member is stating that since I did not attend the training course, I have no interest in training. That is giving the wrong impression and is an untrue statement. I have interest in education but I do not go on expensive joy rides all over the world when I don't need to go. It's rare that I go, but that doesn't mean that I don't have interest as he is trying to say, and he is misleading.

The Speaker: I am really not following your argument. I think he said that one member of your ministry went on a training course.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: He said I didn't have the interest to go and that I don't have interest, or whatever, in education. That's the part I am talking about sir, because I didn't go.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I didn't say that he didn't go. I didn't say he didn't have the interest to go. The minister said that the trip cost government a lot of money, that there was nothing done. And when I started to answer the minister in my conclusion I showed where I had gotten these scholarships when he said that nothing had been done. He didn't even know that we'd gotten them. He didn't know who had gone on the courses. In fact, more people could have gone because there were six . . .

I don't know what he is talking about. He is still living in a land . . . he doesn't want anyone to accuse him of anything, but when he's wrong he must be accused. And he should accept when he's wrong.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, do you understand what he is saying?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, that's why I didn't want him as an advisor on the committee sir. I will leave it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay please continue.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: If that minister had taken my advice on many things this country would have been better off today. But because I know now why (and I found this out afterwards) he was not taking the advice because he had no true commitment either to what I could advise on or even me being there. His interest was to try to push me out as early as possible—and he got that done!

He needed my political strength and when he could sandbag me—the way the bunch of them did—then he got rid of me. Anyway, Mr. Speaker, be that as it may . . . I think I need to be debating Mr. Speaker.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am taking another point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Imputing improper motives that he advised me and I took no advice and that my only aim was to push him out. That is not true. Executive Council has collective responsibility and it worked together.

The Speaker: I would ask you to please get off of that. Let's get on to something else more constructive.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, please. I will get off of it when that minister stops what he is doing over there. Okay? I am going to ask you to please pay attention to exactly what he is doing. He is only using these points of order to try to clear up something that he should have said before. As far as I am concerned these are not genuine points of order. But you are in the Chair. I will continue.

All I want to do now Mr. Speaker is table this document, the Singapore Cooperation Programme from Singapore Technical Assistance for Sustainable Development.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: In the 21st Century we will face the challenges of more rapid technological changes and keener competition among nations. I believe that economic growth and competitiveness of a country will depend less on its natural resources which are very important, of course, but more and more on the resourcefulness and resilience of its people. Education and training is part and parcel and perhaps the most crucial for the progress and prosperity of this country.

The acid test of a good education and training system in my view is the ability to nurture citizens with self-discipline and a firm sense of responsibility to the country, their families and themselves. What we have in place now needs to be fine-tuned to meet the demands and needs of a young and growing country such as we are. But we do need a system that is flexible in order to maximise the potential of every pupil before they reach graduation and are out in the world of work where they will need more training and fine tuning.

From where I stand, young children need to be prepared to meet the challenges of today and tomorrow and be given core values which will help him or her to earn a living and contribute meaningfully to our society and the country.

Much has been said about the education system and all the good that is taking place by the Minister for Education. But I see the need to educate the child to bring out his greatest potential so that he will grow into a good person and a useful citizen of the future. From an early age he should learn about his uniqueness as a Caymanian with a particular cultural heritage. He should embed values that are cherished by society such as self-discipline, honesty, respect, responsibility, and co-operation. He should be encouraged to go at his own pace as far as his ability allows in the areas that interest him most. Then whatever his inclination and training, there should be a place for him in the country. This is my dream. In today's system too many are left behind.

It is quite obvious that policy makers need an injection of motivation. They could have benefited from the conference of learning for the 21st Century that the First Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town just went on. They could have benefited tremendously from the one in Ottawa that the Minister for Education talked about, that his Permanent Secretary, Mrs. Basdeo, also the Principal of the Community College, and I went to. Of course, he didn't choose to go on that one either. You have to wonder whether he wants to learn or play politics. But he who believes that he cannot learn from somebody is really in need of some kind of learning.

Instead of berating and blaming, the policymakers they should be learning themselves. We became confirmed in what I already believe that learning if lifelong. I want to say that the Permanent Secretary for Education is a very capable and able woman. All she needs is for the policy to be carried through. All she needs is for the minister to be up and doing. The visit to Singapore was very revealing. And it was profitable seeing that I came back with six technical scholarships, one of which was taken up by someone in the minister's ministry.

We visited and had meetings at polytechnics and witnessed what it means to develop a quality workforce. It does your heart good to visit a place such as the Institute of Technical Education. The minister should have gone because he would have come back with a lot of good ideas. He would have come back with a lot of good material and he would have learned something. One important area of training they focus on is national education. It emphasises that technical competency alone is no longer sufficient in meeting the needs of changing technology and the working environment. That institute complements the efforts in the secondary schools with emphasis on values and good citizenship.

In their form of curriculum a core content of [?] is taken. It is incorporated into existing subjects such as personal development and social skills for their business studies course. The message you get there is that there is a place for everyone who works and everyone has equal opportunities based on his ability and effort. They know what each person is doing, or what each centre of training is doing. I would like to see a student seminar in this country to provide a platform for students to interact and exchange views on current affairs as well as national and international issues. In other words, to learn from each other. This could be high schools, Community College, ICCI. I do believe that that kind of interaction would be beneficial.

I am not a spokesman for education. But when I see something good, I have enough common sense . . . although I didn't get a scholarship from government like the Minister for Education did to go and train, what common sense I have certainly tells me that those kinds of things are good.

When you go to a primary school over there and you see 25 students in a classroom and you see 25 computers being used and go then to the centre for computer based training, you understand that throughout the students' time at school they get computers from their primary school and learn about them and how to operate them, then they go on to get courses in computer architecture which aims to provide students with the principles and fundamental concepts of modern computer architecture.

I heard the Minister for Education talk about technology. He hasn't seen information technology. That is his problem. When you visit the Institute of Technical Education over there and see their apprenticeship programmes, skills, career progression and prospect, that is what it means. There, you understand what is an apprenticeship. This is what they said, an apprenticeship is a training arrangement that allows you to earn a salary while learning.

As an apprentice you will undergo structured training on the job under the supervision of a qualified trainer. Once a week, or more if necessary, you will attend classes either at the Institute of Technical Education or an approved training centre. While you are undergoing training you will receive a salary and enjoy other benefits like other employees of the company. At the end of your apprenticeship you will receive a nationally recognised certificate.

It shows how the apprenticeship benefits you. You gain immediate entry into the career of your choice. You receive training that is well planned and organised. You learn under the supervision of a technically competent and well qualified trainer, earn a monthly salary while you are undergoing training, enjoy the same benefits as other employees of the company you are attached to, receive a certificate that is nationally recognised, gain the opportunity to go for further education and training. And they have apprenticeship programmes in automotive, building and drafting services, business services, so don't say that it can't be done it can. It's not just something that you are doing with your hands that you can be an apprentice. It's something with your mind too. Catering, electrical, electronics, hairstyling, healthcare, jewellery, marine and fabrication, printing, retailing, travel, all those things, Mr. Speaker.

Then when you look at that and go to the programmes offered, . . . oh, Mr. Speaker, if only we had gotten that far with the support in 1997 instead of sabotage. When you look at examples of apprenticeship courses, finance and business services, the certificate in office skills, certificate in logistic operations, Mr. Speaker you understand that it's not just an apprenticeship to be a printer. You understand there are more things, finance and business. So it can work.

But I was hearing that it couldn't work because an apprenticeship was an old outdated programme used in Germany years ago. That's what I was hearing. But when I went to Singapore and saw their systems and what could be done to deal with today's business and technology, . . . It would do your heart good, Mr. Speaker, and it's a pity that the Minister for Education would not go. He would have seen that these kinds of training capabilities could be produced and I believe successful in our country.

Then you visit Singapore's Productivity and Standards Board and see what they do about on the job training. You see that this kind of curriculum that is mandated to businesses, small and large, course work for instance in service the customer and handling payments. When you look at these documents here you understand what commitment to training is all about. These are the kinds of things that we could have implemented.

Their approach over there is a holistic one, continuous learning. Here they address three major determinants of growth, manpower development, economic restructuring, and technical progress. This holistic approach ensures that the maximum synergy can be derived as the training determinants are interrelated and their overall impact on productivity depends upon how well they are integrated and managed. One recommendation of the Manpower Development Advisory Committee was the creation of a national training fund. This should have been put in place in 1997 if everything had gone to plan. The Singapore visit had a look at their skills development fund.

They had the same plans as what I was to put in place in 1997 because we had heard some information from it. The primary purpose of the fund would have been to assist students in such things as scholarships and encourage companies to further strengthen the training infrastructure and commitments toward training. It was here that a lot of emphasis would have been placed on helping the small and medium size companies embark on training and retraining because that is also needed.

We were going to make part of the national training fund a worker training plan scheme which would have encouraged companies to systematically plan for the training of their staff. To supplement this was a Training Needs Analysis Consultancy Grant Scheme (long name, but that's what we were supposed to call it) which would have assisted companies in drawing up company wide training plans by defraying the cost of engaging external consultants to conduct a training needs analysis and develop a worker training plan. There was to be also a training leave scheme to upgrade all the workers aged 40 and above. A Retraining Voucher Scheme to help workers upgrade their skills so that they would be prepared to take on new jobs was also in the offing. A Training Voucher Scheme to enhance the convenience of employers in obtaining grants from the national training fund to help companies, in particular small and medium enterprises ease their cash flow problems when investing in staff training.

This scheme would have enabled companies to identify well established programmes for the upgrading of their employees. It would have allowed companies to gain access to relevant training programmes at reasonable costs at the Community College, ICCL or wherever because under that part of the scheme employers would have only needed to pay any unsupported course fee directly to the training provider, the college or wherever, with the fund disbursing the supported amount directly to the training provider.

So, Mr. Speaker, as you can hear, the argument of the Minister for Education and his attempt to frighten the public about the intention of the report, about it being unrealistic and harmful to small companies is nothing but scare tactics intended to say to the public that he is their saviour from something bad. As I am showing you—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker—

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am taking a point of order. He is saying that I am trying to scare the public. That is totally untrue. I dealt with it in a totally rational manner. I pointed out the weaknesses of the report but to say that I am trying to scare the public is a very serious allegation.

The Speaker: I would ask you to withdraw "scare tactic." That is really not appropriate.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: If it wasn't scare tactics, then someone else please tell me what it was. What he is saying is absolute rubbish! What I just outlined would have been there to help small companies and the size that he was talking about the other day.

It's hard for you to rule, Mr. Speaker, because you were not here. But what he was talking about the other day was that the report was unrealistic, as he just said, because it could not deal with small companies. What I am showing you here is that we had every intention to deal properly with small companies. So I cannot understand where his supposedly realistic logic is coming from.

The Speaker: What I am asking you to withdraw is "scare tactics." You said unrealistic reasoning and that is another thing, but scare tactics is really not proper.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: It is scare tactics but unrealistic reasoning is perhaps more parliamentary.

The Speaker: Just withdraw "scare tactics."

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Well, I just said that. I will withdraw it Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Thank you. Please continue.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: What they did in stopping me at that time was to effectively stop the training initiative I had going. But what is worse is that after having 17 or 19 months to get these going, nothing has been done—nothing! I say, shame, shame, shame! These things I have outlined this morning would have done much good for the country. I didn't have the opportunity because I resigned from Executive Council. We had just gotten to the point where we could have implemented these things.

These things are lying in his ministry somewhere, and if he had the interest of these young people at heart, as he says he does, then these things would have been implemented. Or else he doesn't know about them.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I hate to keep taking this, but once again the minister is misleading the public. Those things have not been lying around the Ministry for 17 months. Training has only come to me at the beginning of this year. The training that was under me I have effectively deal with, the Community College is there for everybody to see. So I am asking him to withdraw that. If he wants to say from 1st January 1999, that's different. But don't use 17 months on me.

The Speaker: That's a point of explanation. Please continue, with 1st January 1999.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I said on Friday that we exposed the minister when we proved that the training, or the man that we had gotten from the Commonwealth Secretariat, Mr. Bainbridge, was in his office from September last year. All I am saying is that if he was there from September until now, what has he been doing? And, Mr. Speaker, this stuff has been in his ministry because his permanent secretary, Mrs. Basdeo, was one of the leaders of the delegation to Singapore. His ministry assisted and was part and parcel of the visit. She had this stuff as much as I had it and we looked at all these things, and I came to the conclusion these were the things that would have been done and . . . Mr. Speaker, I hear the Fourth Elected Member for George Town grumbling. Does he have some problem? Well if he does he should take it and deal with the Minister for Education.

He can't say that it wasn't there. It was there! It is probably still there, but he has not had the wherewithal to use it.

[The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning rose]

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: I am taking a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: This part of training was under his ministry up until he resigned, which was over five years he had it. Then it went on to the minister who took over his ministry. What he is saying, which is untrue—and this is not an explanation—he is saying things that are misleading this House: that I had full responsibility for training. His ministry was the lead ministry and I have the files here. And there isn't even a file on training in it. I can show him the files. These files were with him. So please tell the truth.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, let him table the files because I am sure he doesn't have all the files. He brought the ones that he wanted to bring because when I tried to get information from it, I couldn't get it!

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, you just heard what he said. Ha, ha, ha! You think I'm, stupid? That means he took the information when he knew that someone else could have used it—and he is grinning there like the Cheshire cat!

The Speaker: We are getting nowhere with this argument across the hall. Let us try to be a little more objective. Please continue with your debate, but let's have no cross talk.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: That minister can keep interrupting until Kingdom come. I want to find out what he had. What kind of training did he have? What kind of training did the Minister for Education have? Technical and vocational? Isn't that what the Constitution says you have? And that he had from all the while from 1992? I think so because he had the Community College. So what I was talking about incorporated technical vocational training. So why continue to lay blame on me and get help from the Fourth Elected Member for George Town?

He can try to mislead the public of this country all he wants, but the fact is that he had vocational and technical training—

The Speaker: Please let's not go back into that again.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am replying to the debate. Please give me an opportunity.

The Speaker: Give me an opportunity now, for a moment. I am not going to tolerate this misleading. That is not what we are here for. We are here to talk about training. So please continue on that vein.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I quite agree with you that the Minister for Education should not try to mislead the House. That's what he has been doing.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Mr. Speaker.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: With respect, Mr. Speaker, you just ruled to say that he should stop talking about misleading. I don't know if you heard him, he just said that I am misleading again. Where is this going to stop sir? I mean you have the authority.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I will bow to your rulings but I would like to say something. I am here in a debate, and I don't think that "misleading" is unparliamentary. The minister has accused me of all kinds of things . . . and you mean that I can't say that he is misleading? He is very misleading. I will move but I think that I have the right to reply to him. His problem is that he doesn't think that anybody can tell him anything.

The Speaker: Really and truly, the purpose of this debate is not to argue between two individuals. We are discussing training initiatives and that is really what is very important and very necessary to this country. I don't want to get into a debate either, so please continue but let's get on with the debate.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Yes, sir. Thank you Mr. Speaker.

As I said, training is needed and what I have been dealing with is what could have been done for technical and vocational training which is and has been from 1992 the responsibility of the Minister for Education today. I can say this too, that from 1976 he had the same subject. So it's not just today or since 1992. Well, how much has been done?

This country would have been much better off if that minister would have been more studious in those years and put these things in place. It would have been better today if he had been studious from 1992 until now with the technical and vocational training I am talking about, the apprenticeship schemes and all that could have been done to help the small companies if the minister had the interest he says he has.

Mr. Speaker, if they want to blame me, fine. I accept that I was the minister and I had got certain things done and certain things were not done. I accept that. And if they want to lay all the blame on me, then do that. They are quite capable and they will have some people who will believe that too but thank God that there are people with sense who are not so politically motivated that understand the whole situation and know what the position was from then until now.

All that I have outlined could only come about if we put the national training fund in place and companies contribute to it, of course. Each contribution would be according to the size of the company. What I have talked about today is not detailed in the Manpower Development Advisory Committee. I talk about the need for innovation. There seems to be none with the minister. That's why education is in trouble and tourism is down because they have not been doing their jobs.

And because I have been interrupted so often, I am going to table this report. Then anybody can judge whether I am right or wrong, whether something more should have been done. What they won't know is exactly what took place in Executive Council. They don't know what the minister said, and that is on record from Thursday when he spoke.

Some of us believe that these islands have reached a watershed. We cannot depend on labour increases to generate future economic growth because of its limited supply.

The Speaker: Let me interrupt you. Do you mean to table it now or later?

Mr. W McKeever Bush: I will table it at the end of my debate.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: Nor can we rely solely on increase in capital to generate growth. We must come to grips now with the efficiency and effectiveness with which we use our labour and capital resources to assist in generating economic growth. A holistic approach to manpower development, economic restructuring and technical progress is required to achieve maximum results. A highly skilled workforce is required to match the growing sophistication of our industries in this the 21st Century and to drive the industrial development and restructuring through continual upgrading of skills and retraining. We must ensure that there will be adequate supply of skilled workers to meet the ever-changing needs of the new millennium.

The National Team had a slogan "Building for the 21st Century." The new millennium is upon us. Because everyone says this is a good motion, I am going to table the report so everyone understand where we have gotten to. I would hope that those things I outlined this morning will be looked at. I hope that they will go and get the Hansard, as they have already done with the contribution I made. They have already gotten that aspect of the motion. While they say I can't advise them, they go and get what I said to see what they can take out of it, but they will never say that it came from me. But that's okay, so long as it gets done. I hope that all that I outlined this morning will be taken up, or at least looked at.

I thank you, Mr. Speaker, for your indulgence. I am sorry we had so many interruptions from the Minister for Education. And I am sorry that he was at sea with some of his interruptions. I will say one more thing. He asked for a survey of the needs of small companies. This report did quite a bit of survey. What he needs to do is get on with the job, him and the Minister for Community Affairs, since he says that she's included too. The two of them need to get on with the job. Yes, this report is a little bit old at this point, but it is still relevant to the problem.

Thank you, and I lay the report on the Table of this honourable House.

The Speaker: So ordered.

It is my understanding that that has completed the debate. I shall now put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 2/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 2/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: At this time we shall suspend proceedings until 2.15 for lunch.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.25 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Item 5 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills. As The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Women, Sports Youth and Culture is not present . . . The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: The minister is ill, and I would ask if we could suspend the same Standing Order to take the Private Member's Motion before the Bills.

The Speaker: Suspension of Standing Order 14(2). The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) to take private business in preference to government business.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/99 TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER GOVERNMENT BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Moving on to time 5, Other Business, Private Member's Motion's No. 5/99 Amendment to the Immigration Law. To be moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay. (Pause)

Are you prepared to go forward with this Private Member's Motion?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, if I have just a minute, I can deal with it.

The Speaker: Thank you.

(pause)

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. While the member is preparing for the motion sir if you don't mind I would just like to bring to the attention of the Chair that perhaps we could try to get a little bit better communication going in that it must have been known before now that the minister would not have been here to deal with these things. Perhaps if we were advised on the backbench about the situation we would have been better prepared to deal with it.

The Speaker: I did not know either.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I am not saying you, sir. It's nothing for anyone, I am just saying that if we know we are better able to be prepared.

The Speaker: Understood.

First Elected Member for West Bay, if you have another motion that you would prefer to move I—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am cool.

The Speaker: Fine.

Private Member's Motion No. 5/99.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/99

AMENDMENT TO THE IMMIGRATION LAW (RE: DOMESTIC PROBLEMS)

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I better just go ahead on this one, seeing the other day they objected to us changing the agenda and made a big thing out of nothing. So I just better go ahead on this one. I note also that the seconder of the motion is not here. She was not aware, of course, but I believe that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is prepared to second the motion.

I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 5/99, which reads:

"WHEREAS Members of this honourable House have received numerous complaints about domestic problems;

"AND WHEREAS the Immigration Board has previously made attempts to deal with some domestic problems based upon character;

"AND WHEREAS the Board has now been advised that such problems are a matter for the jurisdiction of the honourable Courts;

"AND WHEREAS in previous years this honourable House has set down in law sanctions against marriages of convenience;

"AND WHEREAS because of so many domestic problems there is a serious social disruption in families;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED that this honourable House makes attempts, either by amending the Immigration Law, or otherwise, to allow the Immigration Board to take action, based upon the character of a person, whenever a matter is brought to its attention."

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: In the absence of the Elected Member for North Side, I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 5/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: All of us recognise the growth of the country and the problems that come with growth in a small country such as ours. The most common problem the Immigration Board faces is in the category of unskilled workers, especially those here on short-term six month work permits to work in restaurants and bars.

Their experience is that these individuals earn very low incomes and apparently resort to supplementing their income by other means, even to the extent of alleged prostitution. The most common complaint the Immigration Board receives is from spouses of men involved in these affairs who abandon their financial obligations to the family and in turn financially support the work permit holder by paying rent and buying luxury items like jewellery. This creates a financial hardship to the family unit, not to mention the emotional strain especially for young children in the home.

A growing concern is the number of unskilled workers who get pregnant for Caymanian men for the sole purpose of being able to reside permanently in the Cayman Islands. If the DNA proves the Caymanian father's paternity, the child and mother then become the charge of the Cayman Islands since the child has a right to remain and the mother has a new Cayman connection and cannot be made to leave the islands on the grounds of humanitarian issues, that is, the family unit should not be split. The irony in this whole situation is that this arrangement is meant to keep the family unit, such as it is, together, yet it is the Caymanian family that becomes split as a result.

Time would not permit me to provide this House with examples of complaints that I know of which go to the Immigration Board. But I can assure you that they receive many heart-wrenching reports. The Immigration Board accepts that it is not the proper forum for resolving family issues. I recognise that also. Nevertheless, there are cases that require intervention and where this involves a work permit holder with a Caymanian spouse the Immigration Board is the obvious body to which complaints are made.

The Board is of the view where these types of relationships create financial hardship, serious emotional stress to the victim's spouse and Caymanian children, and where violence is threatened the Immigration Board cannot turn a blind eye and recommend resolution in the Courts. Often divorce is not necessary especially where the work permit holder is here on a short-term work permit, and in other cases divorce is not an option for reasons of economics and/or religion.

I checked with the Immigration Board members, some of them. The Immigration Board is of the view that section 30(1)(a) of the Immigration Law (1997 Revision) which deals, inter alia, with a person's character may be used as a consideration in these circumstances. However, the Board, as I understand it, has been advised that it cannot involve itself in these matters.

In extreme cases where a work permit holder is known to be interfering in a Caymanian family, the Immigration Board is not a proper forum for resolving these issues. I feel then that some alternative must be provided for the Caymanian victims without resorting to divorce. As I stated before, divorce is not always an option. The Immigration Board is concerned with the growing number of complaints of this nature, from what I understand. And if the Immigration Board cannot help to resolve some of these issues there must be a relief provided to these victims elsewhere.

One suggestion I understood from them would be, for the short term, to expand section 30(1)(a) to allow the Board to deal with extreme cases of this nature and at the very least this should be a deterrent. Additionally, unskilled workers who have become pregnant in the Cayman Islands, whether or not by a Caymanian man, should be made to return to their country. Some people feel this. It is not necessarily that I feel this way on all issues, but a lot of people feel that they should return to their country of origin before the birth of the child. This is one thing that representatives are faced with at times.

Some people feel that this would eliminate female work permit holders circumventing the Immigration Law by creating an alternative means of residing in the Cayman Islands permanently, and in some cases destroying Caymanian families in the process. From talking to different people on the Board, I understand they appreciate there is much opinion about the Board's ability to deal with these types of domestic issues and certainly there are good arguments both ways. At the end of the day a very real problem does exist for Caymanian families who up to now have only been able to use the Immigration Board as their only means of resolving the domestic issues. This is an area which requires attention and if the Immigration Board is determined not to be the proper forum in any case it is imperative and urgent that a remedy is created elsewhere.

I know the government proposes to amend this motion so that we can refer this matter to a select committee that is now underway. That perhaps is not a bad thing. I have no real problem with it. But when are we going to get a report or any kind of finalisation from that committee? We are hoping that work can be finished soon. I know that members are committed and the Chairman is committed to getting things done quickly, and we have been moving along in the right direction. But let no one minimise the seriousness of the situation because this affects people all around. You can say it affects a man's freedom to deal with any woman he wants to deal with, or the other way around. That is so, and human rights might seem to say that they should have that kind of fair play, let us call it. But then, on the other hand, when we as representatives are faced with the problems in some cases where children are affected and they don't have enough money to deal with children and treat their children properly, then these are things that we must come to grips with.

The Immigration Board used to deal with it as I understand it under the section I quoted earlier which really says that "The Board, in considering any application shall subject to any general directions which the Governor may from time to time give in respect of the consideration of such application take particularly into account . . ." and they name several items but (a) says "the character, the reputation and the health of the person whose gainful occupation is sought to be authorised, hereinafter in this section referred to as 'the worker' and where relevant any member of his household."

So the view of the Immigration Board, many previous members and even some present members, was that they could deal with it. But they have been told that this was not the place for it. Therefore they have been caught between a rock and a hard place—they get the complaint from the Caymanian family and they can see themselves what the situation is. And you can believe that we as representatives are often faced with some serious problems. I am not for or against any nationality. I have never been and I am not now, but when it comes to certain situations we have to look at them.

I have seen cases where women in their 70s are now affected because certain persons working here get a chance to be with that husband and they entirely disrupt the lives of ladies of that age. This is heart wrenching to say the least. I mean, people who would not normally get into any kind of problem have been locked up over night, a lady 70-odd years old because of the trauma she went through. These are the problems we are finding and if anyone believes that they can minimise this sort of social crisis I believe we are in, then they are making a sad mistake. Or if anyone believes that they can make light, or make a joke of the situation then it's another matter. However, that would be on their conscience.

I would have no problem with putting it to a committee, but I would hope that what they have presently in the law that the Immigration Board will at least be allowed to keep looking at it until we can formalise a position that might be acceptable. But anything that we can do should be acceptable because we can't allow this kind of situation to continue.

As I said, I have no personal gripes with any kind of nationality because we have good people coming from all around, and there's good and bad in every situation. So I hope that we don't give the impression that the Immigration Board can't do anything because if a serious case comes up in the meantime what then? The motion is left for the conscience of members. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, it appears that the mover is asking for an amendment to the Immigration Law regarding domestic problems. He has already indicated that the government will be bringing an amendment. If that is the case, I guess I will have the opportunity to speak to that amendment and to say that since we do have a select committee on Immigration maybe the mover is right in suggesting that perhaps that is the place this type of consideration should be at present. However, I would like to take the opportunity to speak to the motion briefly in order to outline what might be the challenges the country faces as put forward by the mover of this motion, the First Elected Member for West Bay.

I would have wished for the mover to be more specific in his definition of the social class or nationality or numbers of nationalities responsible for this crises in the country so that we could have gained insight as to why it is an emergency to deal with this outside the select committee of the whole House on Immigration. I know that my eyes and my ears are working, and I have seen situations in this country that are not considered to be in order with what we profess to be in this country, that is Christian people. There has been illegitimacy, fornication, adultery, all of these things for generations and generations. I don't suppose that I am considered to be a traitor to say that fornication took place before immigrants started coming to the Cayman Islands, that there were persons in this country that abandoned the role of supportive father and husband; that there were persons who attempted to rear two or three families at the same time; that there were persons who stayed married for the period in which the woman was nice and beautiful and when she began to age under the stress of bearing children and working hard to support the family moved on to greener pastures.

I don't suppose anybody who is fair thinking would try to blame this on any nationality today or any social class today because it is a phenomena that has been with us for some time. The magnitude of the problem has increased with prosperity and as a result of men having choices to chose sexual partners, not only from the point of view of the nationality, but the complexions and texture of hair and all of those types of considerations are borne in mind when men are deciding to participate in this type of activity.

I am not here to create morals by way of legislation because I believe that if we were not ingrained with principles as youngsters that will cause us to withhold the oath that we make before God and the State, if those laws are not sufficient to cause men to behave in a particular way how this Immigration amendment will cause this I fail to see. I have always tried to suggest that the government has to be careful in becoming the dictators of morality. I believe that is within the realm of the churches and I believe that is within the realm of the families, and I believe that if government becomes involved in morality questions it could become too subjective and as a result of becoming too subjective it could begin to violate the very sacred rights of the individuals we are here to protect. We have to be careful about that.

There were cases when we had the so-called protection board where people were being deported from this country without even being told by the Immigration Board why, because persons could write letters and so on and so forth. We are a maturing society. I believe the way in which we must seek a solution to this particular problem has to be more mature. We cannot retrogress and go back twenty years and expect to solve the problems of today. The problems of today must be solved by greater intelligence than those problems of yesterday.

I believe that the motion is bringing, the question of the domestic crisis is a real important question today. I believe that to simplify its solution to this type of legislation is to try to simply the whole problem and to put blame where blame is only partly deserved. The blame is on both sides. The blame is on the side of "those women" the Member for West Bay talked about, those domestic workers, those people on the six month permit, that particular social class of people that may be underpaid in this society, that might be socially and economically exploited also because people are paying them a lowly wage. And it is not outside the customs of the Caribbean and Latin American countries that women do seek some kind of subsistence from other men. It is a part of the cultural dynamics therefore it has to be a change in values rather than a change in legislation.

Whether we go to Honduras, Nicaragua, Costa Rica, Buenos Aires, Jamaica, wherever we go we find that a great majority of the women are left impregnated with children to raise while the men go on to greater pastures and as a result of this tradition existing in the Caribbean in particular from the days of slavery until after the abolition of slavery because of this they have created the immorality. The women have had to go out and do these things in order to survive. So the choices they are making are not solely the result of them, it is also the result of the social sexual practices of the Caribbean and Latin men.

I beg to show this honourable House that we can not respond as a government to every domestic dispute, to every inequality as a result of competition on a sexual level between women. The fact that a Caymanian man would want to find himself in a particular bar each day to drink and look at a woman from Honduras and spend more money not only on the drinks but eventually on her has nothing to do with the Immigration Laws of this country. It has to do perhaps with enforcement, the fact that the laws we do have are not being enforced. Why are these people being given permits to work in these bars? If these are the types of persons we are talking about.

I was hoping that the mover would have been a little more specific so that we could identify exactly who it is that we are talking about and know better what we need to do to find a solution.

I know that everyone wants to have a domestic. The fact that there are so many domestics here from Jamaica is the result that everyone wants to have a domestic and nobody wants to give us the domestic and people who can't even afford a domestic are getting work permits for domestics. Now, isn't the Immigration Board sufficiently competent to deal with this situation? Must we make more and more laws? The Immigration Board, according to how I understand the Immigration Law, is in the position to say no in instances where they realise that the person applying for the application to employ does not have sufficient money to support these workers.

Why do you think we have so many people on work permits looking for work? There are hundreds and hundreds of people of work permits are walking around looking for work. They have insufficient work. That is a problem that has to do, the more we look at it, with the lack of will to enforce the laws we do have. The easiest thing in the world is to make the law. The hardest thing is to administer it.

The problem we have has to be solved not by us politicians interfering in the decisions of the Immigration Board, calling them up saying, 'Could you reconsider? Because that person really needs that person' and we come up with 110 different reasons why and we help people to bypass the scrutiny of the Immigration Department when it pleases us. I have seen situations where people have come down to this Legislative Assembly in regard to hiring persons hired to work in the bars upset that they cannot get permits for these people or that the Immigration Board even has the audacity to screen them and require that they speak English. People get upset. They have a specific interest in bringing those types of people here to make money. It is not just the people who come here and find themselves in a situation where you have vulnerable they can exploit when they smile at them. It's not the fault of just those persons. The problem is deeper socially and rooted in the lack of some stern social values.

I believe that if you tend to drink alcohol and you are going out on a Friday evening and you made $250, you need to be careful not to take that $250 out with you before you give the family something. As sure as you go out, the more you drink, the more you lose your inhibitions, the less responsible you will act and the more money you will spend and you will end up home the next day and not have money for your family. But there are situations where I, a person who has frequented many bars for many years in many countries, know that when you end up in a bar and you start drinking and there are pretty women around you, you drink even more and show off even more. It is a social environment that causes you to not even realise where the money has gone. Nobody ever came and did anything to you. It's there; the drinks are there. They have a licence to serve alcohol. It's up to you, the individual must assume responsibility for his or her choices. If we are going to work with the assumption that the individual cannot be responsible enough to make these choices then we could sadly be eroding the very foundation not just of democracy but the world. Remember that Adam and Eve had choices and God allowed them to choose to go to Hell if that's what they wanted to do. He gave them choices. He gave them the alternative, but He gave them the choice.

I do believe that what we see being exhibited by persons today in our society is the exercise of these choices. I pray that we will try to find solutions to our domestic crises in this country by encouraging people to practice more healthy values from our side of the fence, not from insisting that the foreigners who come among us exhibit a lack of desire to exploit our weakness should they find it because in every situation, Mr. Speaker, people will take advantage of those who are not disciplined and controlled enough to protect themselves.

It is hoped that the law will attempt to mediate and assist persons, but in situations like this we are dealing with choices. I think it's important that we look at the possibility of even the police becoming a little bit more vigilant in regard to prostitution, if the member is correct in saying that there is what might be defined as prostitution. Then the police need to get involved in setting up the CID or whoever does the investigating. They did it once before. I have seen people actually tried here back in the early 1980s in the Courts because the police had set up a whole team of people to go around and approach people whom they suspected of this.

If we find that this is happening in the bars, we need to have our special police working in those areas trying to find out exactly who is responsible and therefore inflict the fear in the men that they too could be prosecuted as a result of being involved in these situations. So, I have looked at the extreme situation, I have not yet looked at the situation that women are in fact having children for Caymanian men in order to stay here and that they should be sent away before they have the child. Well, I don't know about that idea. I think that would be a good idea to talk about in the select committee because we have already a lot of Caymanian men who are insisting that they should have the right to claim their children, although their children were already born outside the Cayman Islands. And they have gone to the extent of taking DNA testing and all sorts of things like that.

I won't get up and talk to the amendment, unless of course I have to answer certain people for certain things they might say. I will just end my contribution by saying that the complexity of the situation that we are talking about and the depth of the crises that we are trying to amend is so grave that this motion would be better off being a part of the select committee on Immigration.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

AMENDMENT TO MOTION

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you.

The government is certainly receptive to the concerns this motion raises and recognises that there are social issues that often times involve non-Caymanians here on some temporary terms. But it doesn't see the issue as a simple one. In light of the machinery which is now entrain and is moving with good momentum as select committees go that the more appropriate course would be to refer these issues to the select committee on Immigration. So, I would beg your permission and the permission of the House under Standing Order 25(1) and (2) to move an amendment to the motion, which the mover alluded to earlier.

The Speaker: You can go ahead. I waive the two days' notice.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: That amendment simply seeks to delete in the resolve section the words "makes attempts, either by amending the Immigration Law, or otherwise, to allow the Immigration Board to take action, based upon the character of a person, whenever a matter is brought to its attention" and substitute the words "refers the matter to the Select Committee on Immigration for consideration."

The Speaker: The amendment has been duly moved. Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Just very briefly to say that there is provision within the law for the Board to take into consideration character. I think oftentimes the Board is expected to determine character, and I think there is a lot of difference between considering and determining. Whether that Board is the proper forum and has the resources to determine character I think is one of the isues that the select committee in its forum could give consideration to.

I think the committee would also need to look at the causes. I have certainly felt for a long time that they are inherent implications of us practising a policy whereby we give preference to individuals who have no dependants, single individuals, feeling that by doing so we minimise the demands on other infrastructure and resources. But I think it comes with other implications. Certainly, whatever we look to do in addressing this situation needs to be cognisant of the fact that the problems we hear of aren't problems that simply involve a non-Caymanian. They are problems that obviously involve a non-Caymanian and a Caymanian.

We need to aspire to solutions that impose some sanctions on both parties, if sanctions are appropriate. But I won't try to set any agenda for the select committee. I am sure that members will give the matter due consideration if it's allowed to move to that forum. I simply wish to reiterate that the government is sensitive to the points raised and sees that piece of machinery as the appropriate route for this matter to be considered as thoroughly and as expeditiously as possible. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that Private Member's Motion 5/99 be amended as noted and circulated to members. Does any other member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you.

On occasion I have described the Cayman Islands as a frontier society. Certainly in reading this motion and in listening to the amendment moved by the honourable Acting First Official Member and hearing the argument of previous speakers, the mover of the motion and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, I am reminded that my description is an apt one and to echo the words of the honourable Acting First Official Member, this is indeed a challenge. It is difficult to address the issues involved here using any kind of unilateral methodology or a one-dimensional approach. To a great extent all the arguments I have heard by the mover of the motion the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and the Acting First Official Member all have merit.

This is one of those motions where it think description is the better part of valour. Really and truly, I had not intended to say anything on the matter but because circumstances placed me in a position where I seconded the motion I feel constrained to say something.

From my experience as an immigrant in another country, I know there is a reluctance on the part of immigration when these matters are referred to it to deal with these matters because the attitude is that immigration is only interested in matters of a criminal nature. So if someone breaks the law in a criminal fashion then the immigration department sees it as within its prerogative to offer certain sanctions on the person. These issues are regarded as moral issues and social issues outside the ambits of the law as structured on the statute books.

However, that does not say that this kind of behaviour is to be condoned because we know that the government and its arms at various departments is duty bound to protect its citizens and the citizens of the country have every right to call upon the government for some form of protection. So when these issues come, they are not legal issues as much as moral issues and as such the best solution arises where we can get some kind of inculcation and change in values.

Now, it is interesting that certain developments have taken place in the Cayman Islands as a result of our being a frontier society. I am sure that anyone in their right mind with any knowledge of Caymanian society would realise that in a society of seamen, where our men travelled the world, they must have been exposed to all kinds of things. The difference now is that in the old days the men returned home and certain discussions were never heard, never discussed. But we know that certain temptations must have come across them. Now we are seeing these things on our doorstep and we are facing situations where we can see the behaviour.

That situation is compounded by the various cultural backgrounds from which some of the perpetrators come from. What compounds the situation is that the Caymanians who are at risk, particularly the women, when the act of trespass is so unbearable and they go to assert their claim, as they have every right to do, it is sometimes met with insult, threat of violence or downright physical abuse. And it is not farfetched to say that these cases are by no means in the extreme. It is difficult for persons, once dishonoured, to also expect to be humiliated, insulted and abused physically publicly. So this compounds the situation and makes it even more necessary for us to try to arrive at some kind of reasonable solution without depriving society of services which at this stage are not now provided by Caymanians.

The amendment proposed by the government seems reasonable. At the same time I have to acknowledge that the issue raised in the substantive motion bears investigation and seeks some solution. It is a challenge for us. Perhaps it can be best dealt with in the select committee dealing with Immigration. But I would like to say that it is a situation that will not be helped by trying to sweep it under the carpet. I believe that it would be a foolhardy approach if we tried to cut off our nose to spite our face, that is if we try to solve the problem by putting unbearable restrictions which will manifest themselves in a negative way in society by depriving those persons who really need help, or by stigmatising persons without giving them a chance to prove whether they are reasonable or not.

The difficulty in this situation is that human nature being what it is, it is next to impossible to entirely eliminate these types of occurrences. That is why I believe it is difficult, if not impossible, to legislate certain moral actions. I would say in all candour that our challenge is to find some way of inculcating a sense of responsibility and a sense of commitment and reasonableness. Societies from time immemorial have been trying to reach perfection in that regard, but that does not give us a right to abandon the exercise and give up.

I want to also say that there is another side to the coin because I have had experiences where my constituents were Caymanian men who in an attempt to shoulder their responsibility have spent hundreds of dollars taking DNA tests to prove paternity of a child born of a non-Caymanian mother and have wound up in frustration. They cannot get the child even though they have sworn affidavits and all kinds of expensive lawyers. So there are many facets to this problem.

That again reinforces the position that the matter is best dealt with before the select committee on Immigration as the amendment proposes. I commend the mover for bringing these problems to the forefront because it's difficult and people who are, how should I put it, less conscientious beings who shy away from these problems because they have the potential to open up a can of worms. This is an issue which calls for maturity and great perception. But above all it calls for a sense of reasonableness. I recognise that there are many Caymanian families who have been dismembered, many Caymanian women who have been dishonoured and there are many men who perhaps in a fit of manhood said or did some things they would prefer to forget. But that does not give us as legislators the right to unilaterally impose an unreasonable or unworkable situation. I think it is something we should sit down and discuss and try to open it as broadly as possible to hear from as many sides as we can before we arrive at what is the best solution.

These things are the challenges which a growing country and a dynamic society will have to face. It is up to us as legislators and representatives of the people to balance and cast a decision in a way which our people, while they are protected, are not deprived through any insularity on our part of services the society is in dire need of in order for us to continue to progress socially, economically, and culturally.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Having heard other members speak to the amendment, and perhaps trying to expedite the situation maybe in speaking to the amendment we might not have to debate the original motion again.

I just want to take this opportunity to make a point that I consider being relevant in this situation. Whereas the resolve section of the original motion is proposed to be changed, I want to say that one of the things we need to bear in mind in deliberating this touchy topic is the fact that while we have certain circumstances which spurred the bringing of the motion, it is very important for us to ensure that a balance is achieved. When we speak about a person's character, be that person a Caymanian or a foreign national, we have to bear in mind the fact that as of now I do not believe that the Immigration Board has the wherewithal to ensure that any opinion that it forms based on what is before it is in fact a totally correct opinion. While people are supposedly given the opportunity to rebut allegations or reports made against them, I believe that on many occasions we find a situation where it is someone's word against another person's word and at that point in time it is only natural, if you are in a position to make a decision, that you look at the individuals and tend to take the position of whichever seems more trustworthy or the person you know the most about.

In doing all that we are doing, I think we need to ensure there is a method by which truth can be determined so that proper judgments can be made. You want to be able to do that for more reasons than one. I hold the view that it has worked in a negative fashion for both sides. So while we may have certain problems and find that individuals dealing with it in a certain fashion perhaps as difficult as it may seem however we deliberate on this topic we need to ensure there is a proper method by which people can defend themselves against allegations while at the same time ensuring the truth is determined.

I don't profess to have all the answers this evening and I won't go any further with my debate. But I thought that it was important to point that out so that whenever we are dealing with it we look into those matters and find some type of method to ensure that the truth is known. On many occasions prejudiced circumstances caused some individuals to be literally persecuted (for want of a better word) depending upon the situations they find themselves in.

I think it is sensible to go the route being proposed by the government. I don't have any problems dealing with it in that fashion. I do believe there was genuine concern and that is why the motion has been brought. Perhaps with the amendment being put forward we will be able to get a solution to the problems that have been identified in a more speedy fashion. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? Does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Only to thank those members who spoke for their support.

The Speaker: I shall put the question on the amendment to the motion. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT PASSED.

The Speaker: Does anyone wish to speak further to the motion as amended? If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: As usual these kinds of motions, because of the nature of the motion, cause some people to be more careful than normal in what they say. But members made some very good points. There are problems out there that cannot always be solved by legislation. But that's not to say that as members of this House we should sit down, keep our mouths shut and let it roll on and let social chaos continue.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town felt that I should have been more specific. I thought I was specific enough in identifying the problem. I don't know what more he wanted. I guess he wanted something more so that he could jump up and beat me a little bit more. But I am learning his tactic now, the cut of his jib, and I well understand his mentality. I want him to know that I know history too, that fornication took place before immigrants came here. That was a long time before there even was a Cayman Islands. Families were neglected too. Those kinds of things cannot be cured. Man will be man and woman will be woman. That's not to say—and I will probably say this at the end of every sentence—that we must leave the situation alone so that the social fallout can continue to grow and they keep marching into this Legislative Assembly to look for us, or to our homes to look for us, or to our offices to look for us, or calling us on the phone crying about the situation.

What the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said about controlling morals is true. I never suggested that Immigration should control morals. We can't legislate morals, but we can be innovative in whatever we do or attempt to do. I am not asking Immigration to control morals, but under section 30 I believe that some matters can be addressed. We have the committee, and as I said I am not going to oppose that because it's good to have it thrashed out there.

I also want to say that when the Fourth Elected Member for George Town talked about this motion was putting blame on someone, a certain class I think he said, I was not planting . . . and I made that very clear. We are not putting blame on any one nationality. I said that in the opening. But if that member doesn't know he should know that there have been marriages of convenience. And while he might not have been here to face those problems or been around or aware of those problems, I have been. I have had to deal with them as a legislator. I have seen where these marriages of conveniences begin and where they end.

Most of the time when these marriages of convenience took place it was done with persons, or men, of lesser intelligence—married tonight and never seen again. I sought to have that matter addressed by putting in a section which penalised it. And do you know what it did? It made marriage officers more vigilant. That's what that motion that I brought, with its amendment, did. It made them more vigilant. We put in a stiff fine. So marriage officers began to question more the motives and to look into the situation when someone came to them to get married. Changing the law at that point greatly assisted that situation.

So no one needs to get up in here and talk like I am trying to do something that is not right. I gathered that from what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said, and he constantly looks across to the Minister for Education and the Minister for Tourism to see if they are in agreement with him and he continues in that vein. He doesn't know where he wants to be and that's his problem.

I agree that there is exploitation on certain categories of workers. There has always been, and most likely will continue to be because of the nature and the makeup of this country. I am not telling anybody to pay maids $5 per hour or $2 per hour, to keep them locked away and do nothing to help them. That's not my mentality. I have gone above and beyond the call of duty when it comes to that because that's my background. I have those kinds of feelings in case the Fourth Elected Member for George Town doesn't know that.

He questioned whether the board is competent to deal with this rather than making more laws. Perhaps the board is. The board was dealing with it effectively. Sometimes, as the First Elected Member for George Town said, the right balance needs to be found so that people will have an opportunity to have a say about what they are being accused of.

So I am not talking about the workers or where they come from. The seconder of the motion and I are talking about the social problems, not just about drinking rum. Old men who don't drink rum are involved, I have seen it! So don't come here talking about the bar licence. You don't know what you are talking about. That's the problem! If you don't know about a situation why don't you sit down? You think just because you have a degree you know it all? Do you think that because you can philosophise on a situation that you know it all? You don't! The member doesn't Mr. Speaker, and he better learn that he doesn't know about it. He has just come here, and he should just listen, look and learn. That's his problem.

And when we see attempts by 30 year old and 25 year old women to marry 75 year old men with prostate cancer, that is not for love! That is an attempt for security of tenure. But marriage officers have to be vigilant and investigate it. It is done too often in this country. I am a marriage officer and I have been very vigilant.

I have no votes to gain or lose on this matter. I am concerned about the social fallout that is existing. Families are being hurt and people are being taken advantage of in case the Fourth Elected Member for George Town doesn't know.

It's not easy. It's very difficult to deal with these issues. What happens to a married man who somehow falls in love and has a child, where there is a genuine love? What happens in that situation? He was married and of course there's a negative impact on his wife. What we have to do is what the First Elected Member for George Town and the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town said, we have to find a balance. I can guarantee you that every time I raise a motion the Fourth Elected Member for George Town will try to find something that will gain him political advantage because he is so concerned about that situation with his George Town constituents. That's the problem he has. Well, if that's his problem, let him deal with it, but he better understand that whenever he mettles with me and tries to impute the wrong things I am going to do what I am doing now—deal with the situation and deal with him all in one.

We have to be fair as legislators to all concerned because to accuse someone of wrongdoing is a serious thing. And legislators need to be cognisant of that. I am not and I have never attempted to do that, be it Jamaican, Honduran, somebody from Nicaragua, a person is a person and they have rights. But when we find situations we have to deal with them. I have never side-stepped my responsibility in bringing issues to the forefront in this House regardless of who does or does not like it.

Let no one believe that I am here trying to trample anyone, domestic worker or otherwise. As I said I have great sympathy because I know of the exploitation. I tried to address it in the Labour Law many times and I didn't have much support. The test about doing things for them is when you come here and put legislation that can help them. Don't get out there and shoo-shoo with the Chamber of Commerce and kill McKeever on labour issues. I come from that part of the street. My mother was a domestic worker. So I do know about that aspect of life.

It is true that these matters cannot be entirely eliminated. As I said, man will be man and woman will be woman. But I believe that we must be reasonable in doing our duty because it is our duty to deal with the matters. To do nothing is saying that we don't care about the social fallout. As I said, I have no problem with what government wants to do because I feel that as legislators we should sit down and discuss it because it is serious. I know that all members of this House has complaints and see the sad situation with some children, and we have to deal with 75 year old men To do nothing is an abnegation of our responsibility.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 5/99 as amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 5/99, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Speaker: Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.46 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.17 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 6/99, Multi-Disciplinary Environmental Impact Study, to be moved by the Third Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 6/99

MULTI-DISCIPLINARY
ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STUDY

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 6/99, Multi-Disciplinary Environmental Impact Study, which reads:

“WHEREAS the protection of our environment is of paramount importance to the economic well-being of these Islands;

“AND WHEREAS it is important to balance the negative impacts of development of the environment with the need to encourage sustainable and sensible development;

“BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government consider commissioning a multi-disciplinary environmental impact study as soon as possible, but not later than 31st March, 1999 [I will change that with an amendment], with terms of reference inclusive of but not limited to the following: (i) the impact of dredging in the North Sound; (ii) the impact of mining and quarrying in the environment; and (iii) the feasibility of importing fill and/or aggregate into the Islands.”

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 6/99, Multi-Disciplinary Environmental Impact Study has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it?

AMENDMENT TO MOTION

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Before speaking to the substantive motion, I wish to give notice of the amendment to the motion which was circulated from 14th April. It reads as follows: That the resolve section of the Motion be amended in the third line by deleting “31st March, 1999” and substituting “31st July, 1999.”

The Speaker: I waived the two days' notice.

The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 6/99 has been moved. Do we have a seconder? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I wish to second the amendment.

The Speaker: The amendment has been duly moved and seconded, do you wish to speak to it?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: The purpose for bringing the amendment close on the heels of the substantive motion is since it is trying to make the motion more sensible to debate, and that we might take both the substantive motion and the amendment. The reason for this change is because the original motion was number 29/98 and was set down for the meeting in November, the fourth meeting of the 1998 session. But because of the business before the House at that time it had to be withdrawn and brought forward to the first meeting of 1999. The date of 31st March 1999 which would have been approximately three months is now being changed to 31st July 1999 to make this motion feasible.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to the amendment? If not I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT PASSED.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to the amended motion? The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: The resolve section of the amended motion now reads: “BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED that Government consider commissioning a multi-disciplinary environmental impact study as soon as possible, but not later than 31st July 1999 with terms of reference inclusive of but not limited to the following: (i) the impact of dredging in the North Sound; (ii) the impact of mining and quarrying in the environment; and (iii) the feasibility of importing fill and/or aggregate into the Islands.”

For the past number of years our people have been calling upon successive governments to commission an impact study on the effects of dredging, mining and quarrying on the environment. As recently as 1996, that is the in the last election, the Democratic Alliance made this particular subject a major issue in their manifesto. I would just like to make reference to that under the section “The Environment” the manifesto stated “The protection of our marine environment is of paramount importance to the economic wellbeing of these islands. We will seek to enact legislation to regulate air pollution and adopt acceptable emission control standards. We will strive to ensure that legislation regulating land, air and sea pollution are closely policed and that offenders are prosecuted thereby providing a deterrent to potential offenders.”

This particular part is of specific importance, “We undertake to commission an independent environmental assessment of the North Sound with terms of reference to include the impact of dredging within the Cayman Islands.” This motion is in line with the terms of that section of our manifesto in 1996. There is an urgency in the commissioning of this study.

I will try to be as brief as possible in my introduction, but at the same time I will give the reasoning and rationale behind this motion.

A balance must be found between the environmental system preservation and sustainable development. Government must deal with this matter as a matter of urgency as mentioned earlier. But in doing so a common ground between developers and government must be reached, if sustainable development can be maintained. Development driven operations such as offshore dredging, terrestrial mining and quarrying, must be carefully regulated by government if irreparable damage to our sensitive natural environmental systems is to be prevented.

In reaching such an accommodation with developers government must be cognisant of the fact that an acceptable level of sensible and sustainable development must be maintained to ensure that the quality of life and standard of living of our people are not compromised. Further, it is not appropriate, nor is it desirable, that private investors and developers should be required to commission and finance their own independent environmental impact studies.

The multi-disciplinary environmental impact study being called for in this motion needs to be given top priority so that developers can be informed up front what they can and can't do. This will also have the beneficial effect of avoiding members of this House, including me, sometimes positing views on technical and scientific issues that we are not really qualified to speak on.

The time frame for the completion of the study is really my main concern in bringing this motion. I am aware that provision has been made in this year's budget to commence with the study, but I understand that ExCo has not yet approved the terms of reference and given the Department of Environment the approval to commence with this study.

As will be noted, the resolve section of this motion as amended calls upon government to consider commissioning this study as soon as possible, but not later than 31st July 1999. During the meeting of 1998, a parliamentary question was raised by the member for North Side requesting an update on the environmental impact study by the Department of Environment. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Works provided a fairly detailed answer to this question.

Mr. Speaker, at what point are we? Do I have enough time to continue?

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of 4.30, do you want to continue, or shall we break at this time?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: We can break now, and I will continue on Wednesday.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday at 11.00 AM as there is a matter which members have been informed of that starts at 9.00.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 11.00 AM Wednesday, 21 April. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.34 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 11.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 21 APRIL 1999.

EDITED
WEDNESDAY
21 APRIL 1999
11.35 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Women, Sports Youth and Culture]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: I am sure all members are aware of the tragedy that took place in Colorado, the shooting at the school where so many lives were lost. I would ask if honourable members would stand and observe a minute of silence in their honour.

(The House observed one minute of silence)

The Speaker: Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills. Suspension of Standing Order 46 (1) & (2), the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46 (1) & (2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of Standing Order 46(1) & (2) to allow the first reading of the Merchant Shipping (Amendment) (Maritime Safety and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 46(1) AND (2) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW THE STAGES OF THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (AMENDMENT) (MARITIME SAFETY AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS) BILL, 1999, TO BE TAKEN WITHOUT DUE NOTICE HAVING BEEN GIVEN.

The Speaker: Bills, First Reading.

THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (AMENDMENT)
(MARITIME SAFETY AND MISCELLANEOUS
PROVISIONS) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Merchant Shipping (Amendment) (Maritime Safety and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1999

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.

Bills, Second Readings, these bills were deferred from Monday 12th April.

SECOND READINGS

THE LABOUR (AMENDMENT)
(TRIBUNALS) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Labour (Amendment) (Tribunals) Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Women, Sports Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I beg to move the second reading of a bill entitled, A Bill for a Law to amend the Labour Law (1996 Revision) to abolish the Labour Relations Board and to amend the provisions relating to the Labour Tribunals to provide for the payment of gratuities to employees by employers twice per month to provide for the remuneration of the members of the Labour Tribunals and for incidental and connected purposes.

Perhaps I can start by taking all members through the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons. This Bill seeks to repeal section 72 of the Labour Law (1996 Revision) which provides for a Labour Relations Board and amends section 73 of the Labour Law to provide for the constitution of a panel of persons from which members of Labour Tribunals are selected.

The person or persons constituting a Labour Tribunal are to be appointed by the Governor, that is the Governor in Council. A Labour Tribunal may consist of one person or more.

A member of the panel who is a member of a Labour Tribunal when his membership of the panel ceases under the terms of the instrument appointing him shall remain a member of the Labour Tribunal until all of the complaints before the Labour Tribunal at that time have been dealt with by the Labour Tribunal.

Section 37 of the Labour Law has also been amended to provide that gratuities shall be distributed once every two weeks. There are also consequential amendments have also been made to the Law.

In about March of last year a number of persons were appointed to the Labour Relations Boards, the Labour Tribunal as well as the Labour Appeals Board. Since those appointments the Labour Tribunals have been meeting on a weekly basis in an attempt to clear up some 235 backlogged cases. Suffice to say, irrespective of their best endeavours, it has been deemed necessary to amend the Labour Law on their recommendation as well as on the recommendation of other relevant parties concerned in an attempt to make a conscious and realistic effort at trying to solve the problems relating to the huge and unacceptable number of backlogged labour complaints.

This is one of the ways we are sure we will have to look at the Labour Law in due course after giving it a chance to work and see whether there are other provisions in need of amendment or alteration.

As I said, there is still an unacceptable level of backlogged cases causing dissatisfaction to the parties as well as to the Labour Department and the Ministry. I am sure honourable members have received a number of complaints as to the unsatisfactory state. Presently the Labour Law has a provision for the Labour Relations Board but after having received a number of representations including the members of the Labour Relations Board themselves, the Labour Department and other relevant stakeholders, the Ministry took the decision which was endorsed by Executive Council that we would take the powers which were now given to the Labour Relations Board and give them back to the Labour Director as was in the first case and in my opinion had worked well.

This will also require the Labour Relations Board Regulations to be amended as is purported in Clause 11 of the amendment. It is our intention to use the nine persons who made up the Labour Relations Board in the resolution of the labour complaints. What we are trying to do is use the existing three tribunals to deal with the backlog to make the provision where at least one person can act and sit whereas the three that were used in the Labour Relations Board can start to deal with the new cases as they arise so that we won't have a compilation on this backlog.

The function of the Labour Relation Boards will be transferred, subject to this bill receiving passage, to the Labour Director. We found that this Labour Relations Board was creating an additional level of bureaucracy which added to the stagnation of the complaints and disputes being disposed of.

Section 73 of the Labour Law which provides for the Labour Tribunal is proposed to be repealed and a new section 73 is proposed. Under the new section 73 as set out in the bill, the members of the tribunal shall be selected from a panel of persons appointed by the Governor. It is therefore possible under the new proposed section to allow for a tribunal to consist of at least one person or more. Where there is more than one person, the Governor will appoint a Chairman and a Deputy Chairman.

This will allow for flexibility. For example, if there is a retired magistrate or judge, or an attorney or well seasoned justice of the peace we have the flexibility to appoint that one person to help with the disposal of the cases in a very professional and timely manner.

In respect to Clause 3 the bill allows for gratuity to be paid every two weeks as requested by Private Member's Motion 6/98. I believe the two members concerned were the Third Elected Member for West Bay and the Member for North Side. This bill is merely seeking to make it mandatory for those establishments who are not already practising the payment on a biweekly basis.

There are other consequential amendments as well as grammatical amendments throughout the proposed bill. With these brief remarks I commend this bill to the House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitle, The Labour (Amendment) Tribunals Bill, 1998 be given a second reading.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I rise to offer my support to these amendments to the Labour Law. I also want to say thanks to the minister for her prompt action in dealing with the issue raised in Private Member's Motion 6/98, brought by me dealing with gratuities, that is, where establishments are required to pay gratuities every two weeks.

Prior to this the establishments had 21 days after the end of the month to pay those gratuities and many establishments took advantage of that to the last day, not taking into consideration the needs and requirements of employees. I am very pleased to say that as a result of the passing of Private Member's Motion 6/98 most establishments have already put in place the practice of paying gratuities as called for, that is, every two weeks. I am aware that there are still a number of establishments saying they will not do it until law forces them to.

I am very pleased to see that the minister is addressing this very important issue with these amendments to the Labour Law. I give this bill my full support.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: The objects and reasons behind the amendment to the appeal of section 72 and the amendment of section 73 seems to be, as far as I am concerned, logical and has my support. However, I would like to take this opportunity to comment on the backlog of cases, some 235, that the minister referred to. There must be some reason why we have so many cases. Again, I believe that the amendment will deal with the symptoms of the problem rather than with the problem itself.

The problem regarding labour disputes in this country is very complex indeed. I would hope that in the near future the government will see it possible to bring legislation that will attempt to focus and correct those challenges which persons, both employers and employees, are facing in the workplace. To say that we are going to restructure the law in such a way as to be able to deal more efficiently with the problems or complaints that exist without realising that so many complaints exist because the law does not address the problem adequately I believe could suggest a certain degree of short-sightedness on the part of the government.

Labour is essential for the good functioning of any society. We cannot brag of a stable, prosperous society unless we have found ways for labour and management to coexist in harmony. Part of the reasons for the conflict in the workplace is the lack of communication between employees and employers, especially in the hotel industry. I hear with amazement over and over again the complaints by workers in the hotel industry against persons employed as general managers in the hotels who, according to the reports by the employees, seem to have very little respect for any Caymanians, including those of us in the Legislative Assembly. I believe that government needs to use this opportunity to see that the correction of the problem must start with the root of the problem which is the disagreeable situation which exists between the employer and the employee.

I have mentioned my concern in other debates over the way women are being exploited in the workplace. As far as I am concerned, if somebody is dissatisfied, whether or not it is a reality that feeling will lead to the person making a complaint to the Labour Tribunal or the Board or the Labour Director. A lot of times there should be people at these establishments to deal with employees' dissatisfaction and complaints. It should not remain a bureaucratic function that must be solved at the level of the Department of Labour. It must not be something that is resolved by way of tribunals that are appointed by the Governor in Council, but we know are mostly appointed because of favouritism by politicians. What causes a person to get appointed to boards is not necessarily the person's qualifications, but the person's contacts.

We need to manage the problems which cause the conflicts which produce the complaints, rather than trying to perfect the machinery to deal with the complaints. I believe that is a short logical submission. I believe it is simplistic, but it goes to the root of how we deal with problems.

In bringing this amendment we are almost accepting our inability to deal with the complaints or the situation which has caused the complaints. Women in particular are treated in a particular way in this country because Caymanian working people are not organised, because no government seems to believe that some type of primitive or elementary organisation in the workplace could not only help the workers but management as well. We have seen where management and labour have worked together in other countries for the benefit of the country. It does not always have to be a confrontational position as it is now when we have no form of encouragement, no desire to encourage the employees to organise.

I encourage the employees of this country to organise. And I will do whatever little I can to persuade them to resolve their problems and disputes by negotiation and discussion rather than by complaining. Because complaining does not solve the problem. And even when the complaints get logged on the shelves of the bureaucracy in one file after the other until we have 235 files without anybody really trying to ascertain why these complaints are there in the first place, why the frustration with pay, why the frustration with the gratuity.

Now the whole point they have brought into the Labour Law, a section to compel the hotels and condominiums to pay gratuities on a biweekly basis I believe will help. The problem with the gratuities is that in a lot of instances management in the condominiums in particular believe that the gratuities are too much. In other words, because of the methodology used to arrive at the gratuity, if you have a condominium where somebody is paying $500 per night, when you think about the percentage the workers would get if they were the only people to get gratuity, management looks at it and says, 'Oh, this is too much' especially during the season. So what happens is that the gratuity begins to disappear. It begins to be used for things that it should not be used for.

If workers in Cayman have found themselves in a very fortunate position I don't believe that management should deteriorate that position, degrade that position by changing the whole meaning and concept of gratuity and what it was meant for in the first place. Gratuity was conceived of as a tip, a reward for the good worker, not for the person who was receiving profits; not for the person who had a greater stature because they were managers who were rewarded from not only a social point but from an economic point. The gratuity was to create the incentive for the person who was doing the servile labour to continue to perform this because this was a vital and essential part of the functioning of the hotel, restaurants and this particular industry.

So the fact that it has worked out well for a condominium where you have three maids and a few other people where the condominiums don't have to employ all the people the hotel has to, what is collected in grats is a whole lot of money to be shared among a very few people. And when the managers come to see that they say, 'We're not paying them all that money. That's too much money for this work. This work is not worth that money.' That is the psychology of what's happening in the workplace. So they don't give them all their gratuity payment. And the complaints come.

I call to the Labour Department and I speak to Mr. Banks. And Mr. Banks only has so much authority. He can't go in there and demand to see the books. How many cases have we been able to prosecute? Although we might now want to pay people every two weeks does this amendment actually solve the problems with gratuities? No it won't. And the reason why is because that amendment has no teeth, no conviction from the government to serve those people working in these servile positions. That is my concern with this. I believe that government must go further in supporting working people in this country, the people producing and rearing the children, who are responsible to see that the children do not go wayward. The more hardship we create for our people, the more social problems we in turn will create.

No matter how difficult it might be to face the issue we need to get into the hotels, into the tourist industry as a whole, and begin to persuade if not by legislation then by dialogue to say, 'Look. We are watching the situation. We know what's happening here, and we are not going to allow you to take advantage of our Caymanian people. And we are not going to allow you to embarrass us and degrade us and push us away simply because you think we are legislators who don't have any power any way.'

I picked up the telephone and asked for the manager. I couldn't get anywhere. And I am not trying to be unreasonable. I am trying to find out what the conflict is, what the complaint really is, so that I can get management together with the employee to see whether or not the employee's criticism of the work situation is realistic. I don't just support somebody simply because they say they are right. I have to be convinced that the person is right, whether it's a poor Caymanian worker or a rich foreigner. I have to be convinced of the merits of the case for me to get involved. But I become involved in so many cases that I know if government does not take up a stronger position, and if that position does not include encouraging those people in the hotel industry to organise themselves to be in a better position to challenge management in the hotels when they won't train them or pay them their rightful gratuity because they are paying it to managers and other people, that they are using it to pay salaries. If we do not encourage the people to prepare themselves to be able to stop this it will not stop, it will not stop by tribunals sitting to listen to cases of complaints, it has to stop by active participation of the working people and solving their own problems.

It's time that working people be given the respect due to them. And that they be accepted as a necessary part of the economic order as they become a complimentary part of management and that they be given that respect in the law and in the workplace and that we show that we are a government, that we are a parliament that is not unnecessarily biased towards the worker but believe that the worker is an essential part of the society and that he should be treated with dignity and that he should be rewarded according to his labour.

I hope that the minister in answering will not see what I have said as an unnecessary criticism of her amendment nor of the government, but I am asking that government take up a more supportive role in terms of supporting working people in the country so that employers, be they Caymanian or foreigners, know that they cannot push our people around unnecessarily any more. We need to get at the heart of the conflict, we need to find ways of solving the conflict which has to do with bad pay. And in cases where there is gratuity the fact that there are persons in the establishment who don't think those people should be paid that amount of money for that type of work especially during the high season when the grats are coming in.

I shall rest with this, but truly my door is open to persons, be they workers or management who feel compelled to lodge complaints regarding the conflicts that are growing rapidly in the workplace in the Cayman Islands and to say that the resolution of the conflict will not be a resolution that government can legislate, but a resolution has to come from empowering the persons who are complaining to manage and deal with their complaints themselves.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: The amending bill being brought forward is an attempt to rectify certain situations that by experience have been known to be problem areas and like the Fourth Elected Member for George Town I have had many complaints from workers, especially in the hospitality industry regarding gratuities. The bill does not concentrate on gratuities; it simply specifies a time period after which these gratuities should be paid to workers.

The law prescribes methods and means by which employers should distribute these gratuities and it outlines fairly clearly a system that if followed should really cause no problems. But as the previous speaker pointed out there are some things that are not right with the situation. Unless there is a clear and transparent method by which it can be proven what the correct situation is when these disputes arise then certainly there is a problem that will not be solved.

When we get into the tribunals and we look at the workings of a tribunal, even if we come to the point where these tribunals meet more often we still have a serious flaw in the way it works. It is obvious that the people in charge do not have the manpower to actually deal with spot checks the way the law prescribes. Without making any accusations, all of these complaints cannot be wrong. Given the fact that employees might talk amongst each other and some of the complaints might be misunderstandings or ignorance of how things work, and even if you get the matter resolved, regardless of how long it takes, . . . let me say a few things that I know tend to happen and why people become fearful.

People have an inherent fear (that is employees) that if they make complaints their jobs are jeopardised. And if people don't actually get dismissed they have such a hard time they leave of their own volition because they just can't take it. Let us get the picture straight so that no one thinks the arguments coming forward are skewed. I am not suggesting that I am talking about the norm within the hospitality industry. I am not suggesting that this is a situation that occurs in the vast majority of properties. I don't know that. What I do know is that I have heard a myriad of complaints over specific periods of time.

Prior to this there have been amendments trying to streamline the situation. Sometimes when you try to send a message to students in a class you sometimes have to take one and make an example of that one so the rest can understand what they shouldn't do. It is my view that that might well be what needs to happen. But it is not going to happen the way the system works now. I believe that if employers knew that anytime they might have a spot check, I am not saying that would cure the problem but that in itself would lead to better administration when it comes to gratuities.

It's almost like a cancer. If something goes wrong and it is not sorted out properly, down the line there's a scare every time something appears to not be right even though it is truly right. This happens throughout the whole system. If we look at the way these employees are paid throughout the calendar year, there is a certain period when gratuities are added to the salary which make it seem very lucrative. But we also have to remember that these people have to put enough aside during that time to survive the rest of the year when gratuities are cut by two-thirds. Some of them are still getting $3.00 per hour base salary.

I am not getting into the question of whether or not people are under paid, that's another argument. But I do believe that attention has to be paid to this problem and somehow or another we have to get to the point where the country is not just depending upon a piece of paper to ensure that everything happens correctly. This is what is happening. Because one reads the law, which states that if you do so and so then, this is what you are guilty of, just like we have to have policemen to enforce the laws of society, so too we have to have the policemen in this area.

I know there are people hired to do this but I am certain that it is not done as it should be in order to be effective. Because if that were the case then those responsible could come to me and give me a list of properties that were inspected. They can't do it because I have asked for it. There are no longer one or two properties, there are hundreds of properties involved. And there are thousands of employees involved. So my only reason for speaking on the amending bill was to reinforce the arguments put forth by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and to say that I hope that due attention is paid to this problem. Let us use this as an opportunity to look into the situation and ensure that whatever can be done is done to protect both employers and employees. You don't want employers being branded as thieves when in fact they are not. But you don't want employees not getting what they should be getting because people can take advantage of a system which is only a system in theory but not in practice.

I hope that we will be hearing from the government in regard to what measures they can employ to rectify this situation. If it is an ongoing process, so be it, but I do believe it is time they looked into this matter very seriously.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If not, does the mover wish to exercise her right of reply?

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I will be brief on this bill. I think the two major amendments to the law are good. We have seen a very large backlog of cases stretching through 1995 left by the former minister who is now the First Elected Member for West Bay—in 1995, 39 cases; in 1996, 110 cases and in 1997, 109, making a total of 258 cases that were backed up. There is a legal saying that justice delayed can be justice denied. I think it is important to understand where responsibility for this very large backup of cases from 1995 was.

The present minister is now dealing with appointing seven tribunals (one for Cayman Brac and six for here) which will deal with clearing this backlog. A lot of people have come to me and other members asking why their case has not been here. Now something is being done. A lot of those cases have now been heard since the minister, who is a lawyer, took over responsibility. In fact, out of the 39 cases from 1995 38 have been disposed of. So 1995's backlog that was left by the previous minister has been cleared. And in 1996 63 of the 110 cases have been heard. And seven cases of the 109 from 1997 have been heard.

I think this process where the labour tribunals will now be dealing directly with these cases is the right way to go and it will ease the considerable problems and burdens of the fact that for just about three full years people couldn't have their cases heard. That isn't right. That is something that attention should have been paid to by the First Elected Member for West Bay, who was then the minister.

I congratulate the minister in charge of labour for this amendment. I congratulate her with the machinery that was left for hearing these cases by the previous minister in getting so many heard in that time. I should say that it is very hard to clean up a backlog of cases because sometimes people leave the island or they move on, sometimes they die. So cases should be heard very quickly and I have confidence that she (the minister) has the ability to do that.

In relation to the paying of gratuities, I have had lots of complaints at times . . . not lots but I have had complaints over the years on this and I think paying it twice per month is good. Also, it is important that the employers realise that under section 37 of the law, failure to pay gratuities can bring in a fine of $25,000. So there is a sanction in the law, a very strong sanction. But at the end of the day as the First Elected Member for George Town mentioned, it will need extra staff in the labour ministry to deal with putting the law into effect because we can make laws, but unless they are enforced then they do not bite.

I can endorse a lot of what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said. There are problems. Labour problems are probably some of the most difficult problems to deal with but both sides have to be looked at carefully and then justice done towards both employer and employee.

So I support these amendments. I have full faith that the present minister has the ability (she is a lawyer) to deal with these cases and to point out again that the three years' backlog of 258 cases arose under the previous minister who is presently the First Elected Member for West Bay. I also believe that twice a month paying, together with proper enforcement, has to be the way to help our people sort out the problems in relation to gratuities at hotels.

I fully support the amendment.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you.

I have some observations I would like to make. The first is a very significant observation because I seem to vividly recall at a Finance Committee meeting of a year or so ago when we had the Director of Labour in as witness. The Minister for Education, Leader of Government Business, gave a commitment that he would undertake to clear up the backlog of cases that were then before the Tribunals. He mentioned that he was going to solicit the support of some attorneys and he gave the undertaking that if he had gotten the support he anticipated the backlog would have been cleared up.

I am therefore surprised to now hear that we have arrived at a position where we are attempting to lay blame at the feet of persons who for whatever reason did not get the work done—or could not get the work done!

[The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning rose]

The Speaker: Are you rising on a point of order?

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, would you give way please?

[addressing the hon. Minister] Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What the member has said is misleading from the point of view that to get those attorneys to deal with the cases the amendment to the law had to be put in place so they had the authority to sit. That is now being done and 1995's were cleared off without it. So it is not correct for him to allege that the statement was made and nothing was done. This will now allow seven tribunals to sit.

The Speaker: That's an explanation.

Please continue, Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, was that a point of order sir?

The Speaker: No. It was a point of explanation.

Mr. Roy Bodden: A point of explanation, which is different from a point of order as I understand it.

That still does not exonerate the minister completely if his explanation is to be taken at face value because my question will then be, If the minister knew that it was going to take this amendment to get his proposal enacted, why then did we have to wait so long before the amendment was brought to the honourable House? After he gave the commitment!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: [interrupting] I wonder if the member would give way—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this is not a dialogue, as you know. This is my contribution—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: You asked a question.

Mr. Roy Bodden: —and I am addressing the Chair. So I remain to be convinced that the minister has exonerated himself from the undertaking he gave. But the important point—

The Speaker: I would like to say that this is not question time. If you would make it in terms of your debate that is fine. You cannot ask me a question because I do not have an answer.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I want to say, Mr. Speaker, that I did not expect you to answer the question. It's a rhetorical question, sir. I know that you don't answer questions. I am making a point! And, Mr. Speaker, you know my capabilities with the English language, sir. I take second place to no one inside here where that is concerned. I don't for one minute doubt my capabilities.

Let me put it the way you want me to put it: The minister has just exposed himself because if he knew that that was the position and that indeed an amendment was needed to be brought to the legislature in order to effect these seven tribunals, then the minister abnegated his responsibility by not having the amendment brought prior to this point.

All right, Mr. Speaker? Are you satisfied now sir that I didn't place you in a position of—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am taking a point of order, sir because—

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It is misleading the House to say the amendment has now only been brought. That is misleading. The amendment was put in in November and the House sat for six months, and like other business from six months ago it is still on the agenda. So I wish that he would not mislead the House into believing that the minister just brought the amendment. That is not so!

The Speaker: Again, that's a point of explanation.

Please continue Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you.

I want to say something about what I consider to be the solution to the problems confronting the country. I am not a partaker, and I am glad to see the dismemberment of what I consider an unholy alliance. I don't believe it is good enough for the minister to come here and say that the reason why things were not done is because the minister who held responsibility, but no longer holds responsibility, didn't do anything. As far as I am concerned they are all equally culpable and should be blamed.

If I am a member of an organisation and something is not done because one of the members of the organisation didn't do it, and I sat on my haunches knowing that it should have been done but said nothing, and then use as the minister after he is no longer around as my excuse . . . then I am equally as guilty. That does not exonerate that minister or any other minister who was in that unholy alliance.

Do you know what, Mr. Speaker? Somebody is going to monkey around with these labour problems and our people who are so deserving of having concrete and positive solutions are going to go begging until someone with a sense of social justice comes along and says, 'Do you know what is needed to rectify this?' And they are going to come up with an idea and just like all other countries in the Caribbean someone is going to organise and then those people who have been dithering and forming excuses will have to confront a counter balance. Nature has a way of doing things. I hope those people who are dithering and insincere and disingenuous in their attempts understand that a time will come when they will no longer be able to deprive the people who labour so diligently in this country of their correct and proper representation.

I am in support of this amendment, but I say that it is high time we stopped procrastinating. I want to serve notice on the National Team Government that I am not going to sit in here and buy their excuse that the reason it is not done is because the person who ultimately held responsibility didn't do anything.

They like to get up and say they were a team and all together. I have vivid memories of what they used to do to the former Second Elected Member for Cayman Brac and Little Cayman and me. Now they want to use the excuse that the person who held responsibility didn't do anything and the rest are left in the unholy alliance are not responsible. Nothing could be further from the truth! And on the eve of the 21st Century these problems are begging solutions—solutions they claimed to the country they had! I am only asking what are they waiting for to effect the solutions? Are they waiting until someone comes up with the bright idea that to balance the situation they need to organise?

There is something else we have to get clear in this parliament. We are tired of hearing personalities being singled out, and focus being placed on them. The government is a collective entity and should be so organised that when one member doesn't do what he or she is supposed to have done, have appropriate sanctions to take. It should be done.

I give this matter my support, and I have been praying for years that the people who work in this country could have a system where when they have complaints they could be legitimately and quickly dispatched. Time is of the essence. We have been procrastinating for too long. Let us see what the results are going to be when we put these amendments in place, let us try to arrive at a position where we can alleviate some of the problems with sensible solutions rather than finger pointing and blame laying.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If not, does the mover wish to exercise her right of reply?

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you.

I would like to thank those members who saw fit to make their contributions to the bill now before the House. By way of responding, I am cognisant and would acknowledge that there are a number of complaints, and to be more specific, back in 1995 there were a total of 39 unsettled cases with 38 having been disposed of since I have been responsible for the ministry and not just on my own but with the dedicated staff and the hardworking members of the committee.

In 1996 there were 110 total unresolved disputes. We have now disposed of 63 of those. In 1997 there were 109 total cases, we have disposed of seven of those. In 1998 72 total cases and one has been disposed. We started with those who have been waiting for the longest time, being 1995, and have tried to dispose of them. We have been practically 100% successful in that of the 39 we have been able to dispose of 38 of those outstanding cases.

Some of the complaints we feel are because of a lack of understanding or shortage of communication as to the various provisions in the Labour Law and accompanying regulations. And in the past few months as a result of a suggestion from one of the members in here, the Labour Department has been vigorously pursuing a PR campaign using the Caymanian Compass and other forms of media to state in simple terms what the provisions, that is the rights and obligations, and the penalties and sanctions, under the relevant Labour Law and regulations are. Through that medium we are hoping to educate the public, employer and/or employee.

We also recognise that there is a desperate lack of manpower which equates to sufficient money to bring that to reality. There is a lack of manpower in my opinion in secretarial services, in our inspectorate team, and in the area of the legal or enforcement arm of the Labour Department.

If we would cast our minds back to when His Excellency gave the Throne Speech, we would see that under the Labour Relations section the government intends to put in place as an additional staff member a professional accountant so that they would augment the present inspectorate team at the Labour Department and be in a better position to go in to inspect the books as they are given the power under sections 34 and 35 of the Labour Law.

There is also another possibility, and I should say that the department and the ministry and the gentleman from the Commonwealth Office have looked and are still in the process of looking at various amendments we feel are necessary to the Labour Law, but we felt that these two were of paramount consideration. If we could get the machinery corrected, then we would have a better opportunity to look at the other perhaps more salient provisions of the Labour Law which also need correction. There is a whole scope of them. Many, many different sections would better serve the employee as well as the employer once amended. We will seek to bring them at a more appropriate time.

Just a brief reference to the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, and I hope by way of clarity, if one looks at section 37 of the Labour Law (Revised) and at the proposed Labour Bill one will see that the ramification of the amendment would be as follows and I believe the First Elected Member for George Town alluded to it when he made his contribution. I would just like to augment the argument. Section 37(1) now says. "37(1) A service employer shall distribute all gratuities collected or received by him amongst his service employees . . ." and what this bill purports to do is add the words, "every two weeks" and delete subsection (3). What that means in simple terms is that section 37(2) kicks in. If the gratuities are not distributed twice per week as called for by the motion, the existing penalty will kick in which reads as follows: "(2) Whoever contravenes subsection (1) is guilty of an offence and liable on conviction to a fine of twenty-five thousand dollars and [I would not is does not say and/or but "and"] to imprisonment for twelve months, and the service employer shall [again, it's mandatory] be required to distribute the gratuity in respect of which he was convicted amongst his service employees within such period as the court may order."

I believe that if we are able to strengthen the manpower with the requisite funds whereby we can strengthen the secretarial arm, the legal arm, because what often happens is that there are so many competing entities for necessary and appropriate legal opinions (and the Legal Department has such a tremendous load, but is doing a tremendous job), and because we don't have readily available legal access or the funds to go and subcontract private legal opinion, we find that we are sometimes at a disadvantage. This is not only with the legal department but without fear of contradiction the same applies to the Immigration Board and the Trade Board and Liquor Licensing Board and so on.

So I believe in the process of reform we have to look at the manner in which these statutory bodies and our tribunals have to get legal opinion. We will see once closely scrutinising the present practice with the Legal Department having to give an opinion it gives rise to conflict of interest. As we move towards transparency this is one area I would like to see reformed.

One could have also been a bit more strong armed and said, 'Well, we could mandate a requirement for the respective persons responsible for distributing gratuities to submit to the Labour Department audited accounts.' But because it was a very preliminary suggestion I chose not to bring it at this particular time because it is my own personal feeling that it's a bit highhanded and would cause much too much financial strain on the establishments and the very persons we were seeking to help, that is the employees, would find themselves becoming redundant or laid off because the P&L at the end of the day is what is important to most establishments.

So I believe that government has made the right choice after having identified a possible solution in restructuring the regime in the labour department. And having already initiated the process of taking a full look at not only the Labour Law and regulations, but the labour issue in the Cayman Islands. We feel that this is but one positive step that we can move towards coming to a positive and an affirmative resolution to these matters.

The statistics that I chose to share with honourable members will show that the ministry, the department, is making strides in having these complaints settled either by way of a full-fledged complete trial or by pre-trial settlement. I can also say that having been an attorney and having contacts with the legal world I used my endeavours to recruit attorneys to go on the tribunals as the law permitted and was successful in having at least one attorney appointed to each tribunal. But it didn't take very long before they had to resign because of the amount of time it takes and the pressure put on them by their principals to resign because they could not afford to give up that amount of time.

I have again attempted to identify attorneys and have been able to do that on all except one tribunal and that one we were fortunate enough to have a member who had served for some time come on as chairman. He worked for a private corporation who insisted that he had to take vacation time to be able to serve on the board and as a result he too had to resign. So it's not an easy chore to find capable and willing persons to serve on the tribunals, seeing the amount of time demanded. Hence the reason for putting the proposed provision where we can have the flexibility and discretion to set up a tribunal with at least one or more member because we believe there are persons in the community, a Magistrate, Judge or JP, who would be prepared to sit and help with the disposal of these cases once the law was so structured. So, with those words I strongly commend these proposals to the House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled the Labour (Amendment) Tribunal Bill, 1998 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. THE LABOUR (AMENDMENT) (TRIBUNALS) BILL, 1998, GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.50 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.28 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.
Bills, second readings.

THE NATIONAL GALLERY BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The National Gallery Bill, 1999

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Women, Sports Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I beg to move the second reading of a Bill for a Law to provide for a National Gallery and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As all honourable members will see there is a very detailed Memorandum of Objects and Reasons. I will read them for the benefit of the listening public, as well as for members.

"The purposes of the National Gallery shall be-

- "(a) to serve as an art gallery for the Islands and to establish in the Islands a national collection of works of art;
- "(b) to promote and encourage the practice of the visual arts of and in the Islands and to increase knowledge and appreciation of the visual arts; and
- "(c) to enable the interaction between the visual arts and other forms of art.

"Clause 6 sets out the functions of the National Gallery which are as follows-

- "(a) to organise and maintain permanent and temporary public exhibitions of works of art;
- "(b) to collect and preserve significant works of art for public exhibition;
- "(c) to facilitate the public exhibition of works of art or collections of works of art loaned by persons or bodies for that purpose;
- "(d) to present, or facilitate the presentation by others, of programmes of instruction in the visual arts;
- "(e) to lend works of art in the national collection to other art galleries for the purpose of promoting the culture of the Islands abroad;
- "(f) to encourage the evolution and the enjoyment of the visual arts in the Islands;
- "(g) to promote the appreciation and interpretation of the visual arts in the Islands as an integral component of education;
- "(h) to foster and encourage research in the visual arts;
- "(i) to provide facilities for the curation and restoration of works of art; and
- "(j) to perform such other functions as may be necessary to direct, manage and control the National Gallery and to fulfil its purposes specified in section 4.

"The Governor in Council, after consultation with the Management Board, shall appoint a Director of the National Gallery, who shall be responsible for carrying out the functions of the National Gallery within the policies established from time to time by the Management Board.

"The National Gallery shall be managed by a Management Board who shall establish policies and authorise activities and expenditure to further of the purposes of the National Gallery.

"In accordance with clause 8 of the Bill, the property of the National Gallery shall be vested in up to 4 trustees appointed by the Governor in Council to hold office at his pleasure, 2 of whom may be members of the Management Board, and who shall deal with the property in accordance with decisions made from time to time by the Management Board and directed in writing to the trustees.

"The trustees shall have perpetual succession, and a common seal, and may, with the written approval of the Management Board, hold, lend, borrow, sell and exchange movable and immovable property, and shall have the corporate name 'The Trustees of the Cayman Islands National Gallery.' However, the trustees shall not sell, exchange, transfer, encumber or lease for more than one year any immovable property without the approval of the Governor in Council.

"The expenses of the National Gallery shall be met by funds voted by the Legislative Assembly for that purpose, by admission fees paid by the public, and by any other money received by the Management Board or the trustees in their capacity as trustees.

"Clause 9 provides that the National Gallery shall have the status of a charity for the purposes of any law for the time being affecting charities.

"Clause 11 provides that any document implementing a transaction involving the National gallery or the trustees shall be exempt from stamp duty; and that no import duty shall be payable on any article imported or taken out of bond by or for the National Gallery, the Management Board, or the trustees when acting in that capacity.

"Under clause 14 it is provided that the Management Board may make bye-laws for the good conduct and general organisation and management of the National Gallery and for determining admission fees and fees for-

- "(a) the loan of any material for use outside the National Gallery;
- "(b) copying any material; or
- "(c) any other special services which may be requested from time to time."

Clause 15 deals with various offences and the penalty thereunder.

Back in November 1995 several persons were appointed to what was known as the National Gallery Task Force Committee. They were charged with the responsibility for assessing the need of a National Gallery and its relationship in regard to various educational needs and other cultural bodies, the sources of funding and its regional relationship. This task force analysed points for and against the National Gallery and in so doing concluded that there was a growing interest here within the Cayman Islands which would support the need for a National Gallery.

They proceeded to define what the word "gallery" actually meant and concluded that it was a concept of a medium to support the evolution of local visual arts and does not simply refer to the physical venue that will hopefully be erected in the very near future. The task force also looked at the concept and part of their conclusion was that they felt the gallery would offer an opportunity to respond to the vast quantity of artistic energy that was becoming quite eminent here within our community and that it would provide a means for us to recognise new work and talent and enhance the work of already established artists.

It was felt that the establishment thereof could also assist in enhancing the status of the cultural, social and political awareness and that it could also serve to expose works not only locally but internationally and vice versa. It was decided from the early stage that the name would be the National Gallery of the Cayman Islands. And we are proceeding on that concept. We are continuing to promote, encourage and foster appreciation and practice of visual arts within these islands.

The National Gallery provides a mechanism whereby we can promote and encourage this appreciation within the three islands and a purpose-built building can be constructed which will function as a main support and focus. We plan also to run various educational programmes in the schools. We have already started and they have been quite successful. I would like to thank all of the hardworking volunteers as well as the paid staff for their endeavours in this regard.

The newly appointed board will continue to work in examining various structural points including, but not limited to the fundraising committee. We have recently cleared this site. There was a groundbreaking ceremony a few weeks ago, just before the departure of Mrs. Owen. I should pause to say that she has been extremely instrumental in propelling the embryonic concept of a National Gallery to where it is today. Indeed, our gratitude goes out to her.

I should also single out Mrs. Helen Harquail who generously donated the property for the construction of the National Gallery. When one looks at this generous contribution coupled with the contribution that she made with the Harquail Theatre, I believe it would be right to say that it is one of the largest single contributions made to this Caymanian society. The ministry and the entire government is extremely appreciative for her efforts in this regard.

Going a bit more into the explanation of the clauses, Clause 1 provides the Short title, and Clause 2 has various definitions. I believe they are self-explanatory. Clause 3 Establishes the National Gallery under the direction of the management board and director. Clause 4 sets out the various purposes of the Gallery. It's broad aim is to provide a gallery whereby various works can be exhibited to promote and provide information and education about the visual arts and also generally speaking to encourage cooperation between the various artists in the different disciplines.

Clause 5 establishes the management board. There will be at least seven members who will be appointed for three years. They may be re-appointed as well. There is also an inherent power to co-opt up various specialist members and provision is also made for their resignations. The board has the power to elect its own chairman and adopt its standing orders. This is to be done at its first meeting. The secretary to the National Gallery Board will be the Director of the National Gallery, and the Clause makes the usual provision for the protection of the decisions the board may make from time to time in the event of accidental procedural irregularity and for the board to have the power to regulate itself and set its own bylaws.

The board will also have a statutory duty to make policies and to act only in accordance with the purposes and functions as set down in this law.

Clause 6 sets out the functions of the National Gallery which relate to the collection and exhibition of works of art and the promotion of appreciation of the visual arts here within the Cayman Islands.

Clause 7 provides for the appointment of the Director of the National Gallery and the various functions thereunder. And Clause 8 makes provision for the board of trustees who are very essential to the efficient running and functioning of the National Gallery Board.

The Gallery is empowered to receive various gifts, hence the need to give it the charitable status. Clause 9 provides that the National Gallery will keep this status throughout its entire tenure so that people in the United States who wish to make donations for various tax breaks or benefits will be able to do so legally to the National Gallery with the charitable status we are proposing.

Clause 10 sets out various provisions for the staff and Clause 11 deals with the exemptions with the Customs and Stamp duties with the proviso that it must be for the National Gallery by their management board or trustees acting solely in that capacity. We believe this is a safeguard to ensure there is no misuse of this requirement.

Clause 12 sets out the various guidelines the management board will follow and the advice of the director to grant permission for the various use of the National Gallery. We envisage that the National Gallery will have multipurpose uses and we would encourage that seeing that it is a community based facility.

Clause 13 makes the very necessary provision for the Governor in Council to make requisite regulations for the better implementation of the law and for prescribing from time to time any required or authorised regulations the law may deem necessary to augment the functioning and proper administration and implementation of the law.

Clause 14 allows the management board to make their bylaws as it relates to the good conduct and general organisation and management of the National Gallery.

Clause 15 deals with the offences and penalties. This will make provision for treatment of persons who behave in a disorderly fashion or uses abusive language or obstructs or molests anyone on the premises or causes damage or defaces the property within the precincts of the National Gallery.

The ministry believes that the National Gallery is only one step towards our rounded out cultural development in the islands. We have made strides in regard to the museum and the archives. We have acknowledged the necessity for an addition to the various district libraries, the need for a proper national library and it would be one of my dreams to see a proper modern well functioning national library by the end of next year. I believe that when we educate our people in the various perspectives, especially as we are moving into the Millennium and the various energies arising from the need of reform that whatever we can do here in this honourable House to ensure the potential and opportunity for our people to ascribe to higher heights would be carrying out a small part of our duties properly as mandated by the people whom we dearly serve.

With those introductory words I recommend the National Gallery Bill to this honourable House.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled the National Gallery Bill, 1999 be given a second reading.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: In an attempt to save time, I hope to make a brief contribution that is not legal and does not evolve around the framing of any law to bring a National Gallery, but to talk about what I consider to have been the sense of the country at this point considering this law as timely.

I would like to see the present Court House in George Town be the National Library. Let me start out by saying that I have taken every opportunity in this House to suggest that we need to begin to decentralise and in doing so it would mean that we would not be splitting hairs saying we need a National Gallery and we need a library. We are giving the National Gallery more priority than the library. The library is already built. What now has to be built is a Courthouse.

I believe the government needs to look at the expenses they incur as a result of the overflow of cases and courts and office space. They would see the good sense of moving the Court to Frank Sound, creating the incentive for other businesses to move to that area. I can see the library right there. It's a beautiful place and the parking lot and the little park . . . we could concentrate on beautifying the centre of our country, the capital, in such a way that the library could be taken care of. So in talking about the National Gallery, I am just saying that I recognise the need for a National Library just as the minister responsible recognises the need. I believe the solution is obvious.

From the point of view of the National Gallery I would like to mention the deceased Mr. Jim Bodden who as far as I am concerned was the person who really encouraged cultural development in these islands. I have here a letter from Mr. Jim Bodden, of course not a recent letter, a letter dated 15 January 1979. It is addressed to Jeff Creswell, Esquire, Cayman Islands High School, George Town. It is copied to Dr. Frank McField, Social Development Officer. The purpose of the letter was to reply to a letter introducing to the Member for Tourism, Aviation and Trade at that time, the concept of establishing a cultural centre for the Cayman Islands. This centre would have provided space for drama, music, exhibiting of visual arts, workshop areas for their creation. It was supposed to be a multipurpose cultural centre. One of the things that Mr. Bodden says is "I may be prepared in the near future to appoint a part of my tourism advisory council to deal with the cultural problems and then your committees could be co-opted and thus form the nucleus for which your present plans and ideas could come to fulfillment. It would be difficult until income improves for government to vote any large amount for this project. But within certain guidelines government's approval and assistance is possible once there are defined plans for accomplishing the goal. Once some of the above met with your plans and are accomplished, I would be prepared to consider recommending government take in a large involvement next year [that would have been 1980]."

If we look at the time the museum was begun by the appointment of Miss Anita Ebanks in the Portfolio of Tourism, Aviation and Trade, we understand that the late Mr. Jim Bodden played an important role in encouraging and fostering the concept of developing a Caymanian approach to cultural development. An approach that was uniquely Caymanian, an approach that would involve not just a museum but also a theatre and a gallery or a centre for the visual creative arts. This was back in 1979.

For someone to actually come and talk about a National Gallery rather than a centre for the visual arts sometimes gives us the impression that they are moving away from reality, in other words, that the National Gallery seems to have this type of meaning that it is something big and has to have hierarchy, this that and the other thing. And sometimes when I look at the idea within the historical context, if I look at the concrete examples of what traditional national galleries have meant, the ambition to have a national gallery is substantially different from an ambition to establish a creative centre for the visual arts. I believe that we need to take careful view of the development of this concept so that it does not produce an elitism that would not be suggested in the concept we were working with back in 1979 which was the concept of the creation of a visual arts centre.

I can't fault the present attempts because of past failures of past governments, and because of my past failures in trying to communicate to persons in this country the need for us to pay attention to cultural preservation, creativity and development. But it's important for me to take the opportunity at this time to remind members of this House that when I decided to support the government in giving a subsidy of $150,000 to the National Gallery, or persons working to establish it, that I was doing so because I could see the difference between reality and names. Although it might be named the National Gallery, I could see that the realities could be patterns and conditions in such a way as to include the more proletariat type of activities and therefore not create this magnitude of differences in creating a lead system.

With a degree of flexibility and tolerance I could see that type of situation. Therefore I tried to see it also because of personal reasons. Since 1978 when I became involved with the In-theatre Company that was part of the reason why this letter was written to the late Jim Bodden. At that particular time persons like Anita Ebanks, Bendel Hydes, Jeff Creswell, Maureen Creswell, Jack and Evelyn Andresen others involved with focusing attention on the performing arts in this country, . . . I was involved on a level. Although I was promised a job as Cultural Officer in 1980, and money was put in the budget, that I would be involved in assisting and developing a cultural strategy for these islands and that drama would only be part of it, that the museum would be part of it, that the visual arts would be part of it because from back in 1980 when we went to Carifesta we took a large contingent of persons involved in the visual arts. That was headed by Margaret Barwick whose husband was David Barwick the Attorney General. I would like to tell the story because it's important. We forget about this history and the persons involved.

Margaret Barwick took persons to Barbados and it was the first time that we participated in the Caribbean Festival of the Arts and it might have been one of the last grand dos of this particular festival. It was a tremendous inspiration to all of us, expats and Caymanians alike, that attended as one contingent from the Cayman Islands. I believe that from the very beginning we believed that visual arts had to do with the expats, with the elitism and so forth.

I must say that we had a young man, Mr. Bush, who is now with the Environmental Health as a marine officer. He did a painting at that particular time. Also Miguel Powery began to paint at that time. In 1981 we also opened McField Square Gallery on Mary Street which is my grandfather's old house. We renovated that and opened an art gallery there with money that we got from the late Mr. Jim Bodden Sr. We started to exhibit Bendel Hydes work we had one painting from Miguel Powery. But the whole idea was that the need was recognised even back in 1981 that there was a specific need in this country for some type of gallery, a place where the artists could exhibit their labours, visions and creativity.

We tried to do this on a private level with the financial support of Mr. Jim Bodden to a certain extent. The project did not succeed. It was expensive, we didn't have people willing to pay for the paintings, except for Mr. John Hurlston and Mr. Steve McField who became collectors of Bendel Hydes.

I had a very fortunate experience. As a result of the National Gallery coming about I have had an opportunity to make contact with Bendel because he has been back here a lot more often and because of his interest in seeing this go forward. One of the amazing things that happened is that I went to lunch at Mr. Ugland's house. The reason I was invited was because Bendel was going back to New York. Mr. Ugland was trying to create a little atmosphere for Bendel before he returned to New York, so I was invited. I was taken on a tour of the gentleman's house and saw the artwork that Bendel Hydes had done. I was like going into a gallery. Here I was, this person comes from someplace in Norway or England and he's taken that kind of interest in Bendel Hydes' work. He's done a private showing for Bendel Hydes. This is a very wealthy gentleman. The reason I am telling this tale is to show that it is not impossible for the Gallery to be built by private donations, without government actually contributing because there are persons in this world who cater to this type of art as they do to good wine and champagne. They are connoisseurs of good art.

When one has been involved with the growth of Bendel Hydes' art, and been influenced on a personal and intellectual level by his development and see all the phases of his development in terms of the story that he is trying to tell about his identity and the growth and development of his country it is fascinating. We don't have too many Bendel Hydes.

It was also interesting in that the group that called themselves "Native Sons," a group of Caymanian people like Al Ebanks from Shedden Road and others I fail to call to memory right now, exhibited the same type of talent and enthusiasm to go forward in terms of creating a visual arts movement in this country as we did in 1979 when Time Longer dan Rope was written, and in 1980 when the play was performed. The same kind of enthusiasm that we saw in the theatre development in the 1970s and 1980s is what we are beginning to experience in the visual arts development in this country. Visual arts is not something that women who stay at home who are expatriates get involved with, it is also something that Caymanian people who are seeking to have an identity or to come to grips with the confusion of today are also involved with.

It's interesting to see when Ray Banker is making statements, social commentary with his art it's not just decorative it also has a function. So art in itself has a deep function, a very extensive function, educational, social and political as well. Like they say, the artist can interpret the world but it takes a politician to change it.

When we look at Anthony Ramoon who is now the coordinator of Cayfest and the fact that he is also a part of this group called "Native Sons" he is also expressing and exhibiting feelings, ideas and dreams. We cannot say that we won't have the people by the time the Gallery is finished to exhibit. We cannot make those judgments because creativity is a very strange thing and very subjective. If we believe in ourselves and our people we will be able to put what they create on a pedestal because we have to have something to worship that is not totally foreign. We have to be able to elevate our own creativity and we have to have patience with those who are beginning the process of being creators in our society.

I stand to say all of this because this is also the 20th anniversary of my writing Time Longer dan Rope and the cultural foundation will re-stage that play in July. They will also publish two of my other plays in hardback this year. But in 1979 when Mr. Jim Bodden was writing this letter and copying it to me I hadn't started to write Time Longer dan Rope, and I never knew that 20 years later I would have a mark that I could leave behind. It's important that the Cultural Foundation would be there to look towards preserving it and packaging it, putting it in written form and publishing it. It is important that when they brought the law to create the Cultural Foundation back in those days, and I think that was brought by Mr. Jim Bodden or Mr. Truman Bodden at that time, it was brought to bring into being a national cultural foundation to make it possible for it to take over the gift that Mrs. Helen Harquail had given to the people of the Cayman Islands which is the theatre.

If we judge the time at which Mrs. Harquail became convinced that it would be beneficial to the Cayman Islands and to herself as benefactor to spend this amount of money on the theatre, which was 1979, if we compare the amount of her donation (one person, not two, three or four) . . . one person paid for that theatre. If we had practical experience knowing this can happen, then there is no reason why I should doubt that something similar to this won't happen in regard to the National Gallery. I have said this to remove from people's minds the feeling that supporting the National Gallery will impair the progress of the National Library because I believe that progress will only be impaired if we don't continue to focus on it, and if we don't continue to get people as excited about supporting a library as some persons have about supporting the National Gallery.

The theatre was supported because persons got out there and sold Mrs. Harquail the idea. She might have decided to give her donation in some other way. It's definitely important that you get people who are enthusiastic about this thing becoming a reality and once you have that it will happen. So Mr. Ugland who is the owner of shipping companies, and we know he has two buildings here on South Church Street, and he collects Bendel Hydes' work, sees the importance of Bendel Hydes' work, we should see the importance as well.

We don't have to put them in National Galleries necessarily, we should start to first put them in our homes to create some kind of income for the artist who is producing it. But it would not necessarily be bad to have some place to exhibit them publicly so that the people who cannot afford to collect them on an individual basis can still have access to the benefit of his renderings.

I am supporting the government's bill. I am saying that the whole idea of recognising by law that a National Gallery will be of benefit to these islands is not a contradiction either to my personal or political beliefs. As someone who has tried from the earliest age to imagine the benefit of artistic freedom and creativity, as someone who knows that artistic freedom and creativity assists society in finding greater freedoms because it is not the problem of art to establish the moral parameters of society it is to examine and question these things. In choosing to support art, be it the dramatic art or visual arts, we are not choosing to solve our problems, we are choosing to give those who are involved in the creative examination of society more freedom and tools to be able to do this because we believe that society is made whole by it's willingness to look and examine itself in the mirror and the artist does provide that mirror, whether it be the visual artist or the dramatic artist.

I believe that the promotion of the artist will be well served by a National Gallery. I am not saying that there won't be contradictions but as long as I am around in politics, if I see that the Caymanian artists are being left out or used, I will speak up to try to prevent that. What becomes of this National Gallery concept will have a lot to do with how the minister or the persons on the board use their position to be loyal to what are considered local needs and requirements rather than being carried away by some fantasy about what should be in other places.

I believe we have to be careful not to give too much power away to the boards. I believe that the minister has to find a way of reserving some type of authority so that the people can articulate by way of the ministry their demands and desires and not be lopsided and controlled by entrepreneurs, by philanthropists solely. We need to have a balanced approach to what the Gallery will do and who the Gallery will serve. We need to have the Gallery not totally abandon it's obligations to the social and political needs of the country. We have to have painters and sculptures who are reflecting the deep contradictions in our society also exhibited and cherished as well.

One of the bad things I found with the Cultural Foundation is that a lot of my work for a lot of time has been stifled simply because I chose to have a more problematic approach to drama rather than entertaining. I have tried to examine not just myself but persons or situations I have come into contact with as well and I feel it is wrong when we have that type of wealth in the country like we have in the theatre and that persons' works are not shown simply because they are not considered to be in touch with the social and political ethics of the times. We have to maintain freedom for those persons in their artistic endeavours.

Freedom is not necessarily guaranteed because the public sector is involved. That's another thing we have to understand. Government doesn't mean lack of freedom, and the private sector doesn't mean freedom. I believe that if persons are conscience of the role art plays in the development of society then government's contribution and involvement can be very productive.

The thing to remember in all of this is that it is not going to hurt us to reach for the stars. That is what it appears that we are doing when we are talking about a National Gallery. There is no shame in saying that we can go that far, that we can develop artists that are of that calibre, that they can feel and support that feeling of a national accomplishment. When we look at somebody like Bendel Hydes (and it is probably easier for me to say it about him than about myself) and the sacrifices he has made from a financial point of view, and from a family point of view, when you look at all the misunderstanding that good gentleman has incurred and when you look at what he continues to be dedicated to then we understand that the love of art and creativity, the dedication creates a discipline, shows a sacrifice, shows that some of us are willing to lay down our time for these things we hold to be dear. We hold these things to be dear because these are the things that allow us to look at ourselves because we can't see ourselves except by way of feelings and ideas. That is why art is so important.

I hope that if I have done anything today it has been to bring back the importance of the late Jim Bodden in giving life to the creativity which is now going to be supported on that particular level. I can remember specifically Mr. Jim's involvement with Bendel, and with Anita, and with Mr. Creswell. I can remember Mr. Jim going beyond what he was by constitution allowed to do to reach out to those of us who started what I consider to be the modern artistic movement in the Cayman Islands.

I would like to end by complimenting Bendel and saying that his father and mother should be proud of him, his family and his community should be proud of him, the Cayman Islands should be proud of him and I am thrilled to be one of his contemporaries.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

This bill is good. The minister has very ably outlined the importance of the Gallery. I think the Fourth Elected Member for George Town has extremely ably dealt with the importance of art and the importance of people such as Mr. Bendel Hydes in also teaching that. I know that he was very instrumental in assisting the art gallery here. I know at the Cayman National Bank we have all local art including several from Mr. Bendel.

Art itself is a way of expression. The minister is a qualified teacher as well as a qualified lawyer so she knows this better than I do. But from the time a child is young he is given a crayon and a colouring book. It's the way people begin to express themselves. I went to the service opening the Week of the Young Child and it was refreshing to have the young ones there singing and reciting. They are always so happy. That's another way they obviously express themselves.

Without the Harquail Theatre, as the Fourth Elected Member for George Town quite rightly said, and also the minister, the largest gift (from Mrs. Helen Harquail) this country has ever seen, we would not have had a facility, at least one that good. It sits on about eight acres of land. She gave the land to the people of the Cayman Islands and she built the theatre and assisted with running it for a period of time. It's obviously the largest gift this country has ever seen and we really owe Mrs. Harquail a lot of gratitude and quite a debt. She has now also generously given the property on which the National Art Gallery will sit.

I think it is so important that people like Mrs. Helen Harquail are remembered and respected and that that respect and consideration shows forth and that nothing is ever done to let her feel in any way that such large and generous gifts are not fully appreciated by the public. I know the public appreciated them fully. We are also most grateful in this case for her kind donation as well as her interest in the National Art Gallery.

The timing of this is very good because at 4.30 this afternoon the Children's Festival of the Arts will be opened at the Harquail Theatre. That will comprise hundreds of pictures and paintings by children. The schools have sponsored this for many years and it is good to see the quality, and the improvement that has taken place in a few short years. Art is an important part of the school curriculum. It's taught in all schools.

I would invite members (and I may have to leave about ten minutes early) to come and have a look at what the children have done. The National Art Festival is very important as well. It's done a lot to promote art. There are so many people who put time and give money or work to see these come about. I think members of this House and the public should be supportive by going there. I guess it's a bit sad, but very few of us go to these things. I go to as many as I can. I think it's our duty to do so. And in with that are tied things like Batabano and Priates' Week, Heritage Day and everything that goes with it. It all goes towards a well-rounded personality.

I would like to endorse what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said. We have good artists here and we need to support them. I have seen some very good art produced locally. I have some myself at my house, and I have also taught my children that they should appreciate it. They too have not only their own drawings, but some local art in their rooms.

I fully support this. I think it is very important that we understand the culture of our past because it's important to know where we are going in the future. Expressions through art is one of the best ways we can express our culture and our heritage. I commend the local artists and say to them, keep up the good work and continue your good job. The National Art Gallery is good for this country. We need to support it and we need the help of the people in these islands who can donate time and money to see it come to fruition. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If not, does the mover wish to exercise her right of reply?

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Just to say thanks to Mrs. Carol Owen for her invaluable contribution and continued support towards this National Gallery for the Cayman Islands, to Mrs. Helen Harquail for her continued generosity with the donation of several acres of property to make it possible to establish the National Gallery, and to thank Mr. Bendel Hydes for his continued support in this specific cultural vein, the staff of the National Gallery, the staff within my own ministry, and I would like to thank all other persons including all honourable members who supported the development of culture within these islands during the years. I would also like to thank those persons the Fourth Elected Member for George Town pointed out in his historical aspect of the cultural evolution for the role they played in bringing to the forefront the importance of culture in any developing civilisation.

With those words I commend this bill to the honourable House.

The Speaker: The question is that a bill entitled The National Gallery Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE NATIONAL GALLERY BILL, 1998, GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: We shall take the afternoon break. Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.34 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.00 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.
Bills, second readings.

THE NATIONAL PENSIONS (AMENDMENT)
(SELF EMPLOYED PERSONS AND PRESCRIBED MAXIMUM) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The National Pensions (Amendment) (Self Employed Persons and Prescribed Maximum) Bill, 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Women, Sports Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I beg to move the second reading of a bill entitled A Bill for a Law to amend the National Pensions Law (1998 Revision) to introduce maximum contributions for employees and to widen the definition of self-employed persons who are required to contribute to a pension plan.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As will be seen in the Memorandum of Objects and Reasons, the Bill seeks to amend the National Pensions Law (1998 Revision) which is the principal Law. Clause 1 provides for the Short title, and Clause 2 is the interpretation clause. Clause 3 includes the definition of "self-employed person" in section 3 of the principal Law to ensure that persons who are self-employed but who do not hold a trade and business licence must still have a pension. For example, we found a loophole for certain professions, attorneys being one, not required to have a trade and business licence. So it could have been argued that they were not mandated to have pension plans. That was not the case, but the loophole was there and we saw a need to tighten that up.

It widens the definitions to include self-employed persons who trade to their own limited company of which they are a director and not an employee and who obtain an income from dividends or directly from company shares. Clause 4 introduces amendments to section 47 of the principal Law to enable regulations to be made that will provide a cap to the level of contributions, pensions and benefits required to be provided.

Members should have by now received circulation of six proposed committee stage amendments. And at this stage perhaps you would waive the two days' notice.

The Speaker: I will waive the two days' notice. Please continue.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you.

Seeing that they will be dealt with at the committee stage I will do that at that time but because of the ramifications these proposed amendments seek to make it would make very little sense to the actual bill unless I allude to them to some extent at this stage so that members can get a better grasp as to what is being sought and the necessity for these amendments.

For the most part Clause 3 will be the first amendment. This merely substitutes "and includes earnings from companies producing goods or providing services in the Islands of which the person is a director, whether such earnings take the form of salary, allowances, fees, bonus or payment of expenses or dividends from shares."

The other proposed amendments, although in five separate motions, are for the most part the same. So I will just allude to one and members have already had notice, as I said. It merely seeks to delete in Clause 4 the words, "inserting 'subject to a prescribed maximum' after the words 'for that year' and substituting 'inserting 'earnings up to the year's maximum pensionable' before the word 'earnings.'"

That probably sounds like a lot of gibberish to a lot of people so I will endeavour to simplify it. For clarity, "year's maximum pensionable earnings" means totalling in any year CI$60,000, or any other such amount that may be prescribed by regulation. It is my understanding that in the Pensions Law the sum of $60,000 limit only applies to the defined benefit plan and contributions made in the initial step by step period allowed for under the law. Most people assume that the $60,000 cap applied to all benefits and plans and contributions and consequently they budgeted their financial plans accordingly.

This misunderstanding I am informed came about as a result of the supplementary notes published during the PR time back in 1996 and the pension booklet in particular said that the cap would apply to all contributions and benefits. This was widely circulated throughout the islands and that is where the misunderstanding came, hence we are now seeking to correct it.

lems that could arise and there is no hope, even now, of accurately forecasting future changes that this law will require as it continues to evolve. Therefore, alterations will have to be made to this law as the board is reviewing it constantly. We have made it very clear that the board is open to suggestions or recommendations from the public so that in the whole refining process we would have a better piece of legislation for the benefit of all concerned.

The amendment therefore allows for the cap to be reviewed on an annual basis thereby providing an ample opportunity for the board or persons responsible for pension legislation to identify any problems and to make a conscientious attempt at coming to very positive practical and affordable solutions.

With these few words I commend this bill as the ministry and government feel that it is necessary at this time and we have met with various stakeholders in the community who have made representations either orally or in written form. We believe it is a step in the right direction.

The Speaker: The question is that a bill entitled the National Pensions (Amendment) Self Employed Persons and Prescribed Maximums Bill, 1998 be given a second reading. Does any member wish to speak?

If not, does the mover wish to exercise her right to reply?

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Just to thank all members for their silent support and to again commend this bill to the honourable House. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a bill entitled the National Pensions (Amendment) Self Employed Persons and Prescribed Maximums Bill, 1998 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE NATIONAL PENSIONS (AMENDMENT) (SELF EMPLOYED PERSONS AND PRESCRIBED MAXIMUM) BILL, 1998, GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Bills, second reading.

THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (AMENDMENT)
(MARITIME SAFETY AND MISCELLANEOUS
PROVISIONS) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Merchant Shipping (Amendment) (Maritime Safety and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move the second reading of a bill entitled, The Merchant Shipping (Amendment) (Maritime Safety and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1999.

For the information of honourable members of the Legislative Assembly the substantive matters addressed in the amending legislation have been presented to the Shipping Sector Consultative Committee for consideration. Their resulting input has been taken into account in preparing the amendment.

In addition, several routine matters have been addressed arising out of amendments to international conventions. The substantive matters that have been addressed are summarised as follows: The transitional provisions including schedules relating to the putting into force of Civil Liability Convention of 1992 and the Fund Convention of 1992 have been taken out of the legislation since the legislation is now in force and the transitional provisions are therefore redundant. These conventions of the International Maritime Organisation to which the United Kingdom is party and which have been extended to the Cayman Islands provide the international regime for liability and compensation arising out of oil pollution damage.

The provisions of Suppression of Unlawful acts Convention of 1998 to which the United Kingdom is party and which has been extended to the Cayman Islands has been incorporated through the amending legislation. In the United Kingdom this Convention is given effect through the Aviation and Maritime Security Act of 1992 and the Maritime Security Act 1997.

In addition, provisions relating to piracy contained in the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea 1982 have been included. These provisions also reflect those contained in the Maritime Security Act 1997 of the United Kingdom. Some changes have been made to regulations making powers to allow the incorporation through subsidiary legislation of the provisions contained in certain international labour organisations' instruments.

Minor changes arising out of the United Kingdom's amendments relating to the tension of unsafe ships have been effected. Amendments have been inserted to protect the government and the Cayman Islands Shipping Registry staff from potential law suits in connection with any Cayman Islands Shipping Registry function carried out in good faith.

Other minor amendments relating to the concept of one shipping register with multiple parts and minor consequential amendments in respect of the registration of submersible crafts have been effected. The lower size limit for demised chart of registration has been changed from 1500 gross tonnage to 24 meters in length. In addition, qualifications to own a Cayman Islands ship have been expanded to include a shipping entity which is designed to accommodate various types of business associations prevailing in the shipping world. These changes have been made to keep the Cayman Islands abreast of other Red Ensign administration.

The registration provisions have been amended also to facilitate the registration of ships under construction and attendant mortgages as well as the registration of mortgages of ships under provisional registration. Provisions have been extended for the director to set out and vary the obligations of the representative person. Provisions for the protection of mortgages have also been increased.

With respect to load lines an amendment has been inserted to change from 80 tons registered to 24 meters length, the threshold below which ships may be exempt from the load line requirements. The word "organisation" (spelled with an "s") has been changed to "organization" spelled with a "z" where it refers to International Maritime Organization Rules so as to ascribe the officially recognised name of that body.

Section 465 of the principal Law has been amended to provide for the Cayman Islands to notify the Secretary of State for the environment transport in the regions of the United Kingdom regarding rules or regulations made under the law rather than such subordinate legislation to be made after consultation. Accordingly, members of this honourable House are being invited to favourably consider the proposed amendments to the Merchant Shipping Law, as outlined. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a bill entitled The Merchant Shipping (Amendment) (Maritime Safety and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Does any member wish to speak?

If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right to reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just to thank members for their tacit support of this amending legislation.

The Speaker: The question is that a bill entitled The Merchant Shipping (Amendment) (Maritime Safety and Miscellaneous Provisions) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. THE MERCHANT SHIPPING (AMENDMENT) (MARITIME SAFETY AND MISCELLANEOUS PROVISIONS) BILL, 1999, GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: Do honourable members wish to adjourn at this time, or should we go into Committee for a short period of time? I think Mr. Truman has to leave.

We have approximately eleven minutes to the hour of interruption.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, by all means, continue on. I have to open the Children's Festival of the Arts at 4.30 and I would ask your permission if I could leave ten minutes early.

The Speaker: I would like to go myself.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would like to go too.

The Speaker: I am in the hands of the House.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think a number of us would plan to attend that function but I believe that we would be forgiven for arriving a little late. We should avail ourselves of the time left to start this committee, and we could probably finish it. This is important business and I hope that the House does not have to drag on for too much longer. I think that most of us have other business to do, so let's try to go into committee stage and finish this work at hand.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider a bill entitled The Labour (Amendment) Tribunals Bill, 1999 and other bills.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 4.20 PM

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

The Chairman: Please be seated.

The House is now in Committee. With the leave of House may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such likes in these bills?

Would the Clerk state each bill and read its clauses?

THE LABOUR (AMENDMENT) (TRIBUNALS) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Labour (Amendment) (Tribunals) Bill, 1998.

- Clause 1. Short title.
- Clause 2. Amendment of section 26 - Overtime pay not necessary if parties agree to the contrary.
- Clause 3. Amendment of section 37 - All gratuities to be distributed.
- Clause 4. Amendment of section 53 - Remedies for unfair dismissal.
- Clause 5. Repeal of section 72 - Labour Relations Board.
- Clause 6. Repeal of section 73 of the Labour Law and substitution - Labour Tribunals.
- Clause 7. Amendment of section 74 - Procedure to be followed on a complaint to Director.
- Clause 8. Amendment of section 75 - Enforcement of award of Director.
- Clause 9. Amendment of section 76 - Establishment of Appeals Tribunal.
- Clause 10. Amendment of section 77 - Appeals from decision of Labour Tribunal.
- Clause 11. Repeal of the Labour Relations Board Regulations, 1997.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 through 11 do stand part of the bill. The member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I would just like to ask a question for clarity. If we look at section 74 of the law, subsection (7) refers to subsection (2) and if I read this correctly I think we are repealing that subsection. Can the honourable minister explain, or am I misunderstanding it?

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Women, Sports Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I don't have the Labour Law with me at present, so if I can get a copy I can perhaps respond. (Pause)

Perhaps the member could repeat her inquiry.

The Chairman: The member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: In section 74 of the law subsection (7) says "The Governor may make regulations prescribing to procedure to be followed at any hearing to be held in accordance with subsection (2) . . ." If we are repealing subsection (2) are we replacing it with anything?

I am going by the white copy, I don't know if there is something different in the green bill. If the minister would look at Clause 7 of the amendment, where it says, "Section 74 of the principal Law is amended (a) by repealing subsection (2); . . ."

(Pause)

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: From my understanding section 74 (2) is intended to be repealed as it related to the procedure the director followed once the labour relations board was set up. But under the labour tribunal he has already established various rights of notification, as I understand it.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Would the honourable minister go to subsection (7) under section 74 of the original law where it refers to subsection (2)? Should that be deleted since we are deleting subsection (2) under 74? That's my question.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Chairman, on a literal or strict construction that would seem the case, but surely that could not have been the intent of the legal draftsman.

(Pause)

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Chairman, having discussed this with legal counsel, when one looks at section 74 (2), if I am understanding it correctly, that is a consequential amendment because of the repeal of the labour relations board, and subsection (7) says "The Governor may make regulations prescribing the procedure to be followed at any hearing to be held in accordance with subsection (2), and in default of such regulations the labour tribunal shall determine the procedure to be followed." So it would follow that subsection (7) would then become redundant if subsection (2) were being repealed.

(Pause)

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Chairman, I am advised that because of subsection (7) of section 74 being made redundant it would be advisable to repeal that subsection as well. Based on that advice I would then seek to move an amendment for subsection (7) to be repealed.

The Chairman: I recommend that we adjourn which will give the honourable Minister and the Second Official Member time to prepare the necessary amendment.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Chairman, but I would add, and I say this with great sincerity, that if any members go through and see that there are specific problems it would not only expedite the proceedings of the House but just out of common courtesy rather than getting into political antics as far as I am concerned—

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman!

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: —if people would come and speak to me.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: May I interrupt please sir?

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Chairman, I didn't give way!

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I am not getting into any political antics. I came across it when I was going through the law and it is my right to bring it to your attention!

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Chairman, I said that because that same member came and spoke on another question which gave an opportunity . . . of course, if she just came upon it she has the right. And I do not wish to infringe on that. But I am saying that just out of common courtesy if members, including me, come across things would bring it to our attention it would be for the better running of the business. That's all I am saying.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Chairman, if it is one member of this House who brings to the attention of the ministers corrections that should be made in legislation it is me! The Financial Secretary can bear me out on that. I have not political gains to make. And I do take it as an insult. But do you know what sir? In the future I will not bring it to the attention of the House, they can bring the law back here with another amendment to amend it!

The Chairman: I think it is fitting and proper that we conclude proceedings in the House. The Committee will now adjourn and the House will resume.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 4.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of the House. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Thursday at 10.00 AM.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Thursday, 22 April. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.35 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM THURSDAY, 22 APRIL 1999.

EDITED
THURSDAY
22 APRIL 1999
10:15 AM

[Prayers read by the Third Elected Member for West Bay]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official is sick and will be absent from the sitting today.

Item number 3 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

MONETARY AUTHORITY REPORT 1997
(Deferred)

The Speaker: In view of the absence of the Honourable Third Official we will defer that. Could I get a motion for the deferment? Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, would you defer the presentation of papers and reports, the Honourable Third Official Member is sick?

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move that the Monetary Authority Report 1997 be deferred until a later sitting.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The Presentation of Papers and Reports have been deferred.

AGREED: THAT IN THE ABSENCE OF THE HONOURABLE THIRD OFFICIAL MEMBER, THE PRESENTATION OF THE MONETARY AUTHORITY REPORT 1997 BE DEFERRED UNTIL A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Continuation of Private Member's Motion No. 6/99, Multidisciplinary environmental impact study. The Third Elected Member for George Town, continuing his debate.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 6/99

MULTIDISCIPLINARY
ENVIRONMENTAL IMPACT STUDY

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. When we adjourned on Monday (today is Thursday), I had just commenced with the presentation of Private Member's Motion No. 6/99 entitled, Multidisciplinary Environmental Impact Study.

I am not sure whether the minister of government has been given responsibility to reply on this, or whether the minister with responsibility is just running a little late or whether he is in the building. Ok, I understand he is in the building.

But one of the things I would like to mention before continuing with my debate is, there has been a lot of talk in the House between members and even the listening public about the duration of our meetings. I do believe that one way of getting around this without cutting back on the important work before the House is that we could decide amongst ourselves who would speak on certain business or pieces of business brought before the House. What I do find here is that there is a lot of repetition on some of these matters. If one member is more familiar with a particular subject then it could help the smooth running of the House and the discipline in the House if that member spoke. It would avoid every member on the backbench and otherwise feeling that they have to speak on an issue, whether they feel particularly qualified to do so or not.

I believe that would cut back on the amount of time we are spending here, because the job in the House as a backbencher these days is no longer a part-time job—it is now full time. We are basically running from one meeting to another with very little breaks in between. In the last meeting, we had to carry forward business to the first meeting of this House and even some of that business appears as if it won't be completed before we end this particular meeting of the House.

In particular, I speak on the question on parliamentary questions. As far as I am personally concerned there are a number of parliamentary questions that have not been answered from the fourth meeting of 1998—the November meeting. They were brought forward to the first meeting, this meeting of the House, and they are still not answered. It appears to me from the Order Paper that they will not be answered before the end of this meeting. That is a very unsatisfactory situation and I thought that I would mention this since important matters like private members' motions and parliamentary questions could suffer if we continue in the position that we have been following in past months.

I believe also that the listening public will understand if every member of the backbench feels that it is not necessary for him or her to have to get up and speak on an issue just to appear to be doing the constituency duties. This is not to criticise anyone, because they have a right to speak on whatever they want. I am just saying this in the interest of efficiency and the smoother running of the House.

As I mentioned on Monday, the purpose of bringing this motion is not to in any way embarrass any minister or member of government. I try to work with ministers rather than embarrass them. However, I am concerned that this particular matter, that is, the terms of reference for this motion, the Multidisciplinary Environmental Impact Study appears to have been before Executive Council for some time without any action being taken.

Whether these terms of reference have been approved or not is not for me to say, because I am not privy to any matters that appear before Executive Council. I am just saying that as far as I am concerned nothing has been published on this to-date.

Mr. Speaker, I think the Minister of Education would like me to give way to him. I am pleased to do so.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: I thank the honourable member for giving way, it is really just in reply to the first part of what he said.

There are questions for three members . . . I think most of us have actually answered all. I would suggest, sir, with the permission of the House that we carry these forward to the next session, the June sitting. They can be dealt with then so that members do not lose the questions being orally answered by a written answer, if that is okay. And I would move that at a later stage, and whatever motions that would remain sir.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I am very grateful to the honourable minister for that flexibility because I know that at least one member had to leave the island and has one private member's motion. And there are others that may also have to be carried forward in addition to questions.

I don't want the other point that I had focused on to be lost and, that is perhaps more productive use of time could be made within the House that would reduce the amount of time we spend in here. I am very concerned about this and I have expressed this to other members of the House. They are aware of my views on this.

As I mentioned before I gave way to the honourable minister, I am concerned that this most important issue is taking such a long time to be approved and for the study to be commissioned. If there are any matters that would be holding up the approval of the terms of reference and the appointment of the consultant, then I would ask that the honourable minister give an undertaking that he will try to get this completed within the time frame being suggested in the motion, which is as soon as possible but before 31st July 1999.

We should be looking at this motion not only as a motion to look into the impact of dredging in the North Sound, but it as a multifaceted motion. As it says, a multidisciplinary motion or impact study is being called for. It also deals with the impact of mining and quarrying in the environment together with a feasibility study to be carried out on the importation of fill or aggregate into the islands. The question of mining and quarrying and the environment has been queried in this House, and this highlights the need even more for this study to be carried out as quickly as possible.

This is not a brand new concept, as I mentioned on Monday. If it were, the terms of reference would not now be before Executive Council. They have been dealing with this matter for quite some time. A lot of time has been wasted because the first notice of my motion came in November last year, for the fourth meeting of the 1998 Session. At that time (as I mentioned on Monday), we were talking about a three-month sort of flexibility which would have given January, February and March. So in that motion—which was Motion 29/98—we were asking for the study to be commenced by the 31st March 1999 but because it had to be brought forward until this meeting of the House (we are now in April), we are now asking that it be done at the end of July, which gives another four months.

You have May through July—at least another three months, but at least four months from March. So, Mr. Speaker, there is ample time for this to be done. It is a waste of time for me, or any member of this backbench, to be getting up here asking for things to be done through private member's motions. The Honourable members or ministers agree to our motions but nothing is being done on it. So if the government does not intend to do anything about my motion then I would ask that it not be approved because all this motion is calling for is that we put a time frame on this.

The motion is not asking in fact that consideration be given to thinking about it because thought has already been given to the importance of this impact study. The main thrust of this motion is that the government now try to put a time frame on it and get the job done. What is the hold-up on it?

Mr. Speaker, as recently as the October 1998 Meeting of the Legislative Assembly, the Elected Member for North Side asked a Parliamentary Question on the same issue. The question was to the Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communication, and was [answered in writing] as follows: “To provide an update on the environmental impact study by the Department of Environment.” [1998 Official Hansard Report, Vol. 3]

The answer (which was a good answer) provided by the honourable minister reads as follows, he said, “Mr.

Speaker, the study referred to was proposed by the Department of Environment but it was never envisaged that the department would actually carry out the study. The study will be conducted by qualified consultants selected by a project steering committee. The Department of Environment will however play a key role in the management of the project.”

Mr. Speaker, I have to question whether a qualified consultant has even been contacted and, if so, whether that person has been selected. And further, if selected, when will an appointment be made so that this work can commence? And if it has commenced, why haven't we been told about this since there is a question that is pending as to the progress report on this impact?

Mr. Speaker, the answer goes on to say, “The study is a multidisciplinary study to address the environmental issues associated with the supply of aggregate for infrastructural and commercial development. It is therefore wider in scope than an environmental study of the North Sound.”

I have just prior to this confirmed that this motion is in fact calling for an impact study that is much wider in scope than just the dredging of the North Sound. But we are also looking at the negative impacts that have now been caused to the terrestrial side of our island, that is, in connection with mining and quarrying in the environment.

Mr. Speaker, the answer to the question continues, (and this part of it gives the objectives of the study being proposed), it states: “The objectives of the study proposed by the Department of Environment are to: (a) assess the present environmental status of North Sound with particular reference to the cumulative impacts of approximately 30 years of dredging and predict the extent of physical and ecological changes likely to occur as a result of continued dredging.”

Mr. Speaker, I also intend to make reference to the report that was carried out by Dr. Wickstead, some twenty-something years ago and is still regarded as the bible on the environment especially the marine environment.

“(b) assess the environmental impacts of terrestrial quarrying and mining and predict the effects of continuing and/or expanding these activities.” As I mentioned earlier, there has been mention made in the Honourable House during this meeting of alleged abuses to licenses within the eastern area in connection with quarrying. So this motion is even that much more important because it will include that.

“(c) Quantify the demand for fill over the next 10-20 years and determine the costs and benefits of continuing to meet that demand locally; and (c) assess the feasibility and determine the cost and benefits of alternative means of supply.”

My motion covers every aspect of this answer and the objectives of the study as suggested by the Honourable Minister. He said in his answer, “The draft Terms of Reference has been agreed by ExCo. Work is currently going on to finalise these . . . ” That was in October last year! Now, if from October last year draft terms of reference had been agreed by Executive Council and that work was currently on-going to finalise these, why is it that six-plus months later the appointment of a consultant has not yet been made?

And from what my understanding is (and I am sure the Honourable Minister will clear this up), the terms of reference are not yet finalised. If they are finalised, what is the hold-up in appointing somebody to conduct the study? Some money has already been made in the budget to carry on this activity. What is the hold up?

Mr. Speaker, the Honourable Minister in October last year, went on in his answer to say, “It is hoped that this process can be completed this year,” meaning 1998. We are now in the final weeks of April 1999—six months hence—and nothing has been done to commence with appointing. As far as I am aware, no appointment has been yet made of a consultant to commence with this most important study. So, I am sure that the honourable minister is in a position to say why the study has not been commenced. Or, if it has, why hasn't the House heard about this? Perhaps he can also give the names and qualifications of the consultant that has been appointed if indeed such appointment has been done.

As I said earlier, I am not here to pull down anybody; I am just here to see that these most important matters are dealt with in a timely manner. There is no good excuse that can be given for holding this up.

Mr. Speaker, as far back as 23 years ago . . . I think it was in 1975 (this year would make it more like 24 years), a report was done by Dr. Wickstead. It is still considered the most comprehensive report that has been done on our marine environment. Since then other reports have been done. And I would like to give credit to the Environmental Department, they are doing a very good job. They have been instrumental in conducting other studies and issuing other reports—but nothing, I would daresay, as comprehensive as the report that was done for the Cayman Islands Natural Resources Department sponsored through the Ministry of Overseas Development back in 1975.

The particular report that I am going to quote from was carried out by Messrs Raymond, Lockwood, and Swain, who worked together with the Wickstead Group as I understand it.

The reason I am going to quote from this is to show that even in that report some 23 to 25 years ago, the Wickstead was basically saying that if the Cayman Islands wants to continue with the level and pace of development that had been going since the mid 60s then we had to take a realistic approach to the whole matter. Fill, marl, aggregate will have to come from somewhere and this is why at this point in time it is important that a qualified person is put in place to conduct the report so that we can determine whether it is safe for us to do any dredging at all, or any further mining and quarrying in the Cayman Islands. Or whether we might have to resort to the more expensive method of shipping aggregate and fill into the Cayman Islands but something has to be done otherwise the development in these islands will come to a halt.

There is no grey line. We get it in the Cayman Islands or we bring it in, simple as that. It is not going to drop from the sky so we are going to have to bring it into the Cayman Islands, ship it in here or find it here locally. If the decision is to find the necessary fill and aggregate locally, then it should be done in the safest manner to protect the marine and terrestrial environment. It must be done in the very safest manner.

I am not here to say whether more dredging should be done or whether more mining and quarrying should be done. This is why this motion is being brought so that a consultant that is qualified to do that can advise the Cayman Islands Government what position we should take.

It is also my understanding and it has been advised to the House that there are a number of applications for dredging now pending. I think it is misleading to the applicant to tell him that we are approving his application in principle when Executive Council cannot really grant full approval—not under the existing regulations and procedures. Any application for final approval must be brought to this Honourable House, and in the circumstances it is very doubtful whether it will be passed because nobody wants to continue dredging in the North Sound that might result in irreparable damage to the North Sound.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, may I just take a point of order?

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. Truman Bodden: I think the Honourable Member in what he said undoubtedly probably believes what he said but Executive Council has made no approval of large scale in principle dredging after this motion. It is a bit misleading sir. I am trying to put this in the nicest way I can. But it is a bit misleading to say that Executive Council has done something to which it had no authority. Whatever the member is referring to I think must have been prior to the motion coming to the House and maybe if he would just clarify that, sir.

The Speaker: Honourable Third Elected Member for George Town, could you clarify that point please?

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I am not going to take any objections to my honourable friend interrupting me because I am seasoned enough to know that's one good way of throwing off your train of thought. I think the honourable minister understood what I was saying. But I will repeat what I was saying.

Mr. Speaker, I will say this again: It would be misleading to applicants for any of them (I am not suggesting that it has been done) to be even given the impression of in principle approval or the impression that their applications will be approved when in fact the Honourable Executive Council does not have the power to grant approvals. This is a factual statement I am making. That approval has to be made in the House. That is exactly what I was saying. I am not accusing Executive Council of doing that. So, Mr. Speaker, that was really what I was saying.

Hon. Truman Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw that, I am sorry. I did not understand that. I thought he was saying we may have given approval. I apologise.

The Speaker: Point cleared. Please continue.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As I said earlier, I really am appreciative that the ministers have given me the impression that this motion will be approved. So I am not here to bash anyone. What I am saying is factual. I am doing it out of concern for this country. I am very concern that we could be brought to a halt because the Honourable Minister for Education has just confirmed that approvals would be given to applications for dredging.

We are having a situation now where the East End Quarry is being questioned over extending their position. That is now before the House, and I understand it is being investigated. My concern is that this motion be dealt with as a matter of urgency and that a consultant be appointed forthwith so that we will know what we can and can't do. As I mentioned on Monday, it is not good enough for investors and developers coming in here to be told, 'You go and conduct your impact study and give it back to government. You do that at your expense—some $2M - $3M expense—and bring it back to government.'

I see that as self-serving and it is not in the best interest of government to have a private developer conduct his own impact study and bring it to government regardless of whether it is being paid by him or not. It must be done by Government!

And this is such an important issue that money should be set aside even if we had to get a loan to do it. It should be done because of the importance not only on the terrestrial side as I mentioned earlier but indeed on the very delicate balance in the North Sound. We need to be careful if approval is given to any further dredging because a moratorium is now on that, that it is very carefully done.

But I would like to make the point again that if the decision is taken that no more dredging after this consultative process has been carried through, if no more dredging should be undertaken then what is the next step we make? Where do we then get our fill? Do we cut the bluff down in Cayman Brac to do it and ship the rock to [Grand] Cayman? What do we do? Do we import the aggregate and fill into the Cayman Islands, which is a more expensive process?

We have to be realistic—not only the government bench but also the backbench—if we really have the interest of the island at heart. If we have the continued sustained development of these islands at heart, we have to think about this seriously. It is one thing to say, 'No, you can't do so and so' . . . but if something else depends on that then there has to be an alternative route to be taken.

Mr. Speaker, I was one that was calling for shorter debates in this House. As a matter of fact during the Throne Speech debate, I suggested that rather than four hours, members should be given a total of two hours to speak because what you cannot say in two hours is probably not worth saying. Rather than going through the details of the Wickstead Report, as I was planning to do, I would just refer members . . . and any member of the listening public that would like to contact me for more details, I would be happy to provide it.

I would like to refer members of the House to Section B, 6(3) of the Wickstead Report, dealing with areas recommended for future dredging. In that report, you will also see that the area that was perhaps being suggested was the southern fringe of the North Sound. But, Mr. Speaker, in the twenty-three years since this has been tabled there has indeed been some amount of dredging in the North Sound so this may no longer be applicable. This might now be somewhat redundant and that is the reason why we can no longer depend solely and fully on the Wickstead Report as the most authoritative guide to dredging and mining and quarrying. But this is so much more the reason why we need to have this multidisciplinary environmental impact study conducted as soon as possible.

Mr. Speaker, I have other things I could say in the introduction of this motion, but I believe it would be safe for me to wait until the honourable minister with responsibility gives his comment. I could deal with those issues in my winding up. So, I will not say any more at this point and will therefore await the comments of the Honourable Minister of Agriculture.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I would like to thank the member who spoke last with regard to his comments and suggestions with regard to the motion that is before the House.

I am pleased to say that on behalf of the government we are happy to receive his motion and to advise the House and indeed the listening public that the terms of reference which have been talked about had been prepared by my department prior to the time when I actually answered questions. But as everyone knows, we have spent a lot of time in here. And while the matter was referred from my department to my ministry and on to Executive Council, it was necessary because of the seriousness of the terms of reference for Executive Council to take some time and no doubt go through it the way it should have been perused. I am happy to say that the terms of reference have now been approved and, of course, will be acted upon in the very near future.

Mr. Speaker, I would like to point out that it is only fair to say that no one on the government bench has tried to hold this up. The fact remains we are as aware as anybody else in this Honourable House of the importance of aggregate and/or mining or dredging of fill in these islands. However, we had to be abundantly clear on what was put forward and to make sure that the terms of reference was something that would be in the best interest of the country.

The last speaker spoke about approval in principle and I would like to say that I have to agree with him. No approval can be given by Executive Council since the time of the motion, it has to be referred back to the Legislative Assembly and he is correct on that. As far as I am concerned, I think that we have been actually trying to work this in the best way we could. Unfortunately, I am not going into the Wickstead Report in depth but I would like to point out that what was also mentioned by the member is that we have only scratched the surface as far as that report is concerned because there has been no large scale dredging in the North Sound. Not more than one person who actually had permission for a long time and that was only a small section of what was actually reported in the Wickstead Report.

The government is happy, like I said, to accept his motion. Unfortunately, although the terms of reference was prepared, another factor that sort of held us up was the fact that the funds to employ somebody to carry this out were not in place at the time when I answered the question to the Legislative Assembly. But they are in place now, at least some of the funds are in place. We will be able to move on as quickly as is humanly possible.

So, once again we are pleased to accept the member's motion and I congratulate him on bringing it to the Honourable House. Of course, we will have to now put our heads together and make sure that what is done is in the interest of the Cayman Islands on a whole.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak?

First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. As the seconder of this motion perhaps it is fitting from me to give my support to the motion itself. While the mover certainly has in his opening contribution outlined the gist of the motion, the intentions of the motion and the various aspects surrounding the motion and the government has been kind enough to accept the motion, I believe that there are a few specific areas that need to be talked about.

To set the tone so that the direction that I am coming from is clearly understood, let me first of all try to put a picture to all of us so that we can really grasp the importance of what is being sought here. For many years now, this country has enjoyed a pace of physical development that certainly many of our older Caymanians did not even dream would occur. For that, I think in most respects all of us are very grateful. But, like everything else in life, this too has had its price.

Unfortunately, some of the things that we depend on tremendously for our economic survival are linked very closely to the protection of our environment. While many of us seem to be conscious of this fact and many of us talk about protecting our environment, too often the financial rewards of certain types of development cloud the judgement at various levels with regard to the negative impacts on the environment. That is nothing new, it is something that we see all over the world and it is something that we have been living with for quite some time.

Mr. Speaker, it is with that in mind that this motion is before the House. As has been said by the mover, there is no question that we all would like to see development which is sustainable. But we have for some time now witnessed a continuing rise in what I would like to term indiscriminate development which pays little or no regard to the negative impacts on our environment. And the health of our environment plays a great role in the health of our economy.

It is useless for us to spin the wheels and have a lot of money circulating in one area when in another area, if we don't watch ourselves, we are going to lose greatly—that is our tourism. Added to the tourism aspect of it, is our own quality of life for those of us who live here.

In previous times we have had encounters in this Legislative Assembly; we have had people taking opposing views depending on which line of argument they wish to support at the time. But I believe that we need to come to a clear understanding that every inch forward that we move, we have to weigh all of the balances. We can't simply think that we will allow certain things to happen because it creates for that period of time great wealth in the economy and the economy is buoyant and figure that any negative impacts in another area because of that, will simply go away because it won't. We see various examples now of prices being paid because we have not paid attention to this area.

In the resolve section of this motion calling for a multidisciplinary environmental impact study, reference is made to three specific areas that would be inclusive of the study but certainly not just limiting it to these three areas.

The first one is the impact of dredging in the North Sound. As the mover mentioned, we have a Wickstead Report that is probably something like twenty-three years old. That is the last tangible evidence we have of any type of qualified study with regards to dredging in the North Sound. Now, this is one of those mornings, sir, that I am going to do my very best not to engage in confrontations but there are certain things which I know have to be mentioned and I will mention them.

When we talk about the Wickstead Study, I remember sometime ago there was debate in the House regarding dredging in the North Sound and I remember the Minister for Education choosing to take abstracts from that same report to try to balance his argument to justify certain actions. I am not going to go into those specifics but I just want to say that I hope that the minister and whoever else from the government who may familiarise themselves with that report, would take the report in its true context and not limit their thoughts to specific extracts which skew the purpose of the report.

Fortunately for us, if the government does as it says it has done . . . or, rather, let me rephrase that: If the government does as it says it will do—which is to commission the study—we will have a new document which is up-to-date. From there on in we will be able to make sound judgements rather than as I have come to believe that decisions have been made on requests for permissions to do certain things—based on who the person is and whether they feel like doing it or not but with no knowledge as to whether it should be allowed or not.

Another section that the terms of reference will include will be the feasibility of importing fill or aggregate into the islands. And I know that there are people who are now making moves to do this. I am not by any means qualified in this area to say that is the most sensible route to take. I don't know, but perhaps this too will be properly addressed in such a study and we may be properly armed to deal with applications of that nature.

Before I go any further with this, let me make it clear so that there is no misunderstanding here. All of us—and I am sure the mover and the rest of us on the backbench will agree—all of us do not wish at any time to impede the development which is taking place in our country, once it is done in such a way that it is sensitive to certain negative impacts which may occur. And that as much care is taken when it comes to any future development in this country, that as much care is taken to ensure that the negative impacts are minimised as much as possible.

So, far be it from us to try to let anyone believe that we are overly conscious about our environment and we are extremist or anything like that. Nothing of the sort, sir. We know what makes our country tick. But we have not—and I repeat, we have not—paid close enough attention to the fragile areas in our environment and as a result, many things have happened which we are regretting now and possibly will regret in the future.

I choose now to stray away from the argument just a bit to make mention of something. I trust it is not going to raise any alarms, but I think it is relevant. I saw in the papers recently where there was some application to re-alignment the South Sound Road (and here again, we are talking about the environment that we enjoy in this country). Obviously, the sole purpose of any application to the Central Planning Authority to re-align this road would be, for instance, to allow for more landmass to be on the seaside of the road, which would then allow construction.

This is a typical example. If we look at the possibility of a Caymanian getting a building contract and also the possibility of Caymanians getting or sub-contracting electrical plumbing and other areas . . . for instance, if a development of the nature of condominiums or apartments was to take place in this area, one might be tempted to say, 'That is good. It means work for some of our people, it means there is more money in the economy, it means people may be able to earn a better wage for some time.'

But you see, that is the type of judgement call that we have to make at this point in time. What about the country on a whole? What about the people on a whole? What about the people who drive that road daily and enjoy that part of nature that God has provided for us — just the view that is refreshing but that is so limited nowadays in our country?

I just took that example to show the way of thinking that we need to responsibly deal with at this point in time. I want to say here and now that I trust that no arm of government, no agency would see it fit to grant such an application—not because I don't want to see development to take place, but the price that will be paid to allow that specific development to take place as far as I am concerned is too high a price to pay. Not every price that is paid can be equated to a dollar bill.

That is where the arguments come. Who will go against the one that I just put forward? Not everyone can own a piece of property that is on the water. That too, we, Caymanians are responsible for. But I am not arguing that case right now. The fact is that the way life is, there are but few individuals who have the wherewithal to purchase land on the water. So, because that is the case, is it right then for us to be so insensitive to deprive the majority of the people anytime of access, if it is even a view to that water just to allow more development to take place? I say, no, Mr. Speaker!

And again as I said while that may not seem very relevant to the motion, I think the example is worth mentioning to prove the point that I am trying to make.

Just to finish off with that same little point, I want to repeat again that I am not suggesting there is any premeditated course of action. But I am saying once more that I trust that there is no agency in government that will allow such a thing to take place.

There is another aspect, one that I recently voiced my opinion on. It has to do with the impact of mining and quarrying in our environment. And here we go again, being totally insensitive to exactly what we should be doing with regard to our environment. When we are calling for this study . . . and I am going to give a little example. Frankly, I am really being honest here. I have given up trying to ensure that no one misinterprets my intention. I have realised that once certain things directly affect certain people in a negative manner, they are going to sit down and contrive reasoning to justify their line of action, to cause anyone else's opinion which differs from there's to be twisted and bent out of shape when in fact if they would just pull back for a minute and be objective, they would understand. So I have given up trying to do that.

I am not even going to bother this morning to go over why I say what I say and all of that kind of stuff. It brings no result to me. People will just have interpret what I say the way they wish. But I will try to be as clear as I can.

There is a specific instance that on hand. It is an instance that I have spoken about in this Legislative Assembly in recent times. I am going to try to deal with it as quickly as I can. The area that has been mined and blasted by Quarry Products Limited, the original area that was done . . . the blasting, the quarrying and the mining has been done below the water table. The fact that this has occurred is problem enough, I don't wish to waste time today talking about the fact that this was contrary to approvals and all of that because really the point here now is not that—at least not right now.

But I want to try to show the kind of negative impacts which are occurring right now—which it seems no one in the right place is paying attention to—which will bring about some serious problems in the very near future if it is left unattended. We talk about the water table and the water lens in that area, which as everyone knows is the largest water lens in the island.

Let us just look at two simple aspects relating to this problem. We have what we call city water, older homes in this country have cisterns. Many of the homes that have cisterns also have themselves hooked up to city water. But from the time you and I both sir were at the Central Planning Authority (which was in the mid to late 80s), I am sure you will remember when we had city water connecting. The areas that were connected to city water, people were not required any more as a part of their planning permission to build cisterns. So as a result, there are many homes in the country nowadays that do not have access to water except through city water.

Now, it is far from impossible that we can have a disaster the size of [Hurricane] Mitch, which may be a direct hit. Very quickly we could have a vast number of homes in this country without any water and we wouldn't know how long it would take to get water back—not just because there is physical damage to whatever it is that brings the water to the homes but because of contamination. At that point in time, this entire country may depend on that water lens up there.

I am not trying to exaggerate any point to make the point, but the fact that it has not happened yet doesn't mean it cannot happen. If the truth be known, the members of government themselves know today that that water lens right now is contaminated because we have not paid any attention to what we are doing. And because nothing has happened to make attention be paid to it, there is no regard for what might happen in the future, which is totally typical of how the country is run and has been run.

You take care of what you need to take care of right now because it looks like that's all you have to take care of—make tomorrow worry about itself. Probably when it happens somebody else will have to worry about it. That is exactly what we are dealing with and how we are dealing with it. This has nothing to do with who is who, or who is doing what, it's the situation that I am dealing with.

You see, if we look at a possible scenario of that nature because we can look for the past 30 or 40 years and say nothing like that has ever happened, 'God is good to us, God always smiles with us, he always shows us how fragile we are and what can happen to us but he always takes care of us.' Mr. Speaker, I agree with that, and from the depths of my soul, I thank God for that. But what happens the day when God decides that it is time to send us a message? It doesn't mean that that cannot happen, does it? So because nothing has happened, that is not important? I say it is!

The second aspect of that specific situation (and I am using just that as an example) is this—and this too is a fact: The farmers in that area, not only the individual farmers who come and operate their grounds in the districts of East End and North Side but there are commercial farmers in that area. In fact, the largest of the commercial farmers come from or operate in that area. They must totally depend on the groundwater for their crops. They have to—our climate is not one where natural rainfall suffices during the course of year, we know that.

Now, I am not here to ask anyone but to tell every single soul that if that place is left as it is, it is not going to be long—and I am not qualified to say how long but I know that it is not going to be very long—before the contamination level of the groundwater in that said water lens, just by salt alone, I am not talking about anything else . . . I am not talking about chemicals or anything else just by the salt alone . . . is going to cause those same farmers, some of them whose livelihood depends on what they do in that area, not to be able to produce crops where they are producing.

But you see, there is the point again. Because it has not happened yet, no one is paying any attention to it. My position is not to want to pin anyone to a cross for anything; my position is simply saying that this is a problem. We must do something about the problem and whatever has to be done about the problem let us do it. That is what I am saying.

I want the government that might think that I am just looking to point figures at them . . . Again, as I said before, that doesn't matter to me anymore, I give up with that. But I want them to think carefully that when either one of the two scenarios that I just talked about happens it is the government that is going to be blamed for it. Nobody says anything now because it has not happened. But it is the government who is going to be blamed for it when it happens. And then I wonder what excuses will be made at that point in time.

I just pray to God that somebody understands what I am saying. The way does not matter to me anymore but something needs to be done about. Now, I can't here today say to anyone or any of the authorities, 'This is exactly what has to be done to correct the situation.' I don't profess to be qualified in that area. But I know that there are people in the right places who know what has to be done and it is simply a matter of ensuring that it is done, that is all I am saying.

When the mover of this motion was speaking earlier, he was mentioning about how things take such a long time to happen. I think he even went so far as to say that if the government is not going to do this then, please do not accept the motion. He was not just throwing out words to make them sound good. The point he was making was that it makes no sense for us to stay here, day in and day out, and run up our gums about all of the various issues that we have to deal with and the people in the authority who agree with what you are talking about don't do anything about it. I am not asking them, I am not challenging; I certainly cannot dictate to them. But I am telling them and I am telling them as plain as I can in the Queen's English the best way I know how, if they don't do anything about it they are going to pay the price for it as much as I and the rest of the country. But they certainly will too.

Mr. Speaker, I want somebody to tell me how is it possible for two calendar years to go by with the government having full knowledge of a situation like that, and people like myself who don't really like being in the position I am in right now . . . I don't enjoy it. I have to step up (as some of them call it) to the plate and go beyond the point and seem to actually come down hard on a situation, just to get action. That is pathetic!

Do you know what is worse about it? Even after all of this, we still might not get any action. I almost have to laugh at that . . . but anyway. Mr. Speaker, I hope that point is made.

There is a thing that everybody in this country must learn: There are laws in this land that are on paper, there are things that all of us have grown with, no matter how humble our beginnings. But I know that all of us know what is right and what is wrong. We are now to the point . . . and I am going to tell you what is happening to us. We are now to the point where some of us are able to equate how wrong something is by what price has to be paid. What a shame! That is not how we knew right and wrong to be.

Nowadays, if it is going to cost too much to right the wrong, it is not wrong anymore. I hope that doesn't pass over people's heads because that is as important as anything else I have ever said in my life. That is where our problem lies. If it takes too much to correct the wrong then the easiest way to go on with life is let's not make it be wrong.

Mr. Speaker, I don't stand here today with any holier than thou attitude; I am far from perfect. In fact, if I am conscientious about it, there probably is not one day that goes over my head when I don't have to ask the Good Lord forgiveness for something. Hopefully, it is only a small little something but it is something; whether it be my reaction to someone with anger whether it be right in sight of this House, it has happened and I have had to do it because I believe that I should do it. But take all of that away from all of us, there still is no reason why we can't do things right. I guess enough said on that specific issue.

I have made a conscious decision while I have been standing here this morning, and I am going to let it be very clear. The intention of this motion (and this is a judgement call, sir) does not in my mind necessarily give me license to expand on the same issue I have just been talking about in a myriad of other areas. I could probably get away with it, once I say the right things, but I am not going to do that today. Insofar as my intention regarding that issue, I am going to do everything I can to ensure that the intention is not misunderstood.

But I am going to serve some people notice this morning, that is the trade-off. I am not going to make anybody tense for an hour and a half talking about something, but I am begging for five minutes to just serve some notices.

I want the government to understand this crystal clear: However, they look at themselves individually as the government the same collective responsibility that they preach about—they must live it. I am not accusing any single person of not doing something that is not right or that is wrong. But all that I am saying is that if the government knows that a situation is not the right way it should be and it has not only the authority but the responsibility to ensure that situation is righted, then it must do so. I understand due process, and because I live in it daily, I cannot fight due process. I am not here to do that.

Mr. Speaker, in serving notice right now . . . walls have ears. The people of this country know how life is. I expect that whatever is done; is done fairly, correctly and above all, transparently. Time will tell.

The other little bit of notice that I have to serve is this: On that specific issue with Quarry Products, I have gotten my messages indirectly from people about that. But if any human being thinks that any message direct or indirect is going to make me shake in my little shoes that I paid for myself, they are sadly mistaken. It is not going to happen. I have a responsibility to the people of this country and if might beats right then the God that I know is not the God that I know and for forty-five years of my life it has been the God that I know and I am not changing that now.

I hope that they will take the time to truly understand what I am trying to get done and to deal with it in the right way rather than to spend the time trying to figure the quickest way out of this situation is to shut people like me up—because it is not me one. I know that the people of this country, once they are informed, will know what is right and what is wrong. But we don't have to get to that. I cannot believe that someone would instinctively think that I am a person that cannot reason. I think I can. But because I like to reason things out doesn't mean now that you are going to send some little jive at me and make me figure that I should stop saying what I am saying.

Do you know what all that does to me? It makes me know that I am more right. That is what it does. So, I hope that too is understood very clearly.

Let me say something else. Someone in this Legislative Assembly or from outside may have been much better equipped to say all that I have tried to say today in a nicer way, or in a more meaningful way, or in a more forceful way, or whatever way. However, what happened today is my way, and that is all I can do because that is me. But it will not go away. I can promise the world that because even some of the people who because they might not fully understand the serious ramifications down the line with this, who may feel like I am an impediment . . . I am also acting on their behalf.

I know if it is allowed for the problem to get worse that down line the end results are going to affect those same people and they are going to wish that something had been done from the beginning. So even with all of that in mind and knowing that at some point in time even those that I am defending may be adversarial, will not deter me. And I am sure that I am not only one who thinks like that.

The government must not this morning misunderstand me to think that I am choosing this moment to try and chastise them or to make them look bad. When I am out to do that, I say that clearly. I want them to understand that this is nothing new to them and for too long whoever was involved, whoever even was here and is not here now, I don't care. There will be no excuse for the situation not to be rectified.

Mr. Speaker, even though that situation that I just dealt with may be spoken about as if it was a specific situation, there was still a thought process why it was included in this motion because it brings to light the problems that we are facing daily. It shows the reasoning why this has to be done. The government has too many decisions to make on a daily basis not to be armed with the right information to make sound decisions. It needs to have the information to make those decisions and this is what will give it that information.

If it takes a private member's motion to get a commitment then so be it—here it is.

Mr. Speaker, we live in changing times. We live in times when my word is no longer my bond. The government must adjust to those times to ensure that it has a mechanism which will not say, 'My word is my bond,' but say, 'This is what you are authorised to do, this is how you can do it, this is for how long you can do it. If you contravene any of these licenses or authorities, these are the penalties.'

Do you know what Mr. Speaker? The government cannot afford to penalise me because of what I am, who I am, how I look, where I live, where I don't go to and where I don't visit. And then don't penalise the man behind me because he lives in a different place. He visits and frequents a different place and he enjoys the airs of different people. It must not happen.

Mr. Speaker, there will be other times for further discussion on this matter. I am sure there will be. The government now has the opportunity to correct a situation that is a black eye for it. That is what it is now. It must act with reason but it must act with firmness to ensure that the results it is seeking. I hope they have the resolve to deal with it.

Again, I certainly commend this motion. I would certainly hope that we would see action, by the fact that the government has accepted the motion. I am not going to go into the details about the terms of reference because I too remember how long the terms of reference have been developed by the department. There can be no reflection on the department for not preparing those terms of references thoroughly and timely but today is not a day to chastise them for taking so long to do something. They will have the opportunity to do what they have to do but if it is not done, they will hear from us again.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:48 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:15 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Bodden: This motion is one that government supports and what it is seeking to do to get a study is what is in the best interest of the Cayman Islands. It is a matter that as the minister responsible for the environment has stated that he accepts.

The last study that was done was the Wickstead Study, done many years ago and that study obviously needs further updating. Really for a new study to look at this and to ensure that whatever is done is one that is in the best interest of the country.

Our children have to inherit in the future what people and governments of today do and it is important that we preserve as much as possible of the natural environment that can be done to ensure that our young people, our children of today will be able to grow up in an environment that is beneficial to them and that has preserved as much of the God given environment as we possible can. The problem of getting fill for roads, buildings, for the construction is one that is always going to be with us and we have to manage that in such a way that we do the least damage to the environment. In so doing, fill must either come from the land, the sea, or be imported from some of the surrounding islands. And the study should show what is the best way that this can be done and it will be good for them to look at the three alternatives and to decide, or at least recommend what is the better course to take.

The decision of this government about three or four years ago to stop major dredging in the North Sound was in my opinion timely. It was action taken by the government at that time and I think that the subsequent years between then and now have shown the wisdom of that decision. Whatever is said, it was a policy by this government and stated by the then Governor in the Throne Speech. Since that time there has been no major dredging in the North Sound.

The last major dredging was very extensive and it was quite a while ago, I would say twelve years ago. It would have been the SafeHaven area of which I believe (and I am not certain of this) about 2 ½ to 3 million cubic yards of fill was removed. Extremely extensive dredging prior to which as I understand it, there was no extensive study done as is now being moved in this House.

That study, as the mover quite rightly pointed out, is one that has been discussed by government. It is one that has now been decided upon, and it is one that is going to be carried out. But the important thing is that this government other than what went on a motion that came to the House on the extension and/or renewal of an area that had been approved (I believe it was 1989) or other than that there has been no extensive dredging in the North Sound. Indeed, whatever can be levelled at this government, in our six years there has been no extensive dredging in the North Sound and I believe that the people of this country appreciate that the government has been careful to look and ensure that it acts in the interest of the people. Even though it was done probably twelve years ago and not on our government at all; it was done under another government—the dredging within the SafeHaven, which is really, I guess, the only extensive dredging that has been done.

It must have been twenty-five years before that, that dredging at the Snug Harbour, and Omega, Prospect was done. But that was not really that extensive. But even that, sir, I believe would have been done in a controlled way. And, hopefully, the least damage would have been done by it.

So, this government has always taken a very responsible approach to this and we have never given final approval for any extensive dredging in the North Sound. Also, this government has extended through the development plan and through the wishes of the people of these islands have extended the storm belt though out the islands. Also, we have very carefully monitored the different environmental areas including areas like dive sites and those that are used for tourism purposes and created the Botanic Park and the nature trails in the other two islands.

It is important and I understand the mover's position that we know where the fill is coming from. There is a demand for fill but as I said it has to come from wherever causes the least damage to either to the sea or the land or to be imported from other countries.

The feeling of ensuring the environmental preservation of our three islands is one that I believe is very important to all people in these islands. I have had the opportunity during the break of speaking the Managing Director of the Water Authority and I am now going to state what is the position in relation to the monitoring of water lens. The Managing Director has assured me that the – water lens in the Cayman Islands, I am talking about Grand Cayman specifically, that they are properly checked, they are carefully monitored. He has stated that the Lower Valley and the East End area lens are (to use his words) extensively and closely monitored and that includes the area where the quarry is. Now, I am not going to get into this argument as I saw that looming earlier.

He has assured, sir, that he has three full-time staff members who monitor the water lenses throughout the island. They are full-time people monitoring. They not only monitor the lenses that they draw water from which the Lower Valley and the East End are but they also monitor around fuel stations, fuel depots and anywhere that there could be contamination as a result of it. From what I understand, and I am stating this objectively because I think it is important that we dispel any fear or any worry that may have arisen that the lenses or the underground water of these islands is not being properly monitored. He has assured me that....

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker.... Would the Honourable Minister give way for a point of elucidation.

The Speaker: Will you give way?

First Elected Member for George Town, go ahead.

POINT OF ELUCIDATION

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Just to make the point very clear. The minister is talking about monitoring. And I just wish to make it very clear that the monitoring is not where the problem lies. The risk that is at hand with the water lens is where the problem is. The water lens has been exposed extensively and the situation needs to be corrected. So let not the argument shift from the Water Authority's ability or will to monitor. Let the point remain where it is—that the water lens is at risk because it has been exposed.

That water lens is the water lens in the eastern district which is the largest water lens over which Quarry Products has mined for several years.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, please continue.

Hon. Truman Boddén: Okay sir. So having isolated this to a specific area, because as I understood and I got reasonably worried when the First Elected Member made the statements . . . because if there was an overall lack of monitoring or if there was a risk overall then that would have made what he was saying considerably worse so....

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, this time, sir.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

(Overruled as Point of Elucidation)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if you need to get the Hansards then you can do so, but when I was making my point, I made it specifically clear where I was talking about. I made no general statement about the water lens or the water lenses in this country as if to say that there was a problem with all of them. I was very clear. And if you so desire, the Hansards can prove that because I know what I said, sir.

The Speaker: I think that is a point of explanation.

Please continue, Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am not questioning your ruling, sir, but while you may call it a point of explanation, the minister was just saying that what I said got him worried about all the water lenses, as if what I said was left to be interpreted that that's where I was going and I was not doing that.

The Speaker: I understand what he said what he understood. Please continue, Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman Boddén: The Water Authority does monitor and they have assured me that if contamination arises they will be aware of this. They have three people full-time who are doing this.

I asked specifically about the area that the First Elected Member referred to which is over the East End water lens and where the Quarry Products has gone into or dug into that water lens. I was told that it is being closely monitored and, speaking generally I guess, the worry was not in relation to contamination at this stage but evaporation. So there is a worry in there and, secondly, obviously if it is open then there can be contamination.

So that I think is accepted. I am not going to go any further into that but I would like to assure members of this House because the minister in charge of the Water Authority has already spoken that the matter is being effectively dealt with and that there is close monitoring of these areas.

Mr. Speaker, I believe as well that the Water Authority has done quite a good job of monitoring not just quality but also the extent of water in the lenses. Indeed, it was the Water Authority that picked up this problem at the East End lens. So that aspect and it is very important that we ensure that the two main lenses, the Lower Valley and the East End remain with good quality and sufficient water in it.

The legislature finally approved (I think it would have been about March) funds for the report (I think it was $250,000) to get consultants and to do the report that this motion is dealing with. I do appreciate the motion was actually brought on the 14th October last year. So the motion was brought six or seven months ago on this. The funding is in place and the government will now get on with getting the study underway.

I would like to just mention . . . and while not putting this forward as an excuse for anything, but after six months in this Legislative Assembly continuously, it has now reached an extreme strain on ministers to try to carry on their work in government. Basically, when we are here every day (not every day but nearly every day), if it lasts a month you can survive it. But when you are out of being full-time or at least getting into the office during the day for six months, it becomes really impossible to do a large amount of the work that we need to do.

And as such, Mr. Speaker, I work night and day. I walk around with my two briefcases with me; I take them home with me, I work on weekends, I work nights. But it has reached the stage where I am finding that I am just getting further and further behind and I no longer even have a life where I can try to do some of my personal work. I think it is important and the will seems to be here now to try to end this mammoth session—which has to be one of the longest, I think, any parliament has ever sat including the United Kingdom and Canada! And, it must be a strain as well on the opposition and the back-bench because they too are in here all day so they are out of their offices all day.

I think, sir, unless we can get back to a normal period in this legislature that the toil of the extensive sittings, the extensive periods when ministers are not in government is going to detrimentally affect the country in the long run. Because when we are here, we can't be there in the government and there is only a limited amount that we can do in here. I am not giving this as an excuse in relation to this specific thing, but anyone with common sense knows that you cannot be out of your office for six months and still work at the same performance you would have worked at if you could be in there every day and only out for a few hours at a time.

So I appreciate the will of this House to try to finish on Friday because in a few weeks' time, the first part of June, we start again. It really is something that is hurting all of us, it may not just be the government but also the backbench I know is feeling the strain. With that strain once again come short tempers; really come things that we don't need to get into here.

So the government is very happy to accept this motion. As I said, we took the first move about three years ago when we said that there would be no more dredging in the North Sound and the governor in his Throne Speech gave that undertaking. Subsequent to that, there was a motion in the House that in any event sought to preclude the Executive Council from granting any approval—not that we had granted any—major approvals for dredging in the North Sound have to come back to the Legislative Assembly for approval. And I am sure that not only government needs this impact study but also the Legislative Assembly needs this Environment Impact Study because ultimately the decision on any major dredging will be done by the Legislative Assembly in this Chamber.

It is important that we have the proper information on which to make a decision. It may well be that the report may come out and say that there should be no more dredging. It may well say take it from the land, or it could say import it. I don't know. But I guess until we find that out and with the Wickstead Report which recommended, as I remember it, 12 million cubic metres of fill from the South Side, as the mover of this motion said, I think maybe 2 million has been taken out of that area but it may well be that the study may have other findings.

So the government agrees with this motion and government supports the proper study of the environment and we all have to leave something for the future of this country and for the future of our children. To that effect I am happy to support this motion and to ensure that whatever this Legislative Assembly does in relation to dredging, there will be a proper study before the House before any decision is taken.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I rise to support this motion for a multidisciplinary environmental impact study to be done. Before I get to the meat of my contribution, I would like to basically give some type of historical grounding because it is important when we are dealing with problems that we understand the historical root of the types of considerations that we are entertaining.

From the very beginning, man began to struggle with nature in order to be able to provide himself with shelter, food and clothing. In order to be able to improve his potential for survival and for some type of betterment, he found that his exploitation of the elements of nature presented him with certain types of problems or challenges. Today, fortunately, man is from a scientific point of view aware enough or has access to the type of information that can make his exploitation of nature more harmonious in such way that we can sustain or we can begin to talk about sustainable development.

Let us not forget for one moment that in order for man to exist that existence must be carved from the belly of nature. In other words, there is nothing that we can create; all that can be done is that we can develop that we can manufacture from what has already been created by God. So we as human beings are dependent upon what is here because we cannot invent it, we cannot create it, let's say. So even if we make glasses, we are taking elements from nature in order to be able to mould that and develop that. So we are in fact developed, we are in fact dependent upon the natural resources of our world, of our planet in order to form the tools and the conditions that can improve our physical and spiritual existence.

I was in Jamaica last weekend and one thing that struck me was the fact that there are so many hills there. Every time I was going towards Morant Bay and it was up the hill and winding roads and so much hill, so much fill, and so much places that didn't need to be filled. But in Cayman, it is the complete opposite. What we have here is a lot of swamp, so every place just about is lowland and has to be filled, and more so as the development conditions in the country, as the conditions by the Planning Board, the requirements become more stringent upon seeing in fact that persons do not go and develop swamp areas that are flooded very easily if there is a major hurricane.

Now, costs are a major consideration in terms of whether or not man has the resources to exploit his environment, to extract from it for his own betterment. That is a question: How do you get the fill? How do you get the quarry rocks? How do you get all those things? You need a certain amount of capital, you need a certain amount of material to be able to do so, but once you can do so, it is assumed also that you can also improve the standard of your living.

It is against this that I remember specifically when we were campaigning for the elections, when I was asked about dredging I said that I would not want to take any kind of position on anything like this without first having information. So, of course, I am happy that a multidisciplinary environmental impact study will be done and will enable me to be able to make a scientific judgement with regard to the particular impact these types of exploitation are having on our environment.

I would also like to say that I was quite pleased to note that the Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning said that, in fact, he had been in contact with the Director of the Water Authority with regards the fear that the water lens in the district of East End was being contaminated. I say this because it is important that we realise that the quarrying of aggregate for construction in particular, is a very essential part of the economy of our islands. Because without people being able to be employed in the construction industry, it would be more difficult for us to be able to achieve the improvements in living conditions that we are so trying to improve.

It is important that quarrying does not destroy precious natural resources as well, but it is also important that a certain amount of tolerance is shown towards that particular project because of the fact that it is an essential service within the community. It is difficult to understand how the community would be able to function without being provided with the construction aggregate.

Now, the multidisciplinary study might be able to give us some type of answers as to what the alternatives could be. But before we have the alternatives on paper, before we know scientifically what the alternatives are, we have to be careful how we treat what we do have, which is the situation that we have at the moment. So it is important, therefore, for me to have known that I should not have any fear or worry about the contamination of the water lens at this particular moment. I don't mean to get into a big debate about it but I feel that if the Minister of Education, Aviation and Planning stood up there and said something that I should give him some type of credit for telling the truth. That, in fact, he is conveying to me, to this Legislative Assembly what the Director of the Water Authority has said so that we know how to deal with the situation.

Now, there has been mention about the importation of aggregate and we have had questions in this Legislative Assembly before about whether or not a person needs an actual permit to import aggregate. The minister responsible for that said that they don't need a permit. So any company or any individual who wants to import aggregate into the Cayman Islands at this particular time can do so—but it is not being done.

So, the question is if it is not being done whether or not it has something to do with the cost? If it is more expensive to import aggregate than to quarry aggregate then, of course, we need to begin to balance the two. Or would it be only profitable to import aggregate if there was no aggregate being produced on the island? Would that be an incentive, therefore for persons to be engaged in the importation of aggregate?

Now, I am basically aware of the role Quarry Products plays, in particular in the East End community. I am also aware of some of the sentiments of some of the workers involved with Quarry Products. I am also, Mr. Speaker, aware of some of the sentiments of some of the truckers, the many truckers that are involved with this particular operation. It is my understanding that this operation employs a substantial number of persons within the East End community and within the Cayman Islands as a whole. So it is an important economic institution for more reasons than it produces the aggregate that is used to build the buildings that we are building in this country and to employ people in the building trade.

It also employs those persons that produce the aggregate in the quarry pits. It employs persons who are trucking this aggregate to the particular sites that are using this. I think it is important that at least the general public knows that if there is no immediate fear that the water lens is being contaminated, that if in fact what has happened with regards Quarry Products (and this has been brought into the debate) quarrying on what is considered to be Crown land, we need to have a little bit more of an understanding of what the legal implication of that is.

What were the negotiations that have led up to this between Quarry Products and Government? Were there or were there not certain types of negotiations that have led up to this? I think it is not right to make any kind of assumption that somehow it is any kind of intention on anybody's part here to break the law.

It is important that we realise though that government's position with regards Quarry Products' operation at this particular point has to come from several different positions because what happens tomorrow if we didn't have the aggregate being produced for construction. What would happen to the economy of the country? I am quite sure that government has thought about this and that government should think about what the possible economic repercussions would be of stopping that operation if, in fact, the operation at this particular time is not damaging the environment or if we can offer no proof, in fact, that this is happening.

It is important that we understand that this particular operation has been integrated into our community not only as a necessary economic institution but as a social institution in that it helps to sustain the East End community as well. It is not something that started yesterday. This operation started a long time ago. And there were other people that were quarrying aggregate in the Cayman Islands that stopped doing so. That particular operation has ceased and therefore, as a result of that, the Cayman Islands construction industry—the building of roads and swamps—is dependent upon this one place unless, of course, we begin to import aggregate.

Now, like I said, since there is no law preventing anyone from importing aggregate (since I don't see why it is so feasible to do as an alternative) why is it not being done? No one is stopping anybody. I don't believe that it is correct in this particular instance to point figures in this particular direction to say that somehow something is going on here that should not be going on because I understand why quarrying continues in this country. It continues because (a) there is no fear and worry that the water lenses is being contaminated; (b) it continues because both the Government and the private sector are heavily depended upon construction aggregate at this particular time for the building of roads—the Harquail Bypass, the Crewe Road Bypass—and for the construction industry.

So, the suspicions with regards this particular situation, I don't think are logical to assume. Now, I don't want to deal much more with that, but I dealt with it because it was brought up as a point of emergency in a previous discussion by the First Elected Member of George Town. And then it was brought up again in this particular debate and the emphasis on it, okay.

The government has not responded yet in specific terms and said, 'This is what the legal situations are with regards that particular allegation, that Quarry Products was in fact quarrying on government Crown land without permission.' Now, I am not so sure, first of all, that was a correct assumption that Quarry Products was in fact quarrying without permission or without knowledge of the government. But that is the government's problem. I don't think that if the government has the problem in terms of having to explain what is going on necessarily that there should be any kind of bad light cast upon the person who is managing Quarry Products—who is a business person, who has an interest in seeing that his business continues, that he sells his stuff and that his company is productive.

I felt somehow compelled to offer my contribution in this particular light. I know there will be those who will assume somehow that I have other motives for doing so. But I would like to assure everybody that the truth of something should be decided by the merits of the logic in the situation. If I can show you something not to be what someone else said it should appear to be by logic, then I should be believed regardless of what my relationship is with anyone. That is the only way that the human being has a possibility to arrive at any kind of idea of objectivity and truth.

The objectivity of the matter is, in fact, that we need to clarify the situation. We need to find if necessary ways of coming to a conclusion with regards the outstanding question regarding government's relationship with Quarry Products regarding the Crown land that is being said that Quarry Products is now quarrying. I don't suppose in fact that the royalties that would have to be paid to government should deter anyone from wanting to make a legal and binding contractual arrangement with government. Until other evidence is brought to this Legislative Assembly, I would give the persons at Quarry Products, at least, the benefit of the doubt.

Mr. Speaker, I support this motion and have always believed that we need to become more conscious of the harm which can be caused by our exploitation of our environment. But I have always believed that if the human being does not live from his environment, he cannot sustain himself so we must try to strive for a sustainable compromise.

Thank you.

The Speaker: We shall now suspend proceedings until 2:30 p.m. for lunch.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1:00 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:46 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No 6/99. Does any other member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just a few words.

I rise to give this motion my full support. I am very proud and glad to see that the government has accepted it because dredging and mining here has come to a place now where it really needs to be studied. When it first started with the construction, nobody thought it would ever come to this. But it has been progressing and the need for fill aggregate, and whatnot, has all gone into our construction business, development, or finance. But there is a day coming that it has to stop and we best look at it now.

I said this sometime ago and we cannot be too careful. I know it is hard to try to stop it but we are not talking about that now, we are talking about to study it and see how much further we can go.

The thing is we have to look at another way to get fill and aggregate. And there is only one other way to get it from and that is to import it. That is not an easy job but it is being done in other places, so if they want the buildings and they need the stuff, you have to get it here.

I give my support. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John Jefferson, Jr: Mr. Speaker, I rise to offer my contribution on Private Member's Motion No. 6/99 dealing with the call for a proper environmental impact study. I think this is a very necessary undertaking at this time because the last major study that we had, which was Wickstead Report, was done back in the 1970s.

I believe that this particular study has to be a very comprehensive study. We must take into consideration all of the needs and requirements that we have here in the country with regard to aggregate for construction and all the other ancillary products. You know, it is good for us to stand here and talk about maybe looking at alternatives, and also stand here and talk about shutting down operations. But the fact of life really is that if tomorrow a decision was taken to shut down some of these operations that are now very busy attempting to fill the demand for aggregate, this country would stop immediately as far as construction is concerned.

I have always contended that this particular study needs to be funded or paid for by government. If you say to the developer, 'Well, you need to do an environmental impact study and you are going to have to pay for it,' the chances are that study is going to basically support the position that the developer is taking. I believe that this study has to be paid for by government. Like I said, it has to be comprehensive in that it must take into consideration all of our needs here in the country.

It is also kind of ideal of us to say, 'well, we want to keep all the mangroves,' that is one of the recent pet slogans. Again, if a decision is taken overnight that we are going to protect all the mangroves that we have in this country, once again, immediately, most major construction would come to a halt.

Mr. Speaker, I was not here but I understand that the issue of mining as it relates to Quarry Products was mentioned again with respect to this motion. Now, I have never been one to excuse or support any establishment or activity that is illegal. And I continue to hold that position. This particular issue was raised sometime ago by the First Elected Member from George Town on a closure motion. And far as I am concerned, that was his right to raise it. But I think what has to happen now is that if there are any shortcomings, government must have an opportunity to address those shortcomings and correct the situation.

Now, what I have been aware of, is that, unlike operations like Quarry Products that deal with supplying fill, one of the ways that a lot of the local developers are getting around is by applying to Planning Authority for approval of a subdivision with a lake associated with that development or subdivision. What is done, is that once the approval is given, in most cases it is approval given to take out 100,000 yards or 200,000 yards or whatever it is. They can sell 100,000 and use the other 100,000 for filling a respective development. In most cases, once the approval is given that is not done. What happens, all of a sudden they have an operation or an establishment that has the right to mine aggregate without a license because it is not a quarry and they are doing the same thing that Quarry Products is doing that there is such issue now about licenses.

We must be consistent. What is the difference between taking a product out of a lake or getting it out of the land? There is no difference. It is used for the same purpose. The only difference between the two is that one is defined as a quarry and the other one is strictly a development. One requires a license and the other one requires a planning approval. Once it is done, after that nobody checks to see what amounts are taken out. Nobody checks to see that the requirements are complied with as far as amounts used from that particular lake to fill the lots in the subdivision.

It is my information that on many occasions the aggregate is mined, there is nothing used from that development to fill the lots round and about it. It is taken and sold.

Mr. Speaker, regardless of whether we want to agree with it or not, aggregate mining is very essential in this country. My experience with what I have seen with regard to the operation at Quarry Products is that I think that they run a very efficient, very good operation. The Managing Director not only has the experience, he has done that in other islands. There is no one better qualified to have permission for that purpose.

The other thing that is very important about that particular operation is that it employs, I understand, over fifty Caymanians. Not only that, it has created a number of Caymanian entrepreneurs. I wish personally that we had more operations in this country that had that kind of attitude towards Caymanians. The attitude that I see that exists is 'let me get everything I can get out of it. I couldn't care less about the local Caymanian as long as me and mine have our fill.'

Now, Mr. Speaker, if we are going to start investigating illegal activities, if that is what this is all about, then it extends far beyond Quarry Products. Let us look at some of the competitors. I have heard a few things about those as well, but I am not one who gets up in the House and touts these things. My attitude is if someone is doing something that is not right, let's go to the parties involved and say, You need to shape up in this particular area, here is what you need.' We need a stronger enforcement unit to go around to see that once these permissions are given that they are complied with. That is, from the Water Authority, from the Central Planning Authority, from Environmental Health and all other agencies responsible.

My experience in dealing with the Managing Director of Quarry Products is that particular operations attempt to abide by the rules. Now, on a personal basis I have had some experiences that I am not very satisfied with. I remember applying for a trade and business license. It took me six months to get the license. I am aware in this particular case that the trade and business license application for approval is something like two years pending. We have to be fair.

You know, one of the things that I held against a previous government was victimisation. I cannot see inconsistencies or victimisation and not have something to say about it. Now, let me stop right here and say that I have never been one who has ever condoned or supported any illegal activity or operation. My attitude would have been (after the issue was raised by the First Elected Member for George Town) that the respective authorities involved should have gone and said, 'Let's see what needs to be done. Let's see if what is being contended is fact. If it is not fact, let me tell you what you need to do in order to comply.' That is the right approach.

You know what is fortunate is that as representatives, first of all we have immunity in here. The other fortunate position we are in is that we have the right to come in here and talk about things or raise issues and no one on the outside has the right to come in and rebut anything that we say. So we have to be extremely careful with issues that we raise, how we raise them and how we deal with them.

Mr. Speaker, I would recommend that the authorities responsible to see to it that these things are complied with, see to it that it is done if that is the case. But let's not continue to raise issues that government has the responsibility to take care of and let's give government an opportunity to deal with those. I am always leery . . . and I am not throwing any aspersions on the First Elected Member from George Town because as far as I am concerned I have always found him to be a straight shooter. But we have got to be careful how we handle issues of this nature.

The question I have is: Why is it that the issue has only been raised now? Why? I think this company has been operating in this country for the last 20 – 30 years. Why is it that all of sudden we have just discovered now that this company (and these are the allegations we are throwing out there) all of a sudden is operating illegally? Why? I have my suspicions, but I am not going to say it.

Like I said, we have to deal with these kinds of things in a very objective manner. I believe the true intention or concern of the First Elected Member for George Town is that if something is wrong, let's get it right. There is nothing wrong with that, but let us at least give the authorities an opportunity to deal with these issues.

I am sorry I had to say that, Mr. Speaker, because I am not one of these politicians that believes in adversarial politics. I am a very friendly, very congenial representative. I'd rather love than fight! But once in while there are certain things that have to be said. It doesn't make me feel good to have to deal with these issues. But I have always been one of those representatives that will go in to defend when I believe that maybe the party is not being fairly treated.

Mr. Speaker, like I said, I trust that we will give the authorities sufficient time to deal with this issue. We have elected an Executive Council; we have given them the responsibilities to deal with such issues now let us let them do it. But the onus is also on them to make sure that these things are done and done properly.

Let me close by saying that if we are going to look at this issue, let us look at the parties involved (and we all know who they are) in the aggregate mining business.

I had an opportunity recently to go out and have a look at some of those operations. Let us look at all of them to see whether or not they are complying. And if they are or they aren't, let us make sure that it is brought to their attention what needs to be done and allow them to correct those inefficiencies.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) If no other member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish to thank the honourable minister with responsibility for this subject, the Honourable Minister of Agriculture, and the Honourable Minister of Education for the support they have given and for advising that government accepts this motion. Indeed to my colleague, the First Elected Member for George Town, who seconded the motion for his support, and other members who spoke in support of this motion, I thank them also, and those who through their silence also gave support to the motion. I will not spend too much time in my winding up but there are a few points that I wish to have cleared up.

In the comments made by the First Elected Member for George Town, my colleague, as in the comments made some evenings ago in a debate on the adjournment he mentioned that . . . he warned the House, in order words, that we should be very careful to ensure that urgent action was taken in the matter raised by him, which had to do with the Quarry Products Limited. I think that members who spoke after him may have given the wrong impression of what he said—at least what I understood him to say.

It was my understanding that the First Elected Member for George Town was not stressing that there was at present any proof in contamination to the water lens in East End. My understanding in his statement on the adjournment, a few evenings [ago and] as it was today was that there is a danger because of that company mining beyond or below the approved level.

As he said in his statement on adjournment a few days back, because of this mining below the approved level, the water lens could run the danger of evaporation. I would like to stress that particular point because what I understood the member to say is that it was the evaporation process that could result in the contamination. I think the Minister of Education was quite right in saying that the Water Authority carried out a close and frequent monitoring process on the water lens around the island and that is true what the member, the First Elected Member for George Town, was saying, notwithstanding that close monitoring process.

The fact that the water lens is alleged to be below what was approved, that the evaporation process if the water is exposed could cause the fresh water to evaporate to such an extent that the fresh water would then be replaced by the salt water which would create the contamination to the lens . . . if such a process occurred it would be very hard to impossible to reverse that process. That was the warning that I understood the First Elected Member from George Town to be making not only today but when he spoke on this on adjournment some afternoons ago. I cannot remember the exact date he spoke on that but I know it was about a week ago.

I do not want the impression to be given that the First Elected Member for George Town was saying that the lens is in fact presently contaminated. He did not say that. He said that because of dredging below the approved level (mining, sorry) it could create a situation where the fresh water part of the lens could evaporate thus leaving the salt water that could then contaminate the lens and it would not be fit to be used for drinking or for use by the farmers in that area of Grand Cayman.

I trust that I have cleared that up quite well. If I have not, I would give way for any member to show me where I might need to further clarify that point or even to give that opportunity to the First Elected Member for George Town, if it needs to be further cleared up.

Mr. Speaker, there is no question that dredging has been done since the Wickstead Report. Some amount of dredging has been done, and I am sure that some will probably be done even after this report—if it is done in a safe manner. What we are talking about here is the negative impact of dredging, and dredging that is uncontrolled; dredging that is done without proper guidance. This is why we are now asking for urgent action for the study to be undertaken on or before the 31st March 1999, within three months time or before.

I would like to stress again that we were not saying that government had not already considered this matter. What we were concerned about is that it seems to be in some kind of deadlock—nothing was being done. The terms of reference we understood were approved but yet no appointment was done. I understand that the reason for this was that no funds were available. I do not want to go into the details of why this was not done. This is not the purpose of this motion; the purpose of this motion is to try to get some kind of consensus that it will be treated as an urgent matter and that indeed it will be given that sort of top priority.

I was pleased to learn that the lens has indeed been monitored very closely. This is very good to hear and I hope that this will continue. This is not to say that the points that were raised by previous speakers, in particular the points raised by the First Elected Member for George Town, should not be given the sort of urgency that those points appear to require. I hope that as soon as the study is carried out or the examination that we will be further informed as to the results. If indeed there have been any sort of abuses up there at the Quarry Products—and I am not aware of any, just what I have heard—then I would hope that this matter would indeed be given very urgent attention.

Mr. Speaker, one member mentioned that he had a very good experience and his experience with Quarry Products was that it was operated in a very strict and acceptable manner. I do not care to speak to that because I cannot say that this is not the case, and this is really not the purpose of this motion. The purpose of the motion is to try to get the study underway as quickly as possible.

I understand that this whole matter to do with Quarry Products is now being investigated, so I am happy to wait until that investigation has been completed. I trust that it will not reveal any sort of very questionable problems.

With those few remarks, I want to again thank the honourable minister with responsibility for accepting this motion. As I said in my debate on the substantive motion, in introducing it in my presentation that is, I hope that in accepting this motion that urgent attention will now be given to the appointment of the consultant and that this will be done as soon as possible but not later than the time frame suggested in the motion—which is the 31st July 1999. Again, I thank all honourable members for their support of this motion and I trust that we will get the results of the study within the time that is being requested.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 6/99 as amended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 6/99 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 3/99. Seeing that the mover of this motion is absent, could we get a motion for the deferment of this to a later sitting?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/99

HOUSING INITIATIVE FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING

Mr. Roy Bodden: I move that Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 be deferred until a later sitting as the mover of the motion is not here at this time, sir. Probably, the next meeting of the Legislative Assembly would be a good time.

The Speaker: Thank you. Do we have a seconder? Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Mr. Speaker, I second that motion.

The Speaker: The motion is made and seconded. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Private Member's Motion 3/99 has been deferred until the next meeting of this Honourable House.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 3/99 DEFERRED UNTIL THE SECOND MEETING OF THE 1999 SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 7/99, to be moved by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/99

ENGINEERING INVESTIGATION INTO THE CAUSES AND POSSIBLE EFFECTS OF FLOODING IN THE SAVANNAH AREA

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No 7/99 standing in my name entitled, The Engineering Investigation into the Causes and Possible Effects of Flooding in the Savannah Area, which reads as follows:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider commissioning a marine engineering investigation/assessment into the causes and possible effects of the recent flooding experienced in two sections of the Savannah area;

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT such a study provide some plans which may be effected to alleviate or eliminate potentially serious property damage and loss of life."

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I beg to second that motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No 7/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I am happy to say that I need not take long on the induction or the winding up of this motion, although I would crave the indulgence of the House to make a few points. The reason I need not take long is that it is my understanding from government that they are going to accept the motion. Indeed, I noticed that the government sometime ago made the announcement that it was going to have a study commissioned to see how we can best solve this problem.

I would begin by giving credit to the persons who so willingly and ably assisted me, and those who are interested, particularly the other representatives of the constituency, in collating information for this matter to be brought before the Legislative Assembly. I would especially like to commend Mr. George Ebanks, Chairman of the Savannah Acres Homeowners Association. The support and help of this gentleman is greatly appreciated indeed. There were other people, including Mr. Kennedy Hay, and his good wife Carol Hay, as well as other residents of the area. There is a lady who did extensive work and gave me a map and a compendium of photographs and she wished for her name not to be called. So, out of respect for that request I will not call her name but I would just like the House to record my appreciation for that support.

This is a matter discussed among and between us, the three representatives of the area—the Honourable Anthony Eden, the Minister of Health, and Miss Heather Bodden, MLA, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and me, as well as my colleagues on the backbench. I would also like to thank the seconder of the motion, Mr. Kurt Tibbetts, for his interest in the matter. I suppose not least of which stems from the fact that while he represents George Town he is a resident of the district of Bodden Town and knows many if not all of the people affected.

Mr. Speaker, during our brush with Hurricane Mitch, Savannah, and in particular the Savannah Acres area, the area that we know as the Gully, and parts of Newlands and North Sound Estates, were significantly affected by salt water and flooding which emanated from one section that we call the Gully, which is really a break in the iron shore out towards the Savannah Acres way. This as I understand it, there is a natural break in the iron shore. I want to underscore that it would seem that any attempt at solving the problem, barring the absence of professional advice, must culminate in efforts other than to blocking this gully that is a natural flow of the water.

From speaking with people knowledgeable about the area over the years, the consensus of opinion would seem to suggest that what is needed is a way of challenging this overflow, possibly routing it across the district into the North Sound so that it wouldn't have any possibility of flooding out the area. Certainly it is recognised that any attempt to block the gully using boulders or any kind of concrete block would result in further damage because the force of the waves would mean that these boulders would be carried and could probably take down houses. It certainly would devastate people and trees and so on.

So, it is a welcomed gesture on the part of the government to announce that they are going to have this engineering study professionally done.

But I want to say something else, which is allied to the damage that was done. I think we were fortunate and God was with us. The physical damage itself was limited. Most of the damage really came from the flooding of the seawater and I have received letters from several of the residents in that area and our constituents who suffered significant losses. This is an area where many people utilise the fertility of the soil to plant fruit trees and exotic trees for their gardens.

I have received letters from some of my constituents with losses totalling over $4,000, and in one case, $4,827.00 to be exact. The fruit trees alone came to $3,751. There is an itemised list, and the cost of replacement totalled $4,827.00.

There is another categorised loss of about $3,000. These are monies which cannot be recouped from insurance policies because insurance companies are quick to remark that flooding is considered an "Act of God" and under these circumstances they offer no compensation.

I want to make an appeal to the government for something that I raised as far back as 1995, which I am prepared to bring back again. I have spoken with the Member for North Side who has graciously agreed to get involved in this. I would like to see our government consider seriously the establishment of a National Disaster Fund, a fund that the government can have at its discretion to be used in these kinds of cases exclusively to be put into action in the event of such disaster.

I am not rehashing that whole debate which the Hansards will recall was defeated. I want the government to reconsider it because I think it is necessary in light of the predictions I mentioned then, that meteorologists and climatologists and people who study the weather have come to understand we will be in for the next decade having more hurricanes of a greater intensity. So that it is only by God's good grace and mercy that we can continue to escape serious damage. I believe we should sincerely consider setting in motion this fund.

And I note with interest the Financial Secretary in his contribution, I think it was at the wind-up of his contribution to the Budget Debate, said that government is going to consider the establishment of such a fund. Now, the question that will not escape is why have we got to put so much politics into these kinds of suggestions and literally wait until years have passed before we adopt what should be seemingly positive and beneficial motions? Why have we got to play politics?

I remember quite vividly the same gentleman who is proposing it now said that there was no need to do that because that's what the general reserves were for. We now that the general reserves are not for that because this would be an exclusive fund set aside to cover damages brought on by natural disasters be they hurricane, be they any kind of natural disaster. These funds could be dispensed to help and assist those victims as the managers of the fund saw fit. Unfortunately, we haven't got any further than just wishful thinking because we have debated the Appropriations Bill, allotted the expenditures and no money has been set aside for the Natural Disaster Fund.

Mr. Speaker, I am serving notice and I am requesting the government to please bear in mind and set aside some money so that we can really have this fund started out of the coming year's budget.

There was another of my constituents living across the road adjacent to the Savannah Heights area, whose fruit trees were devastated. These people are hard-working conscientious Caymanians, out of pocket thousands of dollars. There was a situation where the First Official Member (now the Acting Governor) was flooded out and had to be moved by the fire truck from his family's residence in this area. So, Mr. Speaker, what I am talking about is real and this flood flooded literally dozens of homes. There was one woman in that area who had to have her whole household furnishings replaced.

There were other areas, Mr. Speaker, to give you some appreciation of how widespread this thing was. It stemmed from as far down as the Savannah Acres, right across the road by the Adventist Church up to the Savannah Meadows subdivision—way in the back, you know. Literally, the water was from sea to sea so we are not talking about something minuscule or flimsy by any means. We are fortunate that the damage was not more extensive and was not more devastating because all of these people, who are conscientious homeowners and have insurance policies, would not have been covered for this loss. And it would not be an exaggeration to say it would have been a national disaster.

That is why I would like to see the government realistically become serious about setting this. The politics must be removed from these kinds of motions. I do not necessarily care whether I get any credit or not. It is my responsibility as a conscientious representative of the people to bring these kinds of things to the Parliament, and it is the obligation and the responsibility of the government to access and to weigh the merits and significance of it. And if it has merits and bears significance, the government is duty bound. It has a God-given and a human mandated obligation and responsibility to investigate and examine the feasibility and if it is at all feasible to adopt it.

Mr. Speaker, let me tell you something sir. The country and the constituency is greater than I am individually and us collectively—greater than all of us. When I am gone from these hallowed chambers, these mechanisms will be in place for future generations to benefit from and it only spells sense. So I use this opportunity to bring this to the government again, and am most humbly requesting of them to examine the matter and to set the mechanisms in place. We don't know, we could all be victims because we are aware of the damage [Hurricane] Mitch did in Central America.

I am happy to hear that the government is willing to take on the engineering study and investigation, and I await the announcement of when it will formally begin.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Boddén: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to offer my contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 7/99 brought by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, regarding a government commission for a marine engineering investigation and assessment into the causes and possible effects of the flooding experienced during Hurricane Mitch, last October, in the Savannah/Newlands area.

Although, Hurricane Mitch passed through the Cayman Islands several months ago, you can be assured it is still fresh in the minds of the people—especially those in the Savannah/Newlands that suffered property damage and major setbacks. Although damage was received island-wide, we all know that this set back a lot of people in that area. As everyone is aware, the waves pounded the oceanfront known as Pedro's Bluff for hours and hours until it finally made its way over the iron shore through the Harris' property and down through what is known as the Gully.

The salt water proceeded onto the main Savannah Road converting the street into a river, and while some of our youth found this exciting and took advantage of the fact that they could run their jet ski through the main streets, the surrounding neighbourhoods experienced severe water damage and flooding. The water travelled as far inland as the Savannah Heights subdivision, which is off the Newlands Road. In that subdivision, some residents had to be evacuated. And speaking of evacuating, a lady who resides in the Savannah Heights subdivision was one of those residents who had to leave the comfort of her home for several weeks. This lady lost everything—furniture, appliances, cabinets . . . she lost everything.

This lady lives about a mile inland. She had salt water in her home almost six inches deep and it pained my heart when I finally got to her and saw what she had gone through. I immediately decided to seek help for her. And what is the normal reaction by fellow Caymanians? This lady was quickly supplied with all her basic needs. Help came from everywhere and by the first week of December, this lady was able to return to a newly furnished home.

I would like to take this opportunity to thank a few people: Mr. Phillip Wood of Wood's Furniture, Michelle of Marble Craft, Andrew Eden of Savannah Springs, Paramount Carpets, and Mr. Jimmy Powell, and many, many others who came forward to assist in a time of need. I know this lady is most grateful for what was done to help in putting her home back in order.

Mr. Speaker, perhaps government would consider placing several drains in those subdivisions.

Having visited with my constituents in the Savannah Acres and Savannah Heights subdivisions during and after the hurricane, many of them expressed their frustration over the amount of damage received to their properties—devastation to the structure of their homes, driveways, lawns, gardens and plants. I was told that in all their years of residing in Savannah, they have never witnessed anything like this before.

Following the aftermath of the hurricane, I took it upon myself to write a letter to the Honourable John McLean, Minister in charge of Environment, and at that time for Works, expressing my concern in the wake of this destruction and the need for government to urgently address, review and complete an analysis to provide the basis for future preventative actions as expeditiously as possible. Shortly thereafter, a visit was made by Executive Council and Public Works Department Officers to the affected areas and was reported in the 12th November 1998 issue of the Caymanian Compass.

The article confirmed that a decision had been made by government to commission an engineering study to the areas that had been affected by sea and rain water flooding.

Mr. Speaker, in the weeks following, the vegetation throughout the entire community appeared to be ravaged by fire. As people picked up the pieces and moved on with their lives, they were not only grateful that lives had been spared but that the losses sustained were replaceable. We all know that the damage experienced here in Cayman was mild compared to what had taken place in our neighbouring countries, especially in terms of human lives. As we watched the news of the devastation and loss of lives in Honduras and Nicaragua it made us so much more grateful that God had spared us. We are truly a blessed people.

Mr. Speaker, it has been noted that this was the worst hurricane in ten years, and as I mentioned earlier, fortunately no lives were lost in the Cayman Islands. However, government has a responsibility to the people of the Cayman Islands not to sit back and wait for tragedies to happen before the appropriate measures are taken. We need to ensure that the information gathered from this study will be used to undertake all the necessary action to prevent this level of damage from happening in the future. Let us take heed of the old saying, "A stitch in time saves nine."

I would also recommend that perhaps older members of the community who recall what occurred during the 1932 hurricane be given an opportunity to offer their advice and opinions as to what might be the best route to take with regard to the investigation and assessment. Who better to ask than those who witnessed and experienced those days? Believe me, many of them have a wealth of knowledge that can be of benefit in the process of compiling this study.

In closing, I would like to mention that I received some representation from a lady who resides on Tuckerman's Lane, which is approximately half a mile from the Savannah Heights subdivision. She informed me that the saltwater had travelled from Savannah Heights into her property. I have given her the assurance that the subdivision in which she resides will also be included in the study. I, therefore, ask that government give an undertaking that the investigation will be carried out at the same time. I am happy to give this motion my full support.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. On behalf of government and my colleague, the Honourable Minister for Works (who is not here), it is with great anticipation that I accept this motion. I would like to thank the mover and the seconder, and the able Second Elected Member from Bodden who put forth. I also see my good friend, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay sitting there who lives in this area and knows what transpires.

Historically, Mr. Speaker, this area of Savannah has always been prone to this problem of flooding. I have a feeling that in years gone by this was looked at to a certain degree. I think the information given at that time was that we had to be very careful of the way forward. Similar to what the Third Elected Member said, that if it is not done in the right manner, water could be trapped behind there and cause bigger problems.

When Executive Council, led by the Honourable Minister at that time (Minister for Agriculture now) went out there, Public Works, the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town and several other people observed what was going on. We didn't go right away because we thought it was better to see what was happening after the water started to dry down, to see the extensive degree of flooding. Not only there, we travelled on to certain areas of Cayman Kai, Breakers. I think we also looked at the Bodden Town Public Beach and certain areas of the West Bay Seven Mile Beach. I am also reminded by my colleague of Randyke Gardens and what was happening there. I do know that at that time the Minister for Communications had an engineer look at these problems.

Mr. Speaker, in my 50-plus years I have never seen some of the flooding that took place this time, which was to the west side of the Adventist Church. But I have been reliably informed (because I did have some concern about the development that was going on there which may have caused a greater degree of flooding) that before my time this area was also flooded.

My family told me that in 1932 (and God forbid that the Cayman Islands ever has something like that again) that this area we have talked about which causes flooding from the gully and goes up behind the road and crosses over the road . . . this whole area going right into Newlands was totally flooded in 1932. As a matter of fact, you had to literally climb up into the trees to get over. What we saw here from [Hurricane] Mitch was just a little pool of water, so it is imperative that government take this necessary action as advocated by my colleagues.

I do know and on talking with the Deputy Financial Secretary when we were doing the budget last year, he has placed funds under the Department of Finance in the area of professional fees for the study to be undertaken. I think this needs to be expedited now.

As was mentioned by the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town and the Third Elected Member, there was extensive flooding in areas on the seaside of the road and then down into Savannah Heights. The lady that was mentioned there, we all visited her. Through the great organisation of the Second Elected Member of Bodden Town she was able to pull in many people who rendered assistance. It was very touching to see how appreciative she was.

It has been mentioned in regard to digging deep wells. I have been there and I am sure all of us as Bodden Towners when we look at that area . . . I have to be frank, I think to dig deep wells in that area is a waste of money. Because I have said similar to Treasure Island, there are literally hundreds of acres of land underwater. To dig a deep well in an area like that it is not going to be effective because once the flooding is there, there is nowhere for the water to run.

One of the areas that has to be looked at is for those people that suffered the most if government has to help or whatever, to help them get the lands around their houses raised or do some modifications to their floor level, or at least at their doors or something. But this needs to be looked at. It certainly proves what is now being done, I think by Planning, where in certain areas it is insisted that the land level be raised to four feet above the main sea level. This in certain areas will help but we know Cayman that is a low area and many areas are prone to flooding.

Now, the suggestion that I thought was very valid by the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town was to get input from the older people that lived in that area because they went through much more difficulties than what we in recent times have. And, not only there but [also] throughout the island wherever problems may have arisen. I don't want to be a prophet of doom, but I was also told by my father that up in Red Bay the sea actually met there. And, when I see the condominiums and apartments being built there, I just hope and pray with the help of God that we don't experience to the degree what our forefathers did in 1932.

As I said, this is supported by the entire government and I feel sure by the entire Legislative Assembly. I want to thank specifically my two colleagues, the Second Elected and the Third Elected from Bodden Town, the First Elected Member for George Town who lives in our district and the Fourth Elected Member from West Bay. I think by working together this is something that is non-partisan and is for the good of these islands. I am sure all of our constituents in that area when you look at the devastation a few weeks after the flooding there, it just looked like you went through there with a fire storm and all the trees were burned up. Many people lost some very productive fruit trees and you cannot measure in cost the time, effort, the loving kindness that is put into trying to raise these trees and one fell swoop and they are all gone.

So, I would just like to say that we accept this and look forward to getting it resolved.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This is one of those motions that with what has been said before, there probably is not much room to add anything without being repetitious. My support of this motion has been explained by some of my colleagues already, but the one point that I would like to make Mr. Speaker . . . and this is just an observation having gone out there during the time when the place was actually flooded and the path of the water could be traced.

I think whenever this study is being conducted (and I am assuming that terms of reference will have to be drawn up to engage in the study) I think it is important because I see where there are some intentions for future development in that area both on the periphery of the existing development and extending out towards the cliff. I think it is important to understand and include in the terms of reference what plans exist for future development to ensure that future property owners will understand exactly what is going to happen physically with regard to the results of this study because it could certainly affect if there is any physical construction which has to go on as regards to remedial measures for this problem.

Both developers and prospective landowners need to have a very clear understanding of what might transpire. I do believe that we might find ourselves in a problem down line. We (meaning the government of this country) might find ourselves in a problem down line with wanting to do whatever this study might recommend and having a problem with what might be future or proposed development in the same area.

So I just think that it is very necessary that everyone be very clear with an understanding as quickly as possible with regard to what might transpire. I think this is something very similar to when you make a road reservation and you gazette it, and although the road is not built, you know that the road needs to be built there. So it is important that you don't build a building where it has to be built otherwise you are going to end up with either it costing the government or costing a property owner in some form or fashion. So I just wish to make that point and certainly as the seconder of the motion, I do support it.

And, the very last point that I would like to make is that while again just like in other areas that I might mention from time to time, we don't know when something is going to happen, from experience we know what is possible to happen. So I would like to see the matter treated in an expeditious fashion so that we don't find ourselves facing the same problem over and over without any action being taken.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

Is it the wish that we take a break at this time or continue on? Does any other member wish to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Again, my conclusion would be rather brief by the standards we have come to know in the Legislative Assembly, but I wish to make two important points before I conclude. And, of course, it would be remiss of me if I wouldn't express appreciation to the government and to those colleagues who gave their verbal support and also who gave their tacit approval.

I thank the government for accepting the motion and I certainly would wish that we could move expeditiously with this study because I am reminded that June 1st is the official beginning of the next hurricane season and we are not far away from that right now. Although it seems the Cayman Islands is affected during the latter part of the season rather than at the beginning, one never knows. It is nature and we have no control over that.

I want to make one point, which I don't know if it is possible for the government to take into consideration in drawing up the terms of reference. But let us say in the event that nothing can be done, from an engineering point of view, one of the things that is obvious to me as the representatives (and this is my eleventh year now of representing the constituency) is that there is a need for some kind of a hurricane shelter in this area. The reason I say this is that this area—the whole of Bodden Town according to the last census—is the most rapidly developing area on Grand Cayman, indeed in the Cayman Islands.

If we further examine the district of Bodden Town, we will see that the greatest growth and the greatest increase has taken place in what I would call the lower section of Bodden Town, that is from Savannah. Now, the Savannah School is used as a hurricane shelter. But we all know the story: it is a hurricane shelter but then it is not a hurricane shelter because it is not constructed to what we would consider properly engineered hurricane standards.

So I want to further burden the government by asking them to consider at some future stage—as early as is affordable and as is convenient—choosing some appropriate site within what I would call the Savannah area proper, where we can construct a hurricane centre/civic centre, a multipurpose building. My reason for this is that if we have seen flooding on the scale that we have seen it during the time we are talking about as a result of Hurricane Mitch.... And let me tell you something about this area, this area affected has some of the best, most expensive, most exclusive best cared for properties in the Cayman Islands second to none. But it is clear that for all the quality of construction and all the sturdiness, if we had a little more intensive pressure, families, people would have had to evacuate their well-constructed homes literally by the scores if not by the hundreds. So, this adds to the necessity, it compounds the necessity for us to investigate into the feasibility and possibility of conducting a proper hurricane shelter in this area.

No evacuation exercise would be effective if people had to travel miles in stormy, inclement and hazardous weather to seek shelter. I made the point that people could not go to their neighbours because the neighbours would have to leave also. So, I would further add that to my wish-list that I would give to the government in this regard.

Before I close I want to crave the Chair's indulgence by not disclosing either the company or the individuals to whom this letter was written, but I received a copy . . . and I could Table it if I so wish but I don't wish to for many reasons. I can make the point without doing that.

This is a letter from an insurance company to two clients who are our constituents in the Savannah Acres area. Our clients had put in a claim to this company for losses incurred as a result of this flooding of Hurricane Mitch and I will just detail the losses.

They put in a claim for replacing some pavers in the yard to the tune of $1,200. There was a replacement of an air-conditioning unit for $681, and there were repairs to the front steps of their house, to the tune of $955.61. In addition to this, there was a claim for the clearing of debris from the front yard, which was estimated to have cost $100, making the total $2,936.

The insurance company wrote back to inform the clients—our constituent—that the deductible was $6,000 based on their present sum insured. There was a 2% deductible, which applies to losses of this nature according to this communication. However, the insurance company went on to say, "You may be interested in knowing that prior to 1990, very few policies were subject to such a deductible. The change occurred just after the Caribbean was hit with such catastrophic [storms] as Hugo and Gilbert etcetera, in the late 80s and early 90s.

"After these hurricanes, a number of insurers and re-insurers decided that it was no longer economical to write business in the region and some even left. Their rationale was that the Caribbean generated such little premium income and was producing such major losses from hurricanes that they would simply do business in other regions of the world.

"In order to continue to provide for these (catastrophic) [and they have catastrophic in parentheses] perils, we insurers arrived at a compromise arrangement and imposed a 2% deductible on all insurers operating in the Caribbean region, and, in turn, all policies were similarly endorsed.

"I appreciate that the above explanation does not assist you with paying the bills you have occurred. However, I trust that you will appreciate that you have not been singled out for harsh treatment by the insurance company."

And they ended with a very kind of pristine and assuaging sentence, "Please feel free to contact me if you require any additional information or assistance."

Now, Mr. Speaker, I read that to underscore my point for the urgency of the government to establish some kind of national disaster fund in conjunction with these efforts, which the motion has requested. I will formalise this in a subsequent meeting of this Honourable House by bringing a formal motion requesting the government to do so.

In conclusion, I thank honourable members and especially my colleagues and fellow representatives of the constituency for supporting the motion and would wish the government to get on with the investigation and as-assessment and would pray that we are spared any further visits from such devastating hurricanes.

Thank you very much, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 7/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 7/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 9/99 to be moved by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/99

MORATORIUM ON FURTHER DEVELOPMENT OF THE FRAGILE STORM BELT AND ECO-SYSTEM ALONG THE SO-CALLED 'WEST BAY PENINSULA'
(Withdrawn)

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have just been informed that there may be a problem with the way this motion is worded in that accepting the motion may present some legal complications. The government has informed me that they were prepared to accept the motion, but in a spirit of cooperativeness and congeniality, if such is the case I would prefer to withdraw the motion and have a go at wording it properly at some subsequent stage and bring it back to the House possibly as early as next meeting. I don't think there is any necessity now for any kind of adversarial politics or quarrelling because I am very sincere about this motion.

I would crave the indulgence of the Chair, therefore, to withdraw the motion on those circumstances.

The Speaker: I would entertain then a motion for the withdrawal under [Standing Order] 24(14).

Dr. Frank McField: I second that motion to withdraw.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that this motion be withdrawn. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Private Member's Motion No. 9/99 has been withdrawn, to be brought back to this Honourable House at a later stage.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 9/99 WITHDRAWN.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 11/99 to be moved by the First Elected Member for George Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 11/99

REFERENDUM LAW
(Deferred)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, assuming we are talking about Motion No. 11/99.

The Speaker: That is correct.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The Referendum Motion, sir. As has been agreed with the government, we are quite happy to put this motion forward and deal with it when we meet next.

The Speaker: In accordance with Standing Order 24(14), the motion is made that this motion be withdrawn.

Do we have a seconder? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I take pleasure in seconding the motion and I would just like to remind the government that we are keeping a score of all these favours that they will be owing us.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, just to get a point very clear, sir. The motion is not being withdrawn. What we have agreed on—and I thought that it was discussed with you, sir—is that it is being deferred until we next sit. Just want to make sure, sir.

The Speaker: It will be brought back. I will add that.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understood that the minister was going to move a sort of sweeping motion to take care of the whole situation.

The Speaker: He did discuss that with me.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But it doesn't matter who, I just want to make sure, sir, that there is no misunderstanding.

The Speaker: That is clearly understood. The motion is whether it be withdrawn or it be deferred that.... Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion has been deferred and it will be brought back at a later stage.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION 11/99 DEFERRED UNTIL THE SECOND MEETING OF THE 1999 SESSION OF THE LEGISLATURE.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 12/99 to be moved by the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/99

CUBAN NATIONALS WITH CAYMANIAN CONNECTIONS

Mr. John Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 12/99 entitled, Cuban Nationals with Caymanian Connections and it reads as follows:

"WHEREAS many Caymanians before the advent of tourism and banking found it necessary to travel abroad to support themselves and their families financially;

"AND WHEREAS many of them travelled to Cuba to live and in search of employment;

"AND WHEREAS because of the Economic and Financial plight of Cuba many of these Caymanians and their descendants are desirous now of returning to Grand Cayman to live and work;

"AND WHEREAS many of these Cuban nationals who now live and reside in the Cayman Islands are experiencing difficulty to travel for Business, Medical or Pleasure to other countries because they hold a Cuban Passport;

"BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT Government now consider granting the following: (1) The lifting of the existing Moratorium with respect to Cuban Caymanians and their dependants returning to the Cayman Islands; and (2) the granting to the Cuban Residents here travel documents that will allow them to travel abroad, for Economic, Pleasure and Business purposes."

The Speaker: May we have a seconder? The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to second this motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 12/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Do you wish to speak to it? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John Jefferson, Jr: I understand that government is proposing an amendment to this motion. With your permission sir, I would propose that the amendment be put first so that we can debate the whole thing at once.

The Speaker: I waive the two days' notice. The Honourable [Acting] First Official Member.

AMENDMENT TO
PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/99

Mr. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. In accordance with provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I wish to move the following amendment to Private

Member's Motion No. 12/99, that the words, "Government now consider granting the following: (1) The lifting of the existing Moratorium with respect to Cuban Caymanians and their dependants returning to the Cayman Islands; and (2) the granting to the Cuban Residents here travel documents that will allow them to travel abroad, for Economic, Pleasure and Business purposes" be deleted and substituted by the words, "This Honourable House refers the matters to the Select Committee on Immigration."

The Speaker: The amendment to the motion has been duly moved. Do you wish to speak to it?

Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Mr. Donovan Ebanks: Only to say that with the Select Committee on Immigration currently in train, the government sees that as the appropriate route for this matter to go—if it is to be duly considered by this whole House in an expeditious manner. So the proposal reflects the government's acknowledgement of the matter that has been raised but also is acknowledgement that really the most appropriate route at this time would be to refer the matter to the Select Committee on Immigration.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The floor is open to debate. (Pause) No honourable member wishes to speak. Does the Honourable Acting First Official Member wish to exercise his right of reply?

I shall put the question that Private Member's Motion No. 12/99 be amended as per notice circulated to members. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion has been amended.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/99 AMENDED.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay, do you wish to speak to motion as amended?

Mr. John Jefferson, Jr: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I also thank the Acting First Official Member for his amendment to the motion.

Like the motion reads, "...before the advent of tourism and banking. . ." things are very difficult and very different in this country with regard to financial activity or employment opportunities. As a result of that, our men were forced to go elsewhere in order to find employment to support themselves and their families.

I didn't have that experience, but I am aware that you also had that experience in that you became a first class seaman in pursuit of opportunities elsewhere. Many of our people went to places like Cuba, Honduras, Nicaragua, Panama, the U.S.A, and also many of them chose to find employment on the open seas. As a result of that, our Caymanian men became known world wide as some of the best seamen in the world.

The motion specifically suggests that we deal with those Caymanians who moved to Cuba, took up residence, found employment; many of them married in Cuba, raised families and in a lot of instances have been there a very long time. I have never had the opportunity or the privilege to visit Cuba, but I understand that many of our Caymanian descendants now reside in the island that we now as Isle of Pines.

Mr. Speaker, back in the days when this exodus of our people took place, Cuba was known as the playground of the Caribbean. It was a very prosperous country. Anything you wanted you could find there. And it also offered an opportunity for employment. Because of that many of our people, like I mentioned, did migrate to Cuba for that purpose.

We are aware that things have changed drastically in Cuba. It is not the same. It is under a very tight and rigid Communist regime. The economic activity there has been severely restricted, and, as a result, the Cuban people and many of our people who chose to go to Cuba now live under very harsh and very severe conditions.

Since the advent of tourism and banking here in the Cayman Islands, we no longer find it necessary to travel abroad for the purpose of employment. The situation that we enjoy in this country is over employment. In other words, there are more jobs here than we can possibly fill with Caymanians. For that reason, there is no reason why we should not consider what this motion is calling for, that is, lifting the present moratorium that is in place with regard to Cubans with Caymanian connections being able to migrate back to the Cayman Islands.

I have a very different philosophy from a lot of Caymanians. I recall hearing even some of our former members saying, 'You know, when the only source of defence we had was mosquitoes, we stayed here and we beat mosquitoes while the other Caymanians ran elsewhere. For that reason they should not be able to come here and enjoy the privileges that we now have in this country.' I don't subscribe to that philosophy, Mr. Speaker.

My attitude is and always has been that regardless of where Caymanians have had to go and where they come from today, they are still Caymanians. I know that is the way the Jews think—regardless of where Jews have had to migrate to, they are still Jews. I believe that is the attitude that we have to have in this country.

Now, the experience we have had with regard to those Cubans with Caymanian descent returning, I think in most cases has been a very positive impression. They come in, they right away find employment. It is not long before they have a home or piece of land. The Cuban community is a very close-knit community in that they look out for one another and before long they are established, they have a home and they are doing very well and that speaks well for those people.

Mr. Speaker, I don't know what the latest statistics are with regard to persons on work permits, but I would daresay it is probably in the region of 14,000 or 15,000 people. Now, by continuing the policy of allowing Cubans with Cayman connections to return to this country not being subject to immigration controls, not being required to apply for a work permit, reduces the number of applications that have to be dealt with by the Immigration Board. And, it also limits the number of persons that we need to bring from other countries in the region and elsewhere in order to fill the jobs that we have in this country.

Mr. Speaker, one of the other difficulties that this motion seeks to address is the privilege of travel. I am at my MLA office in West Bay every Tuesday and Wednesday, and I hear a lot of very sad stories from Caymanian Cubans who are well established in the community. They have children, they have homes, they have a good source of income. But because they hold a Cuban passport and not Cayman travel documents, it severely limits the countries that they can travel to for medical, vacation purposes or otherwise. They can't do it.

I recall a young lady coming to see me just recently who is married to a Caymanian and has three or four children. The children are all Caymanian. They have their passports. You know, she came to me and said, "Mr. Jefferson, I have been here 10 – 11 years, I would love to be in a position where at least I could travel with my family. I would like to take my kids to Disney World or somewhere else for a little vacation." But they are not able to do that because government has not addressed the issue of providing these people with a proper travel document.

I believe that as part of the overall process that anyone who government gives permission to migrate here from Cuba with Caymanian connections, that should be part of the whole process. In other words, they come in here, and after two to three years of residency here, once they are well established then they can apply and be granted maybe a travel document to enable them to have some freedom of travel for recreational, medical or other reasons.

I don't mind this issue being referred to the Select Committee on Immigration because I have been assured by the Chairman that it is the intention that the Committee's findings and any new policies will be hopefully brought into effect in our September sitting. So, I do recommend the support of this motion by this Honourable House, by government, and I look forward to hearing from government with regard to their position.

Thank you, sir.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4:30 PM

The Speaker: We have reached the hour of interruption, I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this Honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman Boddin: I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow.

The Speaker: The question is that this House do now adjourn until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House do stand adjourned until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

THE CAYMAN ISLANDS MONETARY AUTHORITY
ANNUAL REPORT, 1997

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the honourable Financial Secretary is ill and he has asked me to deal with his matters for the House today as this will hopefully be the last day until the June session.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Moving on to The Water Authority of the Cayman Islands Annual Report 1997. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

WATER AUTHORITY OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS
ANNUAL REPORT 1997

Hon. John B. McLean: I beg to lay on the Table of this Honourable House the Annual Report of the Water Authority of the Cayman Islands and to say that I am pleased to be the Chairman. I would like to pay a tribute to the last Chairman, Mr. McKeeva Bush, for all the efforts he put into it and to know that I can report to the honourable House that the Water Authority is in very good standing and we will continue to keep it that way.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Report of the Public Accounts Committee on the Report of the Auditor General on the Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands Government for the year Ended 31st December, 1997. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

The Speaker: So ordered.
Do you wish to speak to it?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes sir.

(The Third Elected Member For West Bay read the report in it's entirety, please see attached Appendix)

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12 NOON

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.25 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. The Third Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: (The Third Elected Member for West Bay continued with the reading of the report. please see attached Appendix)

MOTION TO DEFER DEBATE ON THE REPORT OF THE PUBLIC ACCOUNTS COMMITTEE UNTIL THE SECOND MEETING OF THE 1999 SESSION

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, I would like to close by saying that I would also move that the debate on the Report of the Public Accounts Committee be deferred until the June sitting. Thank you.

The Speaker: Is it not customary for 90 days to be permitted in order for the Government Minute to be tendered?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes, that is customary, but I am aware that we previously recommended that the report be debated, and it was debated even though we didn't have the Government Minute. So Government would still have an opportunity to lay that.

The Speaker: You're moving that as a motion? I will put the question that it be debated at the next session in June—

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, it needs a seconder, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The debate on that normally takes place with the Minute. I think maybe what should be done, rather than taking a decision now to debate this in a month's time, provided government within a reasonable time brings the Minute to it, because remember we haven't seen this, or the Financial Secretary would not have seen this yet, then the debate on everything takes place at one time. That I think would be fair, and what is usual. This matter could be reviewed in the June meeting when we see where the Financial Secretary has reached on the Minute, sir.

The Speaker: That was what I called to the attention of the member. Third Elected Member for West Bay, what is your intention?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I believe it is reasonable and fair that debate on this particular report be deferred until June. Government will still have an opportunity to offer its contribution during the debate and at the same time have the opportunity to lay the Minute. What we have to keep in mind is that this Report is already six months late and the next Report, which is the 1998 Report, is soon to be tabled again. I would not agree that debate be deferred until the Government Minute is laid, that could be September.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I guess we may as well do a division.

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, please call a division.

The Deputy Clerk:

DIVISION 3/99

AYES: 6

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.
Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. Linford A. Pierson
Mr. Roy Bodden
Mrs. Edna Moyle
Miss Heather Bodden:

NOES: 5

Hon. Donovan Ebanks
Hon. Samuel Bulgín
Hon. Truman M. Bodden
Hon. Anthony S. Eden
Hon. J. O'Connor-Connolly

ABSENT: 6

Hon. George A. McCarthy

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson
Hon. John B. McLean
Mr. W McKeever Bush
Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks
Dr. Frank McField

The Speaker: The result of the division is six Ayes, five Noes. The motion has passed.

AGREED BY MAJORITY: DEBATE ON THE PAC REPORT TO BE TAKEN AT THE SECOND MEETING OF THE 1999 SESSION.

The Speaker: Item 4, Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands Government for the Year Ended 31st December, 1997; and Report of the Auditor General on the Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands for the Year Ended 31st December, 1997.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the honourable Financial Secretary is ill and I will not be laying these papers sir. When he comes back he can deal with the matter.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, would you then suspend Standing Order 77(7)?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Sir, let me just repeat what I said. I am not laying the papers on the Table for the Honourable Third Official Member. He is not here and therefore I am not laying them. This matter has to be discussed with him in light of what has gone on. I do not intend to lay them sir.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, if I may, sir. I think Standing Orders say that the Auditor General's Report shall not be laid until the Public Accounts Report has been laid and they will be laid together. I think if it was the decision to accept that the PAC Report be laid on the Table, this Honourable House has no choice but to accept the laying of the Auditor-General's Report and the Audited Accounts of the Government.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the absence of the Financial Secretary, I would have thought that he would have spoken to some member of Executive Council regarding the laying of the reports on his behalf. I think personally that it would not be in order for the PAC Report to be laid without the Auditor-General's Report and the Audited Accounts.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Rather than us getting into a dilemma here, perhaps it is safer for the House to take the luncheon suspension now and allow the government an opportunity to discuss the matter with the Honourable Third Official Member's office, if they cannot get him personally, so that a decision can be taken.

One more thing I would like to say regarding the problem about debating the Public Accounts Committee Report in June . . . the truth is if we check the time that will evolve between now and the next sitting and during that sitting, the 90 days that the Government Minute is supposed to be tabled in will have passed. So perhaps there may be no need for any problem about it if the Public Accounts Committee Report can be dealt with during that time and the Government Minute is laid then. If I understand it correctly, that is supposed to happen within 90 days after the Public Accounts Committee Report is tabled. And if that is the case, the 90 days will have crossed before the June sitting is over.

The Speaker: We shall suspend proceedings until 2.15.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.55 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

When the House took the break it was laying on the Table the Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands Government for the Year Ended 31st December, 1997; and the Report of the Auditor General on the Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands for the Year Ended 31st December, 1997.

The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

THE AUDITED ACCOUNTS OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS GOVERNMENT FOR THE YEAR ENDED 31ST DECEMBER, 1997

THE REPORT OF THE AUDITOR GENERAL ON THE AUDITED ACCOUNTS OF THE CAYMAN ISLANDS FOR THE YEAR ENDED 31ST DECEMBER, 1997.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I beg to lay on the Table the Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands Government for the Year Ended 31st December, 1997; and the Report of the Auditor General on the Audited Accounts of the Cayman Islands for the Year Ended 31st December, 1997.

The Speaker: So ordered.

The House will go into Committee to discuss a Bill entitled The Labour (Amendment) (Tribunals) Bill, 1998 and four other Bills.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

COMMITTEE ON BILLS

House in Committee at 2.40 PM

The Chairman: Please be seated.

The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House may I assume that as usual we should authorise the honourable Second Official Member to correct minor printing errors and such the like in these bills?

Would the Clerk state each bill and read its clauses?

THE LABOUR (AMENDMENT) (TRIBUNALS) BILL, 1998

The Clerk: The Labour (Amendment) (Tribunals) Bill, 1998.

Clause 1. Short title.

Clause 2. Amendment of section 26 - Overtime pay not necessary if parties agree to the contrary.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk:

Clause 3. Amendment of section 37 - All gratuities to be distributed.

Clause 4. Amendment of section 53 - Remedies for unfair dismissal.

Clause 5. Repeal of section 72 - Labour Relations Board.

Clause 6. Repeal of section 73 of the Labour Law and substitution - Labour Tribunals.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 3 through 6 do stand part of the bill. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Chairman, I have a question regarding section 3. It says, "Section 37 of the principal Law is amended (a) in subsection (1) by inserting 'every two weeks' after 'service employees'; and (b) by repealing subsection (3)."

I seem to recall that in a motion brought by the Third Elected Member for West Bay, which was accepted by the House, there was the proposal that gratuities be paid twice monthly on pay days. Now, if we accept this amendment, there will be a discrepancy.

I think that there is a necessity to address that discrepancy because I interpret every two weeks to not necessarily mean twice monthly because there are some months with 31 days. And twice monthly on the 15th and the 30th I think was the stipulation then. So the employees would be disadvantaged in those months with 31 days.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The member is correct in that [Private Member's] Motion 6/98 did say that. I spoke briefly to one of the movers (the Third Elected Member for West Bay) and he indicated that he didn't have a problem with that. That was only this morning. I did not get an opportunity to speak with Mrs. Moyle who was the other mover on this. It actually slipped me while I was thinking about other things.

But the government has no strong feelings either way. If it is the wish of the House to amend it to read exactly as the motion, provided gratuities are distributed in an equitable fashion causing little or no confusion, as that is the intent and the purpose of the amendment sir.

The Chairman: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: That is what I would suggest, that it be amended according to the motion because I think the motion was predicated upon that fact that it was presented in such a way that the workers would not be disadvantaged.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I don't have Motion 6/98 before me. If any of the members has it, I would be grateful. Otherwise perhaps we could ask Mr. Glidden to retrieve it. Failing that I can seek to move a motion that the precise wording of Motion 6/98 be used to replace "every two weeks" to say . . .

Mr. Bodden, if you could assist me. Do you remember exactly what the motion said?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Well, it said twice monthly at the same time they pay the wages or salaries.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Okay.

So, if I could still move the motion for an amendment so that it could be "paid twice monthly" to correspond with the same time as the salary, we would not have any objections. I feel free in moving that motion.

The Chairman: The question is that Clause 3 be amended as read out by the honourable minister moving it. Do the members request a written amendment, or will you accept the oral? The oral is okay?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes sir.

The Chairman: I will put the question that Clause 3 be amended as read out. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 3 AMENDED.

The Chairman: Now I put the question that Clause 3 as Amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 3 AS AMENDED PASSED.

The Clerk:

Clause 4 Amendment of section 53 - Remedies for unfair dismissal.

Clause 5. Repeal of section 72 - Labour Relations Board.

Clause 6. Repeal of section 73 of the Labour Law and substitution – Labour Tribunals.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 4 through 6 do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSES 4, 5, AND 6 PASSED.

The Clerk: Clause 7. Amendment of section 74 - Procedure to be followed on a complaint to Director.

The Chairman: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: In accordance with Standing Order 52 (1) & (2) I, the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture, give notice of the following amendment to the Labour (Amendment) Tribunals Bill, 1998: That Clause 7 be amended: (a) in paragraph (c) by deleting "(7)"; and (b) by inserting the following new paragraph: "(d) by deleting subsection (7)."

The Chairman: I waive the two days' notice.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you.

Mr. Chairman, we took the time to look at this Clause 7 and it was discovered that the need for this amendment arose out of two clerical errors that occurred when the law was being consolidated back in 1996 with the revision. When one looks at the original law of 1987, it referred to Regulation (2). But subsequent amendments were made and subsection (2) then became subsection (5). But when the consolidation was done (2) wasn't changed to (5), hence the necessity to have it deleted now. As a result of our amendments it has become redundant.

The Chairman: I will put the question that Clause 7 be amended as circulated to members. If there is no debate I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 7 AMENDED.

The Chairman: Now I shall put the question that Clause 7 as amended do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

SECOND READING
(deferred Monday 12 April)

THE LIQUOR LICENSING LAW (AMENDMENT) (PROTECTION OF MINORS) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Liquor Licensing Law (Amendment) (Protection of Minors) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Acting First Official Member.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: I beg to move the second reading of a Bill entitled The Liquor Licensing Law (Amendment) (Protection of Minors) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: Honourable member, do you wish to speak to it?

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, thank you.

About six months ago I was here moving the Liquor Licensing (Amendment) (Protection of Minors) Bill 1998. As I recall it was a similar Friday afternoon as the House was looking to come to an end, and I was like a fisherman with more lines than I had hands. Not surprisingly, a couple of things got tangled up. As a result there were a couple of omissions during the Committee stage (on my part) of that Bill that subsequently resulted in the need for us to move this Bill.

However, during the time between when this was discovered and now, there have been some representations from persons in the service industries—particularly the restaurant industry—in respect to some of the provisions of the Bill which was passed in October of last year. As a consequence, I have a second line again today. There are some amendments to be moved during the Committee stage, which have been circulated, and I would beg your indulgence sir, to refer to those during my presentation.

The Speaker: Please go ahead, I will waive the two days' notice.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you.

Clause 2 of the Bill refers to an amendment to section 7(5). The Bill had been intended to clarify that. But the government has taken into consideration representation it has received and now proposes to only require that access to and egress from restrooms be separated from bars in the case of new premises which have not previously been licensed. As a consequence the provision which was inserted last October to allow a period for physical alterations to be made in a period of one year is now obviously redundant. So it will be further suggested that we repeal section 6 which provided that grace period for alterations.

Turning to Clause 3 of the Bill, there are a few minor amendments which simply aim to clarify the provisions of section 9(1)(b)—not (a) as the Bill refers to, but I will deal with that in Committee stage—as it relates to licences which were exempt from the provision of 9(1)(a). We propose to add after “transfer” also variation of licences and to insert a new subclause dealing with the renewal of a licences, so it is clear that renewals are not restricted by Clause 1 (a) above.

Clause 4 of the Bill deals with subsection (3) of section 21A. This was one of those that I referred to earlier where I omitted to delete “licensed premises or” and so the new Clause in the Bill simply differs from that which we approved in October by the deletion of those three words in the first line. The intention was that this prohibition of persons under the age of 18 was in respect of them being in a bar of a licensed premises—not simply being in a licensed premises as the Bill recently passed provides for.

The final point that I want to touch on deals with a new Clause 5 which is perhaps of greatest substance in that while the House had supported the position that persons under the age of 18 should not be employed in a licensed premises, there has been representation in respect of the impact of that, particularly on young Caymanians who are trying to start careers in the tourism related industries or service industries. We have come up with a proposal which we think will allow persons under the age of 18 to be employed in a broader range of jobs, including jobs in restaurants but still with some restrictions.

The new provision allows a person under the age of 18 to be employed in licensed premises, but not to be involved in the preparation of, serving, selling or otherwise dealing with liquor with two categories of exceptions. The first is unless that liquor is unopened or contained in a sealed container. Hence, with that exception a person under the age of 18 could be employed in premises licensed as package premises, or wholesale premises and not contravene this new Clause.

The other exception is if the person is employed in disposing of liquor that has been served on the premises and not consumed, or only partially consumed. So the person can be employed but not allowed to prepare, serve or deal otherwise with liquor with the exception of being involved with disposing of liquor which has been served on the premises and not consumed or partially consumed. And with that provision we are basically looking to enable a young person to be able to work as a waiter in a restaurant where they can prepare tables, serve food, clear tables but not be employed as a bar waiter/waitress, taking drink orders, preparing or serving drinks as a bartender.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Yes, Mr. Speaker, they can clean it off the table afterwards because we certainly think that a person who is going to resort to drinking what someone has left behind is desperate enough that they will find alcohol in any case somewhere else.

It is hoped that these provisions will allay some of the concerns that have been raised while at the same time maintain the spirit of the early amendment which is that persons under the age of 18 should not be consuming alcohol, or sitting in bars because the government still feels strongly that after [reaching] 18 [years] there is plenty of time for people to make those choices and indulge in those activities.

Without prolonging it further, I think that covers both the Bill and the amendments suggested. I simply covet the support of members. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Liquor Licensing Law (Amendment) (Protection of Minors) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Does any member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I rise to suggest to government that they withdraw this Bill and the amendments. And to also say the reason is that from the very beginning this was not thought out. I often mention the carpenter’s rule about measuring twice and cutting once. This is a situation of cutting twice and not measuring at all.

We cannot bend the logic or the reality to suit this type of legislation. The reality defies this in that as we know the first attempt was to legislate, compel restaurateurs to change major construction and design in their restaurants in order to fit a law. If the law was intended to protect people in some physical sense from some physical harm, one could see it. The intention of the law is to prevent minors from coming into contact with alcohol and we all believe that it is desirable to prevent as much as possible minors from coming into contact with alcohol.

But we cannot police all over. Society does not have total control simply by legislation. As I always stress, our only way of really policing is by values. That is one reason why the Police Department (260 or so policemen) always says that they are helpless without the community. We need the parents to become involved. We cannot just say that we don’t want this to happen and therefore we will make a law and this will be prevented. It doesn’t work that way.

There is no reason to create economic hardships for a major industry like tourism. The tourist industry is dependent upon the restaurants. And we all know that it’s a part of our social/cultural habit to have a glass of wine with the food and so forth. We also know that this is something that people have come to accept—not just persons who have invested hundreds of thousands of dollars and many, many years of their lives in building the restaurant culture in Cayman to this extent. So it’s not just them, but also persons who have come here noting that Cayman is a nice place to go out and have a nice meal and glass of wine or piña colada. That is the kind of atmosphere we package and sell to our customers. It does not necessarily mean that our population has to become involved with it.

Just as the countries with gambling. The native population is not allowed to participate in that but tourists are. I think that is the case in the Bahamas and places like that. Although we can see the restaurants out there, many of them are a little expensive for us local people. We know that they are catering specifically for the tourist, and we need to think about our customers and our economic livelihood.

That is why the law is being amended again, because the persons involved in the restaurant industry were so shocked and surprised by the government's logic that they got them to see, 'Look guys, we understand that you want to protect minors, but you don't want to destroy your industry at the same time. You have to be able to do both at the same time. You have to be able to protect the minors and your economic livelihood at the same time.' So it was amended to this particular point.

One aspect that I am concerned with is that if we have young people who want to go into the tourism industry to be an apprentice cook or a waiter or whatever, where they can get a job at 16 or 17 to help their families and themselves, I do believe that if you start with people trying to socialise themselves into that particular type of work ethic in this industry that 18 is a little bit too late. We need to start early inculcating in these kids the idea that this industry is a worthwhile one to be involved in. So we have a contradiction once we begin to say that kids who are 18 years old should not be around alcohol under any circumstance. The paradox we find ourselves in saying that they can't be around alcohol is that we kill the possibility of any kind of apprenticeship going on in the restaurants in this country. I believe that would be a tragedy.

Although Caymanians are not necessarily being attracted to the hotel/restaurant industry, it doesn't mean they won't be in the future. A lot should be done to see that our young people find part time work in the hotel/restaurant industry. To deal with this paradox the amendment now suggests that they can be around drinks that have already been served, but they can't be around drinks that have not been served. In that situation it would have to be locked up, this, that, and the other thing. But reality doesn't work that way. This is part of the problem.

To assume that a young person under 18 who wanted a drink wouldn't drink it after removing it from the table to the kitchen is ludicrous because most people don't take their first drinks in those types of situations. Those people whom you see drinking in those situations have already been acquainted with drinking. People usually get acquainted with drinking at home. They go and rob their parents' bar or go over to their friends who rob their parents' bar. You do not start as a young person in the establishment where you are employed simply because you have a boss, you have other people you are working with, you are more supervised. It's almost impossible to get away with getting a drink there.

If you are really going to do it you steal a drink and hide it in something. I would say that when a person is that criminally oriented it has nothing to do with alcohol, it has more to do with the dysfunctional personality who will go to any extent to steal from his employer or parents and then consume it at the end of the day.

The problem of having youngsters exposed to vices is something we are experiencing worldwide. We have no quick solution to it. Just as in that very unfortunate situation in Colorado, everybody is asking what it is that we need to do to protect young kids from doing things that will harm them and others. Nobody has any easy solutions to it.

I therefore believe that it does not pay for the government to bring this amendment simply because there might be some persons who believe it is necessary to prevent children from being in restaurants where alcohol is being served. I think that parents rather than the government should take on that responsibility. In cases where parents are not responsible, that class of people will not find themselves in restaurants anyway because they can't afford it. So it's only going to be a particular class of people who will bring their kids to these restaurants. Why are we concentrating on this legislation when what we are really interested in is preventing our young people from being associated with alcohol—our kids, not the tourists' kids.

We have to see that this particular desire on the part of government to bend the amendment in order to pass the motion is not correct and that we should ask the government to reconsider the logic and save the House the time and withdraw this.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

If not, would the mover like to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Thank you.

I listened to the comments of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and I have tremendous respect for his views. I certainly followed some of his rationale. I fail to see however how these proposed amendments would create any hardships on the tourism or restaurant sector. It would seem to me that the opposite is true, and that they would relieve in light of what we previously enacted, would be the requirement for restaurants, for example to effect these physical separations of access and egress by October of this year. That's what the legislation currently requires. This amendment seeks to remove that provision from existing properties and have it only apply to new properties which were not previously licensed. In that regard it seems to create a relief rather than a hardship.

While no one will disagree with his comments in relation to the environment in which a young person first gets involved in the consumption of alcohol, I would simply say that I don't think the currently proposed restrictions on what the young person can do should overly distract from that person making a career start in that field. Certainly the ability to work in that environment, albeit the person is not able to start to train and practice as a bartender until the age of 18, there are certainly a lot of other things within that work environment they can do and learn. This amendment simply looks to try to make that range as broad as possible while preserving the exemption of the actual preparation and serving.

The government still feels, in light of the comments made by that member, that there is merit to the bill and I trust that perhaps other members who did not speak may share that view. I covet their support. Thank you.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled the Liquor Licensing Law (Amendment) (Protection of

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/99

CUBAN NATIONALS WITH CAYMANIAN CONNECTIONS

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: When we adjourned yesterday I had made my opening remarks and I had recommended the support of the House. I also mentioned that I really didn't have a problem with the motion going to the Select Committee on Immigration.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The Honourable Acting First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. Donovan Ebanks: Only to clarify that obviously the intent of the government in suggesting the amendment to the motion was that the government would be amenable to accepting it, subject to that amendment. If I didn't make that clear yesterday, certainly that was the intention and that remains the position. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, would the mover like to exercise his right to reply?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Just to say thanks to the government and my colleagues for their tacit support. I look forward to dealing with these issues on the Select Committee on Immigration. I believe this is an issue that has to be addressed. It's a legitimate concern and difficulty. I look forward to a prompt resolution to this issue.

The Speaker: The question is Private Member's Motion No. 12/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 12/99, AS AMENDED, PASSED.

The Speaker: That concludes items on today's Order Paper and the motion as amended has passed.

This has been a very long sitting. I think every one of us is fully aware of that. I would like to thank Honourable Members for their courtesies and tolerance to the Chair.

I would like to thank the Clerk, the Deputy Clerk, the entire office staff, the Hansard Officers, the Serjeant-at-Arms and Anita for their services rendered to us during this extremely long sitting. Those who are privileged to have a vacation, have a pleasant and happy vacation.

I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

FINANCE COMMITTEE PROCEDURE

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Just before the adjournment, sir, it is my understanding that there is a task the government needs to perform in order for Finance Committee to take place Monday morning. I just want to ensure that they have remembered it. If they choose not to do it, then we will know what to do from there. Just wanted to make sure they remembered.

The Speaker: Do you crave a suspension before the adjournment? I think it would be appropriate to suspend for ten minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.56 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.00 PM

THE CAYMAN ISLANDS' NATIONAL STRATEGIC PLAN 1999-2008

THE KEY TO THE FUTURE—A GUIDE TO THE NATIONAL STRATEGIC PLAN

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House The Cayman Islands' National Strategic Plan 1999-2008; and The Key to the Future—A Guide to the National Strategic Plan.

The Speaker: So ordered.

Do you wish to speak to it? The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir.

This is a historic day for the Cayman Islands as we have seen the end of the second phase of a Ten-year National Strategic Plan, Vision 2008 Initiative. The planning phase has taken a full 12 months and has been marked by wide public consultation and input. Prior to this, in phase 1 of the project, the visioning and public polling stage an exercise was carried out to determine the public's main concern about the future and how they wished to see the islands develop.

One thousand residents of the three islands were polled through a random and confidential telephone survey using state-of-the-art equipment and programming through a well established American company. The results of the poll and of input received through in depth interviews, district meetings and letters, were considered by a 30 member planning team representative of the community, who were selected by a profiling process. In June 1998 the planning team met for three days and developed a statement of beliefs, a visioning statement, three objectives and 16 strategies. The outcome of this, the first planning session, was tabled in this honourable House in September 1998.

In October 1998, over 300 individuals signed up to work on the Action Plans needed to make the 16 strategies a reality. Two hundred and fifty people worked for over four months, sometimes meeting up to 8 hours per week, during hurricane Mitch and the Christmas season, to keep to the January 1999 target and have their Action Plans ready for the planning team's second planning session. The planning team then met for a total of ten and one half days to consider the action plans against agreed criteria. At the end of March, the planning team had agreed on 208 action plans which would be recommended to the government and the Legislative Assembly.

Because of the scope and complexity of the plan, the planning team asked a small committee made up of representatives from their group to pull together the main themes which ran through the plan into an executive summary. This guide to Vision 2008 is known as the Key Document which is also being tabled today. However, the Key is intended to be read in conjunction with the National Strategic Plan. It is not intended to be read on its own.

This Ten-year National Strategic Plan is a compilation of the hopes and aspirations of the people of the Cayman Islands. Recommendations herein are intended to assist the government and this legislature in setting the direction which will guide the islands over the next ten years from 1999 until 2008. Vision 2008 should be considered the policy framework under which government's reform initiatives fall. It is anticipated that the bulk of the implementation of Vision 2008 will fall to the civil service. Every effort will be made to integrate the Vision action plans with financial management reforms and with the Freedom of Information initiative.

The design of the plan calls for regular evaluation, and Executive Council has agreed that the plan should be evaluated approximately every two years. In between this ministries will be responsible for updating Executive Council on a regular basis as to how the implementation of Vision 2008 is progressing.

The Vision 2008 initiative is the most extensive planning exercise ever undertaken by a government. It has involved a very wide cross section of the community in all three islands. It has caught the imagination of the people of these islands and given them the opportunity to have their voice heard. I am extremely grateful to the hundreds of people who have contributed to the Vision 2008 process. I am particularly grateful to Mrs. Joy Basdeo, my Permanent Secretary, whose outstanding ability, experience, dedication and hard work, has delivered today the Cayman Islands' first Ten-year National Strategic Plan. Both the Cayman Islands and the Legislative Assembly owes Mrs. Basdeo a very large thank you. I am also particularly grateful to the planning team and to the round table leaders and their teams who stayed the course to deliver a plan of undoubted quality and credibility.

Executive Council has accepted the action plans as recommended. Because the planning process has covered a span of some 15 months, some projects already in train have moved ahead. The most notable under this category is the Little Cayman Airport which government has decided to build on Crown property. Government will, however, take into consideration the other recommendations made by the Little Cayman roundtable on the style and other matters of the Little Cayman Airport.

The action steps contained in the National Strategic Plan must be considered as a guide to the implementers which in most cases will be the civil service. Here government's controlling officers will be able to add to, or delete action steps which will be able to best deliver the specific results to be achieved in implementing a strategy.

I am extremely humbled to be part of a government with the foresight to commission a long-term plan of such scope, a government with the confidence to go to the people and determine what they want for this country. Now the people have spoken. They want to see the country continue to develop in harmony and prosperity and according to the principles of growth management. At this stage I propose to read the key to the plan. I will not be reading the plan itself because it is very long and it has been made public.

[The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning read "The Key to the Future (A guide to the National Strategic Plan)" pp 3-5, 29-35 attached hereto]

Mr. Speaker, I am very humbled to be part of this process, of these people, of this government, of this legislature, which has had the foresight to commission this long-term Ten year National Strategic Plan. And to be part of a government which has the confidence to go to the people and determine their wishes, their needs, their views and what they want for the Cayman Islands. Now that the public has spoken, they want to see the country to develop in harmony and prosperity and in accordance with the principles of growth management.

A motion has been filed and will come up for debate at a later stage which will move to adopt the long-term ten year national strategic plan. I recommend the long-term Ten year National Strategic Plan to this honourable House and I look forward to it meeting with the approval of honourable members of this House. God bless this country and God bless this plan.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 4, Government Business, Bills. First Reading.

FIRST READING

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (WAIVER OF PENALTY FEES) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalty Fees) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Bill is deemed to have been read a first time and set down for Second Reading.
Second Reading.

SECOND READING

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (WAIVER OF PENALTY FEES) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalty Fees) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I beg to move the second reading of a bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalty Fees) Bill, 1999.

This Bill seeks to amend the Banks and Trust Companies Law (1995 Revision) by correcting an error made in a previous amending Law, and provides that licence fees and surcharges for late payment should be paid to the Financial Secretary for the benefit of the revenue of the Cayman Islands.

By way of background to this amendment, section 5(8) of the Banks and Trust Companies Law (1995 Revision) as amended by the Monetary Authority Law, 1996, reads as follows: "Every holder of a licence shall, on or before every 15th day of January after the first grant of the licence, pay to the Financial Secretary for the benefit of the revenue the prescribed annual fee provided that unless the Financial Secretary waives the same there shall be payable to the Financial Secretary for the benefit of the revenue by a licensee who fails to pay the prescribed fee by that date a surcharge not exceeding 1/12 of that fee for every month or part of a month that the fee is not paid."

Members will recall that an amendment was made in 1998 to section 5(8) which transferred the power of waiver of liability of penalties for late payment of annual licensing fees from the Financial Secretary to the Monetary Authority. Accordingly, section 5(8) was amended by repealing the words "Financial Secretary" and substituting "Authority." However, there were three references to Financial Secretary in section 5(8), and as a result all references were changed to "Authority," whereas only the second reference should have been changed.

This section of the Banks and Trust Companies Law (1995) now reads as follows: "Every holder of a licence shall, on or before every 15th day of January after the first grant of the licence, pay to the Authority for the benefit of the revenue the prescribed annual fee provided that unless the Authority waives the same there shall be payable to the Authority for the benefit of the revenue by a licensee who fails to pay the prescribed fee by that date a surcharge not exceeding 1/12 of that fee for every month or part of a month that the fee is not paid."

This Bill seeks to correct the error in section 5(8) made as a result of the amendment in 1998 by repealing the word "Authority" in the first and third places where it occurs, and substituting "Financial Secretary." The Bill also provides that licence fees and surcharges for late payments should be paid to the Financial Secretary for the benefit of the revenue of the Cayman Islands.

I commend this Bill to honourable members.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalties Fee) Bill, 1999, be given a second reading. It is now open to debate. (Pause)

Does any member wish to speak? If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Just to thank members for their tacit support. Thank you.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question that a Bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalties Fee) Bill, 1999, be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (WAIVER OF PENALTIES FEE) BILL, 1999 GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The House will now go into Committee to consider a bill entitled, The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalties Fee) Bill, 1999.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE—10.56 AM

COMMITTEE ON BILL

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct all printing errors and such likes in these bills?

Would the Clerk state each bill and read its clauses?

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (WAIVER OF PENALTIES FEE) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalties Fee) Bill, 1999.

Clause 1. Short title.

Clause 2. Amendment of section 5—Application to be made to Governor.

The Chairman: The question is that Clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Just for clarity, I wonder if the honourable member moving this Bill could explain the first amendment to the Banks and Trust Companies Law changing the word "inspector" to "Financial Secretary" or "Authority" that we are now changing back to "Financial Secretary". I have researched the Banks and Trust Companies Law and the amendments, but I cannot find the amendment that originally changed the word "inspector" that appears in section 5(8).

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I would have to do some further research in order to accurately respond to the honourable member. I can only say what the situation became after the amendment was made in 1998. I could look into the matter, but what I have set out for the honourable members of this House is the state the current legislation is now in and the amendments we are seeking to effect.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I understand what the honourable member is saying, but my concern is that the Banks and Trust Companies Law refers to "inspector" in section 5(8). Law 10 of 1998 amends "Financial Secretary," which did not appear in the original Law, to "Authority." Now we are amending "Authority" to "Financial Secretary." Somewhere along the line an amendment had to have been made for "inspector." That's my only concern, sir.

The Chairman: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I think if the member were to look at the Monetary Authority Law of 1996, wherever the word "inspector" was referred to in previous legislation the Monetary Authority Law would have effected the change from "inspector" to "Monetary Authority."

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I don't want to get too deep into this argument because it's a simple thing. It's just that I would like the correct procedure and amendments to be made. Maybe it does appear in the 1996 Monetary Authority Law, but the revised Monetary Authority Law of 1998 has totally dropped that schedule. My concern is, should there be another amendment to the Banks and Trust Companies Law to bring in all those amendments that were done under the schedule to the Monetary Authority Law, . . . maybe the honourable Attorney General can give me some—

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Mr. Chairman, the answer is that the amendment was, I believe, made in the Monetary Authority Law of 1996 which in a schedule attached to that Law had consequential amendments to laws, including the Banks and Trust Companies Law.

The revision of the Monetary Authority Law does not contain these consequential amendments and therefore it is not immediately obvious that the Banks and Trust Companies Law was amended because the Banks and Trust Companies Law has not been revised since the 1995 revision which obviously came before the 1996 Monetary Authority Law.

However, if you check the addition of the gazette on 24th May 1999 you will find a repetition of what was contained in the schedule of the Monetary Authority Law of 1996 and in it you will find the amendment which relates to the Banks and Trust Companies Law substituting “Monetary Authority” for “Inspector” so that the present reference is, I believe, correct.

If an opportunity to verify that was required, it could perhaps be taken. I would like the opportunity to confirm that myself before I go final on this position.

The Chairman: Would it please members if we suspended until this information is available?

Hon. David Ballantyne: If I am given the gazette for the 24th of May 1999, Mr. Chairman, that would allow me to confirm this position. The problem is that the 1998 Revision of the Monetary Authority Law does not contain the consequential amendments that were made in the 1996 Law.

The Chairman: As soon as the Serjeant-at-Arms returns we will get the necessary gazette.

Hon. David Ballantyne: In fact, Mr. Chairman, I may be able to clarify the issue now because in the Monetary Authority Law (1998 Revision) at the very last page of the schedule says “From 1st January 1997 the powers, functions, and duties of Government and of the Authority shall be such as are provided in the regulatory laws as replaced or amended from time to time and in any subordinate legislation made thereunder. Any reference made in any law other than the regulatory laws or in any other subordinate legislation to the Inspector of financial services appointed under section 12(1) of the Banks and Trust Companies Law is to be read as a reference to the Authority.”

I think that in fact deals with the point rather than the gazette of 24th May. But I think it’s a useful opportunity to draw attention to that gazette of 24th May because there are important consequential amendments to the Monetary Authority’s powers contained in that gazette. I welcome the opportunity to draw members’ attention to that gazette and the wider public. Thank you.

The Chairman: The only problem I have with that is that this committee stage is not broadcast so the public will not hear it.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I hope the public will have access to the gazette, Mr. Chairman. But that was the purpose of gazetting the particular information so that it should be brought to the public. I don’t want to broadcast, but just to make sure it is emphasised. Perhaps we can’t do that in this forum, but I am content to leave it to the gazette to speak to the position if that’s the appropriate way to do it.

The Chairman: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I just wanted to observe, notwithstanding the fact that this committee is not broadcast, that we do have the media available and they will no doubt make special mention of this particular point for the benefit of the public.

The Chairman: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Just one comment, sir. Persons buying the Banks and Trust Companies Law, the Companies Management Law, Insurance Companies and Mutual Funds, which the Attorney General just read from the back of the Monetary Authority (1998 Revision) . . . how are they going to be aware of all these amendments that took place under the Monetary Authority Law other than the gazette? Are these amendments going to be available for sale from Parliament?

The Chairman: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David Ballantyne: The Monetary Authority Law of 1996 obviously contained these amendments. Only when the revision was made were they dropped. The Law Revision Commissioner acknowledged that and arranged for the publication pending a revision of the Banks and Trust Companies Law which is the law that is primarily affected and the problem will be corrected or cured when the Banks and Trust Companies Revision is next produced, which I hope will be very soon.

The other Laws affected are the Mutual Funds and Insurance. The same should go for them. I will make it my business to ensure that the law revisions for those show the correct position so that people are fully informed. This is just an interim measure and it happens when you have a law revision programme that is a rolling programme.

Mr. Chairman, in the gazette of 24th May, on pages 44 and 45 there is a heading “Law Revision Notice to Subscribers—Banks and Trust Companies Law.”

It says, “Due to an unavoidable delay in revision of the Banks and Trust Companies Law until such revision is published it should be read in conjunction with both [and the laws are mentioned] and with the schedule, the transitional provisions, of the Monetary Authority Law.” And it sets out in full the amendments to the Banks and Trust Companies Law, which are referred to.

Among these amendments is “Authority, means the Cayman Islands Monetary Authority.” And the reference to the law is amended by “repealing ‘Inspector’ wherever it occurs and substituting ‘Authority’ except that in section 5(8) ‘inspector’ is substituted by ‘Financial Secretary.’”

So you will see that the three references to “Inspector” in 5(8) were substituted by three references to Financial Secretary.

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. David Ballantyne: Well, looking at that now it appears to me this is the wrong way around and that the proper course of action is to repeal “Financial Secretary” presumably in the second reference, and leave the other two references standing. That looks to be the case, but I would like to take the opportunity of having a look at the 1995 Banks and Trust Companies Law just to make absolutely certain, if the committee will bear with me for just a moment.

The Chairman: Would members agree that we take the morning break while the honourable Attorney General does some further research?

We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.10 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.52 AM

The Chairman: Please be seated. Proceedings in committee are resumed. The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Let me apologise to members for the delay in resolving this matter, but I believe it is now resolved. However, it does require to be explained, and if you bear with me it will probably take about five minutes to give this explanation.

The Chairman: Please go ahead.

Hon. David Ballantyne: The Banks and Trust Companies Law (1995 Revision) in section 5(8) said this: “Every holder of a licence shall, on or before every 15th day of January after the first grant of the licence, pay the prescribed annual fee provided that unless the Inspector waives the same there shall be payable by a licensee who fails to pay the prescribed annual fee by that date a surcharge not exceeding 1/12 of that fee for every month or part of a month that the fee is not paid.” So far so good.

The 1996 Monetary Authority Law came along and in the amendments to which I referred (which are repeated in the 24th May gazette) said two things: that the Law was amended (that’s the Banks and Trust Companies Law), by “repealing ‘Inspector’ wherever it occurs; and substituting ‘Authority’ except that in section 5(8) ‘Inspector’ was substituted by ‘Financial Secretary.’”

So at the moment we’ve only got one reference to Financial Secretary and that’s in the proviso. It would then read “. . . provided that unless the Financial Secretary waives the same there shall be payable” a surcharge.

However, those amendments in 1996 also went on to say that section 5(8) was amended by inserting after ‘pay’ the following “to the Financial Secretary for the benefit of the revenue” and by inserting after ‘payable’ the same words. So we ended up with three references to Financial Secretary in the same subsection.

Part of the confusion (in my mind at least) was which ‘pay’ was referred to “by inserting after ‘pay.’” It didn’t say where it occurs for the first time, because there are two references to ‘pay’ in the subsection.

At any rate, set that aside. If you accept that that 1996 amendment amended the first reference to ‘pay’ so that it would mean that “every holder of a licence shall, on or before every 15th day of January, after the first grant of a licence pay . . .” and then the new words “to the Financial Secretary for the benefit of the revenue . . .” and then it would go on “provided that unless the Financial Secretary waives the same there shall be payable to the Financial Secretary for the benefit of the revenue. . .” Those are the three references to the Financial Secretary.

So far, I think, so good . . . except that in 1998 along came a bill called the Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalty Fees) Law, 1998 which said section 5 of the Banks and Trust Companies Law is amended in subsection (8) by repealing “Financial Secretary” and substituting “Authority.” The net effect of all of that is that instead of three references to “Financial Secretary” you end up with three references to “Authority” in section 5(8).

Three references to “Authority” would mean that the fees would be paid to the Authority—and that’s not the idea. So the 1998 bill was wrong in that regard. What it ought to have said (with the benefit of hindsight) was that the reference to Financial Secretary in relation to waiver only should have been changed. That’s what ought to have happened. The other two references to Financial Secretary as being the person to whom the revenue is payable should have stayed there.

This, then, is correct. And this Bill—which is now right I am happy to say—is correcting that position by repealing Authority in the first and third places where it occurs, that is where the revenue is payable. It is repealing it by saying it should be payable to the Financial Secretary.

I am afraid this is rather tortuous and I hope the explanation is sufficiently clear. But the way this will end up by this amendment (if it helps to explain that) will be that the section will read: “every holder shall pay to the Financial Secretary for the revenue of the islands the prescribed annual fee provided that unless the Au- thority waives the same there shall be payable to the Financial Secretary . . .” that’s the effect of the current amending bill, which is what the Bill in 1998 ought to have done but did not.

Because the 1998 bill was wrong, the revision was held up. If it had been published it would have been wrong and the idea was that it should await the passing of this correcting bill. Once this correcting bill has been passed the entire revision with all of these amendments will be published so as to give everyone the true picture.

I apologise for the length of that explanation. I apologise again for the delay. I would only add that to avoid any such delay in the future I have asked that the person responsible for the drafting of any particular measure be available in the Chamber to assist us when we are at the committee stage of bills. I believe that will help to expedite the business of the House. Thank you.

PRIVATE MEMBERS’ MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER’S MOTION NO. 3/99

HOUSING INITIATIVES FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING (Deferred)

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I had a chat with the minister responsible for this matter and we agreed that we would deal with it in the morning. But we are prepared to carry on with item 5 (ii). I spoke to the member moving that motion.

The Speaker: I will put the question to the House that we defer Private Member’s Motion No. 3/99 until tomorrow and proceed with Private Member’s Motion No. 13/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER’S MOTION NO. 3/99 DEFERRED.

The Speaker: Private Member’s Motion No. 13/99, Assistance for Local Potable Water Producers. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER’S MOTION NO. 13/99

ASSISTANCE FOR LOCAL POTABLE WATER PRODUCERS

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 13/99, entitled, Assistance for local potable water producers, standing in my name, which reads as follows:

“BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government investigate into how best it can provide assistance into helping local potable water producers, given that Caymanian merchants import water duty free.”

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 13/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: This motion has been brought to seek the assistance of the government in addressing a need that has been brought to the attention of some honourable members by persons producing potable water for local consumption.

As I understand the situation, the producers who wholesale water have recently had to contend with an increase in fees by the government. Those who are in the retail business, in addition to having to pay increased Trade and Business Licence fees, are also in the unenviable position of having to import the materials used to bottle the water. At least one of these producers told me that the arrangements his company had with the government regarding a waiver of duty on these materials has expired. He has subsequently written to the government but there has been no response. That producer has to now pay duty on materials used in the bottling of water. All this in comparison to merchants that are allowed to import water duty free.

The House will take note that the motion is not asking the government to put any duties on imported water, it is asking the government to investigate into how best it can help these producers of potable water. The motion is not designed to hamstring the government, but it is one where the government can make a sensible and reasonable assessment.

From conversations with some of these producers (and I have discussed it with some of my colleagues on the backbench and they have had the same kinds of approaches) . . . I might just say the consensus of opinion from our side is that we believe the situation warrants some kind of examination by the government.

One of the problems, as I understand it, is that local producers of water have to contend with this differential in cost of imported water and water produced locally which is rather non competitive, believe it or not, as a result of producers having to pay the increased Trade and Business Licence fees and also having to pay for imported materials used in bottling of the water. It is not unusual that they do not get their fair share of the market because what will happen is that when the weather is good and there are no hiccoughs with orders from Miami, local water producers, suppliers to the supermarkets and merchant establishments, don't do as well as they do because naturally these people are attracted to the imported water which is duty free.

When we have nor'westers, or any other bad weather, there is a greater demand for locally produced potable water. As I understand it, the local producers really cannot gauge their businesses on this ad hoc kind of sales and marketing arrangement because all of them have commitments. One producer has ten Caymanians in his employ. If the market does not show any significant improvement in the next little while, this person has told me that he will have to seriously assess the future of his operations—which may mean that something will have to be done in terms of reducing the number of Caymanians employed. I wouldn't like to see something like that happen. If one entity has ten Caymanians employed, that is certainly a start and there should be more of these entities.

Certainly, those of us who speak about diversification of the economy have to encourage these employers and these operations. I hope that government is sufficiently sympathetic and interested so that it can diligently and conscientiously examine this request.

I have another concern that I should express. I believe that one way we can ensure that the water consumed in the country is of the highest quality and standard is if we produce it ourselves, and is monitored by the Water Authority. If we as a nation fail to encourage those people who invest in the supply of these kinds of essential services then how can we as a nation really move forward into the 21st Century? We have to be looking at diversification issues far more seriously.

So I will not prolong this introduction except to say that I believe the motion has merit. These persons—both those who are into the wholesaling, that is the trucking of water, as well as those who bottle it and do more of the retail business—need assistance at this time because they have all been grumbling since the imposition of the new tax measures. There are certainly ways the government can alleviate some of the burden they have been experiencing. I hope that government is so disposed to examine and see what can be done.

I leave this worthy request to honourable members.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps it is worthy to note at this point in time that government doesn't seem to have the ability to reply to the motion. I don't know what procedure will take place. Perhaps the member coming in might reply.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The motion before the House is substantially in line with what concessions have been given in the past. From what I can understand, the position is that the containers, the bottles and caps and other material needed by the Caymanian producer, has been given duty free concession in the past. This brings it therefore in line with the fact that water which is imported from abroad comes in duty free. I remember when that was done many years ago, probably fourteen years ago. That was good.

So the input of the motion which is seeking to continue the Caymanian producer of water getting his raw materials in duty free, by all means government will continue to do that through Customs. The concession is in place. I guess it must have been in place for quite a while now.

But this producer of water is given a concession on import duty on the bottles and the caps and that sort of thing. So, this motion is very much in line with government's present policy and position on it. I will continue to support and I am sure the government will continue to support that position because we feel that it is fair. So, in effect, government is happy to accept the motion and to continue to carry on this policy which has been in place for quite some time. I can't really say any more on that. It seems to be a nice simple one.

Also I noticed that presumably the word "local" where it talks about helping "local potable water producers, given that Caymanian merchants . . ." I would assume that the mover meant to say "Caymanian potable water producers" or does he expect this to be extended to non-Caymanian people? But the Caymanian water producer does have this concession.

I don't know if there are any others doing this who are not Caymanian or not local. But in relation to the one being referred to—Mr. Eden—he does have this concession and it's a concession that government will continue to renew, depending upon what length it is, at least for the foreseeable future.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I am in support of the motion. In view of recent costs to local companies we need to somewhat level the field. Those persons bottling and producing and trucking water are disadvantaged presently because of recent costs by government. Even the Caribbean Development Bank gives local companies a 15% margin on supplies for goods, that is local companies can be 15% higher because of all the higher cost of production on small scale in the islands.

Government has water duty on several areas in the country, but not on importation. For instance, another disadvantage is that all equipment used to process, truck, and handle is subject to 27% and even 30% duty, that is for local companies importing their equipment. So that cost is added to the companies. There is no effect on companies who import water.

Cayman Water Company also pays 7.5%. That's what they call a dredging or franchise fee. Diesel fuel has a tax per gallon. This is used by local companies. So there again, that's a disadvantage; more cost for the local company. Government wants $25,000 for a licence. So in view of these costs and government's recent addition of $25,000 for companies producing local water, government should now look at finding ways to assist the companies in view of their increased costs.

I am glad to hear that government is prepared to look at it and do whatever (according to the Minister for Education) they can. I am glad they have now agreed to do that. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: I rise to make my contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 13/99, Assistance for local potable water producers. My colleagues and I have all been very instrumental in identifying the need for providing assistance for Caymanians. One business of potable water is situated in my district and is ably run and owned by a Caymanian. This company provides potable water to the entire Cayman Islands at a reasonable price and is of very high quality.

Having this business situated in the Savannah community has been a great convenience to my constituents as well as the other neighbouring districts. Also having this business in the Savannah area is a very successful move to decentralising businesses from central George Town to the outer districts.

I am also convinced that the owner of this business has made every effort to make this a success and any reasonable assistance government can provide to help this business to sustain its operation will be worthwhile and value for money seeing that potable water is such a valuable resource which is needed throughout the islands.

I give this motion my full support and also in the absence of my colleague, the honourable Anthony Eden, I would like to pass on his full support as well. Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: This is not one of these motions that will really require long debate, so let me just say that I give the motion my full support. This is something that I remember bringing to the attention of honourable members on more than one occasion prior to this.

I think what we need to be looking at in the wider purview is the fact that this is one of those situations where we are able to see tangible results in diversification of our industries locally. If we look at what is being done locally, when we talk of one of the producers employing ten Caymanians, what we need to appreciate is that there is room for growth in these areas once these businesses are able to operate in such a way. It's not a matter of making exorbitant profits. But if they can cover their costs while their operations are going on for a certain period of time, certainly once they get their own little niche in the market they will be able to sell more and compete with the imported water. And once their volume increases the business will become more successful.

The seconder of the motion mentioned the fact that in the Public Finance and Audit Law of 1998, when government brought it's last tax package—or to use their nicer term “revenue enhancement measures”—they skyjacked (for want of a better word) the Trade and Business Licence Fee for bulk water distributors from . . . I don't remember exactly what it was but it was a figure under $1,000 and it has gone to $25,000!

I have to say that that shows how ill thought out these revenue measures were. I am certain that it was not government's intention to try to prevent these people from surviving as they have graciously accepted the intention of the motion. It is obvious that they would like to see themselves do whatever they can to encourage businesses of this nature. So when we look at that fee being arbitrarily increased to $25,000 it makes me wonder who sat down and dreamt the whole thing up.

While the motion doesn't call for it (and there is another motion that will deal with such matters specifically), I want to sow the seed now for government to be examining circumstances like that. I know that they know that that was not a very smart move on their part. I am not talking politically—I am talking about getting the best results and doing what not only seems right for the country, but doing what is right for the country.

I give the motion my support and I would like for government to be thinking in these areas for the other motion that will come at a later date. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply?

Mr. Roy Bodden: I am happy to learn from the government that it is willing to consider this. I have to remind the House that in the past the government has offered certain concessions to some of these persons in the business of selling bottled water and in the business of bottling water. The government offered them certain concessions on the materials used in the bottling of that water.

But one of the weaknesses—and this has been a direct request of at least one of the persons who spoke to me regarding this motion—is that these concessions were granted for specific time periods. Now in one of the cases that convinced me to bring this motion the time limit for the concessions had expired. The particular entity wrote to the government requesting an extension, but some months have passed and they have received no reply. Consequently, they had to revert to paying duties.

Perhaps government can move to address a weakness by monitoring more closely the time limit given and either institute an automatic rollover or make the rollover a mere formality. It is also not farfetched to request a rebate on the duties collected since that time because these people really deserve a break.

Honourable colleagues mentioned the licence fees that are now $25,000. That is not an insignificant sum! Believe you me, you have to sell a lot of water to realise that—particularly when we realise the market for trucked water (now that the areas of George Town and West Bay are on piped water) is sufficiently contracted. That means that you only have certain sections of Bodden Town, East End, and North Side. With few exceptions in the George Town and West Bay areas, it is rare that these people would require trucked water any more. So this is really difficult for these persons.

As is usual in most things, the consumer is the one who has to pick up the tab. So this $25,000 increase in the licence fee has been passed on to the consumer. And in the first instance, many of these people who resort to buying this water were people who for various reasons could not afford any other kind of arrangement where they could have a more secure supply. It is fortunate for the producers that we have had in some areas of the country a drought, which has afforded them a rather steady market. But if there were heavier rains, they would have been really hurting and some of these people rely heavily on the money they get from this.

And apart from the investment in equipment, they hire drivers and other people. So it is not a one-off operation that one man does himself. It is an extended operation and the cash flow really trickles down which makes it even more important to our economy that some kind of assistance be given to these persons.

As I have said, I welcome the acknowledgement by the government that it is willing to look at this. I hope that we can get some kind of satisfactory arrangement and that government can use its initiative to effect the best most effective and efficient solution to this rather budding problem. I shall encourage the government, and I will keep in contact with the potable water producers.

Now, the minister who spoke on behalf of government raised a point. When I said “local,” that's really semantics because these people are Caymanians. I meant that they are Caymanian producers whom I know are in the business. So “local” was just used in place of a better word. Really and truly, I must confess that I hadn't noticed that it could have been slanted in such a way until the honourable minister remarked on that.

Before I wind up, I would implore government to not limit its examination of what government can afford to do to the removal of duties on the bottles and containers, but to also take a more comprehensive look at the whole operation and see what else it may be able to do to help these people get into a position where they can be more competitive, their products can be more attractive and where they can possibly expand their business.

One honourable member made reference to an establishment in our constituency. That is a significant investment by the gentleman involved. I would hope that business is so encouraged that he might be able to expand rather than have to think about contracting.

I leave it with government and hope that government can allay my concerns and have reason to encourage the producers that they may continue to produce water without fear of losing any business and be able to realise returns on their investments.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 13/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 13/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 14/99, Motion to restrict the practice of tattoo artists and other persons from having school age children as their customers. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/99

MOTION TO RESTRICT THE PRACTICE OF TATTOO ARTISTS AND OTHER PERSONS FROM HAVING SCHOOL AGE CHILDREN AS THEIR CUSTOMERS

(Deferred)

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would crave the leave of the House because it has been brought to my attention that this motion, which was drafted by me, could be more efficiently and effectively crafted. As it is, the government has informed me that it is a little problematic the way it is.

So, I would crave the leave of the House for an early adjournment, if it pleases the Chair. I will have the rest of this afternoon to try to effect the repairs needed on the motion.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of the House that we adjourn for the day or that we move on?

I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until tomorrow morning at 10.00.

The Speaker: Before I put the question, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has asked permission to move a motion of importance.

RAISING OF PUBLIC MATTER (Standing Order 11(6))

BREAK-IN OF POLICE SHED

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, you will recall that I spoke to you in your office and requested that you give me leave to raise a matter under Standing Order 11(6) which is of some national importance.

The matter has to deal with a report which was carried in the newspaper, but when I heard the story I confirmed it with the police high command, that is of a break-in at what the Caymanian Compass in its issue of Monday 7th June, described as a "shed."

As I understand it, this building contained important, if not vital evidence and specimens for some cases that were before the courts. Some of these were serious drug cases. This is a matter of national importance and concerns the Legislative Assembly because under our system, any attempt to tamper and subvert the courts and justice has to be viewed in the dimmest of light.

I also wish to say that this airing gives us the opportunity to strengthen the way in which these matters are handled. One of the requests I wish to make of the Chief Secretary, who has the Parliamentary responsibility, is that when government is aware of these situations, bearing in mind that many of these situations are sensitive and of a confidential nature, we think that it is not only appropriate but would be better handled and better managed—and certainly convey the impression of some form of transparency—if government is willing to share with members of the Legislative Assembly, even if we have to be requested to give some kind of guarantee that we will hold matters in confidence.

A case in point is when I was at my place of work. I received a telephone call informing me that this incident had taken place. I had not heard of it before. Subsequently, a customer came in and repeated the story. I then felt duty bound to call the police high command because this was "marl road" talk of a rather serious nature. The stories were confirmed, and I was satisfied that the police were doing all in their powers to get on top of the situation.

But I want to conclude by saying that in addition to assuring the House of what information they can spare as to the developments in this case, I would also like the honourable First Official Member to consider that in the future when these cases occur, that members of the Legislative Assembly be apprised, even if only that "such and such" has happened and that "government is on top of the situation." Then it puts us as representatives of the people in a position to say when approached that we are aware of it; that government has made us aware of it, that we are satisfied that we have an undertaking from government that it is doing all within its powers to normalise the situation or get on top of the situation.

That prevents the spread of panic, misinformation, wrong information, and mischief on the marl road and puts us in a position where when we are approached we can say to our constituents and the wider public that we know, rest assured the government is doing all it can to get the situation under control, there's absolutely no need to worry.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you.

On the night of 31st May this year an outbuilding at the rear of Central Police Station was entered by force and certain property was removed. The following day a statement was released to the press. That has since been out in the Caymanian Compass.

The enquiry is continuing and any further information at this stage could prejudice both the police enquiry and possibly the prosecution. If and when additional information is available, it will be passed on. Thank you.

The Speaker: I would like to thank the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town for the way in which he presented this, and the honourable First Official Member for his reply. I think in view of the sensitivity of the matter we should go no further.

The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

The Speaker: I have received apologies for late attendance from the Honourable Second and Third Official Members. They will be arriving later this morning. Item 3, Government Business, Bills, Third—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

RAISING OF MATTER OF PRIVILEGE

ABSENCE OF QUESTIONS ON THE ORDER PAPER

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I rise to bring to the attention of the Chair a matter that I believe affects the procedure and privilege of the House, that is members' business on the Order Paper.

It is a sad fact that government seems to be ducking some of these questions on the Business Paper. I am concerned, as a member of the Business Committee. And we already had one member from this side of the House who resigned from the Business Committee because of this type of action. I am not here blaming the Chairman, Mr. Speaker.

I am raising this matter because yesterday in a Business Committee meeting I asked why no questions were being put on. The answer was that ministers were busy and, in particular, questions that were put down from Monday to be answered today were not going on the Order Paper. The reason is that there could be something legally wrong with those questions. Those questions were to the Minister of Tourism in regard to the matter of Pedro Castle.

I would like to hear what is the illegality about it, and why we can't get those questions answered.

Ministers must do better than this. Members on this side are as busy as they are. I don't know if they can stand in this House, or anywhere else, and tell the world that they are that busy and that they cannot answer some questions that have been on the Order Paper for nearly a year now.

This affects the procedure and privilege of this House. Members' business! It stinks! It seems that some ministers are running from a matter that should be properly aired in this House; a matter that you as Presiding Officer have allowed to be put on the Business Paper of the House. We cannot continue in this way.

I know they can be busy. And I would like to say that while I was there I was busy too. But they have executive staff. They have a lot of support staff. And as I understand it, they don't sit down and write the answers themselves—the support staff provides the information and they merely go over it, correct it, and send it on to the House for answering. This has got to stop!

Why are they running and ducking in this fashion, talking about "illegality" of questions? If there were some illegality, wouldn't the Presiding Officer have known that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: As Chairman of the Business Committee, I explained to the First Elected Member for West Bay that for the past two weeks the Executive Council together with the Third Elected Member for George Town has been putting together very extensive submissions on the OECD. This has taken just about our complete time, including sittings on Saturdays and some members working on Sunday.

The procedure that is now in place is no different from the first five years that the First Elected Member for West Bay was in this House. He ducked! And if it stinks—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order!

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: If it stinks—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order!

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I want to find out from that minister what time I ducked any questions. Anytime I was asked any questions I came here and answered them, and if I couldn't answer them, I said I would answer them in writing.

The Speaker: Give him an opportunity to answer, please.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, I would like to hear what time. That's a point of order I am raising.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The procedure now is the same as—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order. Is this a different point of order?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I already raised that point of order and the minister is not replying to the point of order.

I want to find out what time I was involved in that stink which I ducked. He is misleading the House. That's the point of order. I don't need to spell that out to the whole world, but that's what it is. And I would like to find out what it is that he is talking about.

The Speaker: I think we have to give him an opportunity to tell us. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I am going to move off the question of "ducking" and go on to the "stinking" part of it.

It is unfortunate that this House has to put up with this type of language. What I am saying is that the position now is no different from what it has been in the past. I know that. A point that was just raised by—

The Speaker: Could I just ask you then to withdraw the word "ducking" and just—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, if that honourable member withdraws—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. Is the member confronting you now with argument?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, no. Now you sit down.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Me, sit down? You're not big enough to make me sit down, Mr. Truman Bodden!

The Speaker: Please. Order!

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I withdraw "ducking" but I would like that member to withdraw that the five members of Council are ducking questions as well. What goes for one, goes—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No! Would you let me finish please?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: On a point of order.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No! You let me finish my point of order.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: This is a point of order!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: How can you have two points of order on the floor?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Because you're arguing one, and you shouldn't be arguing with the Chairman.

The Speaker: Parliamentary procedure says that one member should speak. Please, let us have some decorum in here this morning.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am rising on a point of orders am I not?

The Speaker: He has just risen to reply to the point of order.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, he's arguing with you, and if you don't recognise that now, then I don't understand why you are not recognising it. He must withdraw the misleading statements he made and that is my point of order.

The Speaker: Let us get back to what we are dealing with. He has said that he withdraws "ducking." He has raised a point of order that you used the word "ducking" prior to his using it. So I am now asking that you withdraw that.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am not going to withdraw that this morning. Do you know why? Because he is the Chairman of the Business Committee!

And you let me explain, since you gave him a chance to explain. We put down questions from Monday—from Monday!—so the Minister of Tourism could answer. And then they have questions from last year. Mr. Speaker, this has to stop! And he raised the matter that there was some illegality about it. What is the illegality?

I want to find that out on the floor of this House because the people of this country ought to know if I ask a question and you, as Presiding Officer, allow the question to go to the Minister, then what is the illegality about it? If that is not ducking, you give me another word Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: Let me clear my point now. As the Presiding Officer of this House I have asked you to withdraw "ducking."

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I withdraw "ducking" and say they are "running" from the question . . . or they don't want to answer it. What is the problem?

The Speaker: I would like to call to the attention of honourable members that the procedure in this House is that Business Papers are prepared. From that, the Business Committee selects what goes on the Order Paper. You stated earlier that you are a member of the Business Committee. I want to make it abundantly clear that [neither] the department nor the Chair has anything to do with what goes on the Order Paper.

It is my responsibility to see that what goes on the Order Paper is carried out in a proper manner. And I intend to do that this morning. So, let us get on with the business of the day.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If I may finish. On another point of order, the First Elected Member for West Bay has called me a "rat." I wish to have him withdraw it, please.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I will withdraw that, if you heard me say so and if it is recorded in the Hansards of this honourable House. I would like to stop here and see. I don't recall that I said it, but let's see.

The Speaker: This is only going to delay the proceedings. We will have to suspend while we get the recordings. If that is the wish of the House, we shall do so.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, before you take the suspension, I would like to say something sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I think, sir, that honourable members have a right to feel frustrated about the business of the way questions are handled. I speak from the point of view of those of us who take our business of representing the people conscientiously. I have 44 questions now on this Business Paper. Some of these questions have been outstanding from a year ago, last June.

I want to say this because it is serious. What is being demonstrated to us is that those of us who are conscientious about representing the people are being deterred from our conscientiousness. We go to extraordinary lengths to gather questions, many of which emanate from concerns of our constituents and the wider public. And the questions are not being answered.

I have to say that the government has to convince me that it is not treating this with an element of contempt.

I take cognisance of the position of the Chairman of the Business Committee, the Leader of Government Business, that he has pressing matters such as the OECD. But is the government telling us that it has the capability of only dealing with one important matter at a time? That they are one-tracked? I hope not! If that is the case, that means they have been running on the same track since last June since some of these questions originated at that point.

Previous experience and comments I have heard lead me to believe that there is an element of contempt in the way our queries are treated and that this whole business of questions from members is treated with a nonchalance that is not indicative of good Westminster style parliaments. I would hope that government takes note of our concern.

I leave them with the old adage that what goes around, comes around. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, the Business Committee is comprised of five people. It takes its decisions on a democratic basis. That is the way the Standing Orders of this House have it. The fact that the First Elected Member for West Bay might not like the decisions of the Business Committee . . . he's not entitled, as a minority in there, to come in here and dictatorially change the Business Committee's way of doing things.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order!

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I want the minister to withdraw the word "dictatorially." That's unparliamentary and it imputes a lot of things that he knows are not true.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning, use another word. Please withdraw that.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I withdraw it, Mr. Speaker.

He's one person in there. And when the First Elected Member for West Bay does not get his way in there, we have the position that has come out here today. To begin with, we shouldn't be talking about what goes on in the Business Committee because it's held in camera, not in public. That is the first breach that has gone on.

But what goes on the Order Paper . . . and if we notice there are no questions for the Official Members. They have been tied up as well. I want to make that clear.

The other problem which the First Elected Member for West Bay brought out before his triad is that we are trying to assist and go along with the backbench instead of answering questions in writing we are bringing them forward to answer them orally. What has happened now, by changing that procedure in the course of trying to help, there is a very large backup of questions.

Nobody is dodging anything. The Official Members are in the same position as the Elected Members, but we are only human beings. Dealing with questions takes a lot of time. There is no two ways about it. Hundreds and hundreds of man-hours can go into dealing with questions before they reach the House. So I would like to make it clear that the Business Committee is a democratic committee and the decisions of a minority, or one person in there, as against the other three or four will not override.

It will be unfortunate if this House attempts to force its view on committees that it has set up, because more and more I see the House wishing to do as it wishes regardless of procedure or otherwise. I would ask them to respect the Standing Orders of the House. As soon as we can get the questions ready they will go on the Order Paper.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: The sense of logic in what the Honourable Minister for Education just said is not travelling on calm waters. His sense of logic is travelling on very stormy waters and being swallowed up because there is no sense of logic to what he just said.

The minister just said that in trying to comply with the wishes of the backbench—by not answering questions in writing—that the government and/or (I am assuming) the Business Committee has put forward these questions to be answered orally while we meet. The immediate question is, If they were going to answer the questions in writing and it would have been done long before this, then what's the problem with bringing them onto the Order Paper to answer them? That means the answers are already prepared. So what he just said makes no sense whatsoever.

But that was just to deal with that specific point, because while the minister uses his own methods to try to bring his points across in this honourable Legislative Assembly there are some of us who can see through him in the way he does things—not through smartness but through tenure alone—having to listen to him so often.

The whole point about questions . . . some arguments have been put forward by other members of the backbench this morning. But what we must truly understand is the reason why members are frustrated with the arguments put forward as to why the questions are not being answered. The arguments wear themselves away and even if you try with the best of hearts you just have to stop accepting the watered down methods with which the government is trying to justify the questions not being answered.

I want them to hear me out!

When it is not that “we are meeting in here for six months” and they can't get to do it, it's because they are talking about other issues. He mentioned the OECD issue. I know—and they don't have to tell me—that not all of them sit down and spend all of those hours dealing with this thing!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I know that!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: They've told us so.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: No one is expecting more than can be done. But the truth of the matter is that it has become a battle. And I hold the view today that there are some members of the government who will use whatever means available to avoid bringing the questions to the Legislative Assembly, having to answer them.

When they talk about doing this and that all of the time . . . the government has staff at its disposal. The ministers have staff at their disposal. Are they saying to us that they have no confidence in their staff? Because the way the arguments are put forward it is like they have to answer the questions. And we know better. They know better and they know that we know better.

Perhaps we might be able to stop the arguments about it and maybe they will come with a different frame of mind and try to answer the questions. They talk about not having time to answer questions. But if we look at all of the questions that have been put forward through almost a year (as was mentioned before) there is no reason why even if the recent questions take longer to answer, that the other ones that were backed up can't be brought on the Order Paper to be answered. There is no reason.

Because the Legislative Assembly meets in March and then you finish that meeting doesn't mean that you don't go back and answer any questions until you come to June. What happened to all the time in between that?

Regardless of how busy they were, they have the wherewithal by which staff could do whatever research to come up with the answers and they can simply look at what is prepared and make whatever changes they want to and bring the answers to the questions to the floor of the House when we meet.

Regardless of what they might say, there is no justifiable reason why there is not enough time for questions to be answered on the Order Paper when we are meeting now because some of the questions go back over a long period of time. And while people may believe that they will just fall away, let me say something that they might consider to be a joke and will laugh amongst themselves about it, but I take this business seriously!

Right now, outside of my family commitments and everything else, this is the most important thing in my life because I have made a commitment!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: This is no joke! And I don't play games and I don't care about positions. I have a responsibility, and if my responsibility stops at asking the questions and their responsibility extends to answering them, then let them face their responsibility. I don't want to hear any more foolishness!

No matter what they say, it is going to come back down. There is no excuse! And anything else that they say from here on in will be treated by me (and I think I speak for the other backbenchers) as pure excuse! Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: The Chairman of the Business Committee raised a number of issues that I need to address. First of all, this matter affects the procedure of this House. It affects members' business.

The decision to put on three questions on Monday, was not the decision of the minority in the committee—namely McKeeva Bush—it was the decision of the membership of that committee. Now, if I am wrong, get the records of the Business Committee. He might rise on a point of order to say I am wrong. Get the records and let him read the record.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I rise on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What the Business Committee decided was at 3.45 yesterday, we would look at putting questions on. That member wanted questions put on—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Ask Georgette.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: —that had to be referred to the Attorney General because they may prejudice any future investigation or cases.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Which questions are you talking about?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

The Speaker: Let him finish his point of order.

[Addressing the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning] Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The questions I am talking about are the questions the First Elected Member for West Bay was talking about.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: The same?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: And what he is saying there about what the Business Committee did is not correct. We decided to review it at 3.45 yesterday and deal with putting on the questions then.

The Speaker: May I remind members of this honourable House that proceedings in committees are not supposed to be openly discussed in the House.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, please.

The Speaker: They are private.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I appreciate what you are saying. But this has been going on so far and so long that you cannot raise it at the end. By the time you get a Business Committee report to this House where you can raise it, it's months afterwards. And, Mr. Speaker, it affects the procedure—the non-answering of questions affects the procedure and our privilege to have those answers in this honourable House. And the only way that we can determine what he is saying and what I am saying would be to get that record. Now we are not going to get that until months afterwards.

I know that what he said concerning we would discuss other matters is true. But I specifically asked for those three questions—and they agreed! And it is down in the record because the Clerk said "What do we do about the three questions that we agreed on Monday?"

Furthermore, I would like to hear what the illegality . . . they are ducking! They are running because they don't want the Pedro Castle issue aired. And it should be aired—and the Minister for Tourism should want it aired! The people of this country are demanding that it be aired!

Now, Mr. Speaker, I can understand. I am a past member of Executive Council and I know the difficulties ministers face. But they cannot constantly come here and make us believe that that's all they are doing. I will give you two examples: We saw them on a road visit the other day. What good did that do the country?

For two and one half-hours yesterday we all went to a luncheon for Vision 2008, very important. But they had already heard those things through a presentation to Executive Council. That's two and one half-hours they could have used to answer some questions, in particular those pertinent to the business of this country. And people are demanding it!

I am saying that they are running from the matters of those three questions because they plan to say something about illegality in the answering of the questions and the motion!

That is not all that affects the privilege of the House. And please give me the opportunity, Mr. Speaker. We have some 14 motions on the Order Paper. From what I understand they are not going to take any more than three today. Maybe we could only get through three today. When I asked about tomorrow, they said that they were not ready with the balance of the 11 motions.

Now, we have nothing happening in the House tomorrow because government has no more business. They are going off next week, so nothing else gets done again. As the First Elected Member for George Town said, we take our duties seriously. Every one of them should want to answer questions and do all they can because they just gave themselves a hell of a raise!

We take it seriously! I know that the Minister for Education would like the minority to be kept down all the time. I know that! And we have to observe the democratic process. The minority is the minority, yes. But if we put work before the House, we deserve to be heard. And not because they are the government should they think that they can just give these answers and everybody has to swallow it. It is not fair!

It is not right! It is absolutely wrong what is going on in this country!

Why are they running? Why are they ducking those questions on Pedro Castle? Thank you for your indulgence Mr. Speaker. I really thank you. I know your patience was stretched this morning. I thank you because these things need to be aired.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If I may reply to what the member said—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, how much longer are we going to go on with this now?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: [Addressing the First Elected Member for West Bay] Are you rising on a . . . Well, you started this!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I had the right to reply. I thought everyone else had spoken.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am standing—

The Speaker: One member may speak at a time, please. I recognise the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

[Addressing the First Elected Member for West Bay] I will give you your turn after he has finished.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

First of all, the Standing Orders are clear: The matters of select committees should not be on the floor of this House. You made that point yourself.

Secondly, when a question is answered in writing a lot of preparation for supplementaries does not have to go into it. It's a very simple thing to answer a question in writing. It's a different task when you are questioned afterwards. I point that out.

The third thing is, and the Financial Secretary can bear this out, the majority of our staff (and at one stage I had only one receptionist in my office) were out trying to deal with the financial reform measures. That is still going on. Workshops have been held in the last three weeks where sometimes two days running just about all the staff were out.

The third thing is that the ministers here take their work seriously. But there is only a certain limit to what we can do. We have to prioritise what we are doing and the position has been . . . and it's not just the OECD we are dealing with. We are dealing with the G-7 measures and also the European Union measures. We have to leave for the United Kingdom on Tuesday. Monday is a holiday and, to be frank, two of those measures still have to be dealt with. It would be better, in my opinion . . . I think our time would be better spent trying to take as much time as we can to prepare for them. If they go wrong then this country can't live off questions.

It is going to radically . . . or, it is going to affect this country if that preparation is not done as fully as possible. So, what is being said by the First Elected Member for West Bay is unreasonable. He has been a minister here. He knows the pressures that are up there. Ministers do as much as they can and as quickly as they can. Last time I think four or five of the members of Executive Council answered all the questions. There were some left over and we agreed to bring them across.

Every effort is made to answer them. But now, in one session we answer more questions than previous parliaments answered in a full year, it's the same with motions. Some of these motions have to be looked at very carefully and until we are ready to debate them, I don't think it is right for the public not to get a complete picture on these motions. And research has to go on in several of these motions, legal advice has to be taken on several of them and we do have these three ready that we can move on.

But on the other hand, we could have done more work on the last day we were here (Wednesday). But, once again, some of the members who were moving these motions were not here and as a good-hearted government, we said we would stop early. I am just saying that it happens to both sides of the House at times.

There are times when members are not ready and we bend and we put it off. We meet with members at times to try to work out a joint position. So this flows both ways, Mr. Speaker. We are doing everything we can and I know the public appreciates that sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay. After this we are going to move on.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The minister is right. And I point out again that the privileges of this House are being affected. He can get up and talk about OECD all he likes. We know, because we have been in committee with them, that not all of them are involved. We know that! Why would he come and try to make us believe that everybody is involved? They are not!

And he is right. They should prioritise. That is what I am asking them to do so that this Parliament is not left without work being done. That's all I am asking, Mr. Speaker. They cannot continue in the vein they are.

He is getting up and making the world believe that they are spending all their time on this OECD. That's not true! They are spending their time on things they should not be spending their time on that's why the country's business is in shambles.

I just hope that we get our questions answered and they don't run behind this "illegality" that they are planning to dump on us regarding Pedro Castle. As far as being a good-hearted government . . . some of them don't have any heart!

The Speaker: Honourable Members, I would suggest that in the future we have an informal discussion on this rather than on the floor of this House.

We shall now proceed with the business of the day. Item 3 on today's Order Paper: Government Business, Bills, Third Reading.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

BILLS

THIRD READING

THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (WAIVER OF PENALTY FEES) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalty Fees) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, before you move on, I think you should point out that today being Thursday, you need to suspend the relevant Standing Order since [Private Members'] Motions are given precedence this morning.

The Speaker: You are perfectly right.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(3)

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, since the Leader of Government Business is so busy doing everything else that he didn't know this had to happen, I would move that we suspend the relevant Standing Order so that we can take Government Business before Private Members' Business.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, I am really getting tired of being insulted by the First Elected Member for West Bay—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Please, Mr. Speaker, there is a motion before the House and unless the minister is addressing—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am taking a point of order!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: What point of order do you have?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am tired—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, what is the point of order?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The point of order is that the member is consistently insulting other members and imputing improper motives!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: You should be the last one to talk!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Will you please sit down?

The Speaker: Please one—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: You make me! You're big enough. You make me this morning, because I have had enough of this little man, Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: Listen, honourable members, let's get back to order!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I second the motion, sir.

The Speaker: I understand what the minister for education is saying, but it's not going to solve the problem today. Let us get on with the business of the House.

The motion has been made and seconded that Private Members' Motions give way to Government Business. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(3) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE GOVERNMENT BUSINESS TO TAKE PRECEDENCE OVER PRIVATE MEMBERS' BUSINESS.

The Speaker: Continuing with item 3 on today's Order Paper: Government Business, Bills, Third Reading.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, in the absence of the Financial Secretary, I move the third reading of The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalty Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The question is that The Banks and Trust Companies (Amendment) (Waiver of Penalty Bill, 1999 be given a third reading and passed. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE BANKS AND TRUST COMPANIES (AMENDMENT) (WAIVER OF PENALTY BILL, 1999 GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to item 4 on today's Order Paper: Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 3/99, Housing Initiative for affordable housing to be moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/99

HOUSING INITIATIVE FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 3/99, Housing Initiative for affordable housing, standing in my name, which reads as follows:

"WHEREAS between 1992 and 1996 Government accepted a policy through the Ministry of Community Affairs for various housing needs, making it possible for a number of people to obtain homes;

"AND WHEREAS in 1997 further initiatives were approved to assist first-time home ownership;

"AND WHEREAS there still remains a dire need to meet the housing requirement in the low-income group and otherwise;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government directs its attention to addressing the need for affordable housing in general in the country as a matter of priority."

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I am pleased to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 has been duly moved and seconded and is open for debate. The First Elected Member for West Bay

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, it is public knowledge that the government's guaranteed home mortgage scheme has been in existence since August of 1994. In this scheme several locally registered class A commercial banks are providing the mortgage financing, with government providing a guarantee of up to 35% of the upper layer of each mortgage.

The maximum mortgage can be granted for up to \$125,000 (and we know that we have moved that up to \$150,000) for 20 years, at an interest rate of prime plus 3%, which stands at some 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ %. The last count that I had of the number of homes was somewhere around 170 Caymanians have been successful in purchasing mortgages to purchase a home or to have one built.

These applicants otherwise would not have been able to own their home due to the equity down payment requirements of most mortgages at commercial banks on these islands. The joint income of the applicants range from $2,000 per month to $5,000 per month, as I understand it. Similarly, mortgages have ranged from $45,000 to $120,000 thus far.

These homes have been through the width and breadth of this country—George Town, Bodden Town, Newlands, Midlands, West Bay, and some even in Cayman Brac. Much time and thought went into the examination of ways and means of designing a programme that gives greater access to mortgage financing for these income groups. But there is another area that remains of serious concern to government and members of this honourable House. This particular sector of concern includes single parent families as well as low wage earners. We all know that people who own their homes are generally more content. They have more of a stake in the country and therefore are better citizens as a result.

We encountered many problems trying to get a handle on that aspect of the housing sector—the low wage earner, and the single parents. Representatives of the Ministry at the time, the Public Works Department, and the Planning Department, visited several countries in the region to look at various systems because one of the main problems is the high cost of construction for housing. We found several models and we were well underway with discussions in the private sector to provide some housing for that sector. But in one area at least one person objected (possibly several objected) to having that category of housing next to them.

It's funny because that was just the run-up to the elections, and I thought it was a lot of electioneering. It seemed that way because in the same vicinity another company has gone in, bought another piece of property and has started building. So it must have been electioneering.

In the guaranteed home mortgage scheme a common hindrance to qualification is the ratio of the applicant's monthly payment to his monthly income. One aspect of the problem in this instance is the person's ability to pay a mortgage when he has other loan commitments. For instance, unpaid credit card balances, which together may take him to 40% of his salary as required by the banks as a maximum debt service ratio. Those problems, coupled with the lack of available homes at that time which could have been readily purchased or constructed for an amount these persons could qualify to borrow, still make it impossible to provide housing for the lower income group I am talking about.

To give an example of the schedule of what a person or couple would pay for various levels of mortgage loans based on a 20-year repayment period at 11 $\frac{3}{4}$ %, the monthly payment on a \$40,000 loan would be \$419.70. The monthly income that the bank requires is \$1,271.83. For a loan of \$50,000, \$524.63 would be the payment. The monthly income requested is \$1,589.79. For a loan of \$60,000, the payment would be \$629.56, with a monthly income requirement of \$1,907.75. For a loan of \$65,000, \$682.02, with a monthly income of \$2,066.72. For a loan of \$70,000, \$734.48 with a monthly income of \$2,225.70.

For a loan of $75,000, $786.95 with a monthly income of $2,384.68. For a loan of $80,000, $839.41, with a monthly income of $2,543.66. For $85,000, $891.87, with a monthly income of $2,702.64. I could go on, but I will stop there because then it really rises and I am trying to focus on the lower income group. At $85,000 is what we would hope to get homes for. That is what the very top of the low-income group could probably reach. But not the lower end. The income figure I was given was either a single or combined salary.

There are prohibiting factors to implementing a scheme that falls within a mortgage payment range of $250 to $650 per month. These obstacles include costs such as import duties, stamp duties, as well as labour costs and building materials. We investigated several schemes, one that made $3 million to $4 million available for housing and took all of those factors into consideration. But it must have fallen away after I left Executive Council.

It is not so much the financing now. As I understand it, there seems to be fund available, but not available to that sector. So we are going to have to come up with several ways to come to grips with this problem.

I always felt that the only way to tackle the housing needs in the country was to do a number of initiatives dealing with the problems from various angles. One way that could be introduced is for government to get more involved, do a rental agreement between the buyer and the owner and the bank with an up front commitment from the buyer that a portion of the rental payment goes to paying down the deposit. Once this has been achieved the bank would then roll this over into a mortgage. Government and the banks could be made to join a pool to fund these types of mortgages.

Interest rates on these types of mortgages would need to be set at special rates, below what the norm now is in the guaranteed mortgage scheme so that it could be beneficial to the buyer and the lender. There are a number of apartments and homes being built today. Government needs to go and negotiate with the owners and have a roundtable discussion with them and the banks so that the initiative I am talking about can be quickly explored.

As I said, government could do a little bit more and some of the ideas that I had to be implemented in this four year term was that government would put aside sufficient funds annually to provide soft loans up to a maximum of $100,000 for a period of 30 years. Then government would give a 5% interest rate for first time homeowners. Also in that particular thought process, if a couple was building a first home for $150,000 or $175,000 government could still finance the $100,000.

One of the things I accomplished at the Caribbean Development Bank Board meeting in Canada in 1997 (attended by the Financial Secretary, a member of his staff, my Permanent Secretary and I) was to get Caribbean Development Bank to agree to a different outlook of the Cayman Islands in terms of how we borrow funds from them. I discussed the matter of housing and it is a source we can tap because there was agreement for an initiative for Cayman. What happened after that I don't know as I resigned in October. That is an initiative that could be taken up by government because it was the thought process when we were putting together the scheme to address the needs of the lower income group.

The cost being what it is, legal fees and so on, government could approach an attorney, or perhaps their own legal department for a flat rate for all legal work for the purchase, a reasonable flat rate of $500 or less, which would include pre-qualification for the stamp duty waiver and everything pertaining to the sale. As I said, one prohibiting factor is the interest and the qualifying ratio of the applicant's monthly loan payment requirement to their monthly salary.

One way that we had discussed (and we had intention of carrying the programme through) was looking at introducing a system that if the interest had to remain the same in the country that is being offered to people for mortgages, especially the lower income group, if the interest had to remain the same government with the banks would enter into another agreement. Government would be the 100% guarantor to the bank and the agreement would be structured so that government could pay the interest of the mortgage through a fund set up for such purposes and take back that payment from the borrower interest free but over a 30 year period so that the borrower's payment to government on that side of his commitment would be very minimal.

We thought that these different initiatives could assist the people we are trying to help but it would entail a lot of discussion and it would entail government giving some more commitments.

I don't know what has been done with the guaranteed mortgage scheme since I left Executive Council. I don't know how many people have received mortgages, if any, since 1997. But I am asking government to look at these different aspects I have mentioned this morning and be up and running with the scheme.

I see that the minister is not in the Chamber, but probably in a meeting. Probably we could take the suspension at this time.

The Speaker: Proceedings are suspended for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.19 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11.57 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99, Housing Initiative for affordable housing. The First Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

MOTION TO AMEND PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/99

Mr. W McKeever Bush: I now want to move to the amendment to the motion which says: "In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(2) I, the First Elected Member for West Bay, wish to move the following amendment To Private Member's Motion No. 3/99: 'That at the end thereof, the following resolutions be added: "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Government assistance with waiver of Stamp Duty on first time home owners be increased from $125,000 to $135,000 or $150,000; and BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the waiver of Stamp Duty on first time owner of house lots be increased from $25,000 to $35,000.”

Mr. Speaker, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is the seconder and the Serjeant is getting him. He had to step out a minute.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Given the circumstances, I am happy to second that motion for the amendment.

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Do you wish to speak to it? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: As I said, since the introduction of the government guaranteed mortgage scheme, many Caymanian families have been able to get a home.

During the 1996 election various members of the House campaigned on the housing issue and we also campaigned for more assistance. And in 1997 I was able to get government to agree to waive stamp duty for first time homeowners for houses up to $125,000. We also got government to agree to waive stamp duty on first time owners of house lots up to $25,000. We do know that this has been very successful and once again we were able to demonstrate that through sensible innovation we could get things done to benefit our people.

This amendment goes a bit further to once again address the need facing our people by increasing the waiver of stamp duty on first time homeowners from $125,000 to $135,000 or $150,000, and house lots from $25,000 to $35,000. I believe this initiative will also go a long way in assisting our people to be able to get a home. We have had people come to us at various times saying that they have this type of income, which is not a big income. And in trying to get a house which might be $135,000 instead of $120,000 or $125,000 but the government agreement only goes up to that $125,000 so they can't get assistance. So it is with house lots also. This is an attempt to give them that little bit more working room to assist them in getting a home for themselves and their children.

As I outlined earlier, there are different areas that need to be looked at, different initiatives to attack this housing problem. It is not going to be addressed from just one angle; it can't be because of our type of development and the makeup of the country. It would be good if we only had to deal with one area, but there are various factors that stop us from just saying we will introduce this scheme and that's all we will do. We did that. It helped some people, but it didn't help others. So, as I pointed out this morning, we need to move on different angles to help the people in the different salary levels.

There are various issues that impact upon people getting homes, which I outlined earlier also. There's the matter of import duty and planning fees. I think that developers of this type of housing I am talking about for lower income groups could be given concessions on a percentage basis on duties on materials. This would require some policing I know by government. I understand that the planning fees on a 12-unit apartment could be between $10,000 and $15,000. This kind of savings can be passed on to the purchaser and I am not talking about wholesale waiver, but for the income group we are trying to help that can't get a home.

So we have to look at various ways of helping them. At one point we looked at a Swiss programme which was being done in San Pedro Sula of cement sheeting. These homes were good homes for lower income people. We were talking between $35,000 and $60,000. That's the bracket we need to be looking at. We looked at different types of building material. Today big apartment buildings are made not just from cement blocks but from various kinds of materials made to withstand the elements, 250-mph winds.

I should say that the way we have been used to building cement or block houses is not the biggest cost. If it were, I am sure that the owners of those companies would work with government. But blocks are not cost prohibitive in the building of these homes. That's not where the cost is. The cost is in the labour and government fees, and in other building materials. We are going to have to look at these various means of addressing the housing issue. It cannot be done by any one way. Businesses, the banks, government, developers working together will provide the opportunity for people to get access to affordable quality housing.

There are those who are able to help themselves somewhat, but then there are those who cannot reach the bank limits. Something has to be devised to assist them and this is where government needs to get involved again.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I seek the guidance of the House. In view of the fact that the proposer has moved the amendment at the first would we want to take the question, or do you want to debate the amendment before taking the question? Or debate the substantive motion as amended? It would save one debate.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I think it would save a lot more time if we took the amendment and the motion together and then just put both at the end.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: The original motion has to do with a policy that is wider, or it hopes to address a solution to the housing problem that is wider than what the amendment is asking for. I would have hoped to have been able to debate the whole housing situation, the challenges which the country and the government face and possible alternatives or solutions that we might engage in in order to find a reasonable resolution to this problem that has been with us for so long. The amendment puts it in too confined a resolution.

The Speaker: I hear exactly what you are saying, but these are just added resolve sections, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Government assistance with waiver of Stamp Duty on first time home owners be increased from $125,000 to $135,000 or $150,000; and BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the waiver of Stamp Duty on first time owner of house lots be increased from $25,000 to $35,000." So we are not altering the substantive motion, the first part.

Anyway, whatever. I shall now put the question on the amendment. The question is that Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 be amended as in the notice provided to members. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: AMENDMENT PASSED.

The Speaker: The substantive motion as amended is now open to debate. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I rise to offer my support to Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 entitled Housing initiative for affordable housing, as amended.

The issue of affordable housing in the Cayman Islands is a real serious issue, one that the people of this country who are affected are looking for government to for some solutions. What is happening in our country because of the demand for labour, the cost of construction continues to increase. I won't even say on an annual basis, I would daresay on a monthly or weekly basis we have not only the labour being increased, but building materials and other things associated with that project.

When we hear quotes of $120 to $160 per square foot, and sometimes higher as far as construction costs, it is mind boggling. When I look at what it cost some of us here when we built 25 years ago as compared to what people are asked to pay for the same housing today, it is a grave concern. The average Caymanian pays $150,000 to get a home. That is extremely expensive. It prohibits a lot of people from ever realising that particular dream of owning their home.

The other problem we have is that the cost of living is going up but wages and salaries are not keeping pace. Every day there is a new demand on that salary being earned. To give you an idea, just recently government introduced a national health insurance programme and a national pension plan. All good initiatives, but it all comes back to increasing the demand on the limited income that some of our people are earning. When you talk about some people earning $250 or $300 per week, and then out of that you have to take out $75 or $100 just to pay for pension and health insurance, it doesn't leave a lot left for things like housing.

The other difficulty we have here in this country is that many households are run by single parents. In most cases it's the female parent. In a lot of cases these are women who are required to work in our hotels or condominiums and then in the evenings having to work a part time job just to make ends meet. I see them, and I am quite sure other representatives see them on a daily basis. These single parents are very responsible, they want the very best for their families but because of the cost of housing and the cost of living in this country they are not able to realise a dream of owning their own little home regardless of how small that little place may be.

I want to publicly thank the First Elected Member for West Bay because when he was the minister of housing I thought government introduced a very creative and workable housing assistance programme through the government guarantee programme. It has helped a tremendous amount of young Caymanians who have the ambition to own their homes by saying to the banks 'Well, if you are satisfied with the applicants then we are prepared to cover the required amount they have to come up with on a personal basis.' Regardless of what income a person has the cost of living makes it impossible in a lot of cases to put one's hands on $15,000 or $20,000 cash. It is extremely difficult. The government guaranteed housing scheme has helped and continues to help.

The other day government moved ahead and said it would increase the guarantee from $120,000 to $150,000. Another excellent initiative in regard to assisting our Caymanians in the issue of housing. The other thing that has been of tremendous assistance is the waiver of stamp duty for first time homeowners on property and housing up to a certain value. This amendment to this motion is asking government to even consider raising the value as far as the land is concerned in regard to waiver of stamp duty. That is a very good initiative because many ambitious potential homeowners have come to me saying they understood that the limit is $30,000 for property, but they were able to find a piece of property for $35,000 or $40,000, and asked if they qualified for the exemption. Unfortunately, that is not the case.

If we move that up to $35,000 or $40,000 as far as the property is concerned with respect to waiver of stamp duty it will help. On $35,000 it would attract a 7.5% stamp duty. We are talking about $5,000 or maybe $8,000 that one has to find out of one's own pocket. If that is waived it means that less money you have to find in order to realise your dream of owning a home.

The challenge of finding an affordable housing scheme for those persons who do not qualify under the present government guaranteed housing programme is a real challenge. What we have to recognise in this country is that there are some people who just can't afford, or don't earn $25,000 to $40,000 a year that would qualify them under the present scheme. It doesn't mean they are bad people or not responsible individuals. Because they do not earn the income, they just do not qualify for that assistance.

Government can take a number of approaches in regard to assistance. One alternative would be to go out and invest some money in the people by purchasing large parcels of property, government owned; they could have their own contractors build a number of houses that are affordable and at the same time say to the individual that government is prepared to finance those homes over a period of time. The only problem with that is that here in the Cayman Islands we are very independent, we don't want to be restricted to a certain area in houses that all look alike and maybe attract the same level of people. If it is done well and people can afford it, I personally see no reason why government cannot consider taking that approach on a limited basis. As I said, it is a real challenge for us to come up with a scheme that will assist those persons who at present do not qualify for consideration under the present programme.

I remember back in the 1960s when things were pretty slow in this country. Contractors were basically sitting on their hands. Some attempt was made to bring in prefab housing. It caused quite an uproar in this country. The contractors were all up in arms against it. As a result a policy has been put in place basically prohibiting that kind of construction here in the Cayman Islands.

When a contractor is telling you that he can build your home for you but it will cost you $140 (or whatever the going rate is) per square foot, we have the responsibility to look at some alternative options in regard to housing. It doesn't mean that if we allow prefab housing in this country that people are going to go out and buy something that will only cost $5,000 and not be very attractive. Our people, regardless of what level they are at, have a lot of pride. They really do! You will find that if they are allowed to purchase a little home that costs them $25,000 they would bring it in and put it together. It would put them in a position to own a little home and they would have the pride to take care of that little place and keep it attractive.

The other alternative government needs to look at is in regard to mobile homes. I was talking to someone the other day who said he purchased a three-bedroom mobile home for $12,000. I don't know if you have ever been in one of those units, but they are very attractive indeed. They don't take a whole lot of space. It's something that people could afford and it would help us address a very important need in this country—affordable housing.

I have been told that I should take into consideration a hurricane. Let me just say this: If we have a hurricane like Mitch that just passed through here recently, even those homes you paid $120 or $160 per square foot to build will have a problem. I personally don't believe that is a good enough reason to deprive some people who cannot afford consideration under the present system the opportunity to own a little home. The other thing to keep in mind that this type of housing does not have to be concentrated in any particular area, as long as they have access to a septic system and water system, and that would be very easy to do, then I believe that government has to have a very open mind in regard to this issue. It has to explore and discuss all possibilities and options and at the end of the day come up with the most attractive and affordable options.

I don't believe that we can continue to insist that it only be a certain material that we build out of. I was pleased to hear what the First Elected Member for West Bay had to say about the type of options they were looking at as far as building materials and that type of thing. We need to address this area and we need to do it urgently.

For example, I have an office in West Bay that I attend at least twice per week. A young lady came to me recently. She has three or four kids, was married to a Caymanian, has a decent job at one of the hotels. But she was in a panic. First of all, she couldn't afford $1,000 to $1,200 per month for rent. The sad situation in this country is that if you have children and you want to rent, there is discrimination against people with children. So even if you could afford it, but you have two or three children . . . watch the ads for rentals—"No children, No pets, No boyfriends, No girlfriends." There is discrimination.

As a result of the incident I mentioned this young lady slept in her car with her three children. It is all good for us to say that we are going to maintain a certain standard as far as housing is concerned because of hurricanes. I am 49 years old, and in my lifetime I have only experienced one hurricane here in the Cayman Islands. It may be another 90 years before another one comes. Is that reason enough for us to deprive some people of affordable housing?

The minister for housing is a good friend of mine. I know that he is thinking along the same lines as I am. I hope that when this thing is cast that he is able to go to Executive Council to convince his colleagues to look at all the alternatives. The other thing I would suggest is that you put together some committee, a good cross section. It is amazing what you can come up with and accomplish if you have a good group of people who are thinking about a particular issue.

I have been advised that there was a committee of that nature in place. I am trusting that maybe the same committee, if it has been shelved, can be reactivated for this purpose.

As I said, this is a very serious issue, one that almost on a daily basis we are confronted with. It is one that has to be addressed. I believe that the people of this country should have an option. If they insist on having a block constructed home, then they must pay for that. If they can have a T-111 that they can paint and maintain, then they should have that option. Alternatively, if somebody wants to purchase and bring in a mobile home that's attractive and affordable then I think they should have that option.

I believe that we need to look at all options in regard to this problem because the difficulty that we have is that issue is not going away. It's getting worse. Mr. Speaker, we have good families with children going away to university. They come back and find a job, but because of the cost of housing in this country, we find that a lot of those students return to living at home with mom and dad for four or five years to give them a break as far as accumulating some income so that one day they will be able to own a little home of their own.

It's an issue that has to be addressed. It is very near and dear to my own heart and I suggest, and would appreciate, government looking at all options in regard to this problem. I want to congratulate the First Elected Member for West Bay for moving this very important motion. I was pleased to second it and I look forward to hearing government's concurrence that it is prepared to look at all possibilities in regard to this issue. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you.

I am pleased to know that I can stand here on behalf of government to say that we accept the motion that is presently before us, and to state that although much action has not taken place as yet does not mean that the government since the First Elected Member for West Bay was responsible has not also tried, as well as he did, to continue to promote housing for those in need in the Cayman Islands.

I realise that there is a need and so does the government of the day. We realise that although during his tenure he did do some work, more work needs to be done to establish something whereby we can actually cater to those who are really and truly in need similar to what was pointed out by the last speaker.

For example, he mentioned the young lady who slept in her car with her children. I think here is a good example of where we have mixed our priorities up. There are persons who have actually catered to a car and not to the place they should sleep. However, that does not in any way deter the government from what it is doing. I would say until this point in time, as a matter of fact until yesterday evening, it is my understanding that a meeting was held and that government continues to put proposals now directly to Executive Council whereby we can try to deal with this matter.

As I said, I know the minister who was responsible for this before did put in a lot of work on it. I think the country is grateful for what was done. But I think that he too realises that it was not an easy task. It was a continual battle and since he has been in office, this government has tried its best to work along with banks. We have actually tried to increase certain guarantees. We have tried to work along with first homeowners and this is exactly the way we intend to do it.

However, as I said, we have in place a group that has been working along with us and while we have tried our best to push this as far as possible, we must take every means possible to make sure that when something is presented to this House that it is something that will be accepted by all of us. The problem in Cayman, as I see it, is that for a long time we have catered to those who could walk into a commercial bank. And the fact remains that like the last speaker said there are those who cannot go to a bank and qualify to construct a home. It has always been my contention that this is what we need to address. However, we need to do it across the board. We did make a start and the government is now committed to try as soon as possible to make sure that those in dire straight are catered to.

I feel it is safe to say that whatever it takes we intend to do to make sure that our people are housed properly. The one thing we have to take into consideration is the fact that we must take a stand that will cater to our people, but it should be something that we can feel is safe and sound even through hurricanes. I would never agree with certain suggestions of actually bringing in houses that could be bolted down and moved from place to place. I think that if we are going to do something for someone, especially an individual who may have a small piece of property, or if they don't and government sees fit to construct a little home, I would like to know that when I am asleep they are as safe as I am.

I trust that the Opposition and my good friend the First Elected Member for West Bay will bear with us and understand that we are not turning this away. It is a problem for us all. I feel that in each district we have a certain amount of it and it is something that we must work together to address. The Government is committed to it and I ask for the support of the Opposition to support us when something is brought here, which will be a report through Executive Council and that we continue to assist those in dire straight in these islands in regard to housing. Thank you.

The Speaker: Proceedings will be suspended until 2.15 PM.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.39 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.27 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99, as amended. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: The motion before the House tries to stimulate debate in regard to the needs of a certain income group in the Cayman Islands for assistance in housing. I remember back in 1980 when I first ran for a seat in the Legislative Assembly, I prepared a manifesto that dealt with low-income housing. In other words, we were talking about trying to assist persons we did not feel would be able, even with all the hours and years that they worked, to afford to buy into the private housing market.

This concern back in 1980 was really the result of the fact that we have all known for many years that housing is a very important tool of integration. We can hold our society together as a cohesive collective element if we pull along those persons that are falling behind because of the wage scale and their profession does not allow them to purchase some of the more essential goods and services in this society.

They are providing an essential function for the society so they are playing as important a roll as someone who is a politician, or a Financial Secretary. They are playing an important roll. They are an important spoke in the whole wheel. But they are not getting enough from it to provide themselves with the basic necessities of life.

So even as far back as 1980, the Unity Team Government was making those types of considerations. It is very peculiar that today, nineteen years afterwards, we are still making the same considerations. We are still at the same point in the debate. The debate does not seem to have matured in our ability to recognise what the real problems are and how they are caused, or how they can be solved without creating other problems.

I believe that there are persons in the society that will not be able to own their homes if they are not assisted, if government does not intervene in the housing market. If these people are not able to have a stake in the society, these persons could become a detriment to the social order of society. Therefore the interest of the whole is in protecting these particular parts as well. It is not just altruism that we are talking about, but egoism in the sense that we are protecting others so that we can protect ourselves.

This is the basic logic behind that particular philosophy that has been advocated in this country in different ways over a period of time, but like the labour problems, nobody seems to be able to pin it down and make a firm decision as to why people should be assisted in owning their own homes, that is people earning a low income below $1,500 per month.

If we look at the statistics we will find that the majority of people in the country are earning below $1,500 per month. Of the people working in this country, 53% are earning $1,500 per month or below. So if we are going to find a scheme to assist the majority we have to find a scheme that tailors itself towards low income families, one parent families/two parent families. The real cost of borrowing money is in the interest. If you borrow money for 20 years you will find that the interest is really that element which causes the monthly payment to be so high. It tells us that if we are dedicated towards integrating the lower income persons in this society into the private housing market, into the ownership market, that we can only do this if we can effectively control the cost of monthly payments and we can only do this if we can control the interest.

The cost while important is not so important. The main problem is with the interest. The interest runs at such a fast rate that most people can't keep up with it. So if you are paying something like $1,400 a month you will find that some $1,000 to $1,200 per month is interest. We know that we are fighting a battle against high interest. So government intervention is only going to become meaningful if government intervenes to affect interest. Government can't go tell the banks what to lend money at, but the government is in an advantageous position in that the government can borrow money cheaper than I can as a private individual. Local banks will lend government money cheaper than it will the low income person. So why doesn't government borrow on behalf of the lower income person?

Why doesn't the government go to Europe and not just talk about the OECD but talk about all the benefits we can have by getting cheap money in Europe? We can get cheap money in Europe to effect the housing markets here. This has been said over and over again by governors who come here. We know that we have an opportunity to borrow money in Europe as a government to form a housing development corporation, or whatever it is we want to form. It would be like the Port Authority. We'll call it the Housing Authority. That authority would borrow the money from the government. The government would guarantee and then the Authority would begin to lend the money to the lower income persons—not to everybody who says they will vote for us if they can get a house, but the lower income person and persons who are so adversely affected by competition in the housing market in Cayman today.

The poorer Caymanians have to compete against all the persons that are coming in here on work permits who are not encouraged to buy property simply because there is no security in tenure. So the competition in the housing market is extreme and cruel and brutal. Therefore we need to alleviate the pressures that are occurring in that particular area by allowing Caymanians the possibility to get their own homes.

They don't have to be fancy homes. We can start with small structures. If we go into the Windsor Park area, where I live, we still see those economy homes that were being built at that particular time. Once you have the basic structure, a little living room, a kitchen, a bedroom or two, as the family progresses in terms of earning its income it invests the money in making the house larger. It doesn't have to invest it in the pockets of the landlord, it can invest in its own house. That's a positive thing because we are creating people that have something invested in the country, some stake in preserving social order and political stability.

We need not to be always talking about the housing problems, we need to see that the solutions to the housing problems are there for us. Government needs to have the motivation to do this. I remember in the 1996 election everybody talked about housing. Everybody is going to talk about it in the year 2000 too because it is always what everybody talks about. Then we talk about wages and when they get in we don't do anything about housing or wages, really.

We need to get a firm commitment to begin this particular process by creating a housing authority that would be responsible to be independent from government, that would take the money that government would borrow and lend to the housing authority and that they would then make these lower interest loans to lower income families. The key therefore is low interest loans to low income families. The key is not in always trying to find some kind of political acceptance by saying let us deal with those persons who can afford to pay $1,500 per month mortgage. Everybody has it hard, but we are concerned in particular about those persons who are not having it hard because they are just starting a life but they have had it hard all of their lives. The lower income person who has been paying rent for ten or fifteen years and can't find the way from paying rent to owning a home are the people the government has to pay attention to, not the person who has just been out there two or three years paying rent. Although I sympathise with them because of the cost of renting in this society caused by the severe competition for housing because of the competition that results from the importation of this abundance of labour in the Cayman Islands.

We have to begin to deal with those persons who are making below $1,500 per month because realistically they form 53% of the wage earners in our society. My point is that to be really looking for a solution means to be looking to borrow money at a cheaper interest rate. I believe the only breakthrough we will make is when we begin to look to Europe where the money is, where we as a dependent territory can by way of the British government have access to this money and that we do that and stop trying to think that the banks here will be able to solve the problem.

It just goes to show that we had a housing development corporation and the portfolio was sold to Cayman National Bank. The start made in 1980 (or 1984) came to a halt between 1992 and 1996 because that portfolio was dismantled and sold to Cayman National Bank where those people are now under a different kind of pressure because Cayman National does not have the same interest that a housing authority would have. The interest of the housing authority is not just a profit interest, it's a stability interest. It is interested in stabilising the country by being able to subsidise, to a certain extent, persons entering the ownership pool in our society.

We can't take one step forward and go two steps backwards all the time with these issues. We can't begin anew every day. We have to learn how to work with things that have been there in order to improve them. The government that came to power in 1992 had the opportunity to have been able to say to us more concretely by now how this particular predicament would be resolved. I say that I can agree with government taking away the stamp duties on land for $35,000, but that is not going to help in the majority the people who were deprived when the Housing Development Corporation was sold to Cayman National Bank. What is going to help them is for the government to realise that that real economic group exists and will continue to exist in our society and that we must cater to them by finding money that is cheaper to borrow. That now is what I believe the government should be doing.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you.

I rise to offer some comments on the motion before the House. I have to begin by expressing regret that almost since I came to this House in 1988 we have been searching for solutions to this problem and we have not quite arrived at the proper solution.

There has been no shortage of spin-doctors prescribing what they think should be done. I find it regrettable that the present government which had such a glorious opportunity to once and for all come up with some satisfactory solution to this area that has gone begging for so long in our society has procrastinated and let all of the opportunities pass them by. I believe that to address this matter of housing for the low income group in our society is one that entails the efforts of all of us as the people's representatives. As I listened to ideas in the past, and even in the current debate, I realise there is much credence to what members have had to say. The problem with our system is that the government has a monopoly and uses that monopoly to enforce the solution that is politically expedient to that particular government. If the government thinks it is politically expedient not to do anything but talk until election time comes and promise if re-elected they will address the matter because it suites them, that is what they will do. That is indeed what has been done.

I also find it lamentable that in a country boasting 500 banks that there is such a lack of social conscience that among 500 lending institutions every one is so (how shall I put this) Shylockian that all they are interested in is a pound of flesh from that closest part of the heart, and not interested to lay some money aside to help those who are less fortunate. They are so . . . well, I better not say that.

They are so bent on making a profit, getting the greatest return on the money, that they are devoid of any social conscience, not even to realise that if there is a significant element in the country who are discontented because they believe the economic development of the country has left them far behind, so much so that they cannot afford to acquire one of the necessities of life, namely a comfortable shelter, they cannot see that this element will say they have no vested interest in the society. Why should they tolerate what is going on if they are being left out? If we don't come to that conclusion soon, we are going to have to deal with a social phenomena of no small proportion. Time is of the essence, and we need to find a way to address this lack of housing for what we call the lower income element.

The last honourable member who spoke said that 53% of the working populace earns below $1,500 per month. That means that those persons cannot qualify for mortgages at the present lending rate. I am saying that if these lending institutions had a social conscience they could get together and say they would individually lay aside $.5 million or $1 million to go into a special pool to meet the needs of this 53% at interest rates they can afford. Failing that, it is incumbent upon government to search abroad. There are institutions. There are countries that if approached would put up this money if the predicament were known.

We have been wasting time. We have been treading water. We are going to wait until the problem has reached overwhelming proportions and then we are going to throw our hands up and say 'I know that element is going to tear down society. I told you you couldn't deal with them.'

Mr. Speaker, it is a situation that is begging to be addressed. We (myself included) have got to stop playing spin-doctor and find a solution. We have got to exercise the political will to deal with this problem and stop playing the game of political expediency and getting up every year before the election saying 'If you elect me, I am going to get a low cost housing scheme for you. Elect me! and then once elected forget about it until one year before the election and start all over again. I pledge that part of my responsibility is going out, educating the people not to fall for that trick any longer.

I see the opportunity is going to ably present itself for me to come back to this. Twenty years ago I wrote a paper. This is one of the things I talked about, the fact that the Cayman Islands was developing in such a way that it was leaving a certain element out and that there was going to be a class of people in this country who were going to be what I called 'land-less and house-less.' Do you know what they said? They said I was a Communist—including some ministers in here!

Yesterday I heard that they are now touting some of the things I advocated twenty years ago. It shows the value of a broad, liberal education. I was able to see these situations twenty years before they occurred. I wonder what category those persons who said I was only a follower are now in when they are following me—and they are twenty years behind! They are following because if they don't follow they will become extinct like the dinosaurs.

This is a serious matter and I hope that at the conclusion of this debate government can realise its awesome and tremendous responsibility. I hope the government can realise that it has a moral obligation to do something about this and stop playing political expediency.

I recall one famous debate brought by three members. At that time I, being one of those members, thought it a little foolhardy. I don't want to rehash that debate, but we put up very cogent and tangible arguments, impassioned at that time. What did the government do? It flogged us! It said it had the situation under control. Fortunately (unfortunately from my point of view), the portfolio has since been sold to one of the leading banks. I called that then, a conflict of interests and a move inimical to the interests of those persons who so badly are in need of adequate housing. I still stand by that.

I have to say in all credence that some efforts were made to address this housing need. But the fact is, there were too many forces against those people making the efforts. Now we have a compounded problem because through speculation the cost of land is unreasonably high and eliminates persons in a certain economic category from even getting . . . and if they have access to that land, they have to spend umpteen dollars trying to fill and level it because all they can buy at the price they can afford is swamp. So they have to de-swamp it and fill it and it makes it prohibitively expensive.

I am saying that as a parliament and a country we need to be perceptive when approaching these problems. We cannot only look at developments on this accord—tourism, international finance—without looking at the consequences of such development, particularly the consequences as they relate to those persons in the lower socio-economic group. At this particular stage we have another problem because Planning Department has regulations which are also inimical to the interests of housing developments for lower income people. I get complaints every day, as do other members of the Legislative Assembly.

The First Elected Member for George Town and I have an almost constant stream of people. And I have even had to rely on him for assistance because of his experience and familiarity with the Planning Regulations from his tenure on the Planning Board some years ago. It is frustrating for the proverbial little man. One of the things they complain about is that the regulations make it particularly burdensome as far as money is concerned for them to lead up to the stage where they get the plan passed. They have to put out untold sums of money and there are all kinds of frustrations.

The problem is not only the simple one of finding money to develop a housing scheme, even the individuals who are so entrepreneurial or so bent on self help that they exercise a little initiative are frustrated. We brought some matters to the attention of the minister responsible for planning and development. And he said he was going to make some changes. If the changes have been made, they certainly are not put into practice because I get the same complaints every day from people who want to put up a little apartment on a plot of land. They get the same problems. So I hope the government can look further into this because it is all tied together.

We agree that we don't want vast areas of row houses, or boxes that are all painted alike and have the same shapes. We want to have a system where owners can exercise a little individuality. But we cannot make even the most rudimentary progress because it seems there are too many axes to grind and too many interests other than the interests of the people who so badly need this housing.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town is correct: If government was really conscientious it could have set up a housing authority and borrow the money and lend it to the authority as is now done with some other authorities. But one of the government's problems is that it believes it knows everything, that it has all of the answers. They are too willing to put down the ideas of others because it doesn't come from them. Well, sometimes the animal in me wants to come out. It's there quandary, let them deal with it! I will go out in the streets and help the people flog them. Believe you me, I might just do that!

All of these years have been wasted. And all I have been hearing from certain corners are put-downs—"I am more sensible than you. If you had 10% of the sense I have you wouldn't be in the trouble you are in." Well, do you know what? All of us are in trouble now because we have a country where the poor cannot get housing. Then when some other people come up with the ideas, they are called "defunct." I read where the Leader of Government Business, instead of doing the work of the country, told me that I was unsuccessful because I am destined to be a leader. Well, if he is so successful, let him find a solution to the housing needs for the poor of this country.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you.

It is hard in here to really understand when government supports a motion why there should be such an adverse attack on government. It is not as if we are opposing the motion. Government is supporting the motion. It just supported the amendment that came in. It is really unfortunate when people take the approach that when you support them they still, to use the words of the last member, "flog" you. When you don't support the motion they flog you. I guess if we abstained, and I am not one for abstaining, it would probably be the same thing. In my view that is really not a constructive or optimistic approach to things.

Government realises, and I was part of the government as was the First Elected Member for West Bay that brought in this scheme in relation to housing and the loans that government guaranteed. That has covered very well a certain bracket of income person in the islands. What it has not addressed, and government admits this, is people who really are in a bracket where they cannot afford a loan for a house. The Social Services does a fair amount of assisting and repairing, or sometimes also with trying to get houses for people. But I agree that this is not sufficient because there are people there who are in need and there is no use in us talking about the question of loans for some people.

Let me say that the most stable person in a country, and a country with the greatest stability and continuity is a country made up of homeowners. People who have a home are not prepared to rock the boat. So the higher the percentage of homeowners the better off a country is. We accept that.

The nearest we ever got to this was back in 1980 to 1984 when Social Services was under my portfolio then. What I had done at that stage was form a committee. It analysed two areas, one was Rock Hole and the other was the Watler's Road area. It analysed the income of the people, who could afford and who could not afford. Based on that we then produced a scheme (when I say we, it was Planning, the private sector, Public Works). I saw the need and we set up a small subdivision on property where the National Trust Building now stands. I don't remember the size of it, but it was somewhere in the area of 11 lots.

On that the government then started to build houses. The housing scheme for the low income Caymanians was on a basis that when a house was built the family that needed it most in the area would be put in the house. If they could not pay rental on it, then so be it. If they were capable of paying something back, either on a mortgage or whatever, the land could be transferred. I can't remember the details of that, but what happened is that one house was built and the scheme was over a period of a couple of years and it got to a stage where the first house was built and what I do remember is that it was built of concrete. The first family that moved into that was Mr. Vern Miller and his family.

In 1984 the government coming in after disbanded that as it disbanded another area that was unfortunate, that was the reception classes in the schools. But this one specifically was one that would have provided, as that first pilot project for the Watler's Road area, those people with proper homes. What was done in return was sometimes people were living there, and sometimes they owned the land and sometimes they didn't; sometimes it was a very small fraction of an acre. They would transfer that to government and the plan was that when a sizeable enough area that could be used to put another house on was there in accordance with the present planning regulations then also houses would be built there. But the people would have a home.

I believe that this is the route, and I support the members who have spoken on this. I believe that this government and this Legislative Assembly because it is going to take money should look at a scheme similar to that with advice coming from planning, public works, wherever, and try to begin to work on areas and on persons in the lower income group. If it becomes necessary then what Finance Committee approves should be given for the assistance of the persons in need.

It was unfortunate, and I took a lot of objection from other people within the area, but the area was approved, it was divided up the first house was built and obviously everything was in place for another eleven houses to go there. A similar thing had been looked at for a second project in the Rock Hole area. So I have a lot of sympathy with what the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said, that there are people who the scheme of the government guarantee loans are not going to help. Also the question of getting low interest rates for those who are in a bracket who cannot pay the interest even though the banks that operate the schemes now give a preferred rate of interest. We have discussed as recently as when we were in Belgium ways of getting cheaper money, less interest for government, and there is money available in the European Union but we are still a colony, a dependent territory and there are some institutions we cannot access just as we cannot access the United Nations and bodies that provide certain very low interest loans.

I support increasing, as the minister in charge of this has said, the government guaranteed loan scheme and that has worked well. I don't know how many millions, but I think quite a few (I will ask the Financial Secretary how much) but I would say the loans total in the area of 15 million or more people have benefited. That works well in the bracket it is in. However, other than the scheme that when I was member back in the early 80s set up, the First Elected Member for West Bay, the mover of this motion, had housing for four or five years and this scheme, or a similar scheme, was not brought in during that time. So for the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, what he is talking about, government should have done this or that in the past, that member needs to remember that his colleague the First Elected Member for West Bay is the government that he is talking about. The responsibility only shifted to the minister for Communications and Agriculture a couple of years ago, 1997, when the First Elected Member for West Bay ceased to be the minister in charge of Community Affairs.

For that five years that the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town has criticised government, and I am just making it clear sir, I don't want to get into a lot of controversy, but basically it is the mover of this motion who had responsibility for those five years for it. My question is a very simple one, Why in five years did the minister not do—something about this rather than moving a motion a year or two after he ceased to have responsibility for it? It's not quite as simple to do, apparently, as it appears because the present minister has only had it less than a couple of years.

But, I believe the motion is good. We support the motion and I think a way has to be found to get back to a scheme in which the government is prepared to assist people in the low income group, not through loans, but through the provision of accommodation whether it's in apartments or houses or whatever because it is very important to have as many homeowners in a country as possible. The stability and continuity depends upon having homeowners in the country.

I am prepared to support, speaking personally, and I believe the minister will get this going. No one in the past has been able to do other than the scheme that I did in the Watler's Road area, and that it will be for the benefit of the country. I give my full support for whatever I can do at planning because planning will need to be involved. I believe that public works would be prepared to assist also with this.

The range of people in need go from those who may be getting a home for $135,000 or $150,000 the concession on stamp duty and all that obviously we support because we put that in place earlier. The same as I criticised the First Elected Member for West Bay for not getting the low income group going, he was the person who pushed to bring in the loan scheme, and I give him credit for that. So that has worked well at that level. I think in between that needs to be a second level that was put forward by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town perhaps where interest free loans, or very low interest loans could be done for another income bracket. I think under that is an income bracket where those people will probably never get a home unless government assists directly and government should assist directly with those people.

So I will support the motion and I will also support the minister for agriculture in his move to try to bridge the gap for the low income group of people for housing which in the past as I said no other minister has been able to do on a scale beyond the project that I began many years ago. Government has land in different areas. It's important that there not be too large a concentration in one area. And in fact the level of some housing in this country generally, the rental areas, are really in a very poor shape. Maybe assistance could be given to try to upgrade also some of the housing schemes where non-Caymanian workers live.

So it has my full support and I will actively assist and ask the Planning Department to assist in any way possible. The motion is good and I support it.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the afternoon break. We will suspend for 15 minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.19 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.50 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 as amended. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

As hard as I try sometimes I fail. I just listened to the Minister of Education in his contribution to the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 in his half-hearted attempt to justify government's support of the motion. It is truly a pity that he is not in the Chamber because what I want to say right now I was hoping to eye him while I was saying it. But an opinion is an opinion, is an opinion. And my opinion is that the Minister for Education is the poorest excuse for a representative the people of this country could have. That's my opinion. But because it is more important for people like myself to focus on the needs of those same people, I am not going to spend any more time talking about my opinion of that minister.

Let us get down to the motion and its amendment. As others have said before, I think it is not only fair comment but a statement of fact that the situation that prevails in our country today dictates that many of our citizens who are doing the best they can under the circumstances in which they find themselves will never be able to own their homes without some pointed effort coming from some direction which will give them the latitude to qualify under different circumstances that prevail now within the institutions here who lend money for those reasons.

Let me go back so that we can have a clear understanding of what has happened in our country. Many years ago when our population was not what it is today, even when the opportunities were much fewer in those days, and even when education and earning power were not parallel to what they are today, when most of the working people in this country went to sea, the opportunities were different. I am sure that those of us who are second generation to those people will remember that in the vast majority of cases the first thing that you did once you went out to work was buy a piece of land if there was no distribution through family. It probably took you two trips to pay for that, depending upon where it was. After that you started sending your allotment home, your wife or mother (depending upon whether you were single or married) started building a home. Many times it took up to five years for that exercise to be completed.

After we understand that that is how life used to be, let us now come to the situation that obtains today. It is no longer like that. Everything moves a lot faster. Costs are totally prohibitive and unless your earning power is up to a certain level all the costs involved in owning a home become impossible to conquer. Where we have failed, is that too many of our people have not been properly tooled to have the earning power to cope with the additional costs in order to own their homes. I believe it is a fact to say that the system has failed the people.

In many instances it has not prepared them for the challenges that face them today and the responsibilities they will have to be looking at if they are able to have their own homes and all of the other stuff that the "Jones's" have.

We have a problem that involves education. Nevertheless, perhaps in debating this motion is might not warrant delving too deeply into that even though we need to recognise the root of the problem. We have to be dealing with matters as expeditiously as possible in order to bring about certain solutions.

Let us go back into more recent history. This motion refers to a policy during the 1992-1996 government which addressed certain types of housing needs. I remember when it was initially brought to this House to organise these government guarantees to assist. The terminology used at the time was "low-income" housing scheme. I fought tooth and nail arguing that it was not—because it was not! But again, we are not going to argue that. Since then it has been accepted that it was not, but I don't argue the case that it does not assist at certain levels of income, because it certainly does.

While I might be debating the motion and its amendment cart before the horse, I want to get the easy part out of the way first. So, regarding the amendment that has been brought to the original motion, and the government has said it will support it, I believe that it is justifiable for these amendments to take place simply because time has evolved since its initial stage and moving the stamp duty waiver from $125,000 to $150,000 should take place because costs have escalated to that level. In other words, $150,000 today is probably worth no more than what $125,000 was worth when it was initially done. So I think that's quite in order, and also the waiver of the stamp duty for first time owners of house lots. I don't think any long debate needs to take place on that.

My greatest fear with the motion—and I like for things to go on record. I learned that from some of my colleagues here because I did not pay much attention to that at one time. I want it to go on record on this 10th day of June 1999 that while government has accepted this motion I do not believe that on the 10th day of June 2000 we are going to see any tangible results from government's acceptance of this motion. If God spares my life, I am going to remember to ask the question on the 10th day of June 2000. But we will see.

I would like to be surprised. It won't be pleasant—it will be shocking! But I would love to be shockingly surprised.

When the Minister of Education talks about getting flogged if they say yes or no, and he wonders whether the best thing to do would be to abstain, he must understand that the reason for all of this is the track record that people like him have displayed. If he takes that personally, well, that's entirely up to him. I can care less. But he spent half an hour laying his pitch in his debate, saying who did what wrong, who didn't do what wrong, and talking about the little business he started down the road which was purely political on the eve of an election. Tell him to come!

Mr. Speaker, I cannot have any respect for the debate that people like him bring on a matter of such importance such as this. Instead of trying to look for concrete answers in support of the motion, he spends his time talking about who didn't do what and all of that. But I am not going to get into all of that because then I will be doing the same thing he does, and I am not going to do that.

Regardless of how many battles ensue on motions of this nature about who was there, who is there, who wasn't there, my position is that I have never been there; I know what my responsibility is and I am going to carry it out while I am standing up this evening. And whatever their responsibility is, they must do that. It's as simple as that.

This motion was not brought with any intention of trying to look at our society with a view of creating a band of people who believe that because they exist then can get what they need for nothing. I don't want anyone to even think that because that is not what is going to shape our society in the right direction for the future. There is nothing like that in mind. The arguments that have been put forth simply want us to accept that there is a certain percentage of our population with an earning power that is not at the level that will allow them to get their own homes under the situation and circumstances that presently prevail. We need to do something about it. That's what it is all about.

But we need to be looking at the long term, not simply to find a way to assist this group of people in our society. We need to find a way—most important—that that number does not continue to increase but decreases so that people will find their own niche in our society and be able to have their own self-worth, self-esteem and everything else because they have the ability to take care of themselves. So when the government is thinking of supporting the motion, the government needs to think much further than that.

I noticed something that the government needs to learn. Even when it involves just one member there are times when people like me have to refer to all of them as the government and their inherent responsibility is that when they know that one of their members is erring then it is their duty to correct that error within themselves so that they don't get classed with it. I can't help them with that. They live with each other, not with me. So when I refer to the government, it might only be one person who might be involved. Sometimes I just have to say "the government" and I can't separate the rest from the immediate circumstance, which may only involve one, sometimes two, but not all. I just hope they understand that. If not, I can't do anything about that either.

On a very serious note, when I mentioned the number of people who find themselves in the category we are discussing this afternoon it is almost to frightening proportions. As each year goes by that category of people multiplies disproportionately to the other numbers in our society.

I want to make a point here: Mention was made that of the working people in this country 53% earn less than $1,500 per month. Much has been said about the per capita income in the Cayman Islands and it has actually been boasted in many areas. But if I were the government I would be shocked and worried to know that that percentage of my working force in my country is earning that amount compared to what the average income of the working person is.

There was a time when most of us would be afraid to talk about this because certain people in government would talk about "Communist" and "Socialist" the minute you did—

Mr. Roy Bodden: And "Defunct"!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: —to try to scare people from talking about what is real.

We have a problem in this country today. We have it! And trying to deal with it in the haphazard fashion with the half-hearted attempts that have been done thus far is only going to compound the problem and make it multiply itself. I don't have any time to talk about who didn't do what right. Today is today. Yesterday cannot come, but tomorrow will! I can learn from yesterday, sure; but if I spend all of my time just talking about who was wrong yesterday then I am so wrong that whatever was wrong yesterday can't be half as wrong as the wrong that I am.

I don't think I could say that again, but I think I made my point!

Others have heard me speak of the disparity of the wealth distribution in this country. Others have heard me talk about the widening gap where the vast majority of the wealth in the country is rested or vested (both of those words) with a very few. Those very few people who I am talking about need not be scared of what I am saying. What we all need to be cognisant of, and be totally aware of, is that if we leave the situation alone as it is that wealth will be worth nothing because wealth without a country is nothing. If our society becomes one where law and order does not prevail, where social harmony does not exist, all the wealth that all of us put together might accumulate will be worth nothing.

We hear people talk about in other countries you work hard and you build your house and something happens in your country and a man comes and runs you out of your own house because he says 'I want this house.' Making mention of those things may scare people. I know. Understand this, sir, no one told me that. I K-N-O-W—I know! I didn't have to hear it from anybody else, I know. That's why I can say that I also know that is not what we want for our country.

I know the people who live in our country, whether they be part of an indigenous population or an imported population. They don't want that in our country. I know that. But we need to understand from where we sit that whether we like it or not, whether we challenge the private sector or we do not, the buck stops right here. We have to understand how right here works. We on the backbench cannot create the policy, we can only try to spur it on and that is what we are trying to do now. If government doesn't mature itself to the point where it can accept spurring on the policy rather than trying to spend all of its time indoctrinating a population about the rights and the wrongs so the population can vote for who they want them to vote for, then that government is not only irresponsible, but that government should go because the whole thought process is wrong.

That, sir, is what has prevailed. That is when I got into hot water with you, sir, a while back talking about misleading this country for many years. And it still persists! But I am not going to say anything about misleading this evening, don't worry.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: The real truth is that this kind of thing is near and dear to me. I remember many years ago. Do you know what we used to do on the average Sunday? I kid you not, sir, I even believe the Honourable Third Official Member may have memories of this. On the average Sunday, whomever we knew fairly well who was building a house we would organise on that Sunday that we would pour the floor. Fifteen or twenty of us would get together and that floor would get poured. Of course, we had our little perks because we had some nice food prepared and nice fellowship and that kind of stuff. You would probably work for four hours and then we'd chat for another four hours and the day was gone and it was well spent. But we don't live like that any more, Mr. Speaker.

Unfortunately, I don't think we will ever see it again. And I have to kind of accept that. Every now and then we see it happening, but it's not often that we see it any more. So times have changed. So too has the terrain and we have to understand and accept the terrain that we are working in. Possible solutions have been put forward. And as I said before, I grant that in the amendment that is going to assist at a certain level.

But when we talk about special interest rates which can help people deal with the situation better, that's very valid. I don't stand here this evening saying that I have the plan, but I think we know enough about the problem and where we need to arrive to do something about it, not necessarily having to cost the government a fortune. All it needs, like most people need in life, is a little jump-start. But again I come back to the point. If a person, or a couple, does not have the tools to increase his earning power . . . I just want to use a typical example.

Let's say that we have a husband and wife, even if it's common law, with one child, and that they are able to find a two-bedroom home or apartment for $700 per month. It's still possible. If the people can afford to pay $700 per month rent, surely they should be able to pay the $700 towards a mortgage. Let us assume that they invest in a little two-bedroom home and are able to get a mortgage for $700 per month. Under the scheme that exists now, government can make a decision to fill the gap in the collateral or the down payment by guaranteeing that. But they can make the payments. Here's where the solution is not really there: If you are in your own home, regardless of how many things you do for yourself, in the long run it is going to cost you more than simply paying rent. I am not suggesting that the answer is to continue to pay rent. But I am saying that it is going to cost you more.

When you rent you don't pay for home insurance, you don't pay the other little things that have to be paid, you simply pay rent. The point I am making is that while we are looking to find the ways and means to help people to own their homes as a government, as the leaders of this country we must also be concentrating on finding the ways and means of increasing their earning power. We have to do that.

One might think that both of the points I am trying to make are divorced from each other, but I don't think so. I think they go hand in hand just like husband and wife.

It all comes down to the vision that we must have for the people of this country. We cannot act in a disjointed fashion to boast about taking care of this. We have to understand what it takes to make people live; we have to understand what makes them tick, we have to understand the whole business of family to really make a sensible difference in the situation that now prevails. When we look in our society and see . . . I am going to tell you what's happening to us.

What everybody loosely terms the middle class is disappearing and being replaced by an imported middle class. If that is not the perfect scenario for serious social problems, then I want somebody to tell me what is. I am going to explain it. I have nothing against the people I term an imported middle class. We are importing that set of people for the skills that they bring into the labour force. Because they have the good sense and the ambition to want to do things right, when they settle in our communities they are going to do the best they can to better themselves. They are going to be prudent, they are going to be frugal, they are going to know when to use the credit card and when not to, and they are not going to live on next month's salary. So they progress slowly, but surely.

You find them buying their own homes after four or five years here and moving on. Which is what our society should be doing. And there are not enough of them doing it because they are not told to do it!

[Some Members' applause]

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: That's where the problem is!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Hear, hear!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: So when we are talking about housing and houses, I am not trying to shift the argument from that but we need to understand that is not just housing and houses.

Mr. Roy Bodden: You have to add the educational dimension, the training dimension.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: When this all happens and you find a larger percentage of your indigenous population earning less than your imported population they are going to scream bloody murder as they are doing now.

Mr. Roy Bodden: True!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: And they are going to say, as they are saying now, that we are bringing in too many people to take away their jobs. But we are not even telling them that the reason why those people are being brought in is because they can't do the jobs!

[Some Members' applause]

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: And here we are spending day after day using fancy words to see who can talk better than the other one. What a crying shame!

Mr. Roy Bodden: Talking 'Oh, McKeeva didn't do it' as if that's important now.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: This is serious, Mr. Speaker. What I just said is happening in our society is a fact. It's not what is going to happen tomorrow, it's already happened! Who do we blame for that? We cannot blame the people we have brought in. We can only thank God that the vast majority of them are honest people, God fearing people, and law-abiding citizens. Otherwise we'd have another problem again.

So where do we start from here? By talking about one little house that we built? That's where we start from, Mr. Speaker?

Mr. Roy Bodden: Eleven years ago! Ha!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I know you understand what I am saying. I just pray to God that others do. Do you hear me talking about poor excuses? Do you understand why I think how I do?

It is time for us as representatives of the people of this country to understand that while we each try to outdo the other one, because I am one of the four representatives for George Town I must make sure that I do well enough in the eyes of the people to get re-elected . . . I want you to understand that I am not running from that because I understand how that is. But it must be tempered with the responsible actions that you make sure the decisions you take part in are for the best interest of those people first—not afterwards! And so many decisions are being made on how I end up because elections are coming around the corner.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Political expediency!

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I am going to tell you a secret. Even when I don't tell them, people like me can see through it when it happens. If I can see it, and I am not that smart, people on the outside can see it, Mr. Speaker. Let's forget about that for a while. Let us do what we know is right. Let us not take a motion of this nature and find the time to be talking about all of the things that have been said today, especially from the Minister of Education—E-S-P-E-C-I-A-L-L-Y from HIM!

Mr. Speaker, the other thing—and people are going to misunderstand me when I say this. But I am going to make you know that I am a fair person. That same man I am talking about is very capable. That man that I am talking about works hard. I know it. I would never try to take that from him. But when it comes to the politics of it . . . oh, man. I won't even bother to make a comment on that.

The motion that government has said it will accept, I pray to God that government will pay heed to some of the things that have been said so that in any attempts being made to formulate a type of strategy that will be meaningful and effective in this area is done in such a way that it gives positive gains in these areas. When I talk about the education of the people in this country, the re-tooling of the people in this country, the re-training of the people in this country, and the social harmony that we need to cling to the best way we know how, all of these things hinge on motions like these being accepted, not only accepted but something being done rather than talk, talk, talk, talk, talk.

I can say no more as to whether or not something is going to be done because time has not passed for me to give comment to say they had time and they didn't do it. I am not going to talk about all the things that happened before because that already happened. We are now saying the situation definitely needs addressing regardless of what has gone on before. Let us try to address it now. Let us not just try to see who wins the battle of the words and then go to the next battle while in the meantime nothing gets done. Which is what happens too often. Unfortunately from where I sit there is not too much more I can do other than what I am doing, but I want them to know that I am not running scared from any of that.

I also want the government to understand that even when we have a holy or unholy battle, the very next morning if I can assist with whatever initiatives they have once I am totally satisfied that those initiatives are for the betterment of our people, they will get any assistance they can from me. And not one of them can look me in the eye and tell me that from past experience that is not the case. That's what we need to do.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: Excuse me for a second. We have reached the hour of 4.30. Will you be finished in a few minutes?

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I am really just about finished.

I could bring up a lot of other things that are relevant to this motion, but I think enough has been said. I think government understands how people like me feel. I can only now sit and see if government will try to do something sensible so that we can see some results from their acceptance of the motion.

I commend the motion and its amendment. The last thing I want to say before I finish is in regard to the government guaranteed mortgage scheme that Finance Committee approved in January, I think, from $125,000 as the ceiling to $150,000 for the mortgage. I can only say that to this point while that was approved five months ago none of the banks can engage in lending under those premises because nothing has been sorted out yet. Five months is long enough almost to make babies! And there is no reason why that should not be in place by now.

Having said what I have said, understanding it is not in place yet, I truly hope that it gets in place very, very soon. I can't do anything about it and perhaps I don't know all the details involved as to why it has taken so long, but I would implore the government—because there are a lot of people out there who have been saving their little dollars to try to own their homes and at this point in time because they can't reach to fill the gap they can't get it, some of them have been told verbally by the relevant banking institutions that they feel very comfortable that these would qualify under the system but it is not in place at present. So I just hope that at least they get that part of it sorted out early.

Again, I commend the motion and trust that we will see some results from government accepting it. Thank you.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this House. The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Friday at 10.00 AM.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Friday, 11 June 1999. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.33 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 11 JUNE 1999.

EDITED
FRIDAY
11 JUNE 1999
11.07 AM

[Prayers read by the Elected Member for North Side]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I wish to apologise for the late start this morning. It was unavoidable. I have apologies from the honourable Third Official Member who will be arriving later this morning. Moving on to Question Time—
The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a matter that affects us as members, can we hear what the late start was all about?

The Speaker: I don't think it's my responsibility to report that. And I am now moving on to Questions to Honourable Members and Ministers. Question 36 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 36

No. 36: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what procedures the Public Works Department follows in ensuring that importers of explosives for quarrying purposes store, handle, and use such explosives safely and responsibly.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The Chief Engineer ensures that importers of explosives for quarrying purposes store, handle and use such explosives safely and responsibly by:

1. restricting the necessary permits to very few people known to be responsible and knowledgeable in handling explosives in a safe manner;
2. restricting the number of magazines (secure storage for explosives) such that they can be easily supervised;
3. rigorously investigating any complaints and taking appropriate corrective action;

4. maintaining a close liaison between his office and permit holders.

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

Mr. Roy Bodden: I think that we need to suspend Standing Orders so that questions may go on beyond the hour of eleven. I would so move that the necessary Standing Order be waived so that we may continue.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I beg to second that motion.

The Speaker: The Motion has been moved and seconded. Those in favour please say aye. Those against no.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 O'CLOCK.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

Mr. Roy Bodden: May I ask who ensures that the facility in which such explosives are stored is secured in terms of its access only to authorised and responsible persons?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer is the Chief Engineer together with the permit holder ensures that the facility remains secure.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Does this mean there is a physical examination of the storage area? If so, is there a schedule of when such examinations have been conducted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer to that supplementary is that the regulations prescribe the way in which the magazine or the storage facility must be configured and the inspection is carried out by the Chief Engineer and his office on the Explosive Law 1975 and Explosive Regulations 1976.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: May I ask if the importers and licensed users of such explosives are required to keep a log or any record indicating date, place, and amount of explosive used so that government may have for their records and for comparative purposes a way to ascertain how much was imported thereby assuring that all that has been imported has been accounted for in legitimate use?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There is a particular regulation that deals with the permit holder and his obligations under that regulation to ensure that the . . . let me start again. The permit holder under the regulation is responsible for due observation of the regulations and that they can commit an offence if they do not do so.

The Chief Engineer is actually the competent person to make regular inspections. But the regulation of the physical facility does not necessarily go on to require the Chief Engineer to inspect the records of those particular areas. There is a little bit of weakness in that system. It is an area that we have to look at to bring into the current requirements.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: May I request that the minister give an undertaking to the House to address this weakness in that the licensed importer and user be required to keep a log which denotes the date, the time, the amount of explosive used and by whom, so that if necessary government can have corroborating records thereby placing itself in a position to justify requests by importers when they wish to import? The government could then be knowledgeable about the extent of explosive used.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I am happy to provide that undertaking to the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and other members of the Legislative Assembly because I think it is in the best interest of the public and all of us in the present and future.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if the permits mentioned in the answer are issued to the importers of the explosives or are they issued to the individuals who carry out the work for the importers?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There are really two permits, one to allow the importation of explosives and another to deal with the blasting of any particular area.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if the blasting permits are issued for specific locations or are permits issued in a generic fashion allowing the holder of the permit to blast at any location?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The blasting permits that are issued can allow the individual to blast in any place but they are also powers to restrict the blasting. That is done on occasion.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps I am not quite with it this morning, Mr. Speaker, but I did not fully understand what the minister said. Let me try to rephrase it. Can the honourable minister state if permits are issued on request to people to blast specific locations?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer is that they request for specific locations, if I am understanding, whether the permit is issued in that way. The answer to that is no, the license is issued to the blaster. The regulations prescribes the way in which blasting can be done and the amounts that can be done, is my understanding.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: The reason I ask that question is because if it is not done in that fashion what check and balance is there to dictate that blasting is done in locations where it is permitted?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think in an earlier statement I made reference to the Explosives Law 1975 and the Explosives Regulations 1976, what is really included in both of those (and I don't intend to read it all) governs the way in which explosives are dealt with both in terms of the handling and the blasting, the storage among other issues and really we are guided by what is laid down in that legislation. We really don't have power to go beyond what the legislation actually says. I believe, given that the law and the regulations appear to be in excess of twenty years old, it is time to look at the entire law as well as the regulations, and I would undertake to do that as well.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, two additional supplementaries please.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Let me quickly explain to the minister why I am asking what I am asking, and I will turn it into a question. What happens when the authorities become aware of a situation where there is no permission granted to quarry certain pieces of property and blasting is done on that property? Does that constitute any contravention of the law? Because if there is no permission to mine the property, certainly there should be no permission to blast it.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding is that once the individual has a blasting licence the Explosives Regulations and the Law in the case put forward by the First Elected Member for George Town, the blasting would not be a contravention of the regulations or the law. As I said earlier, I think it is time we looked at it in great detail and take input from members across the floor to see how we can amend the law to bring it into modern day legislation to deal with this matter.

The Speaker: The final supplementary, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: So the minister is saying, just to make sure that we understand, that it is possible at present for someone to receive a permit to blast and that person may blast on property where there is no permission to quarry and that is fine to do that at present? And in asking it in that fashion, I note where number 4 in the answer says "maintaining a close liaison between his office and permit holders." Would this not be part and parcel of this liaison? And if not, why not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: As I understand it the blasting permit is issued for two to three years and if an individual is blasting a particular area because he has a blasting permit he would not be contravening the blasting permit, however he may be contravening the Planning Regulations or maybe the Water Authority Regulations, is my understanding.

I did say from the beginning that there is a need to revisit the entire law and regulation and bring it into modern day legislation.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 37, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 37

No. 37: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture to state when the playing field in Bodden Town will be completed.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The Bodden Town playing field is scheduled to be completed and ready for use at the end of July 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House what work remains to be completed prior to the field being ready for use?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As I understand it the work remaining is the ongoing weeding and feeding of the grass. The grass is growing well, but it needs further strengthening prior to opening it up for football practice, training and competition. There is modification to the toilet block at the Civic Centre still to be carried out and it is anticipated by Public Works that this will be completed by the end of July. The car park is to be landscaped and the fencing finalised.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: Can the honourable minister give us an indication as to the status of the hard court?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The department is presently having an estimate of that project with expectation to bring it forward later this year at budget time as there are no funds presently budgeted for the project.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: Regarding the plants and so forth being ready at the time of the opening, can the honourable minister also say what is the decision on a sign being placed at the entrance of the parking lot?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As members will recall, although the question refers to the Bodden Town Playfield, a decision had been taken previously to call it after the late Mr. Haig Bodden. The sign will actually be done in full consultation with all three members from the district of Bodden Town and at that time we will look at the proper placement of the sign, not only from an esthetical perspective but for safety as well.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Since the completion date is just around the corner, may I ask the honourable minister if she is in a position to give the House the completion cost of this project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed that expenditure as of 8th June was C1$941,731. The final cost is estimated to be C1$1,020,000. The estimated project in March of 1997 was C1$1,188,175.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether it will be necessary to do any more work after July 1999, and if so, can she outline what this work might be?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am answering under the assumption that he is specifically referring to the field. Based on the information provided from the Public Works Department and the Ministry's staff and the Sports Office, this is the extent of the work in relation to the field which is anticipated to be concluded at the end of July. Out of an abundance of caution, I insert the caveat, subject to weather conditions and other unforeseeable circumstances.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: May I now ask the minister if the answer she has given takes into consideration the hard courts? There was a hard court before and the use of that court was disrupted by the construction of the field. I understand that the hard court would be replaced, so I am asking the minister if this has been taken into consideration in her answer. To date I don't see any reconstruction of the hard courts, nor has there been any provision for re-lighting the hard courts. Also, what about the seating for spectators both on the hard courts and the field?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As far as the seating is concerned, the last time I visited there there were three aluminium bleachers on site. Originally, according to my instruction, the $1.18817 included covered bleachers. My note from Public Works says that's the reason for the decrease in estimated project cost, because it decided to install three regular aluminium bleachers for the time being.

Again, according to Public Works, the hard court was not included in the estimated plans. I take the point of the member and that's why my sports director informed me that costs are now being estimated for what is needed to rectify it. We have three options: We can either look for supplementary; or bring that at the regular budget session; or look to block votes in some other area if there is no surplus found at the end.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House why the decision was changed from providing some area of covered seating to bleachers with no cover or protection from the elements?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I would have to undertake to give the member that answer. In fact, I asked it just a few seconds ago. My staff was not in a position to say why at this stage, but I too would like to find out. As soon as I have it I can either provide it here in this forum or in writing.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Former plans for that centre included covered bleachers as we were proposing in all of the districts. Can the honourable minister say when and why were the plans dropped? Is it because of lack of funding, or what is the problem?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I thought I had made an attempt to make that clear. But I am happy to repeat the position. I raised the very same concern this morning once I had an opportunity to see the supplementary information that had been requested from the Public Works Department. I noted that it said a decision was taken to change it. Because I was not part of that decision, I can only undertake to investigate to see who made the decision and why the decision was made. I promised the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and I have no problem in promising to the entire House to do just that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: When the government was putting the budget together, did the minister not have that information at hand?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: When I was responding to the honourable Third Elected Member for Bodden Town I said "according to my instructions from Public Works the final cost would be $1,020,000 and that in March of 1997 the estimated project cost which went through was $1.1 (sic)" and the original project cost included a larger covered bleacher. It was decided to install three of the regular aluminium bleachers. Hence my reason for making an inquiry myself. I have undertaken to find out why that decision was made if money was in the budget.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I guess this is a matter for clarification. I can say that according to notes that I have the bleachers were in at that time. Now if they have come out, they have come out since that estimate.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: It is obvious that while this matter is not one of utmost importance, procedurally we need to understand exactly what happened. I am certain, from the minister's answer, that there is lack of knowledge on her part also. We understand that she will have to do a bit of research to determine it. But we would like that answer so that we can understand how things like this happen. Perhaps the minister could give that undertaking—not in writing, if at all possible. If it is possible to do it while we are meeting now, maybe the minister would give us a report on that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I can assure the First Elected Member for George Town that I am as anxious to find out why it happened as he is. Once I am in possession of such information I will gladly share it with the House at the most appropriate and convenient time.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, question 38 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 38

No. 38: Mr. Linford A. Pierson asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide a status report on the National Roads' Plan.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The National Roads' Plan is in the preliminary state, which includes formation of committees and preparations of the detailed terms of reference. Other current activities include the following:

1. The identification of critical land parcels that impact long-range plans.
2. The gazetting of major corridors as a part of the short-term plan.
3. Information gathering, including the Pavement Inventory Study and traffic counts at critical locations not included in the 1999 annual traffic counts.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Can the honourable minister state whether the members of the committee have yet been identified and whether the terms of reference have been prepared?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Dealing with the terms of reference, we have at the moment draft terms of reference which are under consideration by Public Works and the Ministry. There are a number of names being put forward by Public Works for these committees and they are under review. We are also talking to the Chamber of Commerce, among others, who will also hopefully agree to be part of a committee. When we have the details, I will be happy to provide them to the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Following up on the supplementary, I realise that the honourable minister answering has recently taken over this responsibility, but I think the House was given the impression earlier on that the Roads Plan was well on its way to completion. I am surprised to hear that the terms of reference are only in the draft form and that the committee has not yet been formed. Can the honourable minister elaborate on his answer where he stated "Other current activities include the following: The identification of critical land parcels that impact long-range plans"? Is this expensive property that will have to be purchased in order for the Roads Plan to become a reality?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe I did indicate earlier this year that the National Roads Plan was approved by Executive Council to move forward. We have carried out a few items. Between Public Works and Planning we have come up with the corridors, or some sketches to where the corridors would be. That, of course, has a process to go through in terms of going public and taking objections and what have you. The critical parcels of land referred to here is that in some cases in order for this corridor to be done, we have to ensure that we secure certain parcels. In some cases—I guess in most cases—the land is not in government's ownership, but in private hands. Sometimes the corridor would actually cause the piece of property, because of the way the corridor is designed, once the road goes through it . . . you could not utilise either of the pieces left, so government would have to buy the entire lot. But we don't have final figures on this as yet. We do know there is some critical land that has to be taken in this respect and we will undertake to keep members informed.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I thank the honourable minister for that answer and appreciate that these corridors are no doubt the ones recommended in 1989 in the Master Ground Transportation Plan. It will cost much more at this time.

In the answer given the honourable minister said, "The National Roads' Plan is in the preliminary stage . . ." Can the honourable minister say when the road plan commenced and when it was approved by Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The National Roads Plan was approved by Council in March of this year.

[laughter]

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if in previous times, going back more than a year ago when questions were being asked and the road plan was being talked about, was there nothing actually happening with the National Roads Plan?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My understanding is that some aspects of identification of the road corridors and things of that sort have been going on for quite some time. I think in that respect something was going on, but that's the best I can do with this question.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: If memory serves me right, when questions were asked prior to this regarding a National Roads Plan specific answers were given regarding what was being done. In this minister's answer he refers to a plan being approved by Executive Council, can the honourable minister state if the plan approved by Executive Council in March of this year was a plan developed within his ministry since he took over the subject of roads?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think it is necessary to be clear. What I am saying is that Executive Council approved to have a National Road Plan and we understand there are draft terms of reference and we talk about people being considered to be members of committees. In terms of whether something else was there, it appears that for some time . . . even the Third Elected Member for George Town talks about the Master Ground Transportation Plan being there from 1989, so I don't believe that all this stuff just goes away. It might be upgraded; it might be changed. I am saying that the Executive Council agreed in March of this year to conduct a National Road Plan.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say when he answered that there was a plan, he was working on a plan, that there was no committee? Can the honourable minister say that he found no plan, no committee and these things outlined in his answer are of his doing?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think there is a need to clarify an issue here. The technical expertise for conducting a plan of this nature is not going to be done in the ministry. It is going to be carried out in the department. The expertise that they need within the department, if they do not already have it, they will have to buy into the department in order to carry out this work. I am not going to stand up and say that information which is in Public Works and has been there for some time may not now be used. I don't know.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I think what is being sought here is the following. The way the minister answered the original question, and outlined a set of activities which are on an ongoing basis, and he then went on to say in answer to supplementary questions that approval was given in March by Executive Council to move forward to develop a road plan, that is our understanding at present. The real question that needs to be answered now is, were these activities that are taking place presently spurred on by the minister now answering the question, or did he find these activities going on when he took over the subject? I ask it in that fashion simply to determine whether what went to Council was done on the volition of the present minister or whether the horse was riding and he jumped on the back while it was moving. I think he will understand that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works. And I will accept one more supplementary after this.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I hope this horse is at full gallop so we can get on with what needs to be done.

Basically I think I already indicated that work was already going on, that Public Works as well as Planning was concentrating on corridors because it is useless to think in terms of doing anything with roads unless you have a corridor laid out. Also we are aware that phase 1 of the Harquail Bypass is already in place, and we are aware that we plan to extend the corridor down to Batabano Road in West Bay. So all I am saying is that the formation, the approval from Council to deal and have a National Road Plan took place in March. That's all I am saying.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay. This is the final supplementary.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I heard that Mr. Speaker, but our supplementaries that we have been asking have been getting the same answer over and over. When the minister answered the original question I got the impression that all of these things came into place at his behest, at his doing, when he took over, when the ministry changed. Is the minister saying that when the previous minister for works, answered those questions in the past, that there existed no committee, that there existed no plans, that Executive Council had not approved any plan for roads, or a national road plan? Is that what the minister is saying?

Was there a committee? Did the previous minister of works do those things that he said he had done? Or did he not? That's all that the minister for tourism now needs to say.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think I have said what I needed to say, and that is that in March of this year Executive Council approved a National Road Plan to be done. I have also indicated that work was going on but on roads, not in terms of . . . Council had not approved a National Road Plan per se. That's what I am saying. We are forming committees because of that decision which was taken in March.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I know you said one more supplementary, but I think that you ought to realise that we have not got the answer whether any of the work that is pointed out on this piece of paper was in place as the former minister said he had been doing.

The Speaker: There will be another day.

Moving on to question 39, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, you are truly a great Speaker sir!

[laughter]

QUESTION 39

No. 39: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to provide the total recurrent costs for operating Government schools during the 1998 School Year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Total recurrent costs for operating Government schools in 1998 was $16,183,357 (excludes administration costs of $6,634,996). The figure for 1997 was $15,341,902. Average cost per student for 1998 was $4,112. The average cost per student for 1997 was $3,942. Number of students in 1998 was 3,936. Number of students for 1997 was 3,892.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether the recurrent cost increases annually? If so, is he in a position to tell the House what the percentage of increase is?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have a calculator here, but the percentage would be what $16,183,357 bears to $15,349,02. It seems it would be in the area of about 1/18th. I don't know what that is in a percentage. In other words, it went up from $15.3 million . . . about 4.5% my learned accountant friend, the Third Elected Member for George Town, has mentioned. That's not a bad increase.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Based on this, are there any projected figures for the up coming school year, and would it be safe to say that we can expect an increase in the vicinity of 5% at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It's too early for that. We don't know what registration is. We haven't started the budget for next year. When we have the figures I will be happy to give them to the honourable member. But it's just too early for that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if based on the track record of the past five years, appreciating what he just said, can there not be some fair assumption as to what that percentage might be? Does he have that information available, or is it something we just have to leave at that and understand and accept that it can't be figured at this time.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am advised that registration is just beginning so we just don't know and the budget process is just starting with the controlling officer, whom you see I have here.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I am sure the minister has access to the numbers of students in previous years. There must be a trend. If the trend is fairly consistent would that not give rise to forming an opinion? While it can't be cast in stone there must be some trend that has been established over the past five years. The same way you have 1998 and 1997, if you go back you would be able to quickly determine that.

Now if he doesn't have that information available, we will understand that. But all we are trying to find out is whether it is expected to follow in the same vein that it has been or if there are reasons which might warrant greater expectations at the beginning of this year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't have those figures. All I can say is that every year, as far as I can remember, it did increase. So I would expect an increase but I don't have the figures.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House some of the factors which are taken into consideration to arrive at the recurrent costs as stated in the answer, that is, whether or not it is limited exclusively to enrolment of students in the system and the staff, or if there are other factors in addition to these two.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That's an opinion that I would . . . you know, I am a bit loath to try to comment on. If you put five more students in a class that is small and doesn't need an extra teacher there is very little increase. If you have ten students extra that have to make up a new class then there is an increase. I really don't know, sir. I know what the members are trying to get, but I honestly don't know. All I can say is that each year, as the First Elected Member for George Town has mentioned, there have been increases. I would expect there to be an increase this year.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to differ with the minister's position, but it's an opinion. What I said was that obviously to figure this recurrent cost at least two things must be taken into consideration, that is the enrolment figures and also the staff. I am asking if the formula is exclusively limited to these two, the numbers in the enrolment and the staff, because their salaries would have to be taken into consideration. Or are there other factors, or at least another factor beside enrolment and staff that has to be taken into consideration?

What I am trying to ask the minister is what provisions would be taken into consideration in the eventuality as has been in this case now where one private high school will cease operations in September.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The calculation of those figures were made as follows: Subhead code 0100 (which is personnel), 02000 Travelling; 03000 Supplies and Materials; 06000 Operating and Maintenance; 08000 Grants; 12000 Interdepartmental Miscellaneous; and 14000 Reference Materials. They are the ingredients that go into making up that figure.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Bearing in mind that at least one private high school has indicated its intention to discontinue that school at the September term, and I am not 100% sure of this but it has been indicated to me that this will displace some 100 students. That's what I have heard. The figure itself is not of major importance to what I am trying to ask. Is the government bearing in mind that there may be on top of the regular increase a substantial increase in the high school area which will arise because of this displacement that will occur?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: In a recent meeting with one of the pastors involved with the First Baptist School we understood that the closing would be grades 10, 11 and 12 and only eleven students were involved. I think the honourable member has brought out a very good point. Support for the private schools is crucial. They carry over one-third of the students in these islands who compulsorily have to go to school. We have always tried to give every assistance to private schools so that this would not happen. It has happened on occasion in the past, but it is very important that we support the private schools because as you can see, when we are dealing with a total of $22.7 million it means that the private schools are saving this government $12 million to $13 million recurrent a year. It has to make good economic sense to support them and to try to give them as much as we can in capital and recurrent and keep them going. I know this legislature supports them.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: In view of what the minister just said, and it has been said many times before, I am wondering whether he or the department receive complaints regarding the increase of private school fees to the extent that people are saying they are not going to register with the private schools, but are now going to register in the government schools. If they receive that sort of complaint what steps are they taking seeing that we are contributing the kinds of funds he says need to be contributed to the private schools, to have some say in the cost of tuition?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This is a constant problem. I met a couple of times with the principals of the private schools. What we did this year was give an extra amount of grants because when government increased its salaries for teachers, obviously it put pressure on the private schools to increase theirs. I will be asking this Legislative Assembly this coming budget for an increase in the recurrent to assist and offset the private school fees and to work out some formula that may also provide specific assistance. I would come back to the Finance Committee on that.

The point the member has raised is correct. If the fees of the private schools go too high more and more children are going to come into the government schools and that is penny wise and pound foolish. It's better for us to give an extra $.5 million or $1 million grant to all of the schools to save government $5 million to $7 million recurrent with them coming in. But I will meet further with them and try to get a formula that will either be assisting, say Caymanian students, or some formula that will be acceptable to Finance Committee to ensure that the private schools can continue. They are all subsidised by their church. I like to make that clear. None of those schools make a profit. They are all heavily subsidised by their church.

The Speaker: This is going to have to be the final supplementary. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, you usually say the final two. If this is the final one I am going to have to give way to the person who asked the original question because he has a supplementary.

The Speaker: Okay, we'll say two.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you very much, you're a good person, sir.

I want to ask the minister to give an undertaking in regard to this formula he is talking about developing. In the past we have heard these figures and the minister has brought calculations from time to time to justify his argument regarding grants to private schools. I think no one questions the principle involved, understanding the circumstances surrounding it. But I think many of us do not fully understand how what is done is done. I think whenever that time arises and the minister comes back if he would prepare a situation that would give us a full understanding of how this thing is done, we would be very grateful. We are seeking that undertaking.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I am happy to give that undertaking. I discussed with my Permanent Secretary and I was coming back here with it anyhow. I would rather this House approve the new formula. That way we all know where we stand and what basis the funds are being granted on.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, the final supplementary.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you.

My question is similar to the undertaking just extracted from the minister by the First Elected Member for George Town. Bearing in mind the crucial role the private schools play in education in the Cayman Islands, I would like to ask the minister in consideration of this vital role, if he has not already in place some kind of organisation which liaises with either the department or his ministry would he consider establishing such an organisation so that when the government is contemplating raising the salaries of its school staff there can be some liaison before it actually happens so that we can arrive at a point at which that might affect the private schools and therefore place us in a better position prior to the actual raise so that we can control for any fallout it may negatively bring upon the private schools? Then the minister would be in a better position to come to the Legislative Assembly if he has to increase the grants or change the formula to give these grants to the private schools. And he will also be in a position to know whether he has to accommodate larger numbers as a result of cutbacks or attrition.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The private schools have an association and I think what we need to do is establish a closer liaison. When our review for salaries, or any other way they may be affected, that there is communication. But I did meet twice, once here and once up at the Prep School with all of the principals. I think I maybe met with one of them another time. But I take the point, and I will give that undertaking.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 40, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 40

No. 40: Mr. Linford A. Pierson asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to provide the basic academic and admission requirements for admission into accredited universities in the United States of America as required by the Education Council.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: For academic courses, students must have either (a) or (b) below: (a) at least five CXC/GCSE 'O' level passes including English and Mathematics, or Science of not less than "C" grade or equivalent. A minimum of three subjects must be passed at any one sitting; or (b) a high school diploma with at least a 2.75 average over the last two years of high school and a composite SAT score of not less than 950; or applicants for academic courses who did not initially meet minimum requirements, may be considered for financial assistance if they (a) are at the time attending an approved institution; and (b) have maintained an overall GPA of 2.50 or above in a minimum of 12 credit hours or equivalent with no failures at that institution for their first year and 3.0 in a minimum of 15 credit hours or equivalent with no failures thereafter.

For non-academic courses, applicants not in possession of (i)(a) or (i)(b) must: (a) have at least grade D in the GCSE or equivalent in a numerate subject and English; or (b) demonstrate proof of basic skill in numeracy and English; (c) have completed the foundation courses if available on the Island, with an acceptable level of attainment, or have demonstrated expertise on the job verified by an employer.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Can the honourable minister state whether admission into an accredited institution without more or on its own is sufficient for an applicant, a school leaver, to receive a government scholarship? If not, can he explain why not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Admission to an approved college by itself is not sufficient for a scholarship. What I read must go along with it. They must not only be approved, but must be entered and maintain (I don't want to read this all over again) a grade point of 2.5 and 12 credit hours . . . and I went on. Or 3 and a minimum of 15 and no failures in either. I believe even though this is clear in the guidelines—and there has been confusion on this, let me admit that—maybe when we are doing next years we will just highlight this better than we have in the past.

But I repeat again, mere admission to an approved institution in the US per se is not enough to get a scholarship.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: Just for emphasis, because this is such an important matter for school leavers, . . . and just to give a bit of background, many school leavers are of the impression that once they have received admission into an accredited university that that should be all that is required. I am seeking information on a school leaver, if the honourable minister would give the answer again so as to clarify this point. On a school leaver leaving, must he have a minimum of 950 points on the SAT in addition to having a high school certificate, say somebody graduating from Triple C or Truth for Youth would also have to have an SAT of not less than 950 in order to obtain a scholarship.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That is correct what the member has stated. I would just like to mention as well that the Education Council has encouraged students to take their first two years where their credits can be transferred and they can from the respective colleges, both the Community College and ICCI and naturally if they are doing it at the Law School. So they can get their two years here and that is transferred. While I don't have the list with me now, I know with the Community College it has recognition from universities that are in a highly competitive bracket. So it's a nice range there.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I am very pleased to have received this information, and I am sure the listening public will also be pleased. Can the honourable minister state if this arrangement with either the Community College or ICCI would be covered financially by the government, that is that two year period?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, once they meet the criteria for the scholarship then we give the full scholarship, the full two years here, to either of the three institutions.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I just want to clarify what I was trying to drive at. I got the impression that the government would encourage students to prepare themselves for university entrance in order to obtain a scholarship and I was just wondering if in that preparation period government would be prepared to assist students that might need any financial assistance.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The local scholarship area is fairly new. If they do not reach their 950 SAT but they may be able to get entry into the Community College or ICCI (and I am just talking of those two because the Law School is different), then we will assist them if they get the sufficient credits on the two. Then they can be granted a continuing scholarship to spend the other two years in a US or a UK or a West Indies (of which we have the accreditation in the Community College and I am sure in ICCI for those) it does provide that you can get in with a lesser pass rate. Provided they do good in there they get the other two years abroad.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister confirm that these requirements by the Education Council are designed as much to be a protection of the student and they are not a deterrent? Because these requirements are universally recognised as the minimum requirements and one of the reasons the Education Council requires them is that in the event a student has to transfer to another university which may be demanding these requirements as prerequisite and not necessarily relying on SAT scores exclusively so that a student who falls in that category will not have any difficulty in transferring to another university.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That's 100% right. I can't add anything to that, sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I must say that was a good statement. Because I understand that most of our students opt to go into universities in the United States, I wonder if he is in a position to give an indication of the percentage that may be going into the US rather than the UK or say Canada or other universities?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I don't actually have the figures but I would guess that it's probably over 80% probably closer to 90%. The pendulum has swung from the days when that honourable member did his professional accountants and I did law, where one did it through the UK to North America. It's mainly the US but a fair amount of students go to the Canada and to the UK and to UWI for medicine or other professions if they want to do architecture in the UK through [?] or whatever.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

It is my understanding that we would have select committee on the Election Law during break. The Honourable First Official Member.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 72(8)

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, in accordance with Standing Order 72 (8) which reads: "A select committee may sit at any time when the House is adjourned, but except by leave of the House may not sit while the House is sitting" I seek leave of the House to hold a Select Committee of the Whole House on the Election Law (1995 Revision) during the suspension today.

The Speaker: Would you suggest that we come back 15 minutes later after lunch?

Hon. James M. Ryan: I had initially thought that it would have happened at the morning break, but as you will appreciate we are getting very near the luncheon break. I am in Members' hands. I would say in terms of the length of time it should not take more than 20 or 30 minutes and could possibly be finished in less time than that depending upon how much debate there is. In any event, I am in the hands of members of the House on actual time.

The Speaker: If it pleases members, I suggest that we suspend for lunch and come back at 2.00 and come back into the House at 2.30

We will now suspend until 2.30.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.40 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.59 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Before we took the suspension this morning, the First Official Member asked that leave of the House be granted to take a select committee. I did not put the question, so I will put the question at this time. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: SELECT COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE HOUSE ON THE ELECTION LAW (1995 REVISION) TO MEET DURING THE SUSPENSION.

The Speaker: Out of an abundance of caution, I tendered apologies this morning for the honourable Second and Third Official Members. In case that was not properly recorded, I do so now for the record.

Continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) The floor is open to debate on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 as amended. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

If not, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/99

HOUSING INITIATIVE FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING

(Continuation of debate thereon.)

Mr. W McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, thank you. I want to thank all members of the House who debated the motion and those who otherwise support it, but did not debate it. I would certainly like to thank those members who did their best to debate the motion without being too critical of the present guaranteed housing scheme.

I am as much aware as anybody else of the need for lower income groups to be given the opportunity of owning a house. During my time as minister responsible, I did not run from my responsibility. I was questioned many times about the process of the scheme and where we were. I didn't shirk from the responsibility to answer questions. To the best of my ability I gave whatever information I could give. At times it was a sword against me. Nevertheless I saw the need for a housing initiative, not just a policy but an initiative that would address the need of a person getting a house.

I was well aware that previous governments had done little or nothing and I knew that I would encounter difficulties. The first plan aired by my ministry was one where a private company was going to put up $15 million through a bank for affordable housing. Government was to be the guarantor for the upper 35% as the down payment. We went through several draft agreements which government couldn't agree on. I tell you, Mr. Speaker, or anyone else in this House or the country, that the two last draft agreements reached would have given the lower income groups the houses that everyone was screaming for and are still talking about today in this debate.

We all have good memories, and I can tell you that I wouldn't want to go through that again. We all remember the big hue and cry in the country was that it would be too large of a contingent liability for government. The uproar was so great that the National Team, being weak—even when something was good for all those in need—said forget it. So I had no authority to go ahead with it. There was still a lot of ironing out to do, of course, nevertheless I was determined so I came up with another idea. Therefore the present government guaranteed scheme was put in place. During the course of those events, I was discussing with the Housing Development Corporation Board and government, and various banking institutions, how best to get funds for the Housing Development Corporation.

Every banking institution was turned off by previous negotiations with previous government and the resultant small investment in the so-called bonds was evident. We couldn't convince . . . and I had a very capable Board. We had Mr. Daniel Scott, of Ernst & Young, as Chairman; Mr. Chris Johnson, Mr. Dan Martiuck, Mr. Tony Powell, Mr. Jimmy Powell, Mr. Danny Owens as Board members. They couldn't convince anybody to put sufficient funds into the Housing Development Corporation to make it viable. The Housing Development Corporation could not from its inception generate the confidence of investors. Government itself would not, because it had not put funds of any significance into the Housing Development Corporation.

Let me say—and I believe it was the Fourth Elected Member for George Town who raised it—that the Housing Development Corporation (HDC), if they think it was the solution to the low income housing, they were mistaken. There were a few loans there. But if the HDC was so great, since it was created in 1981, why then were there less than 100 mortgages in over 12 years? If it was so great why could it not create more?

The position the Board and I found—and I was not on the Board, nor was I its chairman—was that in order to cover the cost of investors, that is the bonds, the cost for general and administrative operating expenses, the interest HDC was charging was higher in some cases than those charged by the commercial banks. Another problem was that the HDC was set up by the then government to deal only with Caymanians and the management was putting applications before the Board for only non-Caymanians. That was a big problem the Board had with management.

Because the member for George Town was not in the know, maybe he doesn't know and he thought the HDC was a good thing. He seemed to think we could just put money into it. I will deal with that later on. They seem to forget that the kind and amount of problems people had with the mortgages there. Perhaps they don't know.

Do they believe I changed for the sake of change? HDC was a good idea in the beginning, but proved to be a bad deal at the end. I did the best I could, considering the circumstances at the time. Why set up a management that is costly to loan money that is already scarce? The HDC on my part I thought would be an overseeing body to monitor rather than one to lend money which expertise is already in the private sector from which we needed to get the funds.

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town made some good points. But one point he raised in his deliberation about the sale of the mortgage portfolio talked about people being under pressure because of the sale of the mortgage portfolio. I want to say that if those people are under any pressure it is not because of the sale. The agreement between Cayman National Bank—which one member said was nepotism because the Minister for Education is a shareholder and director—and the HDC was made so that the same terms and conditions remained in effect. CNB could make it better but it could not make it any worse.

So those people cannot be any worse off. If they are, then the government ought to be doing something about it. If a member knows something, then he ought to address it to the right channels. But I doubt they are worse off because there is an agreement between them and the HDC protecting those mortgages in that portfolio. I believe we did the right thing. At the time the market was right and we got a good deal. In the end we saved funds for the country.

In looking at the contributions made by members, the Minister for Education, as is usual because he had no other contribution to make, blamed me again—one more time—and said that I didn't get the housing for the lower income group. While a lot of members have talked about low income people, not one member has said what amount of income they are talking about to make a person or a family be categorised as low income, or what kind of payment that would put him in a bracket of low income.

I have recognised a mortgage payment of $250 to $500 as being low income. Nobody here in this House has yet said what size mortgage we should be categorising as a low income. Is it $35,000? Is it $40,000? Is it $60,000? Or is it $85,000? If not, that is why I have said that the needs of the low-income group have to be addressed by various plans or schemes from different angles. No one scheme is going to cover it.

The members of this House—and in particular some members—must remember that we don't know it all. There must be someone who can tell us something at times. We don't know it all and there must be somebody somewhere who can tell us something. Nobody needs to put credit in one of my pockets and take it out of the other one. If it makes them feel good, they don't have to give me any credit at all. I know that in two years government was able to help 170 Caymanian families get a home through the initiatives I put forward.

Now I am getting blamed for not getting more, or not addressing another sector; yet no one can come up with how much those people would pay to be categorised low income. The Minister for Education in his usual form criticised me by saying that I didn't get it done. The government now as it stands—he is still the Leader of Government Business—has had ample time to do something about the problem since 1997. And since that time how many loans have been made in that scheme? Not one single solitary loan as I understand it has been made, yet he, the Leader of Government Business, has the audacity to come here and criticise me while leading a government that has not produced one in all this time!

The government must stop finding scapegoats for their lack of action. But if you don't care about people, if the shoe doesn't pinch you you don't know how tight it is. If you don't care about people how, then, can you address their needs?

The Minister for Education raised a matter about some scheme that he had put together. He built one house—one house!—in eight years that he had responsibility for housing. And he comes in here with a grin on his face like the cat that got the rat how he had done so much for the people. He had responsibility for eight years! But if you have no social conscience you are not going to do anything about social needs.

Numerous people through the Social Services Department—and again I took a flogging for it—all throughout this country got their roofs fixed, got their houses in a better condition, got bathroom facilities and some had homes built, several, through Social Services because I had the social conscience and cared enough about the people. I took the licks for it, but it had to be done. We renovated dozens of homes. How much was done before?

It seems that I have to stand and defend myself, but that's what you do in a debate. Anyone who says I didn't do my best is not telling the truth. That goes for those National Team Members who sit down when they know lies are being told. One house in eight years! And he comes in here bragging about it. And do you know how that was done? That piece of property down there, down in the Watler's Square area, was leased to Mr. Dacres for farming. And they kicked him off of it. And the new government in 1984/85 had to pay Mr. Dacres for his lease. The Minister for Education then, and the Minister responsible for Social Services and Housing then, in his rush to get elected in 1984 built one house. One!

He comes here thumping his chest about how he got one.

Mr. Speaker, this matter of addressing the needs of the low-income group is not going to be addressed by one plan. It will be addressed on different fronts. Since they said I did nothings, let me just say again that it's not an easy thing, first of all, because people who have good homes in this country, and thank God that when you go through the country you find a good housing stock, a lot of them say they don't want low income housing in their backyards.

My Ministry, the Public Works and Planning Departments made several visits to look at different systems. One was a Swiss company in San Pedro Sula in Honduras. We looked at housing in Jamaica offered by large developers there. We also looked at systems used in the United States as well as Europe. We were well on the way to getting things done, but it is not easy. Mr. Antonio Hawkins, a local developer, put forward a plan that I thought was going to work, but that was just around election time and so at least one person objected. That stretch of land did not get used. Maybe there were more objections, I believe there were. But the irony of that is that 100 yards down the road from that subdivision, Frank Hall Homes has gone in and they are building 85 homes in the first phase. Those objections were only political. But they were effective.

The people have various problems in qualifying. The greatest one is that the requirement to qualify is the ratio of the applicant's monthly payment to their monthly income. One aspect is the person's ability to pay a mortgage when he has other loan commitments. For instance, credit card balances, rent, which together takes him to 40% or so of his salary required by the banks as a maximum debt service ratio. These problems, coupled with the lack of available homes which can be readily purchased or constructed, as I said $35,000 to $85,000 bracket, is making it impossible to effectively provide housing for the lower income group referred to by everybody.

No bank wanted to put money into what members are calling low-income people, although nobody has given figures as to what they are talking about. So I could not make one group suffer because I could not get agreement to help another group. I couldn't get readily available funds for low income, so I did the best by putting the other scheme which did help some people in the lower income, but there are some prohibiting factors which I spoke about. I went ahead and provided 170 homes. Now, since I left ExCo, how many have they provided?

Do you know what is true, since the Minister for Education is Chief Criticiser for the government, he was there eight years, but to top it off he was, or is, a banker—a banker! And if he had the care he claims, why then did he not put something in place to help the people? If he had done that with all his knowledge and his expertise and his contacts then I would have had something to build on. But I had nothing to build on. And as much as he would like to call me a fool, I will give you a good example.

When I took over the Water Authority they had a good foundation. Members before me had done a lot and left the foundation for me to build on. And I went ahead and built on it because there was a good foundation. If he was as caring as he says he is, and he has all the knowledge he says he has as an accountant or a banker, then he should have been able to come up with schemes. But he has neither the knowledge in this area, nor does he care about people.

There was some question yesterday about what I had done in my time on Executive Council. It's all good and well to get up and criticise me. If it makes them feel happy, then go ahead. I have been involved in politics for a long time and not too much slips by me. They can drill the holes as small as they want, but I can see through them. I see the attempts on both sides of this House to minimise my contribution to enhance social development in these islands. I see it! On both sides! They can try as much as they want the people in these islands are not going to be fooled by people who criticise everything that has been done. And for everyone who has a genuine complaint, there are avenues for redress in a sensible manner. Members on both sides of this House had better understand that.

The gains made in social development for our people didn't come easy. I had to fight those against me, and those supposedly for me. But I ploughed ahead. When I took housing under my control, far too many people, too many families could not get a house, not only in the low income bracket but in the middle income bracket of this country. While the scheme was not perfect, many children who would otherwise have not been able to sleep in a good bedroom, or bath in a good bathroom of their own, and many mommas and many papas who had to share theirs now have their own.

The country can be proud that in a region with so much deprivation our people are still not the worst off. And by our own standards, many are in a better condition today than when I took over policy. When I look at policy for our elderly I put many things in place which, again, I had to convince those Shylocks that it was right and proper so to do. Today our old people can live a little better than they did in the past. And if government of the day cared as much for them as they say they care for them they would have given them the raise in January of this year that they had the authority to do! But they waited until they gave themselves a raise to give the old people their share, but it was only $50 instead of the $400 that they were supposed to get. Yet they come here, the bunch of beknighted eunuchs, talking foolishness.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order please.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I am asking the member to withdraw those last words—beknighted eunuchs.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay, I ask that you withdraw that. It's not appropriate.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: Yes, Mr. Speaker. I will bow to your ruling.

The Speaker: Thank you. Please continue.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I knew the Minister for Education couldn't sit down any longer. The Chief Criticiser for the Government! He was the one who raised the issue about what I did in ExCo. That's why I have to repeat these things this afternoon—and I am going to repeat them.

I too could have drawn back when I faced the objections, but I didn't because I believed that the contribution to our well being made by that group of old people could not go unnoticed any more. And while they might say that I did nothing, I am encouraged that our elderly are thankful. I too could have organised a big raise for myself while I was in Executive Council. But do you know what? I always put people first. And since I am on that let me say that I am proud that the raise that we got, I am too part of the scheme to put scholarships for our children with the other three members who started it. And do you know what? The first cheque that was given was mine on that day. The others gave on that day too, but I am glad that I am part of it and I am glad that I was able to put my cheque in.

They can criticise me. No, I didn't get the education some can boast of. But thank God I got good granny wits. And what little education I do have I took that with the common sense and I make it work. And do you know what else? I have a heart! And do you know what I believe? Some people over there don't have any!

The gains made for children . . . if they are even matched policy for policy over the next five years our people will be held in good standing. After school programmes, sports programmes, scholarships, grants to the less academically able, the so-called Youth Policy Foundation was put in place by me. Thank God, one Executive Council Member, the Minister for Health, on the morning of its introduction at the Grand Pavilion recognised my effort on that front, although the minister now in charge never had the gracefulness to do so. Give unto Caesar what is due, and onto them honour that is due.

The Young Parents Programme, the Marine Institute, these are things that took innovation. Some of them over there will never be able to accomplish it simply because they don't care about people. They do not have the social conscience. Training might have not gone the way I wanted because of the sabotage, but gains made did bring us a long way. But we still have a long way to go in training. I recognise that.

The gains made in labour, and this is one that has to touch people's hearts, made me a target for the rich and the powerful merchant class; and now, a target for the jealous. But I can look back and see gains made. Today pregnant women get better time than before I made the changes. Even mothers who adopt children get paid for time off. The amount of vacation and vacation pay is better today than before I took over. Today, if an immediate family member dies you have a right to five days off. Sick leave is better arranged. Now, is the Labour Law perfect? It is not. No. Try as I did.

Gratuities is still a sore problem, an atrocity. I put in accountants to check the books but if two sets of books are kept no accountant will find the things that are wrong.

It's an atrocity. I can tell you that no labour union in the world is going to cure that. Only sensible determination is going to straighten it out. From the beginning the law was not given a chance. I hope that the likes of the Minister of Education and those who went down to the Grand Pavilion to sabotage me when I put forward certain recommendations will understand what they face now. I hope they know.

I get criticised still for pensions. Pensions are costly, yes. But the longer we had put it off, the more costly it would have been. Why should we go through in an affluent society, as we purport to be, this life for another ten years with people working for 15 to 20 years, or 25 to 30 years and when they work through the door crippled and hobbled over they get a little wristwatch and a 'Thank you darling, you done a good job'? Oh yeah? That can put milk and bread on the table?

Those are the kind of atrocities that exist in this country and those are the kinds of attempts that I made to change the social advancement made in this country. But the Ministry for Community Development will never be matched by anybody over there presently for a long time.

Pensions are costly. But if not now, when? And if not us, who?

I could go on, Mr. Speaker, but these are some of the gains made for our people. Those who do their best for the sake of politics and out of spite, hate and jealousy, are not literally hurting me, but they are doing a disservice to this country and our people by letting people who don't know otherwise believe there is nothing in place to help them. There are measures here. All we have to do—

[inaudible interjection]

Mr. W McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I don't know what got under the collar of the Member for George Town, he just came in.

[Addressing the Fourth Elected Member for George Town] You just came in. You don't understand what's going on. I did say that the member made some good points, and I don't know what I am saying now that has hurt him because he is bawling over there.

Those kinds of questions will lead us into damnation for the sake of political expediency. Some people are not looking out for the people, they are looking at the next election and hoping to find some safe ground to fool people, get in with them and hope that they get into the Legislative Assembly with a large enough group to control. But Lord help us—help us!—if that has to happen because some people do not understand what is going on and as I said, we are not that big. We don't have that much education to know that other people can tell us something.

Other people can tell us something. I don't know what is wrong with the member for George Town because I really didn't touch him. I congratulated him on the points he made because what he said in his speech actually complemented what I had put forward but he didn't know that because he was not here during my presentation. He came in afterwards, and then got up and left again. I complemented him.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Whether I shout or not, Mr. Speaker, I have a record to stand on and that member does not! And before he starts criticising me about my record he should get one that can play—mine can play! My record can play! Yours is scratched up.

I could go on, Mr. Speaker, but I will save more for another opportunity and time will tell.

Mr. Speaker, believe you me I have so many daggers in my back that they can't find any more space to put them now. And the member for George Town has to understand this: He doesn't frighten McKeeva. He can accuse me; he can say anything he wants. When he makes a good contribution, I say so. And I say again, he made some good points in his contribution. So what is he all riled up about? Because I said there are benefits in the Labour Law? There are. I did my best with the Labour Law. There are good benefits there. But from the beginning that law was not given the opportunity.

That's all.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: No, I am not blaming you. You just jumped in and thought I was hitting you. I wasn't.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for just a moment? Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break, or would you rather—

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker. I think I had better stop and take the break.

The Speaker: We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.15 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 as amended. The First Elected Member for West Bay continuing.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I appreciate your indulgence for me to have answered some of what was talked about in the different areas I dealt with. I will now move to one area just to say that it is not easy for the Director of Labour at times. We encountered numerous problems. We have legal advice. First of all I should give an example.

The Labour Department would make sanctions that were not adhered to by certain employers. They would take it to court. The court would find them guilty, for instance in severance pay, but refuse to order that they pay the severance pay. We took that and had a discussion with the Chief of Police, the Legal Department, the Legal Draftsman, and to no avail. Nothing could be done. We couldn't get anywhere.

The law has to be given the chance to work and those in the system need to recognise that both sides need protection and there is a right and wrong to everything. Employers have an obligation, employees have an obligation. So the Director of Labour did all he could at times.

I am sorry that I had to clear up some of those matters. But it is the unwillingness of the National Team government to give credit where credit is due, and to lay blame all the time on somebody else and not to accept its own failure. I don't expect them to give me any credit, if that makes them happy. They can't give their own people credit. We saw the Minister for Tourism this morning saying one thing and he couldn't even answer a question when the minister he was talking about walked in. That's the type of leadership we have. No wonder the country is stumbling.

The FHA in the United States, the Federal Housing Authority, put a plan together in the United States for housing. The government there guaranteed the loan and type of construction. Then the Federal Housing Authority—

The Speaker: Administration, that is.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: The Federal Housing Administration, thank you Mr. Speaker, made the banks lend at established rates which people could reach. This helped the people. The FHA did not lend in the United States, they guaranteed the loan and the type of construction and then made the banks lend at rates people could reach.

When it came to the veterans, for instance (and I use the veterans so we can compare their situation to the very low-income group here), they gave them a better rate than usual and a non-foreclosure policy. I think we are in the same position that the United States was then and we could model off of them to suit our needs. That was what I was trying to do.

They also supervised the quality of the construction so that people would not suffer. So there are many different things that we could be doing to help the situation. I wish to recap the proposals I made which could have been put in place if they cared.

A prohibiting factor being the interest rate and the qualifying ratio of the applicant's monthly mortgage payment requirement to their monthly salary, we should now introduce a programme where government would enter into another agreement with the banks with government being the 100% guarantor to a bank and the agreement be so structured so as to allow government to pay the interest of the mortgage through a fund set up by government for such purposes.

Then government would be repaid by the borrower through an interest free 30-year loan so that the borrower's payment to the bank would be very low because he wouldn't be paying the high interest rate at the bank. It's not the government's money we are dealing with although we screamed about what government should do with the banks. It's the people's money. We can't just walk in there and say 'Give it to me. I want it this way or that way.' There has to be sensible negotiation.

Although the person I am talking about would have another payment to make, one to the bank and one to the government, it would be over 30 years (the one to the government). This type of scheme could be kept to a level of $85,000 if we are talking that level, as I tried to say earlier as a low-income group so that people can continue to live in dignity.

The second proposal I made yesterday is that government should put aside sufficient funds annually to provide soft loans of up to $100,000 for a period of up to 30 years at an interest rate of 5% for first time home owners. Also, if a couple is building a first home for $150,000 or $175,000 government could still finance the $100,000.

As I recall, one of the things the Financial Secretary and I accomplished at the Caribbean Development Bank meeting in Canada in 1997 was to get them to agree to a different outlook on the Cayman Islands in terms of how we borrow funds from them. We discussed housing, and it was a source that we can tap. I don't know now how that is going to work vis a vis them trying to give us assistance and then coming up with this situation now with Pedro Castle where they can't get all their money and all sorts of stuff is happening there. I don't know if we can have the same kind of relationship that we were trying to build.

But, I do know that we got agreement at that meeting for them to do a different approach to housing and funds would have been available. This is a source that government can tap because we contribute to Caribbean Development Bank. We are part of Caribbean Development Bank. I don't know what the factors are about the European situation. I do know that in 1993 we went to Brussels, the Minister for Tourism and I. We were told that because of our situation, our so-called per capita income, we couldn't qualify for these soft loans. That's sad because there are a lot of them out there as the Fourth Elected Member for George Town was pointing out yesterday. But that was one of the things they told us in Brussels.

One of the things I proposed to do was require first time home buyers to attend pre and post purchase counselling to assist them in making the right decisions, not to try and reach for a house which would be beyond their means. For instance, you know the people we are dealing with, and we know they can't afford a $200,000 four bedroom, three bathroom house. They can only afford an $85,000 house and still meet their needs. We would counsel them in that instance. I proposed that but did the National Team as it now exists do anything with it? No. They haven't done anything with those ideas.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: The Minister for Health is saying the National Team did. Yes, Tom and Truman killed it. Perhaps it was a good thing. God never does anything wrong.

I also feel that government could explore with the commercial class A banks ways to lend $1 million each at 1% above their average cost of funds. I believe we could get at least $10 million from that source. These are things the government could be doing.

The Minister for Education likes to say he is a banker, that he's conservative. Well, if he is he should be up and about trying to get this kind of discussion going. As I said, it is not something that you can force people to do because there are laws that we have to live by and it's not the money of the government of the Cayman Islands, it is people's money on deposit.

MOMENT OF INTERRUPTION—4.30 PM

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for just a moment? We have reached the hour of 4.30. Will you be finishing in a reasonable amount of time?

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I doubt it. I think we better finish when we come back next time, God willing.

The Speaker: I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this honourable House until Monday the 21st at 10.00 AM.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Monday, 21st June. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.30 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 21 JUNE 1999.

EDITED MONDAY
21 JUNE 1999
10.30 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Services, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item number 2 on today's Order Paper.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF
MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

The Speaker: We have no apologies.

Item number 3, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question number 39A stands in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 39A

No. 39A: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration to advise: (a) the terms of the employment contract of the Court Administrator and the date of expiry of the contract; (b) if a local understudy has been appointed; and (c) if there are plans to renew his contract upon expiry.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Mr. Speaker, whilst I am bound to answer questions in this Honourable House regarding the judiciary, the honourable Chief Justice is constitutionally responsible for Judicial Affairs, and he has therefore provided the following answer:

(a) The contract is for two years on similar terms as those for all other officers recruited overseas. The salary is at grade E in the new scales. The date of expiry of the contract is 3 October 2001.

(b) There has been no understudy specifically designated to the post, but the next most senior member of staff is the Clerk of the Courts, a Caymanian who works closely with the Courts Administrator and who has resumed her studies at the Cayman Islands Law School.

(c) It is considered too early to say whether or not the contract will be renewed upon expiry. There are specific plans to oversee and develop such as the expansion of the Court building, which has been designed to suit the needs of the Administration. The Chief Justice who is by the Constitution and the Law the person entrusted with the administration of justice throughout the Courts and for all matters in judicature will need to consider the matter at the appropriate time.

The Speaker: If there are no supplementaries, we will move on to question number 40A standing in the name of the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town.

QUESTION 40A

No. 40A: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture how the Ministry has enhanced the understanding of women at risk from domestic abuse, neglect and emotional trauma within the last year.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The Ministry has carried out several initiatives to enhance the understanding of women at risk from domestic abuse, neglect and emotional trauma. These initiatives include direct and indirect activities to and for the public, contributing to the enhanced understanding of the issues surrounding gender violence and include the following:

1) An in-depth panel discussion on Domestic Abuse (25 August). At this panel discussion, the cycle of abuse was discussed along with a clinical definition of abuse. Agencies dealing with the problem of domestic abuse presented details on their agency's role and the inter-agency relationships in dealing with domestic abuse. This forum brought out the responsibilities and limitations of each agency with 60 participants contributing to the discussions.

2) Liaison with Courts Office in preparation for development of a brochure on the Domestic Violence Law. The officer responsible for women met with the Courts Administrator to discuss what could be considered for inclusion in such a brochure. The final product is currently distributed through the Women's Resource Centre (among other venues).

3) A Contribution to 16 Days of Activism Campaign efforts and its newsletter. The Ministry's officer for Women was part of the panel during the BPW two-day conference entitled "Help Eliminate Domestic Violence" and the Ministry also submitted a written contribution to the 16 Days newsletter.

4) Support for the video production "Domestic Violence Exposed." The Ministry provided the group, "You Can Make A Difference" with a grant that was classed as a Gold Sponsorship of this video production due to be aired in September 1999. A copy of this video will be presented to the Women's Resource Centre for the Resource Library.

5) Disbursement of information from the Regional Tribunal on Violence against Women to local groups and persons on the Women's Resource Centre mailing list to pass on through their networks.

This information from the Regional Tribunal included excerpts of testimonies from women who attended, newspaper articles representing the publicity received by the Tribunal, the complement of the Tribunal members and the recommendations passed on from the Tribunal to governments around the region.

6) Survey of Community Activities regarding gender violence. This survey was aimed at assessing the level of community resources that were available in the campaign to eliminate gender violence, assess the awareness of community activities and the partnerships and networking that existed in the community. The results showed that while the priority of gender violence was high, many groups did not utilise the resources around them as efficiently as possible and that there was a need for enhanced networking. The presentation of the date to the groups provided a visual impact of the need for networking and sharing of resources.

7) Planning Meeting to tackle issues of Gender Violence in the community. This meeting was held to discuss the results of a sample survey of community resources relating to gender violence. The 25 representatives of 19 public and private sector organisations were briefed on the results of the survey and plans were made to undertake training in an effort to promote an understanding of the problem and to encourage greater networking among those who dealt with the issue of gender violence.

8) Legal Befrienders Clinic developed to expand to once a week Clinics at the WRC. The legal Befrienders Clinic offers free legal advice on a first-come, first-serve basis to victims of domestic abuse on issues relating to property, maintenance and immigration issues. The Clinics are held every Tuesday from 5pm to 7 p.m. at the Women's Resource Centre.

9) Telephone Line for Legal Befrienders also being finalised. A telephone line offering the same services as the walk-in clinics are in the final stages of being completed before a public launch. Telephone numbers for the lawyers involved are being compiled for the efficient running of the line. The line is intended to be operational every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m. and in off times a voice message will be available for callers with information on the Line.

For the past six months, the Ministry has had a full-time Programme Officer at the Women's Resource Centre and activities regarding gender violence are taken as a priority in terms of programming at the Women's Resource Centre.

The Ministry and its Women's Resource Centre intend to facilitate additional training on this issue as a part of its efforts to educate women and the community in general. The Ministry and the Women's Resource Centre not only intend to continue programming in this area, but we are also open to suggestions for particular programming ideas and to facilitate or support other Government or non-governmental agencies that take up the challenge to educate the women in our community to understand the risks resulting from domestic abuse, neglect and trauma.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I noticed from the answer the Honourable Minister gave that the efforts of the Ministry seem to have been concentrated in the area of domestic abuse. Can the Minister tell the House if any efforts were made to deal with the problems of neglect and emotional trauma and what these efforts entailed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, I am informed by my Women's Officer that the large majority if not all of the emotional trauma and neglect have been seen as having emanated from the cycle of domestic abuse. If the Member is aware of other specific needs in any other of the six districts where we need to direct our attention more in depth, we would be happy to accommodate him in so doing.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House what efforts are in place to maintain contact with the women who are identified as being at risk under any of the three areas named in the answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Because we are a fairly new entity with one staff only, what we have sought to do with the limited resources is to act mainly as a referral agency when it comes to that regard. There are already established government as well as non-governmental agencies endeavouring to do their best with various issues relating to women and men making it a gender issue. For example, with the Social Services Department, there is some overlapping if we would now seek to put programmes in place.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House what arrangements are made for those women who are at serious risk in cases where there is domestic abuse which would possibly culminate in bodily harm? How are these cases dealt with? Are the women removed from the physical surroundings where they become at risk?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. This is one of the areas where once we become aware of it (either through direct or indirect contact and/or information) the Social Services Department is notified. They have the requisite manpower, professionalism, and expertise to deal with it. It is handled under that arm of the Government, sir.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. With regard to number 8, Legal Befrienders Clinic, could the Honourable Minister say if victims of abuse are taking advantage of this free clinic and what is the normal turn out?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I believe I am correct in saying that within the past six months the Legal Befrienders Clinic has expanded from once a month to twice a month, to its current schedule of once a week.

The rapid expansion in such short space of time is reflected in the fact that since March of this year (when it was first expanded to twice a month), 30 persons have used the services. It is expected that this number will rise significantly with the inception of our telephone line from Cable & Wireless.

The Women's Resource Centre has also referred some 66 queries about the Legal Befrienders Clinic made by many victims of gender violence or their relatives or friends. Sixty-four of these queries were made by women, and two by men.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, we will move on to question number 41 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town.

QUESTION NO. 41

(Deferred)

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I crave the indulgence of the House to withdraw this question, sir, as it is my understanding that the answer may not be in the precincts at this time. Therefore, I would crave that the question be deferred possibly until Wednesday when the Minister will be in a better position to have the answer, sir.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder to that?

The Elected Member from North Side.

The motion is made and seconded that this question be deferred to a latter sitting. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: QUESTION 41 DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 42 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town.

QUESTION 42

No. 42: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Minister with responsibility for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture what provision does the Government have in place to ensure that single mothers can avail themselves of any training necessary to equip them for the world of work?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: In developing the positive contributive capacity of single mothers in our community, the Ministry first decided to focus on building the personal capacity of these women in order that they might be better equipped to deal with extra-personal matters.

As such, the Ministry has been focussing on enhancing their skills as parents, developing their own personal skills in the areas of self-esteem and self-worth. This is done via programming offered through a partnership with Cayman Against Substance Abuse (CASA) and focussed on enhancing single partner skills. This programme was quite successful and CASA has since reproduced its efforts initially in the district of West Bay.

This initial outreach to West Bay grew out of prior planning with the West Bay CoDAC. It is anticipated that these activities will eventually be carried out on all three Islands thereby enhancing accessibility to the training and reaching as many single parents as possible. In conjunction with the Women's Resource Centre (WRC), CASA also facilitated a seminar on Communicating with your Child that was primarily attended by single mothers. The Ministry is also arranging a two-day series of seminars focussing on self-esteem aimed particularly at women to be held on the 15th and 22nd of July.

The Ministry, through the WRC, also provides a computer and printer for community groups or individuals to use for activities such as resume writing and job application letters among other things.

By providing training to women to develop as good single parents and enhancing their own personal lives, this will then better equip them to contribute to our community in terms of a positive human resource contribution. The Ministry's main vehicle for public education and empowerment activities is the WRC and has had a full-time programme officer for six months and efforts are currently focussed on exploring the wide range of issues that affect women and families in our society. The WRC is open to other suggestions for particular programme structures or target areas, or to facilitate or support other government agencies or non-governmental organisations in any effort to empower single parents in our community.

This is currently the extent of the Ministry's provisions in ensuring that single mothers can avail themselves of any training necessary to equip them for the world of work.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town. Supplementary.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Minister tell the House whether the WRC is equipped to do any follow-up work with single mothers placed in job situations? Are any arrangements existing for counselling sessions or experience sharing sessions where such individuals can meet regularly, share experiences and encourage each other through camaraderie, experience sharing and talking out their problems?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: First of all, let me say that I believe that it is an excellent idea that the Member has put forward. As I am sure he appreciates, we have not been very long at the WRC and we have been trying to reach as many targets as possible. That, however, is not yet in place. I would hasten to add though, Mr. Speaker, that the Labour Department and the Social Services Department have some programmes in place that do to a small degree but there is still much left to be done in the specific area.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, could the House get an undertaking from the Minister that she will at her earliest convenience investigate into the possibility of establishing such a procedure and system so that these single mothers can derive moral support from the experiences and the encouragement they give each other these conditions and in such settings?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Mr. Speaker, indeed I would be delighted to give such an undertaking and I would also say, sir, that the Women's Officer and the Resource Officer just recently conducted a survey with all the existing services that are now being provided so that we could canvas what was there and not have to re-invent the wheel as it were.

The WRC staff is now looking at that data to see what we have available and any openings that we can afford, as soon as practical, once it would be beneficial to the gender in the Cayman Islands, I would be happy to give any such undertaking, sir.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, question number 43 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 43

No. 43: Miss Heather D. Bodden asked the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources what is the proposed completion date for the Bodden Town Post Office?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The Postmaster General, who is the Controlling Officer for this project, advises that according to the project architect at the Public Works Department, construction will begin on 15 June and the proposed date of completion is 15 November 1999.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister tell the House who was awarded the contract?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that it is a new company called, I think it is pronounced, Chewat.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, supplementary.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say how many new post office boxes will be in the new post office?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I would not be able to give a specific figure on this because we have found in all new post offices that although it is a new facility the demands have been so heavy that we have been constantly adding boxes to the facilities. But I would give the Second Elected Member from Bodden Town an undertaking that I will have that information for her as soon as it is available.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say with the completion of this new post office if additional staff will have to be hired?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, Bodden Town is probably one of the fastest growing districts. I am sure I am correct in saying that in order for us to properly facilitate that area, we will definitely have to put in the necessary staff to run the new facility.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

The Speaker: Before calling the next question, I would entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) & (8) that Question Time can go beyond the hour of 11 a.m. Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I so move the relevant Standing Order so that we can continue with the business of the House.

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) be suspended in order that Question Time can continue beyond 11:00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time continues.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 44 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 44

No. 44: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration were there any recent cases where a person and/or a company was found guilty of an offence by the Courts but no conviction was recorded?

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: In the Summary Court on 4 January 1999, guilty pleas were entered in the under mentioned matter and no convictions recorded after the learned Magistrate heard the facts and mitigation.

1) Hyatt Regency (Company): Six charges of employing a person without a work permit. Result: No conviction recorded absolute discharge pursuant to section 41 of the Penal Code (1999 Revision.) However, costs of $500 were awarded to the Crown.

2) In the Summary Court on 7 May 1999, two individuals appeared and entered guilty pleas to charges of working for E & H Cruises Ltd without work permits. After hearing the mitigation advanced on their behalf, the Court took the view that the omission to secure a work permit should not be attributable to the defendants and in the circumstances no conviction was recorded and the charges were dismissed.

3) In the Summary Court on 18 May 1999 E & H Cruises Ltd appeared before the Summary Court on several charges of employing persons without a work permit. The company entered guilty pleas in respect to five charges. However, after hearing the mitigation advanced on behalf of E & H Cruises Ltd, the Court declined to record convictions in respect of three of the charges. Convictions were recorded in respect to the remaining two charges and a fine of $500 on each charge imposed.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable Second Official Member explain what mitigation was advanced on behalf of E & H Cruises Ltd? What was explained so that the Court accepted that no conviction be recorded.

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: I think it should be said that it is not appropriate (as I am sure the House will understand) to go into the reasons of the Court. But in an effort to answer the question, it appears that the mitigation was to the effect that the company had done all that it could and that these were technical breaches in respect of the charges in relation to which Section 41 was evoked by the Court.

It may assist the House if I narrate Section 41 of the Penal Code, which is as follows: “Where in any trial before a court of summary jurisdiction the court thinks that the charge proved but is of the opinion that, having regard to the character, antecedents, age, health or mental condition of the accused, or to the trivial nature of the offence or to the extenuating circumstances in which the offence was committed, it is inexpedient to inflict any punishment, the court may, without proceeding to conviction make an order dismissing the charge.”

Thank you.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Am I understanding the Honourable Second Official Member correctly in that the defendants had done all they could to acquire a work permit?

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I think the background to the situation of this case is that the business had been taken over from another business. And I don't wish to give information that is incorrect so I am hesitant to state as categorical fact the position in relation to what the defenders may or may not have done, but I do understand that it was as a result of the mitigation which was offered at that time that the magistrate took the view that the charges should be dismissed—notwithstanding the fact that the offence was proved.

Again, it may help to understand, I think that my understanding of these offences is that they are offences of strict liability. And, therefore, all that requires to happen is that the act is done without any necessary intention of committing a criminal act on the part of the individual and therefore standing a certain state of facts the offence can be proved. But the degree of culpability of the individual would depend on the circumstances of the case. And clearly, on that day, understanding what had been said, Mr. Speaker, the magistrate took that view in relation to three of the charges but not in relation to the other two.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I believe I understand what the Honourable Second Official Member has just explained and perhaps the goodly gentleman could give another explanation to another question.

If I am charged with an offence and I plead guilty in the courts, but after the explanation proffered is understood by the judge, the judge then discharges the complaint against me, what right then does the judge have to talk about cost being awarded to the Crown if I am completely discharged?

The Speaker: Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David F. Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The particular provision talks about making an order, dismissing the charge so that the charges are dismissed. It goes on, however, that where any charge is dismissed under subsection (1), the court may order the accused person to pay the whole or any part of the cost of an incidental to the prosecution. So, there is discretion in the law.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, moving on to question 45 standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 45 (Deferred)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I understand from the Minister of Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture that she is not ready, and will not be ready until Wednesday with this question. I ask that we put this off until Wednesday.

The Speaker: So you are moving a motion that we defer it?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I move the motion that we defer the question.

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder?
The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: I second.

The Speaker: The motion has been made and seconded that this question be deferred to a later sitting. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question 45 has been deferred to a later sitting.

AGREED: QUESTION 45 DEFERRED TO A LATER SITTING.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 46 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 46

No. 46: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources what steps are being taken by the Department of Environmental Health to properly dispose of animal carcasses at the public dump?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The Department of Environmental Health is charged with the proper disposal of animal carcasses. Normal management practices allow for disposal of deceased animals in a landfill as long as they are promptly covered with waste and/or soil and if they do not pose a biohazard risk.

The disposal protocol at the George Town landfill for small animals, such as dogs and cats, is to either bury them or to incinerate them in the biomedical waste incinerator. Preference is given to incineration. Large animal carcasses cannot be accommodated in the incinerator and must be buried in the landfill and covered promptly.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: The first question I have for the Honourable Minister is whether or not there is in place at the present time a properly working or operating incinerator for that purpose? Is this an internationally accepted way of disposing of animals?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: To the best of my knowledge it is accepted internationally to deal with it this way and as far as I am concerned I think that it has been working well. I would also like to answer the other part of the question. We do have the new incinerator in place and it is working. If I may also add, the one for Cayman Brac is also in operation.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Could the Honourable Minister say if the reported fire at the dump is now under control?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is normal during the dry season that we have these fires and we have taken all of the necessary steps as we have done before to try to keep it under control. The department has been working very closely with the Fire Department and to the best of my knowledge it is under control. While we may still have some areas that may be smoking, we are working constantly on it to keep it under control.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Minister state if there have been any complaints . . . or if there is any thought regarding staff who work within those precincts constantly with regarding any risk from anything to staff because of the fire?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I did speak to the Member earlier. It is my understanding that we are taking all necessary precautions where there is risk to staff especially. It is my understanding that those who are directly exposed would be able to have a mask to put on their face if they had to be directly in there. But as I gave him the undertaking earlier this morning, I have called my ministry and we are doing a full investigation into it to see exactly where we are and I will pass this on to him as soon as it is available to me.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: In recent months I have received several complaints with regard to fire burning in the community — people burning their litter, garbage et cetera. Could the Honourable Minister say what is the policy of the Department of Environment Health on fire burning in the communities?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: If I recall, I think it is under the Towns and Communities Law or the Public Health Law, fires especially in town are not allowed. However, I know that there have been a lot of complaints especially in other districts where tourists have actually come across fires which in some cases as it was reported to me were fires which were normal in Cayman as far as our farmers are concerned.

They saw a pasture lit, and, of course, they panicked and called the department. However, we have tried our best to discourage this sort of burning of brush especially during the dry season because it is a hazard and we accept that and we will continue to do whatever we can to curtail it.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Member's Motions, continuation of debate on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99, Housing Initiative for Affordable Homes. The First Elected Member for West Bay continuing his winding-up address.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/99

HOUSING INITIATIVE FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr Speaker, thank you very much. I had better ask out of caution whether we need to suspend Standing Orders, today being Monday.

The Speaker: I do not really think so because there is nothing else upon the Order Paper.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

When we adjourned this honourable House on Friday, week before last, I was recapping the recommendations I had put forward. Before I complete the list, there are a few matters that have come to my attention, which I ought to deal with.

It has come to my attention that since I left Executive Council—I resigned from Executive Council—that this guaranteed scheme has been under some revision. We recall, Mr Speaker, that we made an amendment in Finance Committee in November last year. One of the things that has come to my attention is that in this revision the government has taken out the provision which I made and which was accepted by government for common-law relationships between a man and a woman to be able to qualify.

The removal of that provision is going to put several families in this country at a disadvantage. Now, that provision also exists in the Veterans Assistance which my Ministry also organised. That has not been removed and I am glad. But I hope that I am not speaking too quickly.

For the love of me, I cannot understand why the government is moving in this direction. All of a sudden I know that there are those in the government who claim to be born-again Christians. But do you know what I believe? They are going to Hell playing Christianity.

Mr Speaker, common-law relationships are an integral part of our social fabric. We know what the Bible says. We all study the Bible. We know that the Bible says it is a sin and all of us who believe what the Bible says understand that. However, for all that it is a part of life. I cannot understand why the Government wants now to remove an agreement that gave people an opportunity—legitimately and lawfully—to own a home.

Many people in those circumstances go on to legitimise the union after achieving some kind of economic stability. A great economic stability for a country and a family is to own a home. Why should government, with its holier-than-thou attitude deprive these people of a home?

I heard some talk about it when we were putting that into the agreement, but the Honourable Minister for Community Affairs—although she was not part and parcel of the National Team, as such—publicly she was a part of the National Team Government at any meeting that we had. I know that she is in the building, Mr Speaker, and I hope that she soon comes in to listen. I am not saying it was on her own initiative because the Honourable Minister of Tourism supposedly is also a born-again Christian.

Why in the world . . . I see them taking steps today that will do harm to the country for a few votes from their church. I have said that social needs exist and that we need to address them and take steps. The provision where common-law relationships were able to get homes . . . why in the world are they removing it? Can they go and force those couples to get married and then allow them to apply to get a home?

What I always look at is the fact that children usually come from these relationships. Why in the world would we want to deprive a child of owning a decent place to sleep, to study and to live and have his being? Because of someone's so-called Christianity?

I have a good understanding with my God. It is this: I know that I am a sinner and that He is my Saviour and that He can save me from eternal damnation if I give him the chance. What he knows about McKeeva Bush is that I am not a hypocrite. Hypocrisy is the worst sin of all. That is what exists in the government today if they are removing that provision from the agreement.

Why in the world would they take it out of the Housing Scheme, but leave it in the Veteran's Scheme? Is it because the Housing Scheme does not have that many people in one constituency, but the veterans situation does? Mr. Speaker, it is nothing but politics; pandering to the church to try to get a vote next time to get back into the Legislative Assembly, hopefully with the majority. But the Lord does not sleep nor slumber. And if there is any sin being committed, it is the sin of them taking away the chance for a child to own a home without having anything to do with the situation that he finds himself in. A child does not ask to be brought into this world and does not know how he comes.

Why would the government agree to something like this, Mr. Speaker? For what? The Bible says it is a sin, so it is a sin. There are things that the Bible says are sins that we can live without. But a man and a woman who have lived together for five to thirty years . . . we cannot do anything about that. That is nature and it exists in this country.

Do you know what is true about this country, Mr. Speaker? For too long there have been illegitimate children by prominent people in this country who would not own those children or help them do anything. That is the kind of social situation that we live in in this country. They are killers of society! Oh yes, but they do nothing for the illegitimate child. They don't even own the child. The child suffers. The child should not have to suffer because of this. I would hope that we could strike some sort of conscience—if there is any existing in those would-be Christians in the National Team front bench who have all run out of the Chamber now, Mr. Speaker—that they would change their minds and pray to God to let them live a decent Christian life and set the proper example.

I am really sick and tired of this thing of them getting up and hitting that . . . Do you know what, Mr. Speaker? There should be a rule in our Standing Orders that does not allow for them to get up here and talk about 'I am a Christian' when their lives do not portray that, when their actions do not portray that. How in the world can you do these kinds of social atrocities and say that you are a Christian? Being a Christian is a good thing, Mr. Speaker. The Lord knows what He is doing and He knows about every one of us. And He has the hairs of our head numbered and the grains of sand on the beach numbered. He is so knowledgeable. Oh, it pains my heart to hear them give their testimony—the bunch of hypocrites!

Anyway, Mr. Speaker, no amount of preaching by me this morning is going to change, that but I hope that the Minister who is responsible would take that and ask them to look at it again because it is only going to affect people in this country who deserve to have a home. Do you know what is true Mr. Speaker? Some people are reluctant to enter into a relationship of marriage until they find the level of compatibility that they are satisfied with. Mr. Speaker, you can say it is against the Bible. Yes, it is against the Bible. But it is a fact of life that we have lived with throughout eternity.

I go to church and I try to be a Christian. I am not saying here that I am because I am not a hypocrite, but I try and I fail. I am not going to fail in this regard to help my falling brother. Do they understand that that's what the Bible means about helping your falling brother? Worse, Mr. Speaker, from what I understand of this revision that they have done, it was possible for a sister and a brother to be able to qualify . . . they have taken that out too. And worse yet, it was possible for parents and children to qualify to get a loan but that was taken out also. So what are they leaving then? What are they leaving then for people to get?

Mr. Speaker, the Minister alone is not responsible - he is only one person. It is those hypocrites in the government!

Mr. Speaker, the President of the United Church of Christ in the United States said, "Let us not exclude those that God will remember to include." Perhaps the would-be Christians on the front bench of the government understand what that means.

Mr. Speaker, I had proposed the stamp duty waiver of up to $150,000. If it is found that a person is going to build a home (and this would not be low income but this is more in the middle and we provide for this) for $200,000—although outside the $150,000 mark—I would want this stamp duty to be waived on the $150,000. It was always what was intended. But because it was not written down, it was never carried out.

And so, Mr. Speaker, with your agreement I propose that we include that by an amendment to the motion. At this time, with your permission, in accordance with the provision of Standing Order 25 (1) and (2), we wish to move the following amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 3/99, by deleting the second resolve and substituting the following therefore: "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government's assistance with waiver of stamp duty on first time home owners be increased from $125,000 to $150,000."

To make that absolutely clear, Mr. Speaker, [by] taking out the $135,000 because that could have caused some confusion although the government accepted it but then it would leave room for bickering: "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT first time home owners who purchase homes valued up to $200,000 be allowed a waiver of stamp duty on the first $150,000."

The Speaker: My interpretation is that in accordance with Standing Order 25(4), an amendment can be moved at any time. Although you are in the winding-up, it says "prior to the Presiding Officer putting the question..." So, I will accept the amendment.

Do you have a seconder?

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I rise to second the motion, sir.

The Speaker: Do you wish to speak to it? Before going into that, will this necessitate all members having to speak to this amendment? If that could be avoided because we are actually in the winding-up, it is kind of an unusual procedure. If the debate could be waived because to me it is straightforward. If it is necessary that we suspend prior to taking the vote, I am prepared to do that.

Could we hear something from government?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I thank you for your indulgence but I will say a few words and speak on behalf of my colleagues and then perhaps government might respond.

The Speaker: But if it is necessary for a suspension I am prepared to take it. Please go ahead and move your amendment.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, again, I thank you for your indulgence. I know that you do have a concern about this matter of low-income housing and I do recall many discussions over the time I have been here with you about low-income housing and the need to help the needy. So, I do appreciate your indulgence this morning.

There is nothing much more for me to say on it except that was what was always intended but because it was not written down, it was never carried out. We do have those situations and more and more it is difficult for the middle income group — that group is [quickly] being eroded let's say in this country. We do need to offer them some assistance. The scheme provides for it and if we can do this much, I think it will be of great assistance to them.

Thank you on the amendment.

The Speaker: Does the government wish to reply on this amendment?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I would crave your indulgence, sir, because I think the government may not be quite fully aware of exactly what is happening simply because of the way the situation has occurred. I would ask, sir, if you would allow me just two minutes and I would quickly go through it to make sure that there is no misunderstanding because it is crucial in regard to the motion, sir.

The Speaker: Certainly! The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. As I understand it, Mr. Speaker, the newly added resolve by way of the amendment brought by the First Elected Member for West Bay is simply to allow for (and I will explain) . . . If we look at today's market in real estate and construction it is not too far removed to say that the average cost per square foot of a well-constructed home can easily run to $100 per square foot. So, if a first time home buyer is looking at a house, let us say that is 1,500 square feet, which is not a huge house but that could easily be the average two bedroom, two bathroom, carport house (or at some point in time, you could even get a three bedroom house out of that), but a person buying a house that size, which is the average size home, it is already into $150,000 before they are even talking about land.

A home about 1,500 square feet can easily cost $150,000 and you are not talking [about] furniture or the land. So when someone goes to buy a house, Mr. Speaker, while that person or young couple might be able to get to that point and not have to be disjointed in that they buy a house now and they have to be adding a year from now or whatever . . . if they get a house, when you add the land to it, it costs a little bit more than a $150,000 . . . then the whole intention of the amendment is to allow for the waiver to anyone who bought something up to $150,000 to be passed on to those persons also. So that they can get the waiver of stamp duty up to the $150,000 and then they would have to pay the stamp duty for whatever is over and above the $150,000.

If you notice in the amendment, it sets a ceiling of $200,000 so if somebody can buy a home of $250,000 or $300,000 then certainly we don't believe the waiver of stamp duty should come into play. But the difference between $150,000 and $200,000 in today's market—which I don't want to get into it but as far as I am concerned the government has helped to create the market to be like that . . . That is another matter again, sir. Certainly, there are some of us who believe that that waiver should be passed on to those first-time homeowners who are going to be purchasing a home that is a little bit more than $150,000.

I just want to make sure (because I don't think we had an opportunity to speak to the government about the motion) that they fully understand exactly what is happening. We are just hoping that the government will accept the amendment that has been put forward.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, in light of where we have reached with this motion when the amendment came . . . I am wondering whether it may not be prudent to even consider getting the amendment in writing, taking a short break as the Honourable Member who moved this is obviously well at the end of his speech and then we would have time.... Oh, the motion has not been circulated has it?

The Speaker: Does government have copies of the amendment?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: No, sir.

The Speaker: Could copies be made available to government?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we can do that quite quickly, and if you can take the break . . .

The Speaker: Well, this is an appropriate time for the suspension. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:42 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12:51 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. As we have reached the time for the luncheon break, I would suggest that we suspend at this time until 2:15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12:51 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:44 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, this amending motion is the second amendment to this motion and it seems to me that the first operative part (or the resolve clause as it is referred to here) seems to repeat but makes clear the first amendment.

The first amendment says, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government assistance with waiver of stamp duty on first-time homeowners be increased from $125,000 to $135,000 or $150,000."

The first part of the second amending motion says, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government assistance with waiver of stamp duty on first-time homeowners be increased $125,000 to $150,000." So it has removed the uncertainty and the confusion that existed with the first amendment as to whether it was $135,000 or $150,000 that the mover and the seconder meant. It seems that is on substantially on all fours except it is somewhat more precise with the amendment.

The new part really, which is the last operative part of the second amendment, states, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT first-time homeowners who purchase homes valued up to $200,000 be allowed a waiver of stamp duty on the first $150,000." It seems to me to be the only new part introduced here, and it is with that that I will deal.

Mr. Speaker, the several amendments to this motion show two things, sir: It shows that the amendments—especially this one coming right at the end of the winding-up—were not well thought out and have several dangerous defects that result many times from doing things in a hurry.

Firstly, the motion (this part that I am dealing with) . . . it seems to me that under this if a person comes to the island, is not a Caymanian, is here for a day, then he can apply and have the stamp duty of $150,000 waived. Now, that may not be the intent but let me read the motion again. I am just pointing out the dangers of doing things in a hurry. "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT first-time homeowners [it does not say Caymanian homeowners, Mr. Speaker] who purchase homes valued to $200,000 be allowed a waiver of stamp duty on the first $150,000."

So if this motion is passed, anybody here for a day or an hour arranging the loan from abroad can take the benefit of this and Caymanians will be paying for the stamp duty on that. That is the first flaw.

Secondly, this is put forward without any knowledge of what the impact of this will be on possibly creating a deficit in government's finances, in other words how much stamp duty will be lost through this. Nothing has been put forward in that respect.

Mr. Speaker, thirdly, there has been no identification of funds to cover those deficits that may arise. And it seems very clear that governments cannot just move on a ledger-type of situation such as this. You cannot just pull an amending motion out of your back pocket, so to speak, drop it in without knowing the impact of what it will be. Time must be taken to think about this; time must be taken to assess what the impact is. The government cannot in these circumstances support this last part of the motion.

This, I think, is very important because believe me if a government wants to get in trouble it acts on the spur of the moment without thinking through the measures that they are putting forward. This one is badly flawed in those three respects.

Fourthly, this is not in any way tied to a mortgage scheme. For example, a person who has a net worth of $2M or with an income of $500,000, if that person builds a house that is less than $200,000 then they get the benefit of the stamp duty. I don't believe that that should be the intent of this.

So it is not as if this is necessarily being granted to people who need to have this waiver of stamp duty—it applies to anybody whether they are Caymanians or not, whether they are under the mortgage scheme or not, and notwithstanding their net worth. You can build a 2,000 square foot house, for example, for $200,000 and you get the waiver of stamp duty. Then two years later you add another 500 or 1000 square foot on and you are up to a $300,000 – $400,000 house with, say, 3,000 square feet.

Now, I would like to also explain what I understand about another area that relates to this. A lot was said about depriving children of their rights and a lot was said about the ministers' religious beliefs. Quite frankly, Mr. Speaker—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I don't see how the Minister can address the point because that was not during the amendment. That was a separate part of the debate, and as far as I am concerned, they are two separate debates. We are debating a specific amendment, not to go into generalities, and our Standing Orders call for that. I draw that to your attention, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: I am listening carefully. This is a very confused situation. I called that to the attention of honourable members when I allowed the amendment. And, I asked that the debate be limited because although Standing Order 25(4) allows an amendment prior to the Presiding Officer putting the question, it was a very awkward and inappropriate time to bring it when the member was closing the debate.

I do not want to have a very long debate on this. If it is just a matter of an explanation I will allow a very short explanation. But I would ask the Honourable Minister of Education to not go into a long debate because the debate on the motion had been concluded as far as I am concerned.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Mr. Speaker, if I may address you on that point. If you will look, sir, at the second motion, second amendment the first operative part, it refers to waiver of stamp duty. Surely I have a right to deal with stamp duty on first-time homeowners, and that is what I am doing, sir. With respect, that is a part of the second amendment.

The Speaker: Please let me re-explain what I am saying: This motion went through the debate stage. No member wished to speak further, I called upon the honourable mover to exercise his right of reply, therefore, the opportunity for any member to debate had been finished.

He then moved the amendment, and I asked honourable members not to put this into a protracted debate. As far as I am concerned, the only thing that I am prepared to allow is a debate on the motion that we are talking about. If you want to make an explanation on a point, I will allow that—but briefly.

Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning, please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Mr. Speaker, all I would say, sir, it would be good if we could perhaps get all of the motions in this House somewhat briefer.

I am only dealing with the amendment, sir, and that is what I referred to it. If you look, sir, I have any right, with all due respect, on the second motion to deal with the waiver of stamp duty on first-time homeowners. That is what I am dealing with.

The Speaker: I am not arguing a point. I don't intend to get involved in that.

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: Yes sir.

The Speaker: But what I am asking is to make an explanation and make it very briefly. I am not going to allow every member of this house to re-debate something that was actually being moved on the winding-up of a debate—because each person had their opportunity to speak.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: [addressing the Fourth Elected Member of George Town] Let me deal with one Member at a time, please.

Honourable Minister for Education, have you understood what I am trying to get across?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand, sir, but I will stay fully within the second motion.

The Speaker: Thank you.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: And that has a very relevant section, which is the waiver of stamp duty, and that is what I would like to deal with, sir. Surely, I have every right on the amendment to the motion to speak within that amendment.

The Speaker: But I am asking you to please be as brief as possible. Please continue.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would just like to draw your attention to Standing Order 25 (4), and I will stay within the amendment as that refers, the relevant section being the waiver of stamp duty.

I would like to state that the Stamp Duty Law relating to natural love and affection in the relation to the waiver of stamp duty is set out in the Stamp Duty Law, 1998 (Revision) in the schedule thereto. It reads as follows: "There is a charge to duty in the sum of $50 in the case of (a) a conveyance or transfer expressed to be of a natural love and affection between a parent and a child or between spouses;" [There is no reference in this to a common-law spouse] (b) a conveyance or transfer expressed to be for natural love and affection between children—"

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker!

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Is it a point of order?

The Speaker: Please continue Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, sir. "or (b) a conveyance or transfer expressed to be for natural love and affection between children born of the same parent, or between a grandparent and a grandchild."

Mr. Speaker, going back the furthest I could find here was a 1995 Revision of that and that repeats the same thing on pages 18 and 19 under conveyance of the Stamp Duty Law. So, I submit that the natural love and affection section relating to stamp duty has not to my knowledge (at least, not from the research I have done back to that time) ever as I understand it included common-law spouses or partners, whatever that definition may be. So it is incorrect, therefore, to urge that stamp duty for natural love and affection can be waived between common-law partners or girlfriends or boyfriends or whatever they are called.

Mr. Speaker, the second point that I would like to also deal with is what has been referred to in relation to this amendment, the second part (and will also be relevant to the first part of the second motion) which relates to who is an eligible borrower for purposes of this amendment. It is clear that in the borrowing for purposes of this section relating to homeowners, that where there are two Caymanians, let's say, whether they are married or not married, or a common-law boyfriend or girlfriend, whatever, that a loan under the scheme can be taken out—

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, the minister is going on to make a debate that has already been completed. This is a new debate and I think that I made it clear that from what I am doing is trying to make that Member to answer what... [inaudible]

The Speaker: I will make a decision on that. What he is dealing with now is the amendment and I will allow him to continue.

Please continue Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Thank you, sir, I will be brief.

At present, if there is a Caymanian who has a partner, and that partner is Caymanian, they can jointly own property, jointly own a home and borrow for purposes of the Government Housing Scheme in relation to the amounts that are set out here. What appears to have not fallen within it is when there is a Caymanian with a non-Caymanian common-law partner.

But is the intent, or was the intent (because this was debated at considerable length) to allow a foreign partner who is here for a day to come in and to take—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order, sir.

POINT OF ORDER
(Point of Explanation)

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, the minister full well understands exactly what the intention of the amendment is. Let me explain, please, sir: The government voiced acceptance to the original motion. The original motion at no time mentioned the word "Caymanian" simply because in the original motion, it says: "AND WHEREAS in 1997 further initiatives were approved to assist first-time homeownership" and in the original—

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, may I take a point of order? Is this a point of order, or is the member on an explanation?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I am making a point of order, sir!

The Speaker: Well, try to get to it very quickly, please.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But I have to explain, Mr. Speaker—and the Minister is rude! I will explain (and I would have finished by now if the minister had left me alone) in the original motion . . . and I know why he is trying to stop it because he understands what is going to happen.

In the original motion, sir, where it reads (and I will read it as quickly as I can): “WHEREAS between 1992 and 1996 Government accepted a policy through the Ministry of Community Affairs for various housing needs, making it possible for a number of people to obtain homes;

“AND WHEREAS in 1997 further initiatives were approved to assist first-time homeownership . . . there is no mention in the motion about the word, Cayman, simply because the motion in itself accepts what has gone on—which is all to do with Caymanians. So when the amendments come without the word “Caymanian” being included in it, it simply presumes the same thing the original motion presumes. And the Minister knows that!

He is using his lawyerly knowledge to bend everything out of whack to make his twisted perverted argument. And he knows better!

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Mr. Speaker, I object!

I ask the member to withdraw what he has talked about my twisted perverted whatever was said there, please.

The Speaker: I would ask that you withdraw those statements, please.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, only for you.

The Speaker: Please do.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: But I am going to say in making the point of order sir, that the minister knows different. And he is simply using the Queen’s English to insinuate that the intention of the amendment was to make it wide-sweeping and that it is not the intention and he knows that, sir! So that is the point of order that I am making. Therefore he is misleading — that is what I am saying, sir.

The Speaker: That is not proper either, please withdraw misleading. I ask that you withdraw the word, misleading.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, whatever you say, sir. But do you understand what I am trying to make as a point of order sir, or do I have to go over it again?

The Speaker: I do understand exactly what you are saying.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I will withdraw whatever I have said once you understand whatever I am saying.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning. Let us try to get this over with.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I asked for a point of order, sir. Are you going to make a ruling, sir, one way or the other?

The Speaker: I do not see a point of order, you gave a point of explanation and that is about as far as I can go. You have explained your point.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, when I got up on a point of order, the minister had said that the amendment being brought forward includes anybody who comes in a day on the flight or whatever to purchase a home and he said it is dangerous and it would cause all kind of things when it comes to government’s lack of revenue if the Government were to accept this.

I am saying, sir, that it is obvious from the original motion accompanied with the amendment that that was not the intent. And the government accepted the original motion knowing what it meant. How can they now give a different interpretation after interpreting the original motion that way? That has to be a point of order, Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: You have given your explanation. Please continue, honourable minister.

Hon. Truman M. Boddin: Thank you, sir. And thanks for that ruling.

The second part of this second motion that we are dealing with appears to me (as it is read here) not to refer to people under the Government’s Homeowners Scheme. It doesn’t say so. That is a point that I am making. If this was meant to be specific to the homeowners scheme then it sure does not say so because in any event the homeowners scheme does not go up to $200,000 as it stands at present.

The government has been looking at certain (as we always do) revisions to this whole scheme as there are some areas that need to be looked at and which will assist.

I am not going to draw this down any more, Mr. Speaker. only to say that I would ask you in putting this motion that you take each of the four parts separately because the government can support . . . Well, Mr. Speaker, you have the discretion, as you know under the Standing Orders where a motion deals with several things; you can put each one separately.

That you deal with the first resolution, the operative part, that says, “BE IT NOW RESOLVED THAT the Government directs its attention to addressing the need for affordable housing in general in the country as a matter of priority.” That still remains, that the government can support. We think that is good.

The first part of the first amendment has now dropped away. The second part of the first amendment which says, “BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the waiver of stamp duty on first-time owners of house lots be increased from $25,000 to $35,000,” the government can support.

On the second amending motion, sir . . . this is something that is being done anyhow so the government has no problem in supporting this. The first part says, “BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government assistance with waiver of stamp duty on first-time homeowners be increased from $125,000 to $150,000," the government can accept.

But the last part, which would be the number four—and that is what we had asked you to put separately, sir—is, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT first-time homeowners who purchase home values up to $200,000 be allowed a waiver of stamp duty on the first $150,000," that we do not agree with that. We have set the reasons out. That the amending motion is ill thought out. No assessment has been made of the impact that this will have. How much loss would be incurred through doing this?

Thirdly, there has been no identification of other funds that would cover this loss of funds so there would be a certain amount of deficit that would accrue to government through it at the end of the year. It seems that it is a standalone motion for anyone regardless of what their income is and regardless of whether they are Caymanian or not as it is now drafted. And whether they are attached to the mortgage scheme or not. And as we know the government's mortgage scheme allows these stamp duty waivers and the mortgages and that sort of thing to people who are needy.

Whereas there is no restriction on this, and really the motion, we submit, would be dangerous to just accept not knowing especially what impact it would have. I would just point out, Mr. Speaker, that the mortgage scheme is always under review. This government has done a lot, . . . and when I say "this government," I mean this government—not the past government or the passed time of this government when the First Elected Member for West Bay was there. But we have done a lot as well to assist in this area. We are very much with this, and this late in the day with a motion that is so flawed, we submit, sir, that it should not be passed. It would be irresponsible of any government to accept such a motion.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, in times gone by when this government has seen fit to understand the intent of other private member's motions, they were quick to call for a recess if necessary and to make whatever they thought necessary in order to be able to accept the motion.

Now, as I explained a while ago, the amending motion that has been put forward was done in the same vein as the original motion. The Leader of Government business has chosen to make an interpretation of the motion which is completely opposite from its intention. In my opinion, the reason why he has chosen to do is because the government is not minded to accept the proposed amendment. So, as is his usual style, he conjures up words and interpretations that will confuse anyone—including people who have a little bit of sense. Obviously, no one has as much as he does but some of us have a little bit.

Mr. Speaker, while I am not the mover or the seconder of this amendment, I understand what its intention is. It was simply going in concert with the original motion and extending the intention of the original motion in this specific circumstance to allow people who would fall into the categories that were explained (although in a generic fashion in the original motion) to be able to deal with life a little better. All this motion is saying is that Caymanians who are attempting to purchase a home for the first time who find themselves not being able to find anything suitable under $150,000 but who would have difficulty in finding what is required in stamp duty for the full amount . . . it is asking for those Caymanians to be able to enjoy the same benefits of the Caymanian who is purchasing a home for $150,000 or less.

It is not extending itself to someone with vast fortunes. That is why there is a limit in it of $200,000. It is not extending itself to foreigners to may visit our shores and want to take advantage of a loophole in the law—nothing like that.

As I read in the original motion, where it says, "WHEREAS between 1992 and 1996 Government accepted a policy through the Ministry of Community Affairs for various housing needs, making it possible for a number of people to obtain homes . . ." this was referring to what is called the Government Guarantee Mortgage Scheme, Mr. Speaker, and that is the light in which the government accepted it and that is the light in which the amendment has continued.

Now, I am saying to the government that if it doesn't have a problem with what we are talking about why doesn't it suggest whatever amendments are necessary for them to accept it. But they are not going to do that because they don't want to accept the amendment as it is. But we cannot leave it as it is, Mr. Speaker. People will believe that the intention of the motion is to expand itself to where the Minister has gone. I don't know who is following him on this trip that he just made but I know certainly [that] I am not following him and I don't think the rest of the members on the backbench are following him on this trip. If they don't want to accept it because they have their own views about it then say so, but don't bend it out of shape when they know full well that that is not the intention of the motion.

Mr. Speaker, it limits itself and if the government had the view that they do not know how many people might find themselves falling into this category and as a result of not having any statistics or any records available at this present time, that they are afraid of the ramifications it might have when it comes to government's income from stamp duty, then all they had to do was to say, 'Can we review this and look at the statistics and see how many Caymanian first-time buyers fell into this category between $150,000 - $200,000 in the past to have some idea of what specifically negative impact it would have?' I could understand that but that is not what they are saying.

Now, we can contend that it is not a huge number of people, and if they want to prove it, then we are quite willing to sit and say, 'Ok, let us just not make a decision on it but we can find that out and then we can make a decision'. I don't have a problem with that. But I contend that the way they have gone about to argue against the motion is certainly not in line with the intention of the motion. I know that the Minister of Education knows better and he is talking about me withdrawing this and withdrawing that! What he must know is that I don't usually forget what he says. When he used the word, "dangerous" in his debate — I am not going to forget that and I will live to prove who is dangerous in this Legislative Assembly and I want him to remember that with his smile!

I will live to be able to prove who is most dangerous in this Legislative Assembly. But anyway . . . not to expand the argument beyond where you want it sir, I am saying that the government fully understands that the intention of the amendment is simply to allow Caymanian first-time homebuyers who are purchasing property valued at more than $150,000 but not exceeding $200,000 and they fall under this Government Guarantee Mortgage Scheme (as all others would have to fall under), once they fall into that category, sir, that they be allowed the same waiver of stamp duty on the $150,000 that people who are purchasing a house for $150,000 or less who fall under that scheme are being allowed. That is whole intention of the motion.

The government understands that sir. And with all of the arguments they have put forward, if they were minded to accept it then even if they contend with their vast knowledge of how you word a motion, that the motion is worded incorrectly then they could easily have it amended. If they don't propose to amend now that they understand what it is all about, then it is obvious that they don't want to accept the intention of the motion and all they had to do was to say that.

I believe that others who come behind me will explain it as well or better than I have. But I believe that the government now understands the intention of the motion and I believe they understood it from the beginning. But that is why they will get together and listen to the Minister of Education with his bent-up theories of how to counteract and bring an opposing argument when he knows full well what the intention is. But if he thinks that being able to prove that makes this country run any better or makes the people of this country any better off then he is sadly mistaken and that is how he has done it all along, sir.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I agree that this particular amendment was brought at an inconvenient time in the debate, and the fact that this motion has already been amended twice shows some lack of having thought this thing out from the very beginning. The fact is that this motion, which really sought in the very beginning to deal with the housing situation in this country, has ended up narrowly trying to attempt to deal with a very small part of the problem.

We know that any little alleviation of the problem in regard to housing in this country is better than no alleviation at all. However, we do not want to act in such a way as to give people the impression in fact that we are solving a problem when in fact this is not the case.

The real problem, the real need in this country is for people to be able to afford their land in their country and to be able to afford the construction of shelter in their country on their land. Obviously, any government or any opposition that cannot see that very low wages in this country is a part of the problem and very expensive prices on land is part of the problem does not really see the real solution to this particular dilemma that encompasses more than 100 - 200 people.

By the time they are making $4000 - $5000 a month to be able to qualify for a mortgage for $200,000 would be already considered an economic group that in time could solve the problem of finding housing accommodation for themselves. But this cannot be said to be the case for the majority of the people. Some 53% of the people living in this country are making a wage of $1,500 per month or less. The real big problem in this country is that people cannot qualify for bank mortgages in order to buy homes. The fact that the government is always being asked to make the concessions . . . well, we are not asking businesses to make the concessions. We are not asking real estate companies that are dealing in commissions of 5% - 10% when they sell these $200,000 homes. They will be making commissions between 5% - 10%. The fact that they are not making the concessions, the fact that there is no corporate responsibility, the fact that government has to give up in order to appease even the small amount of people to give people the impression somehow that we have the ability to solve the housing problem in this country is still something I believe that both the government and the opposition have to get involved in debating.

Now, in today's paper there is a letter in regard to substandard housing written by Miss Lucille Seymour. She makes a very interesting remark here. She says that we are a British Colony in fact, and that somehow Britain should be involved in assisting us by way of lending us money to be able to deal with the housing problems and a loan of $50M would help greatly. Now, what I want to say is that the people out there when I went and I said to them, "Do you feel that—

The Speaker: Could I ask you please to get back to the motion? We don't want a lengthy debate. I hate to interrupt you, but we are actually debating the amendment.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I know what I am debating. With all due respect, I am debating the amendment. The amendment does not exist by itself. The amendment is part of a concept of a problem and a solution to a problem. If you are just giving me a little bit more time...because I didn't get up here and start arguing with people and calling people names and different things. I am dealing with facts. So I think at least some tolerance should be shown to my position.

I am saying that basically the soundness of even looking at this amendment at this particular point as a solution to the problem is not borne out by my investigation and talking to people out there who are saying that their basic problem is that they cannot qualify for bank loans. There are some persons, of course, that are young professionals and we would like to see them get their homes too, like I said. But it is still not dealing with the problem. Government will lose revenue as a result of this amendment and this is something that the persons that are suggesting this amendment have to think about. If you give up something, you have to get something back. Who will that something come from? Will it come from these heightened duties that the consumer . . . that same person that still cannot afford to get to a mortgage. Will it come as an addition tax on those people? Will we have real estate companies more capable of selling as a result of this because now they can sell $200,000 homes, they can have these developments and some people will profit?

Government is used again to make the concession for other people's business profits. So the soundness of this suggestion or this amendment is not borne out when it is put up against the severity of the dilemma and the crises which exists in the housing market. This is an attempt to talk over the problem. This is an attempt by the First Elected Member of West Bay to cover up the fact that he was unable between 1992 and 1997 to tackle the real housing issues in this country.

The people must see that this is a ploy to get them thinking again that that particular member can deliver this particular need to them.

I just want to say, Mr. Speaker, that it is unfortunate that the member has had to amend this very important motion so many times; and that each time he tries to create somebody else as being the villain. He is always seems to be able, like Br'er Nancy, to excuse himself for the lack of adequate accommodation for people in the society today.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: There is an old African proverb that says, "When the elephants quarrel, the grass suffers." I guess you will know who the elephants are, and you will realise that according to this debate the "grass" is bound to suffer some more.

Mr. Speaker, I sit in amazement and I listen to members who want to form excuses not to support the amendments, talking about the motion is "flawed," "ill-conceived," "ill-timed," and people want to pray Br'er Nancy.

Mr. Speaker, sir anyone—any honourable member—who wants to support the motion can find reasons to support it or any one who wants not to support it could conjure up a thousand reasons not to support it.

I want to say that as the seconder of the motion, I don't for one moment believe that the First Member for West Bay is trying to play Br'er Nancy or is trying to exonerate himself for anything that he may not have been able to accomplish in the past, because no man is an island unto himself, Mr. Speaker.

I didn't hear the member get up in his tenure on Executive Council saying that he was a deliver. I hear him admitting that he has faults like anyone else. I think that it is a little farfetched and it shows the shallowness in people to come with those spurious forms of arguments now that they don't want to support the amendment. Mr. Speaker, where is the government going to get the money from? Those people who campaigned that duty should have been removed from food . . . that is the question they should ask themselves! That is the question they should ask themselves. When you take off something where you are going to get it from?

The fundamental question we have to ask ourselves as members of this Parliament if we are honest and forthright is: Are we concerned enough to address the lack of housing among certain elements of our population in this country at this time? If we are, Mr. Speaker, let us take it one step at a time.

We realise the limitations. That is why we have brought this amendment. The government cannot undertake to close the gap immediately in one step. So I think, Mr. Speaker, we are going about it in a sensible way by beginning to help those people who are most able to help themselves. As soon as we have dealt with them, that gives us the understanding of the numbers of those people who fall in the categories where they need the greatest assistance and will allow us the liberty and the opportunity to decide what steps, what sacrifices need to be taken to help them.

And we need to have the will do that. But if we procrastinate, if we point fingers, if we find fault at these kinds of amendments which are intended . . . And, Mr. Speaker, everybody knows—and God knows the Minister of Education, of all people, must know the intentions.

I don't know, Mr. Speaker. If you wouldn't call me out of order I would accuse that member of being mischievous because the Minister of Education knows that this motion was not intended to help anyone who came here for one hour exploit the system and get a house. He know that! He is an intelligent man. And I have seen him in situations like this (where he wanted compromise) take a break, consult with us and say, 'You know, if we amend it this way, it could be better'. He did that a couple days ago with a motion that is scheduled to come on this floor, a motion being moved by myself.

But do you know what, Mr. Speaker? It is political one-upmanship. The elephants are quarrelling and the grass is going to suffer.

I don't blame the government. They are playing out their hand because they are playing a little politics now that they have the support of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town and I don't blame them. This is the house of politics and I would do that do. But we have to be serious and sincere when we come on issues like this that have been crying out for years for a sincere and honest solution.

Mr. Speaker, I think as the seconder of the amendment that it is plain to all with any purity in their hearts; all who have any conscience what the amendment is trying to do. It's the eleventh hour. Are we going to leave this until it's too late and we have a society which can no longer be stable because a whole element has seen that they have no vested interested, no stake and no hope of getting any?

You know, we talk about we are Christians — well, it is time to stand in the gap. Those of us who are sincere, it is time for us to stand in the gap. It is that time now, Mr. Speaker. Let us see who is bold enough, sincere enough, and compassionate enough to stand in the gap.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? No other member wish to speak? Does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I really didn't expect that this amendment could have been debated by people who said they are educated—especially the two that stand against it in such a fashion.

I want to thank the seconder of the motion, that is, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the First Elected Member for George Town for their contribution because they hit the nail on the head. They have some understanding.

Mr. Speaker, a motion can come at any time in this honourable house under the rules, once the Presiding Officer agrees. This House was adjourned ten days ago for the government. In that time there were things that were brought to my attention to make the matter more clear and this is all the motion is attempting to do. It was my understanding . . . but I hear now that if a person is building a house for $135,000 that they can only get duty waived on $125,000. Sorry, they can get duty waived on $125,000 if the house is even $135,000. This has to be a mistake in the understanding of the authorities and this amendment is attempting to make it clear.

At the same time, we are going after $150,000 and we say if the person is building a $200,000 then he still gets the duty off the $150,000. Mr. Speaker, it is not hard for small people today, because people probably in more ways than one they shouldn't but it happens, they try to build a home and it ends up costing much more than they anticipated. It is the cost in this country. And it is the government with the help of the Fourth Elected Member from George Town—who is running out of the Chamber now like the Br'er Nancy he is.

I would just like to say, Mr. Speaker, that I have been called many things in my life but never have I been called Br'er Nancy because Br'er Nancy took from people. You see I did the other thing—I gave to people—and I continue to give to people like that parasite.

POINT OF ORDER

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, I think the member should withdraw that word, "parasite." I think on a point of order that is unparliamentary.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Both of you come! The two of you men come this afternoon—the Minister of Education and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

The Speaker: Please, let us get some order in this Chamber! I would ask that you withdraw that word, please.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I bend to your ruling. Maybe I should not have said "parasite."

The Speaker: Thank you.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: But, Mr. Speaker, the member knows about that.

[Addressing the member] You are going to tell me about my mother?

You see, Mr. Speaker, that is the type of person he is! He is a really . . . well, let's forget about it.

You see, it's people like him I have brought here and that is what we get. That is the kind of Br'er Nancy that I am talking about. If he wants to draw an analogy about Br'er Nancy that could be one when somebody helps you and turns around and does this.

Mr. Speaker, I know that I would always be questioned because . . . and it will get worse in this House as a member from this side attempts to do certain things. The closer you get to election here, the hotter it is going to get because it is politics that government plays.

The Minister of Education . . . first of all, I don't know why he came to answer rather than the Minister of Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Works. But I well understand because the Minister of Communications could not confuse the situation the way that the Minister of Education could. That is why the government purposely sent him out—to confuse!

The poor Minister for Communications could not do that, it is not in him. He does not have it in him to be able to confuse the situation, so they sent the Chief Confuser, the Chief Criticiser from government!

Mr. Speaker, if you have ten days you can say it is well thought out or not thought out. That is their business. But certainly, it is not a result of doing things in a hurry. As I said, we adjourned ten days ago and different people have come to me and said, 'This is the situation so you need to try to do something about it'. And I have always said I can't help everybody but we must try to help who we can and this would help somebody.

Now, for that minister to come here talking about someone coming here for a day and being able to get a house by what we are doing . . . Can you believe, Mr. Speaker, that a trained man would do that—knowing that we have a scheme that says Caymanians and this is part and parcel of that scheme? Would you believe that this country spent money on that kind of education?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: But I have education, though!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, the country paid for it!

Let me ask, Mr. Speaker, what is he doing with his education? Having an education, Mr. Speaker, is one thing but using it is another thing—and using your common sense is another thing.

The Speaker: Okay, may I ask that we get back to the amendment. Let's try to put this....

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I hope you are going to give me the chance now to reply to all that I have objected to, which was said before.

The Speaker: But let us do it in a proper manner, please.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: But what am I doing? I suppose they did everything properly and I am not doing it properly, right?

Anyway, let me do it how I can do it properly, you see.

Mr. Speaker, the excuse to say no to the motion or the amendment is to say that we are creating a deficit in government. We say that we have not identified the funds. You know, they have nerve. They really have nerve, Mr. Speaker, because they did not come and say how much funds this would be. They really have nerve, especially after sitting down planning and concocting and taking from here and taking from there—with the help of the Fourth Elected Member from George Town—to give themselves a fat raise when the other poor civil servants are not getting it.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, relevancy, point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Relevancy! Your head looks like relevance!

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order, please.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: He is talking about a raise—that surely has no relevance to the housing scheme.

The Speaker: Honourable members, let us try to wind-up this motion. It is a very important motion but let us try to bring it to a end.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: It is, Mr. Speaker, and I would not have had to get into answering this thing about identification of funds, because that is what I am doing, and the creation of a deficit if they had not raised it. This is what the debate is all about.

Now, I am not a lawyer educated by government funds. I am one of them that came out of a system that was created by a certain factor in this country where we could not even get to high school. And that mentality exists in certain places still. But I do know what I am talking about here. Yes, they could sit down and try to find if there are some funds available just as they did with the salary increase that the Fourth Elected Member from George Town helped them get. What did he call it? The Fourth Elected Member from George Town said the input would create a better output.

But they should sit down and see where they can save some money because I can tell you this, Mr. Speaker; they are wasting enough of it.

But no one said—and I certainly didn't as the mover—that we had to now find the funds today. The motion could have been passed and they could have sat down and looked at it and put it in next year's budget and made provision for then. Let us say they did not have the funds this year, but they could make provision for it next year.

You see, Mr. Speaker, the scheme does not go up to $200,000 but this is not carrying the scheme to $200,000. We amended the scheme to say up to $150,000. All we are saying is that if a home is costing $200,000 then we still waive the duty on the $150,000. It is not bringing the scheme as the two members tried to impute.

Where they got their education from I would really like to know—one from some German institution and next one from some Inn in London. It could not be the Inn that the lawyers go to—it must be a different Inn!

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: That honourable gentleman is misleading the house and he is imputing things that are untrue and unbecoming towards me. Whether he knows it or not, I am a qualified lawyer and anything other than that is untrue. And that is something he will never achieve—to be a qualified lawyer.

The Speaker: I beg you again, let us try to get through with this debate.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am answering the debate sir, which you allowed them to carry on.

The Speaker: With a few extra words.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: And I am trying to do it in the best way possible. I am sorry that I have to refer to them this way, but that is the way it is.

I am not telling any lies, he did go to some Inns of Court. Did he not go there and attend something? It could not have been that same Inns of Court that I hear about them going to London to train.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Mr. Speaker, would you please rule on this? He is totally misrepresenting and he is saying things that are untrue, and I wish him to please withdraw it. He might not have the sense to know what he is saying, but he should withdraw it.

The Speaker: Honourable Member, I overlooked it the first time. But what the minister is saying, he did go through and become a qualified lawyer—give him the benefit of the doubt.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: At the Inn.

The Speaker: He can state the exact name of it. I do not know myself, but please withdraw that he is not a qualified lawyer.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I did not say that—don't ask me to withdraw that.

I am saying, Mr. Speaker—and listen to what I am saying!

The Speaker: Don't shout at me! That is not necessary.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, you allowed these members to carry this debate this far, you know. Not me. Really!

The Speaker: What I am saying is, I want you to recognise the fact that he went to the proper institution where he was qualified.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I did not say that he was not qualified and I don't know if he is. Maybe he will have to do what the Fourth Elected Member from George Town had to do and produce his documents.

The Speaker: We are not going into that this afternoon. I am simply asking you to recognise that we recognise him in our community as a qualified attorney and that he did graduate, whether it was from the London Inn or whichever one of the Inns.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, please. You might recognise that, but I cannot because I don't know. He said he is. To me sometimes he doesn't act as a person that has that kind of qualification. He said he is, we accept it—so he is!

The Speaker: Are you prepared to stand here this afternoon and tell me that you do not know that he is a qualified lawyer, having a legal firm in the Cayman Islands?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, he has all that. But I don't know all that you are saying because I really don't know.

The Speaker: Let us not get into a real argument.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Right.

The Speaker: But I am saying that you know and I know, and I am asking you to recognise—and now!

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: You are asking me to do what, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Recognise that he is a qualified lawyer.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, please, I cannot do that. I know that he says he is. And if you say that he is then let the House say that he is but I am sorry—

The Speaker: I am asking the First Elected Member for West Bay to say it. Let us get this over with.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: What do you want me to do?

The Speaker: I want you to say that you know that he is a practising attorney in the Cayman Islands.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Oh, yes, I can say that I know he is a practising attorney in the Cayman Islands.

The Speaker: Thank you.

[Members' laughter, interjections and general uproar.]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Now, Mr. Speaker, the same Member—who is a practising attorney in the Cayman Islands—went on quite a bit concerning this matter of parents and children under the Land Law, I think it is the Stamp Duty Law.

Am I getting it right, Mr. Speaker? Is that the right one?

The Speaker: Stamp Duty, that is correct.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Right! Thank you.

We are not talking about the Stamp Duty Law. I am talking about joint ownership of property by a man and a woman who are living together in what we call a common-law relationship. It has nothing to do with what he was talking about. Completely lost, whether deliberately or otherwise, but certainly confusing the issue.

We are talking about two people who are not married but living together in a common-law relationship. What he tried to impute—and we have allowed him to do it in this House—is that all these other people can come in and get it because it is not about Caymanians. Certainly, Mr. Speaker, that is what the Government's Loan Scheme talks about. He knows that! That is why he came out to debate it, because as I said the poor Minister of Communications could not confuse the issue that way.

It is certainly very confusing. I don't know how they concoct such rubbish.

Now, Mr. Speaker, the Forth Elected Member for George Town loves to get up all the time to in whatever way he can try to embarrass me—but it is okay. He has come a long way but he still has a long way to go.

Mr. Speaker, this amendment, or this motion was never put across as the cure for the whole housing problem. I said that. We all said that in the very beginning. The matter of housing must be addressed by various angles. But I had to laugh about how people can speak out of two sides of their mouth. When that Fourth Elected Member for George Town started to talk about Government losing duty—when that is the member that got here by campaigning on taking duty off all foodstuff. I wonder how much duty he thought government would lose? That wasn't a point, I guess. People need to eat, but people also need a shelter and that is what I am trying to get.

That is true, Mr. Speaker. It is a pity that some people didn't work all their working life for wages.

Mr. Speaker, the truth is I should not have wasted the time to answer what I think is a lot of foolishness in this House this afternoon by those two members. I really apologise to the House for having to get up to deal with it because I guess they knew they could do that. They knew that we had done a good thing so it was good for them to create some mischief so they could get to spout off rubbish. That is exactly what they talked—rubbish!

Mr. Speaker, under this amendment, people who buy first homes up to $200,000 would save funds. If the amendment is accepted, this would allow a good many of them to qualify. If the government doesn't approve it, it will prohibit them from qualifying. That is all that will happen. If we do this it will help people, if we don't it will not help people. Mr. Speaker, I do my part and other members who support this motion are doing their part by trying to get that assistance.

Now, on this talk about real estate companies and people selling land and not being able to afford land, just let me say Mr. Speaker that the government and the Fourth Elected Member for George Town better understand (unless he is trying to create some sort of other country): the government cannot tell people how much to charge for their land. He doesn't understand that? The government cannot tell people how much to charge for their piece of land. How on the one hand you can argue that people must have their say, they must have their rights, but you are going to come here and say that government must be able to tell people how much to sell their land for.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, the Member is misleading the House.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Do you have a point of order?

Dr. Frank McField: The point is order is that the member is misleading the House. I did not say that the government should tell or anyone should tell people what to sell their land for.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: You said worse than that.

The Speaker: Please continue, First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Yes, thank you very much. You see it the same way I see it.

POINT OF ORDER

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I believe that this statement that the First Elected Member for West Bay is making can do damage to my creditabil-ity, and I would like you to see whether or not I did say that. Because if I did not say that, I believe that it is very unfair to my privilege here in the House to have that as what I did say, when I didn't say it.

The Speaker: If that is the wish of the House, we shall suspend and wait for the report of the Hansard. We shall suspend proceedings until we get it from the Hansard.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 4:01 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4:35 PM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. We have passed the hour of 4:30 p.m., I recommend to honourable members that we adjourn at this time. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable house.

Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this honourable house until Wednesday at 10:00 a.m.

The Speaker: Until Wednesday or Thursday? We had said that Wednesday would be set aside for meetings.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That's right! Thursday at 10:00 a.m.

The Speaker: Until Thursday at 10:00 am. I will put the question that this house do adjourn until—

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, please sir, if I may.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I don't have a problem sir, but I just want to make sure because I see some question on the faces of members. Is it that we have specific meetings set aside for Wednesday? Perhaps we could determine that first of all.

The Speaker: That was what we said in the Committee Room.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I understand what you are saying sir, but perhaps we could determine that first.

The Speaker: I am asking a question.

Maybe the Honourable Third Official Member might be able to give us an answer . . . or the Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

The Honourable Third Official Member.

POINT OF CLARIFICATION

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, just on a point of clarification, if you will permit that.

The Speaker: Certainly. Please proceed.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I think initially when we met two weeks ago it was agreed that there would be a general meeting amongst members to consider the OECD initiatives and for members to be brought up to date as to where we were. And it was agreed that because of the fact that there would be a delegation that would have gone to London last week that the meeting should have taken place this Wednesday.

But, it seems that circumstances have arisen that would suggest that it would be necessary for members of Executive Council to ask their colleagues on the back-bench to allow for proceedings of the House to be deferred probably until Thursday afternoon or Friday— not necessarily for the reason of briefing members on Wednesday morning, Mr. Speaker.

But just to point out for the benefit of members that the Cayman Islands has submitted its response to the OCED. The country that is leading the study review on the Cayman Islands, the person that is heading that study group will be arriving in the Cayman Islands on Wednesday afternoon. That person will be accompanied by a team to go through the report on a point by point basis.

This meeting could be somewhat extensive. It means having to go into the details . . . and the meetings are scheduled to run from Wednesday afternoon into Thursday because the team will be leaving on Thursday afternoon.

So it seems, Mr. Speaker, in light of what I have just said, and to ensure that members of Executive Council have the necessary time in order to prepare for the review, it would be better if this House could be adjourned. I have not consulted with my colleagues on Executive Council, but I know at some point in time this would be mentioned.

If you will just permit a minute to let me consult and see what time would be appropriate under the circumstances to resume.

The Speaker: Certainly.

[Pause]

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes, Mr. Speaker, it is being proposed that this House be adjourned until Friday morning at 10:00 a.m.

The Speaker: Would you then move the motion for Friday morning then please?

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Mr. Speaker, in light of the explanation that I have provided and the need for members of Executive Council to meet with the team that will be arriving from United States to discuss the Cayman Islands response to the OECD report, I move that this honourable house be adjourned until 10:00 a.m. on Friday morning.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, that being so—

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay, please continue.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: This matter before us now should be finished in five to ten minutes. Lets get this out of the way then we can adjourn until Friday. At least, we will get this motion out of the way.

The Speaker: Honourable members I have in my hand the transcript of Dr. Frank McField, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town of this afternoon. I do not have the [transcript of the] First Elected Member for West Bay, but the Fourth Elected Member goes on, "The real problem, the real need in this country is for people to be able to afford their land in their country and be able to afford the construction of shelters in their country on their land. Obviously, any government or any opposition that cannot see that very low wages in this country is a part of the problem, very expensive prices on land is part of the problem does not really see the real solution to this particular dilemma that encompasses more than 100 – 200 people. That by the time they are making $4,000 - $5,000 a month to be able to qualify for a mortgage of $200,000 would be already considered an economic group that in time could solve the problem of finding housing accommodations for themselves. But this cannot be said to be the case for the majority of the people.

"Some 53% of the people living in this country are making a wage of $1,500 per month or less. The real big problem in this country is that people cannot qualify for bank mortgages in order to buy homes. The fact that the government is always being asked to make the concessions . . . well, we are not asked in business to make the concessions. We are not asking real estate companies that are dealing in commissions of 5% - 10% when they sell these $200,000 homes, they will be making commissions between 5% - 10%..." and it goes on and on.

That is what he said. First Elected Member for West Bay, what are you alleging that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town said?

The First Elected Member from West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, what I said is that he was saying that somehow government must be able to tell these people what they are to sell their land for, and I said that government cannot tell people that.

If you rule, Mr. Speaker, that he did not say that government must tell people what to sell their land for, then I can withdraw what I said and I will do so at the same time if that is the allegation.

The Speaker: Well, I think what I have read clearly explains what he was attempting to get across and if you will withdraw that, it would solve the issue.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I will withdraw it, Mr. Speaker. I can't agree with you that it is clear, but I will withdraw it because government cannot tell people what to sell their land for. People own their land, they bought it or it was passed down from generation to generation or it was given to them somehow, but government cannot walk in and tell people what to sell their land for.

There have been so many interruptions that we have to put the question now to conclude the debate of the amendment. Perhaps out of an abundance of caution, we need a motion to continue after 4.30 p.m. also.

The Speaker: I would entertain a motion that we continue beyond the hour of 4.30 p.m.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 10(2)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move that we continue beyond 4:30 p.m. under such authority as the Standing Order permits.

The Speaker: The question is that the House do continue beyond 4:30 p.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House will continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 10(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: At this time I will put the question on the second amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 3/99. As requested, I will move the resolve sections in two questions, the first being, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government assistance for the waiver of stamp duty on the first-time homeowners be increased from $125,000 to $150,000." Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. That resolve section is passed.

AGREED: FIRST RESOLVE SECTION OF SECOND AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: The second resolve section is: "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT first-time homeowners who purchased homes valued up to $200,000 be allowed a waiver of stamp duty on the first $150,000." I should put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES and NOES.

The Speaker: I think the Noes have it.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can I have a division, Mr. Speaker?

The Speaker: Certainly!
Madam Clerk, would you call a division, please?

The Deputy Clerk:

DIVISION NO. 4/99

AYES: 6

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush
Mr. John Jefferson, Jr.
Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts
Mr. Linford A. Pierson
Mr. Roy Bodden

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks

The Deputy Clerk: The result of the division is six Ayes, ten Noes.

The Speaker: The Noes have it. The second resolve section has failed.

NEGATIVED BY MAJORITY: SECOND RESOLVE SECTION OF SECOND AMENDMENT TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/99 FAILED.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion—

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I don't think I completed the debate on the motion itself and I don't have long to finish but I do have some things to complete.

The Speaker: Please continue then. The First Elected Member for West Bay winding-up.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, we were recapping (as I said ten days ago) and I had gotten to the point this morning to make the amendment. Just to recap now, I believe that an innovative private and public sector partnership—government, banks and developers—can make a good dent in the housing problem.

The one thing that we have to do is get our people to make right decisions and not to reach for a home or a house which would be beyond their means. That is why I had proposed that they could do some counselling in that regard. Also, to help cut down the cost they need to put a system in place where an attorney could charge a flat rate for all legal work for the purchase, which would include the pre-qualification for the stamp duty waiver, legal work and everything pertaining to the sale.

[Inaudible interjection]

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, it is late in the day. I am not going to ask any more favours in this House! I like the one from the First Elected Member from George Town.

Mr. Speaker, I don't think that there are many more points that we can continue with this afternoon. I would just like to say in closing that I know a lot has been said, and we get heated and a lot of blame is laid. I can say yes, I was a Minister for a number of years. Some people in the lower income bracket got homes. But it needs to be addressed on a wider scale.

The proposals made, all those things we talked about, all those things I [spoke] about last Friday when we adjourned can help. What is needed now is for those new proposals to be explored, examined, and put in place by government if they have the will to do the things that they have been talking about.

One last point in closing, I want to say that in my time in this House since 1984, many times we have got into heated arguments. Never once in this House has anybody talked about anybody's parents. And I just want to say to you Mr. Speaker, as Presiding Officer, and I say to the Fourth Elected Member for George . . . and to talk about violence and what they are going to do to people in the House. I would like to say that these are the kinds of things that have destroyed better countries than these Cayman Islands.

I would caution, but I am not going stand by and see anybody talk about my parents in this House or anywhere else.

I would just like to say that we don't need that in this House at any time. It is a pity that we get to that point, but it seems that people have to get to that point to be able to make their point. If the Fourth Elected Member for George Town thinks he is man, just let him try. But I am saying to you as Presiding Officer, be cautious, be awake, see that these kinds of things don't happen. We don't need that in this country.

In all of my years here since 1984 and sitting in the gallery and looking before, I have never ever heard that in this House. Parents are near and dear to us, our children are near and dear to us.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order.

Dr. Frank McField: I believe that the member is using this opportunity to cast a bad light on me, and he called me a parasite and you asked him to withdraw that. I think that that is quite clear. That Member is the one who has started whatever problem we have in here.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker!

The Speaker: Please, both of you sit down.

We are here to conclude the debate on this motion and I don't want to hear any more about this. Please conclude your debate and let us take the vote.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I think I have made my point, and I will conclude my debate. But I will make it absolutely clear—please pay attention to this thing about parents!

Our family in this House — there is no need for that. We can bamboozle each other if that is what we choose. Leave our families leave our parents, our children out of it. They know! The records will show who started name-calling—I didn't!

I would like thank all members that supported this motion and all those that felt that the proposals we put forward will help everybody—those in lower and those in the middle income as well. I do hope that we can get to a place (after now) that the lower income group will be addressed. I will stress again that it needs to be addressed from various angles.

The Speaker: Before I put the question, I want to say this: I hold the responsibility as Presiding Officer here. I hold the position of the Chair in high esteem. As long as I hold this office I shall hold it to the best of my ability. I am not going to tolerate anyone in here attempting to do what is wrong. But for me to be able to control what comes out the mouth of each and every one of you . . . that is a physical impossibility. But I certainly will demand that order be kept in this House. With the help of our Standing Orders, Erskine May, and whatever other records I might have, I will do my very best to see that they are performed. I ask all honourable members to cooperate.

I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion No. 3/99 as twice amended. It has been amended several times and I think in order that it be clearly understood by members and the listening public, I shall put the resolve sections separately.

As I understand it, the first resolve section is: “BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government directs its attention to addressing the need for affordable housing in general in the country as a matter of priority.” Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, can we have a division?

The Speaker: Madam Clerk, would you call a division?

Mr. Roy Boddan: Mr. Speaker, there were no audible Noes, sir.

The Speaker: I thought it was unanimous. If the Fourth Elected Member for George Town wants a division, go ahead. Please call the division, Madam Clerk.

The Deputy Clerk:

The Speaker: The result: thirteen Ayes, no Noes. The first resolve section passed.

AGREED: BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT THE GOVERNMENT DIRECTS ITS ATTENTION TO ADDRESSING THE NEED FOR AFFORDABLE HOUSING IN GENERAL IN THE COUNTRY AS A MATTER OF PRIORITY.

The Speaker: The second resolve section combining the amendments to it is: "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the Government assistance with the waiver of stamp duty on the first-time homeowners be increased from $125,000 to $150,000." I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. That is unanimous.

AGREED: BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT THE GOVERNMENT ASSISTANCE WITH WAIVER OF STAMP DUTY ON FIRST-TIME HOMEOWNERS BE INCREASED FROM $125,000 TO $150,000.

The Speaker: The third resolve is; "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT the waiver of stamp duty on first-time owners on house lots be increased from $25,000 to $35,000." I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. And again that is unanimous. The motion is passed, the three resolve sections, the motion has passed.

AGREED: BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT THE WAIVER OF STAMP DUTY ON FIRST TIME OWNERS

OF HOUSE LOTS BE INCREASED FROM $25,000 TO $35,000.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 3/99 AS TWICE AMENDED PASSED

The Speaker: I will now entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House, I think it has been a long day.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this honourable House until this Friday at 10:00 a.m.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until Friday at 10:00 a.m. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have received apologies from the Third Official Member. He will be arriving later this morning. The Honourable Minister for Community Development, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture is off the island in Cayman Brac on official business, so she will be absent today. And, the Fourth Elected Member for West Bay is not feeling well and he will also be absent today.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question number 47 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 47

(Deferred)

NO. 74 Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable First Official Member with responsibility for Internal and External Affairs to state: (a) the number of complaints received against the police in the last twelve months; (b) the nature of such complaints; and (c) to outline to the House, how these complaints were handled.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I wonder if I could ask that this question be deferred. I believe later this morning I expect to have the answer, and if could continue on to the next in the meantime. . .

The Speaker: Certainly, we will go ahead and take that at the end of Question Time. Moving on to question 48 standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 48

No. 48: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable First Official Member with responsibility for Internal and External Affairs the number of Caymanian versus non-Caymanian

Civil Servants broken down into the two categories by department.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The total number of Cayman versus non-Caymanian civil servants is as follows: Total number of Caymanians: 1,419, total number of non-Caymanians: 981 This is broken down into two categories by departments as follows:

Department	Caymanian	Non-Caymanian

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Since approximately 1/3 of the civil servants are non-Caymanian, can the Honourable Member tell the House if the philosophy to Caymanianise the service still obtains, and, if so, what is being done to reduce the number of non-Caymanians?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, Mr. Speaker, that policy of Caymanisation of the service still remains in force and efforts are being made to localise wherever and whenever possible. Some of the efforts being made are in training. At the very start of service there is a course for clerical and executive officers for training in an effort to have them better equipped when they join the service and what we hope will offer better job satisfaction. That training is also extended in a number of departments in specialised areas such as immigration, police, prison, etc.

Mr. Speaker, the fact of the matter is that there are not enough born Caymanians that we can get in the service. And as this Honourable House knows, we compete with the private sector for people at all levels. But, yes, the policy remains in place to localise wherever and whenever possible.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The numbers in the Legal Affairs Department are very striking. I think it is six Caymanians and twenty-five non-Caymanians. Would the Honourable First Official Member say why young Caymanians who have been employed in this department are leaving, and what is the government doing to encourage young Caymanians in the legal profession?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In that particular field, I believe the answer why Caymanians are leaving—and indeed not even coming into the service in the first instance—is because the pay is lucrative in the private sector for that profession. Government has never been able and certainly cannot now compete in salaries and probably benefits to those people. Where salaries are considerably higher, naturally Caymanians are going to be looking in that direction. But I believe government is firmly committed through the Law School to training as many young Caymanians for the legal profession as is possible. But we cannot hold them if the salary in the private sector is more lucrative than it is in government.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: From the answer the Honourable Member has provided, I noticed that comparatively speaking there are some departments which have outstanding success in the ratio of hiring and retaining Caymanians versus non-Caymanians. For example, the Cayman Brac and Little Cayman Administration has 40 Caymanians to one non-Caymanian; the Customs Department has 88 Caymans to one non-Caymanian; the Fire Department has 144 Caymanians to one non-Caymanian; and the Public Works Department has 35 Caymanians to eight non-Caymanians.

Yet, there are other departments, for example, the Prison Department, which has 48 Caymanians to 59 non-Caymanians. Similarly, the Police Department has 158 Caymanians to 126 non-Caymanians. Given that there is a certain similarity between the Police, Customs, Fire and Prison Department, can the Honourable Member say why it is that the Customs and the Fire Department seem to have such a success in hiring and retaining Caymanians as against the Police and the Prison Department?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The Member is right. Some departments have excellent success, whereas others and what seem to be similar departments in terms of maybe salaries, have not had that success. He singled out Prison and Police. It is my personal view that neither of those departments has had a lot of success because young Caymanians are not keen on joining either of those two departments.

Although I will say that I believe we are seeing an improvement in the recruitment to the Royal Cayman Islands Police Service. We are getting more Caymanians applying. I believe the philosophy, I believe the way of the public education campaign to get people into the service has changed in recent times and we are seeing more applicants to the RCIP.

The Prison Service posts are advertised but sadly, we are not seeing a great deal of success. If we look at Education, for instance, we will see that there are 130 Caymanians to 252 non-Caymanians. I might be bold enough to say to that member, if he and I both had stayed in the teaching profession there would have been two more . . . but, unfortunately, the wastage is very high in the teaching service.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I can assure the honourable member that many a day I wished that I was still in the teaching profession. Believe you me, I think I would fare much better. At least I was in control in those situations, I cannot say that about where I am now.

Mr. Speaker, from time to time we have mooted the business of a cadet corp. I know this is not entirely within the honourable member's ambit because it would have involved some collaboration with the schools and the Ministry of Education. I wonder if the honourable member could say whether he thinks this is something that could be pursued with a view to interest more young Caymanians possibly in the Police and also the Prison Service.

The Speaker: This is asking for an opinion but if the honourable member wishes to answer, he may. The Honourable First Official Member.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, not an opinion so much, sir. We discussed it here before and I think honourable members accepted it—the government accepted that they would look into it. I am asking the honourable member now to say whether he knows of anything that has been done to follow-up on that.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes. Honourable members will remember that during a meeting of Finance Committee earlier this year this very question was raised. The Commissioner gave that undertaking to me, and I to the House. While it is still in the embryonic stages, it is being worked on. Perhaps, if we can have some success in this area it may be something that can be looked at, maybe in a little different form, but a similar sort of thing for recruits to the prison service.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just following up on the comparisons of numbers with Caymanians and non-Caymanians. If we look in three specific areas, that is the Health Services Department, where we see a 195 Caymanians and 256 non-Caymanians; and we look at the Social Services Department where we see 39 Caymanians and 33 non-Caymanians; and then we look in the Education Department as has been discussed before, there are 130 Caymanians and 252 non-Caymanians. I chose those three specific areas because I am supposing that in many of the positions the training is specialised. We have discussed this in Finance Committee and at other occasions when we talked about training, succession planning and all of that.

I am wondering if the Honourable First Official Member could simply give an undertaking via his Personnel Department to look into these specific areas to see if there are no better incentives that can be brought together to attract Caymanians. While we have talked about it, I do not believe that there has been enough pointed effort in that direction. I personally believe that if we had specific incentives for individuals and career paths for Caymanians that we could entice and sort of gather more interest to have more numbers coming into those three areas specifically.

So my question is asking for an undertaking in that area.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, I will be quite happy to give such an undertaking. I would like to say that the Education Council over the years (and I believe it is still the case) has offered a more attractive scholarship for training in the area of teaching. I believe it may be extended to Social Services. I stand to be corrected. I am not positive on that, but certainly in the area of teaching in an effort to encourage Caymanians to pursue. But, yes, I take the point that the honourable member has made and I will be more than happy to pursue it.

I should say that what the member does know is that in the case of the Health Services Department, in terms of the Administrator and the Chief Nursing Officer, they are both Caymanians and I think that shows that Caymanians can aspire and can succeed to the top. I would like to see more of this happening.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may just follow-up.

The Speaker: There will be two additional supplementaries.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This is going to be my last, sir, so have no fear. Thank you.

I heard what the honourable member has said, and I quite understand. I just want to make sure that the commitment that I was asking for will extend to not just the tertiary education level but actually being placed and being able to see light at the end of the tunnel in a career. So while I appreciate the answer, I am only saying that I was extending it a bit further and that is what I am asking. I do appreciate that it will take collaboration between the departments and the Personnel Department but I think if some sort of pointed effort could be made we might be able to attract more Caymanians.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, I took that aspect of it on board. I only elaborated on one point but, yes, I do take that on board, and I give that commitment.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the Honourable First Official Member would say if the government has in place any career guidance for young Caymanians going overseas on scholarships in order to help them choose careers that are most needed in the civil service. We tend to have ten or fifteen doing accounting and others doing nothing in positions that are needed in the civil service to be filled by Caymanians.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, there is career guidance counselling in the schools, as well as by the Education Council, and by the Secretariat itself. I am not totally familiar with the details of the Education Council's career guidance being offered, but it is my understanding that, yes, it is being offered. I certainly take the point that the honourable member has raised, and I have noted the same thing—that we can get ten accountants but no teachers or no social workers or a host of other professions we are short of.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I knew you said it was just two more supplementaries but I wonder if the Honourable First Official Member would undertake to discuss with the Minister of Education as to whether the career guidance particulars could be shown to Members of Parliament.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I will be quite happy to discuss the matter with the Minister of Education and ask that the career guidance notes be shared with this honourable House.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 49, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 49

No. 49: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable First Official Member with responsibility for Internal and External Affairs what system exists at Northward Prison to alert those in the immediate vicinity of the Prison that there is an escapee from the Prison?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: At present, no system exists at Northward Prison to alert those in the immediate vicinity of the Prison that there is an escapee or escapees from the Prison. The Director of the Prison has located a company that can supply and install such a system.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable member tell the House what would be the cost of such a system and when can we expect that it will be installed? I have received a number of queries and concerns from constituents in the immediate vicinity, and there are at least two members in this House who live in what I would call in the immediate environs of the Prison who are also concerned that there is no such system.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The cost of purchasing and installing of the system is in the region of C$16,000.

On the question of when can it be expected, let me answer that with a statement: The Director of Prisons has included in his last estimate for the budget this year an amount for it. Unfortunately, it did not make it all the way to the Finance Committee and I am sure the member wants that clarified. We are assured by the company that within 90 days of ordering the system can be up and running.

The honourable member knows that I am not a member of the Finance Committee and so we are going to need his assistance and the assistance of all members here for it. It's a small amount but we need the funds to have it installed.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I thank the honourable member for his explanation, and I take this opportunity to say that the reason why the funds were not forthcoming was that the request was taken out before it came to the Finance Committee. I can assure the honourable member that I will personally lobby my colleagues on the Finance Committee when the request is made to the Finance Committee to see that this need is addressed.

Mr. Speaker, I would just ask the honourable member for an undertaking that as and when such a system is in place, he uses his usual efficiency to inform the community that the system is in place and to describe to them as vividly as possibly what kind of signal they may expect, so that when they hear the signal they can be alerted as they have expressed in their concerns.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: To add to an earlier point, I just want to assure the honourable member that I am working now on a request to put forward to Executive Council and then to the Finance Committee for supplementary funding for this. Once the system has been purchased and put in place, a press release will be made to advise the public of it. In anticipation of getting the system, the Prison Director is now working out an arrangement for a testing time so that residents can be alerted in advance that at, say, 10:00 am on a Wednesday it will be tested and people can be listening for it so that they will know what to listen for should we actually have an escape.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, moving on to question number 50 standing in the name of the First Elected Member from George Town.

QUESTION 50

No. 50: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs what training does a newly recruited Prison Officer undergo when hired at Her Majesty's Northward Prison?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: A newly recruited Prison Officer undergoes the basic required training from the Prison's Training syllabus. This is an eight-week training course which includes 47 topics covering such areas as the authority of the Prison Officer, Drug Awareness, Escort Duties, Assessment and Report Writing, Familiarisation with relevant laws, Emergency Plans and Interpersonal Skills.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: Supplementary, the First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. In a recent report that was made public, I recall seeing where one of the issues was that of training. Could the Honourable First Official Member comment as to any lack of this within the system at present?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Mr. Speaker, that particular comment that resulted from the report was a little bit surprising even though I take the point that you can never over-train an organisation or I don't believe we can. The writer of that report has been responsible and has personally conducted training courses at all levels in the prison for the last six years and this is done three or four times a year. No later than yesterday, there was a communication from him advising of training to be done for two groups of prison officers and it is being planned in the UK later this year.

I made the point in the press release [which] followed that report that the Director of Prisons happened to be overseas on a course especially for prison directors, prison governors, etcetera. This particular course, the basic training course, is run at least once a year. It depends on the intake of recruits and if persons are recruited more than once a year then it will be run more than once a year. I am not going to stand here and say that we cannot offer more training, I think we can. And as long as there are funds available and the will for it, and I believe that there is a will for continued training and I believe there is the support in this House for funding for training, then I believe we can do more. But it would be wrong to give the public the impression that prison officers get absolutely no training or very little training and are very much under-trained.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Obviously, then there is something wrong. So that I may be very clear in my mind from what the Honourable First Official Member has answered, can he state if this individual who is responsible for training—does this individual also determine what training is done? Or does that person simply conduct that training? Because if the person simply conducts the training, then the question is who decides what is sufficient and what is appropriate. Perhaps we can get that cleared up first of all then we either have to move on or it stops right there.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Perhaps if I use the word, responsible for training, referring to the Overseas Territory Prison Reform Co-ordinator. Maybe it was a wrong choice of words. He is Her Majesty's Prison Reform Co-ordinator for the Overseas Territories in the Caribbean. He is assigned to visit the prisons in the overseas territories and as a former prison governor he is ideally suited, having come up through the ropes, to not only give advice on training but to actually undertake training. So to say that he is responsible for training maybe is not strictly the case. He is tasked with looking at training and assisting where possible.

The fact of the matter is that he assisted the Cayman Islands Government in the recruitment of a UK Officer for the prison not too long ago. His duties among others will be to undertake the issue or the matter of training, that is, to look at what is needed in conjunction or in collaboration with the Prison Director and advise on training. He is now in the process of doing this. But in the meantime, the Prison Reform Co-ordinator advises on training both locally and overseas and he does actually take part and carries out training courses when he is here and has sufficient time for this.

I believe, the Director of Prisons will agree that he has done an excellent job and he continues whenever possible to assist in training.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable First Official Member say if this training that is given to new recruits is standard training that has been the case over the years or how long ago was it developed to the point where this is what is accepted as sufficient initial training? Or how does it vary from what used to be done in the past, if indeed it does?

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23(7) & (8)

The Speaker: Before calling on the Honourable First Official Member, I would appreciate a motion to suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) that Question Time can go beyond 11:00 a.m. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Environment, Communications and Works.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I so move that the relevant Standing Order be suspended that we can continue with the business of the House.

The Speaker: The question is that we suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) that Question Time can continue beyond 11:00 a.m. I shall put the question. I shall now put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question Time shall continue.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ALLOW QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The training syllabus that I referred to in the substantive answer is a document that has been in effect at the prison for several years. It goes back at least ten to twelve years. Its content is reviewed on an annual basis and the Prison Reform Co-ordinator, of course, has also had input into changing and improving where necessary. But I suppose I could say that there has been a syllabus there for training for a long time but it is under annual review.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries. The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am quite certain that the Honourable First Official Member is aware of the recent prison escape. On review of the events which transpired to allow for this to have happen, can the Honourable First Official Member say if any issue has been identified with this escape which calls for certain types of additional training in certain areas for the staff at the prison?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: There were no issues identified as a result of that escape which called for additional training. The matter is, in fact, a disciplinary one and that is being dealt with.

The Speaker: Any further supplementaries? No further supplementaries, we shall return to question number 47, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 47

No. 47: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable First Official Member with responsibility for Internal and External Affairs to state (a) the number of complaints received against the police in the last twelve months; (b) the nature of such complaints; and (c) to outline to the House, how these complaints were handled.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: There were 26 complaints against the Police for the period 1 June 1998 to 31 May 1999. The nature of these complaints was as follows:

Assault by Police during an arrest	6
Discourtesy, threats or unfairness during the investigation of accidents, traffic offences or disputes	6
Lack of action by Police following a complaint of assault	2
Failure by officers to produce identification	1
Harassment in respect of traffic offences	1
Aggravation of a medical condition as a result of a search	1
Excessive force during the breaking up of an affray	1
Threats by an off-duty Police officer	1
Malicious searching for drugs following a traffic stop	1
Inconsiderate behaviour and verbal abuse following an arrest for DWI	1
Improper procedures when a juvenile cyclist was stopped for riding without lights	1
Unlawful arrest and assault	1
Improper personal intimate search and improper remarks	1
Inadequate investigation of a traffic accident and failure to effect an arrest for DWI	1
Improper stop and search for drugs and unlawful arrest for resisting a search.	1
Total:	26

(b) The complaints were, or are being, fully investigated by the Police Complaints and Discipline Department, which now comprises an experienced Inspector and two Sergeants. Of the 26 complaints received four were substantiated; ten were unsubstantiated; and eleven are still under investigation.

In the four substantiated cases, letters of apology were sent to the complainants and the Officers concerned were seen by their Chief Superintendent and either given suitable advice and guidance or admonished.

In the ten unsubstantiated cases, letters of explanation were sent to the complainants giving reasons why the complaints were unsubstantiated.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Member tell the House which four complaints were substantiated?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: In three of the instances, it is my understanding that substantiated cases were improper procedures when a juvenile cyclist was stopped for riding without lights, failure by officers to produce identification and, in one instance, discourtesy, threats or unfairness during the investigation of accidents, traffic offences or disputes. I don't seem to have the fourth one [but] I can provide that in writing if necessary.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I thank the honourable member but really providing that in writing is not absolutely necessary, sir. Mr. Speaker, can the honourable member say if there is a particular format for persons to follow when reporting complaints against the police? Is there is a form provided that the complainant has to fill out or a questionnaire they have to answer? or is it that the complainant has to submit a statement or a letter or some kind of documentation of the complaint?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: It is my understanding that it is dealt with in one of two ways: either the complainant will write to the Commissioner directly, who will then pass it to the Complaints and Discipline Department; or there are instances where persons may not be able to do this or would prefer to do it in person and they will come in and a member of that department will take their statement verbatim from them.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member from Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I thank the honourable member for that answer and my reason for asking about this is that I have noticed from complaints of persons coming to myself and probably other honourable members as well, that sometimes our people have difficulty articulating accurately what happened, particularly in instances where they are required to write it down. There is a difficulty in expressing the facts correctly and in being precise.

So I am asking the honourable member if some consideration couldn't be given to arriving at some kind of format or form where a person who has a complaint against the Police can take this form and the answers for the right part would be in short answer time. And, if the receiving authorities decided that further and more detail examination is to be given then the persons could then be invited to come in and do an interview type. And that, Mr. Speaker, I am suggesting because it would serve two purposes: it would enable the receiving authorities to screen for frivolous complaints; and it would also allow them the opportunity in the event that they decided that a complaint is serious enough to warrant further investigation go into detail and get as accurate an account as they possible can by they, themselves doing the interview.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I think the honourable member's suggestion is a good one and I will ask that this be taken on board. I think this will help members of the public who might be a little bit intimidated lodging complaints against police officers. This is why we have a department set up specifically for this person to try to avoid intimidation but I take his point and will ask that this be done.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the Honourable First Official Member say if during the course of receiving and investigating these complaints that department has identified any lack of (for lack of a better word) interpersonal skills on the part of any of the officers which may require some additional training to be able to deal with the public in a better fashion? If that is the case what is being done regarding that situation?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, this has come to the forefront that there is a definite lack of interpersonal skills on occasions. This has been brought to the attention of the Training Department of the RCIP with a view to improving this.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: On occasion, some of us have had complaints from members of the public whereby on being arrested and giving bail on their own volition, they have been made to report back to the Police Station on several different occasions before being given any answers with regard to charges or no charges. It seems like the time span is excessive.

I am wondering if the Honourable First Official Member could comment on whether this is accepted that this is the case and something is being done about it or whether this is something that the public will have to continue to live with?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, I understand that at least in one case this was a query that was looked into. It appeared that a person who had been arrested and was on bail was being called on to report for what appeared to be an excessively long period of time.

In many instances because of our system and the fact that the charges are forwarded to government's legal department, there is a period of time that might seem long to the individual who has the case hanging over his head but it is very difficult to shorten that. I will, however, raise the matter with the Commissioner at our weekly briefing in an effort to have that looked at and see if there is anything that can be done about it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The reason why I asked that question is because as the Honourable First Official Member is quite aware perception becomes reality at times. There could be a perception that this method is being used by some members of the police simply perhaps not to harass individuals but just to cause them additional headaches, simply because the police have the ability to do this. I am not saying this is the case, I only bring it to the Honourable First Official Member's attention to ensure that the relevant department ensures that this is not the case as there are some members of the public who firmly believe that this is the case. If it is appearing to be that way then something needs to be done to quell that thought in the minds of the public.

So perhaps to make sure that it becomes a question, if the Honourable First Official Member would look into that to ensure that this is not a situation that is allowed either to continue or to happen or to occur.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I alluded earlier to an instance where this was apparent or where the perception of this was there and this was in fact investigated. So, yes, this is something that RCIP is aware of.

I should say that perception is often far afield from reality as the honourable member will know, and the process is one that I will not encroach on my honourable colleague's territory, the Honourable Second Official Member, because he knows full well the process for it to go through. But suffice it to say that I will raise it with the Commissioner of Police and I am sure without committing my colleague that he will have a look at the system from the legal department now that it has been raised in this forum.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? It not that concludes Question Time. This might be a convenient time to take the morning break before we go into Private Member's Motions. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11:20 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 11:54 AM

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Item number 4 on today's Order Paper, Other Business, Private Members' Motions, Private Member's Motion No. 23/99, Vesting of Crown Land. The First Elected Member for George Town.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 23/99

VESTING OF CROWN LAND

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 23/99 entitled Vesting of Crown Land.

The motion reads: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT as required under the Governor (Vesting of Lands) Law (Cap 1), (1998 Revision) the Government take the necessary steps to vest that parcel of Crown Land shown on the Land Register as West Bay Beach South, Block 12C, Parcel 374 in the Port Authority of the Cayman Islands."

The Speaker: Seconder? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 23/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Does the mover wish to speak to it? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: This specific parcel of land has been in the forefront before. Questions have been raised about it and now it has come to the point where some of us feel that certain actions need to be taken.

The parcel of land in question is Crown Land and it is zoned Public Open Space. It is located within the Safe-Haven area and it adjoins the main canal accessing the North South on what I call the southeastern side of the property. At present, it is directly adjoining the canal and there are a few boats that are able to tie up along side of the canal of the property. But the position that we are taking here is that the government is not in the business of developing such types of property to its maximum usage for the public and I will explain that as I go on. Thus we are asking for it to be vested with the Port Authority which is in that business.

Now, I will go through a list of reasoning to try to justify the situation. First of all, anyone who checks with the Planning Department will readily discover that that department has had many, many complaints from individual canal owners along the West Bay peninsula who are subjected to people who own boats but don't have anywhere to leave the boats using the various canals because they can do no better. The people we are talking about mostly, sir, are people who engage in activities in the North Sound mostly on a commercial basis, but I guess by now we can even add a few private boatowners to that situation.

So, what we have is a situation where there really is no place for many of these people to properly tie up and have facilities that are necessary for their operations. You will find, for instance, the Cayman Island Yacht Club. Perhaps that property will take the position that they have the facilities and the necessary amenities. But there is a difference, and this is not suggesting any arm of government compete with private enterprise but there is a difference in what we are saying, sir. Because the piece of property was vested back with the Crown for the said purpose that I am talking about now and it is the people's property so we are saying that it should be developed in such a way to maximise its usage by the people.

If one were to visit the property as it stands now, there is an area where individuals can launch their boats and outside of that it is basically just reclaimed property with the canal being bulk-headed and nothing more.

Now, one of the very prime reasons why we are bringing the motion (not that it is the only reason) is this: For a long time, many of us have had concerns about the increased activity in the North Sound by boats used in a commercial fashion, not just the snorkel trips but the Stingray City visits, fishing trips - half day fishing, all kinds of activities taking place. The activities over the years have increased tremendously.

What we find is a lot of boats being used in the North Sound and they are being used commercially with a lot of people on board all the time and there is effluent that obviously is being (because there is no where else to deal with) dumped into the North Sound. I contend, sir, that there is a very high risk to the quality of the water in the North Sound if this is allowed to continue. Again, we might have one or possibly two people who say that they have the facilities to accommodate people off-loading this effluent. But our position with that sir is this is the people's property and the people have a right to have the proper facilities there. We are not talking about Freedom Street with it. We are not making any suggestion the Port Authority should go to the extreme of developing the property and having the right and proper facilities and then people not having to pay for it—people will have to pay for it. But certainly, the investment can be done in such a fashion that the return that you are looking on your investment would be able to allow for very reasonable rates.

Now, there is the question of utilising the property in the right fashion, and while the motion does not speak of exactly how the property would be developed, I think it is fair for us to pass a few comments on exactly how we envisage the situation at the end of the day. We think that there is proper equipment to allow for disposal of sewage. If there is water and electricity provided and perhaps there is even a thought by some of us who contend that it is not an impossible situation you might even be able to go to the point where you have proper restroom facilities and maybe a shower or two. I would even go so far as to say that some type of construction could be looked into to properly accommodate the fishermen who might use the property.

The reasoning behind all of this is simply so that the aesthetics would not cause it to be an eyesore. And, once the place is monitored properly, you could have great usage of it and it would still be an asset to the entire surroundings.

Mr. Speaker, there is a letter that was circulated not too long ago. Apparently, there was a great fear because there were some survey markers being put down. Somehow or the other some members of the public got the impression that this property that is vested with the Crown might be sold. I believe that this stems from unofficial reports. My understanding is that the Port Authority not so very long ago, perhaps a couple of years ago, requested for the property to be vested with them so that they may examine the possibility of creating a small marina type situation very similar to what I outlined a very minutes ago. Again, I speak not from seeing any official communication or anything, but the way the story has been told is that the people were told that the property was much too expensive or much too valuable to be used for this purpose.

Now, I don't stand here today saying that is the case, but regardless of whether or not that is the case I want for all of us to understand and appreciate that this is the people's property. It is vested with the Crown simply as a facilitator but the usage of the property is for the people of this country.

There are other arguments beside the environmental arguments that I alluded to earlier on. I believe that in presenting the case I need not go into all of the details. I am simply very mindful to hear what the government's position is going to be on the motion so we will know exactly how long a list of arguments we need to bring. But needless to say, I believe that the situation is justified. I believe that if the land is vested with the Port Authority that with their prudent planning they can develop the property to the advantage of the public. And I am certain that all of the details that would need to accompany that can be dealt with.

But I won't go any further at this point in time and I would just wish to hear the government's position so that we can know what else we have to deal with in the motion.

Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I wish that every motion that came before the House was as easy as this one because the government is definitely in support of this motion. The only thing that I would like to point out is that I would like members to know that once it is vested in the Port Authority—the Port Authority like the last speaker said has the right under their rules and regulations to regulate the property.

Also, he is quite correct when he mentioned how the land was actually put in place for the people of the Cayman Islands. This is under an old arrangement. However, I think that if it is the wish of the House, we should go ahead and actually vest it in the Port Authority and whatever is possible to make it into something that can accommodate the general public, yes, we should do it.

I feel confident that my good friend, the Minister responsible for it under the Port Authority Regulations will do whatever is possible to regulate it and to make that we get the best out of it.

So the government is pleased to say we accept this motion and I commend it to the House and I would like to thank the member who actually moved it and the seconder of the motion.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am pleased to hear government accept the motion. I have constituents who use the property presently as it is and would love to see the property developed. But I would hope that whoever develops it will ensure that the people in West Bay will have that opportunity to use it.

The place could be made into a beautiful marina and even park facilities could be developed there so that families will be able to enjoy the facilities of a park next to the ocean. Those are two things that I would like to see done, a proper marina with the proper facilities. Of course, as I said, Mr. Speaker, in ensuring that the boatowners in West Bay will have an opportunity to utilise it—not only the rich and powerful boatowners, but the small boatowners that I am talking about will have that opportunity.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and I thank the minister for accepting it.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to agree with the motion. But I think that there are a few items that need to be said in order for everyone to be clear as to what might actually transpire if the Port Authority is vested with this portion of land. I am sure that I will probably not say anything that will surprise the mover of the motion in any way.

If the Port Authority is vested with this portion of land and we move to develop in such a way that we will provide additional facilities such as electrical power, sewage connections so that these boats can pump out there sewage into a collector system and go into the Water Authority system of dealing with sewage, as well as to have public water down at the dock to allow those users of the dock to also be able to wash their particular cabin cruiser and/or boat, we must expect that the Port Authority is going to effect some charge and we need to be careful with that.

I just wanted to add those few points so that there isn't any lack of information in that regard to the public as well as to members of the House. I have no difficulty with this. It is something that I have always thought should happen and I welcome the motion.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other member wish to speak? If no other member wishes to speak, does the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: As the minister who accepted this motion on behalf of government said, perhaps it would be nice if all motions were able to be dealt with in this fashion.

But we know that won't be the case. Nevertheless, I guess we can take advantage of this one.

As I said in my earlier remarks, Mr. Speaker, I did anticipate some type of charge to be levied on the users of the facility on completion and the Minister for Tourism, who is also in charge of the Port Authority, alluded to that and I concur with that.

The First Elected Member from West Bay brought out the fact that it should be available to one and all and not just the chosen few. I don't think that is the intention at all and I am sure that we will monitor the situation to make sure that this does not happen.

What I want to say, Mr. Speaker, which perhaps is not totally necessary at this point in time but I think it warrants letting this be said in a public forum . . . There was a great fear, Mr. Speaker, initially that when the word was spread that this piece of property was deemed to be too valuable to be vested with the Port Authority for use by the public, it was the same time when we were in the middle of a lot of heated discussions regarding the Ritz Carlton Project. And as we know the piece of property that we are talking about butts and binds the North Sound side of that project where the golf course and the villas are going. There were some people who had fears that this was going to be the avenue through which the developers of the Ritz Carlton property could get into the North Sound as their planning approval does not include any direct access to the North Sound.

Now, who opposed and who agreed with what was happening with that at this point in time is irrelevant. I was one of those who opposed the motion, or rather the project, in its entirety because I was satisfied that certain portions could be done without going on to the larger part of the project itself. Nevertheless, what I want to say about that now is that in looking at the map, I do not believe the fact that the relevant authorities have approved the project. And, also, wherever it had to be done in this Legislative Assembly, it was done by a majority of the legislators. Therefore, perhaps it is sensible for the Port Authority to be looking at the possibility of developing this property for the use of the people of the country.

Maybe such a situation could be contrived that if these developers wish access through the property to the North Sound, one might be able to negotiate. First of all, to lessen the immediate cost to the Port Authority of developing the property because certainly if access is to be given to these people, there must be a charge for it. And, perhaps, in giving this access, since there will be no interference with any mangroves or anything like that, it might be a situation that will allow for the entire project to be speeded up.

Mr. Speaker, I really have to plug this one in. No matter whether the government accepts it or not, I daresay that where the government has been taking the Port Authority's money, it probably doesn't have enough money now to develop the project anyhow. But nevertheless, Mr. Speaker, I throw that one out because I do believe that this is a situation that could work to the benefit of all concerned.

In fact, it might well be possible that getting access to the North Sound from this project might be as worth while to the developers where they might be willing to defray the majority of the cost of developing the property to facilitate the docking of the boats. So, I just wanted to throw that out. I have not been in contact with anyone to know whether this is so or not but just looking at the map, it would seem that that's a viable situation.

The other thing, Mr. Speaker, and from time to time I have to refer to you from your experiences with the Planning Authority as well as mine, sir. If I look at that map and I see the way that development is proposed, there is no way in the world that even if it is not the developers who desire to access the North Sound, the people who are in there who would be land-locked, who purchase these properties who have boats are going to want direct access to the North Sound. So I foresee a situation where sooner or later if everything goes fine and the project is developed that pressure is going to be put to bear to the Planning Authority for access to the North Sound.

I am saying this is possibly an immediate solution here and now which does not interfere with anything but at the same time gives the Port Authority, once the land is vested with them, some advantage with regard to their ability to develop it. I throw that out and perhaps it will be passed on to the necessary people when the time comes for it to be dealt with.

I do thank the government for accepting the motion and seeing the sense in the motion. One last thing before I complete the wind-up, Mr. Speaker. I hold the view, sir, (and we have talked about this on many occasions) that some type of regulations need to be made for the boats who engage especially in commercial activity in the North Sound, to not off-load effluent in the North Sound; and for there to be some type of penalties so that people can get out of the habit once the facilities are provided and utilise these facilities. Because the truth is, sir, while it may seem the easy thing to do while you are operating your boat, in the long run they are only hurting themselves, me too, but they are hurting themselves. Because the pristine beauty and everything else that is in the North Sound will soon disappear if such activities are not curbed.

This is one of the biggest reasons for us moving this motion forward in this fashion, with the hope that it will not only facilitate these people but allow them to be able to be more environmentally conscious when using the North Sound so that it can remain in at least the state that it is now without it getting any worse.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question on Private Member's Motion number 23/99. All those in favour, please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is passed.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 23/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 14/99 to be moved by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 14/99

MOTION TO RESTRICT THE PRACTICE OF TATTOO ARTISTS AND OTHER PERSONS FROM HAVING SCHOOL AGE CHILDREN AS THEIR CUSTOMERS

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 14/99 standing in my name and entitled, Motion to Restrict the Practice of Tattoo Artists and Other Persons from having School Age Children as their Customers.

Mr. Speaker, as you know there is an amendment to the original motion which is what I intend to move and speak to now, having approved it with your office.

"In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25 (1) and (2), I the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, seek to modify Private Member's Motion No. 14/99 by substituting the following resolves for the three resolves set out in the substantive Motion:

"BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government considers taking steps to make it an offence for any person to tattoo the bodies of children under the age of 18 years and that any person or persons carrying on the business of tattooing be required to be a registered nurse or licensed under the Health Practitioners Law (1995 Revision);

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT any person or persons carrying on such business in which studs, earrings, clips, rings or any other similar objects are implanted or attached to the bodies of any person under the age of 18 years be required to have the written consent of the parents."

The Speaker: Do we have a seconder? The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Before going any further I would like to make it abundantly clear that as the mover has read this is a motion to modify Private Member's Motion No. 14/99 and this will supersede the original motion put forth. But we will be debating this one as he read out. The substantive motion will fall away. So, we will be debating this resolved section.

Before I do that, I should say that the Private Member's Motion No. 14/99 has been duly moved and seconded. Do you wish to speak to it? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. By way of explanation, which the Chair will have been apprised of the mover and the seconder modified the motion in consultation with other honourable members because we wanted to bring a motion which was not necessarily restrictive but was going to address a concern which has been expressed to us by many members of the community over the recent past—namely, the apparent upsurge of young persons tattooing themselves and having studs implanted over various parts of the body. So in consultation with honourable members including honourable ministers of the government, we decided that this amendment would be the most palatable and the most effective, while at the same time allowing the freedom of those persons over the age of 18 to be able to have tattoo and studs if they so wished.

Mr. Speaker, Professor Errol Miller in his book, Men at Risk, which was published in 1991 relates and anecdote in which on a visit to the Du Pont Circle[?] in Washington DC as an academic from the Caribbean, he was struck when he saw a person, obviously a street person, a white man, rummaging in the garbage for food. Professor Miller said coming from the Caribbean that was a phenomenon to him because, of course, we don't see those kinds of things in the Caribbean. When we see them, they certainly are not likely to be white people.

Mr. Speaker, similarly too, I endured a form of culture shock in 1969 when as a recent graduate I went to spend some time with some cousins of mine in New York and they were taking me to some areas and explaining certain characteristics and certain phenomenon to me. I had never been exposed to these things and as a result of that I developed a thirst for knowledge and a quest as to why certain people who are apparently sane but for whatever indulged in these practices.

Mr. Speaker, it seems that people have adopted many ways of identification and belonging. I have since come to realise that the practice of tattooing was not as I thought it was limited to people who were seafarers or who were forces members, indeed those are what I called the purists. Other people do it for reasons that are not so easily understood including membership in gangs or fraternities or organisations in which these kinds of tattoos are a symbol and a requirement for membership.

But what has been a concern recently, Mr. Speaker, is an upsurge in the phenomenon to the point where it is beginning to be adopted by young people. I noticed that many young persons in the Cayman Islands are now following the trend. I don't want to say that it has emanated out of a culture of nihilism or a culture of revolt, but it certainly has something to do with this business of a search for some form of identity.

Several persons approached me expressing their concerns for a number of reasons, one of which was that it is their understanding that these persons fly in and hold these clinics on the weekend, sometimes out of the hotel rooms where they stay, where they tattoo and implant these body studs and put on these tattoos on young people.

Well, there is a concern that these things may be done under circumstances which are not hygienic and we know—certainly, you would know from your studies in the medical field—that we run the risk when we use dirty syringes and needles of contracting very serious diseases, indeed diseases that could cause someone to lose their lives. Once upon a time it ended with Hepatitis B. Now, unfortunately, it goes much further, and the diseases are much more deadly than that.

Some persons called us up and said, 'We are aware that these things are being done wholesale and we have seen children whom we deem to be school age trekking in and out of establishments offering these services and we are concerned.' I certainly have noticed it among some relatively young persons. I won't say that they are school age because I need not ask them their age and I had no occasion to see their identity papers. But what I can say is that they were rather young.

Mr. Speaker, I can also say that it is a phenomenon which is only recently rearing its head in the Cayman Islands to the extent that it has been and we are concerned that while we have no jurisdiction over persons who have reached the age of responsibility, we certainly would not like this to become a widespread and accepted phenomenon among school age children.

In my research, Mr. Speaker, I have found out that these kinds of tattoos and implantation of these kinds of studs and objects, etcetera are usually a requirement for membership into gangs and groups. So we have to be concerned on this front also, that there may be a deeper meaning than what meets the surface of these things.

Quite significantly, too, many of these tattoos have satanic nuances that are inimical to the interest of order and stability in the society. People get what they pay for, and persons coming in and practising a trade or a craft are not bound to be discriminating to say, 'Well, you know, you shouldn't have these kinds of symbols because they indicate certain things which may be inimical to the interest of the society or inimical to the interest of your own spirituality or whatever.' It is a business and they are not bound to tell anyone the caveat emptor—let the buyer beware. They are in a business: they do it, collect their money and they are gone.

I hold the view, and it is a purely democratic view emanating from the very genesis of democracy, that the business of the State is to take care of its citizens. If that means that the State should protect persons from themselves then the State has to do that. So it is a Periclesian [?] principle that the State has certain concerns which override in many cases the concerns of individuals and this is one of these cases.

I throw the motion out in the hope that it can get the widespread support it deserves and I need [not] say more than that at this introduction.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other member wish to speak? The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I guess in a few days I will be called the Leader of Government Business!

[Inaudible interjection]

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I always try to make sure that I put forward what my government says to me. And, as far as this motion is concerned we are happy again on this side to accept this motion and we need no debate on it.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I would have hoped that the government, there to make sure that the rights of its citizens are not in fact infringed upon by legislation, would have had a bit more to say with regard to this private member's motion.

Mr. Speaker, no one can doubt that the custom of tattooing the parts of the body that we are now beginning to see becomes a part of mass culture or mass youth culture or a sign by young people somehow that they view themselves as a group distinct and apart to a certain extent from us older folks, that this gives reason for concern. It is very difficult at age 50 (approaching 51) for me to say in fact that I am not subjective when it comes to young people's cultural patterns. That I am tolerant just so with regards to the music they listen to, the clothes they wear, their pattern of speech but I am conscious enough of my journey through adolescence to be able to recall that there seems to have always existed some type of gap between adolescents and older members of society.

This gap can also suggest something that is healthy, in that if norms did not change, if they were not challenged, if they were static rather than dynamic, the society would have no ability to progress by way of science and technology and by way of other moral advancements that we assume today that society has made over its growth and development.

The difference in terms of opinions or the difference in terms of what aesthetically nice, what is morally correct . . . there have always been grave differences between that of young people and older adults. And we see that in fashion, we say that in the 60's we saw that, in the 70's we say that, in the 80's we saw it in rock music, we saw it in blues, we saw it in jazz, we saw it in the taste which society has. And we have come to realise and to expect to a certain extent that it is almost impossible for us to be at the same point in time with regard to our taste for different cultural practices.

Now, at what particular point does the state come to say that a particular cultural expression should be deemed dangerous to established order and thereby create restrictions on personal expression? There are those of us, of course, that say we are for freedom of expression but we give very little consideration when it comes to legislation that might possibly infringe upon people's basic rights to have as much control over domestic matters and their family as possible. The idea that a parent would not be able to discuss with a child that is 17 plus the situation with regards whether or not that child can have a tattoo I find to be very, very strange indeed.

I also find it stranger that the government finds itself in a position to easily accept this. Perhaps this truly expresses my predicament in this House in that I somehow don't seem to find any kind of ground because I am always looking to be reasonable.

Now, the First Elected Member for West Bay, of course, is finding the time to be comical again, simply because he feels that my position is not his position and since he got me elected in here anyway it is ridiculous. That member takes credit for everything that is good but never any credit for anything that is wrong. So, I would like to say that criticism is not necessarily condemnation. Because I call the government's attention to their position does not necessarily mean that I am condemning the government, and it would go to show that because I support the government in certain instances doesn't mean I am a supporter of the government—I am a supporter of reason.

I am against the lack of reason whether or not that lack of reason comes from this side of the Legislative Assembly or from the government's side.

I cannot understand why is it that we as legislators can feel so justified in bringing legislation at this particular moment that would basically infringe a parent's right to sit down with a daughter or a son and discuss whether or not they would be allowed to get a nice little tattoo. Because some of those tattoos young people regard as aesthetically beautiful whether or not we see them as disfiguring and ugly at our particular age anyway. I am saying that we must as leaders of this country, as responsible people, see the difference in taste and allow legislation not to block that out, not to stand in the way of people's choices.

Ridicule me, but remember that a large number of young people are out there listening, that an even larger number of these young people are at this particular time very intelligent and capable of making decisions that we consider only educated and mature people can make.

I was at the graduation of the Red Bay Primary School last night. I was moved by the delivery of eloquence and reason by two primary school children just entering into the first phase of secondary education. Mr. Speaker, no way could I have done that when I was 16 or 17 years old. In no way would I have the confidence or the intelligence to have been able to deliver the speeches that were made by two very young children.

Now, if they are intelligent enough to be able to do all of these things and if we are praising them for being all of these things, why is it that we just go out and say, 'None of you have the right until you get that age to have that done to you, whether or not we are going to see it or not'. Because there are parts of the body that are tattooed that do not necessarily become very clear to us—the ankle, other parts of the body, the arms or whatever it is. People grow up and find that after they had a tattoo it was the wrong thing to do and they wished that they could get it off and maybe they have to pay and go through surgery or whatever kind of pain to get it off—but it is their body.

And we saying that they do not have the choice to make that decision even with parental approval—this is the point. When the State comes to the point of saying...

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order.

POINT OF ORDER

The Speaker: Let me hear your point of order, please.

Mr. Roy Bodden: The member obviously did not read the motion because he is misleading. There is one clause that says, "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT any person or persons carrying on such business in which studs, earrings, clips, rings or any other similar objects are implanted or attached to the bodies of any person under the age of 18 years be required to have the written consent of the parents."

The Speaker: The motion is very clear. That is a good point of order, please take note.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, the motion has been changed and I will give into this particular objection made by the mover of this motion. And I will read the resolve one more time.

The Speaker: Let me add to this. This motion was modified and it was circulated to all honourable members on the 11th of June, at which time I approved it.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, that's not the point. I am not disputing that at all. I will read the resolve. "BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government consider taking steps to make it an offence for any person to tattoo the bodies of children under the age of 18 years and that any person or persons carrying on the business of tattooing be required to be a registered nurse or licensed under the Health Practitioners law (1995 Revision);"

Mr. Speaker, it says quite clearly here—it says it is an offence for anyone to tattoo a person under the age of 18 years. It doesn't say with the written permission of the parent.

Mr. Speaker, can we have a clarification on this so that I can continue to discuss this point? It is my understanding (and I might be wrong and I am willing to give in if I am wrong) that it says that it is illegal to do so on the bodies of a person less than 18 years old, which means that the parental consent is not a question here.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I think the honourable member needs to read the motion carefully before he tries to debate because the motion is asking the government to consider, and if the government accepts the motion, the government is only accepting the motion to consider. They may consider it and don't do anything about it.

The Speaker: Are you satisfied with that?

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, there is no reason why I should be satisfied with that when the mover wants to get back to reply. He can reply to it, but I can only say what is said here. Should I read it again just to make sure that we all understand what is here? "BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government considers..."

Okay, so he is asking that the government be empowered to do this. Now we would hope that he would impart to the government his specific instructions as to what he wants to have done, whether or not they are considering it or not because we know that they can reject it. They are considering it here and they have decided to accept it. I am saying that he is asking that they consider not any point about parental approval. He has not asked them to consider parental approval in the case of a child or a young adult that is less than 18 years.

The Speaker: For tattooing only.

Dr. Frank McField: For tattooing only. Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

It just goes to show sometimes it is just worthwhile to look these things over a few times before agreeing and again I am going to fault the government for doing because I brought it to their attention earlier. It is not our job. We have problems, Mr. Speaker, in this country. I have been talking about social and anti-social behaviour in this country for the last 20 something years, since I was Social Development Officer.

I know that we have problems with parents in the country but we cannot deprive the parents of the responsibilities and the state to take the responsibilities. Because if you take the responsibility in this case from the parent, then why don't you take other responsibilities from the parents—like the responsibility to make sure that the kid gets the uniform to go to school, the kid gets the money to buy the books to go to school and the kids get the food. Why don't you support the child?

But for the State to select the rights that it will deprive the parent of without a wider consensus when we know that this will have impact on other rights that people have—could create a difficulty.

Again, I will try to make this clear. I am not saying that tattooing the body is a nice thing—I have no tattoos on my body. I am not saying at the same time that somehow that it does not have to do with a counter-culture and part of that counter-culture might not necessarily be detrimental to the good order of the society. But I am saying when we develop an approach to this, trying to solve the problems by way of legislation rather than by way of trying to change the attitudes of parents and children alike in society, it means that we have become basically people that are only empowered by way of legislation. The only thing we know how to do is to make legislation.

We don't know how to go out there and get involved and how to get people to change and how to assist people to become empowered to know what is right and what is wrong. We sit here in this place and legislate as if the problem is going to be solved by legislation. And, we have a breakdown. We have deterioration in the way in which people see the moral order. Then we have to go out there and we have to try to fix it, we do not legislate on this particular level to do so. We try to talk with kids, we try to talk with parents, we try to publicise the dangers of this. We try that first and then when that fails then we come back to legislation.

Legislation should always be the last resort, not the first. That has been a tendency in this country for so long—you got laws, laws, laws. You have private member's motion, private member's motion, private member's motion.

I am asking that some consideration be given mainly to the rights of the parent, to maintain harmony between them and their children. If that could be maintained by way of a parent saying to a 17 year old, 'Look, you can have a little tattoo but not a big one because your friend has one'. We do accept that there is such a thing as peer pressure but there are some parents that are intelligent enough, there are some children that are intelligent enough that they understand the consequences of their actions at that particular age, at age 15 - 16. Not all of them that have tattoos are devil worshippers or are associated with gangs or with that kind of tragic world culture that we so well know. Let us give the parents, if this is the amendment that needs to be made here, the responsibility.

The Speaker: Can I interrupt you for a minute? Would this be a convenient time to take the luncheon break?

Dr. Frank McField: Yes.

The Speaker: We shall suspend until 2:30 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1:00 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:50 PM

*Mrs. Edna M. Moyle, JP,
Deputy Speaker in the Chair*

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continuing on Private Member's Motion No. 14/99. The Fourth Elected Member for George Town continuing.

Dr. Frank McField: Thank you, Madam Speaker, and welcome to the Chair.

I would like to probably sum up my contribution with regard to Private Member's Motion No. 14/99, a motion to restrict the practice of tattoo artists and other persons from having school age children as their customers.

Madam Speaker, I think that I mentioned before that part of the difficulty that I have with this private member's motion is that it appears to infringe on the rights of parents and it wrestles responsibility away from decent parents. With, responsibility for the child, the State would be expected to leave certain rights within the hands of the parents unless the State was convinced that in doing so it would face greater dangers.

The point is that in the original draft of the private member's motion it was said or it was resolved that this not happen, that the tattoo artists not be allowed to pierce or tattoo children under the age of 18 except by written consent of their parents or guardians. So the same concerns that I am expressing now were expressed in the original formulation of this motion. The fact that this particular formulation is absent from the revised motion, the motion that was moved and explained by the mover (the Third Elected Member from Bodden Town) is exactly what has caught my attention, what has set my alarms up and what has caused me to comment even on the government's quick acceptance of this consideration or proposition, which is being put to them to consider.

Now, it also says in the first resolve, "...that any person or persons carrying on the business of tattooing be required to be a registered nurse . . ." Now, I don't know how many registered nurses are involved in the business of tattooing or whether or not tattooing is done by tattoo artists and not by nurses themselves. So the fact that this resolve also includes that tattooing be required to be a registered nurse is very odd indeed since this is not the case.

The second part is, "...or licensed under the Health Practitioners Law (1995 Revision)." I have with me the Health Practitioners Law (19 of 1974) (1995 Revision) and I see no provision in this law for the registration of tattoo artists or anyone we have knowledge of that is doing the tattooing, that is the persons that are involved in the tattoo artist's profession.

The registration, therefore, of tattoo artists if the resolution is called in by way of this private member's motion that the government does this, would certainly place the government in a very awkward position. The government would have to work within the framework of the Health Practitioners Law in order to allow this to happen.

Now, I am not sure who thought this out, but if we go on we will see that in the second resolve what we are talking about is the piercing of parts of the body, which means having earrings or whatever and that the person be 18 years of age and that they be required to have written parental consent. So you have in the case of persons piercing parts of their bodies then below the age of 18, needing parental control or parental approval that is accepted by the mover. But in the case of tattooing that particular consideration is absent.

So I was thinking that maybe this was a point that the mover might want to correct. We certainly do not want to give the impression that the government is in the business of trying to regulate this particular extent the relationship between children and their parents.

I also believe that the urgency of action with regard to this question of tattooing is there because we see the swell of this counter-culture. We see that young people (as I mentioned earlier) are in a way setting themselves aside or apart from older members of the society. But in a society that has changed so rapidly over the last thirty years, we will get value and norm distortions. You will get as a result of a small fishing village that is self-sufficient becoming a financial centre, an international place, a multicultural society as we like to refer to our society at this particular point, that it is kind of hard for the government to become the institution that maintains the so-called status quo or the norms of respectability.

We are, whether we like it or not, entering into a very pluralistic type of society as a result of the extension of electronic communication. We are influenced in the Cayman Islands on a daily basis as people are influenced in any other part of the world connected with global satellites and global communications. So the fact that our young people are exhibiting tendencies and behavioural patterns and following fashions that we see in other metropolitan places where there are larger numbers of people who do not really care how people look and we are living in a smaller society and we tend to care . . . The fact that we are experiencing this phenomenon, I think is understandable because we send our kids to these places to school.

We actually licence television companies to operate here and beam in these types of programmes to us on a minute by minute basis. I believe that there is room for concern at the moment in our country about the cultural choices of our young people. But to correct the cultural choices of our young people means that we have to instil within them a value of what they are. We know that this is not a phenomenon that is unique to the young person because 20 - 30 years ago when I wrote Time Longer Dan Rope, what I captured at that particular time was that Caymanians did not want to accept their Caymanianism.

And even today, we all seem to have individualistic ideas of what it is to be Caymanian but from a collective point of view, there seems to be no agreement. We seem to have always had the desire to give up our land, to give up our culture, to give up our kibosh, to give up those things that were uniquely Caymanian.

Today we have the problem of development in the centre of George Town where we miss Miss Dorice's house. I remember when Miss Dorice had her little restaurant there cooking patties when I was a kid. That's torn down and gone and something else that is totally different will be put there. We hear about the Albert Panton House that will now be torn down and nobody seems to have any remorse about these symbols of the past being ripped out of the bowels of the country.

And then when the children begin to act strange, we begin to believe that that can be treated by legislation. My diagnosis of the problem is that until we make a decision to stand for what it is that we really are, and until we can say that it is good and that the child should be comfortable with being a Caymanian—coming from a society where caring and sharing is important and not just going to the noisy discotheques and wanting to speak in other accents and listen to other people's music and act like other people . . . until we can reassure them that as young people they will be okay being themselves then they will go through these changes—like many of us might have gone through changes when we had our Afro haircuts and our dashikis and different things back in the 70s when we came back from universities . . . We spoke different languages in terms of the kind of ideologies we were professing at that particular time. But we have gone through changes, and we have come to terms somehow with the society and the desire of the society for us to at least show some respect for their concept of respectability.

So all I am saying is that, yes, I do understand that there is a tendency out there. But there are young people that are going to be more deviant and more anti-social in their behaviour. But there are going to be those young people that are just being young people, that are just going through the trial and error part of the experience of being a young human being. They will put away some of these jewellery that they are wearing and put away their earrings and put away those things if they are not criminalised. But the problem in criminalising behaviour is that it could cause certain things to go underground, it could cause the whole tattooing to go underground and be done by less professional people. It might send up the prices of getting it done.

The fact that government legislates will not mean that the desire they have now to have these tattoos or these earrings will not be there. That desire will not be legislated away—that has to do with values and ideas and feelings. That will not be corrected by any legislation that government brings.

So the question is, those that can go to Miami or those that can get it at college because they go—they will perhaps have it because it might even make it a little bit more fashionable. We are outlawing this and sometimes when we outlaw things, we make it more attractive because we make it more fashionable. And it is all about fashion. And it is all about so-called individuality. And the strangest thing about young people—and I was a young person—and individuality, is that you try doing things and say, 'I am a individual' and before you know 1.2 million other young people are doing it and thinking somehow that that means they are greater individuals than the people who go to work from 9 to 5 or whatever.

I know that we have problems in our society. I know that we have problems with young people in our society. But legislation is not the cure for all that we experience. What will bring us closer to solving the problems that we are experiencing is more contact with our people, more communication, greater honesty, more consistency, less inconsistency. When we begin to act as a result of the fact that we have come so close to life that we take it very serious, that we take everything that we do seriously, that we understand that any time we come into Parliament and legislate that that affects/impacts other people's lives and people lives are sacred . . . The state only has a right or obligation to intervene when the living of those lives would destroy the greater good.

I am saying that I disagree with what the young people are doing because mainly I am old and I went through changes to be able to come to this point to have the perception that that is not cool. But they have not seen from the mountaintop and they have a different perspective. But I do not want them to be roughed up and criminalised or bamboozled by legislation simply because those of us here have a power to do just that.

I appeal to the government in particular because it is their responsibility to consider this action and to draft the relevant legislation in such a way that it will not conflict with our thoughts about human rights and responsibility, and respect for people's responsibility to themselves, to the children and to their society. I understand that in having this position as an independent person in here—more so because I am independent in thought rather than independent from a political perspective—that I do myself no political favour speaking. All I do at the end of the day is to alienate myself and to separate myself more and more from other persons in here that are not like-minded to the point where I might not even be able to get a seconder for my motions.

I am there by myself and I cannot even bring a motion and debate it in this House because nobody will tolerate me to the extent that they will even want to be associated with my motions. But I say, Madam Speaker, that people should scorn me only because I am unreasonable but they should not distance themselves from me simply because I think that I am reasonable. I think that people elected me here because they wanted me to be reasonable. It has not been easy to take up this position since the government has agreed that they will accept this motion and because other members of the backbench seem to agree as well.

I feel satisfied that in thinking twice about something that I have at least found some faults that the general public will be able to at least understand why I have taken the position to ask the mover of this motion to reconsider some of the resolutions in the motion before asking government to seriously go along with it.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: The First Elected Member for the district of West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Thank you, Madam Speaker. It is good to see you in the Chair and I am pleased to have you there.

The motion is a valuable one, I am very glad that the First Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Elected Member for North Side have seen fit to bring this motion. It shows that they are very aware of the kind of unwanted social fashions that exist and sensible enough to try to do something about it. From the debate of the member who just sat down, he doesn't seem so aware and I don't think he is reasonable and I don't think he is consistent either.

Madam Speaker, I am not a social scientist, but I value the insight into human development that have gained over the years. More importantly though, I am a parent of a teenager and a 22 year old. The issue before us is not one to take lightly.

Several months ago, I raised the matter of a culture of gangs and violence, of loud music and sometimes the obscene and blatantly suggestive music that we now have to put up with over the air. It is definitely alien to our culture. We constantly talk about the loud music in cars on the road. I drew also attention to the matter of gangs and the general bend towards a culture of gangs. This other aspect of that culture is now taking root—that of tattooing and body piercing.

Madam Speaker, I have seen some of the places where body piercing is done and it is a most despicable and horrible sight. And the tattooing goes along with it.

Anybody who says that they are any kind of philosopher or social scientist, as they would claim to be, should see that.

I believe that government must come down hard. Government must take a strong stand against these kinds of negative attitudes and behaviour. The member who just sat down spoke about infringing on the rights of parents—it is not infringing the rights of any parent—it is assisting the parent. What could the parent do if the child goes, has this tattooing or body piercing done, and there is no law to help them? What can they do beside row, complain, come to the MLA? And in this case, this is what has happened.

Parents have talked but there is no avenue out so the member from Bodden Town and the Member from North Side have said government please consider to do something. Why is that wrong?

Now, the Fourth Elected Member for George Town spoke about a gap between the young and the old. We must make sure that we don't attempt to close the gap by being too permissive—letting children have their way. That is a big problem today—letting the child have his way. Can you imagine an 8-year-old telling a parent what to do? Can you image a parent coming to the Minister for Youth Affairs and saying, 'please do this because I cannot handle my 6-year-old, I cant handle my 8-year-old'?

The biggest joke of all, was his suggestion about difference in taste. You see, he said it might not be associated with gangs or devil worship but I don't know if it is or it is not. Sometimes you read that it is in certain magazines, books, documentaries, and these sorts of things. But if it is not, it is certainly the kind of thing that breeds this anti-social behaviour and it is associated with violence.

Now, he went on to talk about letting the young people go, just letting them have their way by trial and error. Madam Speaker, how many caskets have I looked into containing young people who thought it was fashionable to speed? who thought it was fashionable to drink and by peer pressure got on dope? I wish to God that we could have stopped them when they were in that mode of trial and error—so that they did not err and end up in that casket. I cannot understand his thinking or his logic—I don't think he has any!

Madam Speaker, I love how he talks about this all the time, about this large number of young people out there. Do we allow them to endanger themselves—just let them go just do as they want so as not to provoke them against us lest we lose a vote? No! Madam Speaker, you are a parent and I know that you are aware because you are the seconder of this motion. I can't see criticising the State for trying to do something about this situation.

He went on to say that he is not saying that it is bad. Well, if it is bad, the State has a duty to do something about it—whether it is education through legislation or otherwise. But I think it is proper to call on the government to do something about it.

Talking about responsibility, Madam Speaker, that member should know, if we are trying to build a community that holds on to the Caymanian way of life that we love to talk about . . . Tell me how much he likes to talk about that too—talking about caboose and this thing and the next thing and fishing on the iron shore. I have never heard more in my life! Well, if that is what we want to look at, you tell me where the spiked hair and the different coloured hair and the earrings in the nose, in the eyebrows and five or six earrings in the ear and all the other places that they have them . . . you tell me, Madam Speaker, how Caymanian is that? He is talking rubbish.

Do you know what is good about him, Madam Speaker? He can give but he cannot take. As soon as he says what he's got to say, he doesn't want to hear what you got have to say. He picks up and he goes. We are not too old to learn from somebody, that is my way of thinking. I can always learn something.

Of course, he cannot debate unless he takes a little dig at the First Elected Member of West Bay. But that is all right. That is quite okay. He says that I take credit for everything that is right. I cannot take credit for everything that is wrong. Madam Speaker, why should I take credit for things that are wrong, things that I didn't have anything to do with? I take credit for those things that I did. I took credit for the gains and the advances made and the social development of this country. Now, he says that he was a Social Development Officer . . . ask him what he got done in those years that he was Social Development Officer. I can look back and see what I did. I have made mistakes, and I am big enough to admit that I have made mistakes.

Government must come down hard, must take a strong stand against the kind of negative behaviour that I see developing in our country. Of what good is it to our young people? That is what we have to ask at this point. That is what we need to ask them also. This, in my opinion, is the kind of behaviour . . . and his attitude—the Fourth Member from George Town—is spawning a host of permissive doctrines that are dissuading our parents from the enforcing of a consistent discipline in some of the homes of this country. That kind of attitude!

Any parent or other person who deals with young people knows that they have their own perspective and values—we know that. Any parent knows that. But we cannot come to grips with this kind of situation that I see developing in these islands by treating children's sensibilities so gingerly that it allows our young people to drift as if without a rudder in any ocean of moral confusion. The kind of debate that I heard here today is what is helping to do the situation in this country bad—and doing it for the sake of saying 'these young people will vote for me because I am going to allow them to do what they want to do'. That is too much permissiveness. And I certainly am not going to be part of it just to get a vote.

They know who can do good for them, who can't and who has. We want to prize our children, but we cannot fail them by bending to every fancy that they see on television, bending to every fancy that they read in books or see in the rest of the world. We want to prize them, yes. We want to encourage parents to love their children. And I don't think that we have to do that too much. Everybody is under stress and some parents are under more stress than other parents, and they react in a different way, Madam Speaker. But I believe that anybody that brings a child into this world, any woman and any man that helps her has to have some feeling about that child.

We try to give them the best clothes. We give them a good home. We give them a good education. We teach them the golden rule. But none of us parents can long withstand the strong and over-powering forces of this unwholesome culture of opposition I see developing here in these islands. There is much said today about it taking a village to raise a child and there is much said about parents being responsible for their children. I believe both. But there must be a strong force of authority which can only come from the State—the executive authority—to stand against the negatives that our families are faced with, cultures foreign to us.

Good ideas and practices must be accepted by government and I would hope that they would accept . . . well, they have already said they will accept the motion. And, yes, Madam Speaker, bringing up a child should become a collective effort extending to all parts of all neighbourhoods. This culture of gangs and violence of children being afraid to go to school—do you realise that we have that today in this little island? Children are afraid to go to school, of ganging up by the wall by Anderson Building and fighting—of body piercing, of loud music. If you ever hear some of the music, Madam Speaker, you can't even understand the words—I have never heard more in my life! And this is the kind of thing that a legislator must stand in here and say that we love these Cayman Islands and because we love these Cayman Islands and we love the caboose way of life, that we must allow that to go on? I don't think so, Madam Speaker.

I am speaking as a parent right now and I certainly don't think it is good. I don't think it is for the good of our children. It is breeding a culture foreign to us.

Madam Speaker, we developed, and thank God that we could develop because some of us would not have been able to drive the fancy cars we have, have the businesses we have, we could not wear the fancy clothes we wear, we could not sleep in the homes we have if it were not for development. That is not to say that because we developed and improved our way of life that we must allow every little fashion to come in here and destroy our island. Take away our children's childhood at that, Madam Speaker! And some of that is too prevalent in our country—taking away too much of the children's childhood, stopping the child from being a child.

Which child back in 1960 here in the Cayman Islands did we see with an earring? Madam Speaker, the first time I caught a glimpse of this real good was in Piccadilly Square in London. I said to myself then if I could do anything about it I would do something to stop these spiked hairs and earrings as big as a cow's ear hanging out of their nose. We don't need it! And any legislator who says that we do, does not know what he or she is talking about.

I say to the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, you don't know what you are talking about. You see, Madam Speaker, it is all right to read a book and then draw a conclusion from that and say, 'this is the way it must be'. But when you help to bring a child into this world and you see that child going wrong, that is something else. That experience you cannot get from a book. You cannot get that kind of experience from philosophising on the situation in our country. So we as legislators and we as parents have a right, we have a duty to put things in law that will help to stop the situation from eroding further.

As a community, we have a lot to do to save our youth. Family, teachers, churches, coaches, good neighbours, yes and legislators must focus on the same thing. Sing the same song to the same tune. Preach that good morals are what's best. Preach the same morals so that we can bring strong walkways to the interest and abilities of our young people.

This culture of gangism and violence, this body piercing, this tattooing—let us ask the question: Is it building competence in our young people? Is it building character? Can the Fourth Elected Member for George Town reconcile that? Does it boost their self-esteem? Does it make them wiser? The answer to the Fourth Elected Member for George Town is no, it does not. So the authorities must now come to grips with the situation which has developed.

Again, Madam Speaker, I want to call for that commission of workers—government, social services, education, health workers, police, churches, coaches, sports workers and even members of this House—for God's sake do something. This group could come up with ways and means of dealing with the problem. I congratulate the mover and the seconder, my colleagues the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town and the Elected Member for North Side, for being wise and attempting to get something done.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather D. Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I rise to offer a very brief contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 14/99. My colleagues speaking before have pretty much said it all and covered in some depth many of the points I too wish to stress.

Madam Speaker, today tattooing and piercing of body parts is becoming so extreme that I often wonder what we will see next. There are fortunately still some of us who are quite happy with the way God made us. However, the growing trend, especially among the younger generation, is to think that this is cool and they often go too far.

My main concern is that all of these practises involve the use of needles, which means that certain health measures need to be taken. I therefore applaud the members bringing this motion. It will require any persons carrying out this business to be a registered nurse or must be registered under the Health Practitioners Law (1995 Revision).

Parents need to be made aware of such actions before their children engage in them and this motion, therefore, puts the responsibility on the businesses that stand to make money from these practises. It also introduces some degree of parental supervision, which is very important.

Madam Speaker, just recently I was watching the Miami News on CBS and there was a report of a young girl who had just pierced her tongue and had to be rushed to the hospital because blood poisoning had set in and the infection had gone straight to her heart. The news showed her hooked up to tubes in her hospital room. Lucky for her, she survived and I trust that she removed that ring quite quickly.

Madam Speaker, I have also seen children with infected ears and nostrils—all because they have had someone pierce them at home. And I say to those who have done this and who will continue to do this, it is dangerous.

Madam Speaker, I give this motion as amended my support. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I, like the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, have heard most of the points dealt with by previous speakers. I think perhaps rather than duplicate the effort here, I might just deal with one slight point of contention.

Now, in the first resolve section, it says, "BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government considers taking steps to make it an offence for any person to tattoo the bodies of children under the age of 18 years..."

In the second resolved section, it says, "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT any person or persons carrying on such business in which studs, earrings, clips, rings or any other similar objects are implanted or attached to the bodies of any person under the age of 18 years be required to have the written consent of the parents."

So basically it has been mooted that since the second resolve includes the written permission of parents for any child under the age of 18 to have their bodies pierced, then anyone under the age of 18 who wants to have a tattoo put on his body once he has the written permission of his parents should be allowed the same privilege.

Now, I think what the government needs to decide (whether in consultation with members or whether in other types of consultation) is, having accepted the motion which asks them to consider these points, is whether or not whatever move forward there is should allow for parental consent for both of these issues or not. It is not to say that the motion is ill-thought out in this regard, but in all fairness to the arguments brought forward, perhaps the government in its wisdom can decide which way it wants to go.

There are some people who consider the body piercing to be potentially damaging, or not pleasing to the eye—if that makes any more sense than a tattoo. I don't presuppose at this point in time either of the two because I am not a prude. But my personal conviction when it comes to my child for whom I am responsible, while I allow my children a certain amount of freedom, I want the world to believe that law or no law, anybody who I helped bring into this world is going to come and talk to me about that before they come with that foolishness in my house! It is as simple as that!

But that is not to say that one should not be able to discuss it. And I don't think that the intention of the motion calls for that. I simply believe that from here on in how the government handles the acceptance of the motion and what they do about it is not going to simply allow certain things to be able to be done at will.

I am not afraid to stand here this afternoon and say that I know there are parents who even if they do not wish for their child under 18 to have a tattoo or their body pierced, they cannot do a single thing about it. And I think that is part of what was being borne in mind when the motion was crafted. All of these things have to be considered.

Now, I also grant that when there is legislation, you have to deal with legislation in a responsible fashion so that you at least capture the benefits to the vast majority of the people who have to live within that legislation. But if we look at parental consent, whatever method is used as the vehicle to have certain types of legislation crafted or under some rules—it can be under school rules. The only thing is with school rules there might be some things that can be done in such a way that they are not used while in school but as they walk out of school they can attach it or stick it wherever it is or whatever. I don't know that. I only see them be passing . . . I don't want to know anymore about it to tell you the truth.

Anyway, all I am saying is that I firmly believe that the motion is totally well intended and it is intended to improve a situation that has sort of entered into the Caymanian culture.

The points that the First Elected Member for West Bay brought out are certainly relevant and salient. I am sure the mover in his winding up will deal with other points. But I just felt that I had to simply say a few words about it. People need to understand that when you see private member's motions like this, it is something that arises out of a genuine concern. I must say that for all people say and do, I don't know who else thinks of it like this but from where I sit on the Backbench in this honourable Legislative Assembly that is my only vehicle at this point in time. That is my only vehicle to be able to have an impact or to be able to make a position clear through this medium.

I don't take kindly to anyone making slight of that. Others can take it for joke, I don't. And any time I talk about a private member's motion or participate in it by moving it or seconding it, it is because my responsibility is being carried out, Madam Speaker.

I commend this motion and I trust that the right thing will happen upon its acceptance by the vote. Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: Maybe this is a convenient time to take the afternoon break. Proceedings will be suspended for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3:44 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4:03 PM

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 14/1999. Does any other member wish to speak?

If no other member wishes to speak, does the mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Madam Speaker. I find it necessary to say that before bringing any motion to the House I ensure that the merits are in keeping with the diligence and conscientiousness with which I approach the business of representing the people. I have too much respect for the House and for the time of honourable members to do otherwise.

Certainly, Madam Speaker, I have never been one to play politics. And although we are approaching that time when many of us will revert to playing politics, the time is still some little way off. Therefore, I have to question the insinuations about the motive for bringing such a motion.

I said at the beginning that I had been approached by several persons, some of who also spoke with the seconder of this motion. And I have been making certain observations myself. I want to make one comment that has to do with a query raised by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town when he was talking about people's rights. The history of this Parliament will show that I have been if not among the foremost lobbyists an agent and representative in terms of trying to get the Parliament to pass a Bill of Rights for this country. I still believe in that. But rights do not exist in a vacuum by themselves. With rights come responsibilities and therein lies the crux of matter.

In the United States of America, where people have a right to bear arms, they don't have any right (because they have a right to bear arms) to go gunning down indiscriminately other persons or parties whom they do not like. So we have to be very careful that when we talk about rights, we do not talk about rights in isolation and when we talk about rights, we have to say that with rights come responsibilities. They are not separate and apart but indeed they are co-joined.

In this regard, Madam Speaker, we should be vividly reminded that there was a celebrated controversial case, which the Honourable Chief Justice ruled on a short while ago, involving a similar situation where a youngster was precluded from school because of dreadlocks which go against the school rules. That has a vivid similarity to what we are talking about now. So we have to be very, very careful how we try to convey certain things. I have always believed in certain freedoms but I have always believed that freedom has its responsibilities. And, while I advocate that the State allows us to behave in certain ways, I also say that the state has a right to intervene to protect and to ensure that the good order of all is obtained.

I am eminently qualified to talk about tattoos because I have one. I have one on my arm and I know the consequences of this. And I am telling people that they should not enter into it lightly because I know what I suffered. I can remember very vividly when I came home with this tattoo what my grandfather did to me. It was a good thing God helped me and that he was not a whipping man. But I tell you, Madam Speaker, many days I went around with my tail between my legs because here was a man who had spent all of his years as a seaman and didn't have a mark on his body. When he saw me, he sat me in a corner and he went from one end of the spectrum to the other telling me why I should not have had the ill-sense to have this tattoo on my arm.

Madam Speaker, those were the days before Hepatitis B and before HIV so can you image now the risks that people run.

Madam Speaker, I am concerned because as I understand it, these artists fly in for the weekend, put up in a suite at a hotel they make their announcements, and the people come in droves. Who is there to see that the needles are hygienically clean? And since it is a commercial venture, who gives the assurance that a needle is not repeatedly used on more than one customer? This is the risk. And after the session is finished, those people get on a plane with their attaché case full of money and they are gone. What happens when someone contracts Hepatitis B—or worse, HIV? Who is responsible? Do you know who is responsible? The State has to pick up that tab.

So the State in this instance has a right to say no one under the age of 18 because no one under the age of 18 can go in a bar and drink a glass of beer or wine and they cannot vote. So the State, Madam Speaker, in this case is well in order to say this. Were we to say that they could only do it with parental consent . . . do you know how many parents would be strong-armed, would be cajoled, would be railroaded into writing a consent letter? Madam Speaker, believe you me, we do not have to adopt every fashion we see on the television or anywhere else. It is a culture of nihilism. Of course, we want to have our individual identities. As Caymanians we have always talked about that.

But if I want to show my identity, if I want to show that I am of a certain mentality I can do that, Madam Speaker, without tattooing up my whole body. Do you know what? It cost $30 to get a tattoo—but it cost $300 to have it surgically removed so that it doesn't leave a scar. So what happens when I put a tattoo on at 15 and when I get 25, I decide that I cannot get a job because the tattoo is in a conspicuous place or it is obscene? I have to pay $300 to get it surgically removed—which cannot be done here in any case I have to go overseas for it.

Madam Speaker, believe you me, there is merit to this motion the way it is. If the Fourth Elected Member for George Town wanted it changed, he like any other Member of Parliament has a democratic right and he could have moved the amendment to say that it could have been done with parental consent if the child was under 18. He could have done that. I didn't do it. And I am not doing it because this is not something I am playing politics with.

I have viewed this from every colour in the spectrum and I am not doing that. We spent a lot of time going over this motion. It was drafted and re-drafted until we got it to the point where we believed it could be acceptable by all. There is a need, and I see the young people, Madam Speaker, and many of them are intelligent, yes. But many are misguided. I am going to tell you the truth Madam Speaker, you check the intelligent ones and see if the majority of them are disfigured by tattoos. Check them!

I have never been of the herd mentality. Do you know what the herd mentality is? You run with the herd. And, I am not encouraging any herd mentality. I was a school teacher—and a respected one at that—and I am not now going to encourage any herd mentality. I counsel young people too, and I am the father of children. Let me tell you something, I try to bond with them. Believe you me, if any of them come tattooed while they are under the age that I have a responsibility for them, they better be sure it is in such a discreet place that I cannot find it because they will have a lot of explaining to do.

Madam Speaker, I want to give a little lesson in what I call applied sociology. Many of these things derive from cult membership, gang membership, and fraternal memberships that are sometimes taboo. For example, this business of wearing a stud in the right ear was a practice adopted by homosexuals to identify themselves when it was not accepted—when it was taboo, when it was frowned upon. Montreal is where I first saw it. Paris and all these places . . . they had the stud in the right ear. And, Madam Speaker I see them with razorblades.

The other day I had an incident, a gold razorblade and I asked the young lady if she knew the significance of that and she said she did—that indicated people who are bisexual. So, I want to be sure that our young people when they adopt these things understand the significance of them because it is not just a fad in many instances—it has meaning. And our young people out of innocence or out of a sense of thinking that they are fashionable will get into serious trouble.

For all our sophistication in international finance, we are still a sleepy little country. That is why it is incumbent upon those of us who have been experienced and exposed to pass these things on. It is not something we take lightly. Years ago tattooing was exclusively confined to sailors and people in the armed forces. Then they went to motorcycle gangs, now they are in to youth gangs. So as long as we are aware of these kinds of changes, it is our business to protect our progeny, to inform our progeny. That is why it is crafted so that anyone under the age of 18 shouldn't get these studs because they are things out of our control.

Madam Speaker, any tattoo carries with it certain risks—whether a big one or a little one as the Fourth Elected Member for George Town mentioned. You have to understand that if you go to get a tattoo and it is not circumstances that are guaranteed to be hygienically pure, you run the risk of contracting a serious disease. Many of these young people haven't even heard of Hepatitis B, probably some of them still don't know about HIV. I mean, how would I as a parent feel if I gave my youngster consent to get a tattoo and discovered 6-18 months later that he contracted Hepatitis B or worse. It would be a situation where I would want to go and do myself in but that would be a sin unpardonable.

We are not saying that they cannot do it ever. When they pass the age of maturity and they can make their own decisions then they make their decisions but while they are still in school, the option should not even be considered. It doesn't wrestle away responsibility from the parents; it makes the parents more aware. The law says that it cannot be done. The law gives them the ammunition, it gives them the support to say you cannot have it done until you reach this age or older because the law says it cannot be done. I mean, what kind of school would it be if people came with their foreheads tattooed and their cheeks tattooed, and one spends all the time admiring or explaining and the teacher can't teach, and there is chaos. I mean, I have seen some, and it is disgusting . . . all over their bodies and that is part of...

Madam Speaker, do you know what else concerns me? This whole business of tattooing the whole body. That is a phenomenon of the prison sub-culture and that is the kind of stuff we want to get away from in the society now. We don't want to create any herd mentality in Cayman. Of course, we want to give them the individuality and they have limits for that individuality to come out. But if we say no rules then a society of anarchy . . . and not only would the First Official Member be in a quandary, I would be too because I am for law and order.

So we have to be very careful and the reference to the Health Practitioners Law is simply to ensure—I know, as the mover, it is not covered now under the Health Practitioners Law. But if it is so necessary, amend the Health Practitioners Law to accommodate these people. But that is not my duty because I am not a tattoo artist and I am not advocating it. That is the reason why that reference was made there.

Madam Speaker, I want to say too that I have seen youngsters with studs in their tongues. Believe you me, I went to great lengths to research this. You know how that is done? Imagine the sensation and the discomfort when we take a cup of tea that is too hot and we get scalded, imagine the discomfort sometimes for a couple hours—let alone piercing. Do you know what they do? They strap you down in a chair, like an electric chair, including your forehead strapped back and they put that in. Do you know how they put in studs, Madam Speaker? They snap that in. In one snap, that locks that into the tongue.

Now, Madam Speaker, in the name of reasonableness is that what we are going to advocate? Listen, if somebody wants to show that they are different or wants to show their individuality—all they have to do is to go to Arabus [Boutique] and buy a nice, flashy red tie or a white pocket square or something like that on a black suit. Or go to Mahogany's and buy a nice 3-piece suit and a pair of $600 shoes. But don't come all studded up because you want to show your individuality. Rings in the nose and bells on the ears and...

This interestingly does not prohibit the mother from getting the ears of her little infant daughter pierced, if she so wishes. We ensured that that scope was there for things like that. I mean, can you image what kind of problems the principal would have if three persons turn up to school one morning with studs in the middle of their tongues at the general assembly? Order gone! Chaos! Bedlam would reign supreme, man. We cannot have that and our students going away on a debate someplace with other students at an international gathering and our students' lips are loaded with studs. They don't even do that in Africa anymore.

So, Madam Speaker, there is method to this and do you know what? Sometime earlier this month, a couple of us members saw on CNN where in the State of New York—New York, which has its 42nd Street and all these other places where you see some individuality and individualism from one extreme to the other—is making it illegal for high school age children to do these things to themselves. When I saw that on the news, this private member's motion was actually in ahead of the time they were thinking about it. That was their proposal for their state legislator. So in New York—one of the most liberal and cosmopolitan cities—they have realised the detriment that young people are doing to themselves by these practices and are making moves to curb them.

The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town raised an issue about a young lady who contracted some infection. In the 12 June 1999 issue of The New Scientist (and you can get this on the Internet from the Newswire) there is an article "Pierced to the Heart." I would just, Madam Speaker, crave your indulgence to read this to the honourable house: "People born with heart defects who pierce their ears or other body parts risk developing life threatening heart valve infections. Doctors from the Mayo Clinic in Rochester, Minnesota studied 445 patients with congenial heart defects. Those with piercing had a one in four chance of developing endomyocarditis, a dangerous infection of the heart valves presumably caused by bacteria that initially infected the piercing. Carol Wards, who led the team, says that if such patients insist on body piercing, these should be accompanied by antibiotics."

Madam Speaker, that is not something I manufactured. The Mayo Clinic is one of the most prestigious and respected medical institutions in the world, and that is what their researchers have found. So, are we saying that this motion is flawed because we are not allowing people the freedom to disfigure their bodies? Madam Speaker, I am going to tell you something else. I read sociology too, that is what my first degree is in. And I am not an expert and I don't know it all but I tell you what, there is hardly anyone in Cayman who is as widely read as I am, and I did not just start.

I want to read something from a book called Escapism, written by a Chinese man, called [?]. Just a small excerpt. "Cruelty and limited imagination. Cruelty is not one of the seven deadly sins of medieval theology, an omission that surprises modern sensibility. For we have come to see the deliberate infliction of pain as possibly the worst ever. Cruel and crude have the same root—both speak of a rawness that is part of our biological nature which can be removed through acts of cumulative refinement. Cruelty may thus simply be the effect of an immature mind."

All the more reason why we should try to shelter and shield our school children from these kinds of things. Imagine the pain without the benefits of anaesthesia! The tongue (I also found out in my research) is one of the most sensitive organs of the human body and when we pierce that with unhygienic objects, we run the risk—I mean, the nerves can be paralysed so that its function can cease for life.

Madam Speaker, this is not something that I drew up for votes. I have reached the stage now where votes don't bother me too much, for reasons I have stated and for reasons as time goes on which will become obvious. But I take my responsibility here seriously. I can politic and campaign like anyone else. But I shudder at the political posturing and the thought that this or any motion is brought out of political posturing.

You know the Fourth Elected Member [for George Town] also suggested that he is the only reasonable person in the Parliament. Well, I believe that that comment was made either in jest or purely for personal consumption. So I don't need to say anymore than those two comments. This Parliament is full of reasonable people, you see.

So, Madam Speaker, the motion is well in order. I respect the position of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, and I understand too that his position after the break was a little less assertive or aggressive than his position before the break. I was happy that he had a little change of heart. I was happy because that is what Parliament should be about. And, I am not putting his ideas down because that is his position and I respect that, but I say that he must also respect other members' rights to express with courage their convictions and their sincerity.

Madam Speaker, the government is not always kind to me. Indeed, I find myself more often on the short-end of the government than I do on the long end. I discoursed with them and I discussed it with them because I have a responsibility too and I am happy when the ministers over there and me as the mover of a motion can come to common ground without all this cut and thrust and political put-downs in debate. I believe that the time is going to come when the lion will lie down with the lamb.

So I am happy that the government accepted this. How the government crafts the motion is left up to their discretion. Certainly, they understand what is called for in the motion and they understand the perimeters and I don't want to try to handcuff them by saying it should be done this way or it should be done that way, or when it should be done. I am only too happy to have the motion accepted.

I thank all those who supported it. I thank the Fourth Elected Member for George Town for his usual challenge for me to rise to my heights in a debate. As long as the challenge is on reasonable grounds I am not offended, and I hope that he can respect the position that I have taken and realise that this is done for the better of all concerned.

Thank you.

The Deputy Speaker: That concludes the debate on Private Member's Motion No. 14/1999 as amended. The question is: "BE IT RESOLVED THAT the Government considers taking steps to make it an offence for any person to tattoo the bodies of children under the age of 18 years and that any person or persons carrying on the business of tattooing be required to be a regis- tered nurse or licenced under the Health Practitioners Law (1995 Revision);

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT any person or persons carrying on such business in which studs, earrings, clips, rings or any other similar objects are implanted or attached to the bodies of any person under the age of 18 years be required to have the written consent of the parents."

I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can we have a division, Madam Speaker?

Dr. Frank McField: Definitely, Madam Speaker.

[Prayers read by the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. I have no apologies this morning. Item 3 on today's Order Paper—

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, before you begin the business, I wonder if you would permit me to thank you for notifying me that it is the intention of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town to withdraw as seconder for Private Member's Motions 19/99 and 20/99, and to take this opportunity to ask if there are any other persons on the backbench who would be willing to speak to me in regard to seconding these motions in his place. Thank you.

The Speaker: Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Presentation of Papers and Reports. Second Interim Report of the Select Committee of the whole House on the Elections Law (1998 Revision). The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

PRESENTATION OF PAPERS AND REPORTS

SECOND INTERIM REPORT OF THE SELECT COMMITTEE OF THE WHOLE HOUSE ON THE ELECTIONS LAW (1998 REVISION)

Hon. James M. Ryan: I beg to lay on the Table of this honourable House the Second Interim Report of the Select Committee of the whole House on the Elections Law (1998 Revision).

The Speaker: So ordered.

Do you wish to speak to it? The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The select committee to review the Elections Law (1995 Revision) was established by the Legislative Assembly on 21 April 1997 with the passing of Government Motion No. 2/97. The motion read: "WHEREAS there has been a considerable passage of time since the Elections Law was enacted;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Elections Law (1995 Revision) be referred to a Select Committee of the whole House for review and for it to formulate principles in accordance with which specific amendments to this and any other relevant laws may be drafted and brought to this Honourable House by the Honourable First Official Member."

"WHEREAS there has been a considerable passage of time since the Elections Law was enacted;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Elections Law (1995 Revision) be referred to a Select Committee of the whole House for review and for it to formulate principles in accordance with which specific amendments to this and any other relevant laws may be drafted and brought to this Honourable House by the Honourable First Official Member."

I moved that motion. In accordance with the provision of Standing Order 72, you nominated me to be the chairman of that committee.

The committee has thus far held five meetings, 15 December 1997; 24, 31 March; 24 May; and 11 June 1999 when the committee considered this report. The recommendations are: "The committee wishes to report that it has reviewed two issues which it considers necessary at this time to be put in place. These relate to amending the Elections Law to make provision for a permanent Register of Electors in the island and for voter's registration cards. The committee accordingly considered and agreed to a draft bill to incorporate these provisions.

"The draft bill entitled 'A bill for a Law to amend the Elections Law (1998 Revision)' is appended hereto and forms part of this report. The permanent register will be based upon the register currently enforced and will be dated shortly after the coming into force of the amending legislation. The register thereafter is to be updated on a quarterly basis to provide for the addition to the role of those who have become as electors since the previous updating. It will also provide for the removal from the register of persons who have died or who are no longer qualified by other reasons, such as non-residence or conviction for criminal offences. Information concerning deaths, criminal offences and other matters is to be provided to the Supervisor of Elections.

"Voter's registration cards will be instituted and are to be produced by the elector when he/she votes on the occasion of any general or by-election. The committee therefore recommends to this honourable House that the Elections Law be amended as set out in the draft bill and that amending legislation be presented to this honourable House by the government as soon as possible.

“The committee further wishes to report that it is in the process of reviewing a number of other issues and that it will in due course report to the House. The Committee agrees that this report be the second interim report of this select committee and that it be laid on the Table of this honourable House.”

The Speaker: Moving on to item 4 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Deferred question 41 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE MEMBERS/MINISTERS

DEFERRED QUESTION 41

No. 41: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture to state what sports' programmes or camps the government will be organising or supporting during the upcoming summer holidays.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The government, through the Ministry of Sports, in conjunction with the national associations, will be conducting summer sports camps in football, netball, swimming, cricket, basketball and volleyball. In addition, members of the sports office will be assisting the Social Services Department with the sports aspects of their summer camp. The proposed dates and venues for the sports camps are as follows:

Sport	Proposed Dates
Basketball:	6 – 16 July 9 am to 5 pm
Cricket:
Primary School	6 – 9 July
U-15	12 – 16 July
Cayman Brac	9 – 20 August

Football	Proposed Dates
Darrell's Camp	12 – 16 July
Cayman Brac	5 – 16 July
Scholars Camp	10 – 16 August
FC International	23 – 27 August
CNB Cayman Classic	9 August
North Side	9 – 13 August
Bodden	19 – 23 July

Netball	Proposed Dates
Grand Cayman	19 – 23; 26 - 30 July
	2 – 6; 9 – 13 August
Cayman Brac	23 – 27 August

Swimming	Proposed Dates
Stingray Swim Camp	5 – 10 July
Learn to Swim	12 - 30 July; 16 – 27 August
Open Lap Swim	2 – 14 August

Volleyball	Proposed Dates
Kids Camp	9 – 14 August

Sailing Club	Proposed Dates
	5-8; 26-29 July
	2-5; 16-19; 23-26 August

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether any of these camps, other than the ones a North Side and Bodden Town are structured to accommodate and facilitate youngsters from the eastern districts, i.e., Bodden Town, East End and North Side?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The football will be North Side from 13-19 August and it will encompass all age groups. Bodden Town, 19 - 23 July, all age groups. East End, 12 - 16 July. Net Ball, North Side 26 - 30 July, Bodden Town 19 - 23 July. As the learned member is aware, there is one central pool so all those swim programmes will be conducted in George Town for the time being. And the same goes with the sailing club camps as well.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Other than the first one, which is basketball, can the minister give the House an indication of the time involved in these camps? Is it half a day or full day camp? Also can the honourable minister tell the House what arrangements are in place if it is more than half a day for transportation and meals, etc. for the youngsters?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed that with the exception of the swimming camps the other camps will be half-day camps.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state through what media the kids and their parents are being informed about all of these camps?

The Speaker: Before I call on the honourable minister, I would entertain a motion to suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) in order for Question Time to continue.

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I move that the relevant Standing Order be suspended.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say aye. Those against no.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 O'CLOCK.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that each of the individual camping groups has been doing various forms of advertising. The sports office has compiled a list of the proposed dates and venues for the various camps, which has been sent to the press.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if this schedule that has been given in the answer is similar to last year's? Or are there any areas where there has been enhancement? If so, can she point that out?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: It is my understanding that for the most part it is similar to that of last year because it worked quite well. On the Brac the times have been increased due to the fact that there is now a resident coach to accommodate that demand. And with the sailing club they have been able to add more segments to deal with the various age groups as it increased in popularity with the camp.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if there have been any requests from any of these sporting organisations to the ministry for assistance which have been denied?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed that the sports office and the ministry are unaware of any requests that have been denied, and the assistance will be two part: some with financing and some with personnel from the sports office.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House what dates have been set for the summer programme at the Bodden Town Civic Centre run by the community development officer? I notice that football has been set for the 19-23 July, but I know there's another programme on at the Civic Centre at that time, round about August.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: Would the member be so kind as to repeat the question? I was taking instruction during the course of the question.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town, please repeat.

Miss Heather Bodden: I am asking the honourable minister if she could tell the House what dates have been set for the summer programme which happened last year and is scheduled again this year at the Bodden Town Civic Centre run by the Bodden Town Community Development Officer.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: That programme is a Social Services programme and I don't have the date in hand. But I will give an undertaking to provide the date at a later time. I would need to contact the Social Services to find out what date they have scheduled.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if the participants in these camps are expected to pay any fees? If so, what are the fees? If not, how are the camps paid for?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed that there will be various levels of fees that are expected to be paid and the method by which this is done is that the camps will have a number of scholarships offered to persons in need. If there are requests that come in from such persons to the ministry and there is money in our sports grants then it will be assessed on an individual basis or a club basis. I do not at this time have a breakdown for all of the clubs because a lot of them are doing it on their own. As to the amounts charged, I don't have that information here. I can undertake to provide it if it is so desired by the Elected Member for North Side.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I would appreciate receiving these fees. I think I understood the minister to say that scholarships would be offered to children who could not afford. I wonder if she could elaborate on what that scholarship is, unless I misunderstood the honourable minister.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed that the scholarships would be from the clubs themselves in the form of a waiver of the requisite fee.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, the member asking question 45 is not in the Chamber, so we will move on to question 51 and return to that later. Question 51 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 51

No. 51: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources if Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd provides any complimentary cellular telephones to any government employee or any elected official.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd does not provide complimentary cellular telephone service to any government employee or elected official.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say whether or not the company provides any service complimentary to this category of persons?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd, in accordance with an agreement with government provides a number of cellular lines for government use equivalent to and in lieu of rental payments for Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd use of government facilities at the Northward telecommunications tower.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House who has access to these lines and who decides how access is given?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The distribution of lines falls under the telecommunications department and these are distributed in accord with the demands from government.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister elaborate on his phrase the "demands" for the lines? I would like to find out if the lines are allotted by seniority, according to department or ministry, or by any other rank or means that would warrant who has access to these lines by virtue of the job performed or the business of their schedules.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I would like to make it clear that the equipment that is utilised on these lines is government equipment. The lines, as I understand it, are distributed to departments that have a high priority in regard to having access to these types of phones. If the member is asking me about the ministry or the immediate department, yes, we all have some of the phones, but it is all government equipment.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Can the honourable minister tell the House how many of these telephones have been issued by the telecommunications department to the various civil service departments, and the names of those departments? The cellular telephones, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I did not anticipate the question that was just asked, but I will give the undertaking to give the inventory of the phones. I have no problem having the telecommunications office circulate that to members.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I would appreciate that list being circulated to members of this Parliament as in the Finance Committee last held a motion was passed requesting these numbers and the names of persons holding these hand-held telephones and radios within government, but Parliament has not received that reply as yet either.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: The minister said in his answer that in lieu of payment for use of the tower at Northward Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd supplies a certain amount of lines even though the equipment used is owned by government. Can the honourable minister say where this policy has come from? Why it is not a straightforward business transaction whereby Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd pays an arranged fee for whatever use of this tower, and in turn government pays the same for whatever use provided by Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I really was not a party to the agreement between Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd and government. It is my understanding of the franchise that this was part of the agreement, that they would provide certain services to government. That is as much as I can tell the member. The services are there, as I have pointed out, and it is because we have the bunker up at Northward Prison and I understand they actually utilise part of our antennae.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: For purposes of clarity, is the minister saying that the use of the bunker and/or tower at Northward by Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd is part and parcel of the franchise agreement?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: That is my understanding.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, not wanting to run too much of a risk here I want to say to the minister that I have seen that franchise and I have read that franchise and I have not seen anything like that. Perhaps the minister would give an undertaking to provide the answer in whatever form he can, in writing or however, regarding that specific arrangement and how that was arrived at.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I am not going to take the member to task, but it is my understanding that the arrangement was made with Cable and Wireless (CI) Ltd and the Cayman Islands Government, and it forms a part of that agreement. I will give him the undertaking that I will have it checked out—but I know for sure that's exactly how it is.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries the next question is 52, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 52

No. 52: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources to state government's policy regarding the importation into the country of pets such as cats and dogs.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, it seems I should have extended this. Somebody just asked me about the Bullfrogs! However this is a different question.

The policy of the Cayman Islands Government regarding the importation of cats and dogs is derived from the Animals Law (1999 Revision). It is outlined in the brochure entitled "Conditions for the Importation of cats and dogs into the Cayman Islands," which is available to the public from the Department of Agriculture upon request.

All dogs and cats entering the Cayman Islands are required to have an import permit issued by the Department of Agriculture. Import permits are issued once the following health requirements are satisfied: 1) that the animal has been issued with an official health certificate endorsed by the relevant government authority (usually the Ministry or Departments responsible for Agriculture of the country of origin); 2) if coming from a country where rabies is endemic, the animal must be vaccinated against rabies no more than one year and not less than 30 days prior to arrival; 3) the animal must be treated with an acceptable preparation which has residual action against ticks; 4) an application fee of $50.00 is paid.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House what the procedure is if number 1 on this list of requirements is not complied with?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: It is my understanding that if any of the requirements here are not dealt with and somebody brings an animal into the country the department would then have to take the necessary action as required under the Animals Law.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say if the "necessary action" is a euphemism for putting the animal down, or if the officers are allowed some discretion?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: While I am responsible for Agriculture, the decision has to be taken by the Chief in charge of Agriculture and I would have to abide by his ruling on it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if within this policy there is a list of certain types of cats and/or dogs which are prohibited from being imported to the islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The member is correct. There are many breeds that have been excluded from importation into the islands. We try as much as possible to encourage persons who want to bring in that breed of dog not to bring it into the country.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, we will move on to question 53, standing in the name of Elected Member for North Side.

QUESTION 53

No. 53: Mrs. Edna Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture when will the Old Man Bay playing field be completed.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: The Old Man Bay playing field is scheduled to be completed and ready for use at the end of June.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Can the honourable minister say what has taken this project so long to be completed, seeing back in October 1998 I was told in reply to a question that the field was near completion at that time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: A number of factors have caused a delay on the project. Firstly, the high salt content of the topsoil delayed the establishment of the grass cover significantly. The Public Works Department tested several sources of topsoil and it all had high salt content. The soil was treated in accordance with advice from the Agricultural Department and an overseas testing laboratory to correct the problem. Despite this, the high saline levels contributed significantly to the grass taking much longer to establish than it was originally anticipated.

Secondly, the lack of water supply on site contributed to the delay in establishing a good grass cover. Water had to be trucked in with the assistance of the fire department. Inevitably watering was not as regular as if there had been a plentiful source on site. And as the member knows there is no piped water in North Side as of yet.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister would say where this topsoil was purchased, and if any tests were carried out on that topsoil before spending money to seed a soil that could not produce the grass we needed for the field?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I would have to get that information from the Public Works Department. Once in receipt of the same I shall be happy to share it with the member and/or other honourable members.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister could say how many truckloads of water were delivered to the field by the fire department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: That information would also have to be gotten from the Public Works Department and any specific questions like that which were not anticipated in the substantive question that is now before the honourable House.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Can the honourable minister say what the total cost of the Old Man Bay playfield project is to date, with the setbacks of the grass and the extra expenditure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am informed by the Public Works Department that the sum of C$445,000 is the current estimate for the completion of the field. As all members know, it is nearly impossible to state what extra costs will be on any capital project until the project is 100% completed.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: In previous questions regarding both the North Side and the Bodden Town playing fields it was brought to the attention of the House that there would be no covered seating for either of the locations. I am assuming that in the answer given about the completion date that this does not include that type of seating since the decision was made. Does the honourable minister have any information at this time as to why that decision was made? She said she would try to find that out.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I did enquire of the Public Works Department as to that specific question just asked. My information is as follows: The Old Man Bay playfield, as far as the bleachers are concerned, the original estimate from which the brief was made up on 12 August 1996 did not include that. Should it be required, as I am understanding is the case, we could perhaps do one similar to the one we have done in East End. From the estimates from Public Works it will probably run between $16,000 to $20,000 for the larger bleachers, and that's per bleacher. These are only preliminary figures from the Public Works Department and if required they have said that they will give us more specific quotes. Once that is the direction and the quotes come then, obviously, we will follow the normal procedure and bring it to budget or supplementary.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I find it unusual that in the original brief covered bleachers were not included for the district of North Side seeing that in a question I brought here in October 1998 the honourable minister said she had submitted the request for this sum in the estimates, referring to the bleachers.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: As stated, the brief that I have been provided with is a brief outlining specifications dated 12 August 1996. My instructions from the Sports Office as well as the Public Works Department, it was not included then and last year's budget preparation, it is my understanding it was included, and for whatever reason the funds were not fully provided. That's my understanding.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister is in a position to give the House a breakdown, item by item, of the $445,000 that it has cost this country for a playfield in the district of Old Man Bay?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I am not in possession of that information this morning. I can merely give an undertaking to the member for North Side if she wishes to have exact details for the expenditure in her district.

The Speaker: This has been a prolonged time for questioning. I am going to have to limit this to supplementaries after this. The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, I don't have a supplementary, sir. I would just like to tell the minister that I would appreciate a breakdown of the project.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, question 54 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 54

No. 54: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to state whether any objections have been raised against the government's Hepatitis B vaccination programme.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, objection to the programme was raised by one member of the general public.

With your permission, Mr. Speaker, there is another question following this and I would like to read an article that was in last Friday's Caymanian Compass, and to also table the article. It was authored by a professor of medicine at one of the most prestigious medical schools in North America. He is also the recipient of several US grants for research into hepatitis and has devoted the last ten years to this field. In commenting on hepatitis B he said: "It's a very serious infection of the liver which is caused by a specific virus. On reflecting on the fact that in the United States of America there are about 300,000 cases reported annually, of these cases, 5,000 people die each year."

Going on, he says "as there is yet no cure you must take steps to avoid acquiring this disease. Avoid the risky habits that pass the virus. The best protection is undoubtedly the vaccine. This triggers your immune system to fight the virus whenever you become exposed. It is usually given in three separate doses and is especially recommended for all babies, children, and young persons under 18 years of age, anyone at risk and pregnant women should be tested. If infected, this can be passed on to their babies. The baby will become sick and may become a carrier. Today most public health departments, paediatricians, and obstetricians strongly recommend that new-born babies be given the vaccine. Babies thus vaccinated are protected against ever becoming infected."

"All the scientifically unbiased studies conclude that the benefits of vaccination far outweigh any of the minor adverse reactions that at times occur. The Center for Disease Control (CDC) in the United States declares unequivocally that the reports of brain damaged or paralysed children attributed to the use of the vaccine have no basis at all. We have in every instance where adequate neurological studies have been undertaken found to be due to some other cause. It is most unfortunate that certain media in an attempt to improve ratings and grab headlines prey on an otherwise unrelated to the vaccine disaster and attribute it without an iota of evidence as being the result of taking the vaccine."

I felt that for the information of the House and the general public and to give some background information on this disease. Thank you.

The Speaker: You said you would table it?

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: So ordered.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say definitively whether or not this one objection the government received is the only known case of objections brought to the government's attention?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I am informed that one other member of the public made a claim. But it was not in relation to hepatitis B.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether or not there is any ground to the claim that when this immunisation is administered to persons with certain allergies it triggers an extreme reaction which can cause worse symptoms than the disease itself? To his knowledge, is there any medical ground that this is the case as some people who have suffered the reaction claimed?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Mr. Speaker. On information that we have gathered by the world renowned CDC out of Atlanta there has not been qualified evidence to prove it.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries the next question is 55, standing in the name of the Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 55

No. 55: Dr. Frank McField asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation how many cases of untoward reaction to Hepatitis B Vaccines have been reported in the Cayman Islands since the vaccination programme was started, and what were the reactions involved.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Since 3 November 1997 when the Hepatitis B vaccine was included in the National Immunisation Programme, 3,477 doses have been administered to 1,159 infants and young children less than 5 years of age and 2,214 doses have been administered to 976 school age children.

Minor, temporary side effects were reported by 16 children. These side effects were as follows:

Blister at injection site	1
Headache	2

Dizziness	5
Fainting	1
Vomiting	1
Weakness	1
Muscle pain	4
Weakness in limbs	1
Muscle weakness	1
Joint pains	2
Tiredness	4
Numbness in arm	2

All the above reported side effects were temporary, lasting for short periods ranging from a few hours to a few days. One young boy was reported to have a serious neurological disorder in the period following vaccination.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say if the same amount of the vaccination was given to this boy mentioned to have suffered some kind of neurological disorder, and whether other children were administered with the vaccination at the same time, and whether or not he got his dosage from the same source the received theirs? In other words, from the same vial?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: For accuracy I would prefer to check that with the Public Health Department to see what other children were given from a similar batch. I will undertake to provide that to the House.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Boddén: Can the honourable minister give a progress report on this young boy who had a serious neurological disorder from this vaccination?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I would not have that information at hand. I think the child visits the United States. I would prefer to make sure what is supplied from there.

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Boddén: Can the honourable minister tell the House if government is going to continue this immunisation programme for Hepatitis B?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: As I said earlier, there is no overwhelming evidence to suggest that the vaccination programme should cease. In fact, the benefits to the vast majority of people far outweighs the very rare cases that do not tolerate the vaccine well.

Just for information, what we have done through the Public Health is that parents will be given a comprehensive information sheet which they can use to make an informed decision as to whether they wish their child to have the vaccine or not. With the information sheet will be a questionnaire about all allergies. This will include a consent authority to initiate the course of vaccination. On receipt of the form, if the nurse has any concern about the appropriateness to proceed, the child will be referred to the doctor.

Also, as a follow up, after each dose a simple questionnaire will be sent home to ascertain if there have been any reactions. A further dose will not be given until this form is received and no contra indications to proceed have been identified.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister state if the young boy being referred to as receiving some neurological disorder as a result of the vaccination, or following the vaccination . . . were any enquiries made about any allergies or condition that might have caused him not to be a good candidate for this vaccination? Was an enquiry made at the time this child was given the vaccine about his specific medical history?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Before the shots are given a consent form is sent out. I would have to check and see what degree of questioning in regard to the child's medical history was on that information, but they have to get permission from the parents before the vaccine is given.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: This situation regarding this young boy's disorder seems to have called quite a bit of public attention to this matter. I would therefore be very surprised if the medical authorities have not isolated this particular case and investigated it in order to answer all of these questions I am asking. If the minister is not at this particular point in the position to answer these questions would the minister be prepared to give us a bit more detail regarding the situation of this young person? How was it administered? Was from a common dosage given to other children? Did he have something that was isolated and may have had something to do with the vaccine rather than his particular medical condition? What was done in regard to that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I will attempt to get this and provide the information to the House.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House how hepatitis B is normally contracted?

The Speaker: We are going a bit far from the substantive question, but if the minister has the information he may answer it. The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, and thank God for the Caymanian Compass! "Who can get Hepatitis B?" And with your permission, I will read this, which I have just tabled.

The Speaker: Certainly.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: "The straightforward answer to this is anyone can get Hepatitis B. It is spread by direct contact with a number of fluids secreted by the body. These include blood, fluids from the vagina, or by direct contact with the seamen of an infected person. The disease therefore can be acquired by sexual intercourse, by sharing needles used to shoot illicit drugs, and most unfortunately even during the delivery of a baby. It may be acquired by living with a person who you may not even know is infected and sharing household items."

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I believe that I understood the honourable minister to say that consent forms are sent out to parents before administering the vaccination. Would he agree that this does in fact suggest that there is some degree of risk? And if this is accepted, whether it is normal to administer an allergy test prior to vaccinating a child?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: With the consent of the parent coming, if something is identified I feel sure that Public Health would invite the parent to come in and pursue if there are any doubts when they respond to the questionnaire.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I wish to thank the minister. What I am trying to get at is that most parents are not trained in this discipline and would have to depend upon the professionalism of the person administering the medication or vaccination. What I was trying to get at is because consent forms are sent out it would suggest that this is not a normal procedure, that it is accompanied by some degree of risk. Because of that, would the person administering this take the precaution of administering a type of allergy test so they can determine whether or not that child can take that type of vaccination?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: To the best of my knowledge these consent forms are sent out with all types of immunisations that would be given. If there is a possibility of a family member, specifically a parent or guardian, knowing of a problem after reading the consent form, I feel sure that as a responsible parent they would discuss with the caregiver the possible ramifications. And if there is a situation where children have had untoward reactions to any of these immunisations then what the honourable member has said could be carried out.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I noticed in the answer that the honourable minister stated that one young boy was reported to have had a serious neurological disorder in the period following the vaccination. I am wondering if the honourable minister could say whether he accepts that the vaccination might have caused this serious neurological disorder? Is there any conclusive proof that this might have been attributed to the vaccination given to the child?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Mr. Speaker. As I have read and said, there is no conclusive scientific evidence that this vaccination causes this problem. There are over 300 million people in the world, I understand, who have had this vaccination. As I mentioned earlier, in the United States alone there are over 300,000 people infected with it, 5,000 people die annually. I think what the medical authorities do is to weigh one against the other and the long-term benefits. As with anything, there are risks, and I am very sorry for what has happened to this family. But there is no conclusive evidence as yet given to us that this would have been the cause.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town. I am going to have to limit now to three additional supplementaries because we are getting into a long Question Time.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I can guarantee you that I don't have three additional supplementaries, but I do have one short one that I think is perhaps in favour of the minister in that I would ask him whether or not science is perfect. I guess he can reply to that.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Gladly, Mr. Speaker. And after having the opportunity to pray the last two mornings, there was only one person perfect who ever came to this earth!

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: My question is a follow up to the one asked by the Third Elected Member for George Town in regard to the young boy who suffered serious neurological disorder subsequent to the vaccination. What assistance has government offered in this case, even though the minister said it hasn't been proven it was caused by this? Seeing that this disorder took place shortly after the vaccination, what assistance has government offered to this young child?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: As of this date I do not know of the family requesting any assistance with this as we cannot conclusively say that the Health Services Department was responsible for this. To go forward I would assume, off the record, that it would be admitting liability, which we do not intend to do at this time.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Dalmain Ebanks: I would like to ask the minister if this vaccination is compulsory.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That's a good question. No, it is not compulsory. As I said, the parents are told about it and it has to be with their consent. It is suggested, especially for teenagers and young people, when we look at one point something million visitors coming to the Cayman Islands . . . incidentally, there are no indigent cases . . . or people who live in the Cayman Islands. Where this has been found, most of what comes through the Cayman Islands in regard to Hepatitis B is from visitors.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, the next question is 56, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 56

No. 56: Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister for who prays much [Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation] what are the present functions of the Forensic Laboratory at the George Town Hospital.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The present functions of the Forensic Laboratory can be divided into two main areas: 1) Drug Analysis or Forensic Chemistry; and 2) body Fluid Analysis or Forensic Toxicology.

Within the area of Drug Analysis, the following procedures take place:

- Screening tests and confirmation of seized drugs, e.g., cocaine, cannabis (ganja), heroin, amphetamines, etcetera;
- Screening tests and confirmation of presence of illicit drugs in drug utensils;
- Screening of unknown substances and subsequent confirmation of their identity.

As part of Body Fluid Analysis, the following procedures take place:

- Urine analysis (screening and confirmation) for the standard range of drugs of abuse, for example: cocaine and metabolites, cannabinoids, opiates (e.g., heroin), benzodiazepines, barbiturates, phencyclidine (PCP).
- Blood analysis for determination of alcohol concentration and presence of other drugs (prescribed and non-prescribed).
- Eye fluid for determination of alcohol concentration.
- Stomach contents analysis for drugs and possible poisons including insecticides there is also capability for determining drugs and poisons in body tissues like liver and kidney.

The range of clients served by the Forensic Laboratory includes the following:

- Drugs Task Force
- Her Majesty's customs
- The Royal Cayman Islands Police Service (various district Police Stations)
- Cayman Counselling Centre
- Her Majesty's Prison
- The Fire Department
- Immigration Department (work permit purposes)
- Physicians
- The coroner

In addition to activities list above, staff at the Forensic Laboratory also visit suspected crime scenes to collect samples (trace evidence) for analysis.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps if I had known the answer was going to be in this form I would not have risked the question with all of the names I see. Anyway, can the honourable minister state if at present the Forensic Laboratory has any facilities to do any DNA diagnosis?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, not at this time.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I think it is safe comment to say that is considered by certain departments within the Royal Cayman Islands Police to be a very important aspect of investigation. I am wondering if there is any intention or if there has been any thought given to upgrading the laboratory with the proper equipment and personnel to be able to do this.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Once again, a good question. Although very important as part of the judicial process, our forensic lab is not a healthcare facility. It is a laboratory involved in the application of analytic techniques and medical knowledge to throw light on questions involved with crime. The main focus of the minister of health was to answer (when we were constructing the present hospital) the country's desperate need for new healthcare facilities.

The provision of DNA testing is an expensive exercise. But if it is decided that it is necessary it can be introduced subject to the funds being approved for the necessary capital development and operational costs.

During the planning stages of the new hospital the idea of providing complete forensic services including DNA testing and a firing range for ballistic examinations was raised, primarily by the Royal Cayman Islands Police. However, the steering committee for the hospital project gave careful consideration to this request. The decision was made that the project budget could not be stretched to include the enhanced services at this point in time, but that in order for these at a later stage to be provided the roof of the forensic lab would be strengthened so that it could take a second floor if it was decided to put these services in place. That has been done, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if he has any idea what would be the cost to upgrade the facility?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The start-up operational cost would be in the region of $127,748. This would cover equipment and reagents, $70,700; staffing $57,048. The capital cost would be a bit more difficult to estimate. The forensic pathologist has estimated a need for an extra 1,260 square feet, which at hospital type building cost $200 per square foot. This would result in a cost of approximately a quarter of a million dollars.

When I see this figures coming through, the last time I saw for a school was $246 per square foot. I don't know what it would cost on this.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Seeing as the lab was originally constructed with the roof being the floor, with any extension going up to a second storey, perhaps that high cost might be a bit lower. But I would like to ask the minister if there have been any discussions between the ministry, the pathologist and persons in charge of the relevant department in the police force as to making any move forward with this once the need is justified.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, we have had at least two meetings in regard to this. We have had discussions with the Commissioner of Police and we have also in the past had discussions with the Chief Secretary's office about the way forward on this. That was the former Commissioner, not this present one.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Needless to say, the reason why I have asked the question is because personally I believe the situation warrants looking into. Without going into a lot of detail I believe that times are changing. I believe that requirements are changing, and with certain things that are now occurring I believe that the matter should be looked into as expeditiously as possible. I would ask the minister to give an undertaking with a view to possible seeking supplementary funding if it's available in order to bring the forensic lab up to the level we have been discussing in order to satisfy the requirements of the Royal Cayman Islands Police.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: With the consent of this honourable House, and if it's deemed that important to go forward in discussions with the honourable Financial Secretary and all the members of this House I would have no problem supporting that.

The Speaker: May I ask honourable members, since we have gone so far this morning, we can continue for another 45 minutes to lunch, rather than taking the morning break?

Okay?

Are there any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries, moving on to question 57, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 57

No. 57: Mr. Linford A. Pierson asked the Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development to state the government's cash reserve ratio for banks with "A" and "B" class licences; and government's approved code of conduct under which banks operate.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Monetary Authority does not apply a cash reserve ratio to banks because the regulatory tool adopted internationally under the Basle Committee Guidelines is the capital adequacy ratio. All banks are expected to maintain an adequate level of liquid assets to support their operations. The adequacy of a bank's liquidity is monitored over time by reference to ratios such as liquid assets to deposits, liquid assets to total assets, loans to deposits, the availability of lines of credit and parent company/head office support. In addition, all branches and subsidiaries of foreign banks are required, at the time of licensing, to obtain a formal undertaking from the parent or head office to honour all deposit liabilities and other creditor claims of the Cayman licensee.

Banks themselves may use a cash reserve ratio for their own internal purposes, but for prudential supervision it is the capital adequacy ratio, which is the relevant measure.

With regard to the approved code of conduct under which the banks operate, the banks are governed by the Banks and Trust Companies Law (1995 Revision). This Law is supplemented by the Bankers' Association Code of Conduct which provides guidelines for the prudent conduct of banking business in or from within Cayman. In addition, the Governor-in-Council is in its final review process of an Anti-Money Laundering Code of Practice to be issued under section 20(1) of the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law 1996. This head Code requires all relevant industry associations to issue their own industry specific anti-money laundering guidelines consistent with the framework established by the head Code.

The Bankers' Association is already working on its own anti-money laundering "Code of Best Practice."

I should mention the codes for the various sectors of the financial industries will not be left entirely up to their discretion. There are codes that will have to meet with the approval of the Monetary Authority and the government and consistent with the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct legislation.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: In regard to the last statement made by the honourable member, I wonder if he can state what codes will be dealt with through the Monetary Authority.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Firstly, the codes that would be connected to the sections of the industry that are regulated by the Monetary Authority, we have that affecting the insurance sector, the code for the mutual funds industry, that was submitted for consideration at the same time as the principal code, the one affecting banking activities, and also at this time we are looking at credit unions and also building societies. The entire gambit of the financial industry. It is hoped that there will be some oversight provided by the Monetary Authority in the application of these codes.

HOUSE VISITOR

Miss Cayman Islands

The Speaker: Before I take another supplementary, I would like to recognise in the VIP Gallery the reigning Miss Cayman Islands. We were to have met with her this morning. Contrary to what we just agreed I would like to suspend proceedings in order for members to have an opportunity to meet the reigning Miss Cayman Islands. We can come back shortly after we have concluded that. Proceedings are suspended.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.09 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.34 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Question Time continuing. The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: In the substantive answer the honourable Third Official Member stated that the Monetary Authority does not apply a cash reserve ratio to bank because the regulatory tool adopted internationally under the Basle Committee Guidelines is the capital adequacy ratio. Can the honourable member state exactly how this capital adequacy ratio works?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: According to the representative from the Monetary Authority the capital adequacy ratio is determined by weighting the various assets of the bank and looking at the risk and exposure. On this basis a capital adequacy ratio is determined. From this risk profile it is understood that the capital adequacy ratio is determined to be set at a level of 12% of the risk while elsewhere internationally it is normally set at 8%.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I wonder if the honourable member could state if there is any minimum amount, or ceiling, that has been provided by a bank establishing in the Cayman Islands and whether that bank has to be a branch of a major bank.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: For the parent bank the minimum capital requirement is that of $50 million. At the subsidiary or branch level it is 15% of the weighted asset, 12% of the risk weighted asset of the subsidiary or branch.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: For clarity, I wonder if the honourable member could just clarify that last statement he made. The 12% of weighted asset value. . . is this of the group accounts? What is this amount?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: That would be of the branch or the subsidiary that is established in the Cayman Islands. The minimum for the parent is that of $50 million. As I mentioned earlier in response to the question, there has to be an indicative support by the parent company of the local financial institution and then the assets of the local financial institution are weighted and a risk profile determined. From this a capital adequacy ratio of 12% is set.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I wish to thank the member for that clarification. Also in the substantive answer the honourable member stated that all banks are expected to maintain an adequate level of liquid assets to support their operation. Perhaps he would be kind enough to expand upon this and state if there is a minimum level of adequacy of liquid assets.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The minimum requirement will be ascertained by the risk profile that emerges in assessing the risk of local financial institutions. This is normally done with the filing of periodic financial information with the Monetary Authority. There is no specified minimum limit or such, or specified percentage limit. It is based on the risk associated with the operation of the institution. That is examined very carefully, and monitored very carefully by the Monetary Authority.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: The honourable member stated earlier in connection with the adequacy ratio that the parent company must have a capitalisation of a minimum of $50 million. I wonder if he could state whether there is any "b" class banks in the island that may not have a parent company with that level of capitalisation.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: As this House would have been advised at an earlier time, the licensing policy of the government at this time in regard to the licensing of banks, firstly, that licensing policy covers three areas: 1) licensing of subsidiaries of banks and major financial institutions; licensing of branches and also affiliates of such financial institutions. In the case of subsidiaries there is a need for the $50 million to be in place. But in the case of "b" banks . . . Mr. Speaker, let me remove the phrase "I think." The risk will have to be ascertained. In the case of "b" banks it is likely that some of them will have parental backing. Some may not have parental backing. But in this instance the capitalisation that is in place would be determined by the level of risk or exposure in terms of what liabilities exist to third parties.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I would just like to move to the 'b' section of my question which deals with the code of conduct. In the answer the honourable member stated that the Banks and Trust Companies Law (1995 Revision) is supplemented by the Bankers' Association Code of Conduct which provides guidelines for the prudent conduct of banking business in or from within Cayman. I wonder if he can state if this code of conduct through the Bankers' Association has been accepted as a policy by government and if so, has there been a limit on the amount of cash that can be taken in by banks under that code of conduct?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The code of conduct as developed by the Bankers' Association mainly deals with the professional conduct of financial institutions and officers within the island. Certain expectations are set. There is a practice that has emerged under the code that banks do not accept cash or sums in excess of $10,000. But this, it is to be recognised, will be superseded by the code of conduct emerging which will be the code of best practice under the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct Law.

Just for the benefit of this honourable House, the principal code that is presently under review by Executive Council will deal with the following other areas: It will establish the definition of 'money laundering,' indicate which service providers are covered by the code, it will require service providers to have in place effective anti-money laundering policies, internal controls and procedures, it will outline procedures and requirements for client identification, that is "know your customer" requirements. It will provide for staff training and educational development. It will establish the requirements for record keeping and provide for the recognition and reporting of suspicious transactions. We can see that it is very comprehensive.

When this is translated into what I would call the subcodes, or codes covering the various sectors, it will outline the specific requirements. For example, what will be applicable to banking institutions and transactions and activities; what will be the requirements under the Companies Management Law and also practices or from practitioners as well. Also, what will be applicable to the mutual funds industry, what will be applicable to other financial institutions such as credit unions and building societies.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I wonder if the honourable member could state if within that code of conduct there is provision for a due diligence exercise to be carried out prior to any substantial transaction.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: I can answer yes. The "know your customer" requirement is a due diligence exercise. It will look at the documentation, what references are provided in effect the bon fide of the customer in question. This is to ensure that the clients that financial institutions are dealing with have a track record established and that such persons can be vouched for.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: This code of best practice that the honourable Third Official Member is referring to, I am assuming that this is the anti money laundering code of practice that will be issued under section 20(1) of the PCCL of 1996. Can the honourable member state if this code that is being developed is as a result of any specific reason or if this is simply a matter of bolstering the regulatory regime.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: It is intended to bolster the regulatory regime and to also ensure the credibility of transactions that are conducted within the Cayman Islands. This is the reason why we have in place the Proceeds of Criminal Conduct legislation. We want, as an international financial centre, to ensure that business conducted in the Cayman Islands can satisfy the high level of scrutiny and we do not want to be taken for granted by anyone who would come along and perceive that there are vulnerabilities to exploit. We also want to make sure that the persons engaging, especially institutions in fiduciary capacity in terms of providing services with the trust of the public at large, that their performance will be at the highest level and that they will have the highest level of competence and also the necessary internal controls will exist within such financial institutions. In effect, to hold everyone accountable that is acting in a fiduciary capacity.

The Speaker: Two additional supplementaries. The Third Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. Linford A. Pierson: I want to preface my question by saying that I am pleased to hear of the very high regulatory standards that we have within our financial industry. I wonder if the honourable member is in a position to say how these compare with international standards, and whether he can give an indication of when we can expect to get the final review completed on the anti-money laundering code of practice that he mentioned in the question.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: In terms of how well we compare with the international financial community, I have no reservations in saying that we compare with the best. We exceed as an international financial centre by far the standards that exist in some of the other centres that can also be regarded as having very good practices.

If we were to go back to the mutual evaluation that was carried out in 1996 by the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force . . . what is quite interesting is that that was about the early formation period of the Caribbean

Financial Action Task Force. And not too long a history for the Financial Action Task Force. What is quite interesting is that at that point in time when the 40 recommendations flowed from the Financial Action Task Force that would require certain infrastructure and legislative requirements to be in place and also for the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force coming up with an additional 19 recommendations, in practically every area—and we are talking about examinations being carried out by disinterested individuals in that these were individuals who did not have any specific reason to come to the Cayman Islands and give us a pat on the back—the overall conclusion of the findings suggested that our financial industry was well regulated.

When we look back from the time of introducing the Mutual Legal Assistance Treaty, from the time of the gentlemen's agreement, we can see that the Cayman Islands has been very proactive in terms of moving forward with our international obligations. We have not waited on pressure being brought from any area. In fact, we have been quite innovative in terms of some of the legislation that we have introduced. For example, the one that we introduced for the segregated portfolio legislation to allow for the expansion of the captive insurance business.

At the last risk insurance managers conference, I was told by one of the regulators that this has been adopted by the regulatory board or I think an affiliation of that order within the state of Illinois. I said why use the Cayman Islands code and it was pointed out that if something was seen to be good, why reinvent the wheel.

From time to time we will be subject to certain criticism by the international community. These are normally levelled by individuals who have certain fixations and don't want to believe that three very small islands in the Caribbean can have a financial regime in place that is as robust and standing equal with theirs on shore. If we were to look at yesterday's paper we would see where certain criticism was directed at the Cayman Islands along with two other international financial centres by the finance minister of France.

I always believe that any individual, regardless of his or her position, should not rush to judgment and make rash statements in absence of the facts. This is a demonstration that there is a level of deficiency in hindsight, insight and foresight. When we look at where we have reached and the role that the Cayman Islands has been playing in the Caribbean Financial Action Task Force the Cayman Islands is presently in the Chair. We would not find that our colleagues in the Caribbean would be agreeable for the Chair to be held by a country whose reputation would be in doubt. We know that such decisions and the influences at work within the international community . . . let's say that our colleagues in the region would be agreeable to this. If there were objections flowing from the financial action task force and other multilateral institutions this would affect the decision to allow the Cayman Islands to hold the Chair and also in terms of how we are viewed internationally.

So we are standing very tall, Mr. Speaker. We are standing up today with the best. We can't allow ourselves to be detracted by adverse criticism because it's only when progress is being made that criticism will be levelled. We will continue to focus on what is right for the Cayman Islands, to do what is right, but more importantly to keep in place the framework that will continue to promote and develop the Cayman Islands as an international financial centre while deterring individuals who would want to come here and abuse our facilities, our financial services and our environment.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: One of the provisions that has been talked about for a long time in connection to our regulatory regime is the provision for deposit insurance. Can the honourable member say how far we have progressed in regard to this aspect?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: There was a bill that was passed in this honourable House not too long ago that set a ceiling for depositors to be assisted up to a sum of $20,000.

The Speaker: I think this would be an appropriate time for us to take the luncheon break. I apologise to the collector of customs and others who have been sitting here for a long time, but the time has come for lunch. So we will suspend until 2.30.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 1.00 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.41 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Question Time continues. Question 58 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 58

No. 58: Miss Heather Bodden asked the Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development will the Customs Department consider increasing the number of revenue collection officers assigned to each arriving international flight at Owen Roberts International Airport.

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: The Customs Department is presently restructuring the Department so that two additional revenue collection officers (cashiers) can be assigned to international flights at the airport, bringing the total to four.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: Can the honourable member say if this means expanding the office space?

The Speaker: The Honourable Third Official Member Responsible for Finance and Economic Development.

Hon. George A. McCarthy: Yes. This will mean working with the Civil Aviation Authority, that is the customs department, in order to expand the space.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, the next question is 59, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 59

No. 59: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works if any further consideration has been given to the establishment of permanent moorings in the George Town Harbour and at Spotts.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Permanent moorings in George Town were proposed after much discussion with the cruise lines' administrative staff. However, the captains of the ships wanted a double point mooring system, which made the cost prohibitive. Therefore, the Port Authority will not be pursuing the installation of cruise ship moorings at this time.

Permanent moorings for Spotts have not been considered as yet. The Port Authority is concentrating its finances to deal with the extensions of the Finger Pier of the George Town dock to ensure a long-term solution of the Islands' cargo needs.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In light of the fact that one of the reasons for the Port Authority considering the installation of permanent moorings was for the purpose of trying to preserve the coral reef in the harbour, can the honourable minister say what the decision not to proceed with permanent moorings does to this attempt to preserve our coral and reefs in this area.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The system as we know it is that there are a number of points in the George Town area indicated by buoys where the cruise ships should drop anchor. Frequently three of these points are in operation. The first one is down near the Eden Rock area which is not now and has not been for some time used.

Our initial thought with the permanent moorings was following the ten year master port development project that we should move that as another phase in order to provide more permanent facilities for the cruise ships and at the same time protect the marine environment from the chains that rake across the ocean floor at times.

These particular areas have been anchored at for quite a substantial amount of time. I believe the government—this one or some other one—will have to look to see how we can remedy the situation in the future as regards the protection of the marine environment. We realise, of course, that even if the permanent moorings were put in place it would be some years before the coral would grow back to any significant length. But I think it was a good objective to have in the initial stages.

The Speaker: Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Can the honourable minister say if any funds were spent by the Port Authority on the cruise ship moorings project? And what amount?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: From the very outset of the concept of permanent moorings, even when the master port development project was being put together there were discussions with the cruiselines and certainly there were many discussions held thereafter. The master port development project was completed in 1994. Discussions were held both with the various cruiselines of the Florida Caribbean Cruise Association, of which there are 13 different lines, with a view that we wanted to ensure that discussions were held with them in order to get more feedback on our movement forward.

Many, many meetings were held and no objection to the movement came forward. So we proceeded along the lines that this was going to be an acceptable solution. The Port Authority spent quite significant sums of money on an annual basis as we moved forward. I think it totalled somewhere in the region of $481,000.

But this work is information that can be used and will be used by the Port Authority now and in the future. So it's not information that is totally useless. It is information that will be useful to the Port Authority as we move forward.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: The honourable minister mentioned that the cruise ships were involved in negotiations all along on this project. Can the honourable minister say whether or not any discussions were held in regard to the cruise ships bearing a portion of the cost of the permanent moorings in light of the fact that in his answer he mentioned that the double point moorings were cost prohibitive.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: From the outset we talked to . . . perhaps I shouldn't put it that way. When we came to the conclusion that we were going to move forward with the concept of having permanent moorings in place, we began to talk about what would be the cost. Obviously in addition to the capital cost of installing permanent moorings there is also an operational cost. As a result we talked to the cruiselines about that cost and their possible contribution to the cost.

That got overtaken by the fact that we also wanted to increase the cruise ship tax which we put into the environmental fund. It is one of the reasons why the payment for these permanent moorings, the payment of the loan that the Port Authority would take from the bank, the annual payment on it would come from the environmental fund and that fund was set up basically to receive the additional sum of money per person on the cruise ship passenger list.

I believe the amount was somewhere in the range . . . well, we started off (let's put it that way) with having two different systems. One was that the cruise ships frequenting the Cayman Islands year round would have an increase of about $1. Those that did not frequent year round, but basically came in October to about September when we are in a peak season both for air arrivals as well as cruise ship passengers would pay US$1.60. Then the following year it would double. So we are now at US$3.20 for one group of ships and the other one would be $2.00 per person.

Because of this rather significant amount of money that we were putting on for the cruise ship passengers it was felt by the cruiselines in particular that we should be able to utilise some of this to also pay for the permanent moorings. That is the reason why we put the money into the environmental fund and utilised that money to pay the loan payments on an annual basis.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say what is to become of the moorings or anchors that were purchased by government for that purpose?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think it is proper to put a date on when the government purchased anchors. That, to the best of my recollection, was shortly after the time of the Rhapsody on the rocks, back in 1983 or 1984. So those anchors to the best of my knowledge are still around. I believe that some of them are at the cargo distribution centre. There are also anchors on the ocean floor in the area of South Sound. So they are still here. We haven't put them to use yet.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say whether they have any plans for these anchors other than allowing them to rust away?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The truth is that we have no plans per se at this moment for the utilisation of those anchors.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Following up on the idea of financing, can the honourable minister whether or not there was any offer by the cruiselines to have the permanent moorings done to their specifications and at their expense?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We had a consultant giving advice to the Port Authority and also meeting with the cruiselines. As we moved forward with what was proposed, which was a single point mooring where the ocean floor would be drilled down beyond 40 feet and a piece of iron would be pile driven to that level, capped at the ocean floor with a substantial amount of concrete with an eye at the bottom where a chain would hook into it and up to the buoy, everyone that we talked to in the administrative staff thought that would work—until we got to the senior captains who said they would not tie up to that buoy.

It is something that actually happened much to everybody's surprise. But we know that the captain is responsible for the ship when she is in port and his decision is final on that matter. I think you would know that better than most of us, Mr. Speaker, as you were one of the captains—not on a cruise ship, but qualified as a master mariner.

The single point mooring, as we have said here on a number of occasions with all of the costs related to it, the substantial cost with the mobilisation of a barge with the appropriate crane which would be utilised to actually anchor these pieces of iron into the ocean floor and to deal with the capping at the top of the ocean floor, that was a substantial cost. The total cost of doing the buoys alone would be around $1 million or $1.5 million, is my recollection. But the total cost would be around $6 million.

If we were to follow the recommendations of the senior captains where they wanted a double point mooring, we are then looking at at least $12 million, which we thought made the whole project prohibitive. I do not visualise any cruiseline deciding to pick up that amount. And neither of them came forward to do it.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for West Bay. Two additional supplementaries.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: My first question is in regard to the continued use of Spotts as an alternate site for landing. In light of the fact that this is still a relatively virgin area, I wonder if the honourable minister can say what plans are being considered to preserving this particular area from the damage of cruise ship anchors. Could this be considered as a possible site for permanent moorings?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Just to be clear, there are no permanent moorings. None have been developed. I just want to be clear on that particular point. While we are interested in protecting the marine environment at Spotts or anywhere else in this island, we have not conducted any study to see what needs to be done in that particular area other than we know without a study that the ideal situation is that it should be protected.

But when we look at this we have to be realistic and look at the possible cost ramifications of what we are talking about. How often in 365 days does a ship anchor at Spotts? If you are going to spend $6 million or $7 million to put that facility in place maybe you need to be sure that there is adequate funds to pay for it because a lot of it will be an environmental expense rather than a commercial. It will be an environmental expenditure made to protect the environment rather than that exercise being a financial venture. In other words, it will never break even.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for West Bay, the final supplementary.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In light of what has been said by the honourable minister, can he say what the long-term plans are of the Port Authority regarding accommodating cruise ship visits? Do we continue to do what we are doing where we have no regard whatsoever for the coral reefs in these areas, or do we have a plan?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe I mentioned earlier (not in the written answer but certainly in the answer to supplementaries) that the master port development plan which was completed in 1994 is a ten year plan and it takes into account all that should happen in a ten year period of time. Remember, Mr. Speaker and honourable members, I am always reminded that a plan is a guide. A plan does not commit you to anything until you commit yourself to it and you provide the funds to actually carry it out.

The Speaker: Question number—

Mr. W McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I know you said that was the last one, I wonder if you would permit one more.

The Speaker: I think you just want to try me, but go ahead.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, I don't like to try you, but thanks very much. I am wondering if the minister can say then what the $14 million expenditure from the port is all about. What relationship is this going to have to the cruise ships at that end?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We had a press conference just the other day. We gave as much information as we possibly could to every member of the press that was present. What we have, and this is no secret, we know that the present Finger Pier at the dock which was built in 1976 is 190 feet long by 42 feet wide. We know too that the Marrant Bay is a ship 370 feet long. We know that the cargo coming into this country was over 192,000 tons in 1993. By 1998 it was in excess of 221,000 tons, almost double in six years. We wanted to do a similar exercise if we could. Whatever money we would spend, that expenditure would be good for 15 years down the road until someone would have to do anything more as far as cargo facilities in this country is concerned.

Therefore, we took the decision . . . you asked the question I am giving you the answer . . . $14.5 million is what you asked.

POINT OF ORDER

Mr. W McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, on a point of order. I asked the specific relation to cruise ships. That's all I am asking . . . what, if any. I haven't seen the report that the minister is talking about, but I am asking what relationship the $14 million expenditure has to cruise ships. Not the cargo, sir.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, he confirmed that we are talking about $14.5 million. I am answering him on $14.5 million. The $14.5 million relates to the extension of the Finger Pier I am talking about. It has nothing to do with cruise ships.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: All right. Thank you. Mr. Speaker, that was all I was trying to ascertain.

The Speaker: Moving on to question—

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may.

The Speaker: No.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I don't want to ask a question sir, but before we move on, if you would allow me, I'd like to make one quick suggestion regarding the issue just being discussed.

The Speaker: Okay. Very quickly.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you sir.

Those anchors that have been lying there for years that no one seems to know if they will ever be used could very well make a nice dive site.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 60, standing in the name of—

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I take the suggestion, but I would like to get some indication from the watersports association how attractive that would be to the regular visitors to this country for diving.

The Speaker: Question 60 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 60

No. 60: Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs if the government is aware of the continuing problems being faced by the law enforcement agencies because of Caymanians not having to fill out the embarkation/disembarkation cards when exiting these islands.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The government was not aware that there were continuing problems being faced by the law enforcement agencies because of Caymanians not having to fill out the embarkation-disembarkation cards when exiting these Islands.

Upon enquiry it has been determined that Caymanian passport holders who are wanted by the police can leave the territory without a record of their departure, thereby making it very difficult to trace them. There is a need for passport-producing and passport-reading equipment. The request for this equipment was submitted last year, but it was not approved. The current price of this equipment is again being sought and a request for it will be resubmitted.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable member say if this request was actually brought to Finance Committee or did it die a natural death before it got here?

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: The latter assumption of the member is correct. It died a natural death before getting to Finance Committee.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I will end this with a question. I just want to say that I don't know if government is mindful of how serious this matter is. But from the law enforcement point of view I believe it is a very serious matter. I do not believe that any government that acts responsibly should seek to create a convenience for people while travelling and risk the security of the nation.

I would like to ask the honourable First Official Member if he would simply take on the commitment at the earliest possible convenience whenever there is any request for supplementary expenditure, to be able to bring it forth. At least if it gets to Finance Committee it might have a chance.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I don't think it's a case of government deliberately contributing to crime or to the convenience of criminals . . . and I am not saying that the member is saying that at all, but it is just one of those things. I would like to say that I do have an approximate cost and it's not an enormous amount and I certainly give the undertaking that I will follow up this request with an effort to request supplementary funding for it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I am certain that the honourable First Official Member will not misunderstand my intention because it is not directed at his office, but nevertheless, if I am understanding correctly what is hoped to be achieved is that once this equipment is purchased then as new passports are issued they would be this type of passport and you will have the proper equipment keep a record of people leaving the country—Caymanians that is.

The other problem is that it may take a long period of time to recycle all the passports that are now in circulation, depending upon the length of time they have been issued for. Regardless of what position government takes, I hold the view that while this is being done something should be done so that proper records are kept.

I would also like to ask the honourable First Official Member in talking to whoever he has to talk to regarding the issue to take into consideration . . . because even if we are able to get this new equipment it could well be a period of seven or eight years. Well, if passports are for ten years, some people will have renewed their passports. All I am saying is that we don't know how long the people whom we want to ensure we have records on hold these passports. Perhaps the situation may continue to occur for an extended period of time and we may need to look at this to see if there is a way to prevent it from continuing. I am simply asking the member, in his looking at the entire situation to bear that in mind.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I take the point the member has made. The fact is that for some time—and it has been a few years now—we have been using the type of passport that is adaptable for machine reading. The member will be aware that there was a time when we used a black passport. Recently we went to a different coloured, slightly smaller passport, sort of a burgundy passport. There are still some of those black passports in circulation. I am the holder of one myself. It doesn't have much longer to run. I would say the vast majority of passport holders now hold the burgundy passports and they are the passports designed for being machine read.

For the benefit of the House and the listening public, we are talking about purchasing a piece of equipment for producing the necessary strip and making the passport machine readable. That equipment would be at the passport office and cost roughly about $80,000. We will need approximately eight machines at the airport, including one for Cayman Brac. Those are at a cost of just over $5,000 each. We are talking in rough terms of around $120,000 for the equipment to produce them in a readable form and for reading the passports. That is the position.

I believe that once that equipment is in place we will, in a very short time, catch the vast majority, and I believe we will find that the black passports are all soon to be replaced, that is as soon as they expire, and most of them are nearing that. So we are moving much nearer to that than perhaps most people realise.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I don't know if the honourable First Official Member said the reason why the request for the passport reading equipment had not been granted by Executive Council.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I didn't mention Executive Council at all, I simply said that the request had been put in for the equipment but it did not make it to the Finance Committee .

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I thank the honourable member. I just assumed, knowing the procedure, that that's where it got blocked. When a minister makes a request it either gets passed in Executive Council or it doesn't. Having said that, I am wondering if the authorities are aware that there are people who can slip by the police in this fashion, and that they now need this equipment and whether the honourable member can put in a request, a supplementary request, to be able to get this equipment. I think the First Elected Member for George Town put it very eloquently when he said that the security of the nation is at question.

The Speaker: He has given that undertaking to the House.

Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs, would you care to repeat it?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you. Yes, I said in the answer that it would be resubmitted and I give that undertaking.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town. Two supplementaries.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I only need one, sir. Thank you. I just wish to confirm this and perhaps the honourable First Official Member an elaborate if that is appropriate. Upon receipt of the equipment he mentioned a while ago, once these passports are labelled with this strip and are machine-readable, when this machine reads them equipment will be in place that simply stores that information which equates to what used to have to be done whereby individuals from the Immigration Department had to log the information from the embarkation/disembarkation cards to store it. I just wish to confirm that when this occurs the same information will be stored and the Immigration Department will have the same access to it, but they won't have to type it in.

The Speaker: The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Yes, the member is quite right. Once the strip is put in all Caymanian passports that have that will be machine-readable. It will automatically be recorded and can then be pulled up from the computer database.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries, moving on to question 61, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, this Question Time has been so long today that I am about to go to sleep.

No. 61: Mrs. Edna Moyle asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture what was the ruling given by the Legal Department as to the extension of the United Nations Conventions on the elimination of discrimination against women and the elimination of violence against women to the Cayman Islands if the United Kingdom is a signatory to these conventions.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: We have been advised that the "...Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Discrimination Against Women has not been extended to the Cayman Islands" and that it was ratified by the United Kingdom in 1986.

Declaration on the Elimination of Violence Against Women document is a United Nations (UN) consensus declaration. It is "not a Convention per se, creating international obligations, but rather a [United Nations] General Assembly Resolution ... [and] was adopted by the General Assembly without a vote on 20 December 1993 ... these Resolutions, in general may be regarded as evidence of the general international standards and customs accepted by the international community. There are neither state parties to these resolutions nor signatories; rather the UN Records will reflect which states '(a) voted in favour in the Resolution (b) abstained from voting (c) voted against the Resolution.' Article 39 of The Statute of The International Court best summarises the strict legal effect of these resolutions, in stating that 'They are neither a principal or subsidiary means of determining international law.'"

The Resolutions in general elaborate on a particular aspect or Article of a particular Convention. Local/Domestic Courts (as for example, the Caymanian Courts) may have recourse to them as exhortatory/persuasive as opposed to binding authorities.

The Speaker: If there are no supplementaries we will return to deferred question 45, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

DEFERRED QUESTION 45

No. 45: Mr. W McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture why the Veterans did not get their increase until May 1999 when the motion authorising same was passed in June and again in November 1998; the main purpose being to have agreement for the 1999 budget process.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: There was no motion authorising an increase to veterans in June or in November 1998. The Ministry suspects that the motion referred to in this was perhaps the motion moved by the same member in whose name the question is now before this House.

For the avoidance of doubt, that motion was passed on 17 July 1998 and read as follows: Private Member's Motion No. 8/98: "WHEREAS the Government promised in the 1996 Election Campaign to increase the financial assistance to the elderly, the handicapped and others in need;

"AND WHEREAS the financial assistance of $200 per month, per person, is the only income that most recipients receive;

"AND WHEREAS the cost of living is not on the decrease;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government consider putting in place the necessary funds so that at the year 2000 the financial assistance would be at a figure of $400 per month, per person."

It specifically said elderly, handicapped and others in need—all which fall under the ambit of the Social Services vote whose constitutional responsibility falls under my colleague the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

As to the main purpose of the motion, it is the Ministry's position that such purpose, if any, was not clearly and legally expressed and authorised in writing and, when one deals with the finances of this country, then it would not be prudent, legal or sensible to act on any ambiguous, silent or omitted motive.

The government brought a motion, namely Government Motion No. 1/99, to increase the financial grant to volunteer ex-servicemen and their widows which was passed with amendment on 26 February 1999.

The operative part of this motion said, "BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that this Honourable House support a proposal to Finance Committee to approve the full amount of $356,600 to fund the said increase of $50 per month to veterans and their widows."

The matter came before Finance Committee when it first sat on 26 April this year and on 28 April this year the Ministry received the authorisation circular from the Accountant General. The first pay date after this authorisation the veterans and widows received their increase of $50 with back-pay to January of 1999.

Further, the Ministry has received numerous telephone calls and letters of gratitude for the increase. There has only been one male caller from the district of West Bay—who refused to disclose his name—who enquired as to why he did not receive his increase from last year and he received a synopsis of this same answer from the Ministry.

SUPPLEMENTARY

The Speaker: First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: I understand what the minister is saying concerning the motion not being specific. But it did mention 'others in need.' Certainly the mover of the motion did say that this was what he was talking about, although the motion was not amended. The government had the understanding because the minister came to the mover afterwards and asked, and was told that that's what we were referring to.

Nevertheless, I am satisfied that that's what it was all about. What I am asking now is why didn't they pay the increase earlier? Perhaps they had to wait until they got their increase before they would pay the veterans.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture.

Hon. Julianna O'Connor-Connolly: I thought I had made it abundantly clear, but for the avoidance of doubt perhaps I can repeat it, since it's quite relevant.

The Finance Committee first sat on 26 April this year. Two days later, 28 April, a circular authorising the spending of these funds was received from the Accountant General. The first pay date after this was May. At that time the veterans and their widows were paid with the pay being retroactive. As to the speculative part of his remarks, I refrain from making any comment or response thereto.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries that concludes Question Time for today.

Moving on to item 5 on today's Order Paper, Government Business. At this time I will ask for a motion to suspend Standing Order 46 (1) as this Bill we will be dealing with, The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999, which was circulated (white paper) on 6 June and the gazetted copy was 15 June, therefore 21 days have not elapsed. I therefore ask for the suspension of Standing Order 46(1).

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning, will you move the motion for me please? I ask that you move the suspension of Standing Order 46(1).

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 46(1)

Hon. Truman M. Boddan: I move the suspension of Standing Order 46(1).

The Speaker: The question is that Standing Order 46 (1) be suspended. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. STANDING ORDER 46(1) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Bills, First Reading.

BILLS

FIRST READING

THE MISUSE OF DRUGS (AMENDMENT) (MARITIME INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Bill has been read a first time and is set down for Second Reading.
Second Reading.

SECOND READING

THE MISUSE OF DRUGS (AMENDMENT) (MARITIME INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Thank you.

The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999, the purpose of this Bill is to give effect in the Laws of the Cayman Islands to provisions for increased cooperation in drugs interdiction. As the mover of the Bill I would wish to give some further details as to its purpose.

The background is that in May of 1996 the UNDCP (The United Nations Drug Control Program) organised a regional conference in Barbados to promote action on a regional basis against drug trafficking. That conference produced a document entitled "The Barbados Plan of Action." Following the Barbados meeting working groups were set up to study regional initiatives in relation to maritime cooperation, law enforcement training and equipment needs, the exchange of intelligence and the upgrading of forensic laboratories.

In the Cayman Islands the forensic laboratory facilities have been improved to a high standard. Since the 1996 Plan of Action that has been by law established a national drugs council, these are key components of the Barbados Plan of Action.

Another key component of the plan is increased maritime cooperation. Following the successful operation of ship rider agreements involving the United States and British Virgin Islands on the one hand, and the United States, Turks and Caicos Islands and the Bahamas, under an agreement entitled "Up Bat", an agreement involving all Caribbean Overseas Territories in Bermuda was entered into on 13 July 1998 for International Maritime Cooperation.

In essence, that agreement allows for law enforcement officers of the Cayman Islands to embark on US vessels, and US officers to embark on Cayman Islands Vessels. It also allows law enforcement vessels of either country to enter into each other's waters in certain circumstances. All of this is calculated to suppress illicit drug trafficking by sea.

The agreement entered into in July 1998 which is in respect of the Overseas Territories and the Caribbean and Bermuda, refers to the BVI and "Up Bat" arrangements and also to Article 17 of the 1988 UN Vienna Convention which commits parties to enhanced maritime cooperation, including by means of agreements.

So the agreement to which I have referred of July last year was approved by the Cayman Islands government, and the government now requires to give effect to provisions of that agreement. These provisions relate to operations in international waters which are the territorial sea and inland waters of each Overseas Territory. The territorial sea is that area of sea that is measured from the coast or the low water line of fringing reefs. And where there is a break in the reef the territorial sea is measured from a straight line across the passage or break.

In the Cayman Islands, the territorial sea is defined in the Cayman Islands Territorial Sea Order of 1989 which was an Order in Council. It is also defined (that is, the territorial sea) in the United Convention of the Law of the Sea as are internal waters, which Article 8 of that Convention defines as waters on the landward side of the territorial sea.

To give a practical example in relation to the islands, the territorial sea would be measured out from the fringing reef, twelve miles out. And waters such as North Sound would form part of the internal waters. This agreement which was concluded last year is essentially maritime, but does include air operations. But the Bill before the House today is exclusively concerned with maritime cooperation.

The essence of Article 6 of the agreement is to control these maritime operations by one party in the waters of the other. Rather than having to obtain agreement or permission in each case which may not be practicable because of the need for urgency. The Agreement sets out what is permissible and there are three sets of circumstances.

The first circumstance is where a ship rider of the Cayman Islands is on board a US law enforcement vessel or the other way around. In a case like that the ship rider of the Cayman Islands can give authority to the vessel to enter Cayman Islands waters on the spot. The other two situations, however, are where there is no Cayman Islands law enforcement officer on a US vessel, for example, and where a US vessel sees a suspect vessel fleeing into the waters of the Cayman Islands. I think this is conventionally called 'hot pursuit.' A third situation is where a US law enforcement vessel, for example, defects a suspect vessel already in the territorial waters of the Cayman Islands.

I should say at this point, although I am saying US vessel in relation to the Cayman Islands, it could equally work the other way, where a Cayman Islands law enforcement vessel has to go in hot pursuit in US waters. It is a fully reciprocal agreement.

Now, in the circumstances where there is no ship rider on board the other country's law enforcement vessel, under limited circumstances pursuit or entry by the law enforcement vessel into Cayman Island waters may be allowed to investigate the possible commission of drug trafficking offences. The conditions under which this may happen are only if there is only no law enforcement vessel of the Cayman Islands ready and available to carry out the investigation so that it is necessary for the US law enforcement vessel to enquire whether there is a Cayman Islands vessel available and to notify the Cayman Island authorities of its intention to carry out this kind of pursuit. And even then, when the vessel comes into territorial waters, or internal waters, it may only stop, board and search the suspect vessel. And only if the evidence justifies it, may the vessel be detained. So there are safeguards in place. The detention is all that can be allowed because the Cayman Islands would always preserve the primary jurisdiction to deal with the detained vessel.

In summary, the powers are to stop, board, and if there is evidence, detain.

There are circumstances provided for in the Bill where if it is not possible to give advance notice, notice must be given at the earliest opportunity. That is the only exception to the requirement for the giving of notice. Finally I would mention that there are certain offences created in the Bill which are analogous to the existing offences in the Misuse of Drugs Law. I come back to the position that the powers which are referred to in the Bill are already in the Misuse of Drugs Law but are there for the use by Cayman Islands law enforcement officers. This Bill would effectively permit their use in the selected circumstances by law enforcement officers of another designated jurisdiction.

So if enacted, this Bill would give effect not only to the 1998 agreement, but it would give effect to a key component to the Barbados Plan of Action. I have here, for anyone who may be interested, the result of the working party on maritime cooperation set up by the Barbados Plan of Action. Their first recommendation was that regional states should enter into bilateral or multilateral agreements for maritime cooperation in counter narcotics operations. Therefore, the Cayman Islands would be seen to be giving effect to the kind of commitment that the Barbados Plan of Action called for.

It also gives credence to the continuing commitment of the Cayman Islands in the anti-drugs interdiction field. With these remarks, and subject to endeavouring to deal with any further questions that may arise, this Bill is commended to the House for its consideration.

Thank you, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. The motion is open for debate. Does any member wish to debate the Bill? (pause)

If no member wishes to speak, would the honourable mover wish to exercise his right of reply? The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David Ballantyne: Thank you, Mr. Speaker, I will only reply very briefly by saying that the tacit assent of the House is appreciated in respect of this measure which I know will enhance the standing of the Cayman Islands in the international community and as an Overseas Territory of the United Kingdom. The United States, in particular, is keen to see this measure in place and I think that the Cayman Islands will be among the leading territories in giving effect to this kind of international co-operation.

That's all I wanted to say, and I thank you Mr. Speaker, and members of the House for their attention.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999 be given a second reading. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED. THE MISUSE OF DRUGS (AMENDMENT) (MARITIME INTERNATIONAL COOPERATION) BILL, 1999, GIVEN A SECOND READING.

The Speaker: The House will now go into committee to consider a Bill entitled The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999.

HOUSE IN COMMITTEE AT 3.44 PM

COMMITTEE ON BILL

The Chairman: Please be seated. The House is now in Committee. With the leave of the House may I assume that as usual we should authorise the Second Official Member to correct all printing errors and such the like in these bills?

Would the Clerk state each bill and read its clauses?

THE MISUSE OF DRUGS (AMENDMENT) (MARITIME INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999.

Clause 1. Short title.

Clause 2. Amendment of the Misuse of Drugs Law (1995 Revision).

The Chairman: The question is that clauses 1 and 2 do stand part of the Bill. If there is no debate I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: CLAUSE 1 AND 2 PASSED.

The Clerk: A Bill for a Law to amend the Misuse of Drugs Law (1999 Revision) in order to implement certain provisions of an agreement made on behalf of the Islands authorising a designated convention state to exercise in relation to a ship in the territorial seas of the Islands enforcement powers; and for incidental and connected purposes.

The Chairman: The question is that the Title do stand part of the Bill. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: TITLE PASSED.

The Chairman: That concludes committee stage on a Bill entitled The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999. The question is that the Bill be reported to the House. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Chairman: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THAT THE BILL BE REPORTED TO THE HOUSE.

HOUSE RESUMED AT 3.47 PM

REPORT ON BILL

THE MISUSE OF DRUGS (AMENDMENT) (MARITIME INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION) BILL, 1999

The Speaker: Proceedings are resumed. Reports. The Honourable Second Official Member.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I beg to report that a Bill entitled The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999 was considered by a committee of the whole House and passed without amendment.

The Speaker: The Bill is accordingly set down for Third Reading.

A suggestion has been made to me, honourable members, that rather than start a private member's motion this late on Friday afternoon, that the House adjourn. If that is the wish of the House I will entertain a motion for the adjournment, or we can continue with the private member's motion. Whatever is your wish.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to accede to the wishes of the members of this honourable House and move the adjournment of this honourable House until Monday at 10.00 AM.

The Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Monday, 28 June. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 3.48 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM MONDAY, 28 JUNE 1999.

EDITED

Please be seated. Item 4, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 62 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 62

No. 62: Mr. Roy Boddén asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning to give the projected enrolment of government's primary and secondary schools on Grand Cayman for the school year beginning in September 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The projected enrolment of government primary and secondary schools is as follows:

Schools:	Projected Enrollment	Present Enrollment
Primary:
John A Cumber	503	478
George Town	467	430
Savannah	299	273
Red Bay	440	420
Bodden Town	132	131
East end	136	120
North Side	65	60
Special:
Lighthouse	56	57
Secondary:
John Gray High	835	785
George Hicks High	820	818

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Can the honourable minister tell the House, in those cases where the number of students coming in will mean an increase in the enrollment, whether all is in place in the schools to receive this increase in an orderly transition?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The Spotts Primary School should have been ready for September this year. It is obvious that it isn't going to be ready because the plans haven't been done. However, within the schools we believe that even though it will be tight in some of them that we will be able to accommodate these. We will have the additional teachers in place to deal with them.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Can the honourable minister tell the House why the plans are not ready for the new school which was supposed to be developed at Spotts?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Last year the fact that we needed this school at Spotts for September this year was stressed. I needed ten rooms, eight classrooms and two supporting rooms. The bureaucracy of government, I am afraid, chugs on and the last thing now, because of a ruling done here—and this is not the reason for this hold up—but because you can't even clear the land until all the money is in place under Public Works' interpretation even though there was $7 million in place no contract can be given out on a project unless all of the money is put in place. I am just saying this. This is one of several things. I am not blaming this House for it. But this is just one of the many things that has held up the project along with the fact that somehow the plans have just not . . . they just haven't been able to do them.

It's gone out to private architects to be done and all I can say to you is that I am pushing and the minister for tourism is pushing and we are jointly meeting on regular intervals to try to get this school on line—that stage of the school on line, I should say—as early as possible.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House if as a result of the delayed start, that is going to mean there may be some differentiation in the original cost projected?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Another complication has been whether this is done as a hurricane shelter or not. If on that site the school is done as a hurricane shelter the cost is $12.15 million. I have $7 million in the budget.

What I have gone back and asked is to get a costing. First it was $4 million then it was $6 million or so, I don't remember what the projections were. Anyhow, as far as I can remember $7 million is what is in the budget and that is not sufficient to cover the cost without it being a hurricane shelter.

Now, Public Works won't do anything on a contract because of the earlier rulings in Finance Committee. As I understand it a tender will not be given out unless all funds are in place. So if we are short a small amount of funds we have to come back to Finance Committee, or in this case I have gone to Executive Council and asked that I can go ahead and clear the land, get it filled, and deal with the road into it. But the position, as I understand it . . . Mr. Walton is Chairman of the Public Tenders Committee, he's here . . . you will not award a contract unless there are funds in for the year passed by Finance Committee.

[inaudible comments]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: For the year. So will you award the contract for this?

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I have a question regarding clarification of a statement the honourable minister made. Is it that the project cannot go ahead until all the projected costs have been identified? Or is it that the project, as the minister indicated, can't go ahead until all the projected funds have been in place?

I seem to recall that it is the projected costs. Can the honourable minister offer some clarification on that?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What I would like to get and read is the letter that came to me on this (I don't have it here) because it is controversial. The Chairman of the Tenders Committee said provided the projected cost is in. What has happened now is that the projected cost is more than the sum of money in the budget. What the engineer wrote to me was to say that he was not prepared to clear the site, do anything on the road until that money had been approved by Executive Council.

What I would like to do to put it beyond a doubt is read the letter that came to me so you can see what I am faced with in the event there is any doubt on whether I am interpreting this right or not. It may take me a little while to get it, if I can ask to put this question over while we get that faxed down, please.

The Speaker: Are there further supplementaries on it, other than that one? The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Seeing that the enrollment at the North Side Primary School is increasing every year, can the honourable minister say if that school will be given an additional teacher to take away from the one teacher who is now teaching two classes together?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The Chief Education Officer says that he is looking into this matter with the hopes of increasing the staff complement there.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I would just like to say to the honourable minister that I will be watching this very carefully, since I have been asking for an additional teacher in that school for the last three years and the parents are now joining the call-in show on the radio speaking of the need for a teacher and how the MLA is aware of it but she won't do anything about it.

According to the number projected for enrollment at the Savannah school, it is only going to increase by 26 students. I would ask the honourable minister if that is just one year or is that the increase for the entire school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That's the projected increase for the entire school.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Can the honourable minister say what is the projected number of new students for Year 1, and what would be the total number in Year 1 in Savannah come September 1999?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: At Savannah we are anticipating 49 students and 26 are going out.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Can the honourable minister say how many streams there will be in Year 1 in Savannah? And how many were there in the last school year?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There will be two this coming year and there are two now.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: [microphone not turned on] How many students in each stream?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Obviously I don't have a breakdown of every class. But I have been told by the Chief Education Officer approximately 25. I visited there recently and I think that is correct.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: For purposes of clarity regarding the Savannah Primary School, the present enrollment is 273 students and there are two streams in Year 1. There will be again two streams in Year 1 come September, but there's an increase of 26 students. Can the honourable minister give a breakdown of which classes those 26 extra students are going into?

So that the minister will understand clearly what I am asking for, we know that Year 6 is leaving. That constitutes part of the 273 students as numbered in the present enrollment. The 26 extra students which are anticipated—because of think the minister said twenty-odd are leaving and 49 are coming in—there are still 26 more bodies that will be coming into the school outside of what is presently there, even when Year 5 moves into Year 6 after they leave. What we want to find out is where those 26 bodies are going in the school.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: There is only one Year 6 class at present. That has 26 students, and they are going out. Coming in from Year 5 (I don't know about the projections) are 40 students. In other words, this is the last single class Year 6 in Savannah. Coming in from now on will be two classes in Year 6. It will be a two class school throughout. That is where the amount would be, the extra 23 students will be there.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: From that answer it seems as though Savannah will need an additional classroom. Can the honourable minister say if there is an additional classroom at Savannah that can be used for this class?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I understand that we will be moving the library from the classroom into the hall and using that room for Year 6.

[inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Well, obviously on a temporary basis because Spotts is supposed to pick up—

[inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: When I say temporary, when the Spotts comes in it will relieve all of the schools in that area. It will relieve Savannah, George Town, Red Bay.

[inaudible comment]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It will probably be about a school year at the rate they are going on the plans.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: One last supplementary, sir. Can the honourable minister say if the Savannah school will be without a hall, or will just a certain section of the hall be partitioned off for a library?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The library books will be around the walls of the inside of the hall. I understand this has been approved by the PTA and also by the Principal. So it will not take up the inner part of the hall.

Any better suggestions? You tell me. I am struggling.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Getting down to the Red Bay situation, I believe I understand what is happening there but just for purposes of clarity, can the minister outline the remedial arrangements that will be made come September for the 20 extra students anticipated at Red Bay so that each of the classes in all of the streams are fitting properly?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The new administration block will fee up one other classroom. Presently there are ten students in there and they will be moved to the room in the administration block. So that one is a simple one, sir.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Just to follow up on the line of questioning regarding the students, I personally have had representation from 11 people who have been resident on the island for many years, some of whom have permanent residency with the right to work, but who have children as dependants on their passports. While the parents are long-term residents, the children are not Caymanian at present.

I have seen letters from the Immigration Department to these people advising them that they should provide proof in the immediate future (in order to have the children continue as dependants on their passports) that the children will be attending private schools—these children who are presently attending within the public school system.

Can the honourable minister explain the relationship between any policy that may have developed? I am quite certain the Immigration Department didn't pull that one out of the sky.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: This policy I know is under review. As it now stands, if a person does not have Caymanian status as against the permanent residency, then the Immigration Board will ask that those children go into private schools.

If the policy is changed that the government schools have to take permanent residents, as the honourable member knows we don't have the space to take permanent residents. There are a lot of children in that bracket and as we can see from the pressure this morning we are pushed to try to school Caymanians in the government schools.

I appreciate that there has been hardship in some respects in this area because children who were in school and where the people had . . . some didn't have permanent residency, they may only have had permits, on renewal it is being applied. It is the renewal aspect where children are already in the school that is being looked at.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Some of the students that I am referring to are students who have been in the public system since their first day of school and who are now at the high school level. Surely these numbers must have been taken into consideration with any projections made on an annual basis. And surely it is not becoming of this government to all of a sudden to drop the situation out of the clear blue sky on these parents telling them that a child who has gone through the public system for seven or eight years and doing well in that environment has to now go to a private school and make new friends and basically start all over again because the government has not catered to them.

If that were the case, I am certain that the minister in his comments (and I am not sure that I am putting this in the form of a question, but somehow I will!) . . . I think the minister quite understands what I am saying.

It is obvious that the hardships the minister has just mentioned are unwarranted hardships for these people. Certainly some consideration should have been made from the very beginning. I understand what has happened now, but this is something we have been talking about for years! And I don't want to get into any personal conflicts with the minister. The minister well knows my position. Anything I am dealing with here is not personal.

If the minister were to put himself in the shoes of these people, certainly he must understand. At this point in time it is obvious that the situation has come crashing down. As the minister has said, there are many students falling into this category. Surely the minister must be able to give some better comment than what we just heard.

If that is all there is to it, and nothing can be done, then woe be unto us!

The Speaker: Will you turn that into a question please?

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: I said surely the minister must be able to give some better comment. I thought that was eliciting . . . well, let me rephrase it: Will the minister not consider himself being able to give some better answer than the one we just heard?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: As I said, the policy is under review. I can say no more than that. I understand the difficulty with these children who are in school. In fact, it's a hardship in any event on people who are here and can't get their children into private schools because there are people out there who can't afford to put their children in private schools.

But, Mr. Speaker, we come back to what has been the basic policy. As was heard this morning, I am continuously pressed that there are too many children in school and we can't have our cake and eat it too. Either we are going to keep the classes . . .

I am not levelling this at you—

[Inaudible comments by the First Elected Member for George Town]

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Look, I am answering the question as I see it. The fact that you don't like the words I am using is unfortunate. You stood up . . .

Mr. Speaker, with all due respect, he stood up and made a statement—something that is not allowed under the rules! What I am saying is that it is no good of the elected members in this House telling me to keep the class sizes small and help Caymanians and then tell me to open and allow other children who do not have Caymanian status into the classrooms.

The answer is very obvious. The schools can't hold everybody. The policy may be harsh. I don't deny that the policy is not easy. And to move a child partway through is a problem. But what more can I do? Unless we are now going to start building schools and doing education on a compulsory basis for everybody who comes into the islands. . . I hope I am getting this message through.

There is no good in telling me that I can't put more than 25 or 28 children in a class and tell me to take in another 15 or 20 who are not Caymanian and put them in the class. Where am I to put them? If I had the classes there, if I had the schools I could put them there. But the hard fact is that we have a choice: we are either going to take decisions that are going to hurt Caymanians if we add more children in . . . and, by all means, those who were in there before with the permanent residency that policy will be reviewed. But I can't do both.

I can't put them in class and have the class small; I can't put them in schools where I don't have any space. This is the dilemma we are in and it is a dilemma for the House, not for me as minister. We sit here every year and we vote money. The Spotts School will ease things considerably. But if you fill that now with non-Caymanians, you are back to square one again. This is the dilemma.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In light of the fact that there are many parents in this country who don't have Caymanian status, but are considered Caymanian, in other words if justice was administered . . . they've been here 25 or 30 years—they would be considered Caymanian. There are many of those parents who have children in the school at the present time. Some have permanent residency, but no status.

Can the honourable minister say what decision is going to be taken in regard to those children who are already in school who fall within this definition?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: That decision, as I said, is under review. If the member would like, what I would personally like to see is to have them all kept in there. That is my personal view. Whatever I can do to assist them I will do, but I can't say at this stage because this with all due respect has gone into an area that the question doesn't directly deal with and I have not come prepared for it. I don't know how many children are out there in this category.

Personally, I know the policy is harsh and very costly. A lot of the families maybe can't afford it. I would like to see us house them all. But I can't give an undertaking until I know fully what the position is, and secondly, it's partially an Immigration policy as well that will have to be taken.

Mr. Speaker, I now have a copy of the letter. Would you permit me to read it?

The Speaker: Please go ahead. Read it now.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: It is to Mrs. Joy Basdeo, Permanent Secretary, from Bob Skeins, Project Manager, "New Schools Project Team, Approval of Budget for Spotts Primary School/Hurricane Shelter." Dated 25 May 1999.

"Dear Mrs. Basdeo: You may recall from our meeting on 19 May 1999 with Minister Bodden that he instructed our architectural consultant OBM to review the details of the new Spotts Primary School budget prepared by BCQS, our quantity surveyor. A detailed review was undertaken 20 May 1999 and a figure of $12.15 million was agreed by all concerned [CI$9.45 million for the school and CI$2.7 million for the hurricane shelter requirements]. OBM has expressed their satisfaction of the appropriateness of this estimate in the attached letter.

"The budget approved by the Finance Committee earlier this year was $7 million. This is lower than the current [I stress this—the current] estimated budget since it did not include hurricane shelter design, nor did it anticipate the difficult site conditions at the Spotts location. It would be appropriate to note at this point that the school will be able to accommodate approximately 1,500 persons during a hurricane. If a purpose built hurricane facility were to be constructed for 1,500 persons the cost would be in the order of $7.5 million. Consequently a savings of approximately $4.8 million could be realised by designing the new school to allow its use as a hurricane shelter.

"Since the current $12.15 million budget estimate is in excess of the approved $7 million budget, it will not be possible to proceed with work on site, clearing, fill, roads, foundations, superstructure, etc., until Finance Committee approves the new figure. Would you kindly request the assistance of Minister Bodden in expediting this approval so that the project will not be delayed and the new school can be finished as quickly as possible.”

That is basically my present dilemma.

The Speaker: Before the next question, I will entertain a motion for the suspension of Standing Order 23(7) and (8) so that Question Time can go beyond 11 o'clock.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I move the suspension of that Standing Order.

The Speaker: I shall put the question: Those in favour please say aye. Those against no.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 O'CLOCK.

The Speaker: First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: When the original estimate was approved in Finance Committee there was no consideration given to the building being a hurricane shelter. It was not sought for in Finance Committee, nor was it addressed. From the letter the minister has just read, obviously this is something new which Finance Committee was not aware of. The minister has said that nothing can happen because appropriate funds have not been approved.

My question is, following the green light on this school being given by Finance Committee, what has occurred to have this addition being done to the school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Even if the hurricane shelter is removed, that is $2.7 million, the present estimate is still $9.45 million. So the estimate that was put in the budget has now moved up to this amount.

I have gone back to the consultants and said to them please look at this thing and try to reduce it because $9.45 million for a primary school when I know that Triple C, for example, a high school and a primary school was built for under $6 million. Maybe there was someplace cuttings could be made to try to get this thing back down to the $7 million. But as you appreciate it's nearly $3 million over the amount.

But do you understand clearly what he is saying? Until I get approval of the $9.45 million for the school (or $12.15 million if it's to be a hurricane shelter) they are not going to clear the site, put in any fill, do anything to the roads or the foundation. Nothing! This is the problem I have.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Just so that this thing can be made abundantly clear, obviously the figure that was brought to Finance Committee, which the minister stated was $7 million, is the only figure that Finance Committee could deal with. Finance Committee has nothing to do with policy nor the inner workings. Information is collated and brought to Finance Committee, it is explained to Finance Committee and then Finance Committee either approves it or does not approve it. This amount was approved.

Whatever has happened since then is not a situation that Finance Committee could do anything about. Until this question was asked, Finance Committee would not have been aware of it.

In his answer, the minister kept leaning towards who has what responsibility. Finance Committee having approved the $7 million—which I assume is the figure given to the minister from the supposed professionals . . . when there is a change in all of that exactly what is the procedure to correct it in an expeditious fashion? If this question had not been asked today, what would have gone on regarding the school?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: As soon as I got the new figure a paper was put to Council to bring the matter back to the Legislative Assembly in Finance Committee. But what I don't understand . . . and maybe I can ask the First Elected Member for George Town a question. Was it really Finance Committee's view that if $7 million is sitting there, surely we could go ahead and clear the site, put some fill in. That would save two or three months. Try to get the road worked out to it. I don't think this was ever Finance Committee's view. With $7 million you take $150,000 out of it, that can save me two or three months. There's got to be some way of clarifying what Public Works sees as this policy.

I am looking at members here and they are shaking their heads, saying that really that little detail was not meant, and I don't think it was meant to upset a project like this. I am fairly upset about it as you can see, because I had planned to have this school ready in September and it's not going to be. Both the minister for public works and I have put in a lot of time trying to sort this out. So if that could be reversed and I could begin this filling that would be great.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I am having a bit of a problem understanding exactly what point the minister is making here. I would certainly appreciate it if he could try to make it clearer. Perhaps he is going that way because he doesn't want to pin blame on anyone.

I would like to know if we in Finance Committee have approved money for this school—$7 million—we have expected that progress would have been made to date. No progress has been made because there seems to be some slight reconsideration of the use of the project. In other words, that it would be a multipurpose building. Why is it that the chief engineer is able to say to the permanent secretary in your ministry that he cannot proceed with this project? Based upon what regulation is he making that suggestion? Can the minister say?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: This arose about two and one half years ago with the Gun Bay project because part of the money was spent. The project was started and we came back to Finance Committee to get extra money. The ruling then was that unless you had all the money projected the project can't move ahead and public works has now taken this approach as I read out here. Until you have approval for the full project you can't move on.

[Inaudible interjections]

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I am sure they must have.

The Speaker: Honourable members, I don't think we are going to get anywhere with this. I believe this is far beyond a thing we can solve in Question Time. I think this needs an informal meeting of the legislators to discuss this. I would ask that maybe one or two more supplementaries, then let's move on.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Mr. Speaker, I see the predicament the minister is in. I was just going to propose that the minister meet with us at some convenient time to discuss this project because while I understand what he said about public works, there are those of us who have reservations about giving public works carte blanche because we raised some concerns previously.

I think that we would support your idea of meeting informally to discuss this with the minister particularly as this is one of those projects where a decision of exigency will have to be taken.

The Speaker: I thank you for that because I have let this question go far beyond the number of supplementaries normally awaiting the arrival of this letter. But now we are not going to get anywhere. But I will allow two more supplementaries and we will move on.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say, if he didn't say before, what time he came in contact with this letter from public works?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: It came in on May 25th of this year. I met several times, but it came to a head meeting on the 19th. The letter went out on the 25th of May 1999.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: And the minister was not aware of this situation before the letter came to him? Before the meeting?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I didn't have the estimates of $9.45 million, to the best of my memory, until then. I had been pressing for plans before this, but it wasn't until they came up with this shocker. . . well, from last year, remember in December when we discussed this we said this thing had to be ready for September this year. You didn't want any temporary schoolrooms and whatnot.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: The honourable minister said that this project was costed at $7 million in the budget. Am I correct? And if it is going to be considered a hurricane shelter it's projected to cost $12 million. But now the costing coming from public works for the same $7 million project that was in the budget has increased to $9 (point something) million. Can the honourable minister say what has caused this project to increase since the budget was passed with a $7 million to more than $9 million?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: This is why I have asked them to go out and get private architects to look at this thing and try to get the square footage cost down to what is reasonable. I know you can build office buildings that are far more expensive at $150 per square foot. You divide 40,000 into 9.45 and it is $230 a square foot. Something needs to be done and I have to protect the public's money as best I can by reducing this. So I have had to tell them to ask the architects to look at the costs and try to get it down to something reasonable.

I believe they will be able to get it down. Does that answer . . . No?

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: This is not actually a question for the minister to answer, but it is a request that public works be requested to give a breakdown to Parliament of the original costing of this project and a breakdown of the nine point whatever million new costing to show us exactly where this increase has come about.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: Yes sir, I will ask for that to be done.

The Speaker: That concludes that question now—

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, if I may sir. If I may just—

The Speaker: We could go on all day.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I know that. I was just going to ask you a question. If you don't wish to entertain it, then fine.

The Speaker: I will entertain it, go ahead. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: So many questions this morning!

The Speaker: I guess you're right!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: At least I didn't call him Mr. Elephant!

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am wondering whether the minister for education can get this request to public works now. If they know the cost was $7 million it should not be that hard for them to find. Let us meet today at some point to find out what the situation is. It seems to me, as you said earlier we won't get anywhere this way, but we do need to know what is going to happen. We have voted funds, and now we are hearing that we can't spend it and we know the need exists. So I think that as quickly as sometime today we should meet.

The Speaker: Just turn it into a question and we can conclude.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: No, Mr. Speaker, I am not asking a question . . . well, perhaps I had better ask the minister of education to have that meeting with us but get those figures from public works today.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: I will call and try to get them as quickly as possible. If that's today, then good.

The Speaker: That concludes question 62. Moving on to question 63, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Boddén Town.

QUESTION 63

No. 63: Mr. Roy Boddén asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning what is government's policy regarding the provision of subsidies and grants to private schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: All registered private schools (except pre-schools) are eligible to receive a grant from the ministry. Assisting private schools in the form of financial assistance through grants, the ministry is of the view that more students will be able to attend these schools through more affordable fees, thus lowering the cost of education to government.

There are two types of grants given by the ministry: (i) annual grants given to each registered private school (except pre-schools) to help cover the operating cost of educating students enrolled; and (ii) special grants given to assist in building new facilities to accommodate increasing student enrolment and/or to purchase the necessary equipment to improve the quality of education at these schools.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Boddén Town.

Mr. Roy Boddén: Since it is obviously becoming more necessary for the private schools to receive these grants and subsidies from the government, can the honourable minister tell the House government's position at arriving at some kind of formula whereby these schools could be definitively apprised of what they might receive so as to help them plan their budgets and expenditure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Boddén: The formula for working the grants is presently under review. It's one that we will continue to discuss with the schools. I met with the private schools principals' association a few times on the recurrent and what the honourable member has asked about having certainty of the amount is very important to them. Each year I have tried to increase this because costs do go up. I would just like to also say that the schools are heavily subsidised by their respective churches and PTAs and fundraising.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the answer given by the honourable minister he said "all registered private schools except preschools are eligible to receive a grant from the ministry." I think at the present time we offer assistance from three years nine months to four years nine months. In light of the recent findings is government considering extending the grants to preschools also because of the role they play in regard to our children?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: At present the way pre-schools are dealt with is that depending upon the need of Caymanian parents we pay up to about $300 per month to educate Caymanian students in those preschools. No direct grant is made as it is in the primary and high school (private that is) but the private primary and high schools do not receive this kind of funding either. By all means we can look at a general grant in which case the subsidy would be for Caymanian children who need it, and also a general subsidy where children before that because I think that one year of preschool is not as good as two years of preschool.

I would just like to also say that having a child go through preschool is extremely important to the primary schools because when you have them entering the primary school and there are varying abilities, some children are able to do a lot. It's very difficult for the first year teachers to cope with a class with such a wide range of mixed ability. So it is in our interest to get our children to go to preschools and that is why government is giving the grant.

The last thing I would say (and this is history, but it's unfortunate) is that government's reception classes, which were preschool, were abolished many years ago. I personally think that was a very serious mistake. But that's history and now there are private preschools and one or two government schools do preschool work. But, by all means, if Finance Committee is so minded I am happy to look at grants.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In light of what the minister said, maybe the way to offer assistance then would be to reduce the age by which assistance can be given to parents. I am aware that there are many parents who would love to give their children that preschool experience but can't afford it.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning, can you reply?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: What the honourable member said does have merit. If something can be looked at, for example the two years of pre-school—something else the House may wish to look at. Another way of dealing with this as well is to reduce down from four years nine months compulsory to maybe three years nine months, somewhere in that area.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: From the honourable minister's answer, and I read, "Assisting private schools in the form of financial assistance through grants, the Ministry is of the view that more students will be able to attend these schools through more affordable fees, . . ." I wonder if the honourable minister can say what is considered to be an "affordable fee" and what guarantee does government have from the private schools that fees will be kept at an affordable cost?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The fees in the schools vary considerably. In the larger schools the fees are within a reasonable range of each other. I guess what is affordable to some people in the private sector would not be affordable to other Caymanians.

We ask them to keep their fees as low as possible. The church subsidies and PTAs raise a lot of money. I really have to thank the Parent Teachers Association and the Home School Association, they are actually doing a lot, not just in the way of fundraising, but they do a lot to keep costs down.

I don't know how much more I can say on that other than that we try. Well, they never make a profit. Let me just say that to begin with. The private schools all take losses. The funding that we give, the funding that the churches give goes a long way toward keeping the fees low. There has been a bit of an increase recently, but when the fees go up more children come into government schools which is what we don't want.

At present over one-third of the students are in private schools which saves government probably about $12 million to $13 million a year. Basically all we give out in grants is $1 million. So it would be worth our while to go beyond the 8% of the savings, and increase these grants, even if on a different basis. We are looking at a simplified formula that would be equitable.

I have always pushed to increase this because it will ease the government schools by having children remain in private schools.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I thank the honourable minister for that explanation, but I would really like a dollar figure since the answer says that by giving this "assistance through grants, the ministry is of the view that more students will be able to attend these schools through more affordable fees, . . ." Do we consider $1,000 a term an affordable fee for all Caymanians? Do we consider $1,200 a term an affordable fee for all Caymanians? Do we consider $2,500 a term an affordable fee for all Caymanians who would like to put their children in these schools.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The fees, I understand, range between $3,000 to $4,000 a year. That seems to be the lowest fee that the schools on the present grant were giving and the grants they are getting from their churches and the other help that they can keep it at. It's costing government well over $5,000 per student, especially if you take in the administration overhead in our own schools. So, they are well under the cost in government schools.

As to what percentage can and cannot afford that, I am not sure. The trouble is that the schools can't reduce it any further unless either government or the respective churches or the private sector gives more money into those schools. But the lower we could get this . . . I mean, if we could go up from $1 million a year in grants to them (because remember we are saving about $12 million to $13 million). If we could even add another $1 million each year, I think it would be money well spent. And it may save us paying out like this $9.75 million for a school that the private sector can probably build for two thirds the cost.

I am not being critical here, I am just stating fact because I have asked places like the Baptist and Triple C their cost and it was no where near these figures.

The Speaker: Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I know he says there is some association of principals set up. I would like an undertaking from the honourable minister that from this association could come some formula we could use to distribute the annual grants because this would put everyone involved, government and the minister, and it would make it easier for him to come to Finance Committee and it would put the schools in a position where they would know what to expect from government in planning their budgets and any expansion.

Special grants, I understand would be a different thing. Those would be one-off. But if the minister could come up with a formula for annual grants, then Finance Committee and Parliament would be able to help him out when he comes and he could make more justifiable and logical presentations and everybody would be the better off. So I seek that undertaking, sir.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: By all means. I will liaise with the private schools. I have been in meetings sometimes at very short notice. I will liaise with them and we can work out a formula that government and the private sector accept.

In fact, the alternatives to the formula are now in a position where we have actually discussed this with them. But as soon as I can get a better indication from Executive Council on it I will go back and get that refined because the present formula is complex.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say how quickly the new formula that was mentioned in regard to grants to private schools can be put in place? As I understand it, one of the objectives of the new formula is to encourage the private schools to enroll more Caymanians.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: One basis that can be used is that a percentage will be given . . . sorry, a certain sum would be given because of the number of Caymanian students in there. That will cause them to push harder to enroll more Caymanians. There may have to be several bases for this, but at least that is one that I know has been looked at.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say how soon we can expect the new formula to be put in place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I will get it in place and I will give a further undertaking that I will discuss this with members here because I don't want controversy around education if we can help it. It will be for the next budget because this budget has been disbursed already. But I will get it, sir.

The Speaker: Are there no further supplementaries?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Mr. Speaker, this might be a good time to take the morning break.

The Speaker: If that is the wish of the House we shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 11.36 AM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 12.05 AM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Question Time continues. Question 64 is standing in the name of the Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 64

No. 64: Miss Heather Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning what improvements were made to the customer service of the Planning Department that earned receipt of the Governor Owen's Award and can other government departments and agencies benefit from similar improvements.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The improvement in customer service which was recognised by the Governor Owen Awards was the "Delegation of Approval Authority for Routine Matters & Certificates of Occupancy."

The decision to request the delegation of Approval Authority for Routine Matters & Certificates of Occupancy came out of a visioning exercise undertaken by the Central Planning Authority in February 1998. This visioning was done as part of the Reinvention exercise. Approval for the delegation of planning approval for routine matters (fences, pools and non-controversial houses) and Certificates of Occupancy (COs) was granted by Executive Council in May 1998.

By delegating the approval authority to the Director of Planning, it became possible to minimise the time it took to get planning permission for houses from two to three weeks down to two to three days. Having Certificates of Occupancy issued administratively has reduced the waiting time by an additional two to four weeks. With these changes, it is estimated that nearly seven weeks have been eliminated from the processing time for house applications.

Reducing the processing times for houses significantly reduces the carrying costs associated with building a home, probably one of the largest undertakings in a person's life. Many young Caymanians building their first home have saved thousands of dollars in carrying costs as a result of this reinvention exercise. In 1998 the Planning Department processed over 450 applications for single-family homes, which can be translated into a savings of nearly $1 million for our clients (the public) in terms of carrying costs.

This programme has been very beneficial to the Planning Department. Implementation of this programme did not require that additional staff be hired and actually increased time available for existing staff by making the process more efficient. This has resulted in a timesaving of approximately 225 person hours per year.

The delegation of approval authority is the result of "thinking outside the box." It is part of the Planning Department's aim to emphasise improved customer service, rather than being mired in bureaucracy. The delegation of approval authority also means a greater accountability for the Department.

This programme is easily transferred to any Department or Authority that has a Statutory Board approval process in place. By reviewing the types of approvals granted, areas which can be delegated from the decision making board to the head of department, for example, can be identified and acted on.

The delegation of approval authority is easily applied to approvals, which are governed by clear regulations, and guidelines, which are easily applied in an equitable manner. The parameters which are to be considered in the approval process should be clear so that the party which the approval authority is delegated to can easily and fairly review each application. The cost savings and benefits, which have been achieved by this programme, should be realised with any process delegated in a similar manner.

The Speaker: Are there any supplementaries? If there are no supplementaries, that concludes Question Time for today.

Moving on to item 5 on today's Order Paper, Government Business, Bills. Third Reading.

BILLS

THIRD READING

THE MISUSE OF DRUGS (AMENDMENT) (MARITIME INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION) BILL, 1999

The Clerk: The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Second Official Member responsible for Legal Administration.

Hon. David Ballantyne: I beg to move that a Bill entitled The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999 be given a third reading and passed.

The Speaker: The question is that a Bill entitled The Misuse of Drugs (Amendment) (Maritime International Co-operation) Bill, 1999 be given a third reading and do pass. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: THE MISUSE OF DRUGS (AMENDMENT)(MARITIME INTERNATIONAL CO-OPERATION) BILL 1999, GIVEN A THIRD READING AND PASSED.

The Speaker: Other Business, Private Members' Motions. Private Member's Motion No. 17/99, standing in the name of the Elected Member for North Side.

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTIONS

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/99

MOTION TO ESTABLISH A FAMILY UNIT

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 17/99, which reads as follows: "BE IT THEREFORE RESOLVED that the government consider setting up a family unit within the Royal Cayman Islands Police Department."

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeever Bush: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 17/99 has been duly moved and seconded, does the mover wish to speak to it?

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Thank you.

I believe there are some members who were a little bit concerned that my motion only had the "Resolve" section of the motion rather than the "Whereas" sections. I believe that we only need to look at the resolve section when bringing a motion because when we put all these Whereas sections we have covered our entire debate.

Before I move on to the motion, I think the title of the motion should have had the word 'protection.' It should have read "The Family Protection Unit" rather than the Family Unit. But I will not move an amendment to add the word protection because I am certain that can be done once the motion is accepted by the government, as was done with the Women Affairs motion brought here to set up a Women's Affairs Office and we are now down to "women."

This Parliament and these islands are aware of the increasing incidents of domestic violence and other abuse to women since the bringing of Private Member's Motion No. 1/95 to set up a Women's Affairs Office. We all recall before that motion was brought to the Legislative Assembly there were not too many cases reported in the newspapers of abuse towards women or other crimes. Before that, the women who were having problems did not realise that there were people out there who were concerned and who wanted to help.

I would even go further to say that other crimes committed against children—abuse of children—are now coming to light. Thus the need for a family unit within the police department.

I have here some numbers provided to me by the police. Just for February of 1999, we had 81 cases of domestic related statistics reported. We have assault, 27; assault/actual bodily harm, 14; assault/grievous bodily harm, 1; damage to property, 3; domestic abuse, 5; domestic dispute, 31. These numbers alone for the month of February 1999 tell us the need for this specific unit within the police department to deal with these problems.

In my opinion, in order for the police to deal properly with these cases that are now being reported, it is time that we set up a separate unit with trained officers. I would take the opportunity of going further to say that the majority of those officers should be female officers. This unit would require, in my opinion, space away from police headquarters where the staff in this unit can deal with the problems in an area away from the humdrum of the police department.

I particularly stress in the case of the few rape cases that we have been lucky enough to have had reported in these islands, let us put ourselves in the shoes of those women having to walk into police headquarters where everybody is coming in to report matters affecting them and the general public is in and out. How do we think these women feel in such a situation? In my opinion, that is an abusive process in itself. It brings back the memories of the ordeal they went through.

I see the unit being able to provide primary police response to complaints of child abuse, such as sexual abuse, neglect of children. The unit would deal with young offenders and this unit would liaise with the other agencies so that we can bring about an outcome that would be appropriate to the offender.

We speak on numerous occasions about the drug abuse situation in these islands. This unit could be used to take the drug abuse resistance education programme to the students at pre-high school stage. There could be monitoring and liaising with victims of domestic violence and coordination of police response which would include referral to other agencies.

To go back to my point of this unit being staffed by female officers, we know that the majority of domestic crimes are committed against women. Therefore, I feel it would give them a better atmosphere when they decide to report these cases to go in and discuss and report to a female officer rather than dealing with male officers. But in case I am accused of not wanting to deal with this problem as a gender issue, I also stress the need for trained male officers. More accurate evidence would probably be obtained if these victims were made to feel as safe as possible. The recovery process would not be lengthened by insensitive treatment and questioning.

Similarly, children who are abused or neglected and who are taken for questioning would relate better, in my opinion, if a female officer were dealing with those children. Children tend to relate better to their mothers when there are problems. Not saying that they cannot relate to their fathers, but we tend to discuss our problems more with our mothers. So it would give the children a more comfortable feeling during questioning, if these officers were female.

I am sure that the honourable member replying on behalf of government will correct me if I am wrong, but I do not believe that any statistics are presently kept by the police department of any crimes committed against children such as sexual abuse and neglect. I have researched some police reports, but I cannot find where these are reported to the police until it's a matter to go before the courts.

These cases could move to this family unit and be handled by the police department together with the social services department. We know that the social services department has a very large caseload dealing with family matters. So these matters could also move to the family unit within the Royal Cayman Islands Police. I think we have the juvenile unit in West Bay. This also could be combined with the family unit. All matters related to the family that have to be dealt with by the police could be in this specific family unit outside of police headquarters, but staffed by trained police officers.

With those few words as to why and how I see this unit working, I would commend the motion to the government.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?

The Honourable First Official Member responsible for Internal and External Affairs.

Hon. James M. Ryan: I rise to accept Private Member's Motion No. 17/99 resolving that government consider establishing a family unit within the police department. I am pleased that government can lend its wholehearted support to this motion.

I would like to say at the very outset that I am also pleased that the mover of this motion has brought this to the House because it will give it the necessary publicity, the necessary momentum and prominence that it needs. So I am very pleased that The Elected Member for North Side has done so.

As the member mentioned, while the motion does not refer to the word 'protection' as a Family 'Protection' Unit, that is what is intended. That is what the unit should be called. I would also like to say that the Commissioner of Police is prepared to move ahead with this. Having the support of the government, and I hope the support of all members here, he will have ample backing from everyone in this parliament to accomplish this.

As the mover mentioned, there is currently a Juvenile Bureau that exists, and it comprises a sergeant and two constables. The Juvenile Bureau could form the foundation for the Family Protection Unit. It could be expanded to accomplish what is needed. There is certainly the need for a number of issues to be given prominence, particularly the response to complaints of child victims, sexual abuse, neglect, that sort of thing. And I believe that the proposal made by the mover in this motion will do just that.

Also, the Young Offenders will have the need for liaison with other agencies there. The Drug Abuse Resistance Education Programme, commonly referred to as DARE, for students of pre-high school age, and then the general monitoring and liaison of victims of domestic violence. It is good that action has already been taken to set up the Women's Office and this can be a follow on for dealing with the family as a whole.

The honourable mover very ably brought to the forefront the problems we are facing in this country. I believe that this Family Protection Unit will go a long way to address those problems. I should point out that nothing comes without cost, and there will be some cost. To expand this we will need office accommodation. Although not an enormous cost, there will be an added cost. In discussions with the Commissioner of Police we probably will need to expand the three person Juvenile Bureau to a staff of five. So, there will be additional salaries. I believe that is a small price to pay to deal with matters pertaining to families and family protection in this country.

Let me conclude by giving this motion my full support.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I rise to make a brief contribution on Private Member's Motion No. 17/99. In doing so I would like to commend the mover and the seconder for bringing this motion to address what is becoming an obvious need in our society. I would also like to compliment the government on its acceptance and willingness to accept this motion as a challenge to deal with some of the problems that are manifesting themselves in our society.

I have listened to the honourable First Official Member speaking on behalf of government and I am satisfied in his brief yet comprehensive approach that he is aware and that the government has taken into consideration all the avenues and parameters that need to be considered. It is now only left for us to work out the mechanics of the situation.

There is an old adage that says as the family goes, so goes the nation. That is true because if the family is in crises the nation, by inference, is also in crises. There are many of us on both sides of this honourable House who have realised for some time that in addition to being a society in transition it seems that the Cayman Islands is sometimes a society under siege. We are besieged with numerous problems. Some of these problems seem to be insurmountable. It is unfortunate that the elements apparently less able to come to grips with efficient and long lasting and relevant solutions are those elements in society are the less affluent, economically speaking. And those elements are weaker by virtue of the fact that they may be single parent entities or (for want of a better word) what the anthropologists call 'dysfunctional.'

One of the problems confronting us is a recently made public phenomenon, although it has been going on in the society for much longer than we would care to admit—this business of abuse in all of its myriad of forms and manifestations including sexual abuse, emotional abuse, physical abuse. So a unit such as this would have as one of its terms of reference to adequately come to grips with this. Working in collaboration with the Women's Office would do well to prepare and bolster those elements that seem to be particularly susceptible to these kinds of manifestations.

I have noticed, and I am sure other members have as well because in conversations we have spoken of this, that one of the alarming statistics is the high rate of divorce in this country as a result of pressures those family members are not equipped to deal with or educated to overcome. These pressures, not the least of which are economic and social pressures caused by the fact that it is now necessary for the family to operate as a tightly integrated unit particularly the parents. Indeed, this is not a phenomenon particular to the Cayman Islands. A few months ago I was watching a programme, and the Governor and the Legislature in the State of Illinois are so concerned about the high rate of divorce particularly among younger couples recently married (more recently being within the last ten years) the State of Illinois decided to see if it could stem the tide by allowing the courts the discretion to suggest and advocate counselling rather than an immediate dissolution of the marriage. This is particularly done when there are infants or young children at risk.

The judge is allowed the discretion after examining the extenuating circumstances to recommend counselling for the couple and in many cases if the breakdown is as a result of financial problems to advise and recommend some kind of financial counselling so that the couples can try to refocus on their union rather than going for an outright dissolution.

The philosophy behind this is that the State of Illinois came to realise that dissolving the marriage does not necessarily solve the problem. It places an added burden on the State which is most often required to be a surrogate parent because in some of these cases the children are abandoned by both mother and father. So the State of Illinois is of the opinion that where discretion is allowed and these unions can be salvaged that is the better route to go. It is better for the emotional health of those involved and it is certainly less costly since the State does not have to pick up the tab for rearing the children or finding surrogate parents.

Circumstances differ in various jurisdictions. I am not suggesting that is the route we should go. I am merely tossed that out as evidence that other jurisdictions are experiencing these phenomena as well. What I think is constructive about the motion as articulated by The Elected Member for North Side is that it allows for an amalgamation and cooperation among two or three units of government thus strengthening the resolve and almost immanently equipping the arms of government to effectively cope with this problem.

The honourable member moving the motion spoke of some situations where persons making complaints, namely women, may suffer some kind of embarrassment because often they have to come into a public place and they have to deal with entities other than of their own gender which may make them reluctant to express their complaint.

I believe that the Royal Cayman Islands Police will have to undergo some additional training especially in the area of conflict resolution and in diffusing domestic problems which takes a little more diplomacy, expertise and aplomb than what is necessary to deal with normal street circumstances on a Friday or a Saturday night. But this is not to say that the calibre of officers in the police force cannot rise to this challenge. I believe they can.

I noticed that there are an increasing number of female recruits. Not being gender prejudiced or advocating feminism, I believe the honourable member is right in saying that many of these circumstance the delicate situation is best handled by female officers, especially when women are involved. I believe we may have to put more emphasis on training or developing the Family Protection Unit in the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force.

I hope that the overriding philosophy would be not on arrest and prosecution, but on resolution and rapprochement and perhaps referral. I would say that emphasis should be on the three 'Rs'—resolution, rapprochement and referrals—rather than arrest and charges.

When we come to situations where young children who are very vulnerable and malleable and attached to parents, it is sometimes difficult in situations where parent is pitted against parent particularly in a situation that is going to end up in permanent separation where children are forced to make premature decisions of loyalty and dedication and devotion. Particularly in situations where there is no great threat of physical violence or where aggression is not the overriding factor, I would hope that the approach taken would be one of analysis and resolution and rapprochement and, if necessary, referrals for further counselling would be.

In this regard the police Family Protection Unit operating in tandem with the Women's Office and the Social Services Bureau would be eminently equipped to provide a lasting solution to these problems. What is also good about that is that no one particular department should be overburdened with all of the responsibility. I would foresee a situation arising where if there is a threat of violence or aggression the police Family Protection Unit would be called and once that particular unit is assured that the situation is under control they would liaise with their colleagues in the Social Services Department, or the Women's Affairs Office and retreat into the background and have only a consultancy or overseeing role. In situations where violence or aggression is likely, then the police Family Protection Unit would have to be prepared to bear the brunt of the involvement. What is good about this is that the liaison and involvement of the three departments would allow an overlap where no one department should be overburdened.

Again, I have to congratulate the government on its foresight and wisdom in moving forward quickly to address what is really becoming a challenge in our society. The churches realise this. Civic and social groups and even the service clubs realise this. Legislators realise this and I am happy to lend my support to this. I congratulate the government on its acceptance and its comprehensive analysis and understanding of the situation as evidenced by the honourable member speaking on behalf of the government.

I once again congratulate The Elected Member for North Side who seems to have recently a renewed interest and vigour in these kinds of social problems, which for so long have been lying dormant in our society. I also congratulate the seconder of this motion. It has my wholehearted support.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: I would just like to briefly lend my support to this motion and to say that the social crisis we have been experiencing in this society for a considerable amount of time has been highlighted by the number of complaints made to the police in regard to family quarrels and violence resulting from these sharp types of disagreements.

It is important that the government also bear in mind the fact that a number of approaches must be made if a real solution to the conflicts which exist in the society and which are brought to focus in the family are to be resolved to the point where we can begin to heal the wounds which cause these types of family problems.

The establishment of a protection unit or a family unit within the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force will be proof to the general public that government sees these problems at a stage where they must be dealt with by a unit specifically trained and equipped to deal with these problems.

In the victimisation survey, which resulted from government's crime study, are descriptions of sexual crimes committed against persons in the family. And we are made to believe that persons would be more willing to make complaints if within the police department there were officers—of whatever gender—trained to elicit the type of evidence necessary, not just for arrests and prosecution, but for counselling.

We also know that one member of the magistrate court has suggested that this country needs a family court. When I say that, government must realise that it wouldn't be prudent just to establish a Family Protection Unit within the police force and to single out these domestic disputes as being a cause for the establishment of a special unit, if government was not committed to carrying this out within the judicial system itself. In other words, having the judicial system react in such a way as to see the establishment of a family court. I believe that the establishment of a family court within the court system would complement the requirements here. I believe that The Elected Member for North Side is conscious of this need for a family court to complement the establishment of a Family Protection Unit.

I have only stood up to highlight the fact again that for many years we have seen the breakdown in the family as a social control, as a socialising agent within society; that this has led to all sorts of asocial problems including the rise of juvenile delinquency and crime. Children become victims of a lot of the domestic disputes and domestic violence. So for us to be able to say, even if there is going to be additional need for financing, that we are committed to establishing a unit within the Royal Cayman Islands Police Force that would specifically deal with this problem, then we have to have within the court system a system that can deal with the types of arrests and prosecution which must necessarily result from this type of scrutiny within society.

I hope that government is conscious of this need and that it will do all in its power to complement the motion as it has been presented to this Legislative Assembly. Thank you.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the luncheon break. Proceedings are suspended until 2.15.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12.52 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2.35 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 17/99. Does any other member wish to speak? The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Thank you.

The mover has adequately outlined the need for a unit in our police service and she has rightly pointed out the various needs for such a unit. I would say that the matters raised by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town complemented what she said.

Domestic violence is very much on the increase. It is sad, but we live in such a world today. It seems that reasoning is not the order of the day in a domestic quarrel, it's more a word and a blow. The psychological effect on families, and especially children, is most damaging. It affects performance in school, sometimes inhibiting their ability to learn at a time when children form opinions and habits in primary school.

As representatives we have seen the effects of this sort of social problem. We are faced with trying to do something about it, but we are not equipped. I believe that while some of us can give advice, people well trained in family matters can do a better job. I do believe that the police service is a good place to have this Family Protection Unit.

As the mover said, it would be humane to have it so that the trauma of the victim is not deepened by having to recount the incident to a male police officer. It would be good to have women in this unit who are sufficiently trained to deal with these problems. It would be expedient in that more accurate evidence is likely to be obtained if the victim is made to feel as safe as possible and the recovery process from the crime is not lengthened by insensitive questioning and treatment.

Several things would also need to take place (and I don't know if the mover pointed this out). Procedures would need to be established and formalised to ensure that both the emotional needs of the victim and the requirement to obtain appropriate evidence of the crime be handled sensitively; and that the physical environment of the Family Protection Unit be conducive to privacy and protection and that the women police officers accompany the victim, that is if the victim is a lady, for any hospital treatment that would be required.

Statistics given to us for February 1998 through February 1999 show the need for a Family Protection Unit within the police service. On domestic common assault, that is without injury, from February 1998 to February 1999, there were some 283 cases. Domestic assault with actual bodily harm, 128 cases from February 1998 to February 1999. For domestic assault, grievous bodily harm, that is with bones broken and so on, 3 in that period. Domestic disputes, for instance ownership of property, child custody, that sort of thing, from February 1998 to February 1999 there were 554 cases. That's a lot, Mr. Speaker.

It shows what is happening to our community. It shows the type of problems the police have to deal with because these are statistics coming from the police. It does show what they have to deal with. Therefore, we believe that a proper unit would be where they have the office set up for that sort of thing they could better deal with it.

The domestic abuse, verbal abuse for instance, from February 1998 to February 1999 89 cases. For domestic wounding from February 1998 to February 1999, cuts where skin is broken, 6. While I am talking about from February 1998 to February 1999, those six actually took place within 1998.

Domestic damage to property, from February 1998 to February 1999 50 cases.

I don't think there can be any doubt. I am very glad that the honourable First Official Member pointed out himself that the police were dealing with a lot of cases. I think it would cause some funds to be spent, but it is something that I think is needed.

There was mention made of a family court. I believe that as far back as 1987, I brought a motion here asking for this family court to be set up. Ever since that time, and during my time in Executive Council, we have been talking about it. I do know that during the tenure of the last Chief Justice, Mr. Justice Harry, there was some difference of opinion in the workings of how it is made up. I would not like to see a large bureaucracy but I do believe that with the Children Law in place and the new Juveniles Law and with all the matters that come before our courts that a family court is needed. I would hope that they can soon come to a point where it is actually created without vast bureaucracy.

There seems to be a tremendous (I haven't seen the statistics) amount of divorce. I understand it is on the increase. A court can't cure that problem. We would hope that other avenues open to government would be able to deal with that situation. But there is a tremendous amount of divorce cases. That too should be handled in the privacy of a family court. I should add where the honourable judge would be better trained in these matters.

This country, not unlike other countries, is going through tremendous social change. Families are the hardest hit in our social changes. Children are sometimes the worse off. I do believe that, if for no other reason than that, the money is well spent on creating this Family Protection Unit within our police service. I am glad that the Elected Member for North Side, the Deputy Speaker, actually brought it to the forefront as she did with the need for a women's bureau. She did a lot of background work on this and as seconder, I want to congratulate her on her efforts.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

Members speaking on this motion so far have covered just about every area concerning a Family Protection Unit within the police department and I would like to commend the mover and the seconder for their initiative along these lines. It is obvious they both had keen interest in this area for a very long time.

I think just about the only thing I can add is that in interacting with members of the community from time to time I have found on several occasions that just by talking to people I gain knowledge as to which families are at the most risk in this area. It doesn't take long for people to know what goes on within the various communities. I point that out to say that one of the great advantages to having such a unit within the police force would allow, once we have trained personnel in that area, them to quickly identify many of the families at risk of domestic violence, and also in regard to problems involving the children.

If the unit is proactive a lot of prevention might take place rather than dealing with it after the fact. Certainly you will have occasion to deal with problems after the fact, but also, if this unit will take a very keen interest and take the extra time out to get to know how the communities are, then efforts can be spearheaded toward prevention in many of these areas. I think that is not only something that is important, but in setting up this unit this must be one of the goals achieved.

It is always better to prevent something than to try to find out what you can do about it afterwards. So I hope that note will be made of that.

Again, I commend the mover and seconder, and all who have spoken thus far because I am certain that we all recognise and appreciate the fact that the breakdown of the family unit is one of the main causes of the social disease that is fast spreading in our country. Hopefully this will be one step forward in alleviating the circumstances we see spreading in that area.

The Speaker: Second Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Miss Heather Bodden: I rise to offer a very brief but supportive contribution to Private Member's Motion No. 17/99 to Establish a Family Unit within the Royal Cayman Islands Police Department.

The function set out by an earlier speaker in the Family Protection Unit would certainly make it a very useful tool in our fight against abuse in the family, and in particular in the abuse of young children. I truly feel that setting up this special unit will undoubtedly encourage children and adults to come forward and report abuses that have not been reported in the past.

Those who know me know my stand when it comes to the family. It's a very important and essential part of my life. Whatever role I can play in the setting up of this unit, The Elected Member for North Side can rest assured that she has full support.

I applaud the efforts of the mover and the seconder for bringing this motion. This motion certainly has my full support. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I too would like to take this opportunity to offer my support to this very timely motion which is being brought forward by the Elected Member for North Side and the First Elected Member for West Bay. I think the record is there for their stand on these issues. As the First Elected Member for George Town said earlier on, the main theme we need to address is the prevention. I would also support that in regard to education.

Just a couple of months ago the Minister for Education, the Commissioner of Police, and I met to talk about the DARE programme mentioned by the honourable First Official Member and other members, and this is one of the areas I think could be looked at in expanding this unit once it is put within the police system. The Commissioner was very keen on this. This deals with young children at the primary school age, grades 1 through 6. It has always been my philosophy that we can never start too early in making them aware of certain problems, certain dangers that exist in this world. I have always advocated that children know the police and be comfortable with them and trust them. That goes a long way in the development of our youth. And I know this is what is being looked at.

It was encouraging to talk with one of the officers who actually went away to do some training in regard to the DARE programme. As I said, this has been one of the things The Elected Member for North Side has looked at with a great degree of passion in trying to assist in the area of domestic violence. The timing is very good as we move forward with the Children Law and the Juvenile Law that has been put in place and will be implemented as we go into the later period of this year.

I am also aware that the justice system is looking at a special judge to deal with special cases. This is in regard to the Children Law and as has been touched on in regard to the family court maybe this would be an opportune time to look at this too.

I would once again like to offer my full support for this and it's a timely thing as we go forward, as all of the previous speakers have said, the future of these islands is the development of the family in a cohesive unit. This is one of the great ways we can make Cayman a better place for all of us. Thank you.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) If not, would the honourable mover wish to exercise her right to reply?

Mrs. Edna Moyle: First of all I would like to thank the government for accepting this motion and for agreeing that there is a need for such a unit to be set up in the police department. I agree with the honourable First Official Member that it was my intention for this to be a Family Protection Unit so we can deal with that when we get to the stage of setting up the unit.

I know there will be a cost involved in setting up this Family Protection Unit, but I can guarantee and pledge to the honourable First Official Member the support of my colleagues on the backbench, all those who have spoken in favour of this motion and those who are giving their support although not expressing it by standing up and speaking in favour. I say that the cost to set up this unit will be minimal to the benefits derived from the unit to help our families to stay together.

I agree with my colleague, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, when it comes to the matter of divorce. I do agree that this unit can be used by referring to counselling or some other way to help save these relationships. I also agree with the need for a family court. I think it was shortly after I was elected in 1992 that the First Elected Member for West Bay has been pushing for a family court, even before then.

I have talked to people and listened concerning these cases being held in open court where victims are asked very embarrassing questions, and they have to reply in open court. If we are not in the position to set up a family court maybe we can move these cases away from the central courthouse to some other building where they can be held more or less in private so that these people will feel that they can give the evidence they would like to without feeling the pressures of the general public listening.

When I read the newspapers and see the number of our young people going to Northward Prison for stealing from their employers, the majority are young ladies. We need to try to do whatever we can to save these young people from getting into these positions of stealing thousands and thousands of dollars from their employers. We need to find out the reason. We need to see what assistance can be given to them.

I agree with the First Elected Member for George Town when he said that this unit could be proactive. I have always heard that prevention is better than cure. With those few words I would like to thank all of my colleagues for supporting this motion. I say to the honourable First Official Member, good luck. Bring the money in the budget and I can assure you we will support it.

The Speaker: I shall now put the question Private Member's Motion No. 17/99. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 17/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: Moving on to Private Member's Motion No. 15/99, moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, that motion is one that the reply from government, which will be through the Chief Secretary, is not ready. I think there needs to be a bit of dialogue between the mover and the member responsible.

The Speaker: Do you wish to defer that motion?

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: If government needed to reply this afternoon, I don't know how long it will take the member to open, if government didn't need to reply I guess we could go on.

The Speaker: If it necessitates a suspension, I am prepared to suspend for a few moments.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Yes, sir, that would be good.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.05 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3.36 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated.

Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 Enquiry into Local Companies Control Licence for Esso Standard Oil SA Ltd, moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the government has asked for an amendment in the first resolve of the motion to read instead of "by September 1999" to read "as early as possible." So the government will move that amendment. And they have asked that the wording in the last resolve section be changed from "government" to "relevant authority." I propose to do that in due course. At this time I will just read it as we have agreed and we will move on from there.

The Speaker: Before we go any further, I would like to make it abundantly clear that problems arose the last time we took amendments orally. I am not prepared to accept an oral amendment. I want a written amendment circulated to honourable members so they will have it in their hands before we debate it. I think we should adjourn this House at this time.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker—

The Speaker: You all will readily recall the controversy which arose. I think I should stick to the proper procedure. No two-day notice has been given. I have not seen the amendment, and I am only hearing about it. If you want to debate the substantive motion and do the amendment later, you may.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: Well, Mr. Speaker, in regard to your ruling I will move the motion as is and amend it at a later stage.

The Speaker: Please continue.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/99

ENQUIRY INTO LOCAL COMPANIES CONTROL LICENCE FOR ESSO STANDARD OIL SA LTD

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I beg to move Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 which reads: "WHEREAS a question was answered to the effect that Esso Standard Oil SA Ltd had no Local Companies Control Licence for retail business;

"AND WHEREAS there was an examination into the situation by Government;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED that the Government now cause an enquiry into the matter and report its finding to this honourable House by September 1999.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that if Government has found that any Caymanian company or other entity is being displaced through that situation Government immediately take measures to have it rectified so that Caymanian businesses do not suffer."

The Speaker: Seconder? The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I beg to second the motion.

The Speaker: Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 has been duly moved and seconded and is now open for debate.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I begin the motion by saying that we have had an agreement with government (which asked for an amendment in the first resolve) and that should be forthcoming to the House as quickly as possible. And the one for the last resolve will be done in due course.

This motion addresses a very important matter, one that we have asked questions about and have received answers to tell us that there is a company operating businesses in our island that has no license, no authority so to do. This situation is affecting a Caymanian business, a hardworking man and his family; a man who goes to work at 4.00 or 5.00 in the morning and works all day; a man who is a pioneer, certainly an entrepreneur in the best Caymanian sense.

This motion is to try to see that justice is done and that a foreigner—one so powerful as an oil company—does not continue to bamboozle a Caymanian company who is living within our laws and working to keep his business above water.

About 1988 a station was opened at the junction of Smith and Crewe Road, across from the airport area. The Oil Company, ESSO, approached him with a view to expanding that station into the islands' first "C" Store ("C" Store meaning "Convenience Store"). The company was operating a station that had no agreement with ESSO only selling the product.

As a result of the discussions the company had with ESSO it was agreed that they would advance him a certain amount of funds to further refurbish the new premises into the convenience store. This funding was made by means of a loan of approximately $600,000, which was secured by a debenture over the business and a registered land charge over the business' premises.

A certain further amount was advanced on account of rent for a ten-year period. In order to give ESSO further security they also leased a site from that person for a ten year term together with an option to renew that ten year term for a further ten years. This arrangement required a sublease of the premises from ESSO back to the company and this was done on identical terms except as to the rent.

The leasing arrangements were part of the security package securing the loan that ESSO was making to the company. Within two years of the company taking down the loan it was repaid by a local bank and ESSO then continued to operate the station through the lease and sublease and the dealer agreement even though they were repaid by two local banks.

In about 1977 (or further on my part in about 1976) I became aware that ESSO might be limited in respect of its ability to carry on business within the islands. The Company became aware around 1997. The Company requested sight of the Trade and Business and Local Companies (Control) Law license from their then attorney. ESSO refused to produce these licenses. It was not until March 1998, after an approach was made to government, that the Company obtained sight of the licenses.

Once it became clear to ESSO that the Company had obtained sight of their licenses they then produced a copy of their 1997 licence. In 1997 and 1998 ESSO was licensed to carry on the business of bulk fuel installation—nothing else—import bulk fuel.

The Trade and Business Licensing Law schedules the various types of licenses available. We all know, as legislators, that a distinction is drawn both in the description and the fees payable for a bulk fuel installation and that of a garage. It is noteworthy that at the time the convenience store was opened the Immigration Board required the Company operating the convenience store to obtain a retailer's license in addition to a garage license.

From what we hear, we are aware that ESSO did offer financing to other dealers, other filling stations. I understand they have purchased a number of filling station sites. These are operated by means of a lease from ESSO to the dealer.

The Speaker: May I interrupt you for just one moment please? I had a prior commitment and I think government also had a prior commitment. I would entertain a motion for the adjournment of the House if it's the wish of the House.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Education, Aviation and Planning.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Wednesday at 10.00 AM.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I think there's only three members of the House involved with the CITN interview, leaving 11 members present in the Chamber. Under the Constitution, if the Speaker cannot fill his post it states quite clearly that the Deputy Speaker can fill that post, and I am prepared to act. So I really don't see why the business of the House should be interrupted at this time, sir.

The Speaker: I will put the question on the adjournment and the wish of the House will be fulfilled.

The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W McKeeva Bush: I don't want to get drawn into that, but the Deputy Speaker has made a point. I don't think that the rule of the Presiding Officer can overrule the Constitution. She has made a point and it's a very relevant point. But I am at the hands of the members.

The Speaker: I understand what you are saying, but the House controls its functions. A motion has been made for the adjournment and I shall put the question. If the question fails, the House will continue.

All those in favour that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM Wednesday, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The House stands adjourned until 10.00 AM Wednesday.

AT 3.50 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM WEDNESDAY, 30 JUNE 1999.

EDITED
WEDNESDAY
30 JUNE 1999
10.24 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Acting Third Official Member]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: I have apologies from the Honourable Third Official Member who is overseas on official business. The Honourable Minister for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture is also overseas on official business.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

POINT OF PRIVILEGE

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I hate to have to do this, but I need to draw your attention to a matter that I think affects the privilege of this House.

There are questions on the Order Paper since the 25th May and being a member of the Business Committee, I cannot get my questions answered.

Now, I am drawing this to your attention because your duty is to see that the question goes up to the relevant minister after you have approved it. But I am asking you to investigate this matter to find out why these questions on Pedro Castle and other relevant questions cannot be answered. I am asking you as Presiding Officer of this House . . . I know what your duties are as far as the questions going to the relevant minister but as a member of the Business Committee I cannot get my questions answered.

The Speaker: All honourable members, I am fully aware of my duties and responsibilities. I can assure you that the Legislative Department and the Speaker have fulfilled the responsibilities. At soon as the questions are on the Order Paper, they will be dealt with. I have noted that you are a member of the Business Committee, you are a long serving member, therefore you are familiar with the procedure. I have nothing further to say on that.

I have done all that I have the responsibility and the authority to do.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I quite understand that, being a long time member of the House. But I am asking you as Presiding Officer in charge of the business of this House to run some kind of investigation. Do some kind of check because I have talked to no avail, I have asked to no avail. This is the country's business for which this House is answerable, to which you are the Presiding Officer.

Thank you.

The Speaker: Moving on to question number 65, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 65

No. 65: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to provide a breakdown, by district, of the numbers of persons referred to overseas centres for substance abuse treatment since January 1998.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: From January 1998 to present, 17 individuals were referred by the Cayman Counselling Centre and the Mental Health Services to overseas drug rehabilitation treatment centres. Broken down by district these are:

District	No. of persons
West Bay	8
North Side	1
George Town	7
Cayman Brac	1

It should be noted that 17 were referred to treatment overseas, but only 15 actually completed treatment. The remaining two did not follow through with treatment recommendations. The total of 17 referred to overseas treatment includes seven persons with a dual disorder who were referred to treatment by the Consultant Psychiatrist at the Hospital in George Town.

The term "dual disorder" is used to describe cases where the individual concerned is mentally ill and at the same time involved with substance abuse.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the Honourable Minister say whether any of the 17 referred to here were recidivists and therefore on their second or third visit?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the minister say whether it is the policy to refer persons more than once? And, if not, what happens to these persons once they have completed the referral at the overseas centre?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, Mr. Speaker, it is not the policy to refer a second time. When they do return, there is after-care, a follow-up on them and they are tracked on their return here and see their whereabouts and what is going on.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether in this contact with the counselling centre here it is mandatory or entirely up to the person referred?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: It is strongly encouraged. I don't know if it is yet in the powers that we can force them to continue, but Cayman Counselling Centre certainly works diligently with these and strongly encourages them to come into the after care.

The Speaker: The Elected Member for North Side, do you have a question?

Mrs. Edna Moyle: Mr. Speaker, my colleague here asked the question that I was going to ask about the follow-up once these patients' return to the island. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Let me say first that I am pleased to see that so many people were referred overseas for treatment. I wonder if the honourable minister can say what was the cost of those overseas referrals to government?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I can give a breakdown of what it cost at each one of the centres. I don't have the total figure here of costings. One of the facilities used is Operation Par, which cost approximately US$9,450 for a six-week stay. Turning Point, which is in St. Lucia, US$2,038 including airfare for a six-week stay. Sindelands, which is in the Bahamas, US$6,619 including airfare for a six month stay or approximately US$1,103 for a four-week stay. Hazelton, which is in Florida, US$14,332 for a 28 day stay.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay, do you have a follow-up?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Yes, sir.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say what facilities we took advantage of in light of the cost?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Cayman Counselling Centre refers to Turning Point and the Resident Psychiatrist refers to Sindelands in the Bahamas.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay, do you have a follow-up?

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the honourable minister can say how quickly it is expected that we will have rehab facilities and services available locally?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The contract for the final stage of the Breakers rehab is scheduled to be awarded in the middle of next month. I anticipate, with the help of God, by the end of this year that facility should be functional.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town is next.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Mr. Speaker, I have a couple supplementaries but I want to ask this one now because it is relevant. I noticed that Eric Clapton has just opened a centre in Antigua called Crossroads. Can the minister say if his government plans to utilise this facility in the future in these kinds of case referrals overseas?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: We certainly will investigate the possibility of this and if all is okay, we will have no problem with doing that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: In the answer, the Honourable Minister said that two referrals did not follow through with treatment recommendations. Can the Minister tell the House what happens if there is any obligation on the part of persons referred to complete their treatment? And in the event they do not complete the treatment, are there any sanctions or penalties?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, one of these individuals did not complete the treatment because of a family situation where someone died. That person did actually continue working, going through Cayman Counselling Centre.

No, there is no more than the strong encouragement that we referred to earlier on. There are no sanctions against them in regard to continuing. As we have always said, until the persons accept the full responsibility that it is within themselves for it to be any degree of success, it has to come from within.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the Honourable Minister can say whether or not the overseas referrals were made free of cost to those persons or are they obligated to repay government for the cost incurred?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: As a follow-up to the last question asked by the honourable colleague from Bodden Town, those that are mandated by the Court are required to complete whatever they are asked to do under the court order.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, that question has not been answered. If you would just hold on a second—they are dealing with that. And there are further supplementaries.

The Speaker: Yes. The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: My question was whether or not there were any costs to the individuals who were referred overseas for those treatments?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That is a good question. The referrals are similar to an overseas medical. A financial contract is signed by each client and a guarantor that states government will be repaid X amount of dollars each month. We have to encourage this because I feel (not necessarily the Ministry) that they need to take part in that feeling of making themselves better off.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: What happens in the case of persons who cannot afford to pay for it? What provisions do we have in place for treatment to be made available to them overseas?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: A financial assessment would be made and help would be provided.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the minister tell the House whether there is any scope for long-term tracking of these persons once they have completed their treatment and returned. That is, whether the Cayman Counselling Centre is equipped to continue liaison and contact with them even when they have returned to the world of work (or whatever world they have returned to) so that there can be some sort of procedure and support so that they may not easily slip into recidivism.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, that is now in place and it will be dealt with.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I noticed in the minister's answer to a supplementary question that three or four different locations were identified. The cost for use of the services provided was also given. Can the minister give an explanation as to why there is a disparity in the cost at the various locations? Is it that there is a different type of service being offered at each of these locations which equates to the variation of the cost? If that is the case what is the determining factor that tells where someone will be going?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: The main driving factor is some of them, like Hanna Hazelton is privately owned. Others are government operated, which brings the cost down. The one in St. Lucia has recently opened. I have talked to a number of clients that have been there and with it being in the West Indies, these people were very impressed with the services there. And as you note, it was one of the least expensive.

I didn't get the last part of your question, would you repeat that for me, please?

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: The second part of my supplementary question was what factors determine where someone will be placed. But perhaps the answer that was already given has taken care of that in light of the way that the information was received. I think I understand the answer now so he doesn't have to address that.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I hope, I am not straying too far. In his answer, the minister refers to the term "dual disorder," which refers to a mental illness accompanying drug addiction. Can the minister state what are the immediate plans with regard to providing any type of facility even if there is not drug addiction involved for such patients who are mentally ill?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: In the present situation, we are diligently working on improving the outpatient and the day-care. With the support of this House, the next major focus of the Health Services Department is to provide the inpatient facilities for our people here. To continue sending them overseas is not the alternative. Most of the families are coming back and as we did with the prison system, we feel that they should be returned here. It is a very expensive thing but that is something that we will have to deal with as legislators as we go forward.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I quite appreciate the minister's answer to the question. The follow-up to that is does the minister have any statistics or information which allows a determination of whether in the seven cases mentioned, it was a situation where a mental disorder led to drug addition or whether drug addiction led to a mental disorder?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, no, I do not have that information with me but it is difficult to say which one comes first in a situation like this.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, I was only seeking that information if it was available. The reason why I was asking the question (and this is a follow-up question) is because certainly if that can be determined then preventative measures may be able to be taken to prevent some of whatever comes second (whichever one it is) if that is being able to be determined. So perhaps the minister could give an undertaking (this is just to make it a question) to try to see whoever it is that makes this determination (the psychiatrist or who ever it is) has a method by which it can be understood which one came first.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I would certainly encourage those that deal with this to see if there can be a differentiation and to see which triggers or manifests itself in the most serious degree first.

The Speaker: No further supplementaries? We will move on to question number 66, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 66

No. 66: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources if any consideration is being given to designating the Northwest Point to the Turtle Farm area a "No Dive Zone" to avoid possible divers' accidents and to cease divers from interfering with fishermen in the area?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. The answer is yes, considerations have been given to designating the Northwest Point to Turtle Farm area, a "No Dive Zone."

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I wonder if the honourable minister can say if there have been any reported incidents of conflict between divers and fishermen in this area?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Again, the answer is yes and the matter has been monitored. Of course, meetings have been held between both sides that have actually been speaking of the problems. We are hoping that we can actually work out something between both parties rather than having to bring legislation on it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say, bearing in mind his answer here, what is the position with the matters raised in the resolution where this request was also included? What is happening to the general over haul of the marine no dives zones and different zones within the Marine Law?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I think it is fair to say that this forms a part of the Marine Conservation Board and the matter is presently with Executive Council.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: So, is the minister saying then that the review has been taking place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: There have been a lot of suggestions, and I could say requests to government from the Board of which this one is included. The matter, like I said, is in Executive Council and I would not want to go any further into it than that.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member from West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the minister say when this House or the public can expect some sort of public clarification or information as to the matters raised in that resolution and the matters under review by Executive Council? Namely, the no dive zones, the sand bar in the North Sound, the no taking in the lobster season, the fish pots, all those issues were raised in that matter. Can he say when we can expect to have some information publicly on it?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: As soon as the matter is dealt with by Executive Council. Let me point out, my ministry's duty with the recommendations of the Marine Board is to put it before Council, but it is impossible for me to say, if something is deferred by Executive Council—and I know the member can appreciate what I am saying. . . I cannot really say when it is going to be dealt with. However, as soon as there is a decision, I know and I am happy to report that back to the Legislative Assembly and to the general public.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I well understand what the minister is saying about the matter being deferred. Then that leaves me to believe that is exactly what has happened. If the matter is deferred then it is also the duty of the ministry putting the paper forward to take it back to Executive Council again—of course, with the assistance of his colleagues. Can he say if that is happening or not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The last speaker is well aware that if a matter is brought before Executive Council and it is deferred by the full Council, it has to be requested to be brought back to the paper by Executive Council. As soon as that is done I would be happy, and, like I said, I definitely will reply to him with the results of it and to the Legislative Assembly.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: To give a short explanation on that, I would think that it is also the ministry that is taking the paper to Council since it falls constitutionally within that responsibility to ask Council when then they would like for this matter to be brought back. But can the minister say whether that is happening? Has he asked Executive Council if they would like the paper to be brought back and what were the reasons for Executive Council's deferral?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: As far as Executive Council is concerned . . . and I have to say again everyone here knows that we are under collective responsibility. I am not privy to come out and say the reasons why this was held off. As far as my ministry is concerned, the member is correct. We have on more than one occasion put it up, but it is entirely up to Executive Council if they need to delay a matter to do so and I am only one in there. He has been there and I am sure he has had matters deferred the same as I have.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the minister say when did this deferral take place?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: As I said, I am not going to comment on anything with Executive Council because I don't want to be knocked on the knuckles for saying anything out of Executive Council because of the collective responsibility in there. The member knows! He may be trying to lead me out to do it, but I am not going to do it.

The Speaker: Let us move on with another form of questioning. I will allow two additional supplementaries and we are going to move on.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I understand the minister's situation—or the country's constitutional position with collective responsibility. Nevertheless, this is a matter answerable to this Legislative Assembly and all I am trying to ascertain is when did this happen. That should not be a matter that breaches collective responsibility.

I believe that we deserve an answer—whether orally or written—but there should be something to tell us what sort of timeframe we are having. Because if I can clarify something—

The Speaker: This is Question Time, please turn it into a question.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Mr. Speaker, I have asked the question. I am only asking to point out to the minister that there has to be some sort of responsibility to answer to us. I am wondering, [since] the minister cannot give an oral answer, whether he could give a written answer as to what is the timeframe?

Mr. Speaker, for further clarification, this matter came before us in Finance Committee when the Director, Mrs. Petrie, said that the matter had gone to the ministry. That was some six months ago and I would think that there ought to be some sort of timeframe for this House to know so that we can keep within the resolution.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: The most I can say on that is that if I had gotten an answer when it was put up, I would have been able to report back here. I can say no more than that. It has been referred to Executive Council. When my ministry receives an answer, I will be happy to come here and tell the story. But I have to await that. The member—who was a minister before—knows exactly where I am coming from, and I am not being rude to him but he realises what goes on.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: As a follow-up, I wonder if the honourable minister can say (he should be in a position to say something) what some of the proposals or recommendations being considered by Government or Executive Council are in an attempt to resolve this conflict between the divers and the fishermen in this area?

Hon. John B. McLean: I have already referred to what I said awhile ago. Meetings have been held between both sides and we are trying to resolve the matter rather than having to legislate because . . . I mean, we are all Caymanians in that area. I understand sometimes a boat may be operated by foreigners, but I think the safest way for us to try to resolve it is through negotiations and meetings. Meetings have been held and they will be continued.

As far as what government's policy is on it, I have to refer to you to what I said a while ago, it is with Executive Council. I cannot tell you exactly what is in there.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

The Speaker: Before putting another supplementary, I would like to ask the honourable minister to move, in accordance with Standing Order 86, the suspension of Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) so that Question Time can continue beyond 11:00 a.m.

The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I so move the relevant standing order so that we can continue with Question Time.

The Speaker: I will put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. Question time continues.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) AND (8) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: The minister mentioned that the parties involved in this area have gotten together. They have talked about how to resolve the conflict. He doesn't have to tell me what Executive Council is considering. I wonder if he can say what are some of the recommendations that were put forward by both sides with regard to hopefully resolving the conflict?

The Speaker: There is going to be one additional supplementary after this one. The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: We believe that enforcing the segregation of divers and fishermen through legislation is an extreme measure that would serve only as the last resort. Through talking to parties concerned, we believe that among ourselves we would be able to come up with something that is good for everybody.

Let me point out at this time that we all realise the conflict that has been there and we realise the problem that has been in that area. It is not a matter of ducking anything because it has been seen and we all know of it. What I am saying is the last resort should be for us to have to legislate and we are hoping that we can deal with it in a different way.

The Speaker: This is the final supplementary. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I would like to thank the honourable minister for giving us some information. Since he says that they know what the problem is, I don't know why Executive Council has not dealt with it. But could he give an undertaking that he would once again take it back to Executive Council to get them to move?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I made that abundantly clear, the matter is before Executive Council. It is in a deferred mode until I have . . . it is not a matter of me having to put it back on the agenda—it is there. That is what I pointed out awhile ago. My ministry could do no more, it is there and we have to wait on a decision. I have no problem giving an undertaking because I would like to see it dealt with to because I realise the seriousness of it.

The Speaker: Moving on to Question No. 67, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 67

No. 67: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Agriculture, Communications, Environment, and Natural Resources what is being done to control the use of illegal fish pots in the Cayman Islands?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: This is also a part of the same recommendation that I mentioned earlier and it is a pity that we didn't have the two questions together. The matter is currently being dealt with by Executive Council and as soon as I have results, I will report back to the House.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, supplementary.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I believe we covered most of the supplementaries on this matter in the other question, but I am wondering whether he can say why Executive Council does not see this has a matter of urgency, especially this one of illegal fish pots?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, again I have to tell the member that I am not privy to tell him Executive Council's reason—because I don't know. I know my opinion but as far as I can go with it.

With regard to the fish pots that we consider being illegal, like I said, this is one of the recommendations that is presently there. Through the department we have been trying as much as possible to make sure that these are not utilised in the wrong areas because I think you are speaking of what we term the "Jamaican" fish pot. The same one.

So while we do not have anything, we are still trying to encourage persons who may be using them, not to use them. And when we find them the department has been trying to work as closely as possible to eliminate them.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't know if the minister answered this question in the other question but can he say where the recommendations came from?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I pointed out that it was from input from the general public and especially the Marine Conservation Board.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In light of the fact (and I am reliably informed) that the use of these illegal fish pots is really doing a number on our reef fish, the small fish, I wonder if he can say how quickly we can expect this matter to be addressed by Executive Council?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: I was asked that question in the other person's question. I cannot give an answer for Executive Council here.

The Speaker: I think we are just spinning our wheels really. The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I think so, Mr. Speaker. But I wonder if the minister could say . . . can we get it before the election or after the election?

[Laughter]

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't expect him to answer, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Mr. Speaker, I hear what you are saying about spinning wheels and it is obvious that if there were any transparency being exercised in the system, the wheels wouldn't be spinning and not going anywhere.

Anyway, can the minister say if there is any consideration being given during the deferred mode of deliberation to limits being set as to the size of the fish pot? Certainly, there is a relationship between what size fish get caught and the size hole that is in the fish pot wire.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: That is a good question. Yes, this is one of the matters I referred to just awhile ago, with regard to the department encouraging persons using the pots to use a sensible size wire. He is correct. This is where we found the problem, especially with the Jamaican pots. These have been giving more problems because of the size of the mesh and we have been encouraging the use of a bigger one so that the little reef fish, the smaller fish, would not be caught in the same pot.

I must say here that it is unfortunate because knowing Cayman fishermen, I don't think that we would have any who would utilise that or who would trap those fish, they would never do it. Unfortunately, we are in a society where we have other people and I guess you do abroad as you do at home. However, we are going to try our best to work along with it and, of course, I support whatever we can do when the government gets to it.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I am going to try to use a different handle to see if I can get an answer and I won't ask many supplementaries, sir.

The minister has obviously made it very clear that this matter goes beyond what has been discussed thus far in Question Time. I am sure the minister understands what I mean by that. It is a wider spectrum being examined in whatever the recommendations were from the department. But certainly Executive Council must appreciate the fact that while this is something that some of them may consider a ticklish matter, it is one that is very important. Leaving this in a deferred mode is shirking responsibility.

I would ask the minister to give an undertaking—not just about bringing it to Executive Council . . . understand me clearly, sir: Not just bringing the issue to Executive Council, but taking it on his own to impress on Executive Council that this is not only an environmentally sensitive issue but it is an important one. Therefore, it needs to be dealt with. I am asking for that undertaking.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Agriculture, Communications, Environment and Natural Resources.

Hon. John B. McLean: Mr. Speaker, I gave that undertaking awhile ago to the other member. As far as I am concerned, I have always been pressing for it because I have been a fisherman as much as anybody else in here. I am aware of fish pots and the damage they can do. I support one hundred percent that we need to deal with the fish pots and put the proper size mesh. If I did not agree with that, I would not have even recommended a paper to Executive Council.

The Speaker: No further supplementaries? Moving on to question no. 68, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for George Town.

QUESTION 68

No. 68: Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation (a) to provide a list of equipment at the physiotherapy department at the Faith Hospital; and (b) to say if a physiotherapist is employed there?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Before I answer the question, I would like to say that it is my pleasure to have in the House with me, to assist in this question, our own Caymanian who is Head of Department. This is a very timely question considering what has transpired over the past few years.

An inventory of equipment in the Physiotherapy Department at the Faith Hospital is as follows:

EQUIPMENT	QUANTITY
Therasonic 1032 Ultrasound Unit	1
Electromedical Supplies Trolley	1
Over the door cervical traction kits	2
Therabath wax bath	1
Graham field exercise balls	2
Goniometers	3

The Physiotherapist post at Faith Hospital is vacant at present. Physiotherapist services at Faith Hospital are provided on a three-day per week basis by a physiotherapist from the Cayman Islands Hospital, Grand Cayman.

The post has been advertised and applications are being reviewed for short listing. Interview will take place in the near future.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: Supplementaries, the First Elected Member.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister state if the amount of clients that utilise the three-day per week service justifies the need for a full-time physiotherapist at the Faith Hospital?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, eventually there will be justification for this.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I quite understand the minister's answer and I won't pursue it. Can the minister state if the list of equipment that has been given in the answer is considered to be sufficient for the needs that may have thus far been identified for clients at the Faith Hospital?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: There is some more additional equipment required and they are:

EQUIPMENT	QUANTITY
Treatment plinth	1
Exercise bike (Stationary)	1
Interferential Unit	1
Hand tables	2
Traction bed with accessories (that is on its way of there, now)	1

These following minor items of equipment are in the process of being procured:

EQUIPMENT	QUANTITY
Electric heating pads	2
Ice packs	3
Exercise mats	3
1/2 pound weights	2 sets
5 pound weights	2 sets
10 pound weights	1 set
Full length posture mirror	1
Tent Unit	2
Wobble board	1
Mechanical vibrators	2

The Speaker: The First Elected Member of George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister state if funds have been made available to procure all of the equipment that has been listed? It is simply a matter of going through the process of procuring this equipment.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the answer is in the affirmative.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister could tell the House how long it has been since this initial equipment has been needed at the Faith Hospital?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Some of this equipment has been needed for quite some time but for whatever reason certain requests have not been made. It is available in the present budget.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister state if one of the reasons why this equipment was not asked for prior to this might have been because there was no space to house the equipment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That's in the affirmative, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the minister then say (since this seems to have been one of the problems) whether space has now been provided, and, if so, how has it been provided? Has there been space provided simply by added construction or has the space been provided by removing another service from a certain area to allow for this service to be extended there?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: It is the latter. By using existing space and by using stuff that was not being used in that area.

The Speaker: The Elected Member from North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: I wonder if the honourable minister could say when the physiotherapist post become vacant at the Faith Hospital and why?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That post became vacant on the 19 May. The physiotherapist that was in Cayman Brac was trained at a very high level and she felt that she did not have enough to do to maintain her professional skills.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries?
The Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna Moyle: This is a follow-up on the answer just given by the honourable minister. Is that physiotherapist now in the George Town Hospital, or has she left the island? If she has left the island, could her skills have been used at the George Town Hospital?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, she has left the island and the reason why she was not used in Grand Cayman is that there was not a post vacant for her at that time.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if the present arrangement (which I am assuming calls for someone from the George Town Hospital to visit Cayman Brac three days per week, which means displacing that person from the George Town Hospital) causes any negative effects on the services being provided at the George Town Hospital? If so, what sort of damage control is taking place to ensure that the service is provided as best as possible?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: What it has meant is that we have had to curtail some of our home visits in Grand Cayman and it has been restricted to crucial and very important assistance.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town, a supplementary.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Certainly, I am confident that the minister recognises the dilemma. . . and perhaps I would just seek an undertaking from the minister to ensure that all is done to expedite this process to normalise the situation at both venues as quickly as possible.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, Mr. Speaker, the post as a matter of fact has been advertised and the applications are now being reviewed for short listing. Interviews will take place in the near future. Mr. Speaker, in the meantime there is a locum dealing with this.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If there are no further supplementaries that concludes Question Time for this morning.

I think this would be a convenient time to take the morning break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

GOVERNMENT BUSINESS

MOTIONS

GOVERNMENT MOTION NO. 4/99

10 YEAR NATIONAL STRATEGIC PLAN (1999 - 2008)

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: I would like to first begin by reading the motion. It says:

"WHEREAS the Vision 2008 Project started 15 months ago by the polling of 1000 individuals for their views on the future development of the Cayman Islands;

2) Almost 400 people in the Planning Team and the Round Tables worked together for over 9 months to put together 16 strategies and 208 action plans;

3) The "Key to the Future" document is a summary of the strategies and action plans and the prioritisation in three phases recommended by the Vision 2008 Planning Team;

4) The 10 year National Strategic Plan (1999 - 2008) contains 16 strategies and 208 action plans and will be reviewed and amended as necessary and at least every two years.

5) Executive Council has approved the National Strategic Plan as the policy framework on which the Government will plan for the future;

"BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT this Honourable House hereby approves the Cayman Islands National Strategic Plan 1999 - 2008 and the guide to the National Strategic Plan called the Key to the Future, including the three phases therein."

The Speaker: Government Motion No. 4/99 has been duly moved. Does the Member which to speak to it? The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: The motion now before the House calls for the Legislative Assembly to accept the 10 Year National Strategic Plan, Vision 2008, and the Executive Summary called "The Key to the Future" which divides the National Strategic Plan into three phases.

I would like to look at how Vision came about and where it had its beginning. And I would refer first to a document that was published by the Foreign and Commonwealth Office on the 30 May 1997, entitled "Contingent Liabilities in the Dependent Territories," which is a United Kingdom report by the UK Controller and Auditor General. I refer to this document because it is my intention to show that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office, as well as our government (in other words, both governments) consider that the 10 Year National Strategic Plan, Vision 2008, is first and foremost an instrument that will contribute to and promote continued good governance in these islands.

In January 1993, Her Majesty's Ministers proposed the introduction of joint agreed country policy plans for each of the Caribbean territories aimed at identifying priorities for development to which both governments would be committed. Mr. Speaker, these were brought in the countries that were grant-aided and they are very basic plans, I should point out that, only deal substantially with a 5 year economic type of plan and many of those are basically are not taken in the large amount as was taken in by our Vision 2008 Plan.

In 1997, following a commitment made by the then Governor, a small committee was formed to develop the terms of reference for a Vision Statement for the Cayman Islands. Initially, these terms of reference called for an outside consultant to develop and direct national planning. However, under the Governor's urging, and reflecting the fact that the Cayman Islands were already familiar with strategic planning which had been carried out with extensive public involvement for education, health and drug abuse prevention and rehabilitation from as far back as 1994, Executive Council agreed to a design for a long-term strategic plan, which would be based on public involvement and participation from all (and I repeat, all) the people of the Cayman Islands.

My ministry (as the ministry responsible for planning) was given the responsibility to develop the project which was announced in the Throne Speech in February 1998 and was called Vision 2008.

I would like to quote from these initial terms of reference which read, "The Government wishes to build upon the planning process that already exists in the Cayman Islands. The intention is to produce a process of dialogue and analysis, a document, which sets out a strategic vision for the islands for the next ten years, and outline the country's main goals and priorities. It will also outline the main outcomes or long-term results expected.

"It is clear there has been tremendous efforts at planning in different areas. In spite of these, however, there remains an important gap at the broadest level of definition. At present, there are no clearly stated national goals and priorities for the Cayman Islands. As a result, each sector has been pursuing its own objectives and in the absence of an overall framework, it has been difficult to co-ordinate long-term development. The many economic, social and environmental issues, which now confront the islands, need to be considered in an integrated manner, if the long-term growth and sustainability of the Cayman Islands is to be achieved.

"The plan will take fully into consideration the constitutional relationship with Her Majesty's Government, bearing in mind the Secretary of State ultimate responsible for the affairs of the dependent territories. And that Her Majesty's Government in partnership with the Cayman Islands is concerned to promoting good government and sound economic development in the Cayman Islands, and to monitor and control contingent liabilities as identified in the recent National Audit Office Report.

"This will include consultations with the Foreign and Commonwealth Office in London, other government departments in White Hall and the dependent territories regional secretariat in Bridgetown."

Mr. Speaker, the 10 Year National Strategic Plan addresses the issues as required by the terms of reference and further addresses the issues raised in the recent White Paper—especially modernisation and reform. Under this, government is committed to reform and the 10 Year National Strategic Plan is the primary reform platform upon which all the other aspects are performed must be predicated.

Modernisation is at the core of Vision 2008, its direction, and its policies. It extends to the reform of a financial management systems, of a human resource management development initiatives and our thrust and commitment to more open and accountable government.

At the heart of the National Strategic Plan is partnership with the people. Vision 2008 has opened the way for constructive dialogue and consultation with the private sector, non-government organisations and the man in the street, with its innovative and encompassing polling and visioning process and the work of the planning team and the round tables.

Referring to the polling process, I will at a later stage read a part of that. But to continue on with what the White Paper referred to. Once again, good government is reflected in the 16 strategies, which deal with the comprehensive approach to issues ranging from zero tolerance for crime and drugs. Through strengthening of the family and support and encouragement of young people to a comprehensive immigration policy which protects Caymanians and give security to long-term residents.

The White Paper of the United Kingdom puts particular emphasis on the sustainable development of the environment and it calls on the overseas territories to (and I quote): "Develop appropriate and applicable and affordable environmental policies, legislation and standards with the goal of sustainable tourism" (that is at page 37). Vision 2008 has met this call through its environment strategy but also through its themes of harmony, prosperity and balance according to the principles of growth management.

Mr. Speaker, the key teams in the Foreign Commonwealth Office's White Paper are modernisation, partnership, environment, bio-diversity and prosperity. Vision 2008 has met and exceed this call and when accepted and implemented by this and successive government and legislators will ensure that the Cayman Islands will sail proudly and prosperously into the 21st Century.

Perhaps, the most distinctive feature of Vision 2008 has been its emphasis on participation by the people of the three Cayman Islands. This began in March of 1998 with a National Opinion Poll, which sought the priority areas of concern and goals of a representative sample of residence. Mr. Speaker, of the 1,000 people polled in the three islands, 55% were Caymanians and 45% were non-Caymanians. The National Opinion Poll identified 8 priority areas for consideration:

1. Drugs and crime
2. Education
3. Tourism
4. Development
5. Environment
6. Caymanian, non-Caymanian relations
7. Cayman Brac
8. Little Cayman

I would like at this stage to read from that poll the executive summary. It is found on page 4 of the document and that reads:

About half of the population has heard about Vision 2008 and nearly three-quarters see it as an opportunity to work together to shape the future of the Cayman Islands.

"1. While two-thirds believe that the Cayman Islands are better off today than ten years ago, less than one-third have that same confidence looking forward to 2008.

"2. This concerns stems primarily from the fact that the very things people treasure most here: peace, quiet and security are under attack from drugs, crime, over-development and an on-battling of Caymanian Culture."

Mr. Speaker, those are very blunt and very deep reaching view. What I would like to do is to elaborate on the priorities that I mentioned earlier and I am reading from the report.

"The Vision 2008 Priorities. To reverse this trend and bring a renewed sense of optimism back to the Cayman Islands, Vision 2008 should focus on:

"1. Drugs and crime: Implement stronger penalties for drug dealing and violent crimes. Increase on-the-job training for police. Provide more drug rehab programmes.

"2. Education: Maintain strong standards for students and teachers. Enforce greater discipline. Focus on 21st Century job skills. Encourage college or vocational training. Guarantee computer literacy and technological understanding.

"3. Tourism: Continue attracting large numbers of middle and upper income tourist rather than focusing on fewer wealthier visitors. Foster an environment of tolerance for all visitors.

"4. Development: Introduce efficient public transportation on Grand Cayman, slow the pace of development and better integrate environmental concerns into planning. Develop more affordable housing, consider a temporary moratorium on new developments on Seven Mile Beach.

"5. Environment: Save the mangroves from being cut down. Protect the North Sound.

"6. Caymanian/Non-Caymanian relations: Facilitate communication and co-operation between Caymanians and non-Caymanians, particularly among younger and lower income residents. Substantially increase job training and enhancement opportunities for young and middle age Caymanians. Consider revising the Caymanians first policy to included placement, training and test. Keep work permit requirements and time limits the same for professionals and non-professionals. Do not change permanent residency process. Retain one Immigration Board for Grand Cayman but review composition and policies.

"7. Cayman Brac: Reduce telephone rates between Grand Cayman and Cayman Brac. Provide incentives for younger people to return. Improve the air schedule. Extent pipe water supply to reduce construction cost. Create more local, high paying job opportunities. Provide additional incentives for businesses to return.

"8. Little Cayman: Control and regulate growth and development. Place a premium on environmental protection. Focus on environmental education for visitors and new residence."

Those findings were from the poll that was carried out by Penn, Shawn and Burland Associates Inc. in April of 1998.

At this time, I would like to read from the (and I did this when I laid it on the table but I think it is important that this is stressed) Planning Team's Vision and to go on to read the 16 strategies. The Planning Team's Vision for the Cayman Islands in the year 2008 is that Cayman Islands is:

- "A God-fearing country based on traditional Christian values.
- A caring community based on mutual respect for all individual and their basic human rights.
- A community which practices honest and open dialogue to ensure mutual understanding and social harmony.
- A safe, secure and law-abiding community.
- A country which is free from crime and drug abuse.
- A country with an educational system which identifies and develops on a continuing basis the abilities of each person, allowing them to reach their full potential and productivity.
- A community which encourages and prepares young people to assume leadership roles.
- A county which provides a comprehensive health-care system.
- A community protective of traditional Caymanian heritage and the family unit.
- A country with a vibrant, diversified economy which provides full employment.

- A country which makes optimal use of modern technology.
- A country which manages growth and maintains prosperity, while protecting our social and natural environment.
- A country which respects, protects and defends our natural resources as the basis of our existence.
- A country with open, responsible and accountable government which includes a working partnership with the private sector and continuing beneficial ties with the United Kingdom.
- A country with an Immigration system which protects Caymanians and gives security to long-term residents."

Mr. Speaker, the parameters are as follows (and this is still the Planning Team's parameters):

- "We will manage growth in order to prevent the degradation of our Caymanian culture, environment and socio-economic framework.
- We will not tolerate criminal activity or drug abuse.
- We will strengthen our position as a leading tourist destination and financial centre.
- We will ensure the social integration of all residents of the Cayman Islands.
- We will promote life-long education and training.
- We will support the family unit.
- We will endeavour to protect our young people from negative influences.
- We will ensure that the decision-making processes within the public sector are open, transparent and subject to accountability.
- We will ensure the implementation of this Plan."

The objects for the Vision 2008 process are:

- To have full community participation in all phases of Vision 2008.
- To have successive governments committed to Vision 2008 by funding and implementing the Plan.

Mr. Speaker, the sixteen strategies that the Planning Team created are as follows (this really to a large extent the meat of what this motion deals with because these two documents really deals substantially with these strategies and one also deals with the action plans):

- "1. We will develop and implement a policy of zero tolerance for crime and drug abuse.
- "2. We will provide opportunities and challenge young people to become involved in all aspects of the development of their country and community affairs, supported by the public and private sectors.
- "3. We will support an educational system, which identifies and develops the abilities of each person, encouraging them to realise their full potential.
- "4. We will establish systems which serve to strengthen the family unit and promote a caring society.

"5. We will develop awareness of our Caymanian culture which is based on traditional Christian values and a strong family unit.

"6. We will develop and implement a plan which addresses the special needs and concerns of Cayman Brac.

"7. We will develop and implement a plan which addresses the uniqueness and special needs of Little Cayman.

"8. We will promote open and accountable government.

"9. We will ensure optimal infrastructure which supports the needs of the current population and projected growth.

"10. We will develop and implement a growth management plan to achieve and maintain a balance between the natural and built environment.

"11. We will protect our natural environment, particularly the Central mangrove and other wetlands, the North Sound and coral reefs, from further degradation.

"12. We will develop and implement an information technology plan that optimises the economic and social development of the Cayman Islands.

"13. We will ensure that Government, in partnership with the Tourism and Finance industries, strengthens plans for the continuing success of these two critical sectors and we will identify opportunities for diversification.

"14. We will support and ensure the implementation of a comprehensive health-care plan, which emphasises the prevention, mental health and wellness.

"15. We will support comprehensive contingency planning for natural and man-made disasters and Incidents, to ensure the preservation of human life, protection of property and economic recovery of the country.

"16. We will create a comprehensive immigration policy, which protects Caymanians and gives security to long-term residents."

Mr. Speaker, in June 1998, a Planning Team, which was a representative of the residents of the Cayman Islands met for three days and put together the statement of beliefs and the visioning statement that are set out and which were read [and] the three objectives and the sixteen strategies.

This work in progress was a result of the opinion poll and the numerous letters and phone calls as well as visits to the vision office made by hundreds of people. It clearly set out the kind of Cayman Islands the people wish to see in the future.

The next part of the process was to involve a wide cross-section of people to consider the sixteen strategies and make suggestions as to how they should be implemented. Sixteen round tables, one for each strategy were established, leaders trained and active recruiting started. Over 300 people signed up and 250 of these worked over the next four months to develop the 208 action plans which were accepted by the Planning Team in March 1999.

The Planning Team worked for a total of 11 days to access the action plans according to established criteria which included a consideration of costs and benefits of each individual action plan. Because of the depth and complexity of the plan, the Planning Team established a small task force to pull together the different treads of the plan and to produce the key document. This document which is entitled, 'The Key to the Future' is the executive summary of the plan and also provides the suggested phasing and objectives for each of the three phases of the plan.

Mr. Speaker, at this stage I would like to first thank my Permanent Secretary, Mrs. Basdeo, who headed up the Vision 2008 and who has given many long and dedicated hours of her time, and shown very extensive and wise foresight in developing the National Strategic Plan along with the other members of her team.

Mr. Speaker, this plan is one that no country that I know of, has effectively managed to put together in such a comprehensive way. The gratefulness of this country and the thanks of this country go to Mrs. Basdeo, the Executive Director. I would also like to personally thank Mrs. Hyacinth Connolly, who also along with Mrs. Basdeo headed up the Education Strategic Plan, a very effective and efficient lady. Together with Mr. Desmond McConvey, the Assistant Facilitator; Mr. David Archbold, the Information Technology Advisor; Mrs. Judith Gates, the Training Facilitator; Mrs. Patricia Slocum, the Executive Assistant; Miss Felicia Deslandes, was a student intern and Mrs. Julia Jones, the Public Relations Co-ordinator.

I would like to thank that Vision 2008 Team because I think this country owes them a great indebtedness for producing this plan and producing it on time and producing it in a very low cost way with the vast majority except for a few days work that was done by external facilitators and experts. Everything on this plan was done in Cayman, headed by a Caymanian and with Caymanians on the Planning Teams and the Action Teams.

I would also like to give my thanks and the thanks of this country to the Planning Team members, who are:

Mr. Heber Arch	Mr. Victor Green
Terry Bainbridge	Mrs. Lorna Hampson
Mr. Osbourne Bodden	Mr. John Harding
Mr. J.C. Calhoun	Mrs. Rhonda Kelly
Mrs. Annie Mitten-Clarke	Mrs. Lisa Hurlson
Mrs. Camille Davey	Mrs. Deborah Kirkconnell
Ms. Eileen Dounce	Mrs. Melanie McLaughlin
Mr. Alson Ebanks	Mrs. Nadine McLean
Mr. Carson Ebanks	Mrs. Olive Miller
Mrs. Darlene Ebanks	Mrs. Sheryl Miller
Mr. Gary Ebanks	Mr. Kirkland Nixon
Ms. Ronda Edie	Mr. Chris Rose
Mr. David Foster	Mr. Kenny Ryan
Ms. Laurice Fraser	Mrs. Suzy Soto
Mrs. Iva Gray	Mr. Peter Tompkins

They are the Planning Team members drawn from a wide cross-section of the Cayman Islands community and who are representative of the Caymanian community and who toiled very long hours in putting together the strategies and subsequently reviewing the action plans. They as the Planning Team members actually form the members who have taken the final decisions on the document that is before this House today. This is not a document from me or from my ministry as such; this is a document that has come from the people of the Cayman Islands represented through these Planning Team members.

Mr. Speaker, I would also like to pay my gratitude to the Round Table Leaders because they spent many long hours together with their teams at the round table in dealing with the 208 action plans (well, it was more than that, it came up to about 230) that were accepted. Those round table leaders are:

ROUND TABLES	LEADERS
1) Crime & Drugs	Cathy Delaphena	Terry Delaney
2) Youth	Patrice Donalds	Ramona Ritch
3) Education	Jahaira Kelly	Elizabeth Thompson
4) Family	Beverly Banks	Kathy Wagner
5) Culture	Eziethamae Bodden	Marcia Muttoo
6) Cayman Brac	Mark Knowlton	Mark Tibbetts
7) Little Cayman	Janet Walker	Croy McCoy
8) Open & Accountable Government	Pilar Bush-Gordon	Clarence Bothwell
9) Infrastructure	Kenneth Ebanks	Finley Joseph
10) Growth Management	Nick Popovich
11) Environment	Phil Bush	Art Schindler
12) Information Technology	David Archbold	Nick Robson
13) Economy	Wil Pineau	Dax Basdeo
14) Health	Jacqui Smith	Mark Frye
15) Contingency Planning	Christine Maltman	Chuck Gordon
16) Immigration	Patrick Schmid	Denise Tibbetts

Mr. Speaker, those round table leaders together with another 300 Caymanians and residents from these island went through four months of very hard work, putting together the plans that are produced in the National Strategic Plan.

One aspect of Vision 2008, which must be underlined, is evaluation. People will say, 'well there is a plan and what is going to happen next year or the year after.' Vision 2008, the National Strategic Plan 1999 - 2008 is a rolling dynamic plan and it will take account of the changing needs of the Cayman Islands as they happen within the overall policy framework.

Executive Council has agreed that there should be regular reporting to them, through the ministries on the implementation of the plan and that the plan itself should be reviewed as necessary but at least every two years.

Mr. Speaker, also with the two documents—and I read this the last time so I don't intend to go into this by reading this again. On page 30, The Key to the Future, has set out the recommendations which they suggest for establishing priorities. Phase 1 of 1999 -2001 are clearly set out and I would just read the first part but not go into the details. For Phase 1, they recommend:

- Adopting and implementing Growth Management and change management policies

- Creating the legislative and regulatory framework for implementation
- Building the information base required for prudent management
- Building human resource capacity
- Informing the public
- Integrating medium and long term financial planning for Phases 2 and 3
- Integrating Public Sector reform.

Mr. Speaker, we have had 1,500 copies of the Key to the Future and the National Strategic Plan printed. These are available at present from the ministry and will be at the district meetings that I will refer to shortly; at the Vision Office and at the Legislative Assembly and at other places. So from today, these documents will be available.

Mr. Speaker, also from the 1st July, which is tomorrow, there will be district meetings beginning in Little Cayman, through to the 14th July, that will go through all districts. This fulfils the commitment to the people of the Cayman Islands for each district that was given when Vision 2008 was started. They asked for members of the team to come back to the districts and to show them what the plan is giving in relation to what they have asked for.

Mr. Speaker, for the twenty years that I have been in politics, I think, there has been a call through out and even more so recently in the past 4 - 6 for comprehensive plans for the Cayman Islands. We have had sectorial plans, we have had plans relating to specific sectors, such as education, drugs, tourism, agriculture, health and several others. But this is the first time that a plan that is a comprehensive plan for all of the Cayman Islands, all three islands, covering all aspects and a plan that has been put together by the people of the Cayman Islands has been brought to this Honourable House. I must say there will be areas where there will be expense in implementing areas of this and that is always, sir, as such subject to Finance Committee. I am committed, I believe that this House is committed and we will see that when the vote comes shortly or in due course, I should say. I know that the Government is committed to this 10 Year National Strategic Plan for these islands. And, more important, I know that the people who have put this together are going to see that it is accepted, they are going to see that it is carried through, that it is implemented in phases. The people of this country are also going to see that it is updated from time to time as necessary.

Mr. Speaker, this is the people's plan and the people of this country have spoken clearly. They have spoken in detail in this plan. I believe that the plan comes from the heart of the people of the Cayman Islands and I would ask all members of this Honourable House to please support this plan, to pass it and to give their full support to this. Not only over the next 18 months in this House but in future legislators that would be running this country in the years to come.

Thank you.

The Speaker: I think before opening the floor to debate, this might be a convenient time to take the luncheon break. We shall suspend until 2:15 p.m.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 12:45 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 2:42 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Government Motion No. 4/99. Does any honourable Member wish to speak?

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. I rise to make my contribution in support of Government Motion No. 4/99. In so doing, I wish to take the opportunity to point out some areas that I think could be strengthened in the Vision exercise. My contribution will be a balanced one. I will not dwell so much on what I consider the strengthens of the exercise, rather, I will spend a little time highlighting improvements I think could be made or should have been made.

Mr. Speaker, there was a time when in some circles it was unfashionable to speak about 5-year and 10-year development plans because many people associated such exercises with planning that was carried on in the socialist countries or the Eastern Block. However, we have entered an era where more people now (including those people in a majority of the Western Democracies) realise that 5-year and 10-year planning makes for efficient government, particularly when it comes to earmarking and highlighting priorities and managing public finances.

The future of the Cayman Islands presents us with both opportunities and obstacles in this regard. Caymanians and residents here must choose how to face these opportunities and these obstacles. The world itself is in a significant period of change, but change is complex particularly at a time when most of us are preoccupied with preparing for the new millennium. To do so successfully, it is recognised by many that we need to have some clearly formatted plans.

I suppose, Mr. Speaker, it was out of a necessity to meet this need that the Foreign and Commonwealth Office and the Auditor General's Department in Britain put together the Contingent Liabilities Report on the Dependent Territories. As the honourable minister moving the motion on behalf of the government said, the need to come up with some national plan really arose out of recommendations and stipulations in the contingent liabilities of the Dependent Territories Report.

We have heard that this plan, which we call Vision 2008, is a plan of the people. And indeed, the plan involved a significant number of persons, both those who were on the visioning exercise as members of the planning team, and also persons polled for their ideas in an effort to arrive at what should really be the priorities to set for the next 10 years. Mr. Speaker, we were also told that this was not a political plan, but rather a plan in which all were involved including all members of the Parliament. So the plan was non-partisan, it didn't belong to any one particular political grouping, or any one particular societal element, but should be seen as everybody's plan.

Mr. Speaker, that is certainly attractive and it is certainly an invitation for all to participate. I agree that everyone should feel that they have a vested interest in the development of the Caymanian society.

Mr. Speaker, what I wish to say at the beginning is that the evolution of this plan is going to necessitate certain changes in our society. First of all, it is going to necessitate certain changes in the way we do business, in terms of the way the government operates. It is going to necessitate certain changes which will impinge on the way the private sector dovetails with the government sector and, not of the least significant, it is going to necessitate certain changes which are going to influence the way politics and public administration in the country are practised.

This Vision 2008 exercise is going to incorporate public service reform initiatives including financial sector reforms, designed to modernise the government and make it more efficient. It is going to necessitate changes in the way we handle information, making it necessary to have a Freedom of Information Act, so that certain information can be readily available to those persons who need to access it for whatever reason. So, what we are talking about is nothing short of a radical transformation from the way we have been doing business in the past to the way we will be doing it in the future.

Mr. Speaker, I have to pause here to pose the question: Are we really ready for these changes that this Vision 2008 is going to bring in? Are we sincere and serious about following through with the plan? Because it is not a situation where we can go halfway and stop—either we go the whole hog or we don't embark on the change at all. Now, it is a challenge. The government says that it is committed to seeing the plan through—we will see, Mr. Speaker.

It is interesting to note that in Bermuda, their national plan (which really emanated from a plan originally put together by the United Bermuda Party) has a mechanism for continuous assessment. In the Bermuda plan which was adopted, there is provision made for assessment of the achievement or non-achievement of the various objectives—2 years, 5 years and more afterwards. And, in Bermuda, the process is charted by virtue of the fact that each objective is taken. The process is charted to the extent to say whether legislation has been passed and approved. Or what programmes have been in place to deal with the shortcomings, or deal with the strategies, or deal with the plans, or what action plans have added, modified or have been scrapped. I would hope, Mr. Speaker, that at some stage we can evolve into this kind of tracking of our plan and division that we have before us to embark upon at this time.

Mr. Speaker, one of the concerns I have is that it will be necessary, now that we have arrived at the Vision and the strategies, to at some stage prioritise and then quantify in monetary terms, how much it is going to cost to achieve the objectives we have set for ourselves. In many instances, these objectives are going to necessitate expenditure. So having the plan is not the end of the exercise, having a plan allows us to take off from a studied and comprehensive position. Having arrived at that position, we have to then decide what are our priorities and when we have decided upon these priorities, how much it is going to take in monetary terms to achieve them.

I don't want to give anyone the impression that having arrived at the plan is the end of the exercise. The challenge is just beginning. Then too, in a multi-cultural and multi-ethnic society we have to take into consideration all of the demands and the challenges that a plural society is going to bring upon us. For example, Mr. Speaker, I want to highlight this not necessarily so much as a criticism but as a point to avoid.

We have said in the little booklet, Working Together To Shape Our Future . . . and I take these kinds of things seriously. In the Vision Statement on the last page, we have said that, "A Cayman Islands that is a God-fearing country based on traditional Christian values." Now, Mr. Speaker, at the same time we are saying that we are a plural democracy and we are encouraging other people who share certain values to come in. But when we make a statement like this, we know that most of us in the Cayman Islands are followers of what we call the Christian tradition. But when you speak of traditional Christian values, we are excluding other people who may not be Christians but who may be Jews, Moslems, but who can be equally good citizens.

I say that to highlight that while I understand and accept what is meant, we have to be careful how we express things so that we do not inadvertently exclude any particular element that may be willing to join in and contribute to the development of our society. Because if we accept the fact that the world is becoming a global village and soon...

Years ago, a Japanese author by the name of Ken-ichi Ohmae talked about the borderless world, a world with no national borders, meaning people were free to travel and settle from country to country. So we have to be careful, if we accept this, how we make certain statements while at the same time setting ourselves up to be a pluralist democracy.

Mr. Speaker, there are other challenges that we will have to rise to but I am happy that on the whole this exercise met with great enthusiasm and was supported by a wide cross-section of persons in the Cayman Islands. I believe it is only by this kind of inter-dependence, this kind of co-operation between the various elements in the society that the Cayman Islands will to continue to grow into a strong and viable country. If there is any significant drawback to this plan, it is that it does not give (as far as I am concerned) enough attention to what I would consider any kind of contingency which would deal with a failure of our financial industry. I am minded to say this, because as we move on it seems that we may be forced to come to terms with some kind of greater pressure.

I would like to see some time spent on an alternative to what we may be able to do in order to continue the high standard of living we have come to expect. Perhaps it should be a challenge to the persons who develop this particular plan to take it another stage further, and look to the development of some diversification of the economy. I say this full well cognisant that even as I speak we have a delegation of ministers, and at least one member of the backbench active in dialogue and discussions with the relevant international authorities. I would hope that out of this exercise we could see the way to develop some kind of national diversification plan that we could have in the event that we need to put that into effect.

It is unfortunate that more thought was not given to this at the same time we developed the Vision 2008 plan because I believe, Mr. Speaker, that no harm can come of us going that route.

The key to our future, many of us have been saying, is exactly this kind of planning. Any change, which is managed, we need not be frightened or scared about. It is only change that comes as a result of chaos or which comes as a result of not being in control of events that should frighten us. But as the First Elected Member for George Town and I learned on a conference we attended April 6 - 9, the best insurance against these kinds of events is to trigger the change ourselves. If we do it that way, we can manage it. The best way to control the future is to invent it.

So, Mr. Speaker, if we have a situation of change where we are managing the change, we are doing well. We are on top of things. This Vision 2008 document affords us the opportunity to manage the changes we would like to see in Caymanian society. But in so doing, we must prepare ourselves. Not only ourselves as the representatives of the people and the legislators but the next level of the bureaucracy. And in addition to this preparation, we must have in place certain procedures and mechanisms which are going to complement this change.

We are talking about dealing with a society based on mutual respect for all individuals and their basic human rights. So, Mr. Speaker, that pre-supposes that we have to have things like a Bill of Rights in place, which spells out what these basic rights are and how they will be protected. Not only spell out what the basic rights are, also what the responsibilities of the individuals are with regards to these rights that they hold.

In addition to that, we have to set out clear rules as to how the bureaucracy and the government are going to function. We have to say how transparent and accountable we are prepared to be. In essence, what we are doing is not only introducing a whole new vocabulary but we are also introducing a whole new way of behaviour. When you talk about transparency and accountability those are not just hollow sounding words, they are indicating that we have taken a certain position, that we have taken a certain commitment. Once we have uttered these, Mr. Speaker, if we are serious we cannot do so half-heartedly. So when we are talking about transparency, immediately we are talking about things like freedom of information.

And when we are talking about accountability, clearly, we are talking about this whole business of being responsible; of the leadership being responsible, coming forward and being responsible and not ducking and dodging. So that means that the behaviour—including the behaviour in this Parliament—is bound to change in a way that people will have to stand up and say, 'Here is the reason why this was done'. So, we are going to come to a stage, hopefully, where we eliminate a lot of the power play and the badgering that now goes on.

Mr. Speaker, this move we have embarked upon with the tabling of this plan, is a move that is in keeping with the international climate. Britain itself is going this route, the European Union, other countries of the Commonwealth. Mr. Speaker, it is unfortunate that many years ago, those people who were bold enough to suggest this route were shot down. I contend that had we taken the opportunity earlier, we could have been in the realm of a Singapore now.

And, Mr. Speaker, talking about Singapore, I was just reading in one of the international journals a few days ago that Singapore was the only country in Southeast Asia that was not negatively affected by the financial crises that happened in Southeast Asia. Why? Because Singapore had national plans that were sensible, practical, and adhered to. And yet, when you compare the physical geographical size of Singapore and even the population, it is one of the smallest countries in Southeast Asia, yet it ranks among the top in terms of quality of life of its citizens, standard of living of its citizens, level of education of its citizens, level of housing of its citizens and the social attitudes of the populace.

It shows us that if we are prepared to offer to our citizens a certain way of life, they will put up with certain shortcomings. It is well known and accepted that in Singapore certain restrictions are placed on the citizens, but the citizens do not mind that because in the long term it is balanced out by they being guaranteed a high standard of living, better quality of life, access to the kind of education that they want, and, certainly, some of the best living condition in terms of accommodation in the world barring none.

Mr. Speaker, there are those of us in this Parliament who hold out the Singapore path of development as a model that we in the Cayman Islands should follow even at this stage. So, perhaps with the tabling of the Vision 2008 Statement, that gives us some hope that we can make up ground.

Significantly too, this document allows us to view each person's contribution as being worthy and important. And so one of the lessons that we need to learn early if this exercise is going to be a success, is that each citizen has his or her worth. Indeed development must operate like a tightly cohesive unit. If we are going to be self-righteous and self-centred, hypocritical trying to eliminate or exclude any individual or any element from being important, then we are doomed to fail even before we begin.

I believe that this gives us an opportunity to start the new millennium on a positive note. I don't want to spend any time dwelling on what happened in the past or what didn't happen in the past. Only to say that it is a pity that it took us all these years and all this pain to realise that those persons who, like me, proposed this kind of planning were rejected until now.

Mr. Speaker, I heard the honourable minister in moving this say that this was the first plan—that is not entirely accurate. There was the 1975 Development Plan, that was tabled and passed in the House. It was not implemented because there was some objection to the plan. And rather than the legislators adjusting the plan and tailoring the plan to meet the objections, they ill advisedly went ahead and tried to put their plan in place over the objections. As a result of that, there was a great hue and cry and hullabaloo, and the plan had to be scrapped. I say that for two reasons: One, is to say that even the best of plans will have to be altered at some time or the other; and the second reason is, no plan should be thought of as being so perfect that there will not be some concerns raised about the plan.

What is important about this plan is that this is not the plan of the Honourable Minister with responsibility for Planning. This is the country's plan. This is as much the plan of all the Members of the Legislative Assembly as it is the government's plan. So all of us have a vested interest in seeing that the plan is put forward. By the same token, all of us have a legitimate right to weigh the plan, to measure the plan and to say what we consider are the shortcomings in the plan and how they could be improved or how we can achieve the objectives that are set out.

Plans fail when they are monopolised by one element or one entity. Plans fail when they are seen as the exclusive domain of a certain element or a certain segment. The most successful plans are those which are taken up by everyone, adopted by everyone as being their plan when everyone is seen as having a vested interest. I believe this could be the case with the Vision 2008 exercise.

I believe that politicians have done a good job promoting it. Certainly, I can recall there were not many persons who from the very outset in this Parliament said they were not supportive of the plan. As a matter of fact, to my knowledge there was only one. You know, fourteen other members said that they were in on the exercise from the very beginning.

Mr. Speaker, like the Minister of Education sometimes used to say, it is going to be interesting now that everything seems to be going well, to see the number of people who are going to jump on the bandwagon and say that they are wholeheartedly behind it. It reminds me of the old adage, Mr. Speaker: success has a thousand fathers, but defeat is an orphan.

So I believe that this is a worthy exercise. I think that honourable members of the House should be challenged. I certainly would hope that even that person who expressed some disenchantment and reluctance at the beginning is now convinced that this is a worthy path to take. I for my part have always been supportive. I promoted the exercise from the very beginning among my constituents and I commend the plan. I give it my support and I hope that we could find a way to work together as a Parliament and as a nation to take our country into the 21st Century in the strongest position that it can be.

I believe that it is necessary for us to modernise many of things we are doing, to improve the way we do things, while at the same time saying that we need not be scared of change, particularly if it is a change that we are managing. It is human to look around and compare. We in the Cayman Islands at this time are no different than other countries. Certainly, Bermuda, as I said, has embarked on such a plan. Indeed, we are leaving behind some countries that constitutionally and politically are more advanced than we are because our stage of development, particularly economic development, places us in an eminent position to take an exercise such as this and run with it.

I hope that we make the best of the exercise and we can continue in relationship with the United Kingdom Government that is both beneficial to the Cayman Islands and to the United Kingdom Government.

For a long time, this House has been without an exercise such as this with the capability to unite us all in this effort. It is interesting to see that as we enter the threshold of 2000—and a new election—how many honourable members and indeed how many other political actors will embrace what is in this plan to become a part of their manifesto. I believe if we do that, if it works out as I think it will work out, then it really gives the electorate and our constituents a difficult time because you are likely to see a uniformity of manifestos making it then difficult to differentiate between the platforms of the various candidates.

I believe Mr. Speaker, that the Cayman Islands at this time with all the challenges and obstacles that they may have are in a good position if it embraces the opportunities we have and lays out for itself realisable objectives. I believe that we are poised on the verge of a take-off and I hope and pray that I can be a part of this journey into the next millennium, as I would hope for other honourable colleagues who are here.

But after we have arrived at our priorities then we really have to sit down to decide how we are going to fund these priorities that we have chosen while at the same time ensuring that the high standard of living to which our people are accustomed can be maintained.

I commend the plan, Mr. Speaker, and I would say to the honourable minister moving it on behalf of the government that he now has a dual responsibility. He has the responsibility to see that this plan is carried out, while at the same time ensuring that the plans of his own ministry are kept abreast and current with developments and process. Mr. Speaker, that is not an easy exercise but certainly for a minister who likes to remind me of how long he has been here and how eminently qualified he is, I am sure that he will rise to that challenge.

I certainly hope he does because the progress and the development and the success of the Vision 2008 exercise is going to be dependent upon his ability to marshal us and to convince us and the country as a whole that this is a worthy exercise to embark upon, while at the same time taking care of the business of his ministry. So in essence, he will have to be wearing two hats on one head simultaneously.

The honourable minister read out some important elements how at the same time we are doing this, we have to ensure that we are preparing the next generation of leaders to take the mantle. Whether that generation of leaders is going to be those people who sit in these hallowed halls or whether it is going to be those people who occupy the bureaucracy. What I am saying is that it is an exercise that is flawed with a myriad of challenges.

The Cayman Islands have overcome obstacles before and risen to the various challenges. It is left to us to see that it does so on this occasion. I would caution, in conclusion, let us not degenerate to the point where we become selfish and we try to be so distracted that we get to the point where we begin laying blame and pointing fingers. This is an exercise that all of us should be involved in. This is an exercise that if successful, all of us can feel proud and take credit in.

It is also an exercise where if it fails all of us will be collectively to blame for its failure. Having said that, I once again reiterate my intention to do what I can to see that the plan is a success and I commend the plan to honourable members. Mr. Speaker, I need not remind the House that it is not so often that I am so unilaterally in such agreement with the honourable minister moving this. I hope, we can take the best of this opportunity and since it is not exclusive his plan, I commend him and tell him that he has my wholehearted support and I wish him well in promoting the plan to the Parliament and the nation.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate, does any other Member wish to speak? Would this be a convenient time to take the afternoon break? We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3:24 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 3:45 PM

*Mrs. Edna Moyle, JP, Deputy Speaker
In the Chair*

The Deputy Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Debate continues on Government Motion No. 4/99, 10 Year National Strategic Plan (1999 - 2008).

Does any other Member wish to speak? The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you, Madam Speaker. My contribution is going to be very short, but I would just like to say congratulations to those who have been responsible for moving the Vision 2008 plan forward. For the first time in a long time, the country has a plan to guide us into the future. Even the Bible tells us that without a plan, or a vision, the people shall perish.

One of the important aspects of this plan is the fact that it is supposed to be widely circulated. There has been extensive involvement by members of the public as well as the Parliament. I believe that the Permanent Secretary responsible, Mrs. Joy Basdeo, has to be congratulated with the job she has done with respect to meeting the deadlines that were outlined for the plan, the interim reports etcetera.

Madam Speaker, I trust that the recommendations put forward in the plan basically reflect the views of the majority of the people consulted. Those are the recommendations that will be put into effect. Madam Speaker, you and I are both aware that we cannot please everyone. But I believe if we can come up with a plan that addresses the needs and that deals with the issues of the majority of people in this country, then we would have done very well indeed.

In connection with any vision or plan of this nature, there is always a financial cost associated. Vision 2008 is no exception, it is going to spend money to implement those recommendations that have been put forward.

I believe what we have to do as a country, is determine what the priorities are and at least attempt to implement the plan in a phased manner over a period of time. The plan should also be flexible enough so that it is an on-going plan subject to revisions and updates as we go along so that it remains current, practical, and continues to express the views of the majority in this country.

Madam Speaker, I firmly believe that in this country we have a lot to be thankful for. In my opinion, we are a blessed people. We are a very attractive destination from the standpoint of persons from the outside wanting to come here to take advantage of the opportunities that exist here. And for that reason, we have to have some guidelines, some control, some plan in place to ensure that first of all the true born Caymanian continues to have his or her own identity and continues to enjoy the fruits of his or her labour invested over a period of time.

I am excited about the plan. I have attended a number of the briefings. There are very professional people associated with the plan, and I look forward to seeing some of the recommendations that are contained in this plan put forward and put in place. Thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Madam Speaker, I have been one that has said there is a difference between leadership and management. Leaders are responsible primarily for creating the map, the plan; and management is responsible primarily for the implementation of that plan.

I have also said that the carpenter's rule is to measure twice and cut once. Therefore, if you don't know what size you want the piece of wood to be, you would really not be rational in cutting it because you would have to cut it too many times. If you measure, it is possible to get the exact dimension required. If we apply that principle to other aspects of human organisation, if we apply that same principle to government—which is the art of managing a society—then we would see that it is necessary for government to measure twice and to cut once.

This National Strategic Plan should give this government (and any future government) the possibility to know on a wider level what the aspirations and ideologies are with regards development and other aspects. So the government does not have to second-guess what the people think with regards to the environment, nor does the government have to second-guess what the people think with regards to the issue of immigration, because the Government has had carried out a survey that gives them as scientifically as possible an indication of what the specific concerns are from the point of view of the people.

So the principles that government have the so-called ideological principles, or governing principles, or manifestos which the government has can be moulded with this National Strategic Plan in mind thereby allowing our leaders to become leaders rather than managers; persons that have the end in mind, that have the map. Now that we have that, I believe that is a worthwhile accomplishment.

Now, there is no point in my denying the fact that I felt from the very beginning that this exercise could become very political. I spoke to the last Governor, Mr. John Owen, when he was here with regard to my concern that this particular National Strategic Plan could be seen at some particular point as the accomplishment of one member of government, or of a specific government.

Now, we know that we must be vigilant in making people understand that this is not the accomplishment of any particular minister in government; nor is this the accomplishment of any particular government, but this is an accomplishment of the people of these islands. The people of these islands have created this National Strategic Plan by using the resources—intellectual and otherwise—made available to them by way of the government. So it is important that those of us that now become involved in the plan, that now see the usefulness of a plan . . . if this is the way that we must achieve a plan or a map for our country for the next eight to ten years, it is important for us now, if this is the way we have achieved it, that we are satisfied that we have achieved something that gives us the possibility to have principles to guide us forward with regards where it is we going with our country.

I was of the opinion previously that it is also part of a politician's job to sit down and weigh the pros and cons, to analyse, to dissect, to research, to be able to come up with as good a view as possible as to truly what would be good for the majority of the people. But an individual politician would not be able to achieve this successfully. It is better achieved in the way in which the country has gone about achieving this National Strategic Plan, which means it has not just involved the churches, it has not just involved the government, it has not just involved Executive Council, it has not just involved members of the Legislative Assembly, it has not just involved young people. It has involved a broad cross-section of the society. Therefore, from a point of legitimacy, the plan has my approval.

It is something that I can work with. It is something, of course, that I would never have the money to be able to finance, to be able to produce and say 'Well, here is a plan that I as a politician have . . .' or 'Here is a plan that my group of politicians has for the running of the country over the next for to eight years'. We will never have those types of resources to be able to produce those plans. But we have had them produced. Therefore, we must all own these plans.

Owning the plan, saying that the plan is good, does not necessarily mean that there is no room for criticism of some of the basic objectives. Some of the objectives, or some of the beliefs or ideals might be idealistic to the point where they begin to exclude other people's ideas or ideals and beliefs. So we have to understand that it is a point to begin to discuss.

Now, just this morning I heard one of the persons responsible for the study group talking about the question of immigration and how this is in the plan. What is it that people are talking about from the point of view of immigration? If we are going to have a plan for the country, we need to decide, first of all, whom the country belongs to. Who can participate? On what level can they participate?

If we decide that we are going to allow people to participate on a particular level giving information as to what a National Plan should be over a period of ten years, if we go and we take 45 percent of the people that have given information to create this plan . . . they have been expatriates. Fifty-five percent have been Caymanian. Now, that is a very significant decision in the first place.

In the first place, when we analyse the plan and the usefulness of the plan, we see that the plan is not just for those persons that we call Caymanians. The plan is really for persons living within the jurisdiction of the Cayman Islands. That is a very significant point when people who are not Caymanians are able to influence the direction of development in the Cayman Islands without actually having the right to vote.

Now, we have done this. And I am just looking at the methodology of arriving at a plan. If we can say that persons who are not Caymanian can become a valid part of the input used to arrive at a National Strategic Plan for the Cayman Islands, then we have to understand that those persons that are not Caymanians are therefore part of the machinery that is pushing whatever plan there is forward. So when we come to ask what role should expatriates play in our society, we have partly answered that question by allowing them to become a part of the decision-making process—by making the map, by making the ideals, by creating the belief system that will guide us, that will rule us. So they have become part of governance in fact.

They have become part and they now participate in the governance of this island as long as we are going to use a plan that they have participated in to that particular degree. I am not at this particular point, Madam Speaker, making any value judgment, no subject judgment, no political judgment with regards that particular degree of participation. I am basically looking at what some other people seem not to have examined in the process in saying this is what we have.

Now, I am saying this again because the question of immigration comes up in the plan. If we say that the immigration group is composed of 45 percent expatriate and 55 percent Caymanian, it would be important to look at the methodology that was used in arriving at the particular conclusions, considerations, or strategies. If the strategies are being formed by way of opinion, what we are looking at, what we see, what the plan gives us is a consensus of opinion with regards the different challenges which we face, with regards the issue of immigration in our country.

But, Madam Speaker, the consensus is not the same consensus that will be expressed at the poll in the Year 2000 because 45 percent of the persons that have been involved in forming the consensus will not have the right to vote. So right away we have a significant problem that nobody seems to have thought about. Although they can be part of the creation of the plan, they cannot be a part of voting for the people that will be responsible for implementing the plan. This is very, very significant.

So, what are we going to do? How are we going to treat it? I have heard remarks made by persons with regards the issue of immigration, and they were pretty drastic remarks made by an expatriate, saying more or less that some of the Caymanians on that particular strategy group were intolerant and were expressing ideas (the person said) which reminded him of Nazism or whatever. But he didn't think that the Caymanians that were expressing ideas about Cayman belonging to Caymanians, and that expatriates not having certain types of rights—they did not approve of that particular value, they did not believe that that should be the consensus that went into forming a national strategic plan. They wanted a consensus that more or less admitted that expatriates had contributed to the creation of what we now understand as the Cayman Islands success story—because that is the truth.

But if that is the truth, and we accept it as the truth, the expatriate goes one step further and says, 'Ok, if I have helped to create this so-called success story, then I am a part of it and I should participate in a particular manner.' I am asking basically that this be recognised in law, that this be recognised by way of how the immigration policies in this country work, if we are going to think, for instance, about giving permanent residency for people who have been here for a period of time.

Or are we going to consider giving them permanent residency rather than giving them Caymanian Status because we believe somehow that if we give them Caymanian Status then we will create some kind of fear in the society that will set off a reaction that will cause there to be more conflict than there is today.

What I am basically attempting to make known at the beginning is that a plan is a good thing. But a plan is a human document and it has been created by human beings and by social and economic and political factors. We must take these factors that have created the plan into consideration in the implementation of the plan, because if the factors are removed and all we have is the plan (as if somehow the plan has achieved some type of objectivity by itself, some kind of objective abilities by itself) we will make a mistake.

When it comes to the issues of the environment, for instance, again we find that the plan suggests that people are concerned about the preservation of their physical environment. On the other hand, we find that people are at the same time concerned about the preservation of their economic prosperity. One of the questions that a planner would have is how do you balance out the two? Is there anything in the plan that tells us how you balance out economic prosperity with environmental concerns? Can the planners, the persons that were responsible for creating these plans, for bringing it here, tell us how that specific dilemma would be addressed? Because it is a dilemma!

It is a contradiction to a certain extent to preserve the environment, and at the same time to maintain a particular degree of economic development and prosperity. Of course, we have seen this already discussed with regards to the Ritz Carlton Project—when the government on one hand (aided by members of the opposition) was saying that the development of the Ritz Carlton was central for the economic well being of the Cayman Islands. And members of the National Trust were at the same time saying that the destruction of the mangrove was a detriment to the prosperity of the Cayman Islands. This particular strategic plan has both things in there and the question is, Who is going to weigh them and how is it going to be weighed? What is the importance of the human factor, the human element in weighing these particular plans?

The reason why I am saying this, Madam Speaker, is because even with a plan the human being is still important. The types of people that we have in Executive Council, the types of people that we have as legislators are still important. The quality, the analytical ability is still important. The plan itself, delivered by the bureaucrats, does not relieve us of the necessity of having good leaders that have analytical abilities to be able to dissect these things and to note and be aware of the shortcomings of human plans.

We have seen plans before in the Soviet Union. We have seen plans in China. We have seen plans all over the world, and we know that the plans by themselves are not sufficient to make a society work. The persons that are going to be working with the plan are equally important. So we might have a good plan now. The question is, Do we have good leadership?

The people have to bear in mind these particular types of situations. They still have to begin to think about the quality of leadership and the need for leadership and the need to improve the leadership. Improving the plan without improving the leadership is not going to cause the situation to be any more improved.

That is what I feel is important to say to the people of these islands at this particular time—that we need to have people who are more interested and who have the ability to work in the social science areas. Who knows how different aspects of human society are interrelated and how one thing affects the other, and not at the same time, Madam Speaker, that somehow what we are dealing with are raw principles, laws, and therefore somehow are rational and correct as a result of being laws.

So, the issue of how the government will begin to implement these plans is important to me. How will they start? Where will they start? What portfolio will they start in? Will they begin to work differently now, as in Executive Council where they see everything as interrelated? Will they work different from what my criticism was before that it seems to be that sometimes you have five different governments? Will they begin to see that all of these things are interrelated and that they have to work together and they have to share responsibilities too if this plan is to be balanced? How do we still deal with the problem that we have been talking about from the point of view of establishing priorities? If we don't have the priorities in place, if we don't use some of our own subjective feelings and the kind of positions we are at with relationship to our constituents, we won't be able to deal also with what the priorities are, what the urgencies are.

The urgencies are not simply created by way of this plan because the politician that forgets that the plan is 55 percent Caymanian, and, in that sense, will take certain points to have more urgency that it might have. We are all politicians. We all are here because we are elected and if we don't get elected we won't be here. And regardless of whether or not we deny that logic, that is the logic we live with.

So when the Executive Council begins to look at how do we start to deal with this, we need to take into consideration the urgency. What are the great urgencies I have seen in the country that I continue to witness today? It is that the majority of our people are living below a living wage—they are earning below a living wage. What does the plan speak to about this? What does the plan tell us? The plan tell us, on an idealistic level, that we would like to preserve a particular quality of life for all the people on the Cayman Islands. But on a more practical level, the question is how do we preserve a quality of life for all the people of the Cayman Islands and at the same time to what degree does the government interfere in order to maintain that quality of life?

What does the government do in establishing (as some people have said before) what we would consider to be a margin of where... If a person went below that particular margin they would be considered to be poor. Do we create that and say if we are going to maintain a lifestyle . . . what is the quality of this lifestyle that we are trying to maintain?

What I am saying is that when we look at it, what the Financial Secretary says when he is delivering the budget, what I hear people out there saying, and what I know those people are experiencing that are making $3.75 an hour at the hotels . . . I know that we do not as a collective group agree on any standard of what the quality of life is that we are supposed to be maintaining. So when people are talking about these plans, about the maintenance or trying to continue this prosperity and maintain this quality of life, we have to understand from the very beginning that this is an opinion. There are no scientific facts, no hard empirical evidence that was entered into this study to show us what this quality of life was between the banker who comes from England and the Caymanian who works down at the hotel making $3.75 an hour who cannot get a mortgage.

So we have to watch the ideologies, where plans in fact become ideologies in our societies today, where we begin to make these types of assumptions.

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town, I think made some remark with regards to religious beliefs. Where he found that the assumption there was that religion had to do with Christianity—that believing in God had to do with believing in Christianity because in that sense it is almost being assumed that people who are not Christians don't believe in God. We know that that is not the truth. We know that there are a lot of people that believe in God that are not Christians. We know that as empirical evidence.

We see in that particular statement that the plan in itself has certain types of failings, in that it attempts to idealise, to put people's opinions into what we consider to be general beliefs that do not always reflect scientific facts, that do not always reflect the truth of the matter. The question then is, How valid would this document be? How perfect can it be considered? What are the scientific weaknesses of this particular exercise? There are many weaknesses that were involved in the very methodology of devising a plan.

But as the Minister of Education said this was a plan that the British Government wanted. I said that in here already—that this was a plan that the British Government wanted. The Governor was more or less instructed to move forward. Executive Council went along with it. Members of the Legislative Assembly and the majority went along with it, and I am going to agree again that we have something better than nothing. But we must be aware of the methodological weaknesses and the flaws in the creation of a strategic plan.

I have given a few concrete examples to show that the plan will also need persons to be responsible in terms of the review process, to see how it has to be adjusted and things like that; persons who have the quality to be analytical and able to see the interdependency between things in our society.

I would hope, Madam Speaker, without going on and indicating exactly what my ability is with regards to looking at that particular plan and even creating methodological questions for the actual persons that were involved . . . because I don't want to actually do that at this particular point (I will do that later on when I sit down and I work on my computer creating a written response to this particular exercise) . . . But I do say and I do believe that I have at least made it obvious that any plan has its weaknesses.

Plans have to do with people. Not only do they come from people but they have to be implemented among people. People have to agree for there to be implementation. I said that one of the most obvious problems we might have is the fact that 45 percent of the persons that gave their opinions to help create the plan do not have the right to vote for the people that are going to be responsible for implementing, reviewing, and for adjusting the plan.

I think that I will leave everybody at this particular point before I go ahead and make too many holes in the chicken coop. So, thank you, Madam Speaker.

The Deputy Speaker: It is 4:25 p.m., I will entertain a motion for the adjournment.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: Madam Speaker, I move the adjournment of this honourable House until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow morning.

The Deputy Speaker: The question is that this honourable House do now adjourn until 10:00 a.m. tomorrow morning. I shall put the question. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Deputy Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4:25 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10:00 AM THURSDAY, 1 JULY 1999.

EDITED
THURSDAY
1 JULY 1999
10.33 AM

[Prayers read by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed.

Item 2 on today's Order Paper, reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: We have apologies for absence from the Honourable Third Official Member responsible for Finance and Economic Development, and from the Honourable Minister responsible for Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture who are overseas on official business.

Item 3, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question 69 is standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 69

No. 69: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation what actions are being taken by Government to provide adequate health care benefits for those persons categorised as "uninsurable" and "partially uninsurable".

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Under the Health Insurance Law and Regulations 1997 which came into effect on 1 January 1998, an uninsurable person is one who, by reason of an existing medical condition or history of illness, has been refused cover under a standard health insurance contract by two or more approved providers of health insurance. Similarly, a partially uninsurable person is one who has been provided cover, but that cover has been subject to an exclusion or a limitation.

Persons in both these categories continue to be provided with health care just as they were prior to the introduction of the Health Insurance Law and Regulations. Those who are able to meet the cost of treatment received are, as previously, expected to do so. Those whose means are so extremely limited that they are classified as indigent may have their health care costs met from a fund established under the Health Insurance Law and Regulations for that purpose. The Director of Health Services is empowered to make claims on the fund in respect of treatment provided to these indigent uninsurable and indigent partially uninsurable persons.

As at 1 June 1999, there were 27,000 people with private health insurance cover in the Islands. Adding the approximately 10,500 people for whom Government is responsible, we can see that some 37,500 people (approximately 94 percent of the population) have access to means to pay for their health care costs.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether this fund to be made available to the partially uninsurable and uninsurable is in operation at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes, we dealt with that at the last sitting of this honourable House and with the approval of this House that fund is now ready to make claims on. For the information of the House it stands at $1,080,000.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House how persons needing this coverage can access it? What is the procedure?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Once the patient is assessed as not being in a position to pay, the request is then made through the Health Services Department to the Monetary Authority in control of this fund. The patient is not billed.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether the assessment is made prior to the visit to the health establishment and submission of a bill, or after receipt of a bill the person then goes and applies for this assistance?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: There is a list of approximately 1,000 people at this time that can be referred to. But if someone needing treatment goes in, they could be assessed at that time. Whatever needs to be done would then be done.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say what steps government has taken regarding the private member's motion I brought asking government to consider the possibility of establishing a government health insurance company?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That's a good question. The 10,500 people shown at this time in the most recent budget we appropriated approximately $3 million to start covering this area. In regard to the motion, the final report from the consultant was received toward the end of last year, in October. A small committee comprised of the permanent secretary in my ministry, the deputy chief secretary, the deputy financial secretary and the superintendent of health insurance considered the recommendations and were to advise me in the ministry. A paper to ExCo will then be drafted and a further meeting of the small committee would be required to finalise this paper.

But because of time, and the many things we have been going through with the initiatives within the Glass House, we have been a bit down on this. Once everything is in order I will come back and table it in this Honourable House.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: It's good to know that something is being done in this area. I would ask that the ministry take whatever steps necessary to speed the process up. But my real supplementary question is, Can the honourable minister say if there has been any evidence to suggest that government would be using its resources best by establishing a health insurance company for those persons it is responsible for, or would government be advised to pay this amount to one or two insurance companies?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: In the actuary's recommendation it is suggested that government implement a self insured plan which would be administered by a third party.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you. Can the honourable minister say why it is that the Health Services Department insists that 75 and 80 year olds who were previously entitled to free medical to go out and attempt to get insurance coverage from private insurance companies, knowing full well that they are not insurable?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Mr. Speaker, the law indicates that people must show that they are not insurable. The formality that we go through is that a request is made to two insurance companies turning them down. I would not comment, but I feel sure that it is just a matter of the formality and to make sure that the government system is protected in case the auditor general or someone else looks at these things and wants to know why.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: When persons have been covered up until the time they reach the age of about 70 and the insurance companies terminate their coverage on the grounds that they are becoming too old, inferring that the risk is too great, Who assumes the responsibility and what recourse do these people have to ensure they are not dumped in such a fashion?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I am informed that the coverage terminates when a person reaches a certain age. But under the law that would not continue to happen. If help is needed, this would certainly be looked at.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, the next question is 70, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 70

No. 70: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide the details of any staff and personnel changes at Pedro St James Castle since January 1999.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The following relates to the personnel changes which have taken place at Pedro St James since January 1999:

Suspension:	Mr. Atlee Ebanks	General Manager
Appointment:	Mr. Harding Watler	Temporary General Manager
	Mr. Kirkland Nixon	Temporary Deputy General Manager
	Mrs. Laura Da Re	Financial Controller
Resignation:	Mr. Harold Powell	Grounds Manager
	Ms. Tia Bodden	Administrative Secretary

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House how these changes have affected the ongoing operation of the project?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I believe that in any organisation if you lose the general manager from the operation there is a vacuum to some extent in the whole responsibility of the particular project. That is the case with Pedro since he has been suspended. And Mr. Watler and Mr. Nixon have been holding the fort until we have this whole matter resolved.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say how it is that the permanent secretary can be the general manager even in a temporary capacity? And how does that affect the office?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Under the Tourism Attraction Law, His Excellency the Governor has the power to appoint a temporary person at Pedro St. James, or the Botanic Park. That is actually what has transpired. The project has been under liaison with the ministry from two or three years ago and that continues until we have this matter resolved.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the honourable minister say whether the general manager under suspension is being paid, and what kind of salary? Part? Half? Quarter?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think there is a substantive question set down. Question 44 speaks about salaries to the suspended general manager that I propose to answer within the next day or two.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister tell the House whether the posts of the two persons who resigned, namely the grounds manager and the administrative secretary, have been offered to anyone else, or do they remain vacant at this time?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In relation to the grounds manager, Mr. Harold Powell, we have not filled his position because we are utilising the grounds manager at Botanic Park with a view to trying to streamline the entire operation of Pedro St. James as well as Botanic Park as it relates to salaries and wages. So that position has not been filled.

The administrative secretary's position of Miss Tia Bodden, is presently being filled and I apologise for not having that on the list.

The Speaker: Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: For clarification I would like to find out whether the positions within the Tourism Attraction Board structure are classified as civil service positions or do they have another type of regulation. Are they in fact governed by civil service regulation?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The persons working for Botanic Park and Pedro St. James, which fall under the Tourism Attraction Law, under section 11 they are deemed as public servants.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Can the honourable minister say whether or not the suspension of Mr. Atlee Ebanks is an automatic suspension as a result of his being considered within the same guidelines and regulations as the public service?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Question 44 is very much related to the supplementary being asked by the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. What I would say is that we are following the civil service process in dealing with this general manager, as laid down by the various regulations of the Public Service Commission Regulations.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Having regard to the minister's last answer, can he tell this honourable House which Civil Service Regulation authorises him or his Board or Authority to pay part salary to anyone while they are holding a job on suspension?

The Speaker: I think he said he was going to answer that on a later question.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: I took what he said when he wouldn't answer me the first time, but he did answer the Fourth Elected Member for George Town which left the question open.

The Speaker: I didn't hear the salary come into that question. He may answer if he cares to.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: It's okay, sir. He doesn't have to answer.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: It is my understanding that there may be a restructuring of the restaurant at this complex. If this is so, can the honourable minister say how this may affect any personnel presently in this section of the establishment?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The operation of Pedro St. James has as its objective to run as commercially as it possibly can. There have been some considerations given to the cafeteria area in particular with a view that the Board is looking at restructuring it and also that the food which is served at Pedro St. James, which is an historic and cultural site, should have some Caymanian content. We are looking to place in charge of the cafeteria a lady who is well known within the Cayman Islands who produces local food.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: Can the honourable minister say if within this assessment there has been any decision as to any displacement of persons currently working in the cafeteria section?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The honest truth is that there is likely to be. If a person is not carrying out the duties in such a way that the Board is satisfied with it, then there is likely to be.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can the honourable minister say what reasons were given for the two resignations?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: In terms of the resignation of the grounds manager, the gentleman got a better offer and he went off to work for a private individual. In terms of the administrative secretary my understanding is similar—she got a better offer paying more so she moved on.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Can the honourable minister say what time the financial controller takes up the position?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We put the financial controller down as an appointment simply because the person had signed the contract with us. She is due to take up her office in about a week's time.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: In relation to the answer on the temporary general manager, I don't think the minister said what the effects were on the ministry since the permanent secretary is the temporary general manager of Pedro Castle.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: What I did say was that the ministry has been, as far back as three years ago, liasing with that particular project. The person actually carrying out the function is the administrative officer. We know that a permanent secretary is the head of the ministry as well as the head of all departments. The duties of general manager is being split between Mr. Nixon and Mr. Watler.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeever Bush: Since that is so, can the honourable minister say what time these persons are at the job? Do they sit behind a desk there, on the job? Do they go around to see what's happening? Do they have meetings with staff?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: They have meetings as and when they believe it's necessary. They had a meeting with staff as recently as yesterday afternoon, and they visit on occasion at the project. Mr. Nixon visits. Mr. Wat-ler visits. Mrs. Ulett is there almost three or four times a week, and it functions in that way.

The Speaker: Before I call for another supplementary question, I would ask the honourable minister under Standing Order 86 to suspend Standing Order 23 (7) and (8) in order for Question Time to continue.

The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8)

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I am pleased to move that the relevant Standing Order be suspended.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour please say aye. Those against no.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 23 (7) & (8) SUSPENDED TO ENABLE QUESTION TIME TO CONTINUE BEYOND 11 O'CLOCK.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Is the temporary general manager at the site at all times?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: What I said earlier was that he visits on occasion. The duties of the general manager are split between Mr. Nixon and Mr. Watler and they visit on occasion. They are certainly not there at all times.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't think I heard if there is any effect on the ministry since the permanent secretary is acting as temporary general manager.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The only affect I have seen is more work.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would like to enquire as to whether the financial controller is a Caymanian. If not, was the post advertised locally?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The post was advertised. The applicants were short-listed by the auditor general. The applicants were interviewed by the chairman and the acting temporary general manager and the auditor general. The person is a certified public accountant which we (the Board) believe is the person we need to establish the charter of accounts which will not only deal with Pedro St. James, but with all projects—meaning (at this time) Botanic Park as well as Pedro St. James—being kept on an individual basis and then to have a consolidation and to assist us in bringing the accounts up to date.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if he is absolutely sure that the list of names he has provided has omitted no one who was either terminated or who left since January 1 1999?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I did indicate earlier that the administrative secretary is presently being filled. That is not on the list and I apologise for that.

Beyond that . . . what I am referring to is that there is a resignation by the administrative secretary, and she left quite some time ago. What I am now talking about is that the replacement for that position is presently in place and that is not on the list.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I heard what the minister said. Perhaps I did not explain myself carefully enough in the question. I am asking if the minister is absolutely sure that there were no other—and I understand what you said and I am taking that into consideration—resignations or terminations of anyone employed at Pedro Castle since January 1 1999 outside of what is on the list and what he just mentioned.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I have to rely on what I have been given by my staff and this is the list they provided with the exception on this occasion I know that the administrative secretary's position has been filled. I know that the general manager released some staff. I am a bit unsure if that was before January 1999 or slightly after. I am unable to say. But the list here came from the staff dealing with the project.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay. There will be two additional supplementaries and then we will move on to the next question.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you. Can the honourable minister say whether these appointments, suspensions, resignations were dealt with by the Board? If so, when did the Board meet? If so, did the new members, namely those appointed from this House—the Fourth Elected Member for George Town—attend that meeting as well?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There are times when we need to act, and we did act. We tried to call a meeting, we did not have a quorum so we did not meet on this item as a Board.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: There are other parts to that question, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think he's referring to the Fourth Elected Member for George Town. He was not present at the meeting dealing with this.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, what I said was whether new members were appointed to the Board, if that was so did the Fourth Elected Member for George Town, being a member of the House, attend the meeting.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, let's go back to the beginning. There are only three appointments. Two were done by the Governor; one was done really by the ministry. We wanted to hold a Board meeting to deal with the appointment of the financial controller. We called a meeting. We did not have a quorum. We still have to arrange that meeting.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay. Final supplementary.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Is it true that the Fourth Elected Member for George Town was told not to come to the meeting, being a member of the committee?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I can't say what he was told, Mr. Speaker. I can say that this Minister of Tourism did not tell him not to come.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I was not told not to go to any meeting. I don't know where the First Elected Member for West Bay is coming up with these things.

The Speaker: Moving on to question 71, standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 71

No. 71: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works when this honourable House will receive the accounts for the Pedro St James project.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The audited accounts of Pedro St James are scheduled for completion this month.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: This month meaning July or June? And can the honourable minister say when the House will receive (as the question asks) the accounts.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The first part of the question means this month—July. In relation to laying it on the Table of this House, after the Auditor General has completed his exercise, if we are still here it can be laid then, otherwise in September.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state up until what time those accounts . . . meaning, what time period will the accounts take into consideration?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: It is my understanding that the accounts will be up through the 30th June 1998, I believe. That's what is being audited now, all accounts for 1998, by the Auditor General at the moment.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries we will move on to question 72, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

QUESTION 72

No. 72: Mr. Roy Bodden asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works to provide a list of capital projects approved by Executive Council since 1995 stating dates approved by Executive Council, when such projects were commenced and/or completed; and the related expenditure for each project.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I must say before I read the answer that what I have in my hand is a massive document.

Honourable Members will no doubt recall that during the June 1998 Sitting of this Honourable House, His Excellency the Governor provided information confirming Executive Council's approval of the Gun Bay Community Hall and the Agriculture Department's Office.

All other Capital Projects undertaken by Government since 1995 have been approved by Executive Council as they would have been included in the budget document for each respective year. A list of all capital projects is attached.

When you look at it, it's a little bit confusing, but may I say that it's broken down into 1995, the group of capital projects, 1996, 1997, and 1998. And the year tells you what the date is as regards the project. It also gives the budgeted amount as well as the actual amount that was spent in that particular year. (See Appendix)

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Since the very beginning of the answer refers to two specific projects, for purposes of clarity can the honourable minister state exactly what the procedure is (if he is allowed to do so) regarding these projects being approved by Executive Council? I think that some of us might not grasp exactly what the procedure is. Sometimes even when we have the letter from the Governor regarding Executive Council approval . . . there were two documents we got. I know that this refers to one of them, but there was another document that was sent to us which caused some confusion as to exactly what constitutes Executive Council approval. Perhaps the minister could just go over that so that we can be clear as to what the procedure is.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I will try to be comprehensive, and I will also try to be brief. Capital projects are normally put forward by the head of a department to the Public Works Department. Public Works is given a brief. It then decides on a drawing and works up bills of quantities giving the total dollar figure. That then gets inserted in the draft budget and comes before the Finance Department. That department looks at it, it then goes before a budget committee, following that it goes on to Executive Council. If the item is in the Executive Council draft budget it is then approved and sent on to the House where it is accompanied by the Appropriation Law. Once it is approved here it moves on to implementation back to the head of the department who then, together with Public Works, moves on with the project. We know that Public Works builds the project, but in consultation with the head of the department.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Can the honourable minister state if he is quite content and happy at this point in time that everyone involved with the procedure he just outlined in the ministries is knowledgeable of that procedure and cognisant of the way it should follow from beginning to end?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: All I can say is that that is the procedure. I think that many of us on this side have been around for at least six or seven years so we should understand what the procedure is. It's left to us to follow the procedure I would think. I am not casting any daggers at anyone, but I think the procedure as I have described is left for all of us to follow. I think it's in the best interest of value for money, among other things and responsibility to the public who pays us the revenue to carry out these projects.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Based on that, can the minister state if he knows for a fact that those procedures were followed with the projects he has given us in the answer?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: We are talking about projects that go back to 1995. I can't really say that.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I noticed that the answer excludes the start up and completion of the projects. I don't expect the minister to provide that now, but it does deprive me of the ability to further probe into the point I wish to raise, or to make a full assessment. I would ask the minister for an undertaking that in the future when such information is requested that he ensure the complete information is provided before the answer is tabled in parliament.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the volume of this information is overwhelming. I did notice the point made by the Third Elected Member, but at that stage it was somewhat late to decide to go back and get this information. I think his point is right. If a member asks a question he should get the specific answer to his question as regards commencement and completion time.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I would just like to say that my request is a reasonable one since this question was asked about six months ago. This report was printed on 19 November 1998 at 6.30. So I would like the House to take note that my request is certainly not unreasonable. Thank you.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My comment was not to suggest that the member's request was unreasonable. I think he also realises that at the time the question was being answered I wasn't responsible for Public Works either. But that's not really the salient point. The salient point is that he should get a specific answer to the question he is asking. He has asked for an undertaking in that regard and I would so do.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Seeing that this question was ready for answering from 19 November 1998, can the honourable minister say why it was not answered before now?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I can't answer that. I took over the department on 1 January and whether the question was there—and apparently it must have been—it just didn't come to our attention I guess. That's the only thing I can say.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries we will move on to question 73, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 73

No. 73: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works what is being done to enhance or facilitate the proper marking of channels around the Cayman Islands and do these marks meet international standards.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: There are 13 marked channels in Grand Cayman of which seven are lighted. Four have poles with reflectors and two have reflecting buoys.

The lights that are being used are the same lights used by the US Coast Guard and European Ports.

These channels are checked regularly to ensure that the lights are burning and reflectors are in place. Worn bulbs are replaced immediately. The Port recently purchased a 16-foot Dusky boat which will be used in all districts to service the channel markers. This has significantly enhanced the staff's ability in response time.

To prevent the problems caused to the batteries of these lights by bird droppings, bird spikes are being installed on the light poles.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the answer provided the minister said the lights being used are the same lights being used by the US Coastguard and European Ports. Does that mean that our channel markings do meet with international standards?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: That is the inference that comment makes, that the buoys and the markings of the channels as we do them in Grand Cayman are what is known as the "lateral system" which is used in the United States and also by us.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: The reason I asked is because I have been advised that normally speaking when a channel is marked to international standards you have two markers that basically designate the area that you are going through. But there is always a third light or marker that if you are coming in under treacherous conditions or whatever, even if the two designating the channel are out, if you line up with the third one you can go straight in in a safe manner. I wonder if the honourable minister can say whether or not these channels have that particular facility.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The system that we deploy at North Side, at North Sound, at East End and other areas of the island is the same as the international standard you have been talking about. No matter how many lights you put up, if the sea takes them out you are back to maybe two markers. The system is that as you leave the island going out the red is on your left and the green is on your right as you are going out to sea. That is the system we employ.

The Speaker: Elected Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: Before I ask my question, sir with your permission I would just like to say that it is my understanding that the outside poles on the Rum Point Channel do not have lights. Would the honourable minister undertake to have some lights put in there?

In the answer it says there are 13 marked channels in Grand Cayman. Can the honourable minister say how many channels are unmarked and where they are located?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My information says that the Rum Point Channel has four lighted poles with reflectors on both sides. I am not quite sure—

[inaudible interjection]

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, what I am saying is that the four lit poles are there and they also have reflectors. We know that on occasion . . . these lights are solar in nature and if there are droppings on it the battery can't charge so the light doesn't work. That is the frustration the Port Authority goes through on almost a daily basis.

What I can say is that from all of the information provided to me it appears that all major channels are marked and lit. Whether you are talking about Old Man Bay or the Brinkley's or the Browsers, which are all up in North Side, or about the main channel in the North Sound, the big channel or Stingray City Channel or the Collier's Channel or the Eastern Channel, Southern Channel, Fragile Flats, Frank Sound Channel, South Sound Channel, they are all marked with lights and reflectors.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: The answer says there are 13 marked channels, of which seven are lighted. Can the honourable minister say what happened to the other six? Why are they not being lighted and is there any intention to light them?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think the Port Authority utilises a system that they will light or put reflectors on channels that persons with boats could navigate safely. There are other minor channels in this country that people should not try to get through. We know some of them ourselves. So while we can look at all the channels, it's still a matter of us believing it's safe to try to negotiate that channel realising the depth of the water, it's shallow or being something in that area that makes it unsafe.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I noted there is an absence of any channel markers in Bodden Town. There are none until you get up to Frank Sound. Can the honourable minister give an undertaking that this will be looked into possibly as soon as weather permits as this time of the year is not the ideal time for locating and marking these channels on the south side?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Yes, Mr. Speaker, I am happy to look at the Bodden Town, as well as the Spotts area to be certain they are properly marked in order to negotiate them safely.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the answer provided the honourable minister said that the channels are checked regularly to ensure the lights are burning and the reflectors are in place. Can the honourable minister define what he means by "regularly?" Is it every three months, every week? What is the case? Because it appears that the Port Authority is aware that a light or marker is out when somebody brings it to their attention.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I think in all fairness to the Port Authority there are people who are in the North Sound and other parts of the island on a daily basis. If they see something wrong they should tell the Port Authority. I think that is in their best interest because if the channel is not properly marked or lit and the weather gets nasty and they try to negotiate the channel they could just as easily be on the rocks as in the channel, meaning on the reef.

But my understanding is that it is looked at regularly. Certainly it's not months or quarterly. I don't want to say to this honourable House that they do it every day because I am not sure that happens.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Perhaps in asking my supplementary I will just take the opportunity to advise the minister that the marker with the green light by Queeny Key, Duck Pond, going into what we know as Rackley Canal, someone knocked it down a couple of days ago so maybe you could let them know that.

If we look at some of the channels and we see how the markers are set up, and I am not questioning the method used to place the poles, but there are some where they use the lights and there are some others where they use the reflectors. I am not sure what the reasoning is, but the point I want to make is that it is not all the time that the boats using these channels are the larger boats with big spotlights. Sometimes very small boats go in and out of these channels. The type of lighting some of these people have are not huge spotlights which can pick up the reflectors from a great distance. And it puts some of these people at a disadvantage in that when they are trying to catch sight of those reflectors it is not very easy to do so especially also the fact that those small boats are very low down. If the water is not smooth it is not easy to pick up those reflectors.

I am asking the minister if he would have them looked at again and wherever it is possible to put the lights to do so if the exercise isn't too onerous or too expensive because I speak from personal experience.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: I thank the member for bringing to our attention the Duck Pond light being out of commission. I will certainly look with the Port Authority at the channels and take a review of the entire situation and see what we can do in that regard to make it as safe as we possibly can.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries the next question is 74, standing in the name of the Third Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTION 74

No. 74: Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr. asked the Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation to provide details on staff turnover in the Health Services Department over the past three years.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Between 1996 and 10 June 1999, a total of 96 staff left the Health Services Department. Of these 96, 33 resigned; 28 completed their contracts and did not seek or obtain renewal; 7 were terminated; 10 transferred to other jobs; 6 retired; 6 went on study leave; 1 died; 5 left their jobs unannounced.

I have included, as part of the answer, two tables which break these figures further by section and by post which I hope will be of help to the Honourable Member.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: In the information provided I noticed that in 1996 we had nine nurses who resigned or moved on. In 1997 we had ten, in 1998 we had ten, and so far in 1999 we have had six for a total of 35. Can the honourable minister say why it is that we have a problem keeping nurses in the Health Services Department?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: There is nothing specific that I know of. The reason this is the biggest number is that nursing has the greatest concentration of staff members.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: It is my information that one of the reasons we are having a problem with nurses or other professionals in the Health Services Department is that when they are recruited they are told certain things. They are offered certain benefits and when they arrive here in the island . . . it's mainly the personnel department I am told, does not confirm or in some cases re-negees on those promised benefits. Can the honourable minister say whether or not he has any knowledge of this being done?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: No, but I will give the honourable member the undertaking that I will check this out. It's of concern.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Can the honourable minister say what is being done by the health services to attract, encourage and retain Caymanians in this particular area?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: That's a good question. The department actively encourages young people in the school system during the career activities and there is a very active summer programme in existence.

I have been given some numbers here. There are approximately 30 summer students this year that will be working along with us. In addition we work closely through the careers officers in the schools and also five to six students are accommodated yearly through the Duke of Edinburgh Awards in the health services.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: I am aware that in the area of education, for example, government provides full scholarships in order to encourage Caymanians in this area. Can the honourable minister say if the same exists for young Caymanians who want to pursue a career in nursing or in the medical field, doctors and other professional areas? And if not, why not?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: Yes it is pointed out to me that the priority list is with the Caymanian social workers, the teachers and within the medical profession. But I do know of a certain person that the member may be thinking about who may have requested a full scholarship. For whatever reason . . . I am now checking to find out why it is not being done.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Just as a follow up, I think about four or five years ago the Ministry of Tourism launched its own scholarship programme. As I said, education has it, sports has it, I understand. I wonder if the honourable minister can say if such a plan is in the works in regard to health services because of the dire need to attract Caymanians into this particular profession.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I know quite well what the honourable member is talking about. When we were the National Team, the previous minister, Mr. Bush, advocated this. We talked about it. So far we have utilised the education scholarship fund but I would certainly give consideration and see what happens. I know the funds are there. Wherever I can find young Caymanians I encourage them. I feel that with the provision of superior facilities many more Caymanians will take the opportunity to work there.

The Speaker: The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: One of the difficulties that I am aware of in regard to scholarships, and I think it might be because of previous experience which should not be held against our young people in the future is that a young Caymanian wanting to go into medicine, for example, basically the government says it will not give it to them, not a full scholarship, because of experience in the past.

What they have to do (as you are aware, Mr. Speaker, being a member of the Education Council) is major in one of the sciences, chemistry, physics, whatever, and once they have finished that degree then government is prepared to finance med school. But I would really urge the minister to really take this as a priority and see if he can encourage his colleagues on Executive Council and in the Education Council to see to it that Caymanians have an opportunity to pursue a career in this area on full scholarship.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Health, Social Welfare, Drug Abuse Prevention and Rehabilitation.

Hon. Anthony S. Eden: I will give this my full consideration.

The Speaker: If there are no further supplementaries that concludes Question Time for this morning. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/99

ENQUIRY INTO LOCAL COMPANIES (CONTROL) LICENCE FOR ESSO STANDARD OIL SA LTD

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: When we adjourned on Monday, I was dealing with the matter of ESSO and its control over a local business or local businesses. We had gotten to the point where we agreed on some amendments. I believe at this point it is best to move those amendments, with your permission.

The Speaker: Please go ahead.

AMENDMENT NO. 2 TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/99

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the First Elected Member for West Bay, hereby give notice of my intention to move the following amendments to Private Member's Motion No. 15/99: (i) By deleting the words "Government has found" as they appear in the first line of the second resolve clause and substituting therefor the words "the relevant authority finds"; (ii) By deleting the word "Government" as it appears in the second line of the second resolve clause and substituting therefor the words "the relevant authority"; and (iii) By deleting the word "take" as it appears in the last line of the second resolve clause and substituting therefor the word "takes."

The Speaker: Do you have a seconder?
The Member for North Side.

Mrs. Edna M. Moyle: I beg to second the amendment, Mr. Speaker.

The Speaker: The amendment has been duly moved and seconded and is open for debate. Do you wish to speak to it?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't see that this needs to be any long explanation. It's just a matter of changing the wording and we have agreed that we put the words "relevant authority" in the case it would be the Trade and Business Board that does it and not central government as such. That's basically what I am talking about sir.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak to this amendment? If not, does the proposer wish to exercise his right of reply?

I shall put the question. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The motion is accordingly amended.

AGREED: AMENDMENT NO. 2 TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/99 PASSED.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay, please continue.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: As I said, we are debating a motion to ask government, or the relevant authority, to try to (using my own words) straighten up the situation where a foreign company is operating without a licence to do certain businesses which is hurting a Caymanian company.

We are aware that ESSO offers, or has offered financing to dealers that is proprietors of filling stations. They have also purchased a number of filling stations. These are operated by means of a lease from ESSO to the dealer.

We understand that some years ago ESSO was in the habit of operating its sites by means of a commercial rent and a dealer agreement, which essentially required the dealer, that is the owner of the filling station, to sell only ESSO products. In short, ESSO Standard Oil had two profit centres—the rental income and the sale of fuel to the proprietors of filling stations, the dealers. We are of the opinion that the sale of fuel clearly falls within the ambit of a bulk fuel installation licence. The rent of commercial property is clearly a separate business whether they own the property and then lease it to dealers, or as in the case of the station we are talking about on Crewe Road by the Airport, they take lease of the property and promptly sublease it back to that company.

We have not seen a Trade and Business Licence or Local Companies (Control) Law Licence that enables ESSO to lease property. Our understanding is that they have none. This is one area where the law is breached. More recently ESSO has introduced a franchising arrangement under which they require their filling station operators to pay a percentage of the sales made at the station. Not only on the sale of fuel and oil, which has already been purchased from ESSO, but also the sale of groceries and merchandise sold in the convenience store. This franchise fee is a further profit centre in addition to the rental income and the income from the sale of fuel.

Again, if one applies the provisions of the Trade and Business Licensing Law and the Local Companies (Control) Licensing Law these additional businesses they are operating need to be the subject of a specific licence. The procedure as we understand it is that an applicant applies for a separate licence for each business he or she conducts rather than the one licence under which all the businesses are described. From our own information, this is certainly the case in relation to the retail and other service station licences with the company ESSO is now pressuring. And other local persons must follow the same rules. We have to get separate licences for every bit of business that we want to conduct in the country.

It seems that the history of ESSO's licences is somewhat problematic—chequered, one might say. As we understand it, there have been substantial periods when they have had no licence whatsoever. We also understand that the licences have been backdated, although neither the Trade and Business Licensing Law or the Local Companies (Control) Law permits the respective authority to backdate a licence. A licence can merely be granted, as we understand it, at the date it is granted.

We also understand that ESSO has in the past made specific applications to operate certain stations and government has refused ESSO permission to obtain further licences. When I say “government” I mean the relevant licensing authority. That was what I also meant in the motion. If that is so, the relevant authority ought to now act so as to stop the unfair pressure on the Caymanian company in the fashion being carried on now.

There is an issue of legality. Generally speaking a contract is void if it is illegal. It is illegal under Cayman Islands Law to carry on a business without the appropriate licences. In ESSO's case this means the Local Companies (Control) Law Licence as this company is not a Caymanian controlled entity (that is, ESSO) and a Trade and Business Licence. There must be a licence for every area of business that a company carries on, and that includes ESSO and what ESSO carries on in these islands.

The leasing of the filling stations is a business. ESSO should therefore have a licence for that. These licences are location specific. You have to display your particular licence at every location whether you own three or four shops you have to have your licence displayed. That is location specific. There would be a licence for every station that ESSO leased.

These licenses would also have to be baked up by a Local Companies (Control) Licence. Up until now, ESSO has not shown any licence (from what we understand) that enables them to lease the station at Crewe Road by the Airport, that is, Mr. Webster's filling station, to him. In the circumstances we are of the opinion that the lease is therefore unlawful and of no effect, and it must be so according to our law.

In August of 1998 the lease and sublease of Jose's Service Centre came to an end and should have been renewed. Quite apart from the issues as to whether or not the lease and sublease were renewed there is the question of whether or not it was lawful for ESSO to renew its lease at the time. It seems that it did not have the requisite licenses so it was unlawful to enter into these agreements and to the extent that ESSO has purported to renew the lease as it is trying to do it would be unlawful.

The Trade and Business Licensing Board has several functions, but one of those is under the Trade and Business Licensing Law and the other under the Local Companies (Control) Law. The hands of the Board would be somewhat tied under the Trade and Business Licensing Law. In respect of a company it is required to grant the licence unless it does not hold a Local Companies (Control) Law licence. I do not believe that there is any discretion on the part of the Board to have regard to any external factors when granting a Trade and Business Licence.

Either the person or company is entitled to get a licence and is granted one, or they are refused. ESSO has no such licence. There is no discretion on the part of the Board to have regard to external factors when granting a licence. On the other hand, this is not the case where the Board is considering the grant of a Local Companies (Control) Law [licence].

Section 11(4) of the Law lists ten grounds which the Board may have regard to when considering an application for Local Companies (Control) licence. Let me read those out, in particular 11(4) (a), (b), (d), and (e). That section says, “Subject to any general directions which the Governor may from time to time give in respect of the consideration of such applications the Board shall in deciding whether or not to grant a licence have regard inter alia to the following matters: (a) the economic situation of the islands and the due protection of persons already engaged in business in the islands; (b) the nature and previous conduct of the companies and persons having an interest in that company whether as directors, shareholders, or otherwise; (c) the advantage or disadvantage which may result from that company carrying on business in the islands; (d) the desirability of retaining in the control of Caymanians the economic resources of the islands; (e) the efforts made by the company to obtain Caymanian participation”

Now, if ESSO had applied for a licence would they have asked for Caymanian partnership? Would they have been able to get Caymanian partnership?

“(f) the number of additional people from outside the islands who would be required to reside in the islands were the application to be granted; (g) whether the company, its directors and employees have and are likely to continue to have the necessary professional, technical and other knowledge to carry on the business proposed by the company; (h) the finances of the company and the economic feasibility of its plans; (i) whether the true ownership and control of the company have been satisfactorily established; and (j) the environmental and social consequences that could result from the carrying on of the business proposed to be carried on by the company.”

These are the ten grounds the Board may have regard to when considering an application for a Local Companies (Control) licence.

So far as the lease and sublease are in existence and may be in existence if it is found they were properly renewed, their terms are far from commercial. Jose's ESSO Service Centre is paying $12,000 per year for the sublease of his station from ESSO and ESSO is paying him $40,000 per year for the lease of his station. We understand that ESSO currently leases its stations to its dealers for approximately $14,000 per month. For ESSO to be granted a Local Companies (Control) licence in relation to that station would effectively permit them to continue to operate a business far below any commercially accepted standard.

The principle reason behind the lease and sublease would now have fallen away as that service station has repaid the money lent to it by ESSO. And as this loan has been repaid and there is no genuine commercial purpose behind the lease and the sublease it is not a bona fide business arrangement. It cannot be. What it effectively amounts to is a device by which a foreign company—which is ESSO—controls the way in which a local company carries on its business. That's exactly the nuts and bolts of the argument. That's the crux of it as far as I am concerned.

I would have thought that ESSO's conduct in this matter to date, in that it has chosen to disregard the laws of the islands to carry on business after being refused the proper licenses must work against any application they make to renew or obtain new licences.

There is a clear disadvantage from my point of view, and I think from our point of view as legislators, to allowing ESSO a licence to operate the service station other than in connection with their bulk fuel licence in that the station is wholly Caymanian owned. It does not now need to look for private sources of finance and therefore it is unreasonable for the local business to be tied to ESSO through the device of the lease and sublease which is illegal in any event.

It is our view that it would be clearly desirable for the local business to retain the control of its station in the hands of a Caymanian rather than allowing ESSO the right through the terms of the lease to put him out of business where there is no proper underlying commercial relationship.

It will be appreciated that if ESSO was to allege a breach of the terms of the lease, which I understand they have done in the past on a number of occasions where there has been a dispute between ESSO and that service station (and maybe another one), then they would be able to terminate the lease with him and put in another tenant even though the property belongs to the local person. That is what is so ridiculous about this whole thing. It puts the local company at a serious risk which we as the government with the proper licensing authority should not allow.

They could replace the sublease the local company had with them with a lease and commercial terms and with the payment of the franchise fee in respect of the sale of fuel and merchandise from the convenience store.

Based on what we understand of the sales and what we understand to be the current position it is likely that the local company would receive a rent of $40,000 from ESSO who in turn would receive a rent exclusive of commissions to them of approximately $168,000 per annum. That can't be right for a person who owns the building, who owns the property who has worked for years, and gone to work in the morning at 4.00 and 5.00 to build this business up. He has even been damaged on the job. This can't be right, Mr. Speaker. I believe that we and the government are on all fours with this and something will now be done.

I hope I have outlined what is the true position in regard to the ongoing struggle of a local company properly licensed to do business here in these islands as against a company not so licensed yet having the power to put a strangle hold on that local company. Government, or the relevant authority as we want to put it, must now move to rectify this situation. ESSO is clearly not licensed by law or anything else to do the other business except bulk fuel importation and distribution. That is the crux of what their licence can do.

We cannot allow them to take advantage of a local company in this fashion and, as I said, doing it illegally. As I said, I believe that we and the government are on all fours with this matter and that they intend to have it investigated properly and rectified. Bearing in mind that there were questions asked in here that said there was already knowledge of this, and bearing in mind that they have been refused licenses in the past we hope this can be rectified quickly.

This is a Caymanian company. This is a man who started from virtually nothing but has struggled hard, built his business. If this is not the main issue before us, then I don't know what is. We need to be able to do something to help that person, that company.

So, Mr. Speaker, I do hope that while it is technical and difficult all members who might not have been so close to the matter understand it and will go along with us in this situation. Thank you.

The Speaker: Is it the wish of the House that we take the luncheon break at this time? It's the usual time. We shall suspend until 2.15.

The Honourable First Official Member.

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you.

I rise to make a contribution on behalf of the government to Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 entitled Enquiry into Local Companies (Control) Licence for ESSO Standard Oil SA Ltd.

I should like to begin by moving an amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 15/99. I have circulated that amendment and with your permission I will move ahead.

The Speaker: Please continue.

AMENDMENT NO. 1

TO PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/99

Hon. James M. Ryan: In accordance with the provisions of Standing Order 25(1) and (2), I, the Honourable First Official Member, hereby give notice of my intention to move the following amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 15/99: That the first resolve clause be amended by deleting the words: "by September 1999" and substituting therefor the words: "as soon as possible."

The Speaker: The amendment to Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 has been duly moved. The question is that the motion be amended as notice has been circulated to members. Does the honourable First Official Member wish to speak to it?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you.

The motion in the first resolve asks that the government cause an enquiry into the matter and report its findings to this honourable House by September 1999. I want to bring to the attention of this honourable House that we are now into the month of July. September is simply two months away. The issue of Local Companies (Control) licence is a matter that is dealt with by the Trade and Business Licensing Board and while the matter can be enquired into I believe that it is difficult if not impossible to have the enquiry carried out and report to this honourable House by September. Accordingly, I ask that members support the amendment to allow the report to be done as soon as possible.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak?
The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you.

I fully understand what the honourable First Official Member has said, and understanding the timing that we are dealing with I can appreciate him wanting the time in the motion to be amended. My question regarding the proposed amendment is, and this is not to have any differences but to see if it is possible to satisfy the circumstance in a little bit different fashion. I am certain that when the honourable First Official Member winds up on this amendment perhaps we will get a clearer understanding.

Understanding that the original timing is too constraining, I wonder if we still can't have some specifics rather than the generic "as soon as possible." In other words, if it needs another three months or six months for whatever authority to do what has to be done, at least we'd have a definitive time span. Not to differ from what I understand the government is seeking, I wonder if government could see fit in its amendment to be specific rather than generic.

Unfortunately I did not get a chance to speak to the honourable First Official Member before we convened regarding this matter, but I am certain that once we explain it we won't have a problem with that.

The Speaker: Does any other member wish to speak? If not, does the honourable First Official Member wish to reply?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you.

First of all I want to thank the First Elected Member for George Town for his comments. I take his point that it is always good to have a definitive period rather than an open ended time.

I think perhaps the main reason why I have concerns about the time given in the first instance as September is because during this period from July through the end of August most people, civil servants or elected representatives, will want and will try to get a little vacation time. Many have family commitments with children and will want to take advantage of the long school holiday for this purpose. While I intend to deal with this matter as expeditiously as possible I would still prefer to deal with my amendment and if the House sees fit to support it to do so, and I will certainly move it forward in a timely manner as quickly as possible and get it back to the House.

We could very well set a six month time period on it as has been suggested, but I would hope in all honesty to have it back to this House in less time than that. But if I could simply not be tied to a time. . . . In my experience, when something is rushed it is never done as thoroughly as it would have been if time were given. So I would ask for the support of the House on my amendment.

The Speaker: I shall put the question. Those in favour of the amendment, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it. The amendment is carried and the motion stands twice amended.

AGREED: AMENDMENT NO. 1 PASSED.

The Speaker: Honourable First Official Member, do you care to speak to the motion as twice amended?

Hon. James M. Ryan: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Yes, I would certainly like to.

In rising to speak to the motion as you so aptly referred to it as twice amended, the original motion was amended to remove the word "government" and substitute "relevant authority" and to have the plural changed into the singular accordingly, and of course now with my amendment the report of the findings will be made to this honourable House as soon as possible.

I believe that it is necessary for me to give a little bit of background information on Local Companies (Control) Licenses (LCCL) before dealing with the specifics. Historically there has been a board in this country that dealt with Immigration matters. At one stage it was called the Caymanian Protection Board. In recent years by legislation the Board became the Immigration Board. The Immigration Board was appointed under the Immigration Law but there are some additional pieces of legislation (I refer to them as companion legislation), the Trade and Business Licensing Law and the Local Companies (Control) Law.

The Immigration Board not only dealt with immigration applications but in the past it dealt with Trade and Business licences and Local Companies (Control) licences. Local Companies (Control) licences were much longer licences than the others. The Trade and Business licence, for instance, is an annual licence, whereas the Local Companies (Control) licence is generally for a period of 12 years.

In 1997 the government recognised that the Immigration Board had more on its hands than it could deal with. It was decided to amend both The Trade and Business Licensing Law and the LCCL. On 17 April 1997 two pieces of amending legislation were passed by this honourable House, The Trade and Business (Amendment) Licensing Board Law 1997, and The Local Companies (Control) (Amendment) Licensing Law, 1997. The former of the two (the Trade and Business Licensing (Amendment) Board Law 1997, and the Local Companies (Control) (Amendment) Licensing Law 1997) the Trade and Business Licensing (Amendment) Board Law 1997 called for the appointment of a Trade and Business Licensing Board. The functions of that new Board were not only dealing with Trade and Business Licences but also Local Companies (Control) Licences.

Quite rightly the government recognised that in the past Local Companies (Control) licences probably could not get the in depth examination they really needed; the Board was simply over worked. I went over myself on one occasion about five years ago and sat in on that Board as an observer. At that time the Board started at 1.00 and went on for eight hours without a break. That was a weekly thing, week after week. It was simply too much.

In setting up a Trade and Business Licensing Board that Board could now take a very close look and a careful examination of each Trade and Business Licence application and I believe more particularly each Local Companies (Control) application. What transpired prior to this for non-Caymanian companies is now history. But I believe the time had come for this Board to look carefully and critically if necessary at any application coming before it. Of course, with LCCLs running for perhaps 12 years, it takes quite a while before we work through all of those licences that had been in effect.

At the end of 1998 the LCCL for ESSO Standard Oil SA Ltd. Came to an end. And there was, as the motion stated, a question answered in this honourable House regarding the LCCL for ESSO Standard Oil SA Ltd. I have written to the chairman of the Trade and Business Licensing Board in regard to LCCLs such as the one that forms part of this motion. The past LCCL for that company was, as I understand it, a bulk fuel installation licence.

The company has made an application for a new LCCL. But by having a Board that can spend more time on this sort of application, the matter is not going to be rushed, it is going to be gone into in great detail. It is going to be examined and scrutinised carefully to determine what the company is allowed to do under its LCCL.

The government does have concern regarding the supply of fuel in these islands, particularly about the needs of the transportation sector. However, as the Trade and Business Licensing Board is the statutory board for dealing with these applications, and as I have conveyed to the Board the concerns of government, I have every confidence that the Trade and Business Licensing Board will address the matter in detail. I believe it will address the matter in a fair-minded manner; I believe it will address it in an impartial manner and once a decision is made a response will be received in due course.

To the best of my knowledge any arrangement between ESSO Standard Oil SA Ltd. and any Caymanian business is a voluntary and private arrangement. And any disagreement in relation to such an arrangement is a civil matter.

I have been made aware of a recent judgment in the Grand Court that might have a bearing on this issue. Having said that, I would not envisage the Trade and Business Licensing Board would be inclined to authorise any foreign company to engage in a field of business in which there are trading Caymanian companies and corresponding risk of such a company being displaced or being put at a disadvantage. Indeed, if the law cannot protect Caymanian businesses, then in my view it would not be worth the paper it is written on because that is the purpose of the law first and foremost—to protect Caymanian companies.

The government is fully committed to seeing this happen. That is why efforts were made to amend the two pieces of legislation I spoke of earlier to allow for a Board that could deal specifically with the LCCLs and the Trade and Business Licences and not merely deal with them, but deal with them in an effective and full manner that I believe can give justice to local businesses.

The government is quite prepared to have an enquiry made into this matter and report its findings to this honourable House as soon as possible. I would say that having been privy to correspondence that has been exchanged the Trade and Business Licensing Board is actively investigating and examining this and other Local Companies (Control) Licences to ensure that decisions handed down will be fair to all concerned. So, Mr. Speaker, on behalf of the government I am happy to accept and support this motion, Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 as twice amended, and to have an enquiry into this matter and to report back to this honourable House the findings. Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is open to debate. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause) Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

The Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

Mr. Roy Bodden: I am happy with the position government has taken. I certainly appreciate the fact that the government recognises that this matter is something which needs some kind of addressing.

The motion is predicated upon the fact that a number of Caymanian businesses and Caymanian entrepreneurs have been brought under some duress as a result of the contractual arrangements and business relationship between themselves as entrepreneurs, retailers of gasoline and related products and companies supplying these products.

It is generally accepted that in situations where a company provides wholesale goods to entrepreneurs and businesses, and that company itself is also in the business of retailing the same goods they supply, that places the independent retailer at some disadvantage. In many jurisdictions that has come to be regarded as unfair competition and unfair trading. One could see quite logically how that could be so.

That is one of the problems faced by these persons. Another problem, as I understand it, is prior to the new arrangement most of the people who retailed gasoline were either owners of the premises themselves or had premises leased that they made private arrangements for. I don't know if it is accurate to say that the business of retailing gas in this country is a lucrative business. Certainly one would think it must offer some incentive because of the vast number of automobiles on the roads. As I understand it, there is not much money to be made off the gas, per se, businessmen realise the return on their investments through selling other products related to gasoline and certainly now that they have gone into the "C" stores, that is where the money is to be had.

The history of bulk storage in this country is a history which was largely dominated by two companies. It is interesting that in answer to a question which I asked in this House originally these companies licences were limited to bulk fuel installation. More recently they got into the business of "C" stores and this is what has sparked the controversy and complaints, and attempts to seek some ease on the part of these persons who retail this gas.

I believe that this particular problem could have been adequately dealt with if we had in place a fair trading commission and a fair competition law enacted on our books. While I realise that the actual business of the Local Companies (Control) Licence would have had to be settled by the Trade and Business Licensing Board, the actual practice of the company wholesaling and retailing at the same time is a significant issue which at some stage will still have to be addressed and could best be addressed through a forum such as a fair trading commission, or if there was a fair competition act in place.

It is interesting to note too that this honourable House passed a motion calling for the establishment of a Fair Competition Law and a Fair Trading Commission in December 1994. Indeed, it was on 27 December 1994. The motion was passed on division by 12 Ayes to 2 Noes, and according to the Hansards there were four absences. I moved the motion on 1 December 1994.

We are a free enterprise society. In a free enterprise society it is recognised that there must be the freedom for some entrepreneurs to practice and be able to carry on their business without certain constraints. I have noticed that this problem is not an uncommon phenomenon in the Cayman Islands. I call upon the government to set about enacting this fair competition law and establishing this fair trade commission as soon as possible. I submit that if these mechanisms are in place it would eliminate many of the problems we have now, some of which find their ways to the Courts at great expense to the parties concerned, and certainly at the consumption of much valuable time.

I believe that in any other jurisdiction this business of an oil company wholesaling and retailing in direct competition to the persons they retail with would have been settled in this type of manner. Certainly, if it is not a conflict of interest it is deemed to be unfair competition. I mooted as much to persons who approached me with this complaint. In some jurisdictions dealers get around this by forming themselves into a retailers association and using this association to leverage and lobby for better deals and better contracts from the companies they represent.

Cayman being the kind of place it is it is sometimes difficult to get collective associations because for whatever reason entrepreneurship in the Cayman Islands seems to be based solely on an individualistic basis. And yet, I cannot understand that psychology seeing that we have come from a nation of seafaring people where in the days of sailing ships cooperation among numbers was absolutely necessary for the survival of crew and cargo. Yet in business it seems we lose out because we always take the individualistic approach and the psychology seems to be that if it doesn't hurt me, I won't be bothered with it. The upshot was that the retailers association never came to any fruition and as a result these multinational organisations are quick to seize on these kinds of opportunities and I suppose they have used one or two testing cases.

I also believe, and have always said, that in these kinds of instances fortunately, or unfortunately, the onus then falls upon the government to step in and offer some kind of protection. But often, and all too frequently, it casts the state in a bad light. If, at the end of the investigation as a result of that the Local Companies (Control) Law or licence is changed in a way that affects the oil company, the oil companies will squeal and say the government is holding them down and stopping them from expanding and performing the way they should perform.

The obverse is also true. If government's findings comes out in such a way that the oil company's behaviour is upheld, then the entrepreneurs will say the State is not doing its job because it is not protecting them and it has abandoned them, the very people it should be seeking to protect. That is what they are saying now.

It is almost a no win situation for government. That is why I am saying if government has said 'Listen, we have established this board and we have this law which the board is supposed to act under, we have this law and these regulations which are supposed to guide the decisions of the board . . .' this whole business of the Local Companies (Control) licence would not be an issue so much as a fair trading practice which government would be directly removed from—at least in the first instance. It would be a question of this company trading unfairly by retailing to us and then competing against the very ones they sell the stuff too being a retail agent themselves.

So the business of the licence would be at least one step removed from government so that government would not be cast in a quandary. Now government is in the unenviable position where it has to make a ruling in whatever form or fashion. The government is not going to be popular with one party or the other.

We have to take greater opportunity of these kinds of organisations and this kind of legislation because in addition to making business practice more orderly and more efficient it also serves as a buffer so that government is at least one step removed from the players involved. That is how it should be. It is unfortunate that quite often we are taken up with the politics of the situation and when motions are accepted little or nothing is done to bring them into play. I don't want to say that it may have to do with the person bringing the motion or the persons not bringing the motion. I would rather hope that the government has some other more acceptable excuse.

Nevertheless, I take the opportunity to point out that the motion having been accepted, the government must find a way to enact it and the necessary legislation so that in the future these kinds of cases can be handled other than the way this one is being handled.

One of the things that concerns me is the seeming disregard for creating opportunities for small businesses, medium size businesses and for Caymanian entrepreneurs to get a stake in this kind of business. I have first-hand knowledge of this because I know that these multinational corporations are motivated primarily by profit. One cannot blame them. They certainly have significant investments and they are predicated upon deriving returns from these investments.

A few months ago I wrote a couple of letters to the press because one of these companies involved wanted to spread its wings into territory which I, as a representative of investors in the constituency, thought was entirely unnecessary since some of my constituents had already invested significantly into at least two stations within close proximity to each other and I dared to write a letter to the Caymanian Compass saying there was no need for the company to set up a station in direct competition to these two persons who were my constituents who had significant investment. One investment has to be nearing $1 million, and the other one was several hundred thousand. And these people were just getting established and here the company wanted to set up in direct competition.

Well, as it turned out, there was a reply in the paper. But I also got a call from someone high in the company trying to explain and have me see it the way they saw it. Well, I really couldn't see it their way because I had spoken to the business persons involved and I realised that they were in no way equipped to take on that kind of competition. In the United States, Canada and Britain that would never be an issue because the company wholesaling would never under any fair trading practice be allowed to retail in direct competition to the company they are selling to.

I am happy to say that nothing further has developed in terms of the company going ahead with its intended plans to put up the station. Nevertheless there has been a move now to what I call "squeeze" several of the Caymanian entrepreneurs and this is serious in the sense that these are multinational corporations which can afford the best legal representation. These are multinational corporations which can afford to take a loss of three months, six months, even a year, because they know they will be making up the profit somewhere else. But when we have young Caymanians whose life savings depends upon establishing a little business and getting it off the ground from day one, they cannot survive in the face of this kind of competition.

So I don't even want to dwell so much on the legal ramifications, I will leave that to the government. What I want today is equally important and covers the purely moral and ethical grounds. There is also a point at which it is counter productive for the oil companies to expand beyond a certain point, particularly if they are going to get into the business themselves because there is only so much geographical space in the Cayman Islands. And if they are going to put a station on every corner they are not going to be making more money so much as they are going to be having a greater outlay to realise the same amount of return.

I am saying it is in their best interest to have the Caymanian people share in the business to encourage Caymanian entrepreneurs and in a sense it would be lessening some of the risks they are taking and they should concentrate on what they originally were doing—bulk storage and installation.

I am concerned too that this whole business of the "C" stores and the company demanding a percentage of the profits on products that they do not even manufacture is onerous on the owners of the "C" stores. It is a wholly questionable practice. This kind of business and these kinds of demands in other circumstances are described in the most unflattering of terms. It is certainly very frequently described by a word beginning with "M" and ending in "like." I don't want to say that, but that is what it begs. This kind of behaviour comes right out of Chicago in the Roaring Twenties.

We must develop in such a way that we give Caymanians who want to invest a reasonable chance of their investment realising success. I went to school at a time when it was fashionable to question the behaviour of multinational corporations. I am afraid that I never quite lost that ability to suspect and question their behaviour. Having heard complaints from my constituents and the wider public, I have to raise alarm and concern at this time.

In conclusion, I am happy that government has taken the refreshing and enlightened approach it has taken, and I am saying that as far as I am concerned it is an unenviable position for government because I don't see government, whichever way it goes, whatever colour its decision takes, as being able to please both sides. But government is government and I am satisfied that after having conscientiously done the research they are going to come to the best decision necessary.

My position is in no way to be interpreted as an attempt to downplay the importance or the contribution these companies have made and continue to make in the Cayman Islands because we couldn't operate without the fuel and the products they sell. But at the same time, we have to recognise that it is also our duty to ensure that we develop in such a way that the free enterprise system is played out to its fullest and even though I myself do not have any entrepreneurial abilities, I would certainly like to see those of my countrymen with such abilities and desires to be able to operate in a way so as to realise the returns on their investments. Many of these people are up at the crack of dawn and stay up sometimes past midnight providing and performing services which our country could not do without.

Having said that, I wish government success and I hope that whenever the decision is arrived at it can be one of Solomonic proportions so that both sides can feel some kind of satisfaction in merit to what was done. Thank you.

The Third Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. John D. Jefferson, Jr.: Thank you.

I rise to offer my support on Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 [as twice amended] entitled Enquiry into Local Companies (Control) Licence for ESSO Standard Oil SA Ltd. I was aware of this situation (I think it was from the 1992 elections) and what I am a bit disappointed in is that those responsible, that is those in the government responsible for this particular area, have allowed this situation to go on for so long.

Many of these large companies have deep pockets. You and I can't fight them. They can hire the best lawyers and all they do is drag it out and drag it out until you run out of money. They get what they want and another small business bites the dust. They have no conscience whatsoever.

I personally believe and feel strongly that it is the role and responsibility of government to protect and ensure that our local entrepreneurs, our small business people, have an opportunity to do business and earn a living in this country.

The other thing I am a bit disappointed about is that the Trade and Business Licensing Board that is responsible for ensuring that entities that operate in this country have the proper licences that they haven't done more to bring this to a head much sooner. I know how difficult it is because I have a lot of small business people, Caymanians who come to me on a daily basis and they are dealing with the Trade and Business Licensing Board, it takes them six months to get a Trade and Business Licence—including me! They want to be legal and do things the right way. But what happens if you are honest and want to do things the way they are supposed to be done then you are the one that is victimised.

I feel very badly about what has happened to the local businessman involved. I went to school with that young man. He has worked very hard over the years to build himself up business-wise to be in a position where he can take care of himself and his family. I think it is a crying shame to see what has been allowed to happen to him because of strong-arm tactics by these large conglomerates or monopolies. We only have a couple of companies that provide gas in this country.

I trust that this situation will be rectified and I personally do not believe that the big companies with the licence or authority to supply fuel on a wholesale basis should also be allowed to get a retail licence to also operate and control the gas stations. This in itself provides additional opportunities for Caymanians to go into business and it's a pretty lucrative business when you take into consideration the gas station and in most cases the convenience store that is associated with the station.

I think that it is important for us to continue to have the reputation in this country of fairness. It is important for us to continue to have the reputation that persons on all levels of society have an opportunity to earn a living. I believe right now that this particular motion could not have come at a more convenient time. In addition to this particular issue a lot of Caymanians are finding it very difficult to survive because of the cost of living and the red tape and the bureaucracy in government. I believe that we need to do whatever we can in order to rectify this situation because if we don't then in the long run we will all suffer.

So I support this motion and trust that government will give it priority and that the situation will be addressed.

The Speaker: I think this would be a convenient time to take the afternoon break. We shall suspend for fifteen minutes.

PROCEEDINGS SUSPENDED AT 3.28 PM

PROCEEDINGS RESUMED AT 4.00 PM

The Speaker: Please be seated. Debate continues on Private Member's Motion No. 15/99 as twice amended. Does any other member wish to speak? (Pause)

The First Elected Member for George Town.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you. It is very heartening to hear the government be willing to accept this motion after the two, what I would consider to be minor, amendments.

After hearing the history of what has driven the motion to the floor of this House, and also after hearing government's comments coming from the honourable First Official Member, I think that even though it has been accepted we need a little insight into the various principles that surround the motion, many of which have been addressed by previous speakers and perhaps more precisely by the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town.

I want to shortly address one of the statements made by the honourable First Official Member and perhaps just expand on it slightly. The honourable First Official cial Member in clarifying government's position, not just in this matter but with other matters that may concern the new Trade and Business Licensing Board, said that any arrangements between private companies is assumed to be voluntary (I am not quoting verbatim). He went on to say as a result of that any disagreement arising from that agreement becomes a civil matter. I totally agree with that, limiting it to the confines of what was said. But I want to expand on it just a bit further so that we can all be very sure, and in taking the vote on this motion all have a very clear understanding of what we as legislators have as our responsibility.

As the Third Elected Member for Bodden Town stated, in some circumstances where there is disagreement between two parties, once a decision has to be taken by government or any of its agencies, you will have one tapping you on the shoulder saying 'Thank you, thank you. Yes. You have done right.' And the other one who will have displeasure over the decision is going to say 'You're the biggest you-know-what in the world.' Therefore, what needs to be very clear is not just the decision that is taken but the reason why.

Perhaps in a specific circumstance that was alluded to earlier on in the debate the reason why certain decisions have not been taken yet is because maybe (and I am not very sure) the people who have to make the decision are not fully equipped at present to make that decision. I am going to talk about that at two different levels. If they are not equipped at present either with information or legislation to make a decision they can feel comfortable that they can stand by and justify, regardless of which way it goes, then the onus falls on the government to provide them with all those vehicles, whether they need more than one. And I am not arguing one way or the other for that right now. I don't think that is the most important part, I think it is just a matter we need to look at.

Secondly, if they have the vehicle and they are actually prepared to make the decision and they haven't made the decision then it begs the question, why? I know it's a bit more complicated than that. I also know that in a specific circumstance we are dealing with a matter that was before the courts and I don't want to have to get into that because I think what we need to be looking at while the motion is specific is principles to be applied, proper legislation in place to ensure that outside of the specific circumstances we are talking about that the same situations will not be allowed to recur. I am certain that government is aware of that. I am very confident of that.

One of the things that we must accept has gone on in this country, and it is one of the things that we should be looking to correct, is people in many instances suspect that because of who they are or where they find themselves they will get the decision they want. I am going to stand here this evening and say very clearly that I have seen that, I have experienced that and it is wrong. And it has happened. And it has nothing to do with pointing fingers.

You always hear and see on the TV and the common thought is "it's who you know." This is not the way we should be doing business. By mentioning that I am in no way casting aspersions or making accusations against the government, saying that is how government operates. That's not what I am talking about. I am talking about the expectations of people. That is what people get used to and that is what we have to be careful of. We have to ensure that any type of vehicle that is put in place for any decisions to be made is done in such a way that people know from the beginning that you cannot come with that style because it is not going to work.

This country has grown beyond any of our expectations; faster; it has brought wealth to many people and there are many good things that we could talk about for hours on end. But that has had its price. One of the big prices I am talking about is because we find ourselves as a country where people who have money see great opportunities to make more money. Then perhaps because of what they have become used to, perhaps because of what is the norm elsewhere, on many occasions people form the impression that it is not so important to come and find out what is due process to accomplish what you wish to accomplish, but who you know. That's a fact.

I know because somewhere along the line, thank God I know better. But people think I am somebody too and I have had them come to me. Yes!

I might seem to be talking without making a point here, but I know that we understand what we are dealing with. So having talked about that for a little bit, the principle of what I am talking about here is regardless of the individuals involved, regardless of the likes and dislikes, the playing field that we talk about being level must really be level for one and all. The investor must be comfortable and bureaucracy must not kill him. But at the same time there must be devices in place that even if it is not intentional that advantage cannot be taken because of money.

In other words, while investment is to be encouraged we not only have the right, but we have the duty to protect our own. When we speak about Local Companies (Control) Licences and about fair trading legislation, and when we speak about wholesale and retail it must be done in such a way that the person who wholesales is satisfied that all is as well as he can reasonably expect and the person who retails must feel the same way.

It can be done. Not because other larger countries are used to conglomerates that you have people lobbying for them and it just depends on whom you know and whom you can lobby to get a circumstance your way. That is not what we know this country to be like. There is no reason why this country must come to that. None at all!

Since the mood is flowing right I am going to say here today that if we allow this country to get like that there is only one reason and that's greed. Any other reason must mean that we have lost our good senses.

So, getting back to the motion as amended, we see in the two resolve sections where it now reads: "BE IT NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government now cause an enquiry into the matter and report its findings to this honourable House as soon as possible" which I think we all accept.

"AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT, if the relevant authority has found that any Caymanian company or other entity is being displaced through that situation, the relevant authority immediately take measures to have it rectified so that Caymanian businesses do not suffer."

This might well be a test case with much wider ramifications. I want to be careful so that I don't create the wrong impression because I recognise the value of investments and business at various levels to this country. I don't have any problems with that. But I think we have to have our act together. Don't forget everybody in this world is different. Not everyone who feels that he or she has been persecuted wrongly or done an injustice reacts in the same manner. We must have the tools where whatever injustice a person feels aggrieved over they must have recourse. We have the courts. We all understand the separation of powers.

In instances like this the courts should really be the last resort because it's expensive. I know the lawyers have to live too, but we shouldn't have to create work for them. If that's the way we do legislation then I would have a real problem with the minister for education. But I don't believe that. While we know what recourse there is now, the mere fact that not everyone has the wherewithal to utilise that recourse puts an onus on government to have proper legislation, proper checks and balances, that it must be in the most extreme and complex circumstances that the matter cannot be resolved clearly and legally by what is in place by government.

I believe that government is well on the way to ensuring that those steps are taken. I don't have a problem with that. I notice that the honourable First Official Member is listening keenly, and I just want him to know that I too remember the amendment to the legislation not so long ago and I recognise that there were certain things recognised at that time when the amendments were brought. So I know we are on the right track.

I think the motion, while one may wish to attribute political connotations to its genesis, is responsible because this is our responsibility. The motion has been brought. The government has accepted the motion and I trust that not just for the specific circumstance that may have spurred it on but for future individuals who may get involved in situations like this we will have things in order so that disagreements need not get this far before they are resolved.

When we talk about a Local Companies (Control) Licence and we talk about wholesale and retail, the problem I think most of us recognise here whether it's unique or not is this . . . and I will draw examples. Let us take the three major supermarkets. All three of them also have wholesale businesses. All three of them sell in their retail business the products they wholesale to other outlets. We need to understand clearly that it's three of them and the laws of competition create the level playfields in those areas because any one of them that wholesales to the small shop owner or anyone who is buying wholesale and that is not at a reasonable wholesale price one of the other two, or both, will take advantage. So we have a level playing field there.

We find that items are wholesaled and there are other wholesale areas, I just used those two because they are easy to recognise. We find that people are able to purchase items at wholesale prices and are able to resale at a reasonable profit and sell for very close to what they retail in the big stores for. It might not be exactly the same, but it's nothing glaring so they are not at a huge disadvantage that people will not buy from them also. But there is a difference in the circumstance that we are talking about now. I won't choose this afternoon to tear that apart. I could, but I think the point is made.

I don't think the exercise here is to discredit anyone or to prove the right and the wrong. I think that this motion should be used as an exercise for people to understand that all of us have to find the ways and means to coexist. Right now there is a problem and that problem must be rectified. I believe it will be rectified.

I also don't have a major problem if people sit around the table and talk about circumstances. I don't believe people should create discord all the time. I mean the minister for education and I get at it all the time, but even this evening I was joking with him and he is smiling right now. So it's not like that all the time. The point I really wish to make is that no matter who we are dealing with we, as the government, should be able to come to a position and say 'Gentlemen, listen, we understand this is how it is but we need you to understand that this is how it has to be. Now, can we find the ways and means to arrive at the way it has to be without it getting into a fist fight?' I think that's the position that needs to be taken in this specific circumstance. But using that circumstance as a guide, then we can ensure that we don't have to face the same situation in the future. I think that's where we need to arrive at.

I believe that is sufficient. The mover of the motion has had to attend a funeral. I am not quite sure whether he would have wished the vote to be taken in his absence.

The Speaker: We will adjourn first.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: I was going to say to you if you weren't prepared to adjourn to let me know so that I could think of something else.

The Speaker: We will adjourn. I will entertain a motion for the adjournment of this honourable House.

ADJOURNMENT

Hon. Truman Boddan: Mr. Speaker, I move the adjournment of this Honourable House until Friday at 10.00 AM.

The Speaker: The question is that this Honourable House do now adjourn until 10.00 AM tomorrow. Those in favour, please say Aye. Those against, No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AT 4.26 PM THE HOUSE STOOD ADJOURNED UNTIL 10.00 AM FRIDAY, 2 JULY 1999.

EDITED
FRIDAY
2 JULY 1999
10.14 AM

[Prayers read by the Honourable Second Official Member]

The Speaker: Please be seated. Proceedings are resumed. Item 2 on today's Order Paper, Reading by the Speaker of Messages and Announcements.

READING BY THE SPEAKER OF MESSAGES AND ANNOUNCEMENTS

APOLOGIES

The Speaker: We have apologies from the Honourable Third Official Member who is overseas on official business; and apologies from the Honourable Minister of Community Affairs, Sports, Women, Youth and Culture, who is also overseas on official business.

Item 3 on today's Order Paper, Questions to Honourable Members/Ministers. Question No. 75 is standing in the name of the First Elected Member for West Bay.

QUESTIONS TO HONOURABLE
MEMBERS/MINISTERS

QUESTION 75

No. 75: Mr. W. McKeeva Bush asked the Honourable Minister responsible for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works (a) what policy allows for the suspended manager of Pedro St James Castle to hold another job while receiving part salary; and (b) whether this policy has ever been extended in the past to a staff member of any statutory authority or statutory board for which the Minister has responsibility.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: (a) The Manager and staff of Pedro St James are deemed public servants under section 11 of the Tourism Attractions Law 1996. The General Manager is presently facing charges against him in the Courts and was therefore interdicted or suspended on 11 March 1999 under Regulation 41 of the Public Service Commission Regulations 1985.

The Regulations allow the suspended person to draw one-half of his or her salary. This is common practise in the civil service. There is no regulation that forbids the person from holding another job while suspended from the service. This is a civil service procedure and not a political one.

(b) Persons working for a Statutory Authority, for example the Port Authority, which is under this Ministry, are not civil servants so the Public Service Commission Regulations 1985 do not apply. However, civil servants have been employed in departments of government under this ministry who received half salary and worked while on suspension.

SUPPLEMENTARIES

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say which departments of Government under the Ministry of Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works have had staff who have been suspended and worked while on suspension?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The answer right off the top of my head is that I know that there have been firemen who have been suspended where court were cases pending a year or more in abeyance until the case was heard and they worked during that process.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Can the Minister say what kind of salary was being drawn by the suspended Manager of Pedro Castle and what type of salary would a fireman get?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the regulations to say that whatever the full salary is of the individual, whether he is a Head of Department, whether he is a Permanent Secretary, or whether he is a clerical officer, he is entitled 1/2—whatever that amount is.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I don't think my question was answered. I am asking what type of half salary does a suspended manager get, and what would any fireman have gotten?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I don't have the exact figure of what the general manager draws or what the fireman draws right here with me. I would not want to give a figure that would not prove to be exactly correct to the penny.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Is the Minister saying that after having his permanent secretary as temporary manager, after having them liase with his ministry and with him (according to the Hansards) since the project, after the Ministry having hired the general manager, that he doesn't know what the general manager gets as a salary?

The Speaker: Are you asking a question?

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, I am asking him to tell us what the full salary is, even an approximate number would do.

The Speaker: Thank you. The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: My recollection is that the general manager was hired at a salary of around $65,000.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, could the Minister say what this general manager did before he took over this position?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the general manager served as a banker when he first came back to this country. He worked for British American in particular. He also worked for First Cayman Bank. He was also the General Manager of the Turtle Farm for approximately eighteen months, and I think all members realise that the Turtle Farm runs well.

The Speaker: The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Could the Minister say, if this person was completely in the private sector, whether or not any kind of charges he would be facing in court would cause a suspension to take place? I am asking to the best of the Minister's knowledge, whether or not this is a particular policy that is unique to the civil service, and not something that is common in the private sector.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: If I understand correctly, the system deployed in the public service does not give too much discretion about whether the person should remain on the job or not. It basically says that in the interest of the public service, the person can be required to cease the exercise of his powers. I served for about six years as the First Official Member responsible for civil service matters and I know that during my time, in most cases similar to this one, the person would have been interdicted.

When it comes to the private sector, it obviously depends on the manager as to whether that person sees any disadvantage to their respective business by allowing the person to continue.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I don't know whether all this is in the interest of the public service but it is in somebody's interest, it looks like to me. Nevertheless, can the Minister say whether the part salary has to do with the Botanic Park?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, the general manager is [also] the general manager of the Tourism Attraction Board, which is responsible for the Botanic Park as well as Pedro St. James.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Thank you. The Member is saying that the manager suspended was the manager of Pedro St. James Castle, not just the Board but the Castle project and the Botanic Park.

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Let me try to answer it in a different way, Mr. Speaker. We know we have two projects, Botanic Park and Pedro St. James.

The Botanic Park has what we call a Site Manager, who is the person that has horticulture and other experiences. The General Manager (the person we are speaking about) of the Tourism Attraction Board also served as the Site Manager of Pedro St. James. The reason for this was to obviously try to be more cost efficient in dealing with the overall projects. He is answerable to the Tourism Attraction Board.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: Mr. Speaker, the manager is the manager for the Castle and for the Botanic Park. The salary of $65,000 was that for both and are both covered in the law?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The law, that is the Tourism Attraction Law, allows the Governor to vest certain tourism attractions under the Tourism Attraction Law and then under the Board, as appointed under this law.

The General Manager oversees all projects that are the responsibility of the Tourism Attraction Board. It would be the Pedro St. James at this point, and the Botanic Park.

If I am not answering the Member's question to his satisfaction, he can come back.

The Speaker: The First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I just wanted to be clear that the Board manages the Botanic Park. The manager manages the Botanic Park?

The Speaker: The Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works.

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: The general manager has overall supervision and management of Botanic Park as well as Pedro St. James, and is paid as a general manager for overall [supervision] over those two projects. So while there is a site manager at Botanic Park, the general manager is still the top person involved with the managerial operations of that park.

The Speaker: Are there any further supplementaries? If not, that concludes Question Time for this morning.

Moving on to Government Business, Motions. I would just like to ask is it the wish of the House that we suspend Standing Order 14 (2) and continue with the Private Member's Motion and finish that or go ahead and complete the Government Motion.

The Order Paper calls for continuation with Government Business, and if I am hearing nothing, we will move on to Government Business, Motions. Government Motion No. 4/99, the 10 Year National Strategic Plan (1999-2008), continuation of debate thereon.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I am sorry, Mr. Speaker. Are we moving to the Government Business and not the motion?

The Speaker: That is what I was asking. Today is not Thursday, so I was asking if it was the wish of the House that we suspend Standing Order 14(2) and continue with the Private Member's Motion in order to complete that since it was in the winding-up stage. I am in the hands of the House.

Mr. W. McKeeva Bush: I think it makes sense and I move that we suspend the relevant Standing Order to have private business today.

The Speaker: Honourable Minister for Tourism, Commerce, Transport and Works would you speak on behalf of Government?

Hon. Thomas C. Jefferson: Mr. Speaker, I was basically going to say the same thing, so I guess we are in agreement.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDER 14(2)

The Speaker: Okay. In accordance with Standing Order 86, I would ask that some Member move the suspension of Standing Order 14(2) in order that we can take the Private Member's Motion before Government Business.

So do I have a seconder, it has been moved by the First Elected Member for West Bay.

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Yes, Mr. Speaker, you have a seconder, sir.

The Speaker: So moved and seconded. Those in favour please say Aye. Those against No.

AYES.

The Speaker: The Ayes have it.

AGREED: STANDING ORDER 14(2) SUSPENDED.

The Speaker: Continuing then on item number 5, Other Business, Private Members' Motion, Private Member's Motion No. 15/99, Enquiry into Local Companies Control Licence for Esso Standard Oil SA Ltd. Continuation of debate thereon. The floor is opened to debate.

The First Elected Member for George Town, please continue.

OTHER BUSINESS

PRIVATE MEMBERS' MOTION

PRIVATE MEMBER'S MOTION NO. 15/99

ENQUIRY INTO LOCAL COMPANIES CONTROL LICENCE FOR ESSO STANDARD OIL SA LTD.

(Continuation of debate thereon)

Mr. D. Kurt Tibbetts: Thank you, Mr. Speaker. Just so that it is clear, when we had our little discussion at the close yesterday afternoon, it was only about the closure, not my closure, sir. I am sorry if there was a misunderstanding, my apologies.

Mr. Speaker, I don't have too much to say regarding the motion but I think there are a couple of issues which I would just like to quickly talk about and then we can get on with other speakers.

I want to go back to the two resolve sections of the motion; bearing in mind government has accepted the motion. The first resolve section which reads: "BE IT

NOW THEREFORE RESOLVED THAT the Government now cause an enquiry into the matter and report its findings to this honourable House as soon as possible. . ."

Because of the amendment proposed by the Government and the fact that the Government has accepted the motion, although the vote isn't taken yet as twice amended, we can pretty well put that to bed that this enquiry is going to take place. And as soon as it is possible, the Government will come back to the House and give a report.

But when we look into the second resolve section, Mr. Speaker, which reads: "AND BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED THAT if the relevant authority finds that any Caymanian company or other entity is being displaced through that situation, then the relevant authority immediately takes measures to have it rectified so that Caymanian businesses do not suffer. . ."

Mr. Speaker, it is interesting to note here that Esso (I am talking about Esso now. I am not quite sure what the full name is but it is Esso Standard Oil SA Ltd or something of that order), their Trade and Business Licence and their Local Companies (Control) Licence expired at the end of 1998. Like the good corporate citizens that I am sure they are, they had applied for renewal of both of these licences in November of 1998. I believe they would have certainly remembered it this time around because I remember not so long ago they and others may have forgotten about the renewal of their Trade and Business Licence but nevertheless that is fine.

Now, my understanding of the way the Trade and Business Licensing Board operates is if it is a straight forward situation for a renewal, once the application is put in and all the relevant documentation is in place, that the procedure is a timely one. I also understand that as of today, these renewals have not been granted. So basically we are looking at somewhere between six and seven months that these applications have been into that Board. Mr. Speaker, the assumption that I draw is that there has to be some question why these licences have not been renewed and issued in the timely manner in which the Board would normally operate.

So the fact that there seems to be some question with regard to satisfying the Board that the licences should be renewed, given the circumstances that surround the operations of the company, leaves questions in our minds also. I want to say here that it is my understanding that there has been some type of investigation carried on by some agency or some arm of the government and I would like to know what has transpired about that.

I am going to tell you something else for the benefit of the Government. Purposely, I have not had any communication with any person or persons who may know anything about this, for the simple reason that I don't want anybody to think that I am raising this question with knowledge before hand. I am going to immediately give away any advantage that anyone might think I have because I have none. But I think it is only fair that we understand what has transpired.

Now, if that is going to take part and parcel of a report back to the House, that is fine but the timing of everything raises questions in my mind.

I want to also make something very clear. Anyone who wants to get up and take me to task can. It doesn't matter to me. But I believe that the public servants in this country have been and are capable of doing whatever job they are called upon to do. The public servants I am talking about come straight down from the Honourable First Official Member right down the chain of command, and I am not questioning what part of that chain of command has dealt with this issue. But I am saying I have confidence that that arm has dealt with whatever it has had to deal with. But I firmly believe that either somebody is afraid of something or somebody has talked to somebody about something, and that somewhere in the elected arm of government there is a hitch.

If it is not so, Mr. Speaker, and it can be proven to me that it is not so, I am quite happy to withdraw and apologise. I don't want to go into the issue of transparency but I have to make a little note right here, that if we practice transparency and if Government was prepared to give information out about issues at hand instead of this closed door operation, we wouldn't be having to think like this.

Something else that people must understand, Mr. Speaker, regardless of how this motion may be seen to be politicising a situation . . . the truth of the matter is that when people are paying out huge sums of money which will affect their livelihood, the future of their children and all of that, there is a responsibility and an onus on the Government then [that] they should not sit down flat on their you-know-what and figure they can deal with something at whatever time they feel. That is where I have the problem.

I am not questioning what any decision might be because I believe that once it is done in the usual fashion, the decision will be based on the facts. But the mere fact that there seems to be a hold-up tells me what I just said and I believe that. It is totally insensitive to be dealing with it in this fashion.

Mr. Speaker, I am going to leave this alone right now because something tells me it is best not to go any further and that is fine. I wanted to make it crystal clear that any finger pointing that I may be doing is dealing with the elected arm of Government, and I will take them on anytime with it. I want them to bring the facts because it takes me putting myself out on the limb for them to come with the facts, I will do that any day of the week because that is what we want to know. It has nothing to do with the official arm of Government.

But I am going to issue a little warning here, Mr. Speaker. In the not-too-distant future, I believe certain things are going to become evident. And if this Government does not deal with this matter in the way it should, then I can promise that any opportunity I get I am going to rub it in its face because that is what it will deserve because too much of that goes on with Government. And the individuals who may think that I shouldn't be bunching them all together . . . I am sorry, I cannot help it. I cannot single out who does what because they all talk amongst one another. If others know amongst them that certain things shouldn't be done, they should stop the rest from doing it. That is how I live.

As I said, I better not go any further. As I close, let me say that there is fast coming a time when the people of this country are not going to tolerate this style of government from anyone—including me.

Thank you, sir.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Fourth Elected Member for George Town.

Dr. Frank McField: Mr. Speaker, I rise to briefly speak in regard to this Private Member's Motion No. 15/99, which calls for an enquiry into Local Companies (Control) Licence for Esso Standard Oil SA Ltd.

Mr. Speaker, the oil companies world-wide have been responsible for dictating to very large countries and to very experienced and organised business people. Simply because the oil companies, as a part of the kind of multi-national concerns which have grown over the last fifty years or so, have been able to act in such a way as to be in restraint of trade. They can determine, as a result of their monopoly on the oil we all need, certain types of relationships.

It is important that when we get up and make accusations, and when we make statements and when we say things that we also give the people a dose of reality. It is quite possible for us to say that we don't like something, we don't like relationships, we don't like the way they develop, but it is another thing when we understand that the relationships that have developed over a period of time with regard to oil companies and the local distributors are a result also of the fact of need—not just the need of the retailer but the need of the people, the consumer in the countries that consume. It needs the oil or the fuel for daily consumption for transportation and other means for improving commerce and life.

So the overall picture is that we cannot narrowly go into this situation and define the situation. We have to look at the general good of the society as a whole. We just cannot look at the good of one or two retailers; we have to look at the overall picture. We have to make sure that the people in listening are being enlightened as to what we consider to be the predicament that we are in, that they see the entire picture. The entire picture is, of course, that . . . and I am not familiar with the total situation with regards to the Esso Standard relationship with, for instance, one of the persons that operates a retail gas station in George Town. But that person has informed me to a certain extent as to the conflict that existed. I believe also that that conflict expressed itself within the courts where people usually go for remedies of this particular nature.

We as legislators, we as politicians are faced with an even greater question: To what extent do we compromise the rights of Caymanian business people in order that the Caymanian consumer or that the Caymanian people are able to get the types of resources that they badly need for the functioning of their economy? We are not the producers of the oil. We are not the people who refine the oil. We are not the people who are capable of transporting the oil. We are basically the people who have the capacity at this particular time, as expressed by the relationship, to distribute the oil or the benzene or petroleum to the individual consumers who are driving the car.

So even if there was, for instance, a confrontation which we must look at—because any time there is a conflict it can lead to confrontation—we must have in the back of our mind what the particular consequences would be of any actions we take. So it is not just we that have power, the multi-national oil companies have power too—they are giants, they have turf to protect, they have an interest. If we establish a situation whereby we have two competing parties, let us say or retailers, and the multi-nationals, if there is a confrontation, they want this or retailers want this, we as politicians are behind our retailers. We still have to also remember the third party—being the consumers of this country that would be affected in case that Esso Standard and Texaco got together and said, 'Hey, this is intolerable! We believe somehow that this is a breach of the types of relationships that we expect as fair to us.' So the situation is not as simple as we might sometimes think.

Now, I am not saying that this motion is not timely. This motion is timely. I am not saying that the motion is formulated in any wrong way. What I am saying though is that this motion brings to our attention a whole series of relationships in this country that we have with foreign businesses that are not, I believe, in the best interest of the Caymanians. We have to as a group of people make a resolve to define and be clear in defining what our interest really are as Caymanians. Because there is the interest of those persons that operate business and, like I said, it is the interest of the consumer as well.

A situation that we have dealt with in this country I think is with the supermarkets. We see that the more supermarkets we get, the better prices we get and the better quality of food we get. So competition is an important aspect here. We must be clear whether or not Esso Standard is hindering competition, is hindering the improvement of standards within these gas stations or whether or not it is facilitating that. So I approach it always from the point of view of the consumer. I believe and I will always say it is not about who owns it, it is about who benefits from it.

That is also a very practical democratic position as well because the majority of people at the end of the day who votes are the consumers. It is not the individual, two, three, four or 15 businesspeople, although they might have their influence because of their monies. Basically at the end of the day what the consumer is concerned with is the quality in the price of the product. That is what is very important to them and that is also a consideration that we have to take into account when we are coming to the point of trying to find a resolution with regard to the practices of these oil companies in the Cayman Islands.

How does any kind of restraint on their desire to expand in a particular way influence the quality of the product and the price of the product?

The Government has accepted this motion and has done well in accepting this motion. The enquires must continue. But I am saying that it is not as simple as it seems because you can argue about water but if you go to the well and it is dry, the fact that you have said that the water belongs to you will not give you water if it is not there. What we understand about commerce today is that there are interconnections, interdependencies between different national and international companies and individuals.

We accept that the Cayman Islands have been to a certain extent assisted in its development by foreign corporations. So it is not as easy as how nationalistic economics saw it before where people brought things into a country or they took things out of a country. We say what happened in the countries that started this very nationalistic approach, like in Jamaica for instance, with the bauxite back in the sixties. We have to be careful because at the end of the day, the question must be not who owns but who benefits.

Those people that benefit by way of control because the law of economics is exchange, and so because we are dealing with exchange, as long as the exchange process continues to function and is not stifled or hindered by Government intervention we have a possibility that everybody will be better off. Not just one person, not just one group of people, not just one class of people but all groups and all classes of people.

Mr. Speaker, at this particular time, I see that my good friend, the First Official Member has a smile on his face. Of course, I am not asking him to wipe that off, but I am telling him that I am a very observant person. Although it might seem that I am talking about something and I am not talking about Government, I am not ridiculing Government—I am not praising Government. I am talking basically about the whole issue of problem solving. Whether or not it be on the individual level or whether or not it be on a country level, problem solving means patience; that you investigate and get your facts straight; that you remain objective and don't be subjective; and that you come to a conclusion that is good for the majority of people.

When you have done that then there is no harm in brining ridicule. Okay? So I would like to make it clear that I am asking the Government—not just the elected Government but the official Government—in dealing with that authority that is responsible for the Local Companies (Control) Licensing Laws to remember in applying these laws, the benefits of the majority of people. The benefits of the majority of people are by way of results, that is getting good products at good prices. At the end of the day, although, I would like to see Caymanians with wealth, I am more pleased when I see the average person being able to afford an improved lifestyle because of the improvement of the quality of goods and services that are delivered to them by whatever company is licensed to do business in these islands. That is my primary concern.

I am saying, therefore, that I would like to leave with those persons that are going to take this motion one step further, these considerations. These considerations are important and although I have sympathy and I would like to see the Caymanian businesspeople that are retailing oil protected, I would like to see at the same time that the protection is the protection for the consumer as a whole

Thank you.

The Speaker: The floor is opened to debate. Does any other Member wish to speak?

The Honourable Minister for Education, Aviation and Planning.

Hon. Truman M. Bodden: As mentioned earlier, the Government accepts this motion has amended. I had hoped that we would not have seen once again an attempt where we accept a motion to pound or beat up on the Government the way that this has gone on.

Mr. Speaker, from what I have heard of all of the members from the Backbench who have spoken, no one seems to have come forward with a constructive solution to the problem. When no solution is put forward, the move is then to blame the Government and this is a very good instance where the Government is being blamed for something which is clearly within the precinct of this honourable house.

Mr. Speaker, if this honourable House is serious about doing something, legislation is made inside of this House. It is not made in Government, it is not made in Executive Council and, therefore, the solution is within the hands of this House. Further, if the view on this is that Esso or anyone else should not have a certain type of licence... And I have to be careful how far I go because I am aware that there is a court decision, even though I have not read it.

Erskine May's Parliamentary Practice is very clear. At page 303, it states: "Questions which reflect on the decision of a court of law are not in order. The Speaker has ruled privately that questions relating to a sentence...are inadmissible." So, while I don't intend to go into what the court has done, what the court has ruled, for about (I don't know how many years) 2 - 3 years and before that there was a select committee again that has been dealing with Trade and Business Licences and with Immigration.

Mr. Speaker, if the Opposition is serious about this matter then the select committee drafts the legislation or puts forward the legislation to deal with it. For years, I have heard in the select committee, I have heard in this House that the Local Companies (Control) Licensing Law needs to be further amended and that protection needs to be given to certain local businesses, whether they are retail or watersports or whatever. It is clearly within the ambit of this House, it is clearly within the select committee. This is a very clear case of shifting and trying to make Government look bad when the solution, if this House is serious, lies clearly within the legislative means of this House. Government does not legislate.

That select committee can recommend. That select committee can look at draft legislation, the same as it has done with immigration as it has done with the elections and with everything else. So let's not play around with words in here because I am always reminded that when one has no solution, one blames somebody else.
